PATRIOT

QUERIES,

OCCASIONED

By a late LIBEL, entitled, QUERIES to the PEOPLE of IRELAND.

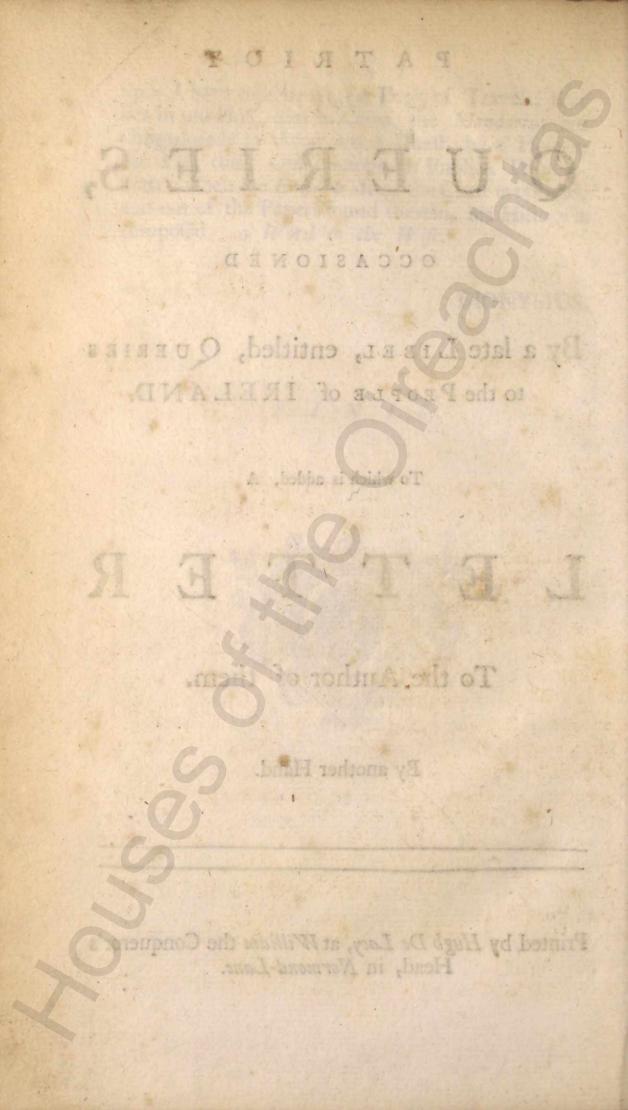

To which is added, A

LETTER

To the Author of them.

By another Hand.

Printed by Hugh De Lacy, at William the Conqueror's Head, in Normond-Lane.

PATRIOT QUERIES.

hit not be thonght very extractinary, or of the Gift in the reconveyance of the Eithte.

I. WHETHER the Conftitutions of England and Ireland are fo effentially different, as to make the one Nation free, and the other Slaves?

2. Whether fuch Opposition to the Measures of the Ministry, as deferve the Name of Patriotism in the one, can, with any Propriety, be termed Faction in the other?

3. Have not Feuds and Divisions, generally speaking, the same Effects in all Countries? And will not the Removal of the Cause, remove the Effect?

4. Whether a Colony of Romans, wherefoever fettled, were confidered as a conquered Province, or did not enjoy all the Privileges of Romans?

5. Whether the prefent Inhabitants of Ireland, who are really Englifb, ought not to enjoy all the Privileges of Englifbmen? And whether the divefting them of these Privileges, hath not a manifest Tendency to alienate the Affections of the most loyal Subjects, from the best of Kings?

6. Can Ireland profper or flourish, but under the Protection of his Majesty? And what doth the Person deferve, that would represent them as unworthy of that Protection?

7. Is an Eftate, vefted in Truftees for certain Uses, their own proper Estate, or ought it not to revert to the Trufter, when the Uses of the Truft are answered?

