REPORT.

THE Committee, for the establishment of a Catholic University in Ireland, cannot suffer this occasion to pass without again directing the attention of Catholics to the work in which they are engaged.

With the successor of St. Peter, to whom the superintendence and feeding of the entire flock of Jesus Christ has been committed, originated the idea of erecting an University in this country, as the best and most effectual means of preserving the faith from the peculiar dangers which now beset it in every part of Christendom.

Looking out from the watch-tower of Israel, the Supreme Pontiff, guided by light from above, perceived that, although the Church had its numerous Universities in other countries, it had not one upon that vast territory, extending through a large portion of the old and new world, where the English language is spoken as the mother tongue. To remedy this deficiency, to leave no coast of the spiritual kingdom unguarded, or any of those committed to his care without a barrier to stay the wide spread of heresy and error, the Holy Father suggested the founding of a Catholic University, and honoured ever-faithful Ireland, as he always delights to do, by selecting it as the ground whereon this new defence of the ancient faith should be raised.

The Irish Hierarchy, assembled in council, at Thurles, with that reverence and obedience towards the Holy See which they have ever manifested, warmly adopted the project, and immediately appointed a Committee of Archbishops and Bishops, with whom Priests and Laymen have been associated, to carry it into effect.

The voice of the Supreme Pastor, speaking as one having authority, was heard and obeyed, not only by the Prelates of this land, but by the whole body of the newly-established Hierarchy in England, presided over by a Cardinal Prince of the Church; by the thirty-two Bishops at the other side of the Atlantic, from the most venerable and learned the Archbishop of Baltimore and Apostolic Delegate of the Holy See, down to the Bishop of Messina, and Vicar Apostolic of the Indian territory, east of the Rocky Mountains; by the Archbishop of Halifax, in Nova Scotia; by his Suffragans, and other Bishops, in the British Colonies of North America. In one word, by every Archbishop and Bishop, without a single exception, in that portion of the Christian world where the English language prevails. These Prelates were not especially invited to approve the project, yet so potent is the voice of Rome, that its echoes are caught up by both hemispheres, and its suggestions and instructions received and respected to the uttermost ends of the earth.

The zeal displayed by the Bishops in America, in forwarding this work is truly noble and generous. Assembled in synod, at Baltimore, they commissioned the presiding Prelate to convey to His Grace, the Archbishop of Dublin, the expression of their sympathy with the Irish Hierarchy in their efforts to found a Catholic University. "We rejoice," say the Fathers of the council, "that the Irish Bishops, under the guidance of Your Grace, and the encouraging patronage of the Holy See, are determined to guard the youth of their country against the dangers inherent in the system of mixed education: and notwithstanding the many difficulties which must be encountered

“ in the great undertaking, we trust, in the good Providence
“ of God, that they will succeed in establishing a Catholic Uni“ versity. Our prayers shall be offered to the Father of Lights,
“ that He may crown your efforts and those of your colleagues,
“ and enable you to preserve the youth and people of your charge
“ from the seductions of a false philosophy, and the contami“ nation of destructive errors. The Faith transmitted from the “ days of your great apostle is their most precious inheritance,
“ as it is their most distinguishing characteristic. May it shine
“ with undiminished lustre, and continue to be a beacon-light
“ to direct the wandering and tempest-tost children of error to “ the haven of salvation.”

The allusion to the founding of an Irish University by the Bishops in the sister island, on this year, is so perfectly characterized by the spirit of brotherly love, and so Catholic in tone, that it is hard to refrain from quoting in full.

“ We cannot,” say the Fathers of Oscott, “ leave the subject of “ Education, without alluding to the noble effort that is being “ made by our venerable and beloved brethren, the Bishops of “ Ireland, for the establishment of a Catholic University. Acting “ under the directions, and with the approbation of the Holy See,
“ seconded by the co-operation of their Clergy and their flocks, “ encouraged by the contributions of both hemispheres, these “ zealous Prelates are aiming higher than we can dare, at the “ providing of an unmingled education of the very highest order.
“ From our hearts we wish them success; and we are glad of “ this opportunity to testify to them our warmest sympathy.
“ What we have hitherto done, we will continue to do—recom“ mend the undertaking to the charity and liberality of our “ faithful people. Its advantages to us will be incalculable. We “ shall see open to future generations the means of a liberal,
“ scientific, and professional education, united with solid religious “ instruction, a blessing denied to the present; and we may

“ see revived, what formed the pride of Ireland in early ages of “ Christianity, multitudes, who loved heavenly as well as “ earthly wisdom, sailing to her from distant shores to obtain
“ the still undivided treasure at her hands.”

