DEDICATION.

I liftened with filent Indignation, and determined to contribute my Mite towards giving fuch unattentive, uninformed Youths, a more adequate Idea of this Kingdom, under its ancient and under its prefent happy Eftablifhment.

The common Accidents of Time muft lead them by better Authority to clearer Knowledge: In the mean while, I profefs my Obligations to them, as they have given me this Opportunity of declaring my $\mathrm{Re}-$ gard to my Country in general, and the particular Attachments that ever bind me, in the ftricteft Senfe of Fidelity and Efteem, to a Friend fo worthy as You have been to,

 An E S S A Y on the AntientIreland in View, a Kingdom whereof he is, without Vanity, proud of being a Nativè.

As the Story of Savages and Barbarians can contain nothing inftructive, or entertaining, the Antemilefian Inhabitants of this Land having been moftly fuch, and all furviving Accounts of them almoft totally overcaft with Fable, we are therefore, in treating of the antient Scotia, or modern Ireland, to refer principally to three diftinguifhed Æras, whereof the firft is, its being peopled by an Iberian or Spanifb Colony : The fecond, truly glorious, the Arrival of St. Patrick, in his moft falutary Miffion: The third and laft, its Ceffion to Henry the Second, King of England, (the firft of the Royal Race of Plantagenet) partly from a pretended Title of Adrian the Fourth, Pope of Rome; partly from the reftlefs and infatiable Defires of Henry; more from the manifold Infirmities of the then reigning Irijb Chiefs-but above all, from the peculiarly adverfe Fate of Roderick, the laft of our

Kings.

The affiduous, exact, and candid Author of the * Difertations, lately publihed, on the Origin, Government, Letters, Sciences, Religion, Manners and Cuftoms of the antient Inhabitants of this Country, hath put all thofe Matters in fo clear and happy, and, at the fame Time, in fo ftrong a Light, by the Powers of various foreign Teftimonies, of undeniable Authenticity, coincident with our own, that fcarce any Thing new can be offered on the fame Subject.

It may, however, in general be obferved, that Milefius, a Spani/b Prince, fo far back as the Reign of Solomon (inftigated by Neceffity, or induced by Ambition) with a confiderable derable Number of Affociates and Followers, landed from the Weftern Parts of Spain, on the Southern Coafts of this Ifland, where it is probable they met little, or but faint Oppofition, from wild and undifciplined Inhabitants.

* Dublin, 1753, M. Reilly, Editor.

Thofe People, from their early Knowledge of the Phenician Arts and Letters, imported fuch Rudiments of Government and Learning, as thofe primitive Times admitted; a Truth vifible from the Similarity or rather Identity of the Pbanician and Scotic Alphabet.

This antient Colony quietly fettled here, remote from the Storms and Revolutions of the greater World, and fecured by Situation from its hoftile Incurfions, there is no Doubt but the Cultivation of Religion, Philofophy, Politicks, Poetry, and Mufick, became the chief Objects of popular Study and Application: The Spirit of Ambition in fucceeding Ages, with its unhappy concomitant Train of Sedition, Faction, and Violence, the foreign Invafions, and often the inteftine Oppreffions and Calamities, to which our neighbouring Nations were fubject, calling forth the protective or conciliating Aids of thofe ancient Heroes, made them great Mafters alfo in the Art military.

The Pentarchy originally formed by thofe Iberian or Celtic Spaniards, with a popular Right of Election, was certainly a Kind of Government extremely confiftent with the Effence and Genius of true Liberty, and a Syftem derived from the Patriarchs themfelves. For when the various Neceffities of Society required a Subordination, together with fome ftated Maxims to go by, to avoid the confufed and promifcuous Intercourfe in a State of Nature; then did the People elect the moft Virtuous and Wife, to lead and conduct them in Times of War and Trousble; to govern, inform, and protect them; in milder and more aufpicious Seafons. Then was the Motto of the Crown, or of the chief Enfign of Pre-eminence, Digmiori detur, and fo continued till the Degeneracy of Time, and the baneful Growth of Avarice and Pride, with the feverifh Luft of Power, perverted it to-Rapiat Fortior!

Such, thro' a long Succeffion of Ages, was the Condition, and fuch at length the Fate of this Kingdom, deftroyed after a longer Continuance than any other can boaft, by the Abufe of its own Powers; a fure Argument that all created Beings, all fublunary Inflitutions, however wifely compofed, in the very Effence of their Creation, and in the very Rudiments of their Formation, comprehend, at the fame Time, the Seeds of Diffolution: Yet it is not more remarkable than true, that in the mott boifterous Periods of this Kingdom's antient Eftablifhment, the Arts and Sciences, with the fundamental Principles of Conftitution, were preferved and cherifhed with inviolable Affiduity, The Priefts, Philofophers, Advocates, Annalifts, Poets and Muficians, were obliged to preferve Religion, political Wifdom, Law, Hiftory, E $\mathrm{E}^{\circ}$. hereditarily in their refpective Tribes, and to educate in thefe different Branches the Chiefs and Nobles of the Land, for which they were gracioufly maintained in fecure and fplendid Tranquillity: Thofe Sages attended the National Conventions, where all publick Acts were religioully recorded, and all Abufes of Power and Government retrenched or reformed; nor were they permitted, except in Cafe of extraordinary Neceffity, or uncommon Merit, to deviate from their their proper and primitive Spheres of Action: Since, where an harmonious Subordination of Rank and Order hath not been duly preferved, even in free Eftates, Liberty itfelf (wifely attempered, the greateft of all focial Bleffings) hath often, from Abufe and Neglect, fickened into Licentioufnefs, the immediate lewd Mother bf Anarchy! In the vifible Creation, the direct Refult of infinite Wifdom, the leffer Planets do not interfere with, much lefs hock or oppofe the Motions and Revolutions of the greater: they conitantly keep the Diftances firft prefcribed them, and all move regularly to theit refpective Ends. The moft verdant and fragrant Meadows may, from the too frequent Ir ruption of muddy Waters, degenerate into noxious Marfhes, if fome Care was not taken to divert thofe impure Gufhings into their proper Channels. Hence it may be inferred, that laying open the moft honoraty, as well as important and ufeful Profeffions of Society, to the Intrufion, or rather pyratical Invafions, of the Scum and Dregs of the People, cannot, however varnifhed over with the fictitious Colourings of pretended Liberty, confift with true Political Wifdom.

Thofe ancient Sopbi and Literati enjoyed their Places with the greater Security, that they were uninvadable by the inferior Claffes of Mankind; with the greater Content and Chearfulnefs, that much Efteem and Emolument were connected with them : The Prieft and Advocate informed and directed the Confcience and Conduct; the Hiftorian and Annalift recorded the Inftitutions; the Poet and Mufician celebrated and fung the Exploits of their Kings and Leaters: No Wonder then this Kingdom fhould have been revered at Home, and admired Abroad; when Religion formed, Erudition nurtured, Philofophy ftrengthened, Hiftory preferved, Rhetorick adorned, Mulick foftened, and Poefy refined, the National Wifdom and Accomplifhments; to all which was added, a thorough Knowledge of Tactics, and great Skill and Agility in all the athletick Arts, and bodily Exercifes.

In the Verfions of fome original Codes exported by our Countryman, the learned and pious St. Fiechry, ftill extant in the Navarre Library at Paris, the Conftitutional Wifdom of Ireland appears in a clear and happy Light: Perfons, Things, Actions, and Expreffions, were cautioufly attended to, by the Laws; PerSons, in their Minority, Youth, and Manhood ${ }_{2}$ according to their different Ranks in the State, fo as by Care, Education, and Difcipline, to render them, fome fubfervient, others ufeful, fome beneficial, and others ornamental thereunto. Things, fo carefully, as to prevent, by prohibatory Laws, Waftes of whatfoever Kind, and to afcertain to each Individual, as well as Society, their proper and diftinet Rights. Actions, by directing thofe in general, and particular, to the Honour of the Deity and Welfare of the Community: Expreflion, by the penal Interdiction of prophane Curfing and Swearing, Obfcenity, Scurrility, Calumny, and Detraction, yet with a full Indulgence of proper Sa . tire againft fuch as merited popular Reprehenfion, or Contempt ; the Satirift's Pen in thofe Days being as much dreaded, or rather more fo, than the Magiftrate's Rod, and confequently as diligently avoided by a Demeanour abfolutely irreproachable.

It appeareth that, under the antient Government of Ireland, the Education of the landed Gentry, when Luxury, with its wafteful Catalogue of Vices, had not rendered Property fo mutable and wavering as in modern Ages, was provided for; whether by the immediate Care of Parents, or effential Attention of Guardians, by the Laws of the Land; in order that Gentlemen fhould, to the Antiquity of Birth and Poffeffion, add the important Dignity of Learning, and focial Refinement of Arts: Since a Man at the Head of an original Eftate, who fhould want the neceffary Cultivation of Letters, was confidered only as a Peafant in Difguife, and not more refpected than a Hewer of Wood, or Drawer of Water.

In thefe Writings of St. Fiechry, the leginlative Wifdom of Olam-Fodla; the philofophi-cally-religious Capacity of Cormac-O 2uin, who, from the pure Light of Nature, in a great Meafure defeated the abfurd Polytbeifm of the Druids; the confummate Integrity and Impartiality of Federach the Juft, and Moran his Chief Juftice; the Magnanimity of Con-Ked-Catbagh ; the Conquefts of Kineth Mac Alpin; the long, glorious, and peaceful Reign of Conary the Great, coceval with the Birth of our Bleffed Lord and Saviour Fefus Cbrift, (undoubtedly the happielt, brighteft, and moft blifsful Period the World ever faw;) are all difplayed in a copious mafterly Style, yet with ftrict chronological Exactnefs.

This learned St. Fiecbry was Founder of the Univerfity in Paris, in the Beginning of the 8th Century. The better to enable him to carry on that noble Work, he obtained of Cbarles the Great a Tax on all Wheel-Carriages, within the Barriers of that City: Whence, a HackneyCoach is at this Day technically term'd Fiacre.

Cbarles the Great, in order to repair the crue and truly lamentable literary Dilapidations of the ferocious North-men, invited Numbers of the learned and pious lribh to the Continent, where he eftablifhed and entertained them with Dignity, Tendernefs, and Refpect. In a curious Manufcript of Nicholaus Gurtlerus, (now in the French King's Parifan Library) Author of the Origines Mundi, where he alludes to thefe Times, you find the following favourable, but true Account of Ireland.-Temporibus illis, barbaris Normannorum Cobortibus undequaque irrumpentibus, Religio, Fides, Pbilofophia, Virtus, Hofpitalitas, Fortitudo, Caftifas, necnon et Amaniores omnium generum Artes, Hibernia Solummodo natali, veluti Solo, viguerunt; little Wonder that Ireland fhould have been efteemed the Ierne, or facred Ine of the Greeks, the Infule SanEtorum, or Illand of Saints of the Romans. - Would to Heaven our Countrymen had, upon all confiderable Occafions, recollected thofe deferved Encomiums, thereby to approve them worthy their applauded Origin, and native Soil!

We now proceed to confider Ireland in her happieft and brighteft View, after the Admiffion and Propagation of Chriftianity. It is certain there were many Chrittians in Ireland, before the Arrival of Palladius in $43^{1}$, or of St. Pq. irick the Year following: St. Kieran, St. Ailbe, St. Declan, and St. Ibar, whom Us/ber calls the Precurfors, or Forerunners of St. Patrick, are pregnant Proofs of this; they were of the Birth of Ireland, from whence they travelled to Rome, in Search of Education and Learning, where they they lived fome $¥$ eafs, were ordained, and returned Home about the Year 407.

It feems that thofe early Preachers confined their Labours to particular Places, in which they had confiderable Succefs, but fell very fhort of converting the Body of the Nation: However, they fowed the Seed which St. Ratrick came after to water: And it is certain that St. Patrick was fo well fatisfied with the Rrogrefs they made, in their particular Diftricts in Munter, that this was the laft Province in Irelond he thought proper to vifit. That there were many Chriftians in Ireland, at this Period, feems to be confirmed by Profper, who, in giving an Account of the Miffion of Palladius, fays, that he was ordained by Pope Celefin, and fent the firft Bifhop to the Scots believing in Chrifts. This Paffage can mean nothing elfe, but that Palladius, born in Britain, was fent to the Scots, [i. e, the Lri/h] who had already formed Churches under Kieram, Ailbe, Declan and Ibar; and for the Bifhop of St. Alaph expounds it, This then was the next Attempt that was made for the Converfion of the Irifb: Palladius engaged in a more ample and extenfive Defign than his Predeceffors, yet he failed in the Execution of it, ftay'd but a fort Time in Ireland, and did little worth remembring; he converted, however, a few, and is faid to have founded three Churches ; but he had neither Courage to withftand the Fiercenels of the heathen Irifh, nor Abilities, for Want of the Language, proper for the Work.

Natbi, the Son of Gancons an Iribs Prince, oppored his preaching; upon which Palladius left the Kingdom, and died in the Land of the Pifts, on the $15^{\text {th }}$ of December, 43 t. This gloglorious Work was referved for St. Patrick, to whofe holy Life, divine Miffion, and extraordinary Succefs, I refer the Reader. This great Apottle of the Iribs founded and built the Ca thedral Church of Ardmagh, about the Year 444, or 45 , which, from that early Period to this, hath continued the Metropolitan Church of all Ireland. So that 1194 Years paffed away from the Founding of the City of Rome, to that of Ardmagh.

