COLLECTION

16 15 1900

Of FORTY EIGHT

Original Patriot TOASTS,

Drank at a select Assembly of Free-holders at Corke, the First of this Inst. January, 1754.

DEDICATION ON DEDICATION:

0 R,

A Second EDITION of a.

DEDICATION

To his GRACE the

- of \mathcal{D} -

WHEREIN

Some curious ANECDOTES are brought to Light. Very neceffary to be known at this Time.

LONDON:

Printed for J. SWAN, facing Northumberland-House in the Strand, 1753.

To his GRACE the

-, 80.

MUST

---- of D---

requeit, and in parfumer of m with very great pains an

My Lord,

(1) F your Grace will condefcend to perufe the following Sheets, you will not be furprized, nor, I hope, offended at myPrefumption in dedicating them to you; with the Facts therein related; of the Conjectures which I have hazarded, your Grace must naturally be well acquainted, and must certainly be a good Judge. And I do very willingly stake my Reputation, for Veracity and Candour, on the Opinion which you may be pleafed to give of them.

retch of the breight

(2) I HAVE not the Honour of being known to your Grace; and I have taken every Precaution I could think of, to prevent my being known to the Publick. For altho' I have not advanced one Fact, which is not of publick Notoriety; altho' no private Character can be affected by any Thing I have related; tho' I am perfuaded no one Perfon, mentioned in these Papers, will be offended at what I have faid of him; yet, as I have spoken, and I could not help fpeaking, of Faction, with fome Warmth, I may possibly have given Offence to those, who have not been confiderable enough to find a Place in this Hiftory; to the lower Tools, who are generally more jealous of the Honour of their Masters, and of the Reputation of their Party, than they are of their own; to Men, whole Friendship is of no Avail, and yet whose Enmity is dangerous.

I am, Sir, Sec.

HIBERNICUS

DEDICATION

ON

DEDICATION.

is is of that is build spin 20 a gi

(1) F your G—will condefcend to perufe the following fheets, you will, perhaps, be furprized, but, I hope, not offended at my prefumption in dedicating them to you, with the facts therein related. Of the conjectures, which I have hazarded, your G— muft naturally be well acquainted; and you muft certainly be a good judge of what you are naturally well acquainted of. And I do willingly ftake my reputation for veracity and candour, on the opinion which you may be pleafed to give, of the conjectures which I have hazarded.

(2) Happy would it indeed be for your G----, if I had not the honour of being perfonally known to you; but, for many prudential reasons, I have most industriously concealed my being the author of this piece; and having never difcover'd myfelf, even to your G ----, as fuch, in any other manner, than by fending you a copy, bound in Turkey, you may, with a good confcience, affirm, that you are as ignorant of it as the reft of the world; for having advanced fundry facts, for which there is not the leaft ground, and, by that means, affected many innocent characters, great offence will furely follow; and as it was necessary for me to speak of Faction with some warmth, to be fure, it will not be forgot, by your G ----, and my opponents, that a faction, and a low one too, is what we have chiefly to rely upon : And it may also be infinuated, that those opponents, whom I have dignified with the name of a faction, are, really, the strength of the nation, and a fet of men, who have

(3) I MUST, therefore, be excufed, if I never own myfelf the Author of this Hiftory; if I fhould even (were there Occafion) deny that I know any Thing of it; this, my Lord, is the only Falfhood which I think I fhall ever be guilty of, but it is of that Kind of Falfhood which the Cafuifts call officious, and which they tell us may fometimes be ufed, as when the Queftioner has no Right to make the Queftion, — or when, by declaring the Fact, we endanger another Perfon's, much more one's own, Life or Reputation.

(4) IF I, therefore, chuse to keep myself concealed even from your Grace, it is not from Diffidence of your Grace's Honour or Humanity, nor from any Fear that your Grace might act from the Precedent of others, and give up the Book I should prefent you with, as an uncontroulable Evidence of my being its Author, should your Grace be folicited fo to do. So far am I from any fuch Fear, that if your Grace requires it _____ if you have any Curiofity of feeing the Author of those Sheets, he will present a Copy of them in the Company and Prefence of any Perfon or Perfons, whom your Grace is pleafed to honour with Admittance to your Prefence. But, befides the Reafon already mentioned, I would willingly avoid giving your Grace any Uneafinefs, _____any Occasion for your Enemies to fuggeft, that you were of a Party with the Author, in exposing their Misconduct and the low Artifices of their Faction.

