APPEAL

AN

LANDHOLDERS,

GENTLEMEN,

HILST Men of much lower Name and Condition than you, Shopkeepers, Artificers, and Inholders, have been claiming publick Notice and Audience, and advifing their Sc.

Representatives how to behave themselves in Parliament, directing them expressly to oppose all Excises in any Shape whatsever; I should not have been furprized to have seen you taking the same Liberty with your Representatives, to have seen you, you, inftructing and even praying them, to remember your and their own long and heavy Burdens, and advifing them readily to comply, I do not fay with any Scheme for your Ease (for that would have been as ridiculous as immodest) but with all reasonable and equal Methods to abolish the Land-Tax, which in about forty Years has drained you of Sixty Millions.

Now if this great Bleffing can be obtained for you, even without your Application for it, without any new Tax upon you or your Fellow Subjects, nay without adding to any old Tax, and without any other Alteration than that of collecting an antient Duty by a different and more fuccefsful Method; are you obliged to thefe your Neighbours, your Fellow-Subjects, thefe your Tenants and Dependants, for thus labouring to defeat by Clamour and Bitternefs this invaluable Advantage, this mighty Deliverance of you and your Posterity from a Load which you have fo long and fo forely felt, and which has been generally understood as an Incumbrance entailed upon you through all Ages to come?

To one who has not well confidered the Power of Prejudice, of Selfifhnefs, and of popular Frenzy, raifed and heightened by the Arts and Invectives of angry and interested Men, it would appear as amazing as it is melancholy and shocking, that what all Men ought to applaud and promote, any Man should decry and oppose; that publick Benefits and the Relief of a Nation should be unpopular, and that Millions should continue burthened and diffreffed, rather than Particulars be obliged to comply with Law and Confcience. For, by Law and ConConfcience, Tea, Coffee, and Chocolate, ought to have paid as much to the Revenue, when under the Cuftoms, as they have done fince under the Excife; yet they paid not then above one Half of what they pay now.

So that what Confcience and Oaths and former Laws could not effect, another Law, and a different Regulation have accomplished. This new Regulation was therefore a Cure for the Arts and Frauds used in these Commodities, and, when applied to Tobacco and Wine, will in all Probability produce the fame good Effect, and a double Revenue. So that the Nation will be profited and eafed without aggrieving Particulars, unless the Cure of Frauds and of Corruption and Perjury be a Grievance. Yet this is fuch a Grievance to some, that, to prevent it, they have, by Arts and Mifrepresentations, and Outcries of Oppression, influenced and inflamed not only many who were themfelves innocent, but the Multitude in general, and possessed them with strange Fears of General Excifes and Slavery; as if the restraining of a few Knaves were Matter of Oppreffion to all Men, when by it all Men were to be benefited and relieved; as it it were Slavery to be under a Prohibition to cheat; and a furer Method of collecting the fame Duty upon two fingle Commodities were a General Excife.

To frustrate the Cure of these Frauds, the Relief of all the Gentlemen and Land-owners in Great Britain is to be postponed and prevented; or, in the best Light, you and yours must be condemned to groan under a Tax upon your Estates for ever, all for this important Confideration, that an Exciseman man may not enter the Shop of a Tobacconist, or the Celler of a Vintner. For this petty, this unequal Immunity to their Goods and Warehouses, your Lands must always continue affessed and exhausted. For the whole Tenour of their Outcries, of their Combinations and Applications, infers a Necessity of holding you under a certain and steddy Tax, that they may pay theirs, or not pay it, as they please.

THE Entrance of an Excifeman into Shops and Warehoufes, when open of Courfe to their Cuftomers, can be no Injury, hardly an Inconvenience, to the Owners, where no Fraud is committed or intended. But fuppofe it an Inconvenience, fuppofe it fome Difadvantage; is there any Advantage in Society, any in human Life, without fome Allay, fome Uneafinefs, fome Difficulty, Pain, or Fear?

You, Gentlemen, have fenfibly found what a heavy Misfortune has attended your greatest Good, and even arisen from it, as you have been obliged to pay great Sums for near half a Century out of your Fortunes, for the Sake of being protected in your Fortunes. Whatever Debts you owed, whatever numerous Families you had to rear, whatever Table your Figure, Name and Situation in the Country obliged you to keep, whatever Port to fultain; though you had many fine young Ladies to portion, many young Gentlemen to educate and fettle; still a yearly Deduction was made out of your Rents, however fcanty of themfelves, however ill paid, and already burdened with daily Repairs and weekly Poor-Rates; befides that, together with all these Loads, you had all other Taxes to pay, for the Shoes that you wore, for the Candles that that you burned, for the Soap that washed you; for the Drink that refreshed you; and a tenth Part of your annual Produce was all the while appropriated to the Church. But, as it was a Contribution for publick Protection, it was not to be avoided: Nor do I remember that you have ever in your Instructions to your Representatives, defired them to take it off; so little Thought had you of being relieved, at least utterly relieved from it.