The various and moft fignal Bleffings derived to this Nation, from the fautary Miffion of this illuftrious Saint, require, in Gratitude, our giving the Reader yet a further Account of the Author of fuch Happinefs and Glory to Ireland.

He was born in the extreme Bounds of Bri tain, (in that Part thereof which is. now comprehended within the Limits of the modern Scot and) at a Village called Banaven, in the Territory of Tabernia, (as he himelf faith in his Confeffion) in Vico Banaven Tabernie, $& x$. He tells us that he was born of a good Family. Ingennuus fui Jecundum Carnom. His Father was Calpburnius, a Deacon, who was the Son of Potitus, a Prieft; from whence may be clearly inferred that the Clergy were not reftrained from Matrimony in that Age. He was juft advanced into his fixteenth Year, when he was taken Captive, the Manner of which is thus related by St. Evin and others: His Father, Mother, Brother, and five Sifters, undertook a Voyage to Aremorick Gaul, (now called Bafs Bretagne) to vifit the Relations of his Mother Coucbefa. It happened about this Time, that the feven Sons of Fallmude, a Britijb Prince, were banifhed, and took to the Sea; that, making an Inroad into Aremorick Goull, they took Pa trick yrick and his Sifter, Lupita, (fome fay Tigrida alfo) Prifoners. They brought their Captives to the North of Ireland, and fold Patrick to Milcho Mac Huanan, a Prince of Dalaradia: Others tell the Story in a different Manner, and with a ftronger Degree of Probability. That the Romans having deferted Britain, to preferve their own Country from the barbarous Incurfions of the Nortbern Hive, the Iriß made frequent Conquefts, in North Britain efpecially, whence returning vietorious, in one of thofe Expeditions among others brought Patrick Captive. But in this they all agree, and he himfelf confirms it, that he continued Prifoner in Ireland fix Years; he was fold to Milcbo and his three Brothers, which gave Occafion of his changing his Name into Catbraigb, or rather Ceatbir-Tigh, becaufe he ferved four Mafters; Ceatbir fignifying four, and Tigb a Houfe or Family. Milcho obferving the Care and Diligence of his new Servant, bought out the Shares of his Brothers, and made him his own Property. He fent him to feed his Hogs on Sliev-Mis. And St. Patrick himfelf tells us his Behaviour in this Office.
" My conftant Bufinefs was to feed the Hogs. I was frequent in Prayer; the Love and Fear of God more and more inflamed my Heart; my Faith was enlarged, and my Spirit augmented, fo that I faid an hundred Prayers by Day, and almoft as many by Night. 1 arofe before Day to my Prayers, in the Snow, in the Froft, and in the Rain, and yet I received no Damage; nor was I affected with Slothfulnefs ; for then the Spirit of God was warm within me." It was here he perfected himfelf in the Irijh Language, the wonderful Providence of God vifibly appearing in this Inftance of his Captivity, that he fhould have the Opportunity in his tender Years of becoming well acquainted with the Language, Manners; and Difpofitions of that People, to whom he was intended as a future Apoftle. He continued fix whole Years in Servitude, and in the feventh was releafed. There feems to have been a Law in Ireland for this Purpofe, agreeable to the Inftitution of Mofes, that a Servant Chould be releafed the feventh Year.

Having parted from his Mafter, after a great Variety of Diftreffes, he at length arrived to his Parents, who received him with extraordinary Joy; with thefe he remained two Years, and probably would much longet, had he not by a Vifion been quickened to a more active and glosious Life. In this he thought he faw a Man coming to him from Ireland, whofe Name was Victoricus, with a great Number of Letters; that he gave him one of them to read, in the Beginning of which were contained thefe Words, Vox-Hiberionacum, the Voice of the Irijb: While he was reading this Letter, he thought the fame Moment, that he heard the Voice of the Inhabitants who lived near the Wood of Foclut, in the Barony of $T_{y r}$-Arvley, and County of Mayo, hard by the Weftern Sea, crying to him with an audible and diftinct Voice, "We intreat thee, holy Youth, to come and walk among us." He was greatly amazed at this Vifion, and awoke; it animated him, however, to his future Studies and heavenly Progrefs; fo far even, that he tells us himfelf, he thanked God, that after many Years he had dealt with the Irijb, according to their crying out.

Thefe early Scenes of this great Saint's Life, thould, among many others, ferve as Lefions of Charity, Charity, Confideration, and Humility, to the Rich, the Great, the Proud, and the Wanton; who may recollect that, altho' he was well born, he was neverthelefs, in the moft vigorous Seafon of Life, a Slave and a Swine-Herd: Happy, though wretched Servitude! In which, his leifure Hours, mofly employed in Chriftian Confidence and Prayer, made him fo fignally the Favourite of Heaven, that from thofe cloudy Dawnings, he in Procefs of Time became a learned Doctor, a fanctified Miffioner, a venerable Prelate, an eminent Primate, a national A poftle, and the bright Inftructor of Kings! Such were the fruitful Rewards of uninterrupted unfhaken Devotion, Piety, and Zeal! From this Time he formed the fteady Refolution of converting the Irifs; and, the better to accomplifh the heavenly Taik, he undertook a laborious Journey to foreign Countries, to enrich his Mind with Learning and Experience.

He continued abroad thirty-five Years, purfuing his Studies under the Direction principally of his Mother's Uncle, St. Martin, Bifhop of Tours, who had ordained him Deacon; and after his Death, partly with St. German, Bifhop of Auxerre, (who ordained him a Prieft, and called his Name Magonius, which was the third Name he was known by,) partly among a Colony of Hermits and Monks, in fome Inlands of the Tufcan Sea; and he employed a good Part of the Time in the City of Rome, among the Canons Regular of the Lateran Church: At length, having his Soul thoroughly tempered with religious Virtue, enlightened with the true Evangelical Faith, and his Underftanding enlarged by the moft profitable and editying Studies, he arrived in Ireland about the 6oth

Year of his Age; and in the Year of our Lord $43^{2}$, landed in the County of Wicklow, where he began his Miniftry, by the Converfion of Sinel, a great Man in that Country, the Grandfon of Fincbad, who ought to be remembered, as he was the firlt Fruits of St. Patrick's Miffion in Ireland; he was the 8th in lineal Defcent from Cormac, King of Leinfer, and came afterwards to be enumerated among the Saints of Ireland.

From this Country he failed to an Ifland on the Coaft of the County of Dublin, called after him Inis Pbodring, and by the Engli/b, Holm Patrick at this Day, where he and his faithful Companions refted after their Fatigues. From Inis Pbadring, he failed Northward to that Part of Ulfer called Ulidia, and put in at Inbberflaying Bay. When he and his Fellow Labourers landed, Dicbus the Son of Tricbem, Lord of the County, being informed that they were Pirates, came out with armed Men in order to kill them: But being ftruck with the venerable Appearance of St. Patrick, he gave him Audience, and liftened attentively to the Word of Life preached by him; he changed his wicked Purpofe, believed, and was baptized, and brought over all his Family to the Faith: It is further obferved of him, that he was the firft Perfon in Ulfer, who embraced Chriftianity. He dedicated the Land whereon his Converfion was wrought to the Service of God, where a Church was erected, changed after to an eminent Monaftery. He travelled hence by Land to Clunebois in Dalaradia, to endeavour the Converfion of his old Mafter Milcho, whofe Service he had left thirty-eight Years before; but this obitinate Prince, hearing of the great Succefs of St. Pamick's preaching, and afhamed to be perfuaded in his old Age, to forfake the Religion of his A'nceffors, (by one efpecially who had been his Servant, in a moft inferior Station,) made a funeral Pile of his Houfe and Goods, and by the Infligation of the Enemy of Mankind, burned humfelf therein : Thus ended Milcbo Mc. Huanan.

Hence St. Patrick returned to Inis, the Habitation of Dichu, and in his Journey converted great Numbers to the true Faith of Cbrijf. In fome time, he took his Leave of Dicbu, and bent his courfe Southward by Sea, keeping the Coaft on his Right-hand, and arrived at Port Colddi, where he landed, and committed the Care of his Veffel to his Nephew Luman, defiring him to wait for him there forty Days, while he and his Difciples were travelling in the inner Parts of the Country to preach the Gofpel. His Intention in this Journey was, to celebrate the Feftival of Eafer in the Plains of Bregia, and to be in the Neighbourhood of the Great Triennial Convention at Tarab, which at this Seafon was held by King Leogair, and all his Tributary Princes, Nobles, Druids, Annalifts, and Fileas. Sc. Patrick wifely forefeeing that whatever Impreffions he fhould make on this augult Affembly muft have an Influence on the whole Kingdom, and therefore, being fupported with invincible Chriftian Fortitude, refolved not to be abfent from a Place where his Prefence was fo conducive to the Ends of his Holy Minifry.

Never did the Spirit of popular Freedom exert itfelf more powerfully or harmoniounty, than in thofe truly parliamentary Triennial Conventions of Freland, where the fupreme Monarch, the Provincial Kings, the feudatory Lord̃s, the Nobles, landed Men, Druids, &c. by the unbiaffed Suffrages of the People, convened for the Peace, good Government and Security of each particular Province, as well as thofe of the whole Kingdom. Many Centuries had this wife Conflitution fubfifted here, before our Neighbours, even of South Britain, knew any thing relative to Houfes, or Raiment; it being notorious that fo late as the Arrival of Gulius Cofar among them, they painted their Bodies, to render them terrible, and lived in the open Fields. It is really fomewhat furprzing that People fo near in Situtation, fhould differ fo effentially in Difpofition, as the Inhabitants of thofe Inlands have in all Ages; Hofpitality having been the diftinguifhing Attribute of the Iribs, and it's oppofite Defect, that of the Britons; the Account given of them by Horace 1700 and odd Years ago, Vifam Britannas Hoppitibus feros, being as literally applicable to them at this Day, where the Force of Education doth not operate to mitigate their natural Ferocity.

But to return: St. Patrick in his Way to $\mathcal{T} a$ rah, took up his Lodgings at the Houfe of the hofpitable Sefgnen in Meath, who kindly received and welcomed him. St. Patrick preach'd Chrift and his Gofpel to him; he believed, and was baptized with his whole Family.

From the Houfe of Sefgnen, he moved Weftward, and arrived on Eafter Eve at Fierta-fir-feic, on the Northern Banks of the River Boyne, where he refted, refolving there to prepare for the next Day's Solemnity. It was penal for any Perfon at the Time of the Celebration of this folemn Convention at Tarab, to kindle a Fire in the Province, before the King's Bonfire firft appeared. I am of Opinion this was a religious Ceremony, as the chief Deity of the antient Inhaand Modern State of I R E LA N D. 2 I bitants, in exterior Worfhip efpecially, was Bel, or Belus; whence $A$ pollo or $A p$-baul, the Son of the Sun, whom they emblematically worhipped, by thofe fiery Offerings; whence the firt Day of May, peculiarly dedicated to this Bel, is even now in lrihb, called Lba-Bel-Thinib, and probably from the fame Source may be derived the Cuftom of lighting up Bonfires, and Sops, on the Eve of the 24th Day of Fune. St. Patrick however, either not knowing or not minding this Ceremony, lighted up a Fire before his Booth, which altho' eight Miles diftant from Tarah, was very vifible. It was feen with Aftonifhment from Court, and the Druids informed the King, that if he did not immediately extinguifh the Fire, he who kindled it, and his Succeffors, fhould for ever hold the Principality of Ireland; which hath hitherto turned out a true Prediction of thofe Heathen Priefts, in a Primatial and Spiritual Principality.

The King difpatched Meffengers to bring Patrick before him, and gave his pofitive Orders, that nobody fhould prefume to rife out of his Seat, or pay him the leaft Honour: But Ere, the Son of Dego, ventured to difobey this Command ; he arofe, and offered the Holy Father his Seat. St. Patrick preached to him and converted him. He became a Perfon of eminent Sanctity, and after fome Time was confecrated by St. Patrick, Bifhop of Slain.

The Day following, when St. Patrick and two of his Difciples appeared unexpectedly at Court, and preached to the King and his Nobles, Dubtach, the King's Poet Laureat, payed Honour and Refpect to the Saint, and was converted by his Preaching. Fiech, a young Poet, who was under the Tuition of Dubtach, was alfo converted, verted, and afterwards made Bifhop of Sletty, and is faid to have been the Author of a celebrated Poem, compofed in Praife of St. Patrick. Anfelm, Arch-Bifhop of Canterbury, relates the Converfion of Tingar, the Son of Clito, (one of the Nobles in this Affembly,) in the fame Manner. The Queen alfo, and many others of the Court, became Chriftians; and altho' the King held out for a long Time with great Obftinacy, yet at laft he fubmitted to be baptized. St. $P a$ trick is faid here to have wrought many Miracles: There could not truly, even according to the Purpofes of human Wifdom, have happened a more folemn or weighty Occafion, for God Almighty's fupporting this Holy Preacher by Miracles, than when the collective Body of the whole Nation was affembled together; from whofe Report and Conviction, the Influences of his bleffed Works and Doctrine muft of Courfe fpread through the whole Kingdom.