(5) I HOPE your Grace will not be offended that I have fuppofed you have fome Enemies. The beft of Men cannot avoid having fome. The Patriot will be hated by the Factious. The Minister by the Rival of his Power. The have always been invariably attached to his Majefty's perfon and government, and have, for many years, conducted the bufinefs of that country, greatly to their own honour, with peace and contentment at home, and entirely to the fatisfaction of the administration here.

(3) I muft, therefore, be excused, if I never own myself the author of this history, if I should even tell lies, and deny that I know any thing of it; these kind of lies are allowed by all political casuists, when speaking the truth might subject our perfons to a drubbing, or our reputation for courage, to an impeachment.

(4) Your G---- acuteness will easily perceive, that my thus concealing myself, is not from any diffidence of your honour, or humanity; but from a manifest intention to serve you, by fafely throwing, from behind a door, an heap of dirt, at your enemies; and if your G---- should hereaster be able to form a guess, who it is that has done you this notable piece of service, I flatter myself that an application for a pauvre petite pension, will not be unfavourably received.

(5) But pray, my L ----, be not offended, that I here give it under my hand that you have enemies in Ireland. - Enemies to your perfon, it is on all hands agreed, you can have none; and if there fhould be too many to your government, who can be so unreasonable, or so ignorant, to impute it to any mifconduct of your G----? Is it in your power to reduce your f --- s brows about half an inch lower than nature has placed them? or can you be always at his elbow to prevent him from raifing them an inch higher than that fame bountiful nature intended ? - Would he believe you, should you assure him, as you might do with truth, that there is in poor Ireland almost as high blood as his lordship's? - or, if you should recommend it to him, either when he speaks, or is spoken to, to act en ministre, rather than en maitre, would he liften The Governor by those who are turned out of Place. Enemies you must, my Lord, have many, because you don't deserve to have one. But if the Word, Enemy, should found too harsh in your Grace's Ears, yet must you, my Lord, acknowledge, that, not all your Regard for the true Interest of Ireland, not all the Impartiality of your Government, not your Moderation in the Exercise of your Power, could secure you, nor can, indeed, secure an Angel, from an Opposition, which is always the more violent in Proportion as it is unjust.

(6) How unexpected was, indeed, the laft Opposition in Ireland? Your Grace had been received, by all Degrees and Ranks of Men, with all the Marks of Joy and Gratitude, which could be manifested by Men, who had experienced the Goodness and Mildness of your former Adminiftration, and who had fo long regretted your Abfence. Whatever your Grace propofed, was supposed to be for the Good of Ireland. The Jobs intended to be perpetrated in Elections were set aside. The Design of bringing in a Bill for the Regulation of the Year; which was, in fome Degree, afferting the independency of Ireland, was voluntarily dropp'd. The immaterial Alteration made in the Money Bills was connived at. To your Grace's Interpolition do the Citizens of Dublin owe the Prefervation of the Navigation of their River. Until, when all Bufinefs feemed to be over, ----- when, in the Apprehenfion of fome, your Grace had gotten too much of the Affections of the People, especially of the Citizens of Dublin, more than any of your Predeceffors fince your last Residence amongst them, then Envy began to hifs, and Malice to fhew it's dissign, either when he fraks, or is froken to, so ad en minifire, rather than en mairre, would he volatility of his parts, or the petulancy of his tongue? - In fine, can you furnish him with those two qualifications, fo necessary to one in his station, Prudence and Diferetion? - Again, can you diveft your * * * * of his indelible Character, or reconcile your Subjects to the tyranny of a mean Ecclefiaftick, the fon of an obfcure nonjuring Banker ? - Can you ftop the mouths of men from reflecting on his deteftable vices, or on his fufpected principles ? - or, to fum up all, will the high born, and not lefs high-fpirited, nobility, and proteftant gentry of that kingdom, always ready to draw their fwords for, and to devote their lives and fortunes to, the fervice of his majefty, and his illustrious family, tamely look on, while all employments, places, and preferments, civil, military, and ecclefiaftical, are diffributed among a fet of minions or pathicks, or according to the wretched caprice of two fuch pick'd and chofen ministers of state? - Let not, therefore, the word Enemy found harfh in your grave ears; for I doubt, my L-, not all that innate goodness and fweetness of disposition, which so illustriously shew'd itself, while you formerly filled that high station; not all your moderation, confummate prudence, and extreme caution, I had almost faid timidity, will, as you are now befet, fecure you, or wou'd fecure an angel, from peevifh difputes and hoftile opposition, which have always been, and ever will be, ftrong, in proportion to the provocation given.