THE Offer of Relief is therefore the more generous, the more pleafing and furprizing; yet this generous Offer, this fudden and unexpected Relief, is, you fee, oppofed with all Violence, mifreprefented with all Falfhood, and reviled with all Bitternefs and Malice; with fuch Rage, with fuch Tumult, as if, far from removing old Taxes, new Taxes were going to be laid on and accumulated in the fevereft and moft various Manner; nay, as if our Government and Liberties were going to be deftroyed, Tyranny and arbitrary Impofts fet up, and univerfal Bondage to enfue.

I am ashamed, for the Honour of Mankind, and of my Country, to mention, or rather to repeat the miserable and ridiculous Cause of all this folemn Fear, this popular Tumult and Alarm. It is no other, nor greater, than that it is apprehended that an Excise Officer, armed with a gauging Wand, shall examine the Hogssead of Vintners, and the Casks of Tobacconists, though he already pay daily Visits to their Neighbours the Grocers, Druggists, Chandlers, Soap-boilers, Malsters, Brewers and Tanners, without bringing them any Terror or Disturbance; fo far is he from oppressing or enflaving them.

DOES it do Credit to the Candour of fuch as began this Affright, or to the Understanding of those who who are feized with it, to turn this Sort of poor Officer, one fo familiar to our Eyes, fo long tried and harmlefly employed, into fuch a Bugbear, as if each of them were a Bashaw armed with Legions and lawless Power? There can hardly be a greater Instance that there is nothing fo false, fo extravagant and incredible, nor even impossible, but some Men will be found to affert it, others to believe it.

MANY Kinds of Trades are now under the Inspection of this Officer : He visits Brewers, Chandlers, Soap-makers, Malsters, Tanners, &c. all as deferving Subjects, as Dealers in Tobacco and Wine, and of much more Importance to the Publick; and why they who are no better than the reft, and not fo uleful, should claim greater Exemption, especially fuch an Exemption as affects the Publick fo nearly, and you, Gentlemen, fo effentially, no equal or tolerable Reason can be affigned. Would you lose one of the greatest Advantages that ever were offered to you, because your Neighbour, with whom you lay out your Money for Wine and Tobacco, and confequently maintain him, cares not that an Officer should cross his Threshold, though that Officer cannot hurt him, if he injure not the Publick, and defeat not the Laws? Nay, that Officer is a certain Security, and even a Benefactor to every fair Dealer, by watching and preventing the foul Dealer, who, by cheating the Publick, can underfell, and confequently undo his fair Neighbour.

Now where the honeft Trader, by paying the full Duty without raifing the Price, is ruined, and the unjust Trader, by paying no Duty, or very little Duty, and yet not finking the Price, or finking it but a little, thrives, is it not just to encourage the former former and check the latter? This is therefore a Project for the Advancement of publick and private Honesty, as well as of your Ease and Prosperity.

Nor can there be fo equitable a Method contrived of raifing a Duty upon these two Commodities. The Merchant who imports them pays no Duty; and cannot be aggrieved or hurt : The Retailer who buys them of the Merchant, and pays the Duty, and by raifing the Price makes the Confumer repay him, cannot be hurt; for neither does he pay any Thing out of his own Pocket. It is you, Gentlemen, and the reft of the Confumers, who pay all. Even fuch as pay no Duty, charge you, as if they did.

How therefore does this Change in the Method of collecting the Duty, injure any honeft Man? I am sure it affects you in a very defirable, in a very glorious Manner. It is a Scheme for adding to the Estate of every Man who has one. It is giving every fuch Man another Eftate, a tenth, or a twentieth more than he had before. It is giving to fome of you Hundreds a Year, to most of you Pounds, and to every one in Proportion to what he already posses, or has already suffered.

WHAT a glorious Relief and Donation would this have been thought at a Time when no fuch Relief was expected? And that Time has been almost ever fince the very Beginning of the Land Tax; nor has any Thing been more commonly believed, than that this Tax was to last for ever.

IT has been always confidently charged upon the Revolution by its Enemies, as a Curfe and Calamity entailed upon it, that it had introduced a heavy BurBurden upon Land, from which the Gentlemen and Freeholders of England were never more to be released. Are they not then your Friends, your Benefactors, your good Angels, that prefent you with this noble, this neceflary, this unhoped-for Relief, this Addition to your Fortunes, without laying a fingle Farthing upon the reft of your Fellow Subjects? It is therefore extremely unkind, not to fay barbarous, in them, thus to combine, thus to clamour and rage against a Scheme calculated to make you happy without hurting them, nay tending evidently to their Advantage in general: But their Paffions, raifed by Art or Folly, blind them : Do not let their Paffions blind you too : Though the Senfe of Feeling alone, even without Eyes, would feem fufficient to convince you of the Benefit intended for you.