His Conduct and Proceedings here, with a particular Detail of the Miracles wrought by him, may be had at large in the Hiftory of his Life, publifhed by Jobn Colgan.

From Tarab, the Saint proceeded next to Talten, not far from thence, at the Seafon of the Royal Diverfions: Here he preached to Cairbre, and Conall, the two Brothers of King Leogin; the former received him with great Indignity, and perverfely fhut his Ears againft his Doctrine; but Conall believed, and was baptized, and gave St. Patrick a Place to build a Church on.

This Conall was Great-Grand-Father to Co-lumb-Kill. He fpent the Remainder of this Year in Meath and Louth, and the Diftricts adjoining, preaching, and converting great Numbers of People. The Taltenian Sports above-mentioned tioned, have been much celebrated by the Iri/h Hiftorians, and Antiquaries. They were a kind of warlike Exercifes, fomewhat refembling the Olympick Games, confifting of Racing, Tilts, Tournaments, Wreftling, Leaping, Vaulting, and all other manly and martial Exercifes, which gave Rife to the many hyperbolical Tales, formerly related of thofe Taltenian Sports. They were exhibited every Year at Talten, a Mountain in Meath, for fifteen Days before, and fifteen Days after the Firt of Auguf. Their firft Inftitution is afcribed to Lugbaid-lam-fadba, the twelfth King of Ireland, who began his Reign A. M. ${ }^{2} 764$ (a fufficient Proof of Ireland's Antiquity as a Kingdom). They were ordained by Lugbaid, in Gratitude to the Memory of Tailte, the Daughter of Magh-More, (a Prince of fome Part of Spain) who having been married to Eorbaid, King of Ireland, took the fame Lugbaid under her Protection, and had the Care of his Education in his Minority. From this Princefs both the Sports, and the Place where they were celebrated, took their Names: From Lugbaid, the Firft of Auguft was called Lugnafa, or the Memory of Lughaid, Nafa fignifying Memory, in the Iri/b Language.

In the Year of the World $2 \ni 00$, Gideon then reigning fourth Judge of the Hebrews, appear'd many Heroes, as Hercules, Orpbeus, Cafor, Potlux, the Argonauts, Fafon, Leomedon, Theferts, Dedalus, \&rc. War againft thofe Heroines, and defeated them, more to the Glory of the Vanquifhed than their own, thofe Matrons having defended themfelves with furprizing Refolution. They cut off the Guards fet over them, and efcaped the Severity and Pride of their Conquerors. Hercules, in Honour of fuch extraordinary heroick Females, inftituted the Olympick Games; as likewife did Thefaus, the Ifthmian, in the Year of the World, about 2700 , the Taltenian Sports, the very fame with the Olympick, brought fixty-four Years after from Spain into Ireland, by Tailte, and her Followers. Now this Tailte, Queen of Ireland, was the Grand-daughter of an Amazone Princefs, thofe immortal Females having, with their Progeny, Friends and Followers, to avoid the ruinous Hoftilities of Hercules and Thefous, fought Shelter in Spain, whither they imported the Learning of Trijmegifus, the Grandfon of Mercury, and Glory of Egypt, together with all the literary Arts derived into Greece, from Pbeemicia, by Cadmus, the Brother of Europa, about the Year of the World $253^{\circ}$, Otboniel then reigning the firft Judge of the Hebrews. The Pofterity of this ancient and illuftrious Colony, about the Year of the World 3000, (Solomon then reigning with great Splendour, third King of the Hebreres) fettled in this Kingdom, as before obferved: So that, by an impartial Eftimate of Dates, Periods, and Facts, our Origin is well afcertained, our early Poffeffion of Letters, wife Policy, and the politer Arts, proved, and the Remark of an Italian Monk in the 7 th Century, from the Univerfity of Mongret, in an Epiftle to his Correfpondent at Rome, juftified, Nil mirum Populum bunc Celtico Scytbicum è praclarâ Amazonidum firpê oriundum, verâ Religionê et incorruptâ Fide illuminatum, fapientia Doctrina optimifque Moribus ornatum, viros fortes et Fa . minas caftas plerumque procreare. A Refcript of this Original Epiftle ftill extant, in the Vatican Library, fome Years ago in the Hands of Father Don Lery, may therefore, 1 believe, be found in the College of Lombard at Paris.

In this fhining Period were Cathedrals and Churches erected, Univerfities founded and eftablifhed, Colleges, Seminaries, and Schools propagated in many Parts of this Kingdom, which, at the fame Time, became a peaceful and hofpitable Retreat to religious and learned Men, difturbed on the Continent of Europe, by the frequent Invafions, and cruel Hoffilities of the North-men, whofe Piracies and Barbarity, even Ireland cou'd not always efcape! For, from the Time of Artigrius, Archbihop of Ardmagh in 822, for near 200 Y cars the cruel Danes miferably ravaged this Kingdom, deftroying, by Fire and Sword, every Eftablifhment, as well of Piety as Learning, (to both which, and to all religious Maxims of civilized Society, they had been avowed implacable Enemies) till they were themfelves, in 1014, totally defeated at Clontarf, by the invincible Arms of the Great Monarch, Bryan Borou, from whom defcended a Race confpicuous for exemplary Prelates, hẹroick Leaders, and fteady Patriots.

The learned Author of the Differtations beforementioned, charges this Hero with a Violation of the Conflitution of his Country: Yet the Violation feems of far earlier Date, when the fupreme Monarchy was, by the Hugonian Law, inalienably united to one Family, whofe Sovereignty, however founded originally, whether by Birth, or Election, was effential to the pub-

Salus Populi fuprema Lex; and equally, that not only the Neceffities, but the Safety alfo of the People, at that Time of Danger and Diftraction, eagerly called forth the Conduct and Valour, the protective and reftorative Abilities of that great and virtuous Man, of whom a faithful Hiftorian, in his Detail of the Battle of Clontarf, fays; Integrâ prius adepta Victoria rebus bumanis eodem Diê exceffit vir Bellô ac Pacê fummus, fuufitie, Religionis, Literarum, Cultor eximius, et cum $\mathrm{Ca}^{2}$ rolo Magno utique comparandus.

" I now prorced to give fome Account of the fecond Royal Houre of Scots, the oldeft of the Milefian Race, and the Pofterity of Eber." This Race then being avowed the oldeft, in Refpect of Primogeniture, muft, of Courfe, have been prior in Point of Dignity and Sway, or at leaft, equally entitied to the Election of the People to fuch Ranks; were not thofe by violent Meafures annexed to the Heremonian Line: Yet, however this might have been, certain it is, that no Houfes that we read of, ancient or modern, have produced a greater Number of truly heroick Princes, or of longer Continuance, than thofe of the North and South Hy-Nial; from whom alfo iffued many noble Families of real Worth, and equal Renown. With Bryan, the happy Genius of Ireland, in a great Meafure, expired: For the cruel Danes had, for near 200 Years before, fo wofully overturned the Univerfities of Ardmagh, Dondaleith-Glafs, Mongret, and Lifmore, with all other Seminaries of Yiety and Learning, (the only genuine Sources of national Greatnefs, Concord, good Difcipline, and Happinefs) had obliged, in the 8th Century, fo many learned Men to feek that Shelter and Security on the Continent, which the barbarous Hoftilities, and impious Manners of thofe Northerns, denied them at Home; had made fuch frequent lamentable Breaches in the antient, wife Conftitution of the Kingdom ; had, by the fatal Example of their profligate diffolute Lives, fo vitiated the national Morality ; and finally, had left behind them fo many noxious Seeds of Faction and Anarchy, as, in lefs than two Centuries, gave up a Kingdom, of above 2000 Years Eftablifhment, the unaccountable Prey of a few adventurous Normans!

Patrick governed the See of Dublin about ten Years, and, in a Voyage to England, perifhed by Shipwreck, in the Britifh Sea, on the 16th of OElober, 1084; having been fent to Lanfranc, Archbifhop of Canterbury, by King Tirdelvac.

Donat, or Dongus O'Haingly, having fpent fome Time in the Study of ufeful Learning in Ireland, went over into England, and became a Benedictine Monk at Canterbury. He was afterwards, (by the Confent of King Tirdelvac, and the Clergy of Dublin) confecrated, A. D. 1085 , in the Cathedral of Canterbury, by the befgrementioned Lanfranc, to whom he made the following Profeffion of Obedience :
"I, Donat, Bifhop of the See of Dublin in Ireland, do promife Canonical Obedience to you. $O^{\prime}$ Lainfranc, Archbifhop of the holy Church of Cantertury, and to your Succeffors."

It is evident that the Title of the Kings of England to this Kingdom, by Papal Donation, or Appointment, was very infufficient, if not abfolutely trifing: Nor could a Right of Conqueft be urged in any Period of the Reign of Henry the second, or his Defcendants. But the Great and Royal Families of Ireland, long the Prey of Faction, deliberately preferred a limitted and ftipulated Submiffion to foreign Authority, to the various Evils arifing from inteftine Feuds and Animofities; and this, had the wife Conditions thereof been conftantly attended to, with mutual Obfervance, had been a found Title, well and judicioully founded.

True it is, that after the Surrender of the Crown by King Yobn to the See of Rome, the Pope exerted fome temporal Authority in this Kingdom, inftanced in his having created * Mc. Con More Mc. Namaras Duke of Klan Cullane, a Man of great Valour and Piety; fupported by ample Poffeffions in the Baronies of Tulla and Bunratty, in the County of Clare; which extenfive Diftricts entirely belonged to that antient, hofpitable, martial, and religious Race, of which $M c$. Con More was Chief: The $M c$. Namaras, more or lefs, have in all Ages made, and ftill continue to make, a diftinguifhed Figure, as well in the Field, as in the learned Profeffions; and were formerly fo warlike a People, that of themfelves they formed an heroic Cavalry, juftly ftiled the Pbalanx of that Part of Ireland wherein they refided.

How our Neighbours came' to call us waild Ayrib, I am a Lofs to conjecture ; it being evident

* This Mac Con More Macnamara, Duke of Klan Cullane, founded, erected, and amply endowed the beautiful Abbey of Quin; as did other Chieftains of his Name and Family, feveral Parochial Churches, with a great Number of magnificent Caftles. dent we have been a thoufand Years, at leaft, in Poffeffion of Letters, Laws, and Civility, before the Arrival of Fulius Cajar in Britain.

I am equally at a Lofs to know why a Man fhould become a ftanding Jeft for his Ignorance in an alien Tongue, almott the contant Fate of our Countrymen in Britain, where, whoever is not fmartly expert in the Englifh Language, is immediately denominated a $T_{\text {eague, a Paddy, or }}$ I know not what, in the Stile of Derifion: At the fame Time that the moft awkward-tongued Irifoman in London fpeaks Englijh with far more Propriety, and a better Accent, than the fmarteft Britijb Petit Maitre in Paris doth French.

Some dramatick Scriblers, (probably of our own degenerate Growth) the better to qualify them for eleemofinary Dinners, gave Rife to this impertinent Treatment of a Nation, which, from the concurrent Teftimonies of all the Difpaffionate and Learned, can, in Reality, be as little the Object of Scurrility, as any other.

Why fhould even poor Teague prove fo conftant a Bütt, to Farce-wrights, and Hackney Laughers; when, upon Examination, he is, by a thoufand Degrees, preferable to the Britifo Hobbinol, or French Gregoire? For Teague is a very Pattern of Hofpitality; fo much fo, that if a Gentleman fhould happen to mifs his Road, and be neffitated to feek the Shelter of Teague's Cabbin, or Hut, was poor Teague truling to two Sheep for his worldly Subfiftance, he would kill one, and fell the other, at the next Village or Inn, for the better Entertainment of his Gueft, and think himfelf happy in fuch an Occafion of approving his Generofity and Refpect: He would the next Norning abandon his Spade, and chearfully trot ten Miles to fhew fuch fuch bewilder'd Gentleman the right Road. He is naturally civil, generous, and hofpitable, (for fcarce a Night paffeth that poor Travellers are not entertained in his Cottage, extremely refpectful to his Superiors, and to his Lord and Mafter faithful to Death. The military Annals of Europe proclaim his Capacity and Tafte for Fighting ; then if you fhould take this identical Teague's infant Son, and give him a regular liberal Education, it is one hundred to one, but he turns out a Gentleman of Merit, Learning, Worth, and Politenefs; whereas it would would certainly require more than Herculean Labour to chiffel a French Paifan, a primitive Wefmoreland, or Devonfire Boor, not only into the Form of an elegant, but even into that of a fociable Creature.

The Infignificancy of thofe Jefters and Spatterers, will more clearly appear, if we look back to the wife, free, and truly parliamentary Conftitution of this Kingdom ; if we recollect the vaft Length of its Duration, as a free and independant State ; the military Prowefs of its Inhabitants in all Ages; their victorious Conflicts with the Romans, and with the Frencb under Henry the Vth, and the Black Prince; their having founded a Monarchy in Nortb Britain, whence, by a Right of Defcent, in Addition to every other, his prefent Majefty, (whom God long preterve, ) by the fpecial Providence and infinite Mercy of Heaven, ruleth over us: If we confider the Number of our Univerfities, Colleges, and Academies, religious Monafteries and pious Seminaries, reforted to from all civilized Parts of Europe, our Metropolitical and Diocefan Cathedrals; on fuch impartial Review, furely, the foregoing Tribe of Sneerers and Flouters muft dwindle into deferved Contempt.
I fhall clofe this feeble Attempt on the antient State of Ireland, whith the Defcription thereof by Donat, Bifhop of Fefule, near Florence, in the 7 th or 8 th Century; referring, at the fame Time, to the moft authentick Briti/h Antiquaries, Campden, Giraldus Cambrenfis, Bucbanan, Ware, &c. for Confirmation of what hath been previoufly obferved on the fame Subject.