(6) How unexpected, indeed, was your difappointmentin Ireland last session? YourG-had been received by all degrees and ranks of men, with all the marks of joy and gratitude, which cou'd be manifested by men who had experienced the goodness and mildness of your former administration; and who had fo long regretted your absence : No jobs, nor defigns of disagreeable changes, B were

Teeth. — Then was your Reputation for Power to fuffer, by fhewing to the Citizens, that you were not able to prevent the paffing the Petition for the Bridge. _____ Then were all the unpopular Acts pass'd unanimously, by themfelves, laid to your Grace's Charge ----- Then was a Sacrifice to be made to their Refentment weighed to make the cuftomary Address at the End of a Seffion of as little Compliment to your Grace as poffible _____ Then were all the Arts to be used, to prevent the People from openly declaring on the Side of their Governor ----- Or paying proper Marks of refpect to your Grace, and to Lord George, for your Grace's Regard to the Citizens of Dublin, and for his Lordship's open Protection of them.

werehed capace of any far ickel and cheren

France found instill in your go a sets into f doubs, juny factor, motevill that inorts goodness and (weenels of all policion, which is illuftricedy Person While you formarly filed has high ficitions nos elligatu moderation ditminute hit tim lief, will as you are not be found. vorgiese woll'd feenre un angel, from peevilit die purestand holisis opposition, which have a aver beek wand even will be, firong, in proparties to

I lifes surverfield, indeed, was your differpointies of the set of the full for the the best anthinimba motorol unit lo mortilier Burgelenhore o as and who had to long regrated your ablence : the ista nor defens of differenties changes, received by all deerees and ranks of men. with D'Des deider sbutiers here we To and (7) SUCH be manifelled by that who had experienced the Territorian given

· STOM

were fuspected; and fuch incidents in bufinefs, as had the least tendency to interrupt the quiet of the feffion, fuch as the ftile bill, or even an alter'd. money bill, were connived at, and pafs'd fub filentio : half the nobility and gentry of the kingdom were refused the convenience of a bridge over the Liffey, and the queftion dropp'd, for fear of offending the city of Dublin, and of leffening that popularity which was thought fo neceffary to the grand minifterial scheme: grand, indeed! for when, at length, it was look'd upon to be ripe for execution, it came out to import no lefs than a total change in the administration of the government of the kingdom. The power of the house of commons had been found troublefome and dangerous, that of the fpeaker, exorbitant; he was to be peered, and penfion'd; and a rattle-beaded, insignificant concomb to be put into his place. Then was the plan formed for the council, forfooth, composed of an English a b, qualified as aforefaid, and a fupercilious boy, intoxicated with pride, and giddy with power, to govern two millions of people without controul; and the parliament, a la mode de Paris, to be called only to re-gifter their wife edicts. Then, indeed, did envy begin to hifs, that is, the just indignation of people, of all ranks, began to rife; then was that opposition formed, which the whole power of your court, with all the favours it could beftow, or promise, or all the menaces it could vainly utter, was not able to withftand. - Then the fleady, untainted virtue of the speaker, which had diftinguished him through a long course of business and of years, was univerfally acknowledged and appealed to .- Then, to open your G-'s eyes, was a facrifice made, and a merciful one too, to the refentment of an injured and a pillaged people. ---Then were the unpopular, not to fay offenfive, behaviour, and arbitrary defigns, of your two ministers, exposed to the world, by that seafonable B 2

(7) SUCH Arts might fucceed in Affemblies, who we may suppose to be under Direction - In Affemblies, where, from meer Length of Time, Faction must have found Opportunity to fow it's Tares, or to strengthen itself --- In Assemblies, where private Gratitude for a Permission to enjoy their own Right, or a Licence to poffess the Rights of others, may unite the Members more intimately to one Man, than their Duty and Obligation can bind them to the Publick. But cannot ever prevail amongst an unbiass'd ----- adjudging ----- a free People; and the extraordinary-the unprecedented Manner, in which the Free-Citizens of Dublin welcomed and took Leave of your Grace, will be an everlafting Testimony, that your former, as well as your last, Administration, in Ireland, was truly popular. BODINES AN

(8) IT is not, I hope, disagreeable to your Grace, that I should mention your Grace's Popularity in Ireland ; your Grace cannot be supposed to be infenfible to that Pleafure, which arifes in a benevolent Bosom, at the Returns of Gratitude from an obliged and respected People. True it is, my Lord, that this Love for a People may fometimes be feigned ---- may be put on to ferve the base Ends of Faction or Corruption. But where no fuch End appears, ---- when Princes and Governors, who propose nothing but the Good of the People, will condescend to become popular, they can have no other View, no other Motive, but the gratifying their own natural Sentiment of Affection to the People, and their as natural Joy of meeting with grateful Returns. If fuch a Defire of Popularity does not constitute Merit, I do not know in what Merit confifts. And if this Defire of being efteemed and able addrefs to his majefty, which L G, left it fhould be fuggefted that he was one of the perfons pointed at, with more prudence than fpirit, thought proper to fecond. — Then juft acknowledgments were made to a former governor, of whom the nation had no realon to complain. — And then, in the laft addrefs to your G—, compliments to your f^{} , i. e. your administration, were forborn, because they were not judged to be due to him.

CHARTER CO

in chancism

(7) Such will ever be the conduct in popular affemblies, which are not under an undue direction and influence ; - of affemblies composed of perfons of the highest rank, family, fortune, and understanding, and therefore incapable of being biaffed by private intereft, imposed on by fmiles, or frighten'd by haughtinefs, or infolence; -- of affemblies, endued with a fpirit, equally difpofed to gratitude, for favours received ; and to refentment for injuries offered. - And permit me to fay, my L-, that there can't be a ftronger proof of the difference between your former and prefent administration, than the honourable and joyful reception you met with at your last arrival in Dublin, and the extraordinary coolnefs of the commons, at their taking leave of you. - Not to mention the unprecedented manner, in which faint compliments were follicited, and extorted from the citizens of Dublin, in order to keep up the miferable appearance of popularity.

(8) It is not, I hope, difagreeable to your G that I fhould mention your G— popularity in Ireland; you cannot be infenfible to that pleafure which popularity administers to an ambitious mind, with an obliged and respected people. — True it is, my L—, that this love for a people may, fometimes, be, nay, frequently, has been feigned — may be put on to ferve the base ends of faction and corruption. — I am far from imputing these to your G—; but where no fuch end and beloved does not imply a Regard to the People, I do not know how it is possible for a Governor to shew it.

(9) Or this Regard for the People, I have the ftrongeft Reafon to believe your Grace has given the most unexceptionable Proofs. Not only in the open Countenance and Encouragement you have publickly given to Citizens, who, under a former Administration, were injuriously treated; but in the uninterrupted Permission they, under your Grace; have enjoyed, of profecuting their Right, without any Apprehension that their Perfeverance, in the peaceful and legal Manner in which they have hitherto proceeded, will be conftrued into Obstinacy, or their Discontent at the Infringement on their Liberties by inferior Magistrates, will be mistaken for a Disaffection to the Government.

(10) Your Grace has done for them what their most fanguine Hopes could have made them wish for. The Laws are now open for their Redrefs, and if they should not succeed there, if, by any of the Quirks and Turns of the Law, a Remedy should not be found, in the regular Manner, your Grace is, no Doubt, disposed to procure them what of Redrefs, it is in the Power of the Crown or Legislature to afford them.

that i flould mention your G-pol alaria

wind, with an obliged and reliefed of prophile

estion and chirophion. - I has far from imrismon but And

and to end .

end appears; when governors, who propofe nothing but the good of the people, condefcend to become popular, they can have no other view, no other motive, but the gratifying their own natural fentiments, by the joy which fuch popularity affords them. — If fuch a defire of popularity does not conftitute merit, I fhould be glad to know wherein merit confifts *.

(9) Of this great regard for the people, of this unbounded defire of popularity, I have the ftrongeft reafon to believe your G— has given the moft unexceptionable proofs; not only in the open countenance and encouragement you have given to me in particular, who, in a former administration, was most injuriously treated; but also by your publickly encouraging the citizens of Dublin to profecute their rights at law, however detrimental fuch profecutions were thought to be to the peace and quiet of the city, or however frivolous their complaints had been deemed by the inferior magistrates, viz. the ablest judges upon the bench.

(10) Your G— has done more for them than their most fanguine hopes could have flattered them with; you have obliged the judges again to receive their long rejected, and what had been long adjudged frivolous, complaints: But give me leave to fay, that more than this is hoped for from you; the law, we know, is point blank against them; to crown your popularity, and to testify your unalterable love to the citizens, you must take measures to have the laws altered in their favour; this they are perfwaded you are well disposed to do; this they think you will do.

(11) But

* The Reader is defired to observe the reasoning of this.

(11) But there is one Grievance, in which the prefent Laws and Conftitution of their Country cannot relieve them. I mean the Grievance of being reprefented in Parliament, by one, they have not chosen ; by one, who is fo far from being entrusted by them with the Care of their Rights and Liberties, that he is one of those, against whom they feek Redrefs, as one of the Invaders and Usurpers of those Rights, which they are defirous by all legal Methods to reclaim. How this has come to pais, is the Subject of the following Sheets, which, if I mistake not, if your Grace has all that Regard for the Happiness of the People of Ireland, which all your Actions proclaim you to be affected with, you will perufe with Attention.

(12) Bur your Grace, I am fure, will not ftop here. How much foever the Intereft and Advantage of the Citizens of Dublin may claim your Regard, you will not be lefs affected with the Misfortunes of the reft of the People of Ireland. All do not labour, like the former, under the Misfortune of having Reprefentatives in Parliament chosen for them; but all of them labour under the Misfortune of being fubject to the longest Parliament that ever subfisted, in that or any other Country. I fpeak of Subjection, and of Misfortune. Yes, my Lord, when Men are in Power for fuch a long Time, they infenfibly forget to whom they are indebted for it. They are apt to exert it to the Oppression, rather than to the Protection, of those, who have entrufted them with it. This has been the Complaint of all Ages, and of all People; this it was, which gave Occafion to our Laws, for limiting Parliaments; and for my Part, my Lord, I have

(11) But there is one grievance, from which the prefent laws and conftitution of their country cannot, I fear, relieve them; I mean the grievance of being reprefented in parliament by fir C- B-, instead of being represented by mr. L-, who is able to ferve them much better, (at leaft in my opinion) and is, indeed, pining for a feat there, and who, to qualify himfelf the better to difplay his eloquence, in that august affembly, is a weekly haranguer at the Baker's Club. Now, tho' I cannot expect that your G- shou'd exert your power to turn fir C-, who is fo firmly attached to your party, out of the house of commons, on his account; yet as the whole defign of the following fheets is to convince you that he has no right to fit there, pray, my L-, read them with attention; and not only fo, but be convinced by the arguments which they offer; otherwife I shall be apt to suspect, that all the regard for the happiness of the people of Ireland, which you profefs, is mere pretence and affectation.

(12) But the change of the law, the turning fir C-B- out of parliament, and what is ftill more, your G-'s taking the pains to read and underftand this book, which has coft me fo much labour in writing, and money in printing, is not all, with great fubmiffion, which your good friends, the citizens of Dublin, expect from your hand.-They therefore, by me, beg leave to put you in mind, that the very parliament of Ireland is grown the worfe for the wearing, if it is not really fuperannuated; in short, my L-, it has lived longer than I chufe it fhould, and therefore I expect that, to oblige me and fome other of your friends, you will put it to death ; all human things are fubject to decay. Yes, my L-, when men are in power for any confiderable time, they infenfibly forget to whom they are indebted for it; they are apt to exert it to the oppreffion, rather than to the protection, have not remarked any fuch Difference between the Temper and Difpolition of the People of Ireland, and those of our own People, as to perceive the Reason, why what has been thought falutary to us, should not be equally to to (13) IF our Laws for Septennial Parliaments be then falutary, am I not warranted to call a Privation of fuch a Law, a Misfortune to the People of Ireland? Whether or no the Government may find it's Account in the Continuation of fuch a Parliament, I shall not take upon me to decide. But, if I have conjectured right, it must be against the Interest of any Government, to rule by a Faction, rather than by the most popular Measures. To rule by a Faction, is a Compromife, it is sharing Government, with those who have no Right to it; whereas to rule by the People, is Law, is Authority. But leaving those Matters to Perfons, who are the best and most proper Judges of them, I must return to the People, to whom the Continuance of a long Parliament, tho' fuppofed never fo wife, or fo loyal, is and must always be a Misfortune; were it no more, than that it is a Veil between the King and the People; a Veil which prevents any Intercourfe or Communication.