The desire of the Supreme Pontiff for the establishment of this University, his deep conviction that the faith requires it, that nothing else, under the circumstances, will do, is still as strong and as ardent as when, in 1847, he first suggested the project. In the latest Rescript from Rome, bearing date March of the present year, his anxiety upon this point, deepened by passing events, breaks out again and again with renewed force.

“ Amongst those things,” says the Holy Father, “ which in “ the Synod of Thurles were wisely decreed by the Prelates of “ Ireland, for the good and extension of religion, we deem it,
“ in the first place, praiseworthy that they have resolved, on “ consulting together, to erect, as soon as possible, a Catholic “ University, wherein youth, without danger to faith, may be “ trained up in discipline and true knowledge. The illustrious “ Irish nation, responding to the wishes of the Episcopacy, with “ its usual piety and liberality, have contributed largely to the “ undertaking. And We, having received the petition of many “ of the Bishops, praying us to approve, in a more especial
“ manner, by our Apostolic authority, the erection of said
“ Catholic University; and having, by and with the advice of “ our venerable Brethren, willingly granted their prayer, do,
“ therefore, by these presents, approve and confirm, by our Apostolic authority, the founding of said University, which now
“ engages the attention of the Prelacy of Ireland.

“ In conclusion, we supplicate the Father of Mercies, from “ whom every good gift proceeds, that the decrees carried out by “ all those to whom they appertain, may, through divine grace, “ obtain the end desired; and that the establishment of the “ University may be happily accomplished, wherein the Catholic

“ youth of the country, educated in sound doctrine, may grow
“ up every day unto an increase of true religion, and of glory
“ to God.”

Of the necessity and advantage of such an institution there is not, there cannot be, a second Catholic opinion. Its realization at this moment is the dearest wish of faithful millions; and their co-operation, even in a limited way, which we now seek to obtain, would at once call it into existence.

It is necessary that Catholicism should have such an institution, where the truth may be upheld and defended by all the resources of learning; where a Catholic literature may be created, free from the alloy of sectarian prejudice; where youth may be educated in all that fullness of knowledge embraced within the widest circle of the arts and sciences, and thus be qualified to assert, with effect, when the occasion arises, the truth of the dogma, and vindicate triumphantly the purity of Catholic doctrine.

This is the requirement of the age; the desire of the Church, as indicated by the Supreme Pontiff and national councils. This project, therefore, will enlist in its favour all the sympathies of true and enlightened faith and piety, until the world shall see its realization.

Were we to view the project simply as a human work, surrounded by so many and so great difficulties, requiring immense funds for its completion, and depending upon the active co-operation and approval of different nations and people, we could scarcely indulge the flattering hope of final success. But, viewing it as we do, in the cheering light of faith, recollecting that it originated with him who holds the commission from above to teach all nations, and believing that the Church with whom the Paraclete ever abides, will, notwithstanding the combined opposition of error and earthly power, finally and successfully accomplish its divine mission. Considering the subject from this point of view, the prospect brightens before us; what appeared insuperable obstacles, as viewed by human wisdom, vanish, one knows not how; and the rays of hope, casting a steady and brilliant light on the clouded future, we dismiss from our minds, once and for ever, all doubts and misgivings as to the successful working of a project begun and carried on under such holy auspices; with the faith of an ancient patriarch, which Christians ought to emulate, we say, "si consistant adversum me castra, non timebit cor meum."

The following extract from the list of subscriptions, in tabular form, will give, at one view, a general idea of the progress we have already made, and of what still remains to be done at home and abroad.

Ireland is divided into 28 diocesses, 1,058 parishes; of these parishes 540 have made parochial collections for the University. Contributions have been received from every diocess, varying in amount from £3,408 in Meath, and £3,652 in Dublin, down to £26 from the diocess of Raphoe, £41 from Limerick, and £23 from Kilmacduagh. All the parishes have contributed in Cashel, Ross, Cloyne, Meath, and Armagh. All but one in Waterford, and all but two in Clogher and in Clonfert; whilst in other diocesses the parochial collections have been very few. The amount contributed in all Ireland is £22,840, of which sum, Meath, Dublin, and Armagh have contributed more than one-half. If the uncollected parishes produce, on an average, as much as those which have already made returns, the amount would exceed £40,000 for Ireland.