This Donat, Bifhop of Fefula, was an Iri/bman, of the antient and hofpitable Family, afterwards OHogan; a Family which held ample and fair Poffeffions in the Province of Munster, and which, in former Times, adorned the See of Killaloe, with four very learned and exemplary Prelates; namely, with Matthew O Hogan, who fucceeded to this Bifhoprick, in the Reign of Henry the IIId, and in the Year of our Lord 1267 ; and who, having much entarged his Diocefe, and done many fignal Acts of popular Charity, died in the Year, 1281, and was buried in Limerick, in a Convent of Dominican Friars. To this Bifhop fucceeded Mourice O Hogan, who governed this See with peculiar Zeal and Charity, upwards of fixteen Years, and died in $1^{129}$, or the Year following, and was buried in his own Church. Thomas O Hogan, Canon of Killaloe, was confecrated in 1343 , and died on the 30th of OEtober, 1354 ; five Days after which, he was buried among his worthy Anceftors at Nenagh; as may be feen in the Annals of that Place.

Ricbard O Hogan fucceeded to the See of Killaboe, in 1525 , and was in 1539 tranflated to Clon Mac Nois: He was a Prelate of great Learning

Learning and Capacity, in all fpiritual and ecclefiaftical Matters.

This antient Family is, at this Time, reprefented by Edmund O Hogan, Efq; High Sheriff of the County of Clare, a Gentleman, who, by the whole Tenor of his Life, hath proved Generofity of Heart, Charity, and Hofpitality, to be Qualities inherent.

Dermod Mac Murcbad, fovereign Prince of Hy-Kinfollagh, banihhed by Rederick O Connor, King of Ireland, for his various and high State Crimes, fought Sanctuary and Redrefs in the Court of England; where, in the Abfence of Henry, then in Normandy, diverfe adventurous Normans, Flemings, Saxons, and old Britons, (being themfelves unfettled, and uneftablifhed) acceded to the Fate and Fortunes of Dermod, under the Conduct of Strongbow, Earl of Pembroke; whofe cafual Succefs in Ireland, againft Roderick (owing more to the general Defection, at that fatal Period, of the Iribl Chiefs againft their lawful Sovereign, than to any fuperior Valour or Addrefs of thofe Adventurers) induced Henry to a deliberate and grand Invafion of a Kingdom, to which he could lay no Claim on the Score of Nature, Reafon, or Right, and whither his pretended Miffion, on the Score of collecting St. Peter's Dues, (which St. Peter himleif never once thought of, or imagined) was as ridiculous as gxoundlefs. The Summa Dies, however, arrived: and the People of Ireland, wearied out with inteftine Strife, acknowledged Henry for their Sovereign Lord; and a grand Charter of Rights and Covenants, mutual Protection and Allegiance, was entered into, anteriorly to that of England. How well this : harter was obferved on the protecivive Side, the abfolute Anarchy of fear four Centuries, from its original Date and Perfection, to the Reign of 'Queen Elizabeth, demonftrates: A whole Nation, that fought Protection, and that agreed for quiet, regular, and lawful Government, upon rationable Terms, deprived of the Power of ordaining Laws for its own Security and Well-being, and precluded (all to four or five great and favourite Families) from the Benefits and Advantages accruing from thofe of that Kingdom, to which it had voluntarily united itfelf; expofed, through fuch a Length of Time, to arbitary Depredations, and unpunifhed, unredreffed, uncenfured Rapine, 2uis talia fando temperet a Lacbrymis !

King Henry called back into England, to lay the Storms raifed by his rebellious Sons, with whom and Thomas Becket, Archbifhop of Canterbury, he was fo conftantly embroiled to the End of his Life, that he could little attend to the Settlement of the Affairs of this new acquired Sovereignty.

Richard the Firft, his immediate Succeffor, called away to the Holy Wars againft the Saracens, had as little Leifure as his Predeceffor to promote the Quiet, or Happinefs of Ireland.

From the ufurped Authority of King Fobn, a continued Series of Papal Animofity, Bloodfhed, Calamities and Piracies, clofed at laft by Poifon; little befide political Difafters of all Sorts, could be expected.
Henry the Third, through a Reign of Fiftyfix Years, was continually involved in Troubles and Hoftilities, with his inflexible Englijb Barons.

Edward the Firt, a great and warlike Prince, was, throughout his whole Reign, engaged in the Reduction of the Welcb and Scots, and fo intent

Edward the Second, indeed, fent Gavefon hither, more to foreen him from the implacable Refentments of the ftubborn Englijh Nobility, than to render any good Offices to the Inhabitants of this Country; who, indifcriminately, (Strongbownians as well as Iri/b) felt the Severity of that infolent Favourite's Meafures.

Ricbard the Second vifited this Kingdom in Perfon, with the good Intentions of eftablifhing Peace, Order, and Harmony, in a valuable but long neglected Eftate: Yet his own adverfe Fate, confpiring with that of this Land, called him back, before he could carry his favourable Refolutions into Execution, to defend his Englijb Dominions from the hoftile Attacks of Henry, Earl of Hereford, who, with the Duke of Norfoik, Son to $\because$ obn of Gaunt, had fome Years before been banifhed by Ricbard, to prevent a perfonal Combat: This King, worthy more propitious Stars, long agitated and afflicted by the Turbulence and irreconcilable Obitinacy of his Britijh Subjects, perifhed at laft under the impious Hands of Sir Pierce of Exton, who, at the Head of eight barbarous armed Affaffins, rufhed into his Chamber, and murdered him.

The Reign of Henry the Fourth was Thort, tumultuous, and bloody; Deluges of noble Blood having been fhed by the bate Hands of the common Executioner, to confirm a Throne acquired by abominable Crimes, and Violence! And no fooner had thefe dreadful Storms begun to abate, than Henry was forced to depart from a Scene he had more adorned, (for he was, without Queftion, a great and valiant Man) E 2 thad not his Ambition bliindly hurried him beyond the Bounds of Juftice and Nature.

Henry the Fifth, his Son and Succeffor, and truly Inheritor of his Ambition and warlike Genius, imagining himfelf aggrieved by the Salique Law, which excluded his Great GreatGrandmother, Ifabel, from the Monarchy of France, turned his elevated Thoughts intirely to the Conqueft of that Kingdom: Wherein, by his own vaft Merit in martial Affairs, and the Co-operation of the Queen of France, (Confort of Cbarles the Sixth, then frantick,) and that of the Duke of Burgundy, agreat and powerful Prince, he fo far fucceeded, as, after his Marriage with Catbarine de Valois, Daughter of Cbarles the Sixth, to be crowned, and acknowledged King of France.

To this great and vietorious Monarch fucceeded Henry the Sixth, who, through a long, various, and conftantly clouded Reign, feemed the very Play of Fortune! This Day a King, the next a Prifoner! One Day acknowleged by his Parliament, the next attainted! One Day a Conqueror, and the next a Captive!

Fierce, frequent, and bloody, were the Conflicts between the Houfes of York and Lancafier, the Wbite and Red Rofes; the former endeavouring to recover its Lofs, the latter to maintain its ufurped Authority. In this dreadful Quarrel periffed two hundred thoufand of private Soldiers; ten thoufand of the Nobility, Gentry, and Perfons of Diftinction; three Kings; and, at laft, the entire Race of Plantagenet.

Edrward the Fourth foon fell, by his natural Intemperance, or rather by the infatiable Cruelty of Gloucefer; who had already facrificed his Brother Clarence, to pave his Way to the Throne.

Nor better fared it with Edward the Fifth, who, by all the Arts of Seduction and Delufion, which his unnatural Uncle and Guardian, Ricbard, practifed on the Fears and Weaknefs of the Queen Dowager ; was, with his Brother the Duke of York, conveyed with great Pomp to the Tower; where the bloody Tyrant, aided by the Duke of Buckingbam, foon facrificed thofe young, innocent and hopeful Princes to his wicked and boundlefs Ambition. But he foon after loft his own flagitious Life, and a moft cruelly-acquired Crown, on the Plains of Bofworth.

To him fucceeded Henry the Seventh, and the firft of the Race of Tudor, a great, wife and valiant Prince, but rather too much inclined to Rigour, and Avarice; Imperfections which extremely blemifhed his other great Qualities.

In the tenth Year of this Reign, the Parliamentary Conflitution of Ireland received a deeper Stab than had ever before, or fince, been inflicted thereon, by a Statute Law, commonly called Poynin's Act; by which a new, and, till that wretched Period, an unheard of Order, was added to the three eftablifhed Ranks of the State. By this Law, the Engli/b Privy-Council may impofe a Negative on the free and unamimons Parliamentary Ordinances of the reprefentative Body of the Kingdom of Ireland; a manifeft Injury to the Authority and Dignity of Parliament; and an equal Dimunution of the Royal Prerogative, that only fhould include, and Thould alone exert, a Power fo important.

In Times dark, tumultuated and dangerous, no Wonder extraordinary Laws thould pafs: Defperate Dijeafes require defperate Remedies: But when the Fever is removed, it certainly is a

The Diftempers of this Nation were heavy, complicated and chronic ; and finally curable, only by the falutary all-healing Hands of our prefent King, and prefent Parliament.

To Henry the Seventh fucceeded Henry the Eighth, as confummate a Tyrant, in every Senfe, as ever fwayed the Britijb, or any other Sceptre; whofe whole Life was fo continued a Scene of wanton Diffipation, Luft, Cruelty, Rapine, Bloodfhed and Sacrilege, that it muft have been a peculiar Happinefs, to any Part of his Dominions, to have been neglected or forgotten by him: Nor could the two fucceeding Reigns of Edward the Sixth, and Queen Mary, fhort, various, cloudy, and vattly agitated on the Score of Religion, (which, in thofe two Reigns, took Faces almoft diametrically oppofite,) afford this Kingdom much reflected Sunfhine.

To thofe enfued that of Queen Elizabetb, a Princefs of powerful Abilities, who, truly intent on the Peace and Welfare of her Subjects, caufed her Laws to operate, and Juftice to circulate in this Kingdom, abandoned, as hath been obferved, to a State almoft of Anarchy, thro' a difmal Series of feventeen Reigns: But the Reformation in Religion, which fhe eftablifhed in England, and introduced in Ireland, much obviated her Purpofes for the latter Kingdom: For, the Irijh, more tenacious of their Altars, than of their Fire-places, could not eafily reconcile themfelves to the Exchange of a Religion they deemed a neve one, for that they had been in Poffefion of from the fourth, to the fifteenth Century: Which produced a rebellious Defection, in a few of the principal Chieftains of this Land, and gave Occafion to the greedy Provincial Precedents, of trumping up imaginary Rebellions, to pave the Way to real Forfeitures; thereby to aggrandize their own Houfes; what fome of them effectually accomplifhed, to the Ruin and Extirpation of many honeft Families.

This great and illuftrious Princefs, (whofe Reign had remained untarnifhed, had it not been for the Death of the ill-fated Queen of Scotland) was fucceeded by fames the Sixth of Scotland, and the firft of the Stuart Race that governed England: From this Prince, defcended of Iri/b Kings, the People of Ireland might have expected many Favours and Immunities; wherein, however, they were miferably difappointed: Which, with a Train of other Hardfhips and antiparental Severities, (particularly his alienating, at one Stroke, fix of the beft Counties in the Kingdom, on the procured Teftimony of an obfcure wretched Individual, one Teige Lenane,) is too fufficient and too lafting a Proof of: Heu! tot Conquefta Annorum, baujerit una Dies! The Poffeffion of at leaft twenty' Centuries, of the great and good, the heroic and hofpitable $O$ Neils, O Donnels, Mac Guires, Mac Gennijes, O Reillys, O Cabanes, &xc. ravifhed away to gratify hungry Favourites, and indigent Relatives! the fix Counties, however, as the Law Term has it, efcheated. Had the Higblands of Scotlond, at that unhappy Period, been more populated, propably fix or eight Counties more had been procured to efcheat, and there had been 2 braa Clutch of bonny Traitors; the $O$ Connors, Mac Cartbys, O Briens, O Donnuls, O Haras, O Malones, O Malones, &cc. had been all in the Jame Bottome with the Families above mentioned ; efpecially, as they could not, according to Fames the Firft's own Phrafe, look to the Pope, and row woith bim.

To Fames the 6th of Scotland, and firft of England, fucceeded Cbarles the Firft; who, notwithftanding his eminent Poffeffion of all the Virtues that adorn and illuftrate human Nature, could neither divert the adverfe Fate of Subjects, or prevent his own.

The Diffeifin of many honef Families in the County of Kilkenny, and elfewhere, by the Earl of Strafford, on ftale Pretences of Non Performance of Covenants on their Part; his Attempt of confifcating twenty-five Parts in thirty of the whole Province of Connaught, on a Claim of Defcent, dormant 300 Years, and originally ill founded, with the arbitrary Steps by him taken to the Accomplifhment of this wafteful Purpofe; too clearly proved that Nobleman a fecond Verres. The cruel and intoxicated Adminittration of the Rump Parliament; the infolent, licentious, and riotous Controul of the military Independents; the abject Tyranny of Oliver Cromwell, who proftrated Conftitution, Church and State, will always be recollected with the Contempt, Horror, and Deteftation of every good Subject.