8. If I mortgage my Estate for the Payment of a Debt, must I confider it as a Gift, if the Mortgagee reftores my Eftate when his Debt is paid ?

9. If the Mortgagee infifted upon my Acknowledgment of the Gift in the reconveyance of the Eftate, would it not be thought very extraordinary, or would any Man of common Senfe or Prudence fubmit to it ?

10. In this Cafe, would not every Person, converfant in Law or Equity, exclaim against fuch Behaviour, and advise his Client not to fubmit to it?

11. Whether faying that it was only a Difpute about Words, would justify the Mortgagee for infifting upon having them inferted ?

12. Whether a Perfon, who has bought very good Meat, hath not a Right to have it dreffed according to his own Tafte?

13. Whether what hath already been offered in Anfwer to Confiderations, &c. be not fufficient to convince all unprejudiced Perfons, that the Nation was right in rejecting the late Money-Bill? And whether the P----- would not have been guilty of a fcandalous Breach of Truft, had they paffed the fame?

14. Whether a Majority of five Voices be not fufficient to determine the Senfe of the Nation, when confirmed by Addreffes of Thanks from almost every County and Borough in the Nation?

15. Whether Men, who through a long Course of Conduct have shewn themselves incapable of being corrupted, of fwerving from the Lines of Duty, or Meafures of Right, can reasonably be supposed now to act from a corrupt Principle?

16. Whether this be not the true Character of Numbers, who voted against the C--- on the 17th of December 1753?

17 Whether an ignorant young Soldier, giddy with Pride, and intoxicated by Power, be a fit Perfon to take the Lead in G-----?

2 1

11 .8

[5] 18. Whether the Man who, in feveral Inflances, had endeavoured to corrupt the Virtue, and debauch the Morals of the Nation, the more effectually to rob it of its most valuable Privileges, ought to be entrusted with any the leaft Share of Power ?

19. Whether one remarkable and incontestable Infance to prove this, will not fafficiently juftify those who have opposed him? And whether his open and avowed Protection, granted to the Robber and the Pillager of the Nation, and his conftant Correspondence with Catamites and Sycophants, is not an Inflance in point?

20. Whether any Man is wicked for nothing? And whether the avowed Defender of the Pillager of the Nation, ought not to be confidered as a Sharer in the Pillage?

21. Whether a Man, who by his Poft is fubject to no Check, but that of a weak Father, is not more likely to play Tricks in a wanton Abuse of Power, than he who is responsible for his Conduct to a whole Nation?

22. Though the King is at Liberty to chuse among his Subjects in whom he will repole Confidence, and through what Hands he will dispence his Favours; yet whether the Nation have not a Right to addrefs against wicked Ministers? And whether such Address are not pregnant Inftances of Duty and Loyalty to his Majefty ?

23. Whether if his Majesty's Title to this King-dom came to be disputed, the Nation would not as one Man rife in Defence of it ? Or whether there is a more loyal Nation upon the Face of the Globe, than the People of Ireland are to his Majefty King GEORGE.

24. Whether an Ecclesiaftic of mean Birth, the Son of a Jacobite Banker, the Grandfon of a Jaylor of Winchester, ought not to be suspected for abusing Power Power if lodged in his Hands? And whether the G_{----} of I_{-----} ought to be entrufted with fuch a Perfon?

25. Whether fuch a Perfon ought not always to be fufpected of bad Defigns, if to his Primeval Meannefs, the most detestable Vices are annexed ?

26. Whether Ireland in fuch Hands would not probably become a Sink of Corruption ?

27. Whether the Appearance of Virtue would not be an effectual Bar to Preferment? And whether the most abandoned Prostitution would not be the only Means of obtaining it?

28. Whether a Man of high Birth, great Fortune, and exalted Virtue, could fubmit to be joyned in Commiffion with fuch a Colleague ?

29. As it is notorious that Churchmen have generally made a bad Use of Power, whether it be not good Policy to exclude them from all Share in the Government? And whether all their Motions ought not to be watched, when Power is put into their Hands?