Bearlore, by me, beg leave to put you intrind, that des very participent of Indiana is grown the manish; in (not, my L-, it has lived low eet thai I chuie it though, and therefore I expect man to this me and forne other of your friends, you ill put it to death ; all human things are fubioli to whom they are indebted for it ; they ale ape to exert it to the oppression, rather than to the probrieder the weating, if it is not really apprain-

Yes, my L .-. when men are in power

techion

(14) IF confiderate time, they mentibly forget

tection, of those who have entrusted them : This has been the complaint of all ages, and of all people; I beg your G—'s pardon, I would by no means be thought, by any thing I have faid, to infinuate that you have abused your power, or to wish that you should be deprived of the L— of I-: what I am speaking of, is the parliament; and this it was which gave occasion for our laws here to limit their duration; and permit me to fay, that what is fauce for a goose, — you know the proverb. — If, therefore, septennial parliaments are falutary here, why should they not be thought fo in I-d? For my own part, my L—, I neither know nor care, whether the government may find its account in the continuance of it, I am perswaded it is wrong to suffer it to continue, and therefore I expect you will have it diffolved.

(13) Permit me, my L-, to hazard one conjecture more, to which I beg your G- may give your whole attention : It is, and ever must be, diametrically opposite to the interest of any government, or governor, to rule by a faction, rather than by the most popular measures; to rule by a faction, is a miferable compromife; it is fharing government with those who have no Right to it; whereas, to rule by a fair and unbiaffed majority in parliament, is law, is authority : In the former cafe, wretches must be corrupted, to do, what they ought not; in the latter, virtue will infallibly prevail upon them to do what they ought. But leaving these matters to your G-'s profound confideration, who must, 'ere this, be experimentally fenfible of the truth of them, I muft return to the people, to whom the continuance of a long parliament, tho' never fo wife, fo virtuous, and fo loyal, is, and always must be, a misfortune, were it no more, than that it is a veil between the king and the people, a veil which prevents any intercourse or communication.

C 2

(14) For

(14) IF a Parliament is fuppofed, in their Addreffes and Laws, to fpeak the Senfe of their Conftituents, it is because they are supposed to know them; it is because they are supposed to have had the fame Sentiments with the People, or at least to have professed the fame, at a late Election. But when the Representatives have outlived (as many of the Irifb Representatives have) the whole Body of their Electors, in fome Places, and in most of them, the Majority, how can their Addreffes be conftrued to reprefent the true Meaning of the prefent People? Or, indeed, how can they themfelves be faid to reprefent the People, who were, perhaps, unborn, or, at leaft, had no Right or Share in the Election, by which they obtained their Seats? in(rg) Permit me, niver- solutioned une conjetwhich which a day of a start and a start which be dire-internatily opposites and international of any provern-artenia or ignorinos, to the opposite, rather then by she tradigorinos, to the opposite by a fachion, inte miteratile componenting at is desting sti an riei Cenienal aler plash diwdainiarutos window Lat a whomais and defined and de in parliaments is deve is authority (if a) he incase eate, weichen mußt heuromappein ader Mel their ought not; in the inster, virtue will infallibit prevail upon their roads what the ought But leaving thefe matters to your G--Bue leuring these manders to the this, in the mentally feitible of the truth of them.

return to the people, 'to whom the contrat Q readen the king and die propile, a woil which pro-

at is and siways muß be, a minter I HOPE,

(14) For if a parliament is fupposed in their addreffes and laws to fpeak the fenfe of their conftituents, it is, because they are supposed to know them; it is, because they are supposed to have had the fame fentiments with the people, or, at least, to have profes'd the fame, at a late election; for I must observe to your G-, that it is only at elections, that we can possibly learn the fentiments of our conftituents: Now, if any peftilential diftemper fhould fuddenly carry off those who elected me, how can my address be conftrued to represent the true meaning of the present people; it may, indeed, represent the true meaning of the dead; but I believe your G- will eafily admit, that no perfon is fent to parliament to reprefent the dead. This must furely be acknowledged to be a very great grievance; and, I confeis, a grievance not eafily to be remedied; and yet, if your G- will permit me to hazard one other conjecture, I think I can folve the difficulty, and, I flatter myfelf, to the fatisfaction of every commoner in Britain and Ireland; my fcheme is this, that upon the death of any freeholder, or burgels, the reprefentative shall be fent back to his county or borough, to ftand a new election; or, if that should be thought liable to objection, why should not the member himfelf be put to death, when he hath outlived all, or the majority of, his conftituents; for he may be supposed, in that case, to be superannuated, as well as the parliament.