The Calamities from 1641, to the happy Rettoration of King Cbarles the Second, in 1660 , being common to all good Subjects, were the more tolerable, ferre quam fortem patiuntur omnes, nemo recufat: But now or never, furely, might his ever loyal, ever faithful Iri/h Subjects have, with the mott reafonable Affurance, hoped, if not for publick and latting Rewards, the common Wages of uncommon Fidelity; at leaft, for a Reftitution of what had been their own, through Ages immemorial.
Will late Potterity believe, that, in Favour of mercenary Adventurers, who advanced Money to provide for a defperate regicide Army; in Favour of the Officers of this fame Army, whom their Ringleader Cromwell, feared as his Confcience was, indulged with no more than temporary Grants of the Eftates belonging to the King's moft faithful Subjects : Will Pofterity, 1 fay, believe, that, in fpecial Favour of fuch Men, thofe identical Subjects, the braveft Advo. cates, as well as the moft affectionate undeviating Friends of the Monarchy and Conflitution, were for ever deprived of their Properties! To remunerate the otbers, the moft inveterate and implacable Enemies of either! Doing Good for Evil is a Divine Precept, and certainly includes a moft fublime Moral; but rendering Evil for Goed, is fuch a Principle as mutt carry Horror with it, among favage Nations!

The King of France's immediate Letter, on this Subject, to King Cbarles the Second, as it reflects Honour on the Memory of thofe illuftrious Sufferers, I therefore take Leave to tranfcribe in this Place.

His Mof Cbriftian Majofty's Letter to the King of Great Britain, in Favour of the Roman Catholicks of Ireland.

The good King Cbardes, regardlefs of this important Solicitation, unattentive to the plain Suggeftions of common Right, and unaccountably forgetful of ail their paft fignal Services and inviolate Zeal ; obferved indeed that thole faithful Irijh Subjects had no Stock; confequently, that difpoffeffing the Adherents of Oliver, who, with the Land, had pirated the national Stock, would caufe much Confufion. As for the former, he hoped fome Settlement might in Time be found for them ; (in Truth, I believe, for aught his Majefty in Reality concerned bimfelf, this might have been in Terra Australis Incognita). Their Want of Stock is the lefs to be admired at, it, being well known, that, with their Pay in foreign Service, chiefly expended to contribute all in their Power to the Royal Support, they even went fo far as to fell their Plate, and valuable Moveables, to anfwer the fame generous Purpofe: But, when every known Acre in the Kingdom, that could be difpofed of, was given away by Wholefale to the Duke of York, the Heirapparent of the Crown, (partial Diftribution!) to new-fangled Favourites, and the ftaunch old Enemies of Church and Crowr; it was hoped fome Lands might be yet difcovered, to fatisfy and compenfate thofe Irib Worthies, who had Nothing left for their Support, befide an inalienable Senfe of Honour and Loyalty, and a Character of invincible Fidelity (which all Nations admired and applauded). No fuch Difcovery, however, was made, nor any relative to the Irijh, under that Adminiftration, but what tended to convince them, by the famous Act of Setlement, $\xi^{c}$. of the extraordinary fevere Peculiarity of their Fate! Yet, ordained to fhew Poflerity unprecedented Specimens of Loyalty and Zeal, they ftill adhered, with inflexible Conftancy, to the Fortunes of King Fames the Second, not mindful of their Injuries by Fames the Firft, their unexampled Sufferings by the exceffive harfh Meafures of King Cbarles the Firt, his Minifters, and Deputies, or their un-heard-of Treatment (I won't fay Wrongs, it being a Maxim the King of England can do none) by King Cbarles II. Little Wonder, a Houfe, conftantly fapping it's own beft Pillars, fhould at length fall.

King Fames the Second, conftrained to abdicate the Throne of England, endeavoured the Prefervation of this his Kingdom of Ireland, where his faithful Subjects, (a Remnant of the various and manifold Waftes of foregoing Reigns) confidering the thoufand Difadvantages they laboured under, made fucb a Stand as later Ages will look up to with Aftonilhment! A Parcel of Men, congregated in the utmoft Hurry and Confufion, undifciplin'd, unarm'd, uncloathed, unpaid! Yet did thofe very Men, animated by the Example of their heroick Leaders, (I mean their immediate Lords and Countrymen) on the Plains of Augbrim, convince the beft veteran Army that Day in Europe, fuperior in Numbers, excellently provided for in every Refpect, and conducted by a Prince of fingular Valour and Addrefs, that Irifbmen were deferving of more aufpicious Stars.

Never was a more gallant Defence than they, after this, made in Limerick; where, although abandoned by the Prince, (whofe Caufe they had fo remarkably efpoufed) and his auxiliary French, they obtained an honourable Capitulation from thofe in Commifion under King William the Third, whofe ftrict Obfervance thereaf, to the End of his glorious Life, reflects, among many other his great Atchievements, deferved Honour on his Memory.

The diftinguifhed Figure made by thofe Noblemen and Gentlemen, who, regardiefs of Property or Eafe, followed the Deftiny of that hard-fated Prince, King Fames the Second, (namely, France, Spain, Flanders, Italy, Naples, and Rufia, muft bear ample and authentic Teftimony of, to future Ages.

Thofe were they, of whom Dr. Mac en Crow gives the following concife, but juft and happy Character.

Genus acre Bello, Studiis Genus acre Minerve, Devotumque mori pro Rege, Fidêque tuendis.

Among thofe who followed the Fortunes of King Fames the Second, were Sir Ricbard Neagle, his Attorney-General, and Dr. Moore, Provoft of Trinity-college, near Dublin; two Gentlemen very juftly diftinguifhed in their refpective Spheres ; the former, a Gentleman of unfhaken Integrity, and great Capacity in the Profeffion of the Laws; the latter, of exemplary Piety, univerfal Learning, and fine Accomplifhments. Louis the Fourteenth, then King of France, protected thofe worthy deferving Men, with fingular Tendernefs and Attention; and was inftructed and guided folely by Dr. Moore, in the reftoring, eftablifhing, and modelling the Univerfity of Paris, at that gloomy Period! quite buried in perplexed, unintelligible, peripatetic Phi-Philofophy, and disfigured with romantic Legends, and Gothic Jungle! But, at the Doctor's Appearance, Entities, Quiddities, Sympathies, Antipathies, occult Qualities, fubftantial Forms, metaphyfical Degrees, Categories, and all this unideal wordy Stuff, vanifhed; and were fucceeded by a clear. concile Method of Reafoning, and found, ufeful, and experimental Philofophy. Greek, Heoriw, Syriac, cbaldaic, and Arabic, were Languages untaugbt, unknown, in the Univerfity of Paris, before Dr. Moore; for whom particularly, Louis the Fourteenth founded, eftablifhed, and endowed the Royal College, now called College du Cambray: And how well our Doctor fucceeded therein, may be inferred from the Character and Writings of his Pupils and Hearers, Boileau, Fontinelle, Poréc, Montefquieu, Fleuri, Lauguet, with many others, and Rollin, his peculiar Favourite and immediate Succeffor, all great Genius's, applauded Writers, and celebrated Wits. So that, as Ireland had the Honour of founding, it had alfo that of reftoring and reviving the great Univerfity of Paris, in the Perfons of two of its learned Natives.

The Reign of her Majefty Queen Anne (giorious to her Arms, under the Conduct of Yobn, Duke of Marlborough, and her other Generals, and juftly diftinguiifed by the Number of great Genius's and Wits, who enlightened that Period) was in this Kingdom chiefly employed in additional Acts againft the further Growth of Popery: And many there were, who deemed is an unparallel'd Severity in her Majefty, to give her Royal Affent to them particular Laws; by which the Roman Catbolicks of Ireland (already ruined by their inimitable Allegiance to her
$48 \quad$ An ESSAY on the Antient
Royal Father, Uncle, and Grandfather) were precluded from availing themfelves, by a tolerable eafy Leafe, of any Part or Parcel of thefe Eftates, forfeited by their Anceftors, thro' their unremitting Endeavours, to fupport and maintain that Stem, of which fhe was herfelf an immediate Branch.

So late even as this Reign, the whole Kingdom of Ireland was a defolate diffufive Scene of total Decay! covered with all the ghafly Symptoms of the Confumption of Centuries! But, at length, on the happy Acceffion of his late Majefty of glorious Memory, the blifsful Morning of Peace and Concord began its aufpicious Dawn! Yet, as Time, publick Spirit, Patriotifm (in its hightt Conception) and unwearied Diligence, were all collectively effential to the giving Life, Vigour, and Activity, to national Induftry and Improvement, fo very long in a melancholy State of Languor and Oppreffion : Not before the prefent truly glorious Reign, did Hibernia tune her old Harp, now newly ftrung to univerfal Harmony and Elegance, and rear her awful Head from the ftupid difmal Dozes of Ages; where comes the literal Application of my third Motto, Renascimur.

Having travelled through a tedious Night, thick-fet with Horrors of various Hues! and thus come to the End of a painful Journey; give me Leave, kind Reader, to indulge awhile with admiring the beautiful Variety of Objects, which now furround me, to the ferene Delight before I attempt that Difplay of them to which I have no Occafion of profeffing my Inequality.

In this Reign, and not before, our Linen Manufacture, in many Refpects one of the moft profitable Branches of our national Commerce, received all the Encouragement from Royal Bounty, and Parliamentary Sanction, that could be reafonably hoped for.

Perfons of the higheft Rank, Dignity, and Fortune, were appointed Trufiees for the Propagation, Encouragement, and Diffufion, of this beneficial Trade, throughout the refpective Provinces.

The Linen-Hall was erected in Dublin, under as juft and nice Regulations as any commercial. Houfe in Europe.

The North of Ireland began to wear an Afpect entirely new; and, from being (through Want of Induftry, Bufinefs, and Tillage) the almoft exhaufted Nurfery of our American Plantations, foon became a populous Scene of Improvement, Traffic, Wealth, and Plenty; and is, at this Day, a well-planted Diftrict, confiderable for Numbers of well-affected, ufeful, and induftrious Subjects.

Now arofe, now fhone forth, the ever Honourable Dublin Society; a Society equalled by none. It is true, we read of Patriarchs, Philofophers, Warriors, Orators, and Poets ; of Senates, Parliaments, Councils, E ${ }^{3}$ c. but we no where, abftracted from our own Country, meet ${ }^{2}$ Set of pious Patriots, from their private Funds, adorning their Country in general, in every Degree and Branci of Induftry, and Improvement; and, infpired with Sentiments truly public and focial, munificently rewarding their

 An ESSAY on the AntientCountrymen, of whatfoever Denomination, without Favour or Diftinction; for meliorating their proper Eftates, or Farms; for excelling in any Production of Nature, or Art; for any Difcovery, or Invention, ufeful to Mankind: A Set of truly bonourable, and generous Perfonages, inAtructing their Countrymen with clear, yet philofophical Precepts, encouraging them by their Example, and rewarding them from their inexhauftible Bounty! Such, and fuch unrivalled, is the Illustrious Dublin Society! What Pity, the ample Diftributions, and inftructive Writings of this learned and munificent Body, are not regularly publifhed, in Latin, Englifh, and French, for the peculiar Honour of this Nation, the Edification of Pofterity, and as a bright Pattern of Imitation to all other civiliz'd Countries!

Now likewife appeared the Pbilbarmonic Society, that, (from a few Gentlemen, who ufed orcafonally to meet, (in order to while away an Hour with a gentle Tune, and chearful Glafs) grew into an harmonious Body, not alone for the Improvement of the charming Art of Mufic, but for the effectual Relief alfo of fucceffive Thoufands, from Mifery, Famine, and Confinement: Concordia res parve crefcunt. Orpheus, we are told, built the Walls of Thebes, by the irreffitible Powers of Harmony: Be this true or fabulous; how many Iron Gates have we not feen open, to the perfuafive Charities of this tuneful Society! how many gloomy Cells vacated by their Charms! In this happy Reign was incorporated, under the protective Sanction of Royal Bounty, a Society, truly Chriftian, for the pious Eftablifhment of Protefant Charter-Schools throughout the Kingdom: An Inftitution fas more productive of national Morality, and Reformation, than excommunicative Difcipline, op reftrictive penal Statutes; fince Perfuafion and Rewards have ever been, and muft ever continue to be, more confiftent with the meek and be= nevolent Temper of true Chriftianity, more efo fectual, Apoftolic, and Catholic, than Pumifhe. ments, Perfecution, or Sequefrations.

In this Reign fhines out a Chriftian Divine, who, in the ineflimable, individual Dr. Modden? collects a whole Society of Petriots; a venerable Man, not alone the Guide of his particulap Congregation, but a pure, alfo clear and lafting Light of Perfection, and noble Imitation, to his Countrymen in general.