30. Whether a mean Man, raifed of a fudden to the highest Elevation, is not more apt to grow giddy, to be haughty, and infolent, and to abuse his Power, than a Person descended from an illustrious Race of Ancestors, and who hath no original Meanness to struggle with, or to warp his Conduct?

31. Whether there ever was a Churchman in this Kingdom intrufted with the higheft Power and greateft Confidence our Conftitution would admit, who would not have acquitted himfelf more to the general Satisfaction of the Nation, and have left behind him a Name that would be ever dear and precious among us, had the Exercife of his Power been confined to the Difcharge of the Duties of his Archiepiscopal Function?

32. Whether the proper Discharge of the Archiepiscopal Duties, would not require all the Labours of a good a good Man? And whether his being immerfed in Politicks, will excufe his neglect of his own proper Duty?

[6]

33. Whether a Man of fufpected Principles, of boundless Ambition, and of the most debauched and retrograde Passions and Appetites, ought to be trusted with any fecular Power, especially if his Profession is fuch as is inconfistent with fecular Power?

34. Whether a Perfon, who hath neither Wife, Child, Wh—e, nor Eftate in this Kingdom, can be prefumed a proper Perfon to Govern it ?

35. Whether the Man, who has no Relations, Dependants, nor Connexions in this Kingdom, except with Panders, Catamites, and Sycophants, is at all eligible to take the Lead in it; or if he fhould, who, but the most abandoned, can have Expectations of Preferment?

36. Whether those Englishmen, who have been fent into the Vineyard at the eleventh Hour, should run away with the whole Wages, from those who have borne the Heat and Burthen of the Day; who have introduced Arts and Civility into this Kingdom, at the Expence of their Ancestors Blood and Treasure?

37. If it were a fixed Rule that none but Natives were to be Lords Juffices, is it not more than probable that the Nation would be the better for it?

38. Is not Popularity, or the contrary, a ftrong Prefumption that a Man has acted a good, or a bad Part?

39. Is not the S——r of the H— of C—— the most popular Man in the Nation?

40. Is not fome-body elfe the most unpopular Man in it?

41. Will not the fame Caufe always produce the fame Effect, and the fame Virtue produce the fame deferved Popularity?

42. Whether the Applause which some Persons, of very high Rank, have so eagerly and so unfuccessfully A 4 courted, courted, be not in the Opinion of all wife Men highly to their Difhonour?

A 4

43. Whether there can be a more agreeable Tribute to a good Mind, than the Approbation of all good Men?

44. Whether, when Men are fo abandoned as to fell their Country, and to glory in their Shame, it be not a Sign that they are loft to all Senfe of Good, greatly infatuated, and ripe for Deftruction ?

45. Whether it were not adviseable for fome Men to fludy the Limits of their own Understandings, and to proportion their Undertakings to their Abilities?

46. Whether improbable Falfhoods (fuch as, that the Opposition given to the altered Money-Bill proceeded from a Spirit of Difaffection to his Majesty) impudently afferted, should be attributed to ignorance, or Malice ?

47. Whether they who retail them are the real Authors of them?

48. Whether Bribery and Corruption were ever fo glaring as they have been of late?

49. Whether the Defign of these was to make Men virtuous, or to destroy the very Appearance of Virtue among us?

50. Can it be conftrued libelling, to call a Sharper by his proper Name?

51. Can a certain Priest's greatest Friend fay, that his Ambition is not boundless, or his private Vices not abominable?

52. Is not the turning Gentlemen out of their Employments for voting in P——, and threatening others with the fame Fate, fufficient to alarm every Man of Spirit in the Nation?

53. Whether the great Pains taken, fince last Seffion of P-----, to corrupt the Members, and to throw the Nation into Confusion, be proper Employment ment for a Churchman, in an exalted Station. And whether the Fault is not too notorious to be denied?