How therefore can you relifh the Arts and Noife employ'd to defeat that great Benefit? How can fuch as employ them expect any other Return from you than that of Refentment or Contempt? What would it be to you, that only a new Law were inrended to mend the Defects of an old one, that the Duty upon Tobacco and Wine were to be paid to an Officer of Excife inftead of an Officer of the Customs, even though this Change were of no immediate Advantage to you? But when by fuch an eafy, fuch a fmall Change, Benefits fo notable accrue to you, can you forbear wondering at the Immodesty of those who hope to close your Eyes, to deprive you of your other Senfes, and to make you combine with them against your felves? They have fent, or, perhaps more properly, procured to be fent, Directions to their Representatives, to oppose this harmharmlefs, this beneficent Schame, that is, to oppose your Relief. Is this neighbourly, or juft, or honeft? Or is it not the greateft Infult and Injury that can be offered to you? And do they who first awakened, and then promoted this Spirit of Oppofition and Tumult, deferve your Thanks now, or your Votes hereafter? And does it not deferve your Notice at prefent, and your Remembrance hereafter, that they have laboured with all their Might to millead you from your own Interest and Prefervation, to enrage you against your real Benefactors, and ftirred up your very Tenants and Neighbours to confpire against you?

You might fight them with their own Weapons, and fend Directions to your Reprefentatives in your Turn, and there fet forth your Motives and Pretenfions in very moving Strains. But I thank God, 'tis needlefs ; your Reprefentatives will do you and themfelves Juffice.

THESE angry People feem to combat against Shadows and Phantoms, as well as against your Good; they frighten themselves, or others frighten them, with the Word Excise, with Excise-Officers and the Laws of Excife. They fay nothing of the Customs, which have their Officers and Laws, and Terrors too; and, as an Excise-Officer can go wherever there are exciseable Commodities; so can a Customhouse Officer go wherever there are customable Commodities. Upon any Information of Run Goods, the Custombouse Officer, affisted by proper Authority, may enter private Houses and make Search; and without fuch Information and fuch Authority, an Excise Officer cannot enter nor search there. I VE- I VERY much doubt whether they who make the greatest Noise about changing Commodities from Custom to Excise, understand the Difference, or have a clear Notion of either. Customs are Duties paid by the Merchant upon Importation: Excises are Duties payable by the Retailer upon Confumption. Now as the Customs are liable to many Frauds, which can be prevented under an Excise; its judged proper for your Sakes, Gentlemen, and for other publick Confiderations, in which you are likewise concerned, to remove two Commodities, both foreign ones, and both employed in Luxury, from the Customs to the Excise.

WHAT Advantage or rather Profit will from this Change, which hurts no honest Man, redound to you, I have already explained. It will befides have an immediate Tendency to leffen and discharge the publick Debts, to fupply the current Service of each Year, to make up the Deficiencies of other Funds, and to the abolishing in Time all other grievous Taxes. So that, what additional Sums this new Method brings in, are not intended to enrich Courts nor Courtiers, or to be applied at Random, or squandered profusely; but to be faithfully applied by your own Representatives to your Use and that of the Publick; nor can it fail, by increasing the National Revenue, to discharge the National Debts, and Taxes, and Tax-gatherers. Thus as we are often forced to have recourse to War in order to procure Peace, the Addition of a few Officers now, will serve to lessen and dismiss a great Number of Officers hereafter.

This will be a noble Improvement of the publick Revenue, worthy of the Thoughts and Purfuit fuit of Ministers and Legislators, of instant Concern and Benefit to you, and merits the good Wiscenaries and Aid of all Men. This present Alteration neither falls upon your Land, nor the Produce of your Land, nor upon our Manufactures, nor upon any native Commodities, nor lays any new Duty even upon those two foreign Commodities, Wine and Tobacco, but only provides that such as stole the old Duty shall steal no more.

CLAMOUR and Opposition upon the laying of any new Tax are usual, though fuch Tax be ever fo reasonable or necessary, and even intended to lessen or abolish such as are not fo. But here no new Tax is dreamt of; yet what Clamour, only upon altering the Method of collecting an old Tax, and establishing a better Method of collecting it; tho' nothing has been more common than to yary the Laws of the Revenues from Year to Year wherever they were found faulty or defective? I do not remember that the Imposition of a new Tax, however heavy and distreffing, ever begot fuch Outcries. When Leather, Soap, and Candles, (Commodities fo neceffary to Life, and of our own Produce) were excised in the latter End of the Queen's Reign, no fuch Clamour enfued. The Excife at present intended, only extends to two foreign Commodities, two Commodities of Luxury. Yet what Clamour now, what Tumult, what Combinations ! Was any fuch Alarm raifed when Tea, Coffee and Chocolate were subjected to an Excise a few Years ago? No, many who oppose this Excise, were for that Excife.