Writings, of his great Genius and Wit: Morcer's charitable Hofpitable in Stephen-freet: The noble Hofpital for the Relief of poor Lying-inn-Women, of the Projection of our late excellent Countryman, Dr. Bartbolomere Mofle; by which a great Number of Women and Children are preferved from miferable and untimely Ends: The Cbaritable Infirmary on the Inus+ Quay: The New Hofpital for Incurables, on La-zer's-Hill: St. Nicholas's Hofpital, in Francisfireet: 'The Meath Hofpital, in Skinner's Alley: The Lock Hofpital, in Gcorge's-Lane, for haple1s Women and Children, tainted with the Venereal Infection : And the Charitable Hofpital in Kingfireet, Oxmantorem, are all the humane and pious Growth of this tranfcendent Reign.

Thofe Hofpitals are duly and regularly attended, by the moft eminent Phyficians, and fkilful Surgeons, without Fee or Reward: So that, from this obvious Confideration ${ }_{2}$ the frequent and large Collections in our Churches, for the comfortable Support, and Chriftian Education, of indigent Boys; the ftated Diftributions of our Chief Magiftrates, to the Helplefs and Needy; and, in Truth, from the general Difpofirion of its worthy Inhabitants; we may, without any Rifque of incurring the leaft Cenfure of Adulation, or Vanity, pronounce Dublin as charitable a Metropolis as any in the known World. Sberidan's general Merit as a Player ftands confeffed; but as a Manager, that Gentleman's falling frequently under the heavy Difpleafure of the Public, (whether from an haughty Diftafte to his Profeffion, or indulged Arrogance of Temper) with his violent Introduction of antidramatick Rope and Wire-dancing, Tumbling, and Fire-eating, to the vifible Degradation of a liberal Stage, whereon nothing mean, fhocking, or monftrous, fhould ever appear; he hath not fucceeded fo well: Then, his Scheme of uniting an Academy, for the fober regular Education of Youth, with a publick Theatre, feemed rather the feverith Delufion of a diftempered Brain, and heated Imagination, than the cool deliberate Refult of rational Judgment; from which fermented Source, alfo feem'd directly to flow his avowed Concern for the long loft Art of Oratory among us: Had Mr. Sberidan attended to the Debates of our High Court of Parliament; been frequent in our different Churches, and at the Bars of our Courts of Judicature; and had, in this Cafe, formed a comparative Judgment, from the Writings of Demofthenes, Plato, IJocrates, Cicero, and Pliny the Younger; from the Rules and Precepts of Ariftotle, Longinus, Horace, QuinEilian, Scaliger, Rapin, Porée, and Rollin; he had been then convinced how little Occafion there was for his lamenting the Lofs of an Art in this Kingdom, which breathes there in full Maturity of all jt's perfuafive Charms. This his dogmatical Affertion of the long-loft Art of Oratory, his wild Academical Projeets, with the foregoing theatrical Inconfiften, cies, too much fubject that Gentleman to the Character given, by the Roman Satirift, of an affuming flarp-fet Greekling :

Gramaticus, Rbetor, Geometres, Pifior, Aliptes, Augur, Scanobates, Medicus, Magus, omnia novit.

Upon the Whole, I will readily grant Mr. Sheridan a Roficius, if the Name can footh him; a Critic; nay, an Orator; but I fhall be bold to affert, that we have many, very many, in this Kingdom, of far gieater Powers than that Gentleman, whereof fome of his Orations, $\sqrt{0}$ called, are incontrovertible Teftimonies.

This Kingdom hath of late Years exhibited as juftly celebrated Male and Female Players, as any other; evinced in the Characters of Meffieurs Quin, Ryan, Delane, Sberidan, Barry, Molop, Dexter, Sparks, Mrs. Woffington, the inimitable Mrs. Fitz-Henry, and feveral others, of either Sex.

Mr. Barry's Capacity, as a Manager, appeareth equal to his eminently-affecting Powers in Tragedy, (fo generally known, and fo unexceptionably conteffed) from the magnificent Theatre, erected by that Gentleman, with amazing Expedition, in Grandeur, Convenience, and Elegance, preferable to any in London, of Paris : From the obliging Decency the refpective Performances thereof are conducted with, and evidently from the furpafing theatrical Abilities of the Company, that, with the moft engaging Variety, entertains the Publick in Crow-ftreet Play-houfe. I have fometimes feen, and have been as often delighted, with Performances of the Gentlemen juft mentioned, as with thofe of the admired Mr. Garrick, and the famous Meffieurs Dufréfne, Goffin, and Quinault; and, if 1 may take Leave to declare my Opinion, am therein clear that Mr. Barry, in the exquifitely pathetick Strokes of deep Tragedy, touches the Soul with as much delicate Senfibility, and, in the irrefrainable Sallies of the more boifterous Paffions, foars with as majeftick Wings, as any one of them, I will not fay higher. To behold Mr. Barry, fublimely ftruggling in a Storm of Adverfity, with the fudden Shocks, and unexpected Blows of Fortune; then, (when all human Efforts mult yield to inevitable Neceffity) finking in the irretrievable Plunge of Sorrow and Calamities, with that calm Refignation ever attendant on true Heroifm ; muft convince any judicious Spectator of his being born a Tragedian. I muft here declare, that what I have advanced on this Subject neither arifeth from Prepoffeffion on one Side, or Prejudice on the other ; having no Manner of Connection, nay, not even a perfonal Acquaintance, with Mr. Barry; nor any Objection to Mr. S̈beridan, but fuch as muft naturally iffue from my juft Refentment againft any Individual, of whatfoever Rank, Character, or Denomination, who fhould prove fo ignorant, and yet fo hardy, as to declare Elocution loft in our native Country; an illiberal Cenfure, which, if true, had neceffarily wrapped our High Court of Parliament, the whole Body of our Clergy, our Univerfity, Bench and Bar, in Shades that, I am certain, had been never difpell'd by the Approach of Light, fo dim and glimmering as that Gentleman's.

Let us now take a fummary View of the Inhabitants of Ireland, in their refpective Ranks: And to begin with the Peers: Are they not fuch Perfonages, as, by their Munificence, Affability of Manners, Eafinefs of Comportment, Propriety of Appearance, and Generofity, in dealing, reflect true Honour on Nobility ; and,

Reality, derive their fuperior Rank, as much from the Pre-eminence of their Virtues, as from the conftitutional Dignity of their Titles ?
The Encreafe of our People, Wealth, Commerce, Indufry, Arts, Inventions; the extraordinary additional Number, in this happy Reign, of our beautiful Seats, elegant Improvements, ufeful and ornamental Plantations, exrenfive Inclofures, excellent high Roads, (formerly almoft impaffable,) with the vifible Reformation in national Harmony, and Allegiance, will beff fuggeft an Idea of the Honourable the Houfe of Commons of Ireland, compofed of fuch candid Spirits, as, neither the Smiles or Frowns of fuperior Influence, popular Views, or private Connections, can bend from the various effential Duties due to their King, their Country, and themfelves; conftant in their Attendance; careful in their Protection; and zealous in their Promotion of publick Felicity ; not more extenfive in their noble Projects for this great Purpofe, than expeditious in carrying thofe into Execution.

Our Conftitution, partly of Gotbic, partly of Norman Inftitution, (the firt High Court of Parliament on the prefent Eftablifhment, having been ordained in the Reign of Hemry the Firft, Son of William the Conquerer) avoiding the turbulent Licentioufnefs of a Democracy, the factious domineering Temper of Ariffocracy, and the variable oppreffive Sway of Arbitary Monarchy; but including, by an harmonious Affemblage, the effential Virtues of thofe different Syftems of Government ; is unqueftionably the beft digefted and wifeft in the known World: Under which, the King and the Nobles, with the Commons, unite, to extend the Commerce, promote the Happinefs, guard over the Safety, preferve the Lives, defend the Characters, fupport the Liberties, and protect the Property of the People. Blefs'd Conftitution! O! may it ever flourifh! under whofe mild and prefervative Influence, a few only feel Reftraint; except from the Commiffion of private Evil, or focial Injury.

I have faid a Few only; becaufe there are fome among us, who, on the Score of Religion, are fecluded from permanent Property: And even Thofe, it is hoped, will, in Confideration of the invariable Tenor of their humble and pacific Conduct, from the Capitulation of Limerick, to this Day; and from their unanimous and chearful Obedience to our Civil Government, e're long obtain fome Mitigation of their Affairs; fuch the benevolent Temper and Difpofition of the prefent incomparable Reign! Some late excellent * Pamphlets, wherein thefe Gentlemen's political Principles are fully and clearly explained, thew of what fignal Advantage it had been to the Numbers, Induftry, Health, Wealth, and Beauty of this Kingdom, to indulge them a Property, even in our uncultivated Mountains, dreary Waftes, and noxious Marhes : Which Meafure, fhould it appear in a true Light to our worthy Reprefentakives, we may in a few Years more, hope-to fee Ireland one of the moft beautiful, beft-improved, beft-conditioned Ilands in the Univerfe. Our Bench is adorned with Honourable Perfonages, confpicuous for Learning, Integrity, Humanity, and Impar-- tiality;

[^0]and Modern State of I R ELAN D. 59 tiality; of whom, it may be boldly affirmed, and with the ftricteft Truth, that they are not Favourers of Perfons. The prefent Lord Chief Juftice of the King-Bench, the late Mafter of the Rolls, and Chancellor of the Exchequer, Natives of Ireland, formed a Triumvirate, whofe Learning, Worth, and diftinguifhed Abilities, had rendered them eminently refpectable in the brighteft Æras, either of the Roman Commonwealth, or Empire.

Our Attorney and Solicitor General, our Serjeants at Law, and King's Council, with many eminent Barrifters, and a Set of learned eloquenc young Gentlemen, all fhiniffeffout together; fuch as Iully, Hortenfius, and Pliny, had with fond Tendernefs cherifhed, and with pleafing Pride, avowed for their Pupils; form as dittinguifhed a Body of Advocates and Orators, as adorn any Courts of Judicature in Europe.

In the Diocefe of Dublin exifteth a truly pious Society for the Relief and Support of the Widows and Children of the inferior Clergy thereof. It is, indeed, furprizing in a Kingdom, fuch (thank Heaven) as Ireland is, that the Example of this charitable Society, hath not been univerfally followed. In hath often affected me to the Quick, to have feen a learned Divine, after a tedious and painful Free-School Inftitution, and expenfive Univerlity Education, ftruggling, upon a poor Penfion or Salary of forty Pounds a Year, to maintain an honeft Gentlewoman, Children, and Servants, (and really with fome Decency of Hofpitality) fedulounly difcharging, at the fame Time, the different Duties of the paftoral Function; when a foreign Fidler fhall run away with tripple that Sum, or more, for one Night's Performance.

I would by no Means be underftood to derogate from the Merits of fine Performers in the different Parts of Mufick, or endeavour to diminifh their reafonable Perquifites : But, furely, fuch Men and fuch Things are not to be thought of, in Competition with thofe, who, by Teaching and Preaching, refine our Morals, inftruct our Undeftandings, inform our Lives, and enlighten our Souls with the celeftial Spirit of the Chriftian Faith; and thereby happily lead us, through this tranfient and precarious State, to eternal Tranquility and Blifs. I am not a Preacher; but thus far fhall venture: As the Fear of the Lurn is the Beginning of Wifdom, our generally following the heavenly Example of this venerable Society, muft be a great Teft as well of the one, as the other. If the Bifhops, the temporal Lords, and great eftated Men of each Diocefe, would but gracioufly lead the Way, it is not unlikely they had been attended by Crowds of zealous Followers: And, in Fact, a finall Matter annually fet apart, from even the fuperfluous Outgoings of the Wealthy and Opulent, of different Ranks, would very happily anfwer the generous noble End of preferving, from an anxious State of particular Dependance, Numbers of virtuous, well-educated Gentlewomen, and their Children, from the various Miferies, which the untimely Death of a Father, and narrow Circumftances; but too frequently expofe them to; an End fo every Way worthy the natural Difyofition, the benevolent Temper, the inherent Hofpitality, and the effen-tially-charitable Character of Ireland.

Our Froteftant Brethren, the Diffenters, by a pradent and pious Regulation of fecreting one Pound a Year, each parochial Minifter, for this religiouly religioufly humane Purpofe, have conftantly a Fund fufficient to allow the Relict of each Clergyman twenty Pounds a Year, (which preferves her from the Miferies of Want and Dependance) and have, at fome Periods, wherewith to fet their Childsen up, in an honeft and creditable Way of living. As we are emoloufly fond of adopting the Wifdom and Virtues of each Chriftian Sect and Society, it is fervently hoped we will alfo this tender and pious Scheme; a Scheme fo comprehenfive of true Charity, and fo productive of focial and happy Effects! How difficult is it for Minds, crowded with Cares, and befet with the preffing Calls of Family-prefervation, to attend, with due Compofure and Inclination, to the various indifpenfible Duties of the paftoral Office? But how chearfully would thofe Reverend Gentlemen proceed in their divine Miffion, when, by fome vifible Provifion for the proper Objects of their prefent Cares and future Concern, they fhould, in a great Meafure, be relealed from domeftick Anxiety, from gloomy Apprehenfions, and alarming Profpects, into the temporal Futurity of thofe, for whom they muft be neceffarily affected with the moft tender Feelings!