54. Will not the glorious 17th of December 1753, be at all Times an undeniable Proof of the Virtue of our House of Commons, and a Demonstration, that the Devil himself, with all his Power, must hide the cloven Foot, or he will not be able to do his Business, nor even to make the Mob hail him?

55. Whether the Subscriptions now carrying on to buy Medals, to perpetuate the Memory of the 17th of December 1753, be not a glorious Instance of the Virtue of the City of Dublin?

56. Whether fuch Subscription is not an undeniable Proof of their Attachment to his Majesty's Person and Government, who, as he can never do wrong himself, must be for ever displeased to hear that his Ministers intend to do it?

57. Whether Beef and Claret alone, without Places, Penfions and Promifes, could have procured fo many Adherents to a bad Caufe? And whether all together have not been found ineffectual to fupport it?

58. Whether by fuch Expedients a certain Party has not been in a great Measure kept together?

59. Whether Places, Penfions and Promifes, are not real Impediments to publick Good, and hinder Multitudes from feeing and acknowledging, what they would fee and acknowledge, if those were removed ?

60. Whether if a certain great Prelate had been fuffered to go on for a while in his own way, he would not have deftroyed all the private Virtue we have among us, and unpeopled the Nation, by fubflituting fomething elfe in the Place of Wedlock?

61. Whether certain Ladies have not fufpected this, and been for fome Time jealous of his Credit with their Hufbands?

the Alleganer

62. Whether

62. Whether a certain S be indeed the Leader, or the Dupe of the P ?

63. Whether it would not be a Proof of his Wifdom and Virtue to difengage himfelf from him, whilf he has it in his Power to make an honeft Retreat?

64. Whether every Man doth not believe in his Confcience, that more pernicious Defigns were at this Time carrying on, than had been thought of fince L-d S-d's Time? And whether Complaifance upon fuch an Occasion would not have been unpardonable?

65. Whether if the most pernicious Deligns to this Kingdom, and most to the Advantage of the Administrator, had been carrying on, more corrupt Methods could have been taken to carry them into Execution?

66. Whether a Blue Ribband, and a Ducal Coronet, would not have been gladly offered, had not a certain Earl's Virtue been too well known?

67. Whether a quondam Patriot would not have continued fo, had his Virtue been Proof against Temptation?

68. Whether the old Adage Cucullus non facit Monachum, be not too true?

69. Whether the greatest Caution in the Choice of Perfons to fill honourable and lucrative Employments, be not abfolutely neceffary in a Minister of State, who has promifed the fame Employment to fix Perfons, without intending to give it to any of them ?

70. Whether if the late $P \longrightarrow S \longrightarrow t$ had been on the fide of the Court, $C \longrightarrow r P \longrightarrow y$ would not have been a Patriot, to have the Honour of answering him?

71. Whether Men whole avowed Principle it is to vote for the Perfon who offers most, can add any Credit to the fide which they espouse?

72. Whether

[10]

72. Whether a Man can be called Quarrelfome who fights pro Aris ac focis, when his All is at Stake ?

73. Whether the Question, of the 17th of December 1753, was not of this Nature ?

74. Whether the Party may not quickly find Reafon to bewail their Conduct? And whether upon a new Election, they will not find the bad Effects of it?

75. Whether it be not better to have Money for fome time locked up in a Cheft, tho' you fhould want a Part of it, than to have all taken away without your Confent, and never to return ?

76. If Scarcity should succeed Plenty, who are we to thank but those who betrayed the Trust reposed in them by their Conftituents ?

77. Whether some Men do not prefer a present Bribe to the true Intereft of their Country ?

78. Whether it be reasonable to expect that the Majority of a Houfe of Commons, will be Bullied by the Minority?

79. When by Riot and Luxury, an Eftate is Squandered away, is there no Method of recovering it but by felling our Country ?

80. Can any Perfon be fo blind, as not to fee that Innovations may be attended with Ruin to a State?

81. Can any other Caufe of our Divisions be affigned, than the Rage of Ambition, and the Luft of Power? And must not a Man be wilfully Blind not to fee this ?