As to any Intention of a General Excife, with which some have endeavoured to frighten you, 'tis fuch fuch a monftrous Impoffibility, and confequently fuch a monftrous Fallhood, that I fhall not do it the Credit, nor offer you the Affront, to confute it; but leave it to those who broached it, and them to reconcile it to common Veracity and Honour, if they can, or to reflect upon their own great Sagacity, if ever they believed it.

THE Increase of Excise Officers is, I think, the principal Objection to the present Scheme. What a terrible Disappointment it would be to some of the Objectors, if it could be executed without any such Increase of Officers? (For all who make the Objection are not, I doubt, entirely governed in this Affair by pure Reason and Virtue.) But I believe there must be some such Increase, which must be owned an Inconvenience. But, alas, what is the Course of human Life, what the Business of all the Wisdom amongst Men, but from numberless Evils to pick out that which is least, and among Things that are not bad, that which is nearest to Good?

In Times of War, I should be glad that we could defend our felves without Soldiers, or find Soldiers who took no Pay. But as we must employ and pay Soldiers for our Safety, fo must we Officers for that of the Revenue. I hope the Number to be added will be but small, and then there will be fcarce any Cause of Complaint: I fay, fcarce any, fince the Receivers General of the feveral Counties will be discharged; Men who from their superior Allowances, Weight and Influence, (especially by Means of the publick Money, and their Power to spare and affist their Neighbours) are of much more Confequence in the Country, and at Elections, than to many, or three Times as many poor Excise Men, whose whofe Behaviour is known to be fo feverely watched and reftrained by Law, and the Infpection of their Superiors. Let it be remembred too, that these Receivers General are all Officers appointed by the Crown.

As to the Laws of Excife, which are another Source of Terror, a good deal is to be faid in Mitigation of fuch Terror. The King's Part of the Duty arifing from Wine and Tobacco, will still continue under the Cuftoms; fo that the Revenue of the Crown will be no wife increased by this Project, and all that Increase goes into the National Purfe. Thus the Subject, in any Difputes with the Crown, has still the Privilege of a Trial by Juries. So far therefore as these Duties come under the Excife, there can be no Dispute but between a particular Subject and the Society in general; and then the Commissioners, though appointed by the Crown, can have no Bials to Partiality, nor any private Ends; for in every fuch Difpute it is the Interest of the Publick, as well as of every private Man, to have Suits fuddenly decided by Judges who are abfolutely impartial.

IN the Ordinary Courts, Delays are infinite, Expences infinite, and Suits endlefs. Befides the Commiffioners are Judges in Confeience, and by not being confined to the Forms and Letter of the Law, have a Latitude for exercifing Mercy and Mitigation: And this their Jurifdiction is confined within the City of London and the Bills of Mortality. Over all the reft of England the Juffices of the Peace exercife the fame, and judge and determine fummarily, as well as the Commiffioners of Excife in London. Thefe Juffices can also inflict perfonal PunithPunishment, Whip, and Imprison; thus they punish Vagrants and Pickpockets; and such Power is found useful and necessary. Is it not equally so in Matters of the Publick Revenue, by which the Publick it felf is secured and maintained?

NOR is fuch fummary Judgment confined to these Instances only (fo far is it from being fingular in the Commissioners of Excise.) The Court of Chancery hath it in a very sovereign Degree, and all the Property in England litigated there, lies in the Breast and Option of a Judge, who is an Officer appointed by the Crown, as well as the Commissioners of Excise, and removeable at Pleasure, as they are. The Court of Delegates likewise exercise the same Power, and these Delegates also are appointed, made, and unmade by the King.

EVEN the ordinary Courts of Justice do in many Cafes act and determine difcretionally and without Juries, even in Matters of Perfon and Property, and daily fine and commit. But if after all, People will be still left at Liberty, under this new Regulation to have Recourfe to Juries and the Exchequer, I fancy 'tis a Liberty they would feldom use or have Occasion to use. I have heard of some, who when 'twas offered them, did not accept it, even whilst they were making great Noise, frightening and enflaming their Fellow Subjects upon this very Point.

GREAT Pains have been taken to render the Word Excise odious to you, and the Thing it felf terrible, not by Reasoning or good Authority; but by inflammatory Invectives, and by unfair and affecting Descriptions: Yet this very Method of raifing Duties in general by an Excise, is not only pracpractifed by the wifeft and freeft States, but has been ever recommended by the beft Judges and the wifeft Men, in Oppofition to that of Cuftoms, which they condemn. This is the Opinion of the famous Monfieur de Wit; it is the Opinion of Mr: Mun, that eminent and approved Writer upon Trade; it is the Opinion of Sir Josiab Child, that opulent Merchant, famous for his clear and rational Discourse of Trade; and 'tis the Opinion of the great Sir Walter Raleigh, a Man for Judgment, Strength of Genius, various Knowledge and Experience, equal to any Man, fuperior to most Men.