Veur molt burnible

And dedicat Sarah

A. BRTPH.

(15) I hope,

(15) I HOPE, my Lord, that what I here fay, cannot be mifconftrued into any Reflection on, orany Difrespect to, any of the worthy Gentlemen, who now compose the Representative Body of the People of Ireland; I declare I have no fuch Thoughts; on the contrary, I am fully perfuaded that most of them would regain their Seats, were there a Diffolution; I am perfuaded the Majority of them would be glad of an Opportunity of trying the Favour of their Electors; I am perfuaded fome of them are impatient of flewing to the World, and of being fatisfied themfelves, that they are most popular in their respective Countries. This I am certain of, that the People are defirous of shewing their Respect and Gratitude to those, who have used their Power, as not abufing it; of giving unequivocal Proofs of their Zeal and Affection to his Majefty, by the Choice of fuch Reprefentatives, as were most dutiful and affectionate to him. And I am as certain, that the Business of Government would be better carried on, by Men, who come free and uninfluenced, and who owe their Seats to new Marks of Affection from the People, than it can be, by Men, who have no other Tye with their fuppofed Conftituents, than what they have, one with another, as being Fellow Subjects, and Fellow Proouthyed all. testants. for he may be fuppofed, in that cale

I am, with the greatest Respect,

(IF) I hope

My LORD, Your most bumble And obedient Servant,

A, BRITON.

(15) I hope, my L-, that what I here fay cannot be misconstrued into any reflection on, or any difrespect to, any of the worthy gentlemen who now compose the representative body of the people of Ireland; I declare I have no fuch thoughts; on the contrary, I am fully perfwaded that there are very few among them, who would not regain their feats upon a new election : I have very great doubts, upon fecond thoughts, whether a diffolution could answer any other purpose, except putting the gentlemen to very great expence, and making the people idle, who are, already, but too much inclined to be fo; and I may farther venture to affure your G-, that that country never had, nor ever can have, a reprefentative of greater loyalty, honour, and integrity, than the prefent; fuch a reprefentative will ever deferve, and, therefore, may be always fure to have, the protection of our most gracious fovereign, whole glory, and whole delight, it hath ever been to reign over a happy and free people, and whole favour, I truft, they will never forfeit, though it should please God, in mercy to the people of these kingdoms, and indulgence of their ardent wishes and earnest prayers, to continue his majefty's life for many, many years yet to come.

I am, Stc.

MDICATION of the Ratery of Recombers. My allow at a read avail of a sed Gentled and a set fented, in a fate allorithmans West, Musel, 970 and to Steamburn what and a

ADVERTISEMENTS.

LONDON, July 8th, 1753. In a few Days will be published,

THE HARLEQUINS. A Comedy. After the Manner of the Teatre Italien. As it is now acting, with great Applause, by a Company of Gentlemen, for the Entertainment of their Friends, at the Great Room in Dromcondra.

Just published,

fiver any other purpole,

isheirisven fi

HIBERNIA PACATA: or, a Narrative of the Affairs of Ireland, from the famous Battle of Clontarf, where Brian Boirom defeated the Norwegians, till the Settlement under Henry II. Written originally in Irifb, and now first tranflated by Father Neri of Tuam; and adorned with Notes by feveral Hands.

Lately published,

HONESTY the best POLICY: or, the Hiftory of ROGER. The feventh Edition. Wherein the Characters and Passages, omitted by the Editor of the former Editions, are reftored. To which is prefixed, A Letter from the Author to the Printer.

ALSO,

A VINDICATION of the R—t H—e and H—e L—ds and Gentlemen, who have been basely aspersed, and fcandalously mis-represented, in a late anonimous Work, intitled, The History of ROGER. By a Lover of Truth.