82. Is it not Manifest, that the P----- of the P---- proceeded from the Fear of having things properly reprefented to his Majefty?

83. Whether any pretence of Confcience, can induce a Man to fell his Country?

84. Whether a Man, who, with a good Confcience, follicited a Place, ought not rather to part with his good Place than his good Confcience?

[11]

85. Whether, tho' the Cork-Surgeon cannot Cure a diflocated Member, may he not have Verba & Voces, quibus bunc lenire dolorem poffis, & magnam morbi depellere partem?

86. Whether the Conduct of certain Men in the Year 1749, and in the Year 1753, may not be very confiftent?

87. As the Perfon who intended moving laft Seffion for the Augmentation of the Army's Pay was not fulpected of a Defign to infringe the King's Prerogative, why fhou'd the Gentleman who made the Motion this Seffion be fulpected of Sinifter Defigns?

88. Can a Motion to encrease the Pay of his Majesty's Army, be construed into Disaffection to his Majesty.

90. Whether the united Voice of the Nation can be called Faction? Or whether the Minority may be entitled to that Appellation?

91. Whether Prerogative can interfere with the good of a Nation ?

92. Whether the Majority wou'd not be as careful of the King's Prerogative, as they are jealous of their own Liberties ?

93. Whether any Pamphlet has yet appeared that can warrant a late P____n?

94. Whether every Pamphlet hath not expressed the greatest Duty and Loyalty to his Majesty, however free they may have made with some of his Ministers, who deferve no Compliments from this Nation? 95. Whether the profligate Lives, and the horrid and deteftable Vices of fome Men in very high Stations, is not a fufficient Juftification of all that has been faid and wrote against them ?

96. Whether fuch Truths can with any Propriety be called Libels ?

97. Whether, if any Profecution fhou'd be commenced upon Account of them, Juries are not the fole Judges, as well of the Law, as of the Fact?

98. Whether an Ignorant Judge declaring the contrary, can alter the Cafe ? And whether his afferting it upon a late Occafion, did more than expose his own Ignorance, which was before, but too notorious?

99. Whether ill-timed and undeferv'd Praife be not the fevereft of all Satires ?

100. Whether a petty-fogging flock-jobbing Collier and A—— B——, by his late Promife to Caipbas, and by his declaring that he was not guilty of Sodomy, did not hurt him more, than all the Libels that have been published against him ?

101. Whether the Author of fome late QUERIES hath not been the Publisher of more Scandal, and of a more notorious Libel, than any that has appeared on the other fide?

102. Whether his very Performance doth not demonftrate, what that Party would do, if the Virtue of our Patriots afforded the least room for Cenfure?

103. Whether the Prefbyterians in Ireland, by their Conduct now and at the Time of the Rebellion, have not shewn the most unshaken Loyalty to his Majesty, and the most steady Adherence to the Liberty and Property of the People ?

104.

to an instanting the 104. Whether fuch Behaviour must not ever recommend them to all true Lovers of this Kingdom?

105. Whether they ought not, at a future Election, to remember the Services of those worthy Patriots, who have at this Time flood up in Defence of the Liberties of their Country?

106. Whether they will not act a most inconfistent Part, if they fuffer themfelves to be prevailed upon, either by Threats or by Promises, to vote for those who would at this Time have fold their Country?

107. Whether the late Election for the County of Armagh, is not a Proof of what they can do if they flick together? Whether Standson and the Strain Brails b and by his declaring the or was not guiley of socion and did the full with more was the fulles that it and tinth wit been the Publicher of which diaman, and of bern sub-tenter and an and an and and our Petriots all'eded the leaft room of Centure

Conduct now and at the Trane of the Olifical hard

ALETTER road Witcher Bis very Perfore Viele Viele Viele of the levereft of all finnes

100, Whether A Hidenie

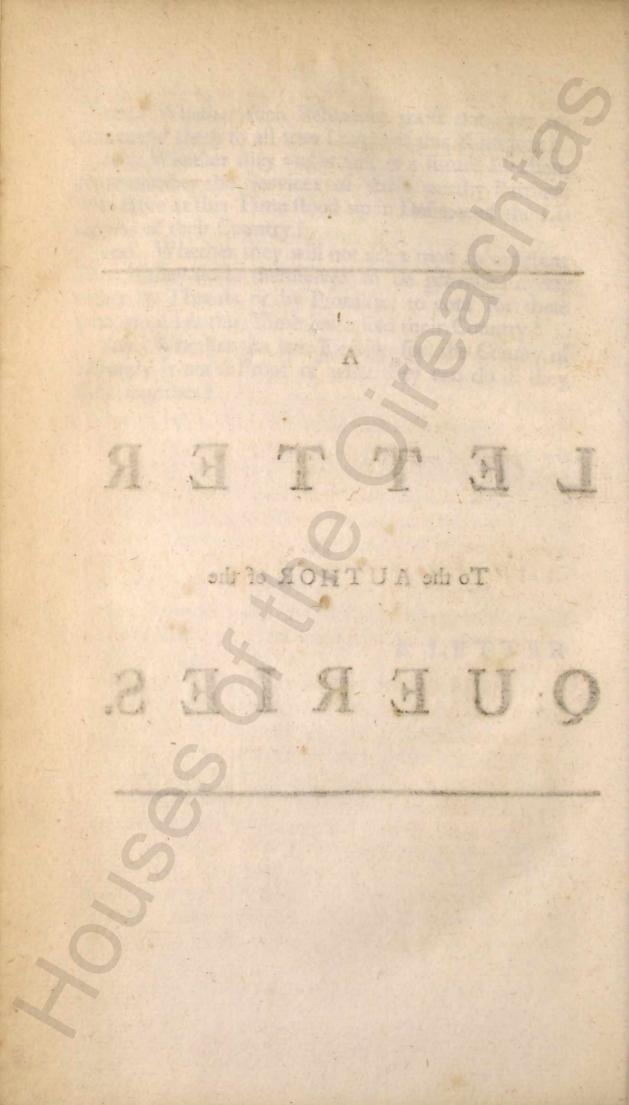

ot. Whether the Annixer

LETTER

A

To the AUTHOR of the

QUERIES.

[17]

TOTHE

tebenets of nervous for anne guruy and Perce revived in your

Author of the QUERIES

A RODAL

talce a little too much in a former ov why yourfelf, frieinan invariable. TOTHE ght and out Envyt he charmed with the PEOPLE of IRELAND.

vou have fo indefatigably about 210 effect, is this a od 2 Mez

portelled with too fanguing an arediton for the In DEAR SIR, tratation of Principles, which revived ain your beg Leave to congratulate you on making your Appearance once more in Print. I was really apprehenfive your Spirit had been in fome Sort fubdued by a few former Mischances; but with Pleasure I find, I was not deceived in the Opinion I formed of your Genius, at your first fetting out; it is really indomitable by private Rebuffs or public Cenfure. One of a more ordinary Make would by this Time have grown desperate, after being twice beaten B beaten from the Literary Field, and failing of Reward from those Patrons, in whose behalf it had plunged into a Scheme of Defence, not to be paralleled in the Records of Party Writing.

With equal Pleasure do I admire your Abilities in varying your Garb, and yet carrying thro' the whole fuch ftrong Marks of Identity, that the loweft Understanding must instantly perceive it. Your Inquiry shone in all the Brightness of nervous Argumentation and amiable Candor; Facetiousness and true Humour fixed their Refidence in your Political Pastime; and now with Joy must every Lover of Antiquity behold the Socratic Purity and Force revived in your irrefistible Queries : And yet thro' each of these runs fuch a Confiftency with yourfelf, fuch an invariable Adherence to the fame Set of Sentiments, that the public Delight must be highly raised, and every Eye, not jaundiced with Envy, be charmed with the Nothing less can be expected, where Uni-View. formity and Variety, the two Conftituents of Beauty, are fo eminently Confpicuous.