THESE great Names all contend against Customs, or for the Lowness of Customs, and for the Use of Excise. Sir Josiah Child in deducing the Causes of the prodigious Increase and Prosperity of the Dutch; assigns for one of these Causes, the Lowness of their Customs and the Height of their Excise, which latter, adds he, is certainly the most equal and indifferent Tax in the World, and least prejudicial to any People.

MR. Mun fays, (speaking of publick Taxes) neither are these heavy Contributions so hurtful to the Happiness of the People as they are commonly esteemed; for as the Food and Raiment for the Poor is made dear by Excise, so doth the Price of their Labour rise in Proportion, whereby the Burthen (if any be) is still upon the Rich, who are either idle, or at least work not in this Kind, yet have the Uses and are the great Consumers of the Peoples Labour.

You see here the Defence of Exoife, of very extensive Excife, by two Men of great Skill and Name in Trade, and in whatever affected Trade : And will you be alarmed, will you suffer any Man, or or any Numbers of Men to alarm you, at a Defign of Excifing two Commodities of foreign Growth, and only used in Luxury?

SIR Walter Raleigh fays, that the low Duties (that is Cuftoms) levied by the Dutch upon Merchants, draws all Nations to trade with them; and that whatever Excifes or Impositions are laid upon the common People, Merchants and Trade, are still eafed and upheld by all poffible Means. This makes Trade flourish ; Trade increases their Revenues, and creates Profit, Plenty and Employment of all forts by Sea and Land. He fays that Genoa had once great Traffick, and was the Flower of Commerce as appeareth by their Records, and their fumptuous Buildings: For all Nations traded with them, and There was the Storehouse of Italy and other Places; but after they had set a great Custom of fixteen per Cent. all Nations left trading with them; which made them give themselves wholly to Usury. The Duke of Florence, he fays, on the contrary, builded Leghorn, and set small Custom upon Merchandize, and gave them great and pleafing Privileges, which hath made a rich and firong City, with a flourishing State.

I HOPE these great Authorities, as great as any that can instruct you upon this Subject, will fatisfy you that, as Excise in general (observe I do not fay, nor mean a General Excise) is not fuch a Monster as it has been represented to you, so this particular Excise upon Wine and Tobacco will not appear to monstrous and frightful, as continuing a Tax upon your Land to prevent it, would appear. I indeed hope, that when once the whole Scheme is produced and explained, it will appear exceptionable ble to none, but fuch as are wont to run and adulterate those two Commodities, and are enraged that they cannot always do so.

AND if this be the only Excife intended, will not any Man, especially any Country Gentleman, blush to own that he has so long patiently suffered our own Home-Produce and Manufacture, so neceffary to the poor Labourer and Manufacturer, to lie under such heavy Duties and Discouragements, and now only begins to complain, when two Things of Luxury and of foreign Growth, are going to be subjected to the like Imposition? Is it likely, or natural that our Representatives will hear nothing in Favour of the Landed Interest? Are we to inform the World that the Country Gentleman, is the only Man in this Nation, who neither knows nor regards his own Interest?

You fee how bufy and warm Tradefmen and Shopkeepers are, to eafe themfelves at your Expence; and will you profit nothing by their Example, efpecially when without loading them you eafe your felves? Surely the Concerns of Tobacconifts and Vintners, efpecially their partial and difhoneft Concerns, are not the Concerns of you and all Men, nor is it neceffary that you and all Men fhould fuffer for them. Surely you will not fuffer your felves to be furprized and mifled by the Men who gain by the Frauds now to be removed.

THE genuine Drift of the Complaints and Noife of fuch Men upon this Occafion, is really no more nor better, than that you must still pay, still be distreffed, that they may still cheat and flouriss; that they may grow rich Knaves whils you continue innocent Beggars, and their Dupes. For this honourable rable Reafon the Payment of our publick Debts must be still flow or retarded; for this there must be yearly Deficiencies with yearly Demands upon the Lands, and upon untransgreffing Subjects; and for this, such as begin to defpair of continuing their Frauds, and of preferving their unjust Gain, are loud in the Prefages and Cry of Oppression. Others seduced and scared by them, join with them till their Name is become Legion. They of them who know themsfelves guilty and are the Misseaders of others, deferve no Compassion, and have forfeited all Title to Charity; and of the many and the misled, I shall only say here, Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do.

MEER Dinn and empty Words and Cries ought to carry no Caufe. Nor are Majorities always in the If they were, all Europe ought to be Papifts right. at this Day, all Asia ought to be Mahometans, or rather the whole World ought to be Pagans. I could indeed produce very popular Vouchers that the Majority is often mistaken, often unjust. Nothing is more common than popular Folly, prevailing Frenzy, and Multitudes bewitched and erring. Do not we remember the Madness of the London Populace upon the Election of Members in the latter End of the late Queen's Reign, when their common Cry was, No Merchants, No Trade? The Crowd often run mad when it is most their Interest to be fober and advised, often idolize their Enemies, often rave against their best Friends, would destroy the Man whom they ought to blefs and cherifh, and blefs and exalt the Man whom they ought to curfe and deftroy. First, angry and artful Men enflame them, and then they enflame one another; and as it it was not Reafon, but bold Falfhood and Calumny, that enraged them, fo when they are in a Rage, they follow not Reafon, but feek Revenge.

THIS is the Effect of Party, this the Purfuit and Succefs of the Leaders of Party; and this Temper fometimes carries Men fo far, as to like or diflike, to love or hate, to oppofe or comply, not for Reafon, but for Party, and for Party againft Reafon. It feldom happens that we like the Actions of Men whofe Perfons or Stations we diflike; and 'tis too true that where a Spirit of Oppofition prevails, the better publick Meafures are, the worfe they will be liked, the more they will be oppofed. By which Means the Oppofition comes at laft to lote all its Credit and Ufe, and will be fufpected to proceed from Heat only, even where 'tis reafonable and well grounded.

IT was believed of the Duke of Guife, that fierce Leader of the League in France, that he would have turned Protestant, and headed the Protestants, had the Prince of Conde been a Catholick, and at the Head of the Catholicks. I know not whether that Duke did not declare fo much. The fame Ambition was faid to have influenced the Prince of Conde. Nor is this inconfistent with their being both afterwards violently in earness in their Choice when they had made it. So much do the Passions and Interest of Men masser their Reason.

THIS may ferve to warn you againft implicit Dependance upon the Words and Declarations of any Man, let him be ever fo able, ever fo much your Darling. Love your Friends and Favourites, but be not over-hafty always to follow them. Confult your own Reafon coolly first; examine your own own Interest and Necessities. Their Passions and Partialities may millead them, and they may millead you. Do by them as I defire you to do by me, and by this Appeal; weigh every Reason which either they or I offer, and approve it or reject it, just as it corresponds, or does not correspond with Truth and your Interest, and with the general Interest.

THIS Scheme which I have endeavoured to defend, appears exceeding reafonable to me, and of exceeding Benefit to you; but do not take my Word, where my Reafons fatisfy not, neither take the Word of fuch as decry it, only becaufe they decry it. Examine, whether when a Shilling in the Pound per Annum is taken off your Eftates, without a Farthing laid upon you or any Man, you are not a Shilling in the Pound the richer, or will not be a Shilling in the Pound the poorer, if it be not taken off?

THIS is the fhort Iffue, and a very clear one: Stick to it, nor fuffer your felves to be puzzled with dark and artful Calculations and Rants of Oratory. I too could apply to your Paffions, and perhaps warm them; but I want no fuch Help. I therefore use no glaring Colours nor Vehemence, nor Expressions fraught with Energy and Terror. I am from my Soul convinced by the Reasons which I lay before you, and hope they will ferve for your Conviction, if they be found. If they be not, you will at least excuse me for my fincere and affectionate Meaning.

It cannot reafonably offend you to vindicate the Measures of the Ministry, when your Good appears manifest in such Measures. Nor are you to judge of Ministers, by what their Enemies (when they have any such) say of them. As there is often ten Caufe for oppofing Ministers, so they ate often opposed without Caufe, or for a wrong Caufe. If they do sometimes wrong Things, their Enemies do sometimes spightful Things. If there be Ambition on the one Side, there may be Emulation or Revenge on the other; and the Defire of Power may animate Men, as well as the Posfession of Power. As 'tis to be hoped we have amongst us many publick Spirits and Patriots, it is not impossible but there may be also some false Patriots, the Patriots of a Party, a Character as low and contemptible, as the other is noble and venetable.

EVEN the Evil of Corruption, the Subject of fo many fine Harangues, and of many very bad ones, is too common and far fpread to be confined to Courts and Ministers, and to their Arts only. Corruption often arifes from Party and from Opposition to Power, as well as from Power it felf. Even Treats and Hospitality may corrupt, as well as Money and Places; nay the want of a Place, may corrupt a Man, as much as having a Place may. Popularity it felf, as plaufible and well founding as it is, has proved the Root and Means of much Corruption. Whoever or whatever deceives the People, or enflames them without just Caufe and Provocation, corrupts them. And thus the People have been sometimes so corrupted, as to hate the best Ministers, and the best Actions of Ministers.

OF fuch Ingratitude and ill Ufage for his higheft Merit and Services, Cicero justly and warmly complains, Pro Maximis meis in Remp. meritis supplicia miserrima & crudelissima tulissem. The Tribunes Tribunes of the People corrupted the Romans as effectually by feditious Laws and Harangues, by flattering their Paffions, and incenfing them against the Nobility, as afterwards Cafar did by Money. And as this very Scheme is intended as a Cure for Corruption, publick and pernicious Corruption, they who oppose it for unjust Ends, either of Faction or of Gain, are corrupt, and protect Corruption; and all Arts used to incense the People right or wrong against it, are corrupt Arts, and fuch as use them are the Authors of Corruption.

As to the Writings against it, such as I have feen of them, are most of them declamatory and evafive, many of them coarse, passionate, scurrilous, and all of them in my Opinion, inconclusive, and little or nothing to the present Point. Their Reasoning and Quotations about Impositions in general, are foreign and idle. Here is no Imposition at all intended, though no Community can subfift without some. That several of the Writings against the Excise, are ingenious Performances, I readily own. But there are many others altogether impotent, abfurd and brutal. Scolding and foul Names on any Side or Account cannot furely have any Weight with you. These are Weapons eafily found in any Caufe, and generally abound in a bad Cause. A good one wants not, and therefore rejects all fuch frail and miferable Helps. Some of these Authors are particularly severe upon ministerial Writers, and the coarfe Titles of wretched Scribler, Creature of Power, venal Wretch, mercenary Crew, abandoned Hireling, wicked profligate Writer, &c. are thrown about with great Freedom and Fury, and applied without Distinction, often at Random. FOR

For my felf I would much rather be to abufed, than capable of fuch Abufe; neither have I fuffered nor can I fuffer by it, fince it cannot poffibly extend to me, as I know not what it is to be a lifted Writer. Let me only fay in Behalf of fome others (for God forbid that I fhould concern my felf with, much more defend all or most of, any Side) that this Practice is as unfair as 'tis gross. He who only vindicates what he in his Heart approves, cannot with any Propriety or Candour be called a Hireling; and 'tis full as just to defend the Administration, where it acts justly, as to censure it where it acts unjustly.

THIS I think no reafonable Man will deny; and where there are very honourable Perfons, of the first Character, Dignity and Fortune, speaking for, and concurring with the Administration in Parliament, why should it be base or mercenary to concur with it, and write or speak for it out of Parliament; and why is such a Difference made for doing the same Thing? Even such as write for Hire, are not more blameable than such as plead for Hire, or, if you please, for Fees. And why should it be more fcandalous to take Money from a Minister than from a Bookseller?

Perhaps there are Wretches, Ignorants, and Profligates that write for a Ministry, and how can a Minister help it? Though he want not them, they want him. It would however be unjust to fay, that fuch low and officious Scriblers are confined to Ministers. Are there not other Wretches, other Profligates, other Ignorants, always ready to draw their dirty Quills for the Enemics of the Ministry too? And both Sorts often do so without being employed D or asked by either. But though you employ them not, and even deteft them whilft they are fo employed, 'tis not fo eafy to avoid giving them Money. As there are worthy Men who fpeak on both Sides, why may not we fuppofe that worthy Men may write on both Sides? The Majority of Writers on either Side, are certainly very contemptible Creatures.

You must not therefore infer from hard Names and Reproach, that the Ministry, are without Gentlemen of Parts and Honour to write for them, no more than they want others to speak for them. Some such they have to my Knowledge, without Fee or Reward, and such as would scorn the Offer of any. Upon those who treat such Gentlemen as Slaves to a Ministry, it were easy and equally just to return the Charge of Slavery to a Party, as severe a Slavery as a Man can go through in a free Country, a Slavery which frequently obliges Men to approve what they heartily condemn, and to condemn what they heartily approve : Perhaps there are not a few such upon the prefent Occasion.

SURE I am that, upon this Occafion, there feems much more Ground for fpeaking, or if you will Writing in Behalf of the Ministry, than there is for doing it against them. To remove or relieve publick Burdens only by rectifying publick Earrors, and curing publick Frauds, is in any Man or Minister a glorious Defign; and the Minister who neglects it, when he can effect it, is guilty of a notable Breach of Trust. Is is therefore an enormous Hardship upon Ministers, and great Injustice, to make it a Crime in them to do what would be an unpardonable Crime in them to omit.