The moft convincing and decifive Method of adjudging Caufes, being by a comprehenfive $V$ iew and critical Examination of their Effects; of Sireams, by a nice Scrutiny and Inveftigation of their Sources; hence may we, from the fhining Characters, and extenfive Abilities of our Divines and Barrifters, frame a juft Idea of the Univerfity of Dublin, which, for Compafs and Extent of the Sciences, Variety of elegant Arts, found Erudition, and polite Literature therein taught, in the moft regular and perfpicu-ous Methods, is equalled by few, excelled by none.

-The Students are carefully inftrueted in the more refined Parts of claffical Learning; oriental, antient, and modern Languages ; Criticifm, facred and profane Hiftory, Oratory, Logick, Ethicks, and Metaphyficks; in natural and experimental Philofophy ; A natomy, Botany and Chymiftry; the Mathematicks, in Theory and Practice; Civil and Canon Laws; Theology, Controverfy, and Ecclefiaftical Hiftory: So that, with a good Capacity, and regular Application, one may depart this Univerfity, as completely and happily inftituted for the honorary Profeffions of Life, as may be reafonably expected from any Nurfery of Learning extant. The obtaining a Fellowfhip in this Univerfity, is a demonftrative Teft of comprehenfive native Talents, thorough intellectual Cultivation, deep and various learned Acquirements.
The Nerotonian Philofophy ; the excellent Boyle's experimental Philofophy, and Mr. Locke's Metaphyficks, prevail much in the College of Dublin: Which, for Extent, Convenience, Magnificence, and a moft fumptuous elegant Library, exceeds any one College in Europe. The beautiful Parks belonging to it, feem actually, on a ferene Evening, the delightful Vale of Tempe, or enchanting Receffes of Parnafus, inhabited by all the Mufes, all the Graces, with their charming Train.

The Trade of Ireland, however in former Times miferably reftrained and limited, hath in this happy Reign received confiderable Enlargements; fuch as, the opening feveral WoollPorts; the Bounty on Irijh Linens, now our staple Commodity, imported into Great-Britain; and Modern State of IRELAND. $\sigma_{3}$ and the Immunity lately granted of importing thither Beef, Butter, Tallow, Candles, Pork, Hides, live Cattle, $E^{2} c$. a Privilege that, in its Confequences, mult prove of fignal Advantage to both Nations; to tbis efpecially, as we fhall hereby be enabled, upon any occafional Exigency, to fupply our protecting Friends, and proportionably fint the Hands of our Enemies, who, (by the Profufion of Wines and fpirituous Liquors, annually exported from France to Ireland, in Exchange for our Beef, Butter, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ}$. to pafs over the Gluts of Teas and Spirits, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ} c$. fmuggled thence by the weffern Runners) have conitantly the Balance on their Side. Our Exports, with thofe already mentioned, confift in a few Cheefes, Salmon and Kelp: But, as our Linens are, without Queftion, become the vital Spring of Irijh Commerce, it is Matter of great Concern and equal Surprize, that the other Provinces do not more univerfally and effeciually follow the lucrative Example of the Nortb! fince, it is evident, nothing but equal Induftry can be wanting to render them equally fouribing, The Over-growth of Graziers and Stockmafters, is the ftrongeft Indication that can be of national Wafte and Decay, in refpect of Inhabitants. What could a Foreigner, travelling among us, particularly in the weftern Counties, fome Summers paft, judge of our national Wifdom and Oeconomy? Would he not flart even at our Humanity, on feeing the beft arable Grounds in the Kingdom, in immenfe Tracts, wantonly enjoyed by the Cattle of a few petulant Individuals; and at the fame Juncture, our high Ways and Streets crowded with Shoals of mendicant rellow-creatures! reduced, through Want of proper Suftenance, to the utmoft Diftrefs?

64 An ESSAY on the Antient
Would not a Frencbman, for Example, give a Shrug extraordinary, at finding, in every little Inn, Bourdeaux Claret and Nantz Brandy, though, in all Likelihood, not a Morfel of Irif Bread?

It is much to be hoped, That, when the Spirit of Tillage fhould become more general and active, our Farmers more attentive to the Growth of the beft Kinds of Grain, and our Brewers more attentive to the Rules and Precepts for that Purpofe laid down by the Honourable the Dublin Society; we thall have little or no Occafion for that Inundation of London Porter; (an heavy, cloudy, intoxicating, ill-flavoured Liquor) that annually overflows this City and other Parts of the Kingdom ; as, in the above Cafe, we may have a fufficient Plenty and Variety of Malt Liquors, our own native Produce, far better than any imported; and, in Cafe of a Redundancy of Grain, (a Matter not very likely to happen) may, with moderate Care, have Spirituous Liquors of far a more wholefome Nature, exquifite Tafte, and delicate Flavour, than thofe imported at an extraordinary Expence; and but too often adulterated, in the firft Concoction.

We have, in feveral Parts of this Kingdom, (in the Province of Munfter efpecially) a recy, fpirituous, fine flavoured Cyder, very litt:e, if at all, inferior to the beft imported White Wines; and a moderate Plenty of grateful Honey-Liquors, which, with our prime Beef, Mutton, Pork, Veal, Lamb, Variety of Fowls, tame and wild; red and fallow Deer; Hares, Rabbits, Pidgeons, Pheafants, Groufe, and Partridge; wild Duck, Plover, Snipe, छ$c$. Lake, Kiver, Shell and Sea Fifh, of all Kinds; the Produce of the Garden, (Horticulture having of late Years fo vaftly improved among us, that we now have many ourious Plants, Fruits. and Flowers, not only not krosion , but never even beard of, in former Times) and all in fuch Plenty and Perfection, as demonftrate Ireland -happier than moft other Countries, in regard of the Neceffaries and even of the Delicacies of Life; to which may be added, the great NumTber of our beautiful Lakes, noble Rivers, pure Fountains, limpid Streams, and Health-reftoring mineral Wells*. In this Country are bred waluable Morfes, for the Draught, Road, and Chace; and for the Courfe, vas high-formed ones, as in any Part of Europe; and large horned Cattle, and Sheep in Abundance.
veIt muft afford real Satisfaction to confider the univerfal and vifible Reformation in the Lives and Morals even of our commonPeople, clearly evinced in this, that (thank Heaven) fewer legal Punifhments fucceed an entire Circuit, inour happy Days, than did a fingle Affize in former Reigns : And, without Queftion, this Reformation muft ftill rife higher, in Proportion to the Lenity of our worthy Leginature, and wife Indulgence of our landed Men, whomuft certaindy find it more conducive to the Welfare of the State, and to their own Strength, Honour, and Intereft, to have their Eftates farmed and inha--bited by a great Number of honeft, laboriouc, improving tamilies, than wafted by a few Purfeproud Bullock-Brokers, who rarely allow the wretched Herd of an hundred, as much Ground

[^1]for his own and poor Family's Support, as is equal to that of two Bullocks.
Suppofe a Gentleman was to let two thoufand Acres of arable Ground to farm; were it not demonftrably more conducive to all the foregoing Motives, to difpofe of thefe to twenty honeft, induftrious Families, at an hundred Acres each, than to any one Beau-Grazier whatever? From the twenty Tenures, the Landlord may, in any national Shock, raife a confiderable Number of effective Hands, and zealous Hearts, for the Service of the Crown, or Defence of his Country; and reap many fignal Advantages to the public and private Concernments of Life, not poffibly derivable from the anti-focial Monopolizers and Foreftallers of Farms; who ever fondly attribute their Growth to their own Sagacity and Clevernefs, without any the leaft Gratitude or Obligation to the Land-owner. Thefe Sentiments, it is hoped, will every Day gain more and more Confideration with our wife and bene-- ficent Legiflature, Nobility and Gentry.

Many intelligent Perfons, of all Ranks, complain much of the Want of fome Eftablifhment in the Way of a national Bank, to fecure popular Credit, and the Kingdom from the various alarming Shocks it is fo frequently incident to, on Account of the Failure of particular Banks.

The Nobility and Gentry of Ireland, are Loyalifts and Patriots by Principle and Education: They are brave, without Arrogance; gay, without Levity; polite, without Affectation; charitable, without Oftentation; religious, without Formality; affable, without Meannefs; generous, without View ; and hofpitable, without Referve: In their Converfe, eafy; in their Dealings juft; placable in their Refentments, in their their Friendfhip fteady:- They have neither the volatile Airynefs of the Frencbman, the fated Gravity of the Spaniard; the fupicious Jealoufy of the Italian; the forbidding Haughtinefs of the German; the faturnine Gloominefs of the Flandrican, nor the fordid Parfimony of the Dutchman: In fhort, they are neither whimfical, fplenetic, fullen or capricious:-And, as for Cunning, Craft, or Diffimulation, thefe are fuch forry Guefts as never found Shelter in the generous Breaft of an Irijb Noble or Gentleman; fo that, if we confider this Country, with regard to its military Fame, conftitutional Wifdom, Learning, Arts, Improvements, and natural Advantages; and above all, the benevolent Temper, charitable and hofpitable Difpofition of its Inhabitants; it is true, we may find many of more popular Buftle and Eclat, more extenfive Commerce, greater Opulence and Pomp; but none of more general, folid, and intrinfick Worth, than Ireland.

I fhall conclude with the following Propofition to any one, who may arrogate to himfelf Praife or Wit, by ridiculing Ireland.

Si quid Novifti rectius iftis-
Candidus imperti; Si non, bis utere mecum.

淡を込59\％Think myfelf indebted to any Oc－楞半 湅发 cafion that reftores you to a Friend， T橉 \＃whom I feared you had long for－ Kavy ou gotten．But I confefs，at the fame ＊Time，that the Pleafure of hearing from you，after a Silence of feveral Years，is， in fome Meafure，damped by the Cenfure that feems to conftitute the chief Intent of your Letter．

The FARMER's CASE, $\xi_{c}$. 69 You tell me that you lately happened upon fome Papers that were entitled The FARMER's LETTERS, $\xi^{\circ} c$. which were imputed to me as the Author And, after fome Compliments on Spirit, and Genius, and fo forth, in order to palliate, as I fuppofe, what you purpofe to adminitter, you charge me, by Implication, with Crimes, whofe fmalleft Tendency I fhould abhor in myfelf, as in any Man breathing.

You fay, favourably enough for your own Difpofition, that you have long looked on the Roman-Catbolics of thefe Kingdoms as a difcountenanced and pitiable People. That you would choofe to allow to others the fame Latizude of Confcience that you like for yourfelf. That it is not a Part of Humanity to break a Reed already bruifed. That fuch a Treatment would be blameable refpecting any Individual; how much more fo, in Prejudice of a whole People. That thofe Papers are pointed with a Keennefs of Enmity, for which the Talents, which you are pleafed to afcribe, cannot fufficiently apologize. And, that you did not think me capable of exafperating Government and Power againft a Set of Men who were already under the Difpleafure and Depreffion of the Law.

Thefe, my dear Friend, are home and heavy Accufations, however tempered by Expreffions of Kindnefs and Affection from the Man whom $\pm$ fincerely love and refpect.
But, if I know any-thing of myfelf, the Quality, called Ill-nature, is not my Characteriftic. I would not exchange one Grain of Good-heart for all the Wit of a $C=d$ or Comprehenfion of a $P$-tt, independent of their Virtue. And Imay fay, with great Truth, that an Excefs ceis of Humanity hath occafioned all the Miffortunes and Diftrefles of my Life.

I moft folemnly affure you, that when I wrote thofe Letters I was in perfect Love and Charity with every Roman Catbolic in the Kingdom of Ireland. I knew that they were a depreffed People I had long pitied them as fuch. I was fenfible that the Laws, under which they fuffered, had been enacted by our Anceftors, when the Impreffions of Hoftility were frefh and warm, and when Paffion, if I may venture to fay fo, co-operated, in fome Meafure, with Utility and Reafon, I will go a Step further. I thought thofe Laws not fevere enough to fupprets them as Enemies, nor yet fufficiently favourable to attach them to us as Friends. They were not fo cruel as, wholly, to ferve for quelling ; and yet they had a Poignancy that might tend to provoke. And all this I imputed to the Refentment that was blended with the Humanity of our Anceftors. Their Humanity left to Papifts a Power of hurting, while their Refentment abridged the Inducements that might engage them to ferve us.

Believe me, Sir, I never was of a cruel or perfecuting Difpofition. I was grieved to fee the Difcouragements under which the Roman Catbolics of this Kingdom laboured, but thefe very Difcouragements made me fear them the more.

Previous to the Letters, which you cenfure fo warmly, a dangerous Rebellion had broken out in Scotland, in confequence of a French Invafion, that was headed by a Popifh Pretender to the Throne. Be pleated to remember, (if it is not too mortifying a Recollection for a free-born Briton) the Pannic into which all England was ftruck

Roman Catholics of IRELAND. 7s ftruck by a few Scotcb Vaffals, undifciplined, and unactuated by any Motive of Liberty or Virtue, fave the Virtue of being attached to their Laird or their Leader. Millions of Engli/b, at that Time, funk in the Down of a long Peace, and enervated by minifterial Corruption and Venality, feared that a Handful of Higblanders would win their Way to London, and, at one Stroke, put a Period to the boafted Strength and Grandeur of the Britifb Conftitution.