The only Confequence I dread, which can in any fort obftruct that Reformation of Principles, which you have fo indefatigably laboured to effect, is this; poffeffed with too fanguine an Affection for the Interefts of your Patrons, you were tempted to undertake a little too much in a former Treatife, for the Purity of their Intentions, and ventured on an unlucky Prophecy or two of fome important Events; now the Sequel has not corresponded with either, as exactly as you and I could wifh. The whole Nation is in an Uproar against them, and they are fo unfortunate as not to have their large share of Odium, compensated by any Degree of Success, nor has the Tumble you engaged for, or any other Part of the Scheme, taken Effect. This, and some other little Matters, will, I fear, throw no great Weight on your other other Affertions, or luftre on your Arguments. People will be apt to think you writ at Random, only to fcrape Favour with your Patron, and that you were as ignorant of the true National Intereft, as indifferent about it's Fate.

However, no Man is exempted from Faux Paus, and the wholefomeness of your Doctrines, will, I hope, help you through these little Difficulties. While you continue to inculcate implicit Obedience, propagate the Maxims of Servitude, teach Us that We are but a beggarly, conquered, dependent Province, ridicule the Patriots, and abufe the Diffenters, while you fo waggifhly roaft the Country 'Squires, and make us shake our Sides at your droll Account of the Faction, cemented by Beef and Claret, you may reft affured of Applause. This Method you broached in your Inquiry, illustrated in your Paltime, and now pop upon us in your short, but devilishly staggering Queries. I make no doubt but the Black Lift was confiderably fwelled by Dint of your Reafoning, and am acquainted with many who would implicitly put their Affent into your Hands purely on the ftrength of your Latin Quotations. In fhort, Dear Doctor, your Powers are fo great, that you may write this People into what you please, nor can your Productions fail to delight wherever the Confiderations on the Money Bill carry Conviction; and that's a bold Word.

One very fingular Mark of Honour your Compositions bear, which no Writer of the Party has yet arrived at, and I affirm it to you as the greatest Truth ; it is this : Whatever you are pleafed to divulge, is taken by all Sides, as the Genuine Senfe of your Patrons, fo far as you could poffibly dive into it. You are taken as the Mouth of the Junto, the only one who has honeftly laid open the full Extent of their Schemes without Palliation or Difguife; both thefe you really feem to fcorn. Many Months ago you gene-B 2 generoufly avowed the Grand Project of the Union, tho' it was not intended to be introduced, until the Day after the Money-Preamble had paffed, and candidly promulged the Defign of difplacing the Speaker, at a Time when nothing was professed but the warmeft Inclinations in his Favour, nay, when the most affiduous Overtures were making for a deceitful Accommodation to lull Him and his Friends in Security, To an honeft Mind like yours this universal Character of Honesty must be highly pleasing, and it is the common Wish of all, that you could work out a Preferment, which may produce fuch an Intimacy, as we may depend upon for authentic Intelligence; we should have it then directly from the Fountain-Head, and should rely on your Communicative Temper for our Information.

I am very forry Things have taken fuch a turn, that you have now but to comment on past Transactions, instead of regaling us as formerly with Profpects to come. Matters are, to be fure, at an indiffefent pass with us, and I fear our Proceedings betray our Confusion. One Instance in particular makes us univerfally laughed at; I mean the violent flir the other Day about the News-Paper. Some will have it that the calling the C---, could come from no Head but yours, and that you alone could dictate the P----; others fay this is not fo probable, but that the whole was the Work of a better Head tho' a little diforder'd with Paffion, which in it's Effects is equivalent to a clouded Brain. To be fure it was a heavy Proceeding from Beginning to End, and the worft of it is, I hear a Sacrifice will be on the promoting Side; for that your last Performance amounts to an outrageous Libel. That indeed would be to turn the Joke against us. your really form' to form, "Many Michtens sign

As

As to your Queries, I shall not at prefent fet about to illustrate them; Indeed, what has been faid to your former Productions, is fufficient also for this. I own, I am highly delighted with them all; particularly, the round Character you to justly beftow on the Patriots in your Letter to the Printer. It carries ftrongly indeed that Plainness and Sincerity which characterife your Writings. Then your Method of fupporting the Money Bill-toute Nouvelle ! four or five different Methods have been hammered out already, and here is Yours, of a more uncommon make than any, and, in the Eye of every fenfible Person, full as valid as them all ! In my Conscience, I think it cannot be answered-But your Reason for the Prorogation !----By my Faith you're a droll Fellow-" It was indeed highly prudent to keep Men a funder, who would only be fighting and worrying " one another." (and OTHERS too, perhaps) Faith, Dear Sir, 'tis a Pity you were not in Being in Charles the Second's Time ; how that merry Monarch would have chuckled at fuch a Reafon for not fuffering Parliaments to meet!

The only Fault I fee in you (which, as your Friend, I muft tell you) is that infeparable Modefty which all your Labours fo abundantly exhibit. It was this, doubtlefs, that made you fo induftrious to conceal your real Self with your Genealogy, your being a Country Gentleman, (Take care, B—It, you are yet fore from one of that Appellation) and telling us how often you have flickled for Liberty.——Dear Doctor, how can you be fo ignorant of yourfelf, as to imagine your Brilliancy could lye concealed ? Take it from me, that, affume any, ever fo opposite, Character, you have fomething fo peculiar, that you muft be known.

noYour too, are all highly Reclonable and I

Your Epiftle Dedicatory to Sir R——d C——x is really a pretty Piece of genteel Satyr; fuch a one, as, I promife you, will gall him to the Quick: I know him well, and can affure you, he has always fhuddered at the Poignancy of your Productions: I dare fay (if he reads it) this will give him no fmall Emotion; and had it appeared before the Seffion, his Head would never have been clear enough to have worry'd us as he did. It is indeed juftly founded, and neatly conducted. On my Word, my dear Doctor, a few fuch Men as you would overfet any Faction in the World.

Proceed with Vigour, dear Sir, and don't be difcouraged : Never fuffer the Quill out of your Hand, for your Opportunity will, I fear, be but short ; or, in your own Phrase, post est Occasio calva; Carpe Diem; Principibus placuisse Viris .--- But the Beauty of your Appothegms is as inimitable as the traivete of Sancho's Proverbs, and the Fund as inexhauftible-Don't fuffer your Learning, your Humour, and your Politic Vocabulary, to be hid in a Napkin. Human Talents generally have a large share of the Vis Inertia, and must therefore be kept in Motion. Do not, however, write merely for your own Amusement, but fend your Works abroad; for (as you observe in your Preface) they must ever be acceptable where Folly and Stupefaction prevail : Write on, i' God's Name, 'till we are doctored to your Liking, with those sharp and awakening Means which you fo eagerly hope to fee administered by those who have Authority to give them Weight, and Power to give them Efficacy.

As your Friend, I join with you in affuring the Public, that every Allegation in your Queries is ftrictly true, and therefore defy the beft Advocate of the other Side, to convict you of Fallbood. Your Suppolitions too, are all highly Reasonable and Probable; and and as for Slander—you have really faid nothing that deferves that Name; and if you had, the Houfe is up (Thanks to your Prime Patron) and no Serjeant at Arms at Hand: Why then fhould not you, in your Way, take Advantage of the Prorogation as well as your BETTERS?

My Épiftle grows a little too long, but the most indolent Pen can comment at large, on so capacious a Field as your Performances afford.

I shall now beg Leave to kiss your Hand, and subscribe myself,

Dear Doctor,

Your most devoted humble Servant.

FINIS.