AND

HAD the Ministry been first changed, and their Succeffors had accomplished this great Project, may we not presume, that it would have been the Subjet of much just Boasting and Exultation, and of much just Reproach upon their Predecessfors for neglecting it? You would then probably have been told, that the latter only studied to burden you, and that it was referved for their Successors to have the Glory of relieving you. As it is too usual in this World not fo much to regard what is done, as who does it, and not to judge of Men by their Actions, but of the Actions by the Men, it would be nothing wonderful (though I hope it is not true) that some should oppose' and decry this new Scheme only through Fear of its adding to the Strength and Security of the Administration, by adding to their Credit, and publick Efteem. They may therefore study to defeat it; not because it is for your Advantage, but because it is for the Glory of the Administration. You may recollect whether fuch a Thing has never happened before; and if it has, whether it may not poffibly happen again, and how? Has the Gratification of private Paffion never been perferred to Publick Good? Or is this often done by Ministers only, and never by the Enemies of a Ministry? And has it never been a maxim with angry Men, and their Practice, to prevent by all Means those whom they strove to pull down, from gaining Credit and Security, by doing worthy and popular Things?

THE Sum of the whole is this; here is an apparent Benefit intended for you, even the relieving of your Estates and adding to them, without taxing your Fellow Subjects. Are not the Authors of fuch fuch a noble Benefit your Friends, and Friends to their Country; and are fuch as oppose this noble Benefit to the Publick, publick spirited Men, or Friends to the Publick in this Instance?

I MIGHT have added and enlarged upon feveral collateral Advantages arising from this Scheme, that it will greatly advance Trade and encourage Traders, by abolishing or reducing the Customs, fince no great Sums are to be presently paid upon Importation, nor great Securities demanded, to the Increase of Bankrupts, and the utter Ruin of Families; That it will revive and encourage the poor destreffed and despairing Planter, now devoured by Agents and expensive Commissions, by putting an End to fuch heavy Commissions and Agencies: That it will also put an End to much Perjury, Corruption, and Difhonesty, both in Merchants and Customhouse Officers, who are both under great Temptations that way, and I fear do not always refift fuch Temptations : That it will destroy, at least lessen, the vile Trade of Smuglers, and confequently fave the publick Revenue: That it will in a good Measure secure Wine from the abominable Mixtures and Brewings to long, and I doubt to perniciously practifed, with many other Advantages, which for Want of Time I leave to others to fpecify and explain,

I CONCLUDE therefore with observing, that the Clamour from the Shopkeepers and Inholders in Country Towns against Excising Tobacco and Wine, and against Excisemens coming into their Houses, is exceeding absurd, and even ridiculous, fince all these Shopkeepers, or most of them, already fell Tea and Coffee, and all those Innholders fell Beer and and Ale, and confequently are both already daily vifited by the Officers of Excife. But in justice to these Clamourers I must own, that I doubt whether their Clamour proceeded originally from themselves, and from their own Judgment and Resentments.

I am,

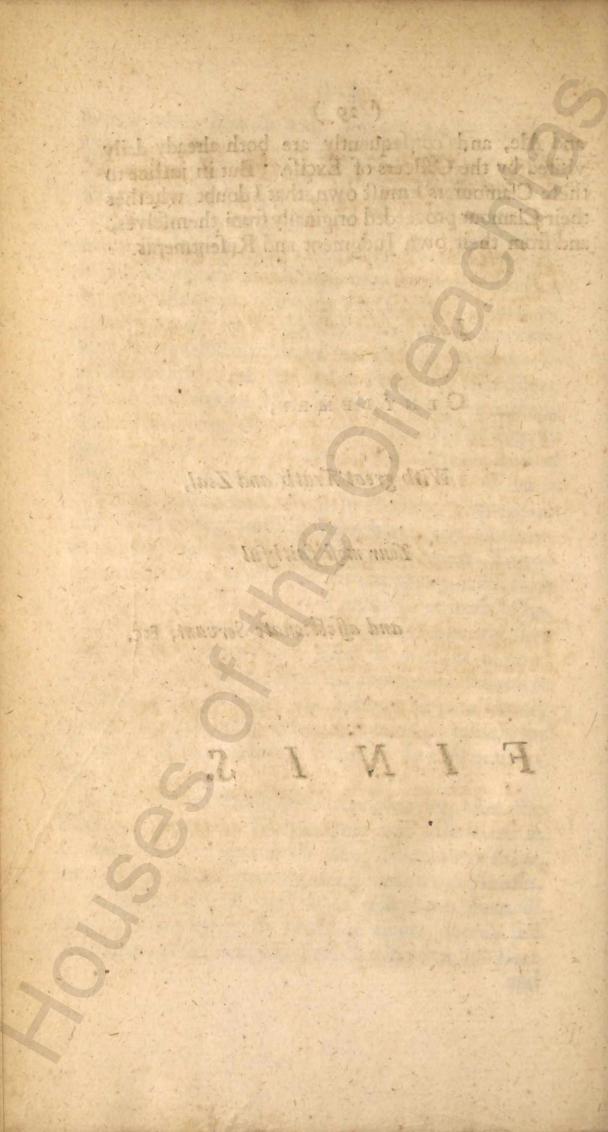

GENTL'EMEN,

With great Truth and Zeal,

Your most faithful and affestionate Servant, &c.