I was aftonifhed at the Apprehenfions that England was under from fo contemptible an Ar mament. But I deemed the Cafe of Ireland to be highly alarming. The Roman-Catholics, at that Time, outnumbered us Five to One. They were difarmed, it is true, but I was not equally fure that they had Reafon to be reconciled. As they were not admitted to realize their Fortune, it confifted of ready Money, and that gave ready Power. As they were not permitted to purchafe, or accept a Tenure of any valuable Length, Loyalty, perhaps, might induce them to fight for their King ; but where was the Stake to impel them to fight for a Country in which they had no Inberitance? Without an Intereft in Lands, they had little to lofe by any Change of Eftate. Without a Loan lodged with Government, they had the lefs to lofe by a Change of Conftitution.

I cannot conceive how Religion, or mere Difference of Opinion, fhould prove a real Caufe of Quarrel among Men; though it often ferves as a Word of War, or a Term whereby to give Notice for Onfet. On the contrary, I had obferved that wherever People are united by Intereff, though of a thoufand oppofite Sects, Per-

I, therefore, did not fear the Roman Catbolics, as having a different Religion, but as having an Intereft that was different from the Intereft of Proteftants. Were they a Compound of all the Follies, Abfurdities, and Contradictions that ever were generated by Monfter-bearing Superftition, had their Intereft bound them to us, I thould not have feared their Fealty.

But this was not the Cafe. The Frencb Invafion of Great Britain was headed by a Perfon who was, by Birth, Education, Principle, and Intereft, an Enemy to the Freedom and Rights of a Conftitution that was eftablifhed on the Difpoffeffion of his Anceftors; and he was, confequently, an Enemy to the general Change of Privilege and Property, that enfued on the faid Eftablifhment. The faid Change, as we all know, was to the Difadvantage of Roman Catholics. Had the Invader prevailed, a Change would again have enfued, in their Favour. Men naturally wifh Succefs to an Event from whence they propofe Benefit; and it is as natural for them to act conformable to thofe Wifhes.

Had Roman Catbolics been poffeffed of an unreftrained Property, along with the other Liberties, Bleffings, and Enjoyments, which they derived, in common with us, from the Eftablifhment at the Revolution, no fpiritual or temporal Power on Earth could have tempted them to permit, much lefs to wifh, a Change of a Conftitation whofe Equal they could not find upon Earth.

But as this was very far from being the Fact, I feared that Intereft might prove an Incentive to Defire; and Defire equally prove an Incentive to Action; and, I am not afhamed to confefs, that my Expectations were greatly, though happily, difappointed, by the Steadinefs of their peaceful and loyal Demeanour on that trying Occafion.

Believe me, my Friend, at the Time that I wrote thofe Papers, which have given you fo much Offence, I looked upon the Papifs of this Kingdom, by the Patronage of France and Spain, by their Numbers, by their Weath, and by their Union with each other, to be vattly fupe. rior to Irifh Protefants, in Power ; and my Spirit of Oppofition rofe, in Proportion to my Idea of their Ability. But neither then, b-fore, nor fince, did I ever mean to excite any Action, or Intention, againft the Weak, or the Oppreffed, the Fallen, or the Afflicted.

When Brutus unfheathed the reluctant Sword of Freedom againft his Friend, Humanity muft fuppofe that his Heart was wrung with Compunction, while his Country enjoined and impelled the Blow.

But further, Sir, there is a very wide Difference between a Popijb Regency and a Popibb People. The whole Intent and Virulence, as you call it, of my Papers, is pointed and levelled againft the One, but not a Syllable uttered, from End to End, againft the Otber. A Popi/b Regency, in Temporals alike as in Spirituals, I held to be, by Principle, an arbitrary and oppreffive Government; but I' held a Popiff People to be, of all People, the moft amenable and fubmiffive to Rulers, whatever the Form or Nature of that State may be, under which they fhall happen to be fubjected. And, on this very Account, I dreaded them the more, fhould they become paffive Inftruments in the Hand of a Papal Dictator.

74 The FARMER's CASE of the

To apply a fure Teft to the Propriety, or Impropriety, of my Apprehenfions, at the Period when I wrote the Farmer's Letters, let us fuppofe that no one of the Penal Laws, which were inftituted during the Reign of her Majefty Queen Anne, had yet paffed into Form, but that Matters had remained in the fame Situation, in which the Monarch, of bumane, as well as glorious Memory, had left this unhappy People. Well, what would have been the Confequence? Would Papifs, in that Cafe, have been lefs amenable to the Government, by which they had been favoured, fupported, and cherifhed? Would they have been the forwarder to bring Damage and Deftruction on a Country, becaufe their own Intereft was connected therewith, and the Fortunes of their Pofterity depofited therein? Would they have been the readier to attempt the Overthrow of our beneficent Conftitution, becaufe they enjoyed the Privileges and Advantages thereof? No, Sir, no. The Abfurdity of the Suppofition is inclufive of the Anfwer. Had this been the Cafe, the Far mer's Letters would not have exifted to have caufed the Renewal of our Acquaintance.

I have read and noted many Inftances, in free States and Commonwealths, where Liberty, when fermented into Licentioufne/s, hath occafioned many partial Struggles for Power, many Broils and Factions, and much Difturbance to the Community. But very few are the Inflances of the Infurrection of any People, who have not been goaded thereto by Severity and Oppreffion. The inoffenfive Stag grows formidable when at Bay:

Roman Catholics of IRELAND.

Bay. The Worm turneth not, till it receiveth 2 Crufh.

I forget the Book, though I remember the Paffage, where a Prince demanded of his favourite Minitter, what he fhould do with a Number of the Commons and Nobility, whom he had fuppreffed and taken Captive in the Act of Rebellion? The Minifter anfwered, Put them, and their Adberents, inftantly to Deatb. No, replied the Prince, that were an Act of fuch Bloodfhed and Barbarity, as neither Fear nor Revenge fhall perfuade me to perpetrate. Then, grant them all free Pardon, rejoined the Minifter. How! faid the Prince, muft Rebellion go altogether unpunifhed? There is no Medium that can affure your Safety, anfwered the Minifter ; you muft either pull this Party wholly up by the Root, fo as to leave no Fibre from whence future Enmity may grow; or elfe, you muft change that Enmity into FriendMhip, by binding their Gratitude to your Perfon and Intereft, with the kindlieft of all Connections, that of your Goodnefs and Favour. A partial Punifoment will be too little for your Safety ; a partial Pardon weill not be enough. You muft either wholly annihilate their Power, by their Death; or derive Strength to yourfelf, from that Power, by their Friend/bip.

By difarming our Enemies, the utmot we can hope, is, to render them impotent. The Diminution of their Power adds nothing to our owe. Repentance is never fo permanent or fincere, as when preceded by Pardon ; and Favour is, as the polar Attracion, to Inclination. Is there a Man whofe Love and Gratitude you defire to engage? Common Senfe will direct you to do him a Benefit. Would you bind him

It is, by no means, my Intention to arraign either the Wifdom or good Policy of our Forefathers. But all Men aré, in fome Degree, fallible, as well in the congregate, as in the individual; and the Shrewd may err as much, by over-reaching their Aim, as the Ignorant, by falling fhort, or deviating from it.
But, had a hundred Pitts, and a hundred Ce cils, compofed the Senate of our Anceftors, at the Time that thofe Penal Later were enacted; had thofe Laws been ever fo wife and fo juft, fo wholefome and neceffary, and well fuited to the Seafon; is that a Reafon that they fhould continue fo to the End of Time? In a World where nothing is permanent; where Modes, Manners, Principles, and Practice are at a Flux ; where Life is uncertain, and all it contains changeable; Nature and Reafon will conform to Situation and Circumfance; and where Caufes have ceafed, in any Degree, the Confequences ought to ceare in the fame Proportion.

It is not now with Rome as it was in the Days when Princes held her. Steed, and Emperors her Stirrup. The Kings of the Earth have, pretty clearly, refumed her Ufurpations and Acquifitions of temporal Dominion. It is not now, as it was when fhe cried Peace! and it became Peace; or when the Breath of her Mandate kindled the Nations to Battle. Even his Holiness is, now, but a poor limited Prince, pent up within his little Italian Demefne. If fome few ftill acknowledge to hold of his Authority, it is a Homage of Words, and not of Facts; they will not acknowledge to hold of his Power.

He is reftored to the quiet and unenvied Pofferfion of all the Lordfhip and Intereft he can acquire in Heaven. But the Sceptre, even of his fpiritual Dominion upon Earth, is, of late, as I take it, moft wonderfully fhortened.

Matters are much altered with the ecclefiantical World, even fince I wrote the Letters that have roufed your Spleen. Whether it be through a Decline of the Romi/b Religion, in particular; or, poffibly, through a Decline of all Religion, in general ; the pontifical andepifcopal Dictatorfhip and Authority are wofully fallen, from the Chair of Infallibility, where they had been feated by Opinion. The Sons of the mott bigotted Anceftors do now perceive, that Piety and Immorality are not rightly confiftent. And even the vulgar and ignorant, among the Roman Laity, would grumble at departing from an Inch of their Property, though the Prieft fhould advife, and the Pope, himfelf, thould enjoin it.

But, Sir, if the Change of Times, and Principles, Situation, and Circumftances; if the Change of every Caufe that produced thofe penal Laws, have not availed for a Change of Confequences; for fome Mitigation or Abatement of their Rigour, toward thefe my unhappy Brethren, the Roman Catbolics of Ireland: If no Argument, I fay, that is taken from Changes, may avail for the Purpofe, I will take one from Permanence and Duration itfelf, that fhall ftrike Light and Conviction to the Eye of every Beholder; that Power may gainfay, but cannot refute; that Malevolence may dijpute, but never can anfwer.

About fix Generations have now paffed away, according to the Rates of Purchafe and Eftimate of the Life of Man, fince thefe People have offended in Word or in Deed. No Riotings have been heard in their Houfes, no Complainings in their Streets; they have been filent and harmlefs as Sheep before their Sheerers. Our Parties, Factions, and Infurrections, as they are merrily ftiled in England, have been all among ourfelves; this People were neither Actors nor Partakers therein. They bave offered themfelves to our Fleets, and to our Armies; to tend our Perfons, to till our Grounds, to hew our Wood, and to draw our Water. Where we admit them to fight for us, they have ever proved valiant; where we admit them to ferve us, they are found loving, obfervant, and faithful. Temptations have come to their Doors and called them forth; the Contagion of Rebellion hath broken out among their Neighbours; they have yet remained quiet, and continued untainted; ftill loyal to their Sovereign, amenable to Government, and fubmiffive to Law, through a long and trying Succeffion of about feventy Years, they have fcarce appeared to repine in the midft of their Calamities.

When I look back on the querulous and reftlefs Nature of Man: When I trace the human Propenfities through the Records of Ages and Nations: In all the Hiftories of thofe States who had leaft Caufe of Complaint: Throughout the Commonwealths of Afia Minor, the Arcbipelago, the Grecian Continent, Italy, the Iflands of the Mediterranean, &c. where the RIGHTS OF NATURE, under Forms of various Inftitution, were ASSERTEDBY LIBERTY AND GUARDED BY LAW: Where the ASSURANCE OF PROPERTY gave moft REASON FOR CONTENT: I can find but few Inftances of any People who, through fuch a Length of Time, have continued firm and unShaken, in an uninterrupted Loyalty and Submiffion to Government.

What then, do we look for furcher? What Proofs do ye yet require, of Peacefulnefs and Attachment at the Hands of thefe our Brethren ? Is no Period to be put to their State of Probation? Muft they for ever keep out upon Quarantine, without Harbour or Hopes of Reft or Reconciliation? That were hard, indeed.
If it is Revenge that we feek, they have, already, fuffered enough, not for their own Faults, but for the Hottility of their Forefathers. If we feek our Safety, alone; let us chace them, at once, from Country and Community; or put an End to our domefic Fears, by giving them Caufe to defend us.

Indeed, Sir, neither common Senfe, nor Senfe of any Kind, can poffibly fuppofe, That Acts of Kindnefs which have been, from the Beginning of the World, the Cement of Friendihip to all other People, fhould prove the reverfe to thefe People alone.

Had they been to us, as the Swallow, in Autumn, who forfakes all Connections on the Approach of Inclemency, I fhould never have pleaded for any Confidence in them. But a People, who, through a Winter of feventy Years Continuance, have never failed, or forfaken, or given us Caufe of Offence, furely merit fome Confideration, fome grateful and chearing Ray to warm them to a Senfe that Proteffants are not, by Choice, of a cruel, unforgiving, and malevolent Nature.

Laftly, Sir, as I know you to be a Gentleman of a communicative Difpofition, and that you were, formerly, fond of exhibiting the Sentiments of fome of your triends; fhould you impart this Letter to any of your popifh Acquaintance, I Louvt they might be apt to give me more Toanks than I am confcious I deferve. It is, thaefore, but commonly honeft, to advertife you, and them, that while I write in the Favour of Papifs, the Intereft of Protefants is never out of my Eyc.

When I thought your Favourites moft formidable, I fhewed I did not fear them; and now, that I think them impetent, let them not think I flatter.

What I have lithelto hinted is but a narrow opening to the Concerns and Interefts of an unhappy Country, whereof I have the Misfortune to be a helplefs, though loving, Member. To promote the Advantage of Freland, in any Refpect, would be, to me, the cardinal Point of the whole Compars of my Ambition; and a. fubfequent Letter may fhew how far my Obfervations relate to the Decline, or Profperity, of my Country, whenever you confer the Pleafure of an Anfwer on,

Dear SIR,

Your truly affectionate, &c:
