PROLOGUE.

Florish.] New playes and maydenheads are neare akin ;
 Much follow'd both, for both much money gi'en,
 If they stand sound and well : and a good play,
 4 Whose modest scenes blush on his marriage-day,
 And shake to loose his honour, is like hir
 That after holy tye and first nights stir,
 Yet still is modestie, and still retaines
 8 More of the maid to fight than husband's paines ;
 We pray our play may be so ; for I'm sure
 It has a noble breeder and a pure,
 A learned, and a poet never went
 12 More famous yet twixt Po and silver Trent :
 Chaucer—of all admir'd—the story gives ;
 There constant to eternity it lives.
 If we let fall the noblenesse of this,
 16 And the first sound this child heare be a hissè,
 How will it shake the bones of that good man,
 And make him cry from under ground, “ O, fan
 From me the witles chaffe of such a wrighter
 20 That blastes my bayes, and my fam'd workes makes lighter
 Then Robin Hood ! ” This is the feare we bring ;
 For, to say truth, it were an endlesse thing,
 And too ambitious, to aspire to him,
 24 Weake as we are, and almost breathlesse swim
 In this deepe water. Do but you hold out
 Your helping hands, and we shall take about,
 And something doe to save us. You shall heare
 28 Scenes, though below his art, may yet appeare
 Worth two houres' travell. To his bones sweet sleepe !
 Content to you ! If this play doe not keepe
 A little dull time from us, we perceave
 32 Our losses fall so thicke, we must needs leave. [Florish.]

THE TWO NOBLE Kinmen.

ACT I.

[I. 1]

[SCENE I. Athens. Before a temple.]

Enter Hymen with a torch burning: a Boy, in a white robe, before, singing and strewing flowers. After Hymen, a Nymph, encompast in her tresses, bearing a wheaten garland. Then Theseus, betweene two other Nymphs with wheaten Chaplets on their heades. Then Hippolyta, the bride, led by [Pirithous], and another holding a garland over her head, her tresses likewise hanging. After her, Emilia, holding up her traine. [Artesius and Attendants.]

The Song.

[Musicke.]

Roses, their sharpe spines being gone,
Not royall in their smels alone,
But in their hew.

Maiden pinckes, of odour faint, 4
Dazies smel-lesse, yet most quaint,
And sweet time true.

Prim-rose, first-borne child of Ver, 8
Merry spring-time's herbinger
With her bells dimme.

Oxlips, in their cradles growing,
Mary-golds, on death-beds blowing, 12
Larkes'-heeles trimme.

 The wrath of cruell Creon; who [endure] 40
 The beakes of ravens, tallents of the kights,
 And pecks of crows, in the fowle feilds of Thebs.
 He will not suffer us to burne their bones,
 To urne their ashes, nor to take th' offence 44
 Of mortall loathfomenes from the blest eye
 Of holy Phæbus, but infects the windes
 With stench of our slaine lords. O pittie, duke!
 Thou purger of the earth, draw thy feard sword 48
 That does good turnes to th' world; give us the bones
 Of our dead kings, that we may chappell them;
 And of thy boundles goodnes, take some note
 That for our crowned heades we have no rooffe 52
 Save this, which is the lyon's, and the beare's,
 And vault to every thing!

Thef. Pray you, kneele not:
 I was transported with your speech, and suffer'd 56
 Your knees to wrong themselves. I have heard the fortunes
 Of your dead lords, which gives me such lamenting
 As wakes my vengeance and revenge for 'em.
 King Capaneus was your lord, the day 60
 That he should marry you, at such a season
 As now it is with me, I met your groome
 By Mars's altar; you were that time faire,
 Not Juno's mantle fairer then your tresses, 64
 Nor in more bounty spread her; your wheaten wreathe
 Was then nor threafhd nor blafed; fortune at you
 Dimpled her cheeke with smiles; Hercules our kinefman—
 Then weaker than your eies—laide by his club; 68

[I. 2] SCENE II. [Thebes. The court of the palace.]

Enter Palamon and Arcite.

Arcite. Deere Palamon, deerer in love then blood,
And our prime cofen, yet unhardned in
The crimes of nature; let us leave the citty
4 Thebs, and the temptings in 't, before we further
Sully our glosse of youth:
And here to keepe in abstinence we shame
As in incontinence; for not to swim
8 I' th' aide o' th' current, were almost to sincke,
At least to frustrate striving; and to follow
The common streame, 'twold bring us to an edy
Where we should turne or drowne; if labour through, 12 Our gaine but life and weakenes.

Pal. Your advice
Is cride up with example: what strange ruins,
Since first we went to schoole, may we perceive
Walking in Thebs? Skars and bare weedes
16 The gaine o' th' martialist, who did propound
To his bold ends, honour and golden ingots,
Which though he won, he had not; and now flurtd
By peace for whom he fought. Who, then, shall offer
20 To Mars's so-scornd altar? I doe bleede
When such I meete, and with great Juno would Refume her ancient fit of jelouzie,
To get the foldier worke, that peace might purge
24 For her repletion, and retaine anew
Her charitable heart, now hard, and harsher
Then strife or war could be.

 But th' unconfiderd foldier ?

Pal. Yes; I pittie

Arc. 'Tis not this
 I did begin to speake of; this is vertue

But what's the matter?

Val. Theseus—who where he threatens appals—hath sent

But that we feare the gods in him, he brings not

With the defier.

Pal. Let's to the king; who, were he
A quarter carrier of that honour which 108
His enemy come in, the blood we venture
Should be as for our health; which were not spent,

[I. 2] Rather laide out for purchase: but, alas!

112 Our hands advanc'd before our hearts, what will
The fall o' th' stroke doe damage?

Arc. Let th' event,
That never-erring arbitratour, tell us

When we know all ourselves, and let us follow

116 The becking of our chance.

[Exeunt.

[I. 3] SCENE III. [Before the gates of Athens.]

Enter Pirithous, Hippolyta, and Emilia.

Pir. No further!

Hip. Sir, farewell: repeat my wishes

To our great lord, of whose succes I dare not
Make any timerous question; yet I wish him

4 Exces and overflow of power, an't might be
To [dare] ill-dealing fortune. Speede to him;
Store never hurtes good governours.

Pir. Though I know
His ocean needs not my poore drops, yet they

8 Muft yeild their tribute there. My precious maide,
Those best affections that the heavens infuse
In their best-temperd peices, keepe enthroand
In your deare heart!

Emil. Thanckes, fir! Remember me

2 To our all-royall brother; for whose speede
The great Bellona Ile follicite; and
Since, in our terrene state, petitions are not Without giftes understood, Ile offer to her

10 What I shall be advised she likes. Our hearts
Are in his army, in his tent.

 Since our great lord departed?

Hip. With much labour;
 And I did love him for 't. They two have cabind
 In many as dangerous as poore a corner, 36
 Perill and want contending; they have skift
 Torrents, whose roring tyranny and power
 I' th' least of these was dreadfull; and they have Fought out together, where death's selfe was lodgd; 40
 Yet fate hath brought them off. Their knot of love
 Tide, weav'd, intangled, with so true, so long,
 And with a finger of so deepe a cunning
 May be outworne, never undone. I thinke 44
 Theseus cannot be umpire to himselfe,
 Cleaving his conscience into twaine, and doing
 Each side like justice, which he loves best.

Jail. I may depart with little, while I live; some thing I may cast to you, not much. Alas! the prifon I keepe, though it be for great ones, yet they feldome come; before one
 4 falmon, you shall take a number of minnowes. I am given out to be better lyn'd then it can appeare to me report is a true speaker: I would I were really that I am deliverd to be. Marry, what I have—be it what it will—I will assure upon my

Jail. Wel, we will talke more of this when the folemny is [II. 1] past. But have you a full promise of her? when that shall be 12 feene, I tender my consent. [Enter Daughter.

Woo. I have, fir. Here shee comes.

Jail. Your friend and I have chanced to name you here, upon the old busines; but no more of that now, so soone as 16
the court hurly is over, we will have an end of it: i' th' meane time, looke tenderly to the two prisoners; I can tell you they are princes.

Daugh. These strewings are for their chamber. 'Tis pittie 20 they are in prison, and 'twere pittie they should be out. I doe thinke they have patience to make any aduersity asham'd; the prison it selfe is proud of 'em; and they have all the world in their chamber. 24

Jail. They are fam'd to be a paire of absolute men.

Daugh. By my troth, I think fame but stammers 'em; they stand a greife above the reach of report.

Jail. I heard them reported in the battaile to be the only 28 doers.

Daugh. Nay, most likely; for they are noble sufferers. I mervaile how they would have lookd, had they beene victors, that, with such a constant nobility, enforce a freedome out or 32 bondage, making misery their mirth, and affliction a toy to jest at.

Jail. Doe they so?

Daugh. It seemes to me they have no more fence of their 36 captivity then I of ruling Athens: they eate well, looke merrily, discourse of many things, but nothing of their owne restraint and disasters. Yet sometime a devided sigh, martyr'd as 't were i' th' deliverance, will breake from one of them; 40 when the other presently gives it so sweete a rebuke, that I could wish my selfe a sigh to be so chid, or at least a sigher to be comforted.

Daugh. No, fir, no; that's Palamon: Arcite is the lower of the twaine; you may perceiue a part of him.

Jail. Goe to! leave your pointing; they would not make 52 us their object; out of their fight.

Daugh. It is a holliday to looke on them. Lord, the difference of men. [Exeunt.]

56 Even from the bottom of these misereries,
 From all that fortune can inflict upon us,
 I see two comforts ryfing, two meere blessings,

Emil.

Of all flowres,

136

Wom.

Why, gentle madam?

Emil. It is the very embleme of a maide:

For when the west wind courts her gently

How modestly she blowes, and paints the sun

With her chaste blushes! When the north comes neere her, 140

Rude and impatient, then, like chastity,

Shee lockes her beauties in her bud againe,

And leaves him to base briers.

Wom.

Yet, good madam,

Sometimes her modesty will blow so far

144

Shee falls for 't: a mayde,

If shee have any honour, would be loth

To take example by her.

I am wondrous merry-hearted; I could laugh now.

Wom. I could lie downe, I am sure.

Emil.

And take one with you?

Wom. That 's as we bargaine, madam.

Emil.

Well, agree then.

[Exeunt Emilia and Woman.]

Pal. What thinke you of this beauty?

Arc.

'Tis a rare one.

Pal. Is 't but a rare one?

Arc.

Yes, a matchles beauty.

Pal. Might not a man well lose himselfe, and love her?

Pal. You love her, then?

Arc. Who would not?

Pal. And desire her?

160 Arc. Before my liberty.

Pal. I saw her first.

Arc. That's nothing.

Pal. But it shall be.

Arc. I saw her too.

Pal. Yes, but you must not love her.

Arc. I will not as you doe, to worship her,

164 As she is heavenly, and a blessed goddess;

I love her as a woman, to enjoy her:

So both may love.

Pal. You shall not love at all.

Arc. Not love at all! Who shall deny me?

168 Pal. I, that first saw her; I, that tooke possession

First with mine eye of all those beauties in her

Reveald to mankinde. If thou lovest her,

Or entertain't a hope to blast my wishes,

172 Thou art a traytour, Arcite, and a fellow

Falſe as thy title to her: friendship, blood,

And all the ties betweene us, I disclaime,

If thou once thinke upon her!

Arc. Yes, I love her;

176 And if the lives of all my name lay on it,

I must doe so; I love her with my soule!

If that will lose ye, farewell, Palamon!

I say againe, I love; and in loving her, maintaine

180 I am as worthy and as free a lover,

And have as just a title to her beauty,

As any Palamon, or any living

Let me deale coldly with you: am not I
Part of [your] blood, part of your soule? you 've told me
That I was Palamon, and you were Arcite.

Pal. Yes. 188

Arc. Am not I liable to those affections,
Those joyes, greifes, angers, feares, my friend shall suffer?

Pal. Ye may be.

Arc. Why, then, would you deale so cunningly,
So frangely, so unlike a noble kinsman, 192
To love alone? Speake truely, doe you thinke me
Unworthy of her fight?

Pal. No; but unjust
If thou pursue that fight.

Arc. Because an other
First sees the enemy, shall I stand still, 196
And let mine honour downe, and never charge?

Pal. Yes, if he be but one.

Arc. But say that one
Had rather combat me?

Pal. Let that one say so,
And use thy freedome; else if thou pursuest her, 200
Be as that curfed man that hates his country,
A branded villaine!

Arc. You are mad.

Pal. I must be,
Till thou art worthy, Arcite; it concernes me;
And, in this madnes, if I hazard thee 204
And take thy life, I deale but truely.

Arc. Fie, fir!
You play the childe extreamely: I will love her,
I must, I ought to doe so, and I dare;
And all this justly. 208

Pal. O, that now, that now

- [II. 2] Thy false selfe and thy friend had but this fortune,
 To be one howre at liberty, and graspe
 Our good swords in our hands! I 'ld quickly teach thee
 212 What 'twere to filch affection from another!
 Thou art baser in it then a cutpurse:
 Put but thy head out of this window more,
 And, as I have a soule, Ile naile thy life to 't!
 216 Arc. Thou dar'st not, foole; thou canst not; thou art feeble:
 Put my head out! Ile throw my body out,
 And leape the garden, when I see her next,
 And pitch between her armes to anger thee.
 220 Pal. No more! the keeper's comming; I shall live
 To knocke thy braines out with my shackles.
Arc. Doe.

Enter [Jailor.]

- [Jail.] By your leave, gentlemen.
Pal. Now, honest keeper?
 [Jail.] Lord Arcite, you must presently to the duke:
 224 The cause I know not yet.
Arc. I'm ready, keeper.
 [Jail.] Prince Palamon, I must awhile bereave you
 Of your faire cofen's company. [Exeunt Arcite and Jailor.]
Pal. And me too,
 Even when you please of life. Why is he sent for?
 228 It may be, he shall marry her; he's goodly,
 And like enough the duke hath taken notice
 Both of his blood and body. But his falsehood!
 Why should a friend be treacherous? If that
 232 Get him a wife so noble and so faire,
 Let honest men ne'er love againe. Once more
 I would but see this faire one.—Blessed garden,
 And fruite and flowers more blessed, that still blossom 236 As her bright eies shine on ye! Would I were,
 For all the fortune of my life hereafter,

II. 2.] The Two Noble Kinsmen. 33

Yon little tree, yon blooming apricocke ! [II. 2]
How I would spread, and fling my wanton armes
In at her window ! I would bring her fruites 240
Fit for the gods to feed on ; youth and pleasure,
Still as she tasted, should be doubled on her ;
And if she be not heavenly, I would make her
So neere the gods in nature, they should feare her ; 244

[Enter Jailor.]

And then I am sure she would love me. How now, keeper!
Wher's Arcite ?

[Jail.] Banished. Prince Pirithous
Obtained his liberty ; but never more,
Upon his oth and life, must he set foote 248
Upon this kingdome.

Pal. Hee's a blessed man !
He shall see Thebes againe, and call to armes
The bold yong men that, when he bids 'em charge,
Fall on like fire : Arcite shall have a fortune, 252
If he dare make himselfe a worthy lover,
Yet in the field to strike a battle for her ;
And if he lose her then, he's a cold coward ;
How bravely may he beare himselfe to win her 256
If he be noble Arcite : thousand waies !
Were I at liberty, I would doe things
Of such a vertuous greatnes, that this lady,
This blushing virgine, should take manhood to her, 260
And seeke to ravish me.

[Jail.] My lord, for you
I have this charge too—

Pal. To discharge my life.

[Jail.] No ; but from this place to remooove your lordship :

A mercy I muſt thanke 'em for; but banish'd
The free enjoying of that face I die for,

That, were I old and wicked, all my ſins
Could never plucke upon me. Palamon,

 And, if she be as gentle as she's faire,
 I know she's his; he has a tongue will tame 16 Tempests, and make the wild rockes wanton. Come what can come,

The worst is death; I will not leave the kingdome:
 I know mine owne is but a heape of ruins,
 And no redresse there: if I goe, he has her. 20
 I am resolv'd: an other shape shall make me,
 Or end my fortunes; either way, I'm happy:
 Ile see her, and be neere her, or no more.

Enter four Country-people; & one with a garland before them.

1. My masters, Ile be there, that's certaine. 24

 Let the plough play to-day; Ile tickle't out 28
 Of the jades' tailes to-morrow.

 To have my wife as jealous as a turkey:
 But that's all one; Ile goe through, let her mumble.

 And all's made up againe.

 He bowes his noble body, then salutes me, thus:

 Get thee a happy husband!" Once, he kist me;
 I lov'd my lips the better ten daies after:
 Would he would doe so ev'ry day! He greives much,

SCENE VI. [Athens. Before the prifon.] [II. 6]

Enter Jailor's Daughter.

Daugh. Let all the dukes and all the divells rore,
He is at liberty: I have ventur'd for him;
And out I have brought him to a little wood
A mile hence: I have fent him, where a cedar, 4
Higher than all the reft, fpreads like a plane,
Fast by a brooke; and there he fhall keepe clofe,
Till I provide him fyles and foode; for yet
His yron bracelets are not off. O, love, 8
What a stout-hearted child thou art! My father
Durft better have indur'd cold vron than done it.

[II. 6] I love him beyond love and beyond reason,
 12 Or wit, or safetie; I have made him know it :
 I care not; I am desperate; if the law
 Finde me, and then condemne me for 't, some wenches
 Some honest-harted maides, will sing my dirge,
 16 And tell to memory my death was noble,
 Dying almost a martyr. That way he takes,
 I purpose is my way too: sure he cannot
 Be so unmanly, as to leave me here :
 20 If he doe, maides will not so easily
 Trust men againe: and yet he has not thank'd me
 For what I've done: no, not so much as kist me;
 And that, me thinkes, is not so well; nor scarcely 24 Could I perswade him to become a freeman,
 He made such scruples of the wrong he did
 To me and to my father. Yet, I hope,
 When he considers more, this love of mine
 28 Will take more root within him: let him doe
 What he will with me, so he use me kindly;
 For use me so he shall, or Ile proclaime him,
 And to his face, no man. Ile presently
 32 Provide him necessaries, and packe my cloathes up,
 And where there is a [patch] of ground Ile venture,
 So hee be with me: by him, like a shadow,
 Ile ever dwell. Within this houre the whoobub
 36 Will be all o'er the prison: I am then
 Kissing the man they looke for. Farewell, father!
 Get many more such prisoners and such daughters,
 And shortly you may keepe yourselfe. Now to him! [Exit.]

Against th' advice of feare. Sure, of another 60
You would not heare me doubted, but your silence
Should breake out, though i' th' sanctuary.

Pal. Sir,
I have seene you move in such a place, which Might justifie your manhood ; you were calld 64
A good knight and a bold : but the whole weeke's not faire,
If any day it rayne. Their valiant temper
Men loofe when they encline to trecherie ;
And then they fight like compell'd beares, would fly 68
Were they not tyde

Arc. Kinsman, you might as well
Speake this, and act it in your glasse, as to
His eare, which now disdaines you.

Pal. Come up to me,
Quit me of these cold gyves, give me a sword, 72
Though it be rustie, and the charity
Of one meale lend me ; come before me then,
A good sword in thy hand, and doe but say
That Emily is thine, I will forgive 76
The trespassse thou hast done me, yea, my life
If then thou carry 't ; and brave foules in shades,
That have dyde manly, which will seeke of me
Some newes from earth, they shall get none but this, 80
That thou art brave and noble.

Arc. Be content,
Againe betake you to your hawthorne house :
With counsaile of the night, I will be here
With wholesome viands ; these impediments 84
Will I file off ; you shall have garments, and Perfumes to kill the smell o' th' prison ; after,

Dispisings of our persons, and such powtings

Fitter for girles and schooleboyes—will be seene,

And quickly, yours or mine. Wilt please you arme, fir,

Or, if you feele your selfe not fitting yet

And furnishd with your old strength, Ile stay, cofen,

And ev'ry day discourse you into health,

As I am spard : your person I am friends with,

And I could wish I had not faide I lov'd her,

40

Though I had dide ; but, loving such a lady,

And justifying my love, I must not fly from 't.

Pal. Arcite, thou art so brave an enemy,

That no man but thy cofen 's fit to kill thee :

I am well and lusty ; choose your armes.

Arc. Choose you, fir.

Pal. Wilt thou exceede in all, or do'ft thou doe it

To make me spare thee ?

Arc. If you thinke so, cofen,

You are deceived, for as I am a foldier,

48

I will not spare you.

Pal. That 's well said.

Arc. You 'll finde it.

Pal. Then, as I am an honest man, and love

With all the justice of affection,

Ile pay thee foundly. This Ile take.

52

- [III. 6] Arc. That 's mine, then.
 Ile arme you firft.
- Pal.* Do. Pray thee, tell me, cofen,
 Where gotft thou this good armour ?
- Arc.* 'Tis the duke's,
 And to fay true, I stole it. Doe I pinch you ?
- Pal.* Noe.
- 56 Arc. Is 't not too heavie ?
Pal. I have worne a lighter ;
 But I fhall make it ferve.
- Arc.* Ile buckl't clofe.
- Pal.* By any meanes.
- Arc.* You care not for a grand-guard ?
- Pal.* No, no ; wee'l ufe no horfes : I perceave
- 60 You 'ld faine be at that fight.
- Arc.* I am indifferent.
- Pal.* Faith, fo am I. Good cofen, thruft the buckle
 Through far enough.
- Arc.* I warrant you.
- Pal.* My cafke now.
- Arc.* Will you fight bare-armd ?
- Pal.* We fhall be the nimble.
- 64 Arc. But ufe your gauntlets though : thofe are o' th' leaft, Prethee take mine, good cofen.
- Pal.* Thanke you, Arcite.
 How doe I looke ? am I falne much away ?
- Arc.* Faith, very little ; love has ufd you kindly.
- 68 Pal. Ile warrant thee, Ile ftrike home.
- Arc.* Doe, and fpare not.
 Ile give you caufe, fweet cofen.
- Pal.* Now to you, fir.
 Me thinks this armour 's very like that, Arcite,
 Thou wor'ft that day the three kings fell, but lighter.
- 72 Arc. That was a very good one ; and that day
 I well remember, you outdid me, cofen ;

I never saw such valour : when you chargd
Upon the left wing of the enemy, [III. 6]
I spur'd hard to come up, and under me 76
I had a right good horse.

Pal. You had indeede ;
A bright bay, I remember.

Arc. Yes. But all
Was vainely labour'd in me ; you outwent me,
Nor could my wishes reach you ; yet a little 80
I did by imitation.

Pal. More by vertue ;
You 're modest, cosen.

Arc. When I saw you charge first,
Me thought I heard a dreadfull clap of thunder
Breake from the troope. 84

Pal. But still before that flew
The lightning of your valour. Stay a little :
Is not this peece too freight ?

Arc. No, no ; 'tis well.

Pal. I would have nothing hurt thee but my sword
A bruise would be dishonour. 88

Arc. Now I 'm perfect.

Pal. Stand off, then.

Arc. Take my sword ; I hold it better.

Pal. I thanke ye. No, keepe it ; your life lyes on it :
Here 's one, if it but hold, I aske no more
For all my hopes. My cause and honour guard me ! 92

Arc. And me my love !

[They bow severall wayes ; then advance and stand.

Is there aught else to say ?

Pal. This onely, and no more. Thou art mine aunt's son,
And that blood we desire to shed is mutuall ;
In me, thine, and in thee, mine : my sword 96
Is in my hand, and, if thou killst me,
The gods and I forgive thee ; if there be

[III. 6] A place prepar'd for those that sleepe in honour,

100 I with his wearie foule that falls may win it.

Fight bravely, cofen : give me thy noble hand.

Arc. Here, Palamon : this hand shall never more
Come neare thee with such friendship.

Pal. I commend thee.

104 Arc. If I fall, curfe me, and say I was a coward ;

For none but such dare die in these just tryalls.

Once more, farewell, my cofen.

Pal. Farewell, Arcite. [Fight.
[Hornes within : they stand.

Arc. Loe, cofen, loe ! our folly has undon us.

108 Pal. Why ?

Arc. This is the duke, a-hunting as I told you ;

If we be found, we 're wretched : O, retire,

For honour's sake and [safety,] presently

Into your bush agen, sir ; we shall finde

112 Too many howres to dye in. Gentle cofen,

If you be seene, you perish instantly

For breaking prison ; and I, if you reveale me,

For my contempt : then all the world will scorne us,

116 And say we had a noble difference,

But base disposers of it.

Pal. No, no, cofen ;

I will no more be hidden, nor put off

This great adventure to a second tryall :

120 I know your cunning and I know your cause :

He that faints now, shame take him ! Put thy selfe

Upon thy present guard,—

Arc. You are not mad :

Pal. Or I will make th' advantage of this howre

124 Mine owne ; and what to come shall threaten me,

I feare lesse then my fortune. Know, weake cofen,

I love Emilia ; and in that Ile bury

Thee, and all crosses else. [III. 6]

Arc. Then, come what can come,
 Thou shalt know, Palamon, I dare as well 128
 Die, as discourse or sleepe : onely this feares me,
 The law will have the honour of our ends.
 Have at thy life!

Pal. Looke to thine owne well, Arcite.
 [Fight againe. Hornes.]

Enter Theseus, Hippolyta, Emilia, Pirithous, and traine.

Thef. What ignorant and mad malicious traitors 132
 Are you, that, 'gainst the tenor of my lawes,
 Are making battaile, thus like knights appointed,
 Without my leave, and officers of armes ?
 By Castor, both shall dye. 136

Pal. Hold thy word, Theseus :
 We are certainly both traitors, both despisers
 Of thee and of thy goodnesse : I am Palamon,
 That cannot love thee, he that broke thy prifon ;
 Thinke well what that deserves : and this is Arcite ; 140

A bolder traytor never trod thy ground,
 A falser nev'r seem'd friend : this is the man
 Was begd and banish'd : this is he contemnes thee
 And what thou dar'st doe ; and in this disguise, 144

Against [thy] owne edict, followes thy sifter,
 That fortunate bright star, the faire Emilia ;
 Whose servant—if there be a right in seeing,
 And first bequeathing of the soule to—justly 148

I am ; and, which is more, dares thinke her his.
 This treacherie, like a most trusty lover,
 I call'd him now to answer : if thou bee'st,
 As thou art spoken, great and vertuous, 152
 The true descider of all injuries,
 Say, " Fight againe ! " and thou shalt see me, Theseus,

O heaven,

What more then man is this !

Thef.

I 've sworne.

Arc.

We seeke not

Thy breath of mercy, Theseus : 'tis to me

A thing as soone to dye as thee to fay it,

160 And no more mov'd. Where this man calls me traitor,

Let me fay thus much ; if in love be treason,

In service of so excellent a beutie,

As I love most, and in that faith will perish,

164 As I have brought my life here to confirme it,

As I have serv'd her truest, worthiest,

As I dare kill this cofen that denies it,

So let me be most traitor, and ye please me.

168 For scorning thy edict, duke, aske that lady

Why she is faire, and why her eyes command me

Stay here to love her ; and, if she fay " traitor,"

I am a villaine fit to lye unburied.

172 Pal. Thou shalt have pittie of us both, O Theseus,

If unto neither thou shew mercy ; stop,

As thou art just, thy noble eare against us ;

As thou art valiant, for thy cofen's foule,

176 Whose twelve strong labours crowne his memory,

Let's die together, at one instant, duke ;

Onely a little let him fall before me,

That I may tell my foule he shall not have her.

180 Thef. I grant your wish ; for, to fay true, your cofen

Has ten times more offended, for I gave him

More mercy then you found, sir, your offenses

Being no more then his.—None here speake for 'em ;

184 For, ere the sun set, both shall sleepe for ever.

Hip. Alas the pittie !—Now or never, sister,

Speake, not to be denide : that face of yours

Will beare the curses else of after ages

188 For these lost cofens.

- Emil.* In my face, deare sifter, [III. 6]
 I finde no anger to 'em, nor no ruyn ;
 The misadventure of their owne eyes kill 'em ;
 Yet that I will be woman, and have pittie,
 My knees shall grow to th' ground but Ile get mercie. 192
 Helpe me, deare sifter : in a deede so vertuous
 The powers of all women will be with us.—
 Most royall brother,— [They kneel.
- Hip.* Sir, by our tye of marriage,—
Emil. By your owne spotlesse honour,— 196
Hip. By that faith,
 That faire hand, and that honest heart you gave me,—
Emil. By that you would have pittie in another,
 By your owne vertues infinite,—
Hip. By valour,
 By all the chaste nights I have ever pleas'd you,— 200
Thef. These are strange conjurings.
Pir. Nay, then, Ile in too :—
 By all our friendship, fir, by all our dangers, [Kneels.
 By all you love most, warres, and this sweet lady,—
Emil. By that you would have trembled to deny 204
 A blushing maide,—
Hip. By your owne eyes, by strength,
 In which you swore I went beyond all women,
 Almost all men, and yet I yeilded, Theseus,— Pir. To crowne all this, by your most noble soule, 208
 Which cannot want due mercie, I beg first.
Hip. Next, heare my prayers.
Emil. Last, let me intreate, fir.
Pir. For mercy.
Hip. Mercy.
Emil. Mercy on these princes.
Thef. Ye make my faith reele : say I felt 212
 Compassion to 'em both, how would you place it ?
Emil. Upon their lives : but with their banishments.

[III. 6] Thef. You 're a right woman, sifter; you have pitty,
 216 But want the understanding where to use it.
 If you desire their lives, invent a way
 Safer then banishment: can these two live,
 And have the agony of love about 'em,
 220 And not kill one another? every day
 They'ld fight about you; howrely bring your honour
 In publique question with their swords. Be wise, then,
 And here forget 'em; it concernes your credit
 224 And my oth equally; I have said they die:
 Better they fall by th' law then one another.
 Bow not my honour.

Emil. O, my noble brother,
 That oth was rashly made, and in your anger;
 228 Your reason will not hold it: if such vowes
 Stand for expresse will, all the world must perish.
 Beside, I have another oth 'gainst yours,
 Of more authority, I 'm sure more love;
 232 Not made in passion neither, but good heede.

Thef. What is it, sifter?

Pir. Urge it home, brave lady!

Emil. That you would nev'r deny me any thing
 Fit for my modest suit, and your free granting:
 236 I tye you to your word now, if ye fall in't,
 Thinke how you maime your honour,—
 For now I am set a-begging, fir, I 'm deafe
 To all but your compassion,—how their lives
 240 Might breed the ruine of my name, opinion!
 Shall any thing that loves me perish for me?

Because they may be rotten? O duke Theseus, The goodly mothers that have ground for these, And all the longing maides that ever lov'd, If your vow stand, shall curse me and my beauty, And in their funerall songs for these two cofens Despise my crueltie, and cry woe worth me, Till I am nothing but the scorne of women. For heaven's sake save their lives, and banish 'em.	[III. 6]	248
Thef. On what conditions?		252
Emil. Swear 'em never more To make me their contention or to know me, To tread upon thy dukedome, and to be, Where ever they shall travel, ever strangers To one another.		256

Pal. He's a villaine, then.
Pir. These are men!
Arcite. No, never, duke; 'tis worse to me than begging, To take my life so basely. Though I thinke I never shall enjoy her, yet Ile preserve The honour of affection, and dye for her, Make death a devill.		268

And, if you can love, end this difference ;

I give consent.—Are you content too, princes ?

280 Both. With all our soules.

Thef. He that the refuses
Must dye, then.

Both. Any death thou canst invent, duke.

Pal. If I fall from that mouth, I fall with favour,
And lovers yet unborne shall bleſſe my athes.

284 Arc. If she refuse me, yet my grave will wed me,
And souldiers sing my epitaph.

Thef. Make choice, then.

Emil. I cannot, fir, they 're both too excellent :
For me, a hayre shall never fall of these men.

288 Hip. What will become of 'em ?

Thef. Thus I ordaine it ;
And by mine honour, once againe it stands,

Or both shall dye.—You shall both to your country ;
And each within this month, accompanied

292 With three faire knights, appeare againe in this place,
In which Ile plant a pyramid ; and, whether,
Before us that are here, can force his cofen

By fayre and knightly strength to touch the pillar,

296 He shall enjoy her ; th' other loose his head,

And all his friends ; nor shall he grudge to fall,

Nor thinke he dies with interest in this lady.

Will this content yee ?

Pal. Yes.—Here, cofen Arcite,

300 I am friends againe till that howre.

Arc. I embrace ye.

Thef. Are you content, sifter ?

Emil. Yes ; I must, fir,

Els both miscarry.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. [Athens. A room in the prison.] [IV. 1]

Enter Jailor, and Firft Friend.

Jail. Heare you no more ? was nothing faide of me
Concerning the escape of Palamon ?
Good fir, remember.

1 Fr. Nothing that I heard ;
For I came home before the bufines 4
Was fully ended : yet I might perceive,
Ere I departed, a great likelihood
Of both their pardons ; for Hippolyta 8
And faire-eyd Emilie upon their knees
Begd with fuch hanfom pittie, that the duke
Me thought stood-ftaggering whether he should follow
His rafh oth, or the sweet compaffion
Of thofe two ladies ; and to fecond them, 12
That truely noble prince Pirithous,
Halfe his owne heart, fet in too, that I hope
All fhall be well : neither heard I one queftion
Of your name or his fcape. 16

Jail. Pray heaven, it hold fo !

Enter Second Friend.

2 Fr. Be of good comfort, man ; I bring you newes,
Good newes.

Jail. They 're welcome.

2 Fr. Palamon has cleerd you,
And got your pardon, and difcoverd how

19. how] C. etc. O.Edd. S. Ty. place How at beginning of l. 20.

[IV. 1] And by whose meanes he escaped, which was your daughter's,
Whose pardon is procurd too; and the prisoner—
Not to be held ungratefull to her goodnes—
Has given a summe of money to her marriage,
24 A large one, Ile assure you.

Jail. Ye 're a good man,
And ever bring good newes.

1 Fr. How was it ended?

2 Fr. Why, as it should be; they that nev'r begd
But they prevaild, had their suites fairely granted:

28 The prisoners have their lives.

1 Fr. I knew 'twould be so.

2 Fr. But there be new conditions, which you'l heare of
At better time.

Jail. I hope they 're good.

2 Fr. They 're honourable,
How good they'l prove, I know not.

1 Fr. 'Twill be knowne.

Enter Wooer.

32 Woo. Alas, fir, wher's your daughter?

Jail. Why doe you aske?

Woo. O, fir, when did you see her?

2 Fr. How he lookes!

Jail. This morning.

Woo. Was she well? was she in health, fir?

When did she sleepe?

1 Fr. These are strange questions.

36 Jail. I doe not thinke she was very well; for, now

You make me minde her, but this very day

I ask'd her questions, and she answered me

So farre from what she was, so childishly,

40 So fillily, as if she were a foole,

1 Fr. Not right?

2 Fr. Not well?

Woo. No, fir, not well:

'Tis too true, ſhe is mad.

1 Fr. It cannot be.

Woo. Beleeve, you'l finde it ſo.

Jail. I halfe ſuſpected

What you [have] told me; the gods comfort her!

48

Either this was her love to Palamon,
Or feare of my miſcarrying on his ſcape,
Or both.

Woo. 'Tis likely.

Jail. But why all this haſte, fir?

Woo. Ile tell you quickly. As I late was angling
In the great lake that lies behind the pallace,
From the far ſhore, thicke fet with reedes and ſedges,
As patiently I was attending ſport,

I heard a voyce, a ſhrill one; and attentive
I gave my eare; when I might well perceive
'Twas one that fung, and, by the ſmallneſſe of it
A boy or woman. I then left my angle

To his owne ſkill, came neere, but yet perceivd not
Who made the ſound, the ruſhes and the reeds

60

Had ſo encompaſt it: I laide me downe,
And liſtned to the words ſhe ſong; for then,
Through a ſmall glade cut by the fiſher men,
I ſaw it was your daughter.

And what shall I doe then? Ile bring a beavy,

With chaplets on their heads of daffadillies,
With cherry lips, and cheekes of damaske rofes,
And all wee'l daunce an antique fore the duke,
76 And beg his pardon." Then she talk'd of you, fir;
That you must loofe your head to-morrow morning,
And she must gather flowers to bury you,
And see the house made handsome. Then she sung
80 Nothing but "Willow, willow, willow;" and betweene
Ever was, "Palamon, faire Palamon,"
And "Palamon was a tall yong man." The place
Was knee-deepe where she sat; her careles tresses
84 A wreathe of bull-rush rounded; about her stucke
Thousand fresh water-flowers of severall cullors;
That me thought she appeared like the faire nimph
That feedes the lake with waters, or as Iris
88 Newly dropt downe from heaven. Rings she made
Of rushes that grew by, and to 'em spoke
The prettiest posies,—"Thus our true love's tide,"
"This you may loofe, not me," and many a one;
92 And then she wept, and sung againe, and sigh'd,
And with the same breath smil'd, and kift her hand.

2 Fr. Alas, what pittie 'tis!

Woo. I made in to her:
She saw me, and straight fought the flood; I fav'd her,
96 And fet her safe to land: when presently
She slipt away, and to the citty made,
With such a cry, and swiftnes, that, beleeve me,
Shee left me farre behinde her. Three or foure

Daugh. Yes, truely, can I ; I can sing The Broome,
 And Bonny Robin. Are not you a tailour ?

Bro. Yes. 108

Daugh. Wher's my wedding gowne ?

Bro. Ile bring 't to-morrow.

Daugh. Doe, very rarely ; I must be abroad else,
 To call the maides and pay the minstrels ;
 For I must loose my maidenhead by cocklight ;
 'Twill never thrive else. 112

O faire, O sweete, &c. [Singes.]

Bro. You must ev'n take it patiently.

Jail. 'Tis true.

Daugh. Good even, good men. Pray, did you ever heare

Jail. Yes, wench, we know him.

Daugh. Is't not a fine yong gentleman ? 116

Emil. Yet I may binde those wounds up, that muft open

And bleed to death for my fake elfe: Ile choofe,

And end their strife: two fuch yong hanfom men

Shall never fall for me; their weeping mothers, 4

Following the dead-cold ashes of their fonnes,

Shall never curfe my cruelty. Good heaven,

What a fweet face has Arcite! If wife nature,

With all her beft endowments, all thofe beauties 8

She fowes into the birthes of noble bodies,

Were here a mortall woman, and had in her

The coy denials of yong maydes, yet doubtles,

She would run mad for this man: what an eye,— 12

Of what a fyry fparkle and quick fweetnes,

Has this yong prince! here Love himfelfe fits fmyling!—

A fhining confellation: what a brow,—

Of what a fpacious majesty, he carries,

- [IV. 2] Me thinks from hence, as from a promontory
 Pointed in heaven, should clap their wings, and fing
 24 To all the under world, the loves and fights
 Of gods, and such men neere 'em. Palamon
 Is but his foyle; to him, a meere dull shadow:
 Hee's swarth and meagre, of an eye as heavy
 28 As if he had lost his mother; a still temper,
 No stirring in him, no alacrity;
 Of all this sprightly sharpenes, not a smile;—
 Yet these that we count errors, may become him:
 32 Narcissus was a sad boy, but a heavenly.
 O, who can finde the bent of woman's fancy?
 I am a foole, my reason is lost in me;
 I have no choice, and I have ly'd so lewdly
 36 That women ought to beate me. On my knees
 I aske thy pardon, Palamon; thou art alone,
 And only beautifull; and these the eyes,
 These the bright lamps of beauty, that command
 40 And threaten Love; and what yong mayd dare crosse 'em?
 What a bold gravity, and yet inviting,
 Has this browne manly face? O Love, this only
 From this howre is complexion. Lye there, Arcite:
 44 Thou art a changling to him, a meere gipsy,
 And this the noble bodie. I am fotted,
 Utterly lost; my virgin's faith has fled me;
 For, if my brother but even now had ask'd me
 48 Whether I lov'd, I had run mad for Arcite;
 Now if my sifter, more for Palamon.
 Stand both together.—Now, come, aske me, brother;—
 Alas, I know not!—Aske me now, sweet sifter;—
 52 I may goe looke!—What a meere child is fancie,
 That, having two faire gawdes of equall sweetnesse,
 Cannot distinguish, but must crie for both!

I will, fir,

And truly what I thinke. Six braver spirits
Then these they 've brought—if we judge by th' outside—
I never saw nor read of. He that stands

76 In the first place with Arcite, by his seeming
Should be a stout man, by his face a prince,—
His very looks so fay him; his complexion
Nearer a browne than blacke; sterne, and yet noble,
80 Which shewes him hardy, fearelesse, proud of dangers;
The circle of his eyes show [fire] within him,
And as a heated lyon so he looks;
His haire hangs long behind him, blacke and shining
84 Like ravens' wings; his shoulders broad and strong;
Armd long and round; and on his thigh a sword
Hung by a curious bauldricke, when he frownes
To seale his will with; better, o' my conscience,
88 Was never souldier's friend.

Thef. Thou'ft well describde him.

Pir. Yet a great deale short,
Me thinks, of him that 's first with Palamon.

Thef. Pray, speake him, friend.

Pir. I ghesse he is a prince too,

92 And, if it may be, greater; for his show
Has all the ornament of honour in't:
Hee's somewhat bigger then the knight he spoke of,
But of a face far sweeter; his complexion
96 Is as a ripe grape ruddy; he has felt,
Without doubt, what he fights for, and so apter
To make this cause his owne; in 's face appears
All the faire hopes of what he undertakes;
100 And when he's angry, then a fetled valour,
Not tainted with extreames, runs through his body,
And guides his arme to brave things; feare he cannot,
He shewes no such soft temper; his head 's yellow,

 The liverie of the warlike maide appeares,
 Pure red and white, for yet no beard has blest him ;
 And in his rowling eyes fits victory, 108
 As if the ever ment to [court] his valour ;
 His nose stands high, a character of honour ;
 His red lips, after fights, are fit for ladies.
Emil. Must these men die too ? 112
Pir. When he speaks, his tongue
 Sounds like a trumpet ; all his lyeaments
 Are as a man would wish 'em, strong, and cleane ;
 He weares a well-steeld axe, the staffe of gold ;
 His age some five and twenty. 116
Meff. Ther 's another,
 A little man, but of a tough soule, seeming
 As great as any ; fairer promises
 In such a body yet I never look'd on.
Pir. O, he that 's freckle-fac'd ? 120
Meff. The fame, my lord :
 Are they not sweet ones ?
Pir. Yes, they are well.
Meff. Me thinks,
 Being so few and well-disposd, they show
 Great and fine art in nature. He 's white-hair'd,
 Not wanton-white, but such a manly colour 124
 Next to an aborne ; tough, and nimble-let,
 Which shoves an active soule ; his armes are brawny,
 Linde with strong finewes ; to the shoulder-peece
 Gently they swell, like women new-conceav'd, 128
 Which speaks him prone to labour, never fainting

Pir. They 're all the sonnes of honour.

Thef. Now, as I have a foule, I long to see 'em—
 Lady, you shall see men fight now.

Hip. I wish it,

144 But not the cause, my lord: they would show

Jail. She is continually in a harmelesse distemper, sleepe [IV. 3] little; altogether without appetite, save often drinking, dreaming of another world, and a better; and what broken peece of matter so e'er she's about, the name Palamon lardes it, that she farces ev'ry busines withall, fyts it to every queestion.—Looke where shee comes; you shall perceive her behaviour.

Enter Daughter.

Daugh. I have forgot it quite; The burden on 't was Downe-a, downe-a, and pend by no worfe man then Geraldo, Emilia's schoolemafter; he's as fantastickall, too, as ever he may goe upon 's legs, for in the next world will Dido see Palamon, 12 and then will she be out of love with Æneas.

Doct. What stuff's here! pore soule!

Jail. Ev'n thus all day long.

Daugh. Now for this charme that I told you of. You must 16 bring a peece of silver on the tip of your tongue, or no ferry: then, if it be your chance to come where the blessed spirits—as ther's a fight now!—we maids that have our lyvers periph'd, crakt to peeces with love, we shall come there, and doe 20 nothing all day long but picke flowers with Proserpine; then will I make Palamon a nosegay; then let him—marke me—then—

Doct. How prettily she's amisse! note her a little further. 24

Daugh. Faith Ile tell you, sometime we goe to barly-breake, we of the blessed. Alas, 'tis a fore life they have i' th' other place, such burning, frying, boyling, hissing, howling, chattering, cursing. O, they have shrowd meafure! Take heede: if one 28 be mad, or hang, or drowne themselves, thither they goe, Jupiter blesse us! and there shall we be put in a caldron of lead and usurers' greafe, amongst a whole million of cutpurfes, and there boyle like a gamon of bacon that will never be 32 enough.

Daugh. Lords and courtiers, that have got maids with 36 child, they are in this place; they shall stand in fire up to the navle, and in yce up to th' hart, and there th' offending part burnes, and the deceaving part freezes; in troth, a very greev-ous punishment, as one would thinke, for such a trifle; be-40 leve me, one would marry a leaprous witch, to be rid on 't, Ile assure you.

Doct. How she continues this fancie! 'Tis not an engrafted madnesse, but a most thicke and profound mellencholly.

44 Daugh. To heare there a proud lady and a proud city-wife howle together! I were a beaft and I'd call it good sport: one cries, "O! this smoake!" [th' other] "This fire!"
one cries, "O, that ever I did it behind the arras!" and then 48 howles; th' other curses a suing fellow and her garden house.

I will be true, my stars, my fate, &c. [Sings.

[Exit.

Jail. What thinke you of her, fir?

Doct. I think she has a perturbed minde, which I cannot 52 minister to.

Jail. Alas, what then?

Doct. Understand you she ever affected any man ere she beheld Palamon?

56 Jail. I was once, fir, in great hope she had fixd her liking on this gentleman, my friend.

Woo. I did thinke so too, and would account I had a great pen'worth on 't, to give halfe my state, that both she and I at 60 this present stood unfainedly on the same tearmes.

Doct. That intemprat surfeit of her eye hath distemperd the other senses: they may returne and settle againe to execute their preordaind faculties; but they are now in a most extrava-64 gant vagary. This you must doe: confine her to a place where the light may rather seeme to steale in then be permitted; take upon you, yong fir her friend, the name of Palamon, say you come to eate with her, and to commune of love; this will catch her attention, for this her minde beates [IV. 3] upon; other objects, that are inferted tweene her minde and eye, become the pranks and friskins of her madnes: sing to her, such greene songs of love as she sayes Palamon hath sung in prison; come to her, sticke in as sweet flowers as the 72 season is mistress of, and thereto make an addition of some other compounded odours, which are grateful to the sense; all this shall become Palamon, for Palamon can sing, and Palamon is sweet, and ev'ry good thing: desire to eate with her, [carve] 76 her, drinke to her, and still among intermingle your petition of grace and acceptance into her favour: learne what maides have bene her companions and play-pheeres, and let them repaire to her with Palamon in their mouthes, and appeare with 80 tokens, as if they suggested for him. It is a falsehood she is in, which is with falsehoods to be combated. This may bring her to eate, to sleepe, and reduce what's now out of square in her, into their former law and regiment: I have seene it approved, 84

 how many times I know not; but to make the number more,
 I have great hope in this. I will, betweene the passages of this project, come in with my applyance. Let us put it in execution; and hasten the successe, which doubt not, will bring 88 forth comfort. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [Athens. A room in the prison.]

[V. 2] Enter Doctor, Jailor, and Wooer in habite of Palamon.

Doct. Has this advice I told you done any good upon her?

Woo. O very much; the maids that kept her company
Have halfe perfwaded her that I am Palamon;
4 Within this halfe houre she came finiling to me,
And asked me what I 'ld eate, and when I 'ld kisse her:
I told her presently, and kift her twice.

Doct. 'Twas well done: twentie times had bin far better;
8 For there the cure lies mainely.

Woo. Then she told me
She 'ld watch with me to-night, for well she knew
What houre my fit would take me.

Doct. Let her doe so;
And when your fit comes, fit her home, and presently.

12 Woo. She would have me sing.

Doct. You did so?

Woo. No.

Doct. 'Twas very ill done, then;
You should observe her ev'ry way.

Woo. Alas,
I have no voice, fir, to confirme her that way!

16 Doct. That 's all one, if yee make a noyfe:

If she intreate againe, doe any thing;

Lye with her, if she aske you.

Jail. Hoa, there, doctor!

Doct. That 's but a niceness; ;
Nev'r cast your child away for honestie :
Cure her first this way ; then, if thee will be honest,
She has the path before her.

Jail. Thanke yee, doctor.

Doct. Pray, bring her in,
And let 's see how thee is. 24

Jail. I will, and tell her
Her Palamon staies for her : but, doctor,
Me thinks you are i' th' wrong itill. [Exit.

Doct. Goe, goe ;
You fathers are fine fooles : her honesty !
And we should give her phyficke till we finde that— 28

Woo. Why, doe you thinke she is not honest, fir ?

Doct. How old is she ?

Woo. She 's eighteene.

Doct. She may be ;
But that 's all one, 'tis nothing to our purpose :
What e'er her father saies, if you perceave 32
Her moode inclining that way that I spoke of,
Videlicet, the way of flesh—you have me ?

Woo. [Yes,] very well, fir.

Doct. Please her appetite,
And doe it home ; it cures her, ipso facto, 36
The mellencholly humour that infects her.

Woo. I am of your minde, doctor.

Doct. You'l finde it so. She comes, pray [humour] her.

He turnes ye like a top.

NOTES.

WHEREVER the text of the Quarto has been materially altered in this revised text, the change has been indicated by enclosing the new reading in brackets. Changes of punctuation have not been indicated in this way.

Such of the stage-directions as are enclosed in brackets have been added from Dyce's edition, 1876. For an account of the various editions referred to, see preface to the Quarto Reprint.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ. List first given in Fol. 1679, imperfectly; the list here as given by Dyce, 1876.

PROLOGUE. Probably by Fletcher. Several of his favourite images are employed in it, and the general style resembles that of his undoubted prologues. See General Introduction for a few remarks on this.

5. shake to loose] i. e. at losing. See Note, I. i. 150/162. lose frequently so spelt in old books, and almost invariably in this play.

24. almost breathlesse swimme] See Note, IV. i. 139/180.

29. two hours' travel] The various allusions to the length of performances which occur in the prologues and epilogues of this period are worth noting; three hours is sometimes mentioned, but two seems to have been oftener promised, perhaps as a sop to the 'understanding gentlemen of the ground.' (v. Prol. Humorous Lieutenant—'and short enough, we hope;' and to The Coxcomb.) Most plays probably took from two and a half to three hours for representation. The following list will illustrate this, containing all the allusions in Sh., B. and F., Ben Jonson, Massinger, and Ford's prologues and epilogues, with a few from other sources. Two Hours: Sir R. Stapylton's Verses on Fletcher's Works (ed. Darley, I. li.); Love's Pilgrimage, prol.; Four Plays in One, Induction; Henry VIII., prol.; Romeo and Juliet, prol.; Ram Alley, or Merry Tricks, epil. (Hazlitt's Dodsley, x. 380); D'Avenant, Unfortunate Lovers, prol.; Sir Aston Cokain's lines "To my friend Mr Thomas Randolph," etc.; Cleveland's Works, p. 312, ed. 1742, Elegy on Ben Jonson; and "To the Memory of Ben Jonson," by Ja. Mayne. Three Hours: Shirley's Preface, B. and F.; The Loyal Subject, epil.; The Lover's Progress, prol. (this, like several other prologues and epilogues in the Fol. B. and F., was written after Fletcher's death, for a revival of the play).

ACTS AND SCENES. The Quarto division has been followed throughout. Some editors (Weber, Dyce, Skeat) have joined the first two scenes of Act II. together, as one scene. But the Quarto rightly makes a distinction, II. i. being by Shakspeare, II. ii. by Fletcher; the very fact of the scenes overlapping in point of time goes to prove the separate authorship. Dr Ingram has pointed out an example of the confusion caused by the modern arrangement (N. S. S. Trans. pt II, p. 455. Note the "unconscious testimony" there afforded of the value of the 'stopt-line' test). See also Mr Skeat's Pref., p. xii. n.

ACT I.

Scene I.

Enter Hymen] See As You Like It, V. iv. (and the 'wedlock-hymn' there sung); Philaster, V. iii.; B. Jonson's Hymenæi; Pericles, III. prol. 9; L'Allegro, 126; Four Plays in One (Tr. of Death, sc. iv.); Taming of A Shrew (Shakespeare Soc. ed. 1844, p. 38); B. Jonson's Hue and Cry after Cupid; Chapman's Widow's Tears.

Her tresses likewise hanging] Cf. stage-dir. V. i. 136/142-3, where Emilia is "bride-habited, but mayden-hearted." Dr Nicholson notes here: "this appearance of the bride in dishevelled hair, apparently a classic custom (Jonson refers to Sext. Pompon. F.), betokened virginity, and was in use up to Jacobian times at least. The most remarkable example was that of the Countess of Essex when married to Somerset.—'She, thinking all the world ignorant of her slie practices, hath the impudence to appear in the habit of a Virgin, with her hair pendent almost to her feet; which Ornament of her body (though a fair one) could not cover the deformities of her soul.' A. Wilson's Life of James I., p. 72. Donne, in his Epithalamium, also alludes to it. See Webster's White Devil, p. 27, ed. 1859; and Jonson's Hymenæi on the first marriage of this same Countess of Essex."

wheaten garland] The origin of this custom is not clear; the wheaten wreath seems to have been worn as an emblem of fertility, and perhaps also of peace (the causer of plenty.—"As peace should still her wheaten garland wear," Hml. V. ii. 41). That this wheaten wreath "was well in the writer's mind" is shewn by I. i. 65/68. "Ceres appears in the masque in the Tempest to bless with Juno the marriage, and she (Demeter) as the goddess of fertility was considered a goddess of marriage. In the representations also she wore a wheat-ear chaplet. Was, however, the wheat-ear chaplet a known custom, or did the authors, remembering this of Ceres, and remembering perhaps the only religious marriage of the Romans—confarreatio—invent this show?" (Dr Nicholson.)

Led by Pirithous] Theobald's correction (O. Edd. reading Theseus) clearly rendered necessary by the direction—"Then Theseus, betweene two other Nymphs with wheaten chaplets on their heads,"—when considered with the later direction—"The 1. Queene fals downe at the foote of Theseus; The 2. fals downe at the foote of Hypolyta"—shewing that Theseus and Hippolyta were walking at some little distance from one another. Subsequent editors (Mr Tyrrell excepted) have adopted Theobald's reading, but Dr Nicholson opposes the change, and considers that the authors were here thinking of the phrase (founded on the custom) uxorem ducere. "It is true that this referred to the leading home, but that would not matter. It is evidence of the strength and significance of the custom that in Greek marriages a widower did not conduct his wife, but that this office then fell to a friend such as Pirithous. The passage that will probably be quoted against me, I take to be pretty decisive in favour of the old reading. When Theseus makes up his mind to leave his bride on the instant to march against Creon, and says—

‘Pirithous

Lead on the bride,’

he does so because he clearly makes Pirithous his proxy in the marriage ceremony and ensuing feast”—[But does not Theseus mean that Pir. is to continue leading the bride and not to go with him?]

“‘Omit not anything

In the pretended celebration,’

Where, as usual in Shakspeare, pretended is a word of curiosa felicitas, having a double significance.”

SONG. Spalding assigns this song to Shakspeare, and thinks it “very unlike the more formal and polished rhymes of Fletcher” (Letter, p. 28). Mr Furnivall, Dr Nicholson, Prof. Dowden, and many others, dissent from this opinion, and, although at first I opposed, I am every day more and more inclined to agree with the latter view. It is certainly remarkable to notice the selection of flowers and the resemblance of some of the epithets to those in Shakspeare’s plays; it is especially significant if (as however we have no right to do in a consideration of the kind) we add Mr Skeat’s ingenious (but mistaken) emendation hairbells to the list; and all the birds of ill omen may also be more or less closely paralleled from Shakspeare. To these facts add that not a single line or even epithet in the song can be paralleled from Beaumont and Fletcher’s whole works, and we have seemingly a very strong case of internal evidence to support Spalding’s view. But, on the other hand, we can notice that the flowers are paralleled from two or three ‘posy’ passages in certain plays, viz., Winter’s Tale (IV. iv. 100–132), Cymbeline (IV. ii. 219–225), and Midsummer Night’s Dream (II. i. 250); we can also notice that the list of birds is a mere catalogue with very formal and commonplace attributes: the slanderous cuckoo, the boding raven, the chattering pie,—and if Seward’s chough hoar be admitted, the insertion, for mere rhyme’s sake, of an epithet without any ethical significance. Taking this song with that in the fifth scene, some resemblance in the mere stringing together of symbolic objects will be noticed; while both songs are deficient in clearness and directness of reference. On the whole, it is difficult to decide, and opinion must vary as each reader hears more or less distinctly the ring of Shakspeare’s tone in the verse, and links this perception to the internal evidence; or else, refusing to recognize Shakspeare as the writer on æsthetic grounds, he will abstain from referring the song to Shakspeare, Fletcher, or perhaps some third writer (perhaps the lost play of 1594?) on the merits of the literal evidence in its present incomplete state. Mr Skeat (Intro. p. xxii.) thinks that Fletcher may have added this song. It must be admitted that the song is essentially and indispensably part of the scene, and sufficient for all dramatic purposes. Even its seemingly fragmentary state (noticed by Sidney Walker) might be accounted for by the fact that Shakspeare only tells us enough to acquaint us with the “necessary question of the play,” directly and explicitly. Where the evidence is inconclusive, conjecture tends only to mislead; and (though, following Hickson's arrangement, I treat the song as if it were Shakspeare's, perhaps more fully because not certainly so) I refrain from expressing any definite view on the question of its authorship.

4. Maiden pinckes] i. e. 'fresh pinks' (Skeat); or the matted pinck specially commended for its smell by Bacon, Of Gardens; see Mr Wright's Glossary, Golden Treas. ed. s.v. Pinck.

5. Daisies] Included among Bacon's "Low Flowers, being withal sweet, and sightly." See too Notes & Queries, May 1, 1875, p. 347. This line is especially urged by Mr Furnivall as un-Shaksperian. Cowley calls "Daisies the first-born of the teeming spring," Sylva, p. 51, ed. 1684.

6. sweet time true] thyme. Cf. Oth., I. iii. 326. M. N. D., II. i. 249. And—

See "A Nosegaie alwaies sweet," in A Handeful of Pleasant Delites, 1584 (Park's Heliconia, II. pp. 1—6). The significances of the following flowers are explained:—Lavender, 'for lovers true,' 'desiring'; Rosemarie, 'for remembrance'; Sage, 'for sustenance'; Fenel, 'for flaterers'; Violet, 'for faithfulness'; Roses, 'to rule me, with reason, as you will'; Jeliflowers, 'for gentleness'; Carnations, 'for graciousnesse'; Marigolds

"is for marriage,
That would our minds suffise,
Least that suspicion of us twaine
By anie meanes should rise:" etc.

Penirial, 'to serve as a remembrancer'; Cowsloppes, 'for counsel.'

7. Prime-rose] Cf. Quarles, Stanzas, quoted in Chambers' Cyclop. Eng. Lit.; Lycidas, 142; Wint. T., IV. iv. 122; Cymb., IV. ii. 222; B. Jonson, Pan's Anniversary. For derivation (which is not very certain), see Wordsworth, River Duddon, xxii. (cf. Eccles. Sonn. xlvi.); Prior's Names of English Plants. Mr Skeat has kindly sent me the following note, amending the note already published in his edition:—

"There is an allusion here to the apparent etymology of the French name for the primrose, viz. primevère. Primevère is, or was thought to be, for prima veris; or in other words, the 'first-born child of Ver.' The true etymology is rather primula veris, if the word was taken from Latin; but Brachet supposes that it was merely borrowed from the Ital. primavera, a name used of flowers that come in the early spring." Prime-roses, the usual spelling in old writers, is that used by Bacon, Of Gardens. Chaucer, pryme-rose. Ver. cf. Chapman, Minor Poems (ed. 1875, p. 40).

9. With her bells dimme] Qo. F2 bells dimm, the rest bells dim, except Skeat, hairbells dim. Mr Skeat's emendation is very ingenious, and supported by strong presumptive evidence, but I cannot, for my own part, admit the validity of his arguments. He says in his Introduction (p. xxii.) that the Song is such a piece as Fletcher "might have added," and yet he bases his change mainly upon the fact of an apparently analogous passage in Shakspeare (Cymbeline, IV. ii. 218). It should be remembered that if we have not Shakspeare in this song, we are under no necessity of assimilating it to his undoubted work; especially as such an assimilation might tend to prejudice us on the question of authorship.

In the first place, Mr Skeat argues that the rhythm of the line positively requires the accent on the second syllable. But is this really so? do not the irregularity of the number of syllables and the words used in these third lines, rather indicate that there is but one emphatic word in the line: hue, true, dim, trim, sense, hence, pie, fly! Besides, there is another and important structural obstacle to Mr Skeat's arrangement. Looking through the song we see one half (3 lines exactly) of each stanza occupied by one idea (v. ll. 1—3, 7—9, 13—15, 22—24), and the remaining half devoted to a group of objects; Mr Skeat's change would destroy this designed symmetry. Again, Mr Skeat urges: "(1) that her bells makes no sense at all; (2) that Shakespeare couples the 'azured harebell' with the 'pale primrose'. . . ; and (3) that there is no objection to the epithet dim as applied to such a flower. See Shak. Winter's Tale, IV. iv. 118:

daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty; violets dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes,
Or Cytherea's breath; pale primroses, &c."

These arguments do not appear to me to establish Mr Skeat's case. Take them in the inverted order. (3) violets dim is not a parallel to hairbells dim, as the sweetness of the violet's smell is contrasted with the radiant beauty of the daffodils that conquers the winds of March, dim serving to subordinate the colour to the perfume, and perhaps meaning "half-hidden from the eye," retiring, modest; or, as Chapman (Minor Poems, p. 130, cf. p. 39,) has it: "with bosom-hung and hidden heads." Schmidt explains dim: "wanting beauty, homely," but against this prosy interpretation of the "glowing violet," see Sonn. xcix., and Ven. 124. In the Phoenix Nest, 1593 (Park's Heliconia, vol. II. p. 135):—

"Sweete violets (Loves paradise), that spread
Your gracious odours, which you couched beare
Within your palie faces,
Upon the gentle wings of some calme breathing winde,
That plaies amid the plaine," &c.

(? referring to some special kind of sweet violet, as perhaps in W. T.).

Again, though the epithet dim might be applied to one variety of the hairbell proper (whose flowers are sometimes white), it is scarcely applicable either to the bluebell or to the ordinary hairbell. Shakspeare speaks of the azure veins, that is, the clear, translucent, blue veins, "of heaven's own tinct;" and similarly therefore of the azured harebell, like thy veins (v. Lucr., 419; Cymb., II. ii. 22; Temp., v. 43). Dim, on the contrary, is applicable to the pale primrose: cf. M. N. D., I. i. 215:—

"And in the woods, where often you and I Upon faint primrose beds were wont to lie."

(2) The fact that Shakspeare couples the 'azured harebell' with the 'pale primrose' in Cymb. IV. ii. 219 (even assuming him to have written this song) does not involve that we should have them coupled here, else why not have the violet or daffodil, instead of two summer-flowers, the marigold and larkspur? Mr Skeat adds on to his note the remark that "The true hairbell (so called in modern works, with reference to the slenderness of its stalk) is the Campanula rotundifolia, but the name was frequently applied to the Agraphis nutans, the wild hyacinth or bluebell; and the latter is probably here intended, both because it is an earlier flower and because the epithet dim suits it better." Not "probably," but certainly, the wild hyacinth or bluebell (Hy. non scriptus) is here to be the meaning, unless we understand the boy to strew flowers which blossom—the primrose in March and April, and the hairbell (proper) in July and August. (See Jenkinson's Brit. Plants, pp. 26, 31, ed. 1775.) But though bluebell must be the meaning in the Two Noble Kinsmen song, it is not so certainly the sense in Cymbeline. "While summer lasts," Arviragus will strew Fidele's grave (cf. Per., IV. i. 18); and it is just possible that the four seasons may be symbolized by their respective emblems: pale primrose of spring and early summer; the azured hairbell, reflecting the blue midsummer sky; the leaf (coming forth in May, but Autumn's very type) of eglantine, linking May's sweetness to the "moist rich smell of the rotting leaves" in the late season;—

"Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are none,
To winter-ground thy corse."

Such a succession is both possible and natural, and may be signified by the passage. The point is, at all events, open to doubt until it can be shown that Shakspeare's age knew not of the Campanula rotundifolia as the harebell, but solely denominated Hyacinthus non scriptus by that name; certainly, while doubt on this point exists, it takes a good deal of ground from beneath any hypothesis founded on the analogy. (It is certain that harebell was formerly a common name for the bluebell; e. g. see Parkinson, Paradisus, p. 122 = Iacinth (q. Dr Prior); Jenkinson, Brit. Plants, p. 70 = Hyacinth; Mackay's Flora Hibernica, p. 137 = Campanula, p. 286 = Hy.; Henfrey's Elem. Botany, p. 303 = Cam.) But (1) bells "makes no sense at all?" This may be objected to on various grounds. e. g. (a) if (as Mr Skeat writes to me) "Primrose, first-born child of Ver" = primula veris, the cowslip is included under that term, and this is sustained by the mention of oxlips afterwards,—"cowslips wan that hang the pensive head" may be said to have bells dim; and "a cowslip's bell" in Temp., V. 89, clenches the argument. But (b) this "cowslip's bell" suggests another and better explanation, for it shews that Shakspeare used the word bell = blossom, not confining it to the campanulaceæ (as indeed we do not when we speak of bluebells), but even applying it to the primulaceæ, and apparently deriving the epithet less from the precise form than from the general appearance and bell-like movements of the flower.

Similarly Mr Tennyson has "flower-bells," etc; and Darwin, Botanic Garden (IV. 576), "silver bells" (= orange blossoms), "close the timorous floret's golden bell" (of the anemone, tragopogon, and other sensitive plants, III. 460); cf. Loves of the Plants (IV. 514), "and each chill Floret clos'd her velvet bell;" (I. 36) "a blossom's bell;" I. 490, etc.

Having vindicated the old reading formally, to some extent at least, does Mr Skeat's assertion receive assent, that "her bells makes no sense at all"?

I explain (as Dr Nicholson has also suggested) that the significance of harbinger is attracted into the expression her bells, and the passage means, bring the Primrose, harbinger that belleteth the advent of spring, as a welcome guest is precluded by peals of the "sweet poetry of steeples." (Perhaps the idea was suggested by a recollection of the scene: the bells at Theseus' wedding?) Mr Tennyson (Adeline) warrants this idea of the flowers ringing:

"Or when little airs arise,
How the merry bluebell rings,
To the mosses underneath?"

I do not insist on all or any of these points as facts proving that Mr Skeat is wrong; I merely plead for the old text—do not these few reasons warrant us at least in retaining the old reading "until further notice;" will Mr Skeat still "have no hesitation in this case," and will it still be "astonishing" to him "that no one has thought of" his reading before?

10. Oxlips] Wint. T., l. c. M. N. D., II. i. 250.

11. Marigolds on deathbeds blowing] cf. Per., IV. i. 16:

". . . and marigolds
Shall as a carpet hang upon thy grave
While summer-days do last."

"The peculiarity in the text is that they are 'blowing,' therefore 'growing,' and it is worth enquiry in addition to the parallelism in Pericles—which is only parallel as refers to strewing—whether the custom of planting marigolds on graves was common? Looking to the significance of the marigold (see N. and Q. s. v.) the custom would be likely to obtain" (Dr Nicholson). Visitors to Bettwys-y-Coed, N. Wales, can see graves planted with many flowers, including (1875) marigolds and "sweet thyme true," in the old churchyard there.

13. nature's children sweet] Flowers are called "Nature's lovely children" by Ann Radcliffe, Mysteries of Udolpho, c. 1.

16. Not an angel of the air] This, the reading of all editions, has been objected to by Theobald, who proposed Augel, from Ital. augello, a bird. However, Dyce's explanation is evidently right: "'bird of the air,' (angel in this sense is a Grecism,—ἄγγελος, i. e. messenger, being applied to birds of augury. Our early writers frequently use the word as equivalent to bird; so in Massinger and Dekker's Virgin Martyr, the Roman eagle is called 'the Roman angel,' Massinger's Works, vol. i. p. 36, ed. Gifford, 1813)." The passage in Massinger—not a close parallel—was first noted by Monck Mason, 1798, and is found in Act II. sc. ii. sp. 17: "the Roman angel's wings shall melt." Closer is this from Ben Jonson's Sad Shepherd, II. ii.—"The dear good angel of the spring, the nightingale" (i. e. that bringeth glad tidings of spring). Cf. "And aerie birds like angels ever sing," Barnabe Barnes, Spiritual Sonnets, x. I have found no example of the word in this sense in Beaumont and Fletcher, nor does it occur in Shakspeare. "Angel refers to birds who would be likened to the good spirits or angels, exclusive of the birds of prey and ill-omen who rather represented the angels who had fallen" (Dr Nicholson). Cf. Iliad, XXIV. 202 (Mr Skeat).

19. The crow] References selected from Schmidt's Shakesp. Lex. show how ill-omened the crow was held to be:—Sonn., lxx.; M. N. D., II. i. 97; W. T., III. ii. 192; H.5., II. i. 91; IV. ii. 51; 2 H.6., IV. x. 90; V. ii. 11; Troil., IV. ii. 9; Cymb., III. i. 83; V. iii. 93.

slanderous cuckoo] The slander of the "cukkow ever unkinde" (Chaucer, Assemb. F., 358) is explained in L. L. L., V. ii. 908. See too "The Cuckoo" in Love-Poems and Humorous Ones, Ballad Soc. 1874, p. 18. Cf. Epistola Ho-Eliañæ, p. 462, ed. 1688 (vol. IV. let. xix.).

20. Boding raven] cf. Troil., V. ii. 191; Oth., IV. i. 22,—“the raven o'er th' infected house, Boding to all.” The night-raven (as Dyce shows) is a different bird, though of similar omen:

“and the night raven,

Which doth use for to call

Men to death's haven.”—(Robin Goodfellow, his Mad

Pranks and Merry Jests, Qo, black-letter, 1628. q. Beloe, Anecd. I. 275.)

This latter is the “night-crow” mentioned in 3 H.6., V. vi. 45. Lt.-Col. Cunningham has noted that Cavendish, in the life of Wolsey, tells us the Cardinal used to call Anne Bullen the “night-crow.”

20. chough hoar] Qo Clough hee; F2 Clough he, ed. 1711, Clough he; Seward, etc., chough hoar. “There can be no reason to doubt therefore of our having got the true substantive; for He we must have an adjective that suits the Chough, and also rhimes to nor; hoar will do both, the Chough having grayish feathers on his head, from whence Shakespeare calls him the russet-pated chough” (M. N. D., III. ii. 21). But russet-pated, as Prof. Newton points out (in Mr Skeat's ed.), is really russet-patted = à pattes rousses (cf. for the single t the ordinary spelling of twinned, twined, etc.); and the rhyme is questionable. See Dyce's Glossary, Rolfe's n. on Temp. II. i. 266, and Mr Skeat's note here. Charles Lamb (Lieut.-Col. Cunningham kindly informed me) “considered that cuckoo and chough rhymed, and altered his copy accordingly,

‘The crow, the slanderous cuckoo,

The boding raven nor the chough,

Nor chatt'ring pie.’”

The pronunciation choo (still, I believe, to be heard in the north of England) is no objection, as the word comes from A.S. ceo (Skeat), and enow, enough, give us a parallel; though chuff (v. Nares) must have been more usual. Lamb's mode of complete excision seems even preferable to Seward's very feeble bit of tinkering. For a most fatal objection to the arrangement chough hoar exists in the fact that hoar is a purely descriptive epithet, and utterly devoid of any symbolic bearing, while all the rest have some reference to the requirements of the case. Assuredly, if Seward's conjecture give the original reading, Shakspeare never wrote the song. It is true that chough was probably a colloquial name for jack-daw; nearly all the passages in Shakspeare would bear such an interpretation; and even here, as betokening dishonesty, it might perhaps be admitted. Besides, the name chough in this sense cannot be considered peculiar to Shakspeare, for what lover of the sainted bird of Rheims can fail to identify him here:—

"The owle eke, that of dethe the bode bryngeth,

The thefe the choghe, and eke the janglynge pye."

Chauc. Assemb. F., ll. 343—345.

(Cf. . . . "like the foolish chough, which loves to steal money only to hide it." Cowley, Essays, 7. Of Avarice, p. 127, sig. U, u. u. 4. ed. 1684.) Probably the name choo, ceo, was once used of Dover Cliff is the jackdaw, because Shakspeare chooses to call (perhaps some special) chough russet-pated in M. N. D. If I speak of a red-legged partridge, is it to be said that I am speaking of that species whenever I mention the word partridge, and is this to be proved of me by quoting my red-legged partridge?" Gilbert White tells us that "Cornish choughs abound, and breed on all the cliffs of the Sussex coast;" a fact which confirms Dr Nicholson's defence of the Lear passage.

Dr Nicholson warns us against confining "colloquial names to scientific species," the more so as the former were often variously applied in different parts. "Palsgrave (Halliwell, Arch. Dict.) gives 'choughe, a yong crowe, corneille;' and Cotgrave under the similar French Chouette has not only chough, cadesse, daw, jackdaw, but the little horn owle (a thievish night-bird) as well. Hence it does not follow that the chough of Dover Cliff is the jackdaw, because Shakspeare chooses to call (perhaps some special) chough russet-pated in M. N. D. If I speak of a red-legged partridge, is it to be said that I am speaking of that species whenever I mention the word partridge, and is this to be proved of me by quoting my red-legged partridge?" Gilbert White tells us that "Cornish choughs abound, and breed on all the cliffs of the Sussex coast;" a fact which confirms Dr Nicholson's defence of the Lear passage.

21. chatt'ring pie] cf. 3 H.6., V. vi. 46-7 :

"The raven rooked her on the chimney's top,
 And chattering pies in dismal discords sung."

22. Bride-house] cf. Taming of A Shrew (ed. 1844. Sh. Soc.), p. 23 :

"Boy. Why come man, we shall have good cheere Anon at the bride house, for your maisters gone to Church to be married alreadie, and thears
 Such cheere as passeth.

San. O brave, I would I had eate no meate this week
 For I have never a corner left in my bellie
 To put a venison pastie in," etc.

Enter 3. Queens] Sidney Walker (Crit. Exam. of the Text of Sh. 1860, III. 340) asks: "Is the Epithalamium broken off by the entrance of the Queens? It seems unfinished; and it is more natural I think it should be interrupted. So of Paris's speech at the tomb, Romeo and Juliet, V. iii."

The entire introduction illustrates Shakspeare's directness and clearness in putting us in possession of the "exact state of affairs at the opening of the play, without any circumlocution or long-winded harangues, but naturally and dramatically" (Hickson, N. S. S. Tr., p. 30*). The procession and song are only inserted for this purpose, and we quickly enter on the dramatised Knights Tale. The chief Chaucer parallels to this Act are: Sc. i. cf. ll. 35—106; Sc. iii. cf. ll. 107—116; Sc. iv. cf. ll. 117—132, 143—171; Sc. v. cf. ll. 133—142 (Aldine Chaucer, vol. II. ed. 1866).

33/34. book of trespasses] This form of speech was very common in Sh.'s day: cf. "the book of virtue," W. T., "the book of life," R. 2., "the devil's book," 2 H.4., "book of memory," 1 H.6., "Jove's own book," "the book of his good acts," Cor., etc. Speaking of this passage, Spalding (p. 29) observes : "These latter lines (29/30-35) are of a character which is perfectly and singularly Shakespeare's. The shade of gravity which so usually darkens his poetry, is often heightened to the most solemn seriousness. The religious thought presented here is most alien from Fletcher's turn of thought.—His energy, sometimes confined within due limits, often betrays him into harshness ; and his liking for familiarity of imagery and expression sometimes makes him careless though both should be coarse, a fault which we find here, and of which Fletcher is never guilty."

40/43. who endure] Qo endured, F2 endure'd, as in later edd. Monck Mason proposed the reading I (following Dyce and Skeat) have adopted, who endure, "as they were still in that situation" (Comments on the Plays of B. and F., &c. By the Right Hon. J. Monck Mason, 1798). endure is also, Dr Nicholson has noted, the more dramatic form, and was probably that used by the authors. Cf. 'If he i'th' blood-siz'd field lay swoln.'

41/44. beakes of ravens, &c.] cf. Jul. Cæs., V. i. :

"And in their steads do ravens, crows, and kites,
Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,
As we were sickly prey."

Tallents is the usual spelling in old books.

45/48. eye of holy Phæbus] cf. H. 5., IV. i. 290: "Sweats in the eye of Phæbus" (Skeat).

48/51. Thou purger of the earth] Spalding, Letter, p. 30, calls attention to this form of speech, and adds : "Verbal names expressing the agent occur, it is true, in Fletcher and others, but they are in an especial manner frequent with Shakspere, who invents them to preserve his brevity, and always applies them with great force and quaintness." Purgers, Jul. Cæs., II. i. 180.

47/50. duke] "a leader, a general, a commander (Lat. Dux)." This explan. (Dyce's and Var. Sh. on M. N. D., I. i. p. 177) suits the wide application of the word better than Dr Schmidt's. Cf. "Theseus, our renowned duke," M. N. D., I. i. 19 (not in Schmidt).

50/53. chapel them] See Dr Abbott's Sh. Gr., § 290. This word, and "to urn their ashes," Spalding italicises as instances "of those bold coinages of words, forced on a mind for whose force of conception common terms were too weak" (p. 30).

56/59. transported] rapt. Cf. l. 188/209.

59/62. vengeance and revenge] These words are similarly coupled in Rich. 2., IV. i. 66: "shall render vengeance and revenge:" apparently to intensify the threat.

62/63. Cápanéus] Chaucer's pronunciation of the word—"Was whilome wyf to Kyng Capáneús"—though different from this, is still quadrisyllabic. Spalding (I think without sufficient grounds) says : "Probably Fletcher would not have committed this false quantity."

63/66. Mars's altar] Qo Marsis, disyll. cf. Tr. and Cress., II. i. 58 ; IV. v. 177, 255, etc. The Lover's Progress, II. iii. Peele's Polyhymnia, ix.

65/68. spread her.] Seward stupidly notes : "The Reader will see that her is prejudicial to the Sense and Measure, and to be discarded." The construction is simplified, and the pause softened, by her [sc. mantle].

67/70. our kinsman] See North's Plutarch, ed. Skeat, p. 279 to p. 290.

69/72. nemean.] Cf. Hml., I. iv. 83, L. L. L., IV. i. 90. There is a similar reference to "Alcides, that master'd monsters," in (Beaumont's part of) Four Plays, Tr. of Honour, sc. ii. Hercules, disyll. "Ercles."

75/78. undertaker] Dyce (quoting Ritson) explains to be "one who undertakes or takes up the quarrel or business of another." Cf. Tw. N., III. iv. 350, Lover's Progress, I. i., and see a good note in Skeat's ed. p. 101.

91/96. for The tenour of thy speech] Seward ("rightly perhaps," Dyce) changed the passage to: "a Servant to The Tenor of thy Speech" (O. Edd. the speech). Servant (as in Philaster, III. ii., Knight of Malta, III. ii., Hazl. Dodsl., VII. 489, and often in Sh.), the correlative of Mistress, was applied not merely to gentlemen by themselves, but was a regular term of address from the ladies to whom they made their court v. Schmidt. s. v. cf. The Phoenix Nest, 1593 (Park, Heliconia, II. p. 113): "Mistress and Servant, titles of mischance," ib. p. 117: "Mistress this grace unto your servant give." "A Lady Forsaken, complayneth" (in The Paradise of Daintie Devices, xxii.) of her lover: "Yet since his servant I became, most like a bondman have I beene," shewing still further the special significance of the word.

99/103. a dove's motion] cf. Lucrece, 457: "Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies."

100/104. blood-siz'd] Hml., II. ii. 484: "o'er-sized with coagulate gore." †

108/114. uncandied] This word does not occur elsewhere in Sh., though we have candy (to become hard) in Temp., II. i. 279, and Tim., IV. iii. 226; and discandy, Ant. and Cleop., III. xiii. 165, and IV. xii. 22.

112/120. there through my tears] This, the reading of the old Edd., was changed by Seward and Sympson into here, etc., as the queen is supposed to be pointing to her heart! "But though she speaks of her heart afterwards, she alludes in this place to her eyes, which she compares to pebbles viewed through a glassy stream; a description which would not apply to her heart."—Monck Mason. Dr Nicholson notes also that the change is to the plural 'em, "either because she is thinking of her eyes as ostents of her grief, or what is much the same, though not perhaps in such accord with the English of the day, because she is thinking of the grief in either eye, and therefore griefs."

117/125. lead his line] weight as with lead.

118/127. Extremity, that sharpens sundry wits, Makes me a fool] cf. The Honest Man's Fortune, III. i. :—

"Cunning Calamity,

That others' gross wits uses to refine,

When I most need it, dulls the edge of mine."

Who has here said in 19 words what Sh. says better in 9? The Hon. M. Fortune was acted in 1613, and perhaps written not long after the 2 N. K. had its first run at the theatre. Dyce considers Beaumont to have shared the authorship with Fletcher, and Professor Ward (Hist. Eng. Dram. Lit., II. 189) hesitatingly expresses the same view. But the Rev. F. G. Fleay (N. S. S. Trans., pt. I. p. 51) considers it to have been written by Fletcher "and Anon."*

* P.S. Mr Fleay's new Sh. Manual does not add to my knowledge of his views on the authorship of this play, as on p. 151 he ascribes it to "F. and Anon.," but on p. 93 to "B. and F." (20/5/76).

I regret very much that Mr Fleay's tables,* by not containing the total number of verse-lines in the plays tabulated, do not enable me to say if the following proportions are those generally found in Beaumont's verse. In Act III. sc. 1. of the Hon. M. F. we have 168 verse-lines, 56 of which have double-endings, or exactly 1 in 3; and 20 rhyme-lines, or 2 in 16·8. These proportions shew plainly that the poem at end "Upon the Honest Man's Fortune, by Mr John Fletcher" is no evidence of single authorship, as Fletcher's average of double-endings is about 1 in 2, or even higher, and as this title really means that the lines "Upon An Honest Man's Fortune" are by Mr John Fletcher. The number of rhyme-lines looks like Beaumont, and the verse often dips into prose for a few speeches and then rises again "prepared for longer flight,"—a characteristic of his manner. Again, the turns of thought and expression seem (to me) quite like e. g. those in the non-Fletcherian part of the Woman-Hater; if (as Mr Fleay thinks) Beaumont had part in this latter, I can see no reason (metrical tables being absent) for departing from Dyce's opinion on the authorship of the Honest Man's Fortune. Probably then it was Beaumont who has thus borrowed this striking expression.

123/132. the ground-piece] The general sense is:—"If you were merely a painter's dull, lifeless, pictured-surface I would buy you, you exhibit such heart-deep grief, to teach me to know a genuine case of sorrow when I might meet it; but as you are much more—a very woman like myself,—your distress (which is heart-deep) shines so strongly upon my heart that it shall make a return-impression upon my brother's, and cause him to pity you as I do." Emilia means that the Queen's is a presentation of sorrow, and not a representation merely. Heart sorrow, not face sorrow. With this passage we may cf. Hml., IV. vii. 108:—

"Laertes, was your father dear to you,
Or are you but the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?"

Webster, The Devil's Law Case, I. i. :—

. . . . "But indeed,
If ever I would have mine drawn to the life,
I would have a painter steal it at such time
I were devoutly kneeling at my prayers:
There is then a heavenly beauty in 't, the soul
Moves in the superficies."

And especially, Lucrece, ll. 1366—1582. Piece was the regular word for a work of art, picture or statue (v. Schmidt, s. v. and for its use in composition, cf. Webster, Vitt. Cor. 2d-last sp.—"I limned this night-piece, and it was my best").

The precise signification of ground is not so clear. It may (1) be taken in the general sense of surface, and ground-piece = pictured as distinguished from sculptured work, superficial seeming. Or (2) ground in the sense of foundation (cf. ground-work), and ground-piece = model, subject matter. Or (3) ground may mean principal, main, chief; and ground-piece = master-piece, chef d'œuvre. Or (4) in the technical sense of foil, dull "ground" of a picture, as contrasted with the glare and prominence of her sorrow. Compare Ger. Grund, Grundriss, Grundstück, etc. In any case the general sense is the same; seeming and being are contrasted. Read The Winter's Tale, V. iii., if you cannot realise how the soul may be wrought by the instruction of a "poor image."

* . . . "some of the particulars being of that impressive order of which the significance is entirely hidden, like a statistical amount without a standard of comparison, but with a note of exclamation at the end."—Middlemarch, p. 327, one vol.

The word ground-piece does not occur elsewhere in Shakspeare, nor in Beaumont and Fl.; however, none of the editors, Mr Skeat excepted, have vouchsafed to notice it. Mr Skeat explains: "(perhaps) a study for a picture, a sketch." With the Shakspeare-like tone of the passage, we may contrast somewhat similar scenes in the Maid's Tragedy, II. ii., and The Lover's Progress, IV. iv.

139/149. asprays] cf. Coriol., IV. vii. 36, and see Staunton's n. Dyce refers to Yarrell's British Birds, I. 25; and Nares (in addition to the above instances) quotes from Drayton, Polyolb. Song xxv. :—

"The osprey, oft here seen, though seldom here it breeds,
Which over them the fish no sooner do espy,
But betwixt him and them by an antipathy,
Turning their bellies up as though their death they saw,
They at his pleasure lie, to stuff his gluttonous maw."

Messrs Wright and Halliwell (whose ed. of Nares I have used) add: "Chapman (Hom. II. xviii., infin.) calls it the ospringer." See Halliwell, Arch. Dict., s.v. Aspere.

143/155. drams, precipitance] Seward and Sympson placed a comma between these words in 1750, since when Editors have vied in discovering recondite significations for the word precipitance. e. g. the Edd. 1778 think it means "the unhappy precipitation of suicides, in getting rid of their lives." However, the Queen is here enumerating the various agents or means of suicide, viz., hanging, stabbing, poison, and ("leaping down precipices," Seward; "the act of precipitation," Mason; "precipitation from heights," Weber; "the act of throwing one's-self down a precipice," Dyce.) Precipitance does not occur elsewhere in Sh.; but Dyce's explanation is confirmed by H.8, V. i. 140 (? Fl.); Lear, IV. vi. 50. (Coriol. III. ii. 4, precipitation, "the steep Tarpeian death," i. e. being thrown, not self-throwing.) Generally, Sh. includes drowning in his lists of suicidal agencies, and possibly Mason's explanation, as most inclusive, may be the right one. See note on III. ii. 29. Knight (followed by Mr Skeat) reads "Cords', knives', drams' precipitance;" with the meaning "headlong haste, desperate rashness" (Skeat).

145/157. humaine] "Humane (such invariably is the spelling of O. Edd., never human); the accent is always on the first syllable, even in Wint., III. ii. 166." Dr Schmidt. Cf. I. 234/261 of this scene.

147/160. visitating] "Visiting [Ant. and Cl., IV. xv. 68] and visitating, inspecting, surveying."—Dyce. Sidney Walker on Temp., I. ii., "We'll visit Caliban, my slave," notes, "i. e. look after him," and refers to this passage. Visitation is a common word in Sh. in the sense of Visit.

150/162. I will give you comfort, To give your dead lords graves] To give, i. e. by giving, one of the commonest constructions in Shakspeare. Cf. to be = by being, infra, III. i. 25; Night Walker, III. iii.; Faithful Friends, I. i., etc. Dr Abbott (quoting nearly thirty examples of this "gerundive use of the infinitive," Sh. Gr., § 356) explains it thus:—"To was originally used not with the infinitive but with the gerund in -e, and, like the Latin 'ad' with the gerund, denoted a purpose. Thus 'to love' was originally 'to lovene,' i. e. 'to (or toward) loving' (ad amandum). Gradually, as to superseded the proper infinitival inflection, to was used in other and more indefinite senses, 'for,' 'about,' 'in,' 'as regards,' and, in a word, for any form of the gerund as well as for the infinitive." Truly Monck Mason went parously nigh the Still Lion when he wrote: "The words will in the first line, and to in the last, appear to have been erroneously transposed. The passage must originally have run thus:—

'And I, to give you comfort,
Will give your dead lords graves.'

But what would Dr Ingleby say of this?—"As both the Sense and Measure are somewhat deficient, there is reason to suspect a Part of the Sentence dropt, perhaps somewhat like the following might have been the Original:—

But I will give you Comfort, and engage Myself and Pow'rs to give your dead Lords Graves.'

(I had written thus much some months before Mr Skeat's edition appeared, and it was with no little surprise I found that Mr Skeat had accepted Mr Seward's ingenious conjecture.) Weber agrees with Seward "that some omission has probably taken place, but cannot assent to Mason's thinking an amendment necessary." Sidney Walker suggests a good arrangement of the lines which (with Dyce) I have adopted, merely omitting now (gratuitously inserted by Seward) from "And that work [now] Presents," etc. Dyce and Skeat adopt Seward's insertion of now, the former however placing it between brackets in his early ed. and omitting it entirely in edd. '67, '76.

155/168. with it's own] Its (gen. spelt it's) is found ten times in Fol. 1623. I have noted over thirty instances in Darley's (i. e. Weber's) Beaumont and Fletcher, but cannot say whether there are so many in the old edd. As in Sh., the word will be found two or three times in a single scene, and then not for whole plays (e. g. thrice in Beggar's Bush, II. iii.). Its occurs again, I. ii. 65/72.

157/172. Wrenching] Of course "corrected in 1750." The old spelling is probably phonetic, and I find the folio reading (also noticed by Dyce) Henry VIII., I. i. 167, to be:—

"and like a glasse
Did breake i' th' wrenching."

(Cf. rinch, in The optick glasse of humors, 1607, fo. 2.—Dr Ingleby.) This pronunciation is still heard in parts of Ireland. Seward compares Lear, IV. iii.

159/174. And his army full] Sidney Walker quotes these lines as one with the preceding speech:

"Now you may take him
Drunk with his victory, and his army full
Of bread and sloth."

Simply noting "And's," and adding V. iii. 44/55,

"Are bedfellows in his visage. Palamon
Has a most menacing aspect;" etc., with the note "In's."

167/184. Let us be widows to our woes] Hickson illustrates Shakspeare's "certain boldness of metaphor, carried sometimes to that extreme that it requires a considerable effort of the understanding to follow it," by quoting these lines. I confess I do not see the meaning at all clearly; it seems to be: "Let us be widows to our woes, as well as to our husbands; for as Creon has left our dead lords unburied, so our woes have been left unburied by Theseus." I only throw out this as the best explanation I can attempt; and as Seward's may appear clearer to my readers than it does to me, I add it. "Let us continue still in the most distress'd Widow-hood by the continuance of our Woes. The expression tho' not quite clear, will give this Sense which is certainly a fine one; and in such Writers as our Authors we must not always expect that Perspicuity as we meet with in Poems of less Depth. For this reason I cannot admit a Conjecture of Mr Simpson, tho' . . . it is undoubtedly an ingenious one.

Let us be wedded to our woes."

177/197. Jove from a synod] The regular word in Sh. for an assembly of the Gods: A. Y. L., III. ii. 158; Cor., V. ii. 74; Hml., II. ii. 516; Ant. and Cl., III. x. 5; Cymb., V. iv. 89. Cf. B. and F., The Prophetess, III. iii.: "the synod of the gods."

179/199. twinning cherries] Qo twynning, F2 and ed. 1711, twining. Altered by Theobald. See Note, II. i. 64/70. So in Wint. T., I. ii. 67, "We were as twyn'd Lambs," is the Fol. reading (Schmidt), and Cleveland spells twinn'd with one n (Works, ed. 1687). Shakspeare does not use the word twinning of lips elsewhere; B. and F. have it, Philaster, II. ii. (Fol. 1679: twin'd cherries, cf. ib. IV. iii.), and Night Walker, III. vi. (Fol. 1679: two twinn'd cherries). And cf. Gesta Grayorum (Nicholls, Progresses of Q. Elizabeth, vol. II. p. 70):

"Musicke is the soule of Measure, speeding both in equall grace, Twines are they begot of pleasure, when she wishly numbred space."

180/200. tasteful] Not elsewhere in Sh.

183/203. Mars spurn his drum] Mars' drum is mentioned twice again, V. i. 63 and V. i. 86. Sidney Walker, on Ven. and Adon., xviii. (Mars . . . "scorning his churlish drum"), notes "giving Mars a drum instead of the classical trumpet," and refers here and to All's Well, III. iii. 11. But Mars' drum is frequently alluded to by the other writers of the time, e. g. several times by G. Peele.

210/234. For success, &c.] Alexandrine.

212/236. Follow your soldier. As before, hence you] Mason. Qo to ed. 1778, Follow your Soldier (as before) hence you. "The sense of this passage is obscured by the parenthesis and false pointing: it should stand thus— . . . [as in the text] . . . The first three words are addressed to the Queens; the remainder to Arbesius [sic], whom he had before desired to draw out troops for the enterprize."—Monck Mason. Weber quotes this note, and spells Arbesius in the direction [Exit ARBESIVS], but rightly in the text.

213/237. Aulis] Theobald. O. Edd. Anly. Theobald proposed Aulis, which Seward believes to be "the true Word," although "it would indeed be more convincing were there a River of that Name," and "perhaps Banks may be also a Corruption; it might have been At the Gates, or at the Port, or at the Back of Aulis." But bank, as Mr Skeat has noted, is applied by Sh. to the sea-margin in 1 H.4., III. i. 45; and (Schmidt enables me to add) in Sonn., lvi. 11; 2 H.6., III. ii. 83; R.3., IV. iv. 525; and sea-bank, M. of V., V. 11; Oth., IV. i. 138. The reading Aulis is probably right; Seward's geographical objection ("very far-fetched and ridiculous," in Weber's opinion) is certainly of very little weight. It is a curious coincidence that in Peele's Battle of Alcazar, III. iii., "Lying for want of wind in Aulis' gulf," the Qo reads Aldest. Cf. "Aulis' strand," Peele, Tale of Troy. Heath proposed to read "Ilisse" for the river Ilissus (Dyce). Dr Ingleby suggests that we should merely invert the n to give us Auly. But is for y would have been a very likely mistake for a reader of Elizabethan handwriting to make. Cf. n. III. vi. 144/183.

216/240.] Explaining the fact of a standing army.

217/241. stamp . . . current . . . token] Seward notes that the sense is equivocal, referring to the currency of coin and also "to his Haste."

223/248. The feast's solemnity Shall want till your return] Edd. 1750, want, which Sidney Walker thinks is the true reading. All other texts, want, which seems genuine, "signifying, the celebration of the nuptials should remain incomplete till his return, as Pirithous had rather accompany Theseus than stay behind to be his proxy, as the latter desires" (Edd. 1778). Solemnity is here used in the second sense given by Dr Schmidt: "awful grandeur, stateliness, dignity," and not in the first and commoner one: "ceremony performed (especially of the celebration of nuptials, cf. solemn)," v. Schmidt, s. v.; Dryden, Globe ed. p. 97; and Furness, Variorum Macbeth, III. vi. 8.

233/260. being sensually subdued] cf. A King and No King, IV. iv. :

"Know that I have lost,
The only difference betwixt man and beast,
My reason."

Scene 2.

Ascribed to Shakspeare and Fletcher. That Spalding had a sense of some incongruity may be inferred from his criticism:—"The scene, though not lofty in tone, does not want interest, and contains some extremely original illustrations." Hickson, after a review to which I need only refer (p. 36*) concludes: "We think that either Shakspeare and Fletcher wrote the scene in conjunction, or that it was originally written by Fletcher, and afterwards revised and partially rewritten by Shakspeare. From the entrance of Valerius, however, it appears to be entirely by the latter." (Does it not therefore appear more likely that the view put forward by Spalding, and upheld by Messrs Dyce, Skeat, and Swinburne,—that Shakspeare was the first sketcher of the piece, Fletcher the "padder;" that the play is "gilt o'er-dusted," rather than "dust that is a little gilt,"—gives after all the true explanation of the mystery? Speculation on this point, however, must to a very great extent depend upon conjecture and individual opinion, founded on certain modes of regarding the work.) Compare with the scene, The Captain, II. i., and The Double Marriage, II. iii. (and with this, II. ii. of the present play).

16/17. Martialist] Not elsewhere in Sh. ; B. and F. have it twice, A King and No King, II. ii.; and The Laws of Candy, V. i. Cf. Spanish Tragedy, I. pp. 8, 9. (Hazlitt's Dodsley, vol. v.) See Hickson on this speech, p. 36*.

18/20. flurled] flurt-gills occurs once in Sh., flurt never. Nares, quoting one instance (from Peele's Old Wives Tale, 1595) has "Flurting, Scorning?" Examples of the words flurt and flirt may be found in B. and F. The Pilgrim, I. i.: "I'll not be fool'd, nor flurled!" Rule a Wife, III. v.: "a flirted fool." Span. Curate, V. ii., "flirts" = tricks. Cf. also Hudibras, I. 450; Chapman, May Day, II. iii.: "If you think good, you may flirt away again as soon as you see him" (ed. Shepherd, p. 282 b). Hazl. Dodsl. vii. 295 (v. n.): "Mistress Flirt—yea, foul strumpet, Light-a-love, short-heels." Mr Seward, pref. B. and F., p. lix., ed. 1750, says . . . "it is still the fashion to flurt at the names of Critic and Commentator, and almost to treat the very science with derision." "To flirt a fan" is still a common expression, and Dr Nicholson gives me the following lesson on flirtation:—"Though a flirt in our sense, and in the much stronger Elizabethan sense, was probably of the same origin with flurt (scorn), yet they branched off sufficiently to be considered two words. The original meaning seems (as rightly given by Richardson) to be to toss. To flirt or flurt water by an action of the finger and thumb is still in use; and from this action—still a disdainful movement in common use—it came to signify to scorn, jeer, or cast a disdainful joke upon. That it arose thus or from any other casting, just as we have the metaphoric phrase of "casting mud on one," is shewn by quotations from Udall and Milton in Richardson, the very happy and idiomatic use of it in Quarles, given by Halliwell and Wright in Nares, as by "flurled fool" in B. and F. Commentators on Sh. have I think erred in giving flurt in flurt-gill, R. and F., II. iv., the mere sense of flirt—a woman of light behaviour. Gill-flirt about 1700 seems to have had that meaning, but if one looks well into what the Nurse meant, and compares it with B. and F. flurt-gillian, it will be evident that she means 'I am none of your light wenches, that you can jeer and flout.'" That the word denoted any quick tossing movement, is shewn from the reference to Hudibras above:

"His draggling Tail hung in the Dirt,
Which on his Rider he wou'd flurt."

Ed. Z. Grey, Pt. I. c. i. l. 450.

The Rev. A. S. Palmer has given ("Leaves from a Word-hunter's Notebook," pp. 33–40) reasons for believing that these are but secondary meanings of the word, and that it is originally "nothing else but a slightly contracted form of the French fleureter (from fleur), to go a-flowering, or, as old Cotgrave gives it in his dictionary (1660), 'Fleureter, lightly to pass over; only to touch a thing in going by it (metaphorically from the little Bee's nimble skipping from flower to flower as she feeds);' and so the cognate word in Spanish, florear, means 'to dally with, to trifle' (Stevens, 1706)." See the entire note.

24/25. purge For her repletion] For, against, as a remedy for. "For (in opposition to): hence 'to prevent.'" Abbott, Sh. Gr., § 154. Repletion not elsewhere found in Sh.

24/25. retain] i. e. employ, take into service, as in Henry VIII, I. ii. 192. Cf. retainer, a person so retained. Heath proposed reclaim; Mr Skeat "would rather read regain; at any rate that is the sense intended." (But then, would not regain anew be the same as saying gain anew anew?)

41/45. As they are here, were to be strangers, and such things to be, mere monsters] Mason first placed the comma after here, the O. Edd. put it after are. The second line has no comma after to be in any preceding edition. I am indebted to Dr Nicholson for the reading and explanation:—"It does not matter to the sense whether we punctuate are, here or are here, but the latter seems to me more idiomatic and rhythmical, and in such things the authority of the old editions is no authority. But Weber's explanation of the rest is quite incorrect, and the true sense requires a comma, as I have placed it, after be. 'Not to be as they are,' says Arcite, 'were to be strangers, and to be such things [as they are] [were to be] mere monsters.' The form of thought and expression is as in a previous passage:

. . . for not to swim, &c.
. . . and to follow, &c.

I am surprised that Dyce, with his great knowledge of Elizabethan English, did not see this." The note in Weber (which Mr Skeat quotes) is: "Arcite says, 'If we were not exactly as they are, we should be here (in Thebes) strangers, and such things as would be considered mere, that is, absolute, monsters, or things out of the common track of human customs.'"

46/51. Where there is faith] i. e. self-reliance.

51/56. haply so long untill] Sidney Walker queries "haply so long till." With the double sense, cf. Cymb., III. iii. 21-6.

61/66. a plantain] Qo plantin. F2 plantain. The word is spelt Plantan in Fol. 1623, being found in L. L. L., III. i. 74, and Rom. and Jul., I. ii. 52. "The leaves of the plantain (the herb so called,—plantago major,—not the tree) were supposed to have great efficacy in healing wounds, stanching blood, &c."—Dyce. See A Physical Directory, by Nich. Culpeper, 3rd ed. Lond. 1651, p. 24, a: . . . "Outwardly it cleers the sight, takes away inflammations, Scabs, Itch, the Shingles, and all spreading sores, and is as wholesome a Herb as can grow about a house."

63/71-72.] This passage in the O. Edd. reads:—(Qo)

*A most unbounded Tyrant, whose successes
Makes heaven unfear'd, and villany assured
Beyond its power: there's nothing almost puts Faith in a feavour, &c.*

And this was altered in 1750 (followed by Mason and Weber) to:

*Make Heaven unfear'd, and Villany assur'd

Seward explaining: "The Successes of the Tyrant makes Heav'n unfear'd, and Villany assur'd that nothing is beyond its Pow'r; which almost staggers the Faith of good Men, and makes them think that Chance, and not a just Providence, governs the World." Notice that Seward makes the very "mistake" he corrects: successes makes. But in fact it is only ignorance of Shaksperian usage that has led editors to admit any change in either the noun or the verb here. See Abbott's Sh. Gr., § 333, for an accurate statement of the case. Edd. 1778 offer an explanation "which can satisfy no one, and renders the rest of the sentence entirely devoid of meaning" (Weber).

Whose successes

*Make Heav'n unfear'd, and villainy assur'd,
Beyond its power; there's nothing almost puts Faith in a fever, &c.*

The "first line and half" of which "plainly signifies, that 'Creon's success diminishes our fear of the gods, by making us suppose that guilt can oppose their power, and defend itself from their justice.'—ITS power refers to Heav'n, not to villainy. The next sentence appears to be incomplete, probably by a casual omission, or possibly on purpose broken off abruptly; if the latter, there should be a dash after voluble chance" (which dash the Edd. accordingly plant in their text). Heath and Knight read success. Mr Skeat reads:

*Make Heaven unfear'd, and villainy assur'd,

But—not to take exception to make—why should there be a comma after assur'd? Its, v. Trench, Eng. Past and Pres., p. 126 (3rd ed.).

67/74. Voluble] Not so accented elsewhere in Shakspeare (who always uses it of discourse = fluent). voluble, L. L. L., II. i. 96; Errors, II. i. 92. However, we can never infer accent safely from the initial foot of English blank-verse. In Par. Lost, IV. 594, Milton has volubil in the classical sense, as here. For the formation, cf. debile, Cor., I. ix.

70/77. And what they win in 't, boot and glory; one] Daniel Qo, boot and glory on That feares, &c. T. C. D. Qo and F2 place a semicolon after on; Seward reads boot and glory too; which all modern editors have accepted. Dr Nicholson thinks it "more after the old style to read: And what they win in 't, boots and glories on. This seems to me like one of the fuller sentences which Shakspeare in his later writings affected, for besides the general meaning that he appropriated all and made their renown his, the words are so chosen as to convey this, that he seized on all, their material boot and their material glory, and also that tyrant-like he gloried in his act of appropriation." But Dr J. K. Ingram has suggested what only needed suggesting to be admitted the right reading:—" . . . But is it not likely that the reading in the old edition [Daniel Qo] is right, wanting only a stop? boot and glory; on That feares not, etc. on, as usual, representing our one." For this spelling of one, cf. I. iii. 85, Qo: humd on From, &c., and Love's L. L., Booth's reprint F1, p. 133. See Collier's n. Mach., II. ii. 63, Furness, p. 107. Moreover, the word is vulgarly pronounced wan in Ireland at the present day; this would explain the phonetic spelling (wan, won, 'on) on; as the English (one, wun) 'un.

79/81. in blood, unless in quality] not in kin, unless in kind. Cf. M. of V., II. iii.: "though I am a daughter to his blood, I am not to his manners." Cf. the beginning of this scene

86/95. whipstock] Phœbus' "whip of steel, Whose bitter smart he made his horses feel," and "his fiery whip," mentioned in Beaumont's transl. Salmacis and Hermaphroditus.

88/98. Small winds shake him] cf. Cymb., II. iii. 136: "South-fog rot him."
96/107. Thirds his own worth] An easy ellipsis: "What man (is there, but that he) Thirds his power," &c.

106/120. intelligence] "i. e. messenger, as in K. John, IV. ii. 116: 'Oh, where hath our intelligence been drunk?'"—Skeat. Schmidt, on the same line in K. John and H. IV., IV. iii. 98, says: "Abstr. pro concr. = spy, informer." It is worth adding that intelligence is therefore not (as Mr Skeat seems to take it) an exact equivalent for intelligencer, i. e. "one who entertains the communication and discourse between two parties—an agent, mediator."—Schmidt.

109/124. come] Qo. doth is understood before come.

127. before] further than. Quite a different use from the word in Coriol., I. iv.: "Now put your shields before your hearts, and fight with hearts more proof than shields."

Scene 3.

Spalding and Hickson agree in praising this scene very highly, and Lamb has selected the episode of Flavinia as one of his specimens from the Play. "Much of this scene has Shakspeare's stamp deeply cut upon it: it is probably all his."—Spalding, Letter, p. 33.

5/6. To dare ill-dealing fortune] O. Edd. Weber, Mason, and Knight read dure. Seward, Edd. 1778, cure. Sympson conj. dare (which Seward says "may signify to bid defiance to:" and probably Sympson so understood it too). Dyce and Skeat read dare, quoting Heath: "that, if possible, he may defy Fortune to disappoint him," v. Dyce, n. But the word, as Dr Nicholson notes, if the right reading, is here used in the more significant "fowling and hawking sense of terrifying till it lay still and subdued, or not daring flight, fled crouching on the earth. See a very good note on the word with quotations in Nares. The same sense renders the supposed obscure passage in Meas. for Meas., IV. iv., perfectly intelligible. 'When she thinks over it,' says Angelo, 'reason will so terrify her that she will lie quiet and not tongue;' the reference being to the fact that birds become silent when the hawk is circling aloft." See Richardson, s. v. Dare; and cf. Chapman, The Gentleman Usher, I. i. (p. 78, ed. Shepherd):—

"A cast of falcons on their merry wings,

Daring the stooped prey, that shifting flies."

Schmidt refers to H.8., III. ii. 282, and H.5., IV. ii. 36. And cf. Lucrece, 506—511. However, cf. III. vi. 10.

7/9. His ocean needs not, &c.] Weber compares Ant. and Cleop., III. xii. 8—10.

21/24. women That have sod their infants in, &c.] There is a somewhat similar allusion (though under very different circumstances) in The Sea Voyage, III. i. :—

" . . . Unroasted or unsod ?

Mor. I have read in stories—

Lam. Of such restoring meats we have examples,
Thousand examples, and allowed for excellent ;
Women that have eat their children, men
Their slaves, nay their brothers," &c.

The Sea Voyage was licensed June 22nd, 1622 (Darley. See Ward, Eng. Dram. Lit., II. 218, on "the revolting realism of much in this play, and in the midst of its fanciful connection," &c.) Cf. Pericles, I. iv. 42—50. "Probably," Dr Nicholson writes, "the main instance that gave rise to these allusions was The Siege of Jerusalem. Nashe's book was very popular, and it was probably alluded to in sermons constantly." I have since noted, apropos of this, in Love's Cure, II. i.: "I say unto thee, one pease was a soldier's provant a whole day at the destruction of Jerusalem." Mr Skeat refers to Josephus, Wars of the Jews, VI. 3, 4.

27/34. sports] Coleridge conj. imports—"a wretched conjecture!" Dyce.

37/44—7.] Seward, finding the expression here obscure, has repaired it: "I will not obtrude my Conjecture upon the Reader, as the Original; it departs rather too far from the Trace of the Letters, but it is offer'd as what I could have wish'd the Poets to have wrote.

———They have skiff
Torrents, whose roaring Tyranny and Power
I' th' best of Ships were dreadful;

i. e. in a small Skiff they have endur'd Storms which would have been terrible to the largest Ships." To which Edd. 1778 add: "The text is obscure, but the conjectural reading ridiculous. The sense seems to be 'That the very least of their dangers and distresses was dreadful.'" The meaning seems to Weber to be: "Peril and want contending who should injure them most, they have passed in a slight bark over torrents whose roaring tyranny and power, even when at the minimum of power, were dreadful." Clearly it is: contending against peril and want, &c. Compare the speech with Coriol., IV. iv. 13 seqq.

67/77. oh (then but beginning To swell about the blossom) she would long] This is the reading of the old editions; Seward and other editors include oh in the parenthesis. Sidney Walker writes "Dele O." This certainly is necessary if we wish to regulate the metre, and Dyce adopts Walker's suggestion. The irregularity of the metre, as well as the inappropriateness of the parenthesis, have suggested to me that possibly the words (then but beginning To swell about the blossom) were interpolated by Fletcher, and the lines originally read:

The flowre that I would plucke
And put betweene my breasts,—oh, she would long
Till she had such another, &c.

In any case, oh should be read with she would long. The statement cannot be objected to physiologically, but it certainly seems a superfluous piece of information from a dramatic point of view. Dr Ingleby thinks that "if the parenthesis had been Fl.'s interpolation, the 'oh' would have gone with 'she' in next line. The 'oh' now seems to me an impertinence. Why not put it [oh]?"

72/82.] The reading in the text (from ed. 1778, and so all subseq. edd.) may be explained: "Her fancy (which was sure to be pretty, even in her most careless dress) I copied in my most studied adornments" (Colman, ed. 1778).

75/85. humm'd one] O. Edd. on. Seward changed to one; v. n. I. ii. 70/77. Weber replaces the old reading, thinking it "far better." No subsequent editor, except Mr Tyrrell, has agreed with him.

77/87. sojourn (rather, dwell on),] The editors, 1778, give "the following very ingenious remark" from Dr Dodd:—"Do not the last words sound as if they had been a marginal note of some critic, or a remark of a prompter?" The editors add: "The conjecture is so very probable, and the passage would be so much amended, we are almost inclined to discard the words." But the words are by no means synonymous: dwell on denoting far longer duration than sojourn,—and Emilia is the "critic" who corrects herself.

78/88. This rehearsal (Which, every innocent wots well, comes in Like old importment's bastard) has this end,] This passage as here given may be paraphrased: "The end of this long relation (rehearsal), as every innocent is aware, comes in like the 'illegitimate conclusion' of a long story told very consequentially [old-importment; or else? bastard = hybrid, abortive offspring (cf. Comus, 727), = full of sound and fury, signifying nothing, 'ridiculus mus'], simply means that the love," &c. I only attempt that explanation, as I do not understand those given by my predecessors; however, in the hope that others may, I add their various readings and interpretations. Qo has:

This rehearsal
(Which fury-innocent wots well) comes in
Like old importments bastard, has this end,

F2 and ed. 1711 variations being: rehearsal: fury [om. -] innocent: importments [-] bastard: and end [:]. Sympson and Edd. 1778 read: Which surely Innocence wots well. Monck Mason would read "empartment, from the French empartement, which signifies passion, or transport," and wot I well instead of wots well; his parenthesis then being: (Which fury innocent, wot I well, comes in Like old empartment's bastard) has this end,—"And Emilia's meaning is this—This recital, the innocent enthusiasm of which, I well know, comes in like the spurious offspring, the faint resemblance, of the passion I formerly felt for Flavina, is intended to prove, that the love between maid and maid may be stronger than that between persons of different sexes." Weber explains: "This rehearsal of our affections (which every innocent soul well knows comes in like the mere bastard, the faint shadow of the true import, the real extent of our natural affections) has this end, or purpose, to prove that the love between two virgins may be," &c. Dr Nicholson notes that "If I understand Weber's interpretation aright, that the love of two innocents is the rehearsal of 'the real nature of our natural affections,' then Emilia is made by calling it Importment's bastard to contradict her own conclusion that the true love of maid and maid exceeds the love of the sexes. Hence Mason's explanation is right, and this is further shown by the word old, which both refers to passed affection, and expresses (as often) the strength of that importment. See Todd, Nares, etc. s. v. Old." Lamb first introduced the reading every innocent for fury-innocent. The mistake is obvious, f for e, 'every' being spelt (as commonly) 'eury.' Seward compares M. N. D., III. ii., and Mr Skeat The Lover's Progress, II. i., for the general sense of the passage. Mr Skeat frees old Importment's character from all imputations, by changing the line to "[Comes in with this importment] has this end."

82/92. sex dividuall] Seward and Sympson's correction; the O. Edd. sex individual (Qo individuall). Dr C. M. Ingleby informs me that this misprint also occurs in Sir E. Brydges' ed. of Milton, P. L. xii. 85; "no individual being"—in 1st ed.; "dividual being" in Todd's and Masson's edd.

96/109. I am not against your faith, Yet I continue mine] Sidney Walker queries:

———I am not [
Against your faith, yet I continue mine.

Scene 4.

Misprinted Scene VI. in ed. 1750.

"The phraseology of this short scene is like Shakspeare's, being brief and energetic, and in one or two instances passing into quibbles."—Spalding, Letter, p. 36. ". . . the mark of Shakspeare's hand too strongly to be mistaken."—Hickson, p. 37*.

13/15. what are those?] There is no stage direction here, as the 'warning' at l. 68 (margin) of the preceding scene was sufficient. Dyce wrongly heads the scene: "Dead bodies lying on the ground; among them Palamon and Arcite." The Kinsmen, as the old direction shows, are borne in on "hearses."

18/20. smear'd with prey] See Critical Notes (and Preface to Qo reprint for complete list of the variations between the two copies of the quarto collated by me). Dyce notes "smear'd. So the folio of 1679 (Qy. if rightly?)—The quarto has 'succard.'" Mr Skeat was not aware of the reading of the Daniel Qo when he noted (p. 91) that Dyce was wrong, as Dyce was similarly ignorant of the other reading. Smear is regularly used by Sh. in this sense: cf. Cor., I. vi. 69.

22/25. We 'leave] "It is just questionable whether We leave be not a misprint for believe, as in II. iv. 19/28."—Dr Ingleby. We 'leave (believe), says the herald doubtfully; "'Tis right, those, those," exclaims Theseus.

31/36. convent] Summon. Meas., V. 158; H.8., V. i. 52; Cor., II. ii. 58. Schmidt.

32/37. niggard] a verb. v. Abbott, Sh. Gr. Introd.; cf. Sonn. I. 12.

40/45—9] On this "cataloguing of circumstances altogether peculiar to Shakspeare," see Hickson, p. 32*, and the quotations from Hamlet and Troil. The passage appeared to Monck Mason to be "a strange nonsensical bombastical rhapsody, incapable of explanation."

Since I have knowne frights, fury, friends, beheastes,
Loves, provocations, zeal, a mistris Taske,
Desire of liberty, a feavour, madnes,
Hath set a marke which nature could not reach too
Without some imposition, sicknes in will, &c.] Qo.

Theseus' meaning is plain enough; the only difficulty is, how far should we improve on that meaning by altering the old punctuation or even the old reading. Dyce, inter alia, reads fight's fury, suggested (to his authority, Heath, who read: fight's, fury), probably by the fact that a battle had just been 'struck' (the technical phrase). Theseus directs that the prisoners shall be removed from all sights that might be suggestive of their captivity and so hinder their recovery, since he knows that, among other causes, "desire of liberty" hath sometimes produced a degree of mental apathy or delirium ("set a marke" of "sickness in will or wrestling strength in reason") which ("nature could not reach to,") could only be combated by practising some deception. Compare what the Doctor says of the daughter's "wrestling strength in reason" (in her case produced by "Love's provocations"): "It is a falsehood she is in, which is with falsehoods to be combated," IV. iii. 81/87. I only admit the following changes: friends' behests, Love's provocations, . . . mistris' taske; and enclose the words "Which nature could not reach to without some imposition" in a parenthesis, to indicate that they refer to the first order: "Bear them hence," &c. Alternatives are enumerated, each separately governing Hath. (Imposition might else mean penalty, equivalent surrender, quittance; viz.—sickness in will, or wrestling strength in reason = mental apathy, or delirium.) fright = "violent fear, terror;" zeal = "intense and eager interest or endeavour" (Schmidt). If this arrangement makes sense, it has the old text to authorise it, but my predecessors have not been satisfied with the old text, and still less with one another's amendments.

All the Edd. from Seward read mistress' task; all (except Edd. 1778, who follow Qo), friends' behests, Love's provocations. Seward proposed 'T hath set,' which all Edd., except Knight and Skeat, adopt. Seward also transposed the lines, inserting Sickness . . . reason, after madness, and Edd. 1778 accept this derangement. Heath proposed fight's fury, friends' behests, and Have for Hath. Dyce added two original changes to those he adopted from Seward, viz., fight's fury, and zeal [in] a mistress' task. If we agree to disregard the old text, Mr Skeat's readings and interpretation seem the most probable:—

Since I have known fight's fury, friends' behests,
Love's provocations, zeal [in] a mistress' task
Desire of liberty—a fever, madness—
Hath set a mark, &c.

Mr Skeat understands that before Hath, and explains: "For I have known the fury of fight, the requisitions of friends, the provocations of love, the zeal employed in executing a mistress' task, or the desire of liberty,—to be (or, to amount to) a fever or a madness, which has proposed an aim (or endeavours) which the man's natural strength could not attain to, without at least some forcing, or some fainting of the will, or some severe struggle in the mind. . . . Imposition means demand or requirement, in an excessive degree."

Scene 5.

"The last scene of this act is of a lyrical cast, and comprised in a few lamentations spoken by the widowed queens over the corpses of their dead lords."—Spalding, Letter, p. 36. "The internal evidence in the fifth scene, which is a dirge, is not so strong; it is the only scene throughout the entire play with regard to which we entertain doubt; but we incline to the belief that it is by Shakspeare."—Hickson, p. 37*. It is only out of deference to the authority of these critics that I have inclined to the same belief; at the same time, the evidence seems to me to point rather the other way. The final couplet is (I think) not to be considered as evidence, being probably not original. The epithet "quick-eyed," a favourite one with Fletcher, does not occur once in Shakspeare (v. Schmidt, p.

1435); and the whole tone of the song seems to me Fletcherian.

11/10. houshold's grave :] Qo houshold's grave :, F2 graver [om. :], ed. 1711 graves. "Mr Dyce wrongly ascribes the last reading to Seward instead of Tonsen," 1711 (Mr Skeat). "Each king," as Knight discovered, "had one grave."

15/16. This world's a city] I have to thank my friend, the Rev. A. S. Palmer, for the following interesting parallels to these well-known lines. We have not been able to ascertain the dates of any of these epitaphs, but they appear sufficiently ancient to have been lenders, not borrowers.

In Monuments and Monumental Inscriptions in Scotland, by Rev. Charles Rogers, Lond. 1871-2, these epitaphs are given (Vol. II. pp. 363 and 370) :—

Elginshire.

Parish of Abernethy.

"On gravestones in the churchyard are these rhymes :—

[TWO EPITAPHS.]

The world's a city
Full of streets,
And death's a market
That every one meets ;
But if life were a thing
That money could buy,
The poor could not live
And the rich would ne'er die."

[No date or other detail.]

Parish of Elgin.

"From the area of the cathedral and the surrounding churchyard we have the following rhymes :—

* * * * *

This world is a city
Full of streets ;
Death is the mercat
That all men meets.
If lyfe were a thing
That money could buy
The poor could not live
And the rich would not die.

[No date or other detail.]

Southey, Commonplace Books (Vol. IV. p. 48), gives the following version, an epitaph at Worpleton :

Life is a city full of crooked streets,
And Death the Marketplace where all men meets.
If life were a merchandize which men could buy,
The rich would purchase it, and only the poor would die."

With the idea we may also compare Massinger, speaking of "that difficult lesson, how to learn to die,"—

"All studies else are but as circular lines,
And death the centre where they must all meet."

Old Law, V. i.

In Ancient Poems, Ballads and Songs of the Peasantry of England (ed. J. H. Dixon, Percy Soc., 1846, re-edited 1857, by R. Bell), is printed a curious old poem entitled The Messenger of Mortality, or Life and Death contrasted in a Dialogue betwixt Death and a Lady, the last four lines of which are an expanded and corrupted version of the passage in question. The 'moral' of the Dialogue, with this quatrain appended as a tag, is as follows :—

Thus may we see the high and mighty fall,
For cruel Death shows no respect at all
To any one of high or low degree,
Great men submit to Death as well as we.
Though they are gay, their life is but a span—
A lump of clay—so vile a creature's man.
Then happy those whom Christ has made his care,
Who die in the Lord, and ever blessed are.
The grave's the market-place where all men meet,
Both rich and poor, as well as small and great.
If life were merchandize that gold could buy,
The rich would live, the poor alone would die."

It is probably owing to the popularity of this traditional poem, which seems to have been widely current, that the concluding lines, with slight differences of form, are so frequently found in country church-yards inscribed on the tombstones of the peasantry. They are not, however, contained in the broadside with which Mr Bell collated the version printed in the above volume. (A. S. Palmer.)

ACT II.

We have now reached the most doubtful and most disputed part of our play, the underplot. On this subject the reader is referred to Spalding's Letter, in which it is maintained that the underplot "is clearly the work of a different artist from many of the leading parts of the drama;" and to Hickson's examination and refutation of this view, N. S. S. Trans., pp. 38-9*.

It must be tolerably plain to any reader that certain parts of this underplot are by a different hand from other parts; and that hand, Hickson asserts, Shakspeare's. Note that the two scenes do not fit together exactly; in the prose scene the kinsmen are referred to as if in conversation, but in the verse dialogue which ensues they are made to begin with mutual salutations. Hickson notes another inconsistency, p. 38*. So, too, all their lamentations about Thebes, II. ii., are not very akin to their resolution, "Let us leave Thebes," etc., in I. ii. The parallels to this act from the Knights Tale are: Sc. ii. cf. ll. 172—360, 417—475; Sc. iii. cf. ll. 361—416, 476—558 (this passage especially deserves comparison, and on); Sc. v. cf. ll. 559—592.

Weber, Dyce, and Skeat print this first scene as part of the long second scene, but the Qo distinguishes them; they overlap in point of time, the authorship is different, and the juncture is confusing (v. N. S. S. Tr., 1874, pt. II., p. 455).

1. depart] part. v. Nares. "Followed by with = to resign, give up." Schmidt.

5. better lyn'd] Cf. Cleveland, Works, p. 93: "But though he came alone, yet well lin'd it seems, with 133*l. 8d.*"

30. a greise] Qo greife. F2, ed. 1711, 1778, Weber, Knight ('41), grief. Seward and Sympson "both read and conjecture Gree" (Seward's note), but as Qo in their text. Edd. 1778 think grief "is a stiff expression," but, nevertheless, "think it, both in expression and sentiment, every way superior to the proposed restoration" greise! Knight (1867) reads grice, Dyce grise, and quotes Lydgate, Warres of Troy (B. i. sig. E 1 verso, ed. 1555):—

"She gan anone by grices to asende
Of a Touret in to an hye pynacle," and refers to Twelfth Night, III. i. 135; Timon, IV. iii. 16; Othello, I. iii. 200 (Grise, Schmidt). See Nares, s. v. Grice, and Mr Skeat's note here. Grise seems to have been the usual word for ascending platforms on a stage: e. g. Ben Jonson, Part of the King's Entertainment. . . "the daughters of the Genius, and six in number; who in a spreading ascent, upon several grices, help to beautify both the sides." Chapman, Mask of Middle Temple and Gray's Inn (p. 343, ed. Shepherd),—"This rock was in the undermost part craggy, and full of hollow places, in whose concaves were contrived two winding pair of stairs, by whose greeces the persons above might make their descents, and all the way be seen."

49. And so did they.] As the sense appears defective to Seward, he would strike out these words, but (horrible consequence!) "the Measure would be lost." See Coleridge, Table Talk, p. 212, ed. 1852.

58. Lord, the difference of men] Lear, IV. ii. 26 (Skeat).

Scene 2.

"On the whole, however, this scene, if it be Fletcher's, (of which I have no doubt,) is among the very finest he ever wrote; and there are many passages in which, while he preserves his own distinctive marks, he has gathered no small portion of the flame and inspiration of his immortal friend and assistant."—Spalding, Letter, p. 37.

21/24. never wore] Mr Skeat compares wor'st, III. vi. 93.

24/27. like lightning] A favourite image of Fletcher's. Cf. III. vi. 81/108; Loyal Subject, IV. v.; Lover's Progress, I. ii., etc.

37/40. The fair-ey'd maids] Prospective lamentations, curses, rejoicings, of the same kind as in the passage in the text, are at once the commonest and most striking of Fletcher's many peculiarities. E. g. in this play alone, cf. II. vi. 15; III. vi. 187/228, 246/297; IV. i. 72/94; ii. 4; and, amongst others, passages in the following scenes: Monsieur Thomas, II. v.; A Wife for a Month, V. iii.; Thierry and Theodoret, IV. i.; A King and No King, IV. ii.; The Mad Lover, III. iv.; The Lover's Progress, III. iv.; Custom of the Country, I. i.; V. iv.;

The Maid's Tragedy, II. i. (Some of these may be better compared with other of the passages in our play than with this one.)

46/50. our Theban hounds] Perhaps a reminiscence of Edwardes' play of Palæmon and Arcite (see Introduction), or of Theseus' hounds in M. N. D.

50/54. a Parthian quiver.] There is a somewhat similar allusion in Valentinian, I. i.: "quivers for the Parthians." Nash, Summer's Last Will, &c. (Hazlitt's Dodsley, viii. 19): "As the Parthians fight flying away," &c.; cf. (Skeat) Cymb. I. vi. 20.

54/58. lastly] Seward, ed. 1778 (and Dr C. M. Ingleby) read lazily; perhaps a necessary change, as Palamon is lamenting the privation of "all valiant uses" and consequent inertness; though I do not feel confident enough to admit the amendment. Where the old text makes some sort of sense we are bound to respect it. O. Edd. and the rest, lastly, meaning "that which is worst of all."—Mason. The line hardly quotes a syllable, and gently (which Mr Skeat quotes as a parallel instance of this metrical defect) is a trisyllable: For when the west wind courts her gently, II. ii. 138/164 (see note here). The same objection holds of R.3, IV. iv. 428: shortly. There is no parallel in V. i. 103: stings more than nettles, if the text were rightly arranged (as Dyce, '67, '76, has it) by placing I of the next line at the end of l. 103, and so making them both metrical.

58/63. mere] absolute. Mr Skeat compares Woman Hater, III. ii. :—

"Yet do I see

Thro' this confusedness, some little comfort."

64/70. twynn'd] Qo twyn'd. The old spelling for (Seward, ed. 1778 reading) twinn'd. F2, ed. 1711, Weber, Dyce, Skeat, read twin'd, and Weber compares Lover's Progress, III. iii.: "two hearts that have been twined together" (where F2 reads twin'd, i. e. twinn'd). See note, I. i. 179/199. And cf. Coriol., IV. iv. 17.

75/82. The poyson of pure spirits] Cf. Custom of the Country, IV. iii.

79/87. an endles mine] Philaster (III. i.) says of Arethusa: "Is she not all a lasting mine of joy."

91/98. Crave] O. Edd. Dyce, Knight ('67), and Skeat: Grave, i. e. Bury, "entomb" (Skeat). Crave = require. The whole speech is only an expansion of the first two lines. The fact that Sh. uses grave = bury does not strengthen an emend. of Fletcher's text very much.

119/132. Narcissus] Cf. IV. ii. 32. Knight's Tale, l. 1084: "Ne Narcisus the fayr of yore agon." Faithful Shepherdess, II. i., the plant is mentioned, as "for swellings best."

136/162-9. A rose, &c.] There is a striking parallel to this intensely Fletcherian passage in The Loyal Subject (acted in 1618: Ward), IV. iii. :—

"Here, ladies, here (you were not made for cloisters),

Here is the sphere you move in; here shine nobly,

And, by your powerful influence, command all!—

What a sweet modesty dwells round about 'em,

[Aside.

And like a nipping morn, pulls in their blossoms!"

Cf. too, The Mad Lover, IV. i.

138/164. gently] "Dr Farmer (Appendix to Shakespeare, 1773) quotes this speech, and with Seward (line 2) reads gentily for gently. I mention this minuteness of the doctor, because (line 5) he substitutes charity for chastity, and (line 6) shuts for locks. The quotation is made in support of a proposal, by 'an eminent critic,' to alter the word shakes to shuts, in the following passage in Cymbeline :

'— like the tyrannous breathing of the north,
Shakes all our buds from growing.'

I dare say, the doctor did not intentionally violate the poet's text ; but think each of the errors very remarkable."—J. N., ed. 1778 (here quoted from reprint, 1811). Theobald proposed to insert Beauties after courts her, but Seward points out that gentily is trisyllabic. Edd. 1778 prefer Theobald's variation, "but neither is necessary ;" v. n. supra, l. 54/58.

159/192—207.] This form of short-lined (Box-and-Cox-like) dialogue is very common in Fletcher's writings. See Mr Fleay's paper and the discussion of it (in N. S. S. Trans., pt. I. 1874) for a good account of the Fletcherian metres.

163/201—4] Cf. Knights Tale, 294 seqq. It is worth noting that Shakspeare shows his early acquaintance with this sophism of Arcite's, in the sonnet in L. L. Lost (given also with a few verbal changes in Pass. Pilgr. iii.), IV. iii. 64—7 :—

"A woman I forswore ; but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee :
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love ;
Thy grace being gained cures all disgrace in me."

The passage forms a suggestive link between L. L. Lost, M. N. D., and Chaucer's Theseus. "In transferring his story from Chaucer, the poet has here been guilty of an oversight. The old poet fixes a character of positive guilt on Arcite's prosecution of his passion, by relating a previous agreement between the two cousins, by which either, engaging in any adventure whether of love or war, had an express right to the co-operation of the other. Hence Arcite's interference with his cousin's claim becomes with Chaucer a direct infringement of a knightly compact ; while in the drama no deeper blame attaches to it than as a violation of the more fragile rules imposed by the generous spirit of friendship."—Spalding, Letter, p. 40. Seward has also noted this disagreement, II. ii. 243/298.

179/220.] "Arrange and write,
'I say again,
love her ; and, in loving her, maintain,' &c."

Sidney Walker.

188/232. Am not I liable &c.] On this "mere flash in the pan," see Hickson, p. 48*.

243/298.] And if she be not heavenly] Seward praises this speech, and continues : "Our Authors have improved upon Chaucer, in making Palamon and Arcite such very distinct Characters ; but Arcite, who is not crown'd with Success, becomes by this means the more amiable, and has the Reader's Wishes in his Favour. This is a Fault that Chaucer particularly guards against," etc. It may be remarked, apropos of this, that no one can read the Shakspeare part of the play by itself, without feeling throughout that Palamon is the central figure and true hero of the piece; but reading the Fletcher scenes, on the contrary, our sympathies are involuntarily turned away from Palamon and towards Arcite. This fact illustrates Mr Spedding's observations on the want of congruity as a whole in the kindred play Henry VIII. "The strongest sympathies which have been awakened in us run opposite to the course of the action."—N. S. S. Trans., 1874, pt. I. App. p. 3*.

268/330. pelting] paltry. M. for M., II. ii. 112; M. N. D., II. i. 91; R. 2, i. 60; Troil., IV. v. 267; Lear, II. iii. 18 (Schmidt).

Scene 3.

Of course, by Fletcher. "Neither this scene, nor the following, in which the jailor's daughter meditates on the perfections of Palamon, . . . have anything in them worthy of particular notice."—Spalding, p. 41.

"In my paper on Fletcher, I have shown that Fletcher never wrote prose in any of his plays."—Rev. F. G. Fleay, N. S. S. Trans., pt. I. 1874, App. p. 62*. I follow Dyce's arrangement, in the hope that these lines may appear metrical: certainly not a few seem to me prose.

16. a tongue will tame tempests] Cf. Philaster, IV. ii., where the king exclaims (of himself):—

" . . . 'Tis the king
Will have it so; whose breath can still the winds,
Uncloud the sun, charm down the swelling sea,
And stop the clouds of heaven. Speak, can it not?
Dion. No."

The two passages are about equally bombastic.

32/33. Clap her aboard] A common expression in Fletcher: e. g. The Pilgrim, IV. iii.; Scornful Lady, III. ii. ("Clap her aboard, and stow her"). Chapman, Widow's Tears, I. i.: "by this you had bore up with the lady, and clapped her aboard," etc., and cf. sp. 48 of same scene.

34/35. feskue] "A wire, stick, or straw, chiefly used for pointing to the letters, in teaching children to read."—Nares. See Weber's note, and cf. Dr Ingleby's Centurie of Prayse, p. 152.

41. keep touch] The origin of this phrase is not very clear. Dyce (quoting from Johnson's Dict.) explains touch as "exact performance of agreement." Nares: "to be faithful, to be exact to an appointment." Cf. III. iii. 53/72; Love's Pilgrimage, III. ii.; Rule a Wife, IV. iv. Some one has suggested that the idea is connected with 'touchstone' (as in Edw. 3, III. iii.: "your intended force must bide the touch," p. 43, Tauchnitz Ed.); but touch in the sense of keeping a promise, Dr Nicholson tells me, probably came from the custom of shaking hands on a bargain or agreement. Cf. the O.E. word handfast.

45/48. and she must see the duke] Cf. The Bloody Brother, II. ii.:—

"I must deliver
A bevy of young lasses, that must look on
This night's solemnity, and see the two dukes,
Or I shall lose my credit."

48/51. our town, . . . ha, boys, heigh for the weavers] The resemblance between these countrymen and the rude mechanicals of M. N. D. is more apparent than real; v. n. III. v. 12/9. With the speeches here, cf. Ralph's May-day address:

"With bells on legs, and napkins clean, unto your shoulders tied,
With scarfs and garters as you please, and 'Hey for our town' cried."

Knight of the Burning Pestle.

With the preceding line, cf. same play, Induction. In the Moral Play of Wyt and Science, by John Redford (v. Warton, on Tusser), Idellnes says:

"But yet to take my leve of my deere, lo!
With a skyp or twayne, heere lo! and heer lo!
And heere againe!" (Ed. Halliwell, Sh. Soc., p. 30.)

"Weavers supposed to be good singers and particularly given to singing psalms (being most of them Calvinists and refugees from the Netherlands)": Twelfth N., II. iii. 61; I H. 4, II. iv. 147 (Schmidt). Perhaps we have here a reminiscence of the well-voiced Nick Bottom.

75/89. This is an offered, &c.] "From Turne quod optanti, &c." [Virg. Æn. ix. 6.] Sid. Walker (q. Dyce).

78/82. Swifter then nev'r flew.] "Many irregularities may be explained by the desire of emphasis which suggests repetition, even where repetition, as in the case of a negative, neutralizes the original phrase" (Abbott, Sh. Gr., § 406); and the sentence here may be explained somewhat similarly:—I could have run swifter than the wind, had it flown never so swiftly. I change never to nev'r. Perhaps suggested by Virg. Æn. vii. 808-9. Cf. Peele's Polyhymnia, vi.

Scene 4.

Fletcher's: matter and metre. Wrongly headed Scene 2, and the following, Scene 3, in ed. 1750.

2. affect] "feel desire towards."—Dryden, Globe ed. glossary.

14. young handsome] These adjectives may be found together in any of Fletcher's plays. Cf. infra, IV. ii. 3, Epil. 6.

31. Thus much For law] O. Edd. arrange the lines so, and rightly; Thus much forming one of Fletcher's heavy monosyllabic double-endings; the following line can also be sufficiently eked out, if properly pronounced, kindred almost trisyllabic, and followed by a pause. Edd. 1778 and subseq. edd. place Thus much at beginning of line For law, etc., thereby spoiling a line, and an important metrical peculiarity, and giving us instead an ordinary double ending line. Seward ("very licentiously," Weber) reads:

*For Law or Kindred: I will do it, ay
And this night: and to Morrow he shall love me.*

Edd. 1778 punctuate: And this night, or tomorrow: he shall love me! Mr Skeat omits all points from the line; Qo places a [,] after night. Perhaps or tomorrow may mean ere morning?

Scene 5.

Fletcher's.

4. . . . can allow] = approve, praise; cf. Chapman, Shadow of Night (p. 6, b.

ed. Shepherd). Webster, Westward Ho, III. iv.:—"I have acquainted Wafer and Honeysuckle with it, and they allow my wit for it extremely." v. Schmidt, s.v.

14. what proves you] sc. to be a gentleman. (Cf. Webster, Vitt. Cor. p. 11, ed. Dyce, 1866: "My father prov'd himself a gentleman.") Arcite answers, a little of all noble professions,—sportsman, horseman, soldier. He is disguised as a countryman ("a pore laborer," Chaucer), and therefore rather confidently enumerates his professions (not necessarily his possessions, as Hippolyta understands him: "if he say true," she says; v. Schmidt, s.v. quality). Sire is to be pronounced as a disyllable; cf. Tennyson, Fatima, 3rd stanza, fire; and infra, V. i. 3, fires. Qo. prooves. F2 ed. 1711, Weber, Dyce, Skeat, proves. Seward, Edd. 1778, Knight, prove. Dr J. K. Ingram proposes the reading profess for prooves, comparing Arcite's answer ("A little of all noble qualities") with:—"because my selfe have seene his demeanor no lesse civill than he exelent in the qualitie he professes." Chettle, Kind-Harts Dreame, p. 2 (q. Ingleby, Centurie of Prayse, p. 3). [Cf. infra, III. i. 56.] But v. Rich. 3, IV. iii. 69; Tiv. N., III. iv. 416—420; and Ward's Eng. Dram. Lit., I. 275.

30/43. travel] labour, or, referring to l. 25/36, journey.

50/64. do observance] Chaucer's word, Knight's T., 642. Cf. M. N. D., I. i. 167; IV. i. 129, 130 (Schmidt wrongly, 137). Mr Skeat has also noted these parallels. Edd. 1778 refer to Bourne's Popular Antiq., ed. Brand, 1777, p. 255; and Mr Skeat to Brand, ed. Ellis, I. 179.

Scene 6.

Unmistakeably Fletcher's. Spalding thinks the scenery of the wood "prettily described."

1. divells rore] Probably we have here a relic of the old Mysteries. Cf. Rich. 3, IV. iv., "fiends roar, saints pray;" Hen. 5, IV. iv., "this roaring devil i' th' old play;" Monsieur Thomas, II. ii., "though the devil roar."

15.] See n. II. ii. 37/40.

32. necessaries] pronounced nessaries, as in Jul. Cas., II. i. 178, "our purpose necessary and not envious." Cf. princess for princesses, Temp., I. ii. 173; A. Y. L., ii. 175 (but v. Schmidt). See Abbott, Sh. Gr., § 468, etc.; and for a full discussion of Sh.'s pronunciation, Mr A. J. Ellis's great contribution to phonetic science, Early English Pronunciation, with especial reference to Shakspeare and Chaucer. The internal sources of information on Sh.'s pronunciation (viz. puns, metre, and rhyme), are particularly considered, pp. 917—996.

33. patch of ground] Dr C. M. Ingleby's correction of the reading of all former editions, path; cf. Hml., IV. iv. 18. Dr Ingleby also compares the Lincolnshire term spoon, "being a path into a cornfield ending in a round space," or patch.

35. whoobub] Cf. W. T., IV. iv. 629.

ACT III.

Scene I.

Spalding (p. 41) and Hickson (pp. 40-42) are agreed in assigning this Scene to Shakspeare, and in praising it very highly.

Chaucer originals : Sc. i. cf. ll. 593-765 ; Sc. iii. cf. ll. 758-9 ; Sc. vi. cf. ll. 766-1022.

2. land] All Edd. land, except Skeat, who reads laund, from Dyce's suggestion. Dyce has laund in his glossary (though land in his text), and Spalding, quoting the passage, laund. Heath conj. stand. The word may have been suggested by the Knights Tale, l. 833: "And to the launde he rydeth him ful right ;" but it was common at the time Shakspeare wrote (see Nares, Schmidt, s.v., and Hales' Longer English Poems, p. 219), and is now familiar to us under the form lawn.

6. gold buttons] Cf. Hamlet, I. iii. 40. "Bouter, v. a. to put, set, push. O. Fr. boter, from M. H. G. bōzen.—Der. bout (verbal subst., properly that part of a body which pushes or touches first), bouture (a cutting, the piece one puts into the ground), bouton (that which pushes out, makes knobs on plants ; thence by analogy, pieces of wood or metal shaped like buds)," etc.—Brachet, Etym. Dict. tr. Kitchen.

7. knacks] Cf. M. N. D., I. i. 34 ; Shr., IV. iii. 67 ; Wint., IV. iv. 360, 439 (Schmidt). Chapman, Cæsar and Pompey, II. i. 20 :—"as if good clothes were knacks to know a knave." "He sent me a very rich present of perfumes, skins, gloves, and purses embroidered, with other nacks of the same kind."—Memoirs of Lady Fanshawe, p. 192, ed. 1829. Cf. Peele, Arraignement of Paris, IV. i. 2, and Hazlitt's Dodsley, I. 349.

9.] Mr Skeat well compares Spenser, Prothal., 73-82.

13. chop] "exchange, make an exchange."—Skeat.

cold] chaste, as freq. in Sh. (v. Schmidt) ; e. g. Temp., IV. 66.

36/37. the voydest] Sympson first "cleared up" this "difficult Passage (which had long puzzled us all three)."—Seward. O. Edd. voydes (voids, ed. 1711).

44/45. Cosin . . . Cosener.] This was a common pun ; e. g. Mons. Thomas, I. iii. : "Cousin, Cozen thyself no more ;" Rich. 3., IV. iv. : "Cousins indeed, and by their uncle cozened Of comfort." See Trench, Eng. Past and Present, 8th ed. p. 305.

72/79. cold gyves] i. e., as Dr C. M. Ingleby has pointed out, iron bonds. Cf. Cymb., V. iv. 28 : "cancel these cold bonds" (not in Schmidt). Cf. II. v. 10.

89/98. dares] either the plural in s (v. Abbott, Sh. Gr., § 333), or any, sc. one, with the reply, none = no one. F2 dare, and so Edd.

90/99. so noble bear a guilty busines ?] i. e. Dares any one who shews himself so noble be capable of aught base ? None, save Arcite, could be so ; and therefore in proportion to the height of his generosity is the depth of his baseness. Dyce (1867, 1876) reads baseness. Mr Skeat changes noble to nobly, and does not notice Dyce's change. All other Edd. as here, from Qo.

97/108. Enter your musite] Qo Musicke. "Is not musick an old form of musit?" Ingleby. Nares quotes from Greene's Thieves falling out (muse), and from Ven. and Adon. (musets); explaining: "Muse, Muset or Musit, s. The opening in a fence or thicket through which a hare, or other beast of sport, is accustomed to pass. Muset, French." See Mr Skeat's note (which corrects Nares' French, Muset, to musette and musse.—Cotgrave). Alken, The National Sports of Great Britain (fol. p. 18, ed. 1821), translates "by the same meuses" "par les mêmes sentiers." He says of the hare: "This animal is extremely attached to the place of her birth, and will make her form, or resting-place, as near to it as possible; and to this she will constantly return, by the same meuses or paths, even after having been chased from it, to the nearest possible risk of life." The somewhat similar mistake k for t occurs again, IV. i. 106, where Qo has wraake for wreathe.

104/116. my stomach not] "i. e. if my stomach were not."—S. Walker.

Scene 2.

Spalding assigns this scene to Fletcher, noting that the jailor's daughter now first "begins to shew symptoms of unsettled reason. There is some pathos in several parts of her soliloquy, but little vigour in the expression, or novelty in the thoughts."—Letter, p. 43. Hickson ascribes this censure of Spalding's to the fact that "he assumed the whole of the underplot to be by one writer." As the evidence of the "stopt-line" test is slightly against this scene being by Shakspeare, I add a few of Hickson's remarks. (Mr Furnivall, in his table, N. S. S. Tr., p. 65*, gives the "stopt-line" proportions of this scene, viz., 38 verse-lines, 9 unstopt, giving a proportion of 1 to 4'22. I make 12 unstopt lines in the scene, viz., ll. 1, 7, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17 (?), 23, 27, 35, 36. This would give the proportion 1 to 3'16.) "It is to this scene," Mr Hickson observes, "that we referred by anticipation, as giving an instance of Shakspeare's judgment. It can hardly be said to explain any necessary circumstance of the play; and so many scenes in which this character appears alone, are rather injurious to the action: but it supplies the due gradation between a mind diseased and madness; and in connection with another scene at which we shall shortly arrive, it displays a depth of insight into the psychological character of this state only excelled by Shakspeare himself, in King Lear. Let our readers observe in particular . . . [ll. 5, 7, 8, 14, 15, 29—32] . . .—the unselfish anxiety of the jailor's daughter for Palamon's safety, and her subsequent terror at her own disordered senses. The introduction of the popular notion [v. Carpenter's Mental Physiol., p. 88, 3rd ed.] that wild beasts have 'a sense to know a man unarm'd' is quite a Shaksperian illustration; and we do not know an instance of finer drawing than this of her imagination painting, as absolute reality, the subject of her first fear. From this conviction (of Palamon's death) we come naturally to the concluding lines, beyond which the next step is madness." See the whole passage, pp. 42*, 43*.

1. the brake] Theobald, Weber, Knight, Dyce, Skeat, Brake. Qo Beake, F2,

ed. 1711, Beak. Sympson prop. Brook, Seward (from association of the idea Beak) first proposed to read Hawk I sent is gone, but, with Edd. 1778, printed beck; and Hickson quotes the line with beck. Qo reading seems most likely a misprint for Brake (or Breake.) as may partly be inferred from comparing III. i. 82/90 ('hawthorn house'), l. 97/108, and stage direction in same scene, l. 30; III. vi. direction, and l. 111/144, etc.; cf. l. 28, brine, Qo reading bine. D'Avenant (R[eed], in ed. 1778, informs us) reads beach. Beck seemed to Nares "an excellent and undoubted emendation, because the jailor's daughter had appointed Palamon to wait for her at a cedar 'fast by a brook'" (q. Dyce). Chaucer, K. T., l. 659: "This Palamoun Was in a busche." In confirmation of beck from Beake might be noted that reck is spelt wreake a few lines down.

21. all's char'd] "That is, 'My task is done then.' Chare is frequently used for task work."—Weber. See a very interesting note on this word in Mr Skeat's edition

25. mop'd] Nares explains mope-eyed as short-sighted. So in Hamlet, III. iv. 81, mope means "to act blindly." Temp., V. 240; H. 5, III. vii. 143 (v. Schmidt, who explains differently). Hence, To be moped signifies metaphorically, to be dazed, bewildered, as in The Humorous Lieut., IV. vi. :—

"Sure, I take it,

He is bewitch'd, or mop'd, or his brains melted ;"

and Queen of Corinth, II. iii. :—

"How am I tranced, and moped !"

Mr Skeat says : "perhaps for death we should read deaths."

26—8.] Qo daies. Sipt some water. I have. Sympson conjectured 'cept some water, which Monck Mason has "no doubt is right;" but Seward filled up "both verses with what seems perfectly natural for her to say :—

'Food took I none these two days, only sipt

Some Water, two Nights I've not clos'd mine eyes,' etc.

Dyce says "that some words have dropt out is quite evident," and reads : once indeed I sipped &c. Mr Skeat adopts this, placing the words (which Dyce has omitted doing) between brackets; but cf. IV. iii. 4 (an evidence of unity in the authorship of these two scenes). Weber re-arranges the lines : Food, etc.; I have not, etc.; Scowered off, etc.; Let not, etc.; Or stab, etc.; Oh, state, etc. Edd. 1778 and Knight follow the old text. It is possible that some words have dropped out; guessing can avail little in such a case.

29.] The enumeration of deaths should be noticed, and their connection with insanity. Cf. I. i. 155, IV. iii. 29/31, Temp., III. iii.,—

"I have made you mad ;

And even with such-like valour, men hang and drown

Their proper selves."

31. state of natur:] Cf. Lear, I. iv. 290 (Skeat); Macb., I. iii. 140.

Scene 3.

This is one of those scenes, by the introduction of which Fletcher succeeded in spoiling a good play. "In most respects the scene is not very characteristic [?] of either writer, but leans towards Fletcher; and one argument for him might be drawn from an interchange of sarcasms between the kinsmen, in which they retort on each other former amorous adventures: such a dialogue is quite like Fletcher's men of gaiety; and needless degradation of his principal characters is a fault of which Shakspeare is not guilty."—Spalding, Letter, p. 43; v. Hickson, p. 44.

4. Here's no Theseus] S. Walker proposed to complete the line by making Palamon exclaim: No, Nor none so honest, Arcite. "'Theseus' is Shakspeare's pronunciation, not Fletcher's (see Mid. N. D.); besides, the sentence seems to require 'No'" (q. Dyce).

6/9. beastly] like a beast, adv., cf. T. of S., IV. ii. 34; 2 H.4., II. i. 16; Ant., I. v. 50; Cymb., V. iii. 27, and adj. Cymb., III. iii. 40. Cf. M. W., V. v. 10; Tim., IV. iii. 329 (Schmidt).

42/55—61.] Spalding quotes these lines as "one strikingly animated burst of jealous suspicion and impatience."

Scene 4.

"The fourth scene introduces the jailor's daughter again; she is now mad. She fancies she sees a ship, and there is some affectation of nautical language, (why, Heaven only knows); and the rest is mere incoherent nonsense. Now, though this last, indeed, may be the frequent birth of madness (or rather, so seeming, in default of being able to follow the infinitely fine associating links), it can have no place in poetry, which, whatever it may be, is certainly not a literal transcript of common things in their common aspects. In a subsequent scene we shall find the speeches given to this character full of meaning; the present bears every mark of the hand of Fletcher."—Hickson, p. 44*.

2. aglets] Here, Spangles. Cotgrave explains Aguillette, Esguillette, as A point. Nares has a good note on the word, and quotes from Dodsley's Old Plays, III. 194 (the passage is also given in a note to Coleridge's Table Talk, April 5th, 1833, p. 223, ed. 1852, from the Spanish Tragedy, IV. See Hazlitt's Dodsley, vol. V. p. 115):—

"And yonder pale-faced Hecate there, the moon,
Doth give consent to that is done in darkness;
And all those stars that gaze upon her face
Are aglets on her sleeve, pins on her train."

Dyce gives an example from Faerie Queene, II. iii. 26; and notes on the word: aglets—"were worn," says Sir F. Madden, "by both sexes; by the men chiefly as tags to their laces or points (aiguillettes), which were made either square or pointed, plain or in the form of acorns, or with small heads cut at the end, or topped with a diamond or ruby. . . . They were worn also by ladies, as pendants or ornaments in their head-dress. . . . Junius is therefore evidently mistaken in explaining aglet by spangle, into which error Archdeacon Nares has also partly fallen." Note on Privy Purse Expenses of the Princess Mary, p. 205; but (Dyce says) Coles gives both "An Aglet (tag of a point), Æramentum ligule," and "An Aglet (a little plate of metal), Bractea, Bracteola." [Cf. Handful of Pleasant delites, 1584 (Park, Heliconia, II. 25):

"Thy garters fringed with gold,
And silver aglets hanging by,
Which made thee blithe for to beholde," &c.

Cf. T. of Shrew, I. ii. 79, "aglet-baby"—i. e. a point device. See also Park, l. c. p. 102, n.]

9. Spoom her] Qo Vpon her; F2, ed. 1711, Knight (early ed.), Upon her. Seward and Sympson, Ed. 1778, Up with her 'fore: Theobald proposed to read spoom, which Weber, Dyce (who hesitates), and Knight (1867) adopt, spelling it spoom. Spoom is found in The Double Marriage, II. i. : "we'll spoom before her." Cf. Dryden, Hind and Panther, III. 96 :

"When virtue spooms before a prosperous gale,
My heaving wishes help to fill the sail."

Spoom her before the wind is the same as saying: Let her spoom, etc. Still, the reading is very uncertain, and Mr Skeat places a different word in his text: Run her. The misprint in the old text, Mr Skeat rightly refers to "the repetition of the Up of the next line; and the most likely word is one which shall be a short monosyllable, ending with n. Nearly all the modern editions read Spoom her, from a conjecture of Weber's [from Theobald's], founded on the fact that spoom occurs in Beaumont and Fletcher's Double Marriage, Act II. sc. i.; but the word spoom, in that passage, is an intransitive verb, meaning to sail steadily, and is a mere variation, apparently, of spume (foam), as if the sense were to throw up foam." Mr Skeat also quotes Nares' opinion against the reading Spoom.

10. course] "The courses meant in this place are two of the three lowest and largest sails of a ship, which are so called, because, as largest, they contribute most to give her way through the water, and consequently enable her to feel her helm, and steer her course better, than when they are not set or spread to the wind." Holt, q. Dyce. take, i. e. tack; the usual spelling in O. Edd. Cf. Prol. 26.

14. Caracke] Trading vessels often alluded to by B. and F.; e. g. The Coxcomb, I. iii. : "like Carracks, only strength and stowage" (v. Nares).

Song.] Mr Skeat notes that this song resembles st. 19 of the Nutbrown Maid. R[eed], in ed. 1778, gives D'Avenant's alteration:—

"For straight my green gown into breeches I'll make,
And my long yellow locks much shorter I'll take.
Sing down a-down, &c.
Then I'll cut me a switch, and on that ride about,
And wander and wander till I find him out.
With a heigh down, &c."

Sir William's change from the line "He s' buy me a white cut, forth for to ride," is curious. Cut, Dyce explains as "a familiar term for a common horse (either from its being docked or gelded)," &c. Dyce retains the old reading He's buy me, instead of Weber's He'll buy me, He's being a contracted form of He shall. See Dr Abbott's Sh. Gr., § 461, "shall is abbreviated into 'se and 's in Lear, iv. 6, 246; R. and J., i. 3, 9. In the first of these cases it is a provincialism, in the second a colloquialism. A similar abbreviation 'I-'st' for 'I will,' 'thou 'st' for 'thou wilt,' 'thou shalt,' &c., seems to have been common in the early Lancashire dialect (Gill, quoted by Mr Ellis)," &c. Mr Skeat (MS.) has suggested the slight change in the position of the apostrophe; He s'; the old Editions print He's, as 'th for th', etc.

25. nightingale] I only remark on this, perhaps the commonest allusion in our poetry, that Fletcher's references to the story are generally of a burlesque cast :

e. g. Lover's Progress, III. ii. :

"If I had but a pottle of sack, like a sharp prickle,
To knock my nose against when I am nodding,
I should sing like a nightingale."

The Nice Valour, V. i. :

"Set a sharp jest
Against my breast,
Then how my lungs do tickle !
As nightingales
And things in cambric rails,
Sing best against a prickle."

For the story of Philomene (given in The Legende of Good Women), the translation from "Dan Nasoes verse" was made by George Gascoigne, 1576, and has been reprinted by Mr Arber. Cf. Pass. Pilgr., xxi. 380; Faithful Shepherdess, V. iii. ; Giles Fletcher's Christ's Victorie (pp. 219, 257, ed. Grosart) ; etc., etc.

Scene 5.

The scene is headed "Scæna 6" in Qo, "Scæna Sexta," F2.

This scene is, in Hickson's opinion, "not only imitation, but the imitation of a young and inexperienced writer" (p. 57*); and Spalding criticises Gerrold as "a personage who has the pedantry of Shakspeare's Holofernes, without one solitary spark of his humour." Perhaps this is a little too hard on the "high-fantastical" pedant.

Bavian] Qo, F2, Baum. Bavian, Babion (B. J., Cynthia's Revels, I. i.), or Babian, a man dressed up as a baboon. The word Bavian is derived from the Dutch; cf. Swed. bawian. See Douce (whom Weber quotes), Nares, Dyce, and Skeat, for some remarks on this character, and Douce and Ritson (Robin Hood Ballads, Notes and Illustrations) for some account of the Morris-dance. There is "a mockmask of baboons, attired like fantastical travellers, in Neapolitan suits and great ruffs, all horsed with asses," etc., in Chapman's Masque of the Middle Temple and Lincoln's Inn (p. 342, ed. Shepherd).

1 sqq.] Compare these opening lines with The Spanish Curate, III. ii. :—

"I have taught these twenty years,
Preach'd spoonmeat to ye, that a child might swallow,
Yet ye are blockheads still."

8/6. most coarse freeze capacities] This seems to mean mental grossness, and is a simple metaphor from frieze—cf. "russet yeas and honest kersey noes," L. L. L., V. ii. 413 (Skeat). Freeze had another signification—which may be alluded to here—as in Cleveland's description of a wedding-party (Works, p. 258, ed. 1742 :—

"When-at the last they had fetched their Freeze,
And mired their Stomacks quitè up to the Knees
In Claret for and Good Cheer," etc.

? Freeze = Friesland Beer. Cf. "a frolic up-se-freeze," Nash, Summer's last Will, &c. (Hazlitt, Dodsley's O. P., viii. 58, refers to Popular Antiquities of Great Britain, vol. ii. p. 259.) Up-se = drunk; half-seas-over. v. Hazlitt, xiv. 471.

8/6. jane judgements] Dyce, Skeat. O. Edd. jave; Seward (suggested bays, but) followed by Edd. 1778 (and approved by Nares, s. v. sleave-silk), read sleave, i. e. floss-silk; Knight, jape. Dyce's emendation is certainly right, and jane (= Jean) was "a stuff well known in England long before the present play was written: 'Fustian called Jean,' &c. The Rates of the Custome-house, &c. 1582, sig. C2." javel (v. Cotgrave) or ravel (= confused, Cleveland) would be preferable to Seward's change, had we not Dyce's correction.

12/9. Here the Duke comes, etc.] If Fletcher borrowed this scene from Shakspeare, the author of the Masque of the Inner Temple and Gray's Inn has given us an outline of what must have been a precisely similar exhibition. Compare the whole scene carefully with the following description:—"The second Anti-masque rush in, dance their measure, and as rudely depart; consisting of a Pedant, May Lord, May Lady; Servingman, Chambermaid; a Country Clown, or Shepherd, Country Wench; an Host, Hostess; a He-Baboon, She-Baboon; a He-Fool, She-Fool, ushering them in. All these persons, appavelled to the life, Men issuing out of one side of the boscaige, and the Women from the other. The music was extremely well-fitted, having such a spirit of country jollity, as can hardly be imagined; but the perpetual laughter and applause was above the music," etc. (Works of B. and F., ed. Darley (Weber's text), p. 688, vol. II.)

21/15. trace and turn, boys] "Which is followed by the trace and tract of an excellent juggler, that can juggle with every joint about him from head to heel."—Ben Jonson, Pan's Anniversary. "Now for the honour of our town, boys, trace sweetly."—Fletcher, Women Pleas'd, IV. i. (see the scene). tract, sb. is used in the modern sense of trace by Spenser, F. Q., VI. xii. 22: "Him follow'd by the tract of his outrageous spoile;" and as the verb, II. vi. 39.

Mr Skeat explains trace, "follow out your proper track:" but the word seems to have been regularly used of dances:

"And light-foot Nymphes, can chace the lingring Night
With Heydeguyes, and trimly trodden traces."

Spenser, Shep. Cal., June, l. 28.

where E. K. glosses: "Heydeguyes, A country daunce or rownd. The concept is, that the Graces and Nymphes doe dance unto the Muses and Pan his musicke all night by Moonelight. To signifie the pleasauntnesse of the soyle."

cf. "He hops without the ring,
Yet daunceth on the trace,
When some come after, soft and faire
A heavie hobling pace."

Handful of Pleasant Delites, 1584.

(p. 60, Park) and Park (Heliconia, II. 101) is perhaps right in querying "if an allusion to hopscotch?" See The Four P. P. (Hazlitt's Dodsley, I. 360): "Here were a hopper to hop for the ring! &c. . . . To hop so, that ye shall hop without it" (= outside it). But these terms were also used of the Morris and Hobbyhorse dancing (as possibly in the lines quoted from Park), perhaps from training, 'ringing,' a horse; v. Hazl. Dodsley, vii. 281. Cf. Nash, Summer's

Last Will (Hazl. Dodsley, viii. 25) : "You, friend with the hobby-horse, go not too fast . . . Ver. So, so, so; trot the ring twice over, and away." And see The Four Elements, Dodsley, i. 47 (cf. ib. vii. 318) : "Follow all : I will lead a trace. . . . So merrily let us dance ey, so merrily, &c." Note the exclamation "ey;" cf. Hazl. D. vii. 421. Strutt (Sports and Pastimes, ed. Hone, 1831, p. 225) says that "Hopping matches for prizes were occasionally made in the sixteenth century," and quotes from Heywood's Proverbs, 1566,

"Where woovers hoppe in and out, long time may bring,
Him that hoppeth best at last to have the ring—
—I hopping without for a ringe of a rushe," and from the Four P.'s, ubi supra. "Hence it appears a ring was usually the prize, and given to him who could hop best, and could continue to do so the longest." An inference, surely, founded on a misunderstanding of the passages?

28/24. swim with your bodies.] Cf. "carry your bodies in the swimming fashion," Chapman, The Ball, II. (p. 494, ed. Shepherd).

29/26. deliverly] "nimble, actively," Dyce.

39. all the fat's i'th' fire] Many of these "curious comparisons, borrow'd from the pond and kitchen" (Lover's Progress, II. ii.), are still to be found in various parts of the kingdom; this one has survived amongst others. Cf. B. Jonson, Love's Welcome (at Welbeck).

41. washed a tile] laterem lavare, πλίνθους πλύνειν.

43. hilding] Used of both sexes, though probably it was orig. a dimin. of hind, man-servant. See Nares, and to the examples he quotes of its application to woman, add : The Pilgrim, I. ii., "If the proud hilding Would yield but to my will, and know her duty."

49/50. An Eele and a woman a learned Poet says,] Who was the learned poet? I can find no classical quotation at all like this, except the proverbial phrase in Plaut. Pseud. 2, 4, 56 : "anguilla est, elabitur." "Anguillam cauda tenes" is given in Bohn's Dict. Class. Quotations; neither of these expressions being, however, applied to women. Cf. Pope, Dunciad, I. 280, "Holds the eel of Science by the tail." Fletcher has the proverb again in The Scornful Lady, II. i., "I will end with the wise man, and say, 'He that holds a woman has an eel by the tail.'" Valentinian, I. i., "and if all fail, This is the first quick eel that saved her tail." The Chances, III. iii., "an eel's tail." The Prophetess, III. ii., "hold her fast, she will slip through your fingers like an eel else."

In the Paradise of Dainty Devices, p. 62 (ed. 1810, Brydges' Brit. Bibliog.) : "held the Eele by the tail" (speaking of a fickle "sainct"). Hazlitt's Dodsley, vii. 355 : "whosoever hath her, hath but a wet eel by the tail." Mr Skeat has kindly added two more references (in reply to a query in N. and Q.) :—"Ray (Proverbs) has ἀπ' οὐρᾶς τὴν ἔγχελυν ἔχεις (no reference). 'As trusty as is a quick eel by the tail.'—Hazlitt's Old Plays, iii. 288." I agree with Mr Skeat, that the "learned poet" is probably a fiction : (but ? Rabelais might have suggested the idea).

53. a fire ill take her] O. Edd. fire ill ("is unmeaning," Skeat. Hence this note.) Plainly the right reading (v. Nares, s. v. Ferril; Halliwell, Arch. Dict., I. 357; or Fielding, Joseph Andrews, c. xviii.), as this passage needs no comment to show :—" a tobacco-shope and a bawdy-house are coincident ; for a smoak is not without a fyer." Gesta Grayorum (in Nicholls' Progresses of Q. Eli., vol. II. p. 68). take = infect. Seward hoped he restored the original in reading : A feril take her. Edd. 1778 ask : " May we not understand by fire ill, a mighty ill, a severe punishment ? " Weber suspects we should transpose : an ill fire, but retains the old reading, as do Edd. 1778, Knight, and Dyce. Mr Skeat adopts a suggestion of Dyce's, and reads : A wildfire take her, explaining wildfire as equivalent to Greek fire. But even wildfire had a two-fold sense : (a) Greek fire, which sense it bears when used with such a word as burn, etc., as in Philaster, II. iv., and in Calisto and Melibæa (referred to by Mr Skeat); (b) when used with such a word as take, i. e. infect (v. Schmidt), wildfire means rash, as in the Mad Lover, V. iii. (q. Dyce) and Rule a Wife, III. v., " a wildfire take her." " Fire also gives the denominations to divers diseases, as Fire, St Anthony's." Rees' Cyclopædia, art. Fire. The exclamation is very old : " A wilde fyr upon thair bodyes falle." Chaucer, Reeve's Tale, l. 252. This is scarcely a parallel, from Faust : " Die Feuerpein Euch ins Gebein !"

58/60. frampall] " peevish, froward," Dyce. nettle, ? mettle.

60/62.] George alow. Edd. " lit. low down ; possibly referring to the appearance of a ship on the horizon," Skeat. (The sense is not very clear ; was there ever a ship called the George Aloe ? aloe is spelt alowe in the Paradise of Dainty Devices, p. 59 !) Most probably alow is merely an exclamation, as in Lear, III. iv. 80 (Booth's repr. F1, p. 787) :—

" Pillcock sat on Pillcock hill, alow : alow, loo, loo," where Camb. Edd. Halloo. Cf. l. 64, " Well hail'd."

74/76. March hare] Cf. " I came from a world of mad women, Mad as March hares."—The Wildgoose Chase, IV. iii.

80/84. tell ten] " It was a trial of idiocy to make the person count his fingers."—Weber.

84/87. y' are a tinker] Cf. IV. i. 133 : " Are not you a tailour ? " and note the exclamation " Buz," l. 84. Cf. Hamlet, II. ii. 412. We are reminded of Hamlet's " you are a fishmonger," by these lines ; with the difference (noticed by Hickson, p. 48*) that " the retort to Polonius is full of meaning."

87/91. Qui passa] an unexplained line. v. Skeat's n. Strutt separates these accompaniments, giving the bells to the Morris as commonly danced, the bones to the Morisco dance properly so called. A questionable distinction. (Sports, &c., ed. Hone, p. 223.)

88/92. a peace] R[eed], in ed. 1778, proposes " appease, i. e. be quiet or silent." Mason : a place. Weber suspects " the original was a pace, i. e. a dance" . . . to a peace may simply mean, to be quiet (Skeat); or persuade her to a peace is Gerrold's grandiloquent mode of saying, persuade her to ally herself with us, to join in our dance. Somewhat similarly the Duke says of Malvolio, " Pursue him, and entreat him to a peace" (Twelfth Night, V. i.) = pacify him.

89/93. Et opus] O. Edd., Dyce, Seward, ed. 1778, Weber, Atque. Mr Skeat substitutes En for et, but reads ignis with the Edd. " Strictly, Ovid has ' Jamque opus,' and ' ignes,' not ignis ; Metamorph. xv. 871."—Skeat. Dyce, last 2 edd., has also given the reference to Ovid.

101/108. all haile] "I know not whether it is necessary to observe, that there is a play on hail, as in Love's Labour's Lost, v. 2,—

'All hail, sweet madam, and fair time of day!

Prin. Fair, in all hail, is foul, as I conceive.'

Dekker, Old Fortunatus, Old English Drama, 1831, p. 34,—

'Andelocia. Brother, all hail. Shadow. There's a rattling salutation.'"—Sidney Walker.

Cf. also, The Faithful Friends, III. ii.,—

"Pergamus. All hail!

Learchus. He begins to storm already."

Cleveland, Works, p. 380: A zealous Discourse between the Person of the Parish, and Tabitha:

"Hail Sister to your snowy Breast

The Word permitteth us to jeast," &c.

114/121. Máchine] The pronunciation (a long) in Co. Wicklow at the present day. Probably Gerrold's "machine" and "frame" mean simply the arranged dance and address.

125/132. pennner] However Gerrold may have derived the word, he surely meant thing pennal; not "a case for holding pens," as the Edd. from Weber explain it?

126/133.] v. n. l. 12/9 of this scene.

129/136. welcomes to their cost] With Mr Skeat, I have left this passage as it stands in O. Edd., objections to the grammar seeming hypercritical, and to a student of Dr Abbott's Shakespearian Grammar, almost absurd. Sidney Walker reads welcome to his cost, and two lines on, Informis. Cf. IV. iii. 90, for the use of their; but traveller may be a plural, as soldier so often is in B. and F.

132/139. beast-eating] "Why the beast-eating clown? I should read beef-eating." (Monck Mason.) Why beef-eating?

138/145. Intrate filij] Edd. 1778 rightly place Ger. before this speech; in preceding Edd. it is given to Pir., though the marginal instruction in Qo shows that Gerrold was the speaker.

157/166. dowsets] "The testes of a deer."—Dyce. This word, not found in Shakspeare, is often used by Fletcher; e. g. Thierry and Theod., II. ii.; Philaster, IV. ii.; Elder Brother, V. i.; Coxcomb, II. iii.; and by Ben Jonson, Sad Sheph., I. ii.; Gipsies Metamorphosed, etc. v. Nares, s.v.

Scene 6.

"The scene is a spirited and excellent one; but its tone is Fletcher's, not Shakspeare's."—Spalding, Letter, p. 44. Hickson praises the scene slightly.

30/34. Like meeting of two tides] See Spalding, Letter, p. 16, for some judicious observations on the vagueness and lack of precision in Fletcher's ideas. Spalding lays particular stress on "the want of distinctness in grasping images, and the inability to see fully either their picturesque or their poetical relations;" and illustrates the remark by quoting this passage, and ll. 82/108—112, "When I saw you charge first," etc. v. n. II. ii. 24/27.

58/73. grand-guard] Nares does not give any satisfactory explanation of this word, but Dyce quotes from Meyrick's Critical Inquiry into Ancient Armour, &c., vol. ii. p. 164, ed. 1842. Describing a suit of armour at Goodrich Court, he says that "It has, over the breast, for the purpose of justing, what was called the grand-garde, which is screwed on by three nuts, and protects the left side, the edge of the breast, and the left shoulder."

98/128. If there be A place prepared] Perhaps suggested by Chaucer's lines, Knight's Tale, 1951-2:—

"His spiryt chaunged was, and wente ther,
As I cam never, I can nat tellen wher."

106/137.] Seward proposes to give ll. 103/134-6, to Palamon, l. 106/137 to Arcite: "once more farewell, my cosen." His reasons are not worth quoting: subseq. edd.; "cannot see any need of change" (Edd. 1778).

110/143. honour's sake and safety,] O. Edd. sake, and safely presently. Seward, etc., safety, except Edd. 1778, who reject the emendation: it "being merely conjectural, and not necessary"—a precaution they might have exercised in several other cases with greater propriety.

131/167. Have at thy life] "Have at your life then!" Lover's Progress, II. iii. The usual exclamation of warning.

134/170-2.] Cf. Chaucer, K. T., ll. 848—857.

145/183. Against thy owne] Dyce, thy. Qo this owne. [Note y mistaken for is. Cf. note I. i. 213/237. F2 this own. Ed. 1711, etc. (except Dyce thy, and Skeat thine own), this known. "Look to thine own well, Arcite!" occurs a few lines above, and perhaps is the right reading here: but thy own seems more rhythmical, and is borne out by the misprint.

190/232. kill] O. Edd., Dyce, Skeat, kill. Seward, etc., kills. Mr Skeat points out the tendency to make the verb "agree with the nearest substantive, the ear deciding against the requirements of logic;" a common irregularity in old authors.

201/246. These are strange conjurings] Cf. Little F. Lawyer, IV. v. :—

Lam. "Dinant, as thou art noble—
Ana. As thou art valiant, Clermont—
Lam. As ever I
 Appeared lovely
Ana. As you ever hope
 For what I would give gladly—Clerc. Pretty conjurations!"

Shakspeare has a skit at these conjurations in Hamlet, V. ii. 38—43, although in Coriol., I. vi., 22*d* speech, this mode of address is used.

227/277.] Cf. Maid's Tragedy, II. i.,—

"Thou hast ta'en an oath,
But such a rash one, that to keep it were Worse than to swear it."

236/287. fall Qo,] F2. Ed. 1711, etc., read fail. Dr C. M. Ingleby confirms me in thinking that fall is the right reading here. He writes:—Compare l. 272: Let it not fall agen, Sir. These are remarkable instances of the use of this intransitive verb as a synonym of fall. Shakspeare affords us only two certain examples of this :—

“Her will, recoiling to her better judgement,
May fall to match you with her country forms
And happily repent.”—Othello, III. iii. 237.

Here fall is not happen [Schmidt, wrongly, begin, get into], but fail.

“Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well,
When our deep plots do fall.” (fall, Folio.)

Hamlet, V. ii. 9.

Here fall is nonsense; and fail, the reading of the quartos, makes sense. Fall, of course, is the opposite of succeed. Now, our word for this is fail. Cf.

“London you say is safely looked into;
Alas! poor rebels there your aid must fall.”

Sir John Oldcastle.

There is also one example in The London Prodigal, and two in Isaiah, namely, xxxi. 3, and lvii. in two verses.

240/290. name, opinion!] O. Edd. name; opinion. “Seward and Sympson propose different amendments, but inform us that Theobald, in a marginal note, proposed to read, My name’s opinion, which is much in the style of our authors, and I have no doubt is the true reading.” (Monck Mason.) Weber also suspects that this is the right reading, and is followed by Knight, Dyce, and Skeat. But opinion is emphatic, and is used here (as again by Fletcher) in the sense of notoriety, disrepute. Cf. Thierry and Theodoret, II. ii. :

“But wisdom, Sir, and weight of what is on me,
(. . . .) tells me directly,
Beside my person, my fair reputation,
If I thrust into crowds, and seek occasions,
Suffers opinion.”

Elsewhere it usually means simply, reputation; e. g. Island Princess, III. iii., Lover’s Progress, IV. iv. Ford, Broken Heart, III. i. v. Schmidt (p. 811, b.) :—
“Peculiar passage: that he might stick the smallest opinion on my least misuse, Oth., IV. ii. 109 (= ill opinion).”

242/293. proyne] Qo proyne, F2, ed. 1711, proyn. Later edd. prune, Dyce and Skeat, proin. The word was certainly pronounced as here spelt. According to Nares (s.v. Proin) it was “very little used in the age of Elizabeth, but common before that time.” I think I have met it not unfrequently, though I can only recall a few instances, viz. B. Jonson’s Discourse with Cupid, “where I sit and proyne my wings”; Milton, Comus, l. 378; Gascoigne’s Complaint of Philomene, “proine her plumes” (p. 98, Arber); Bacon’s Essay Of Studies, “For Naturall Abilities, are like Naturall Plants, that need Proyning by Study.” (p. 204, ed. Wright.)

246/297. And all the longing maids that ever loved] Sidney Walker says: “Both sound (the Fletcherian rhythm especially) and sense require ‘that ever lov’d them.’” I do not feel at all sure that any addition is proper or necessary. Dyce (later edd.) follows Walker’s conj. Mr Skeat has the old reading. See note on II. ii. 37/40.

270/324. Make death a devil] "This is obscure. It seems to mean—I will turn death into a horrible monster: cf. Tro. and Cress., III. ii. 74." (Skeat.) May it not simply mean: 'though you should make death as formidable as a devil'?

282/339—342.] Fletcher here, clumsily enough, indicates the distinguishing characteristics of the Kinsmen.

292/349. three] Chaucer, Knights' Tale, 993,—

"And this day fyfty wykes, fer ne neer, Everich of you shall bryng an hundred knightes."

ACT IV.

Chaucer originals to this act are:—sc. ii. : ll. 1236—1350. The descriptions of the Knights deserve close comparison.

Scene I.

A certain resemblance between the descriptive passages in this scene and the Queen's picture of Ophelia's death, has been the chief agent in misleading critics to suppose that the Jailor's Daughter is a copy of Ophelia. No view, Hickson points out, can be more erroneous, for "not only the circumstances, but the springs of action, are different from those of Ophelia; and we beg to assure such as may not have examined the question for themselves, that the language and sentiments are still more unlike. But the description in this scene has a certain resemblance to the circumstances of the death of Ophelia, and was probably written with that scene in view. It has no reference whatever to the character of the jailor's daughter, and it is the only circumstance in the whole play common to her and to Ophelia." (Hickson, p. 43*. See the entire passage.)

The following, from Weber's preface, illustrates the diversity of critical opinion:—"The Jailor's Daughter, which is our authors' own addition to Chaucer's Tale, has been long admired as an extremely well-wrought copy of Ophelia." (Vol. xiii. p. 3.) Here is the other extreme:—"a wretched interpolation in the story, and a fantastic copy of Ophelia." (Hazlitt, Eliz. Lit., p. 125, ed. 1870.)

25/30. Ever bring good news] Cf. Wit at Several Weapons, IV. i. :—

"Thou never brought'st good news i' thy life yet;
And that's an ill quality."

41/54. innocent] "In the northern parts of this kingdom," says R[eed] in ed. 1778, "the common appellation of an ideot is an innocent to this day." Is the term peculiar to the northern part nowadays? It is commonly so used in Ireland.

45/59. not right] i. e. not sane, not in her right mind. The expression is still heard in Ireland in this sense, and is also used of a person supposed to be connected with supernatural agents of evil.

60/80. To his own skill,] See Abbott, Sh. Gr. § 228. i. e. "to its own skill in catching fish" (Skeat); or? skill = care: to take care of itself.

71/93. beavy] "A lovely bevy of faire Ladies," Spenser, F. Q., II. ix. 34. "This bevie of Ladies bright," Sh. Kal. April, l. 118, on which E. K. glosses: "Bevie, a beavie of ladies, is spoken figuratively for a company, or troupe: the terne is taken of Larkes. For they say a Bevie of Larkes, even as a Covey of Partridge, or an eye of Pheasaunts." (Globe ed. p. 457.)

80/102. Willow] This song, often alluded to, is found in various forms; one version by John Heywood is given amongst the additional poems in Mr Halliwell's ed. of The Moral Play of Wit and Science, p. 86, ed. Sh. Soc. 1848. See the Commentators on Othello, IV. iii.

90/112. posies.] Fletcher is full of allusions to these mottoes, e. g. Knight of B. P., V. iii.; Loyal Subject, II. ii. ("the jewel's set within."); Pilgrim, I. ii. ("Be constant, fair, still?" 'Tis the posy here, and here without, "Be good."); ib. IV. i. ("Prick me, and heal me."); Woman Hater, IV. i. ("poesies for chimneys."); Rule a Wife, IV. i. ("a blind posy in 't, 'Love and a mill-horse should go round together.'). Eastward Hoe, IV. i. (Shepherd's Chapman, p. 474, "thou and thy acts become the posies for hospitals"). See a note on the word in Hales' Longer English Poems, p. 207. Mr Skeat refers to Chambers' Book of Days, I. 221. Rings made of rushes are alluded to again in The Faithful Shepherdess, I. iii., "Or gather rushes, to make many a ring For thy long fingers." For some interesting facts about old rings, see Fairholt's Rambles of an Archaeologist.

91/113. loose] i. e. lose. Mr Skeat is the only editor who has noticed this. Commonly so spelt in books of the period, and through this play, passim; e. g. Prol. l. 5, etc.

106/132. The Broome] Sometimes spelt Brome (as Rome used to be pronounced Roome; v. Ellis's Pronunciation, p. 925). Weber gives this song from Wager's The Longer Thou Livest, The More Fool Thou Art; it is also found in Captain Cox, p. cxxvii, ed. Furnivall:—

"Moros. BRome, brome, on hill,
The gentle Brome on hill hill:
Brome, Brome on Hiue hill,
The gentle Brome on Hiue hill,
The brome standes on Hiue hilla."

Dyce (vol. viii., p. 182, ed. 1876) refers to Chappell's Popular Music of the Olden Time, &c., vol. ii. p. 459, sec. ed.

107/133. Bonny Robin] Ophelia sings, "For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy," Hml., IV. v. 187. See Dyce's footnote (last two edd.), vol. viii. p. 184.

107/134. tailour !] v. n. III. v. 84/87; cf. l. 118/152.

110/137. rardy] or rearly, as the word is also spelt, i. e. early. Grose, Glossary (ed. 1839): "Rear (corruptly pronounced Rare), early, soon. Meat under-roasted, boiled, or broiled, is said to be rear, or rare, from being taken too soon off the fire. See Raid and Rathe. Kent." Mr Skeat has an interesting note on the word. O. Edd., Skeat, rarely. Sympson conj. rearly, "i. e. betimes in the morning;" but as he quoted no authority for this, Seward, followed by Edd. 1778, read: early. Mason, Weber, Knight, Dyce, adopt Sympson's reading. "Simpson had the authority of Gay, who uses rear, in his Shepherd's Week, as a provincial word for early." Weber.

112/141. O Fair, O sweet] Dyce (viii. 182, last two edd.) says this is found among Certaine Sonets at end of Sidney's Arcadia, p. 474, ed. 1598:

"O Faire, o sweet, when I do looke on thee,
In whom all ioyes so well agree," etc.

119/152—5] Cf. Hml., II. ii. 182—7.

139/180. Ship.] Fletcher has a lot of sea-talk on the course and management of a ship in The Loyal Subject, III. ii.

148/196. A faire wood] A wood is mentioned, l. 140/184, but is there not a pun intended here—wood meaning mad, as in M. N. D., II. ii.—a fair wood = a mad beauty?

Scene 2.

"Fletcher's masterpiece."—Hickson. "In the soliloquy of the lady, while the poetical spirit is well preserved, the alternations of feeling are given with an abruptness and a want of insight into the nicer shades of association, which resemble the extravagant stage effects of the King and No King, infinitely more than the delicate yet piercing glance with which Shakspeare looks into the human breast in the Othello; the language, too, is smoother and less powerful than Shakspeare's, and one or two classical allusions are a little too correct and studied for him."—Spalding, Letter, p. 46.

16. Set Jove afire with] O. Edd. Set Love afire with. Sympson, (1) suggested Set Jove afire with, but thinking it still not sense, proposed, (2)

"Jove such another wanton Ganimede Set Love afire with."

Seward omits with, and reads: Set Jove afire; making afire a trisyllable, and Knight adopts this reading. Seward also proposes to retain the old reading, and insert he after Ganimede; but prefers the former change. Edd. 1778, etc., adopt Sympson's change (1). Mason's explanation (which, strange to say, Dyce and Skeat accept as the right one) is: "Just such another (sc. smile) wanton Ganimede Set Jove," etc., smile being "understood from the preceding 'smiling'" (Dyce). How any one can have read these lines attentively, without seeing that the noun is "eye," passes all comprehension. Emilia first mentions his face, and dwells reflectively on it; then his eye, of "fiery sparkle and quick sweetness," where "Love himself sets smiling"—O rare eye!

"Just such another [eye] wanton Ganimede
Set Jove afire with, and enforc'd the god
Snatch up the goodly boy," etc.

Then—having done justice to this particular feature, Emilia next describes his brow—

"What a brow,
Of what a spacious majesty he carries,"—

and in comes another classical parallel—of brow, as the former of eye—to balance the Ganimede bit:—

"Arch'd like the great-ey'd Juno's, but far sweeter Smoother than Pelops' shoulder."

For the position of with, compare ll. 85/95—7, infra:—

"on his thigh a sword
Hung by a curious baldrick, when he frowns
To seal his will with."

See Hickson, p. 44*, on the "elaborate imitation" of Shakspeare in this speech.

21. Pelops' shoulder] A very common allusion; e. g. Faithful Shepherdess, II. ii., etc.

27. eye as heavy] Cf. "How dull and heavily he looks upon me," Prophetess, I. ii.

28. As if he had lost his mother] Edd. 1778 (he'd) note: "This seems directly opposite to the sense intended, the effeminacy of Palamon, compared with Arcite. Perhaps we should read, As h' had NOT lost his mother, i. e. the mother in his mind." "This note is worth preserving for its curious and quaint absurdity."—Weber. (A good argument for a B. and F. Variorum!)

39.] In the Lover's Progress, I. ii., a rich "heir," Madam Olinda, has to choose between two rival lovers; see the whole scene. She says of one:

"in his face appears
A kind of majesty which should command,
Not sue for favour."

44. a mere gipsy] Commonly used as a term of contempt, as in Four Plays in One, Triumph of Death, sc. vi.: "thou damn'd gipsy;" Monsieur Thomas, I. i., "and all complexions beside hers, to gipsies." v. Schmidt, s.v.

67/70. their faire knights] S. Walker proposes to read six for faire, but Dyce well compares, "With three fair knights," III. vi. 292/351.

70/75. Enter Messenger. Curtis.] Qo Messengers. Curtis' services are required again, in company with T. Tucke, stage direction, V. iii. Probably these were a couple of intelligent "supers" at the Blackfriars; I have not succeeded in finding out any facts about their connection with the theatre; but I think I am justified in leaving all these relics of the old times on the page as they were written, at least in a trial edition like the present. They can do no harm, and possibly may help us to some clue of date or performance hereafter.

74/82. these] The description of the knights should be carefully compared with the corresponding pictures in Chaucer.

81/91. Show fire within him] Cf. Chaucer, K. T., l. 1273—5:

"The cercles of his eyen in his heed
They gloweden bytwixe yolw and reed,
And lik a griffoun loked he about," etc."

87/97.] Like a copy from Oth., V. ii. 260 (Skeat).

104/116. ivy tods] All former Edd. read ivy tops. But tops seems obviously a misprint for tods, the d being inverted. The same misprint occurs in the Spanish Tragedy (v. Hazlitt's Dodsley, vol. V. p. 9), shapes for shades, and the opposite in R. and J., Q2, V. iii. 41, friendshid for friendship. I have never seen Ivy-tops, except here, in any book, but Ivy-tods are often alluded to by B. and F.,—Wit without money, IV. ii., "old tod-ivy;" Rule a Wife, &c., IV. iii., "tod of aged ivy;" Bonduca, I. i., "tods of ivy." The Pilgrim, I. ii., "tod of hay" (where, as Nares, q. v., has also noticed, Ivy seems the true reading).

108/121. court] Qo correct, F2, ed. 1711, correct, Seward, etc., crown. Mr Skeat compares V. iii. 17/20. I have ventured to substitute court for Seward's conjecture, crown. It suits the sense, and in MS. might easily have been mistaken for correct.

125/142. aborne] Qo. Nares gives abron, auberne, aburne (auburn, "quasi Alburn, from whiteness. A colour inclining to white"), as various forms of the word. v. Schmidt; cf. Coriol., II. iii. 21, Two Gent., IV. iv. 194. Schlegel and Tieck translate the words in Coriol.—"weil von unsern Köpfen einige schwarz, einige schäckig und einige kahl sind," and note:—"einige schäckig, im Original: some abram, welches die Editoren in auburn verändert haben. Das Wort kommt aber öfter vor, bedeutet seltsam, gemischt, grau und schwarz; und hängt mit Abraham (wie die Engländer meinen) nicht zusammen; im Altdeutschen haben wir es als a br ä u m i s c h, a b r a m s c h." Ed. 1844, vol. viii., p. 384.

131/148. gray-ey'd] v. Schmidt, s. v. Grey, and the commentators on Romeo and Juliet, II. iv. 39 (p. 124, ed. Furness). Note their blunders about blue-ey'd. Cf. B. and F., Honest Man's Fortune, V. iii.

145/164] Seward (followed by Edd. 1778 and Mason) reads:—

"they would shew bravely
Fighting about the titles," &c.

Cf. III. i. 21.

Scene 3.

On the way in which we determine the authorship of this scene, must depend our view of Shakspeare's share in the play as a whole. But—as Spalding (p. 58) lays down—"In truth, a question of this sort is infinitely more easy of decision when Fletcher is the author against whose claims Shakspeare's are to be balanced, than it could be if the poet's supposed assistant were any other ancient English dramatist. . . . When Fletcher is Shakspeare's only competitor, . . . we are not compelled to reason from difference in degree, because we are sensible of a striking dissimilarity in kind." In continuation therefore of the principle—that the underplot is entirely from one hand,—which he assumed in order to prove, Spalding, without a single word of criticism, gives this scene to Fletcher; but Hickson—and let no one refuse to accept his judgment without a careful weighing of his arguments—confidently declares Shakspeare to be the author. Be it Shakspeare's or another's, can any one read by themselves the scenes composing the underplot without feeling satisfied that we have here the very thing Spalding describes, an absolute dissimilarity in kind, and not a merely relative difference in degree? (See N. S. S. Trans., pp. 45*—50*.)

Compare Macb., V. i. and iii. Seward says: The printers have divided the whole scene into verse, "though it is evidently all prose;" Edd. 1778 think the fact that the printers have done so is "a strong presumption" of the lines having been so written.

18/21. as there's] Qo as th'ers, F2, etc. (except Weber, Dyce, Skeat), as there's. Mason, are, (there's a sight) we maids, [sic] &c. Weber, [are] (there's a sight now) we; Dyce, Skeat (from Mason), are—there's a sight now!—we. The old reading admits of two defences: a. As (= so) was used to introduce exclamations, though so was more commonly employed. The speaker is thinking of the place where the "blessed spirits" are—but before she can describe it or complete her sentence, she breaks into the exclamation, as there's a sight now! b. sight may be used, as it is used at the present day in Co. Wicklow, to mean number. One often hears such expressions as : "there's a sight of people in the fair," "he's a sight of cattle," "I'd a sight sooner" (= a deal sooner), etc., and this provincial use (Mr P. A. Daniel informs me) still survives in England also. Thus the passage might mean, "Come where the blessed spirits—for there's a great number at present." I at least do not look for very connected utterances from this speaker; her other sentences are not so coherent as to justify me in rectifying her grammar here. The parenthesis is Seward's.

21/24, 26.] Mr Skeat refers to W. T., IV. iv. 116, and Hml., IV. v. 189.

25/27. Barly-breake] "'He is at barley-break, and the last couple are now in hell.' (The Virgin Martyr, Act V. Sc. i) This game is thus described by Gifford, chiefly from a passage in Sir P. Sidney's Arcadia. 'It was played by six people (three of each sex) who were coupled by lot. A piece of ground was then chosen, and divided into three compartments, of which the middle one was called hell. It was the object of the couple condemned to this division, to catch the others, who advanced from the two extremities : in which case a change of situation took place, and hell was filled by the couple who were excluded by pre-occupation from the other places ; in this "catching," however, there was some difficulty, as by the regulations of the game, the middle couple were not to separate before they had succeeded, while the others might break hands whenever they found themselves hard pressed. When all had been taken in turn, the last couple were said to be in hell, and the game ended.'" Massinger's Works, ed. H. Coleridge, Glossary. Dyce adds : "On the Scottish mode of playing it (which is very different), see Jamieson's Etymol. Dict. of the Scot. Lang. in 'Barla-breikis, Barley-bracks.'" The game is still a favourite with boys, although the names and rules differ at almost every school. Allusions to it are common in old plays ; e. g. The Scornful Lady, V. iv., "here's the last couple in hell;" The Captain, V. iv.; Massinger (q. supra, and) The Parliament of Love, IV. v.; Jonson, Sad Shepherd, I. ii. See Nares for a good note on the word.

29/32.] See n. III. ii. 29.

35/38—44. See Hickson, p. 47*, for a note on this speech. I have not noticed any parallels in B. and F. closer than these, not very close ones :—

Orpheus, describing Hell, says,

"Now in cold frosts, now scorching fires,

They sit and curse their lost desires."—The Mad Lover, IV. i.

and The Night Walker, IV. v., "the ravisher's soul in eternal frost."

46/49. th' other, this fire] O. Edd., etc., another. Dyce, th' other, plainly the right reading, as she is speaking of the "proud Lady" and the "proud City wife;" the one cries, . . . , th' other cries; the one cries . . th' other curses, etc. The occurrence of th' other in the last clause shews that the description is not of a general "whoobub," but of two typical figures in the crowd.

76/82. carve her] Qo, crave her, corr. F2 carve her. Seward inserts for, and so Edd. 1778 and Knight (1st ed.); Weber, Dyce, Knight (2nd ed. Pictorial Sh. 1867), follow F2. In the addenda to his B. and F., vol. I., p. civ., 1843, Dyce says : "That Seward and Mr Knight were wrong in making the alteration, 'carve for her,' is proved by the following line of Beaumont's Remedy of Love,

'Drink to him, carve him, give him compliments.'

Mr Skeat quotes this passage, and from Love's Pilgrimage, I. i., "I'll carve you, sir."

If we made any addition, the more correct idiom would be, carve to her (Com. Err., II. ii. 120, Vittor. Corombona, p. 8, ed. 1866). It was a mark of great respect to carve to or for a person. Cf. Chaucer, Prolog. C. T., l. 100. Sh. M. W., I. iii. 49; L. L. L., V. ii. 323; IV. i. 55 (Schmidt, who refers to Dyce's Glossary). Prior, in The Ladle (Poems, vol. i., p. 74, Dublin ed. 1728):—

"Well then, things handsomely were serv'd :
My mistress for the strangers carv'd."

Chapman, Minor Poems, p. 30: "His eye did carve him on that feast of feasts."

77/83. among] See Sidney Walker, Crit. Exam., vol. iii. p. 344, for a long note on this use of among, per se, as μετα occasionally in Greek. This use is common; e. g. see Hazlitt's Dodsley, vol. I., pp. 7, 22, 329.

83/90. out of square] Cf. R. Edwardes' Damon and Pythias (Hazlitt's Dodsley, IV. 66):

"The king himself museth hereat, yet he is far out of square,
That he trusteth none to come near him," etc.;

i. e. disordered, "out of sorts." v. Schmidt, s. v., and cf. "all square," &c.

ACT V.

Weber divided Sc. i. into 3 scenes, but has not been followed in this.

Critics are unanimous—I may almost say—in assigning this act, with the exception of Scene ii., to Shakspeare. See Spalding, Letter, pp. 46—57, Hickson, p. 52*. At the same time, I think it may be shewn that Fletcher was probably the author or enlarger of (at least) the preface to Scene i. Especially contrast the metre of the first 19 lines (17 verse-lines, 13 (not 15, Skeat, Pref. xxii.) double-endings!) with that of any other ordinary dialogue in the Shakspeare part of the play; the two will be found very different. I had formed the above opinion some time before Mr Skeat's edition appeared, and I find that Mr Skeat holds the same views. See his Introd. pp. xix, xxii, xxiii.

The following words of De Quincey's may be fitly prefixed to any commentary on this act:—

"In retracing the history of English rhetoric, it may strike the reader that we have made some capital omissions. But in these he will find we have been governed by sufficient reasons. Shakspeare is no doubt a rhetorician, majorum gentium, but he is so much more, that scarcely an instance is to be found of his rhetoric which does not pass by fits into the higher element of eloquence or poetry. The first and the last acts, for instance, of The Two Noble Kinsmen, which, in point of composition, is perhaps the most superb work in the language, and beyond all doubt from the loom of Shakspeare, would have been the most gorgeous rhetoric, had they not happened to be something far better. The supplications of the widowed Queens to Theseus, the invocations of their tutelary divinities by Palamon and Arcite, the death of Arcite, &c., are finished in a more elaborate style of excellence than any other element of Shakspeare's most elaborate scenes. In their first intention, they were perhaps merely rhetorical; but the furnace of composition has transmuted their substance. Indeed, specimens of mere rhetoric would be better sought in some of the other great dramatists, who are under a less fatal necessity of turning everything they touch into the pure gold of poetry."—De Quincey, Works, X. 49 (Black's ed. 1862).

Chaucer originals : Sc. i. ll. 1351—1591 (and for scenery, ll. 1023—1235); Sc. iii. ll. 1625—1804; Sc. iv. ll. 1805, ad fin. Palamon prays first, Emelye second, and Arcite third, in Chaucer's story.

4. Swelling incense] So all edd. None of the later Editors appear to have noticed Theobald's conjecture here, smelling incense. But swelling seems the right word, and means : rising up in increasing volume of "hallow'd clouds."

9/10. german] simply akin. v. Schmidt.

10/11. nearness] intimacy, confidence, close friendship. Cf. "The nearness his alliance claims," Honest Man's Fortune, I. i. Dr Ingleby conj. fiercenesse; but cf. Mc., III. i. 116; distance.

29/32. port] O. Edd., etc., port, except Seward, part. "port may mean either (1) transport, carry, or (2) bring into port."—(Skeat.) But though Mr Skeat "can adduce no clear example" of port in this latter sense, it seems, as he thinks, the signification here.

30/33. lymiter] Not found elsewhere in Sh., nor in B. and F. It may have been suggested by the Chaucerian word, Lymitour, "a friar licensed to beg within a certain district." Spenser and Drayton use the word in this old sense. v. Nares. Here, however, it is a substantive derived from limit, and means the Divine Shaper of our destinies.

34/40. lovers] friends. Friend was often used conversely when we would say lover.

34/40. sqq.] Spalding, p. 55, observes that "the description which we have read of Mars' attributes reminds one strongly and directly of the fine speech in the poem, when old Saturn, the god of time, enumerates his own powers of destruction. It is far from unlikely," he adds, "that the one passage suggested the other. The rich can afford to borrow."

37/44. which still is farther off it] Mason cannot think this, the reading the first four edd. [Edd. 1778, Knight, further], right, because it does not appear to him "to be sense, to say that apprehension is farther off from the spirit of Mars than fear is." He is "therefore inclined to adopt Theobald's amendment, and to read—

And the apprehension,
Which still is father of it.

For we may fairly say that apprehension, that is, a sensibility of danger, is the parent of fear." Heath, Weber, Dyce, Skeat, adopt Mason's change; and Mr Skeat thus explains the amended passage: "Apprehension means perception; and the sense is—whose spirit within you expels the seeds of fear, and that perception of danger which is ever the cause of fear. Fear cannot arise, even in the most timid, till there be first some sense, or at any rate, some imagination, of danger at hand. We find almost the same thought in Cymbeline, IV. ii. 109—

Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension

Of roaring terrors ; for th' effect of judgment
Is oft the cause of fear."

But I do not see how we cannot get this meaning precisely out of the text as it stands in the old editions. Apprehension is the perception of danger, this underlies fear, is therefore farther off than fear is ; beyond it, and so farther to reach and harder to eradicate. The "effect of judgement" is the perception of danger, this perception of danger is the antecedent of fear—an indispensable preliminary condition.

50/56. Turned green Neptune into purple] Cf. Macb., II. ii. 62, 3 :—

"No: this my hand will rather

The multitudinous seas incarnadine,

Making the green one red."

[i. e. one-red]. "i. e. converting the green into one uniform red." Clark and Wright, Clar. Press ed. It is enough to "put faith in a fever" to read all the glosses on this passage in Furness's Macbeth, p. 107. Steevens compares Heywood's Downfall of Robert earl of Huntingdon, 1601: "He made the green sea red with Turkish blood." Again, "the multitudes of seas died red with blood." [dyed].

whose approach] These words were suggested by Seward to fill up an evident gap in both the meaning and metre of the passage as it stands in O. Edd. Qo reads :—

Greene Neptune into purple.

Comets prewarne, whose havocke in vaste Feild, &c.

51/57. vast field] vast probably means boundless, wide-spread battle-fields (though it might have another sense of Lat. vastus, desolated), as in Hen. 5, prol. 12 :—

"can this cockpit hold

The vasy fields of France."

53/59. foyzon] Qo, F2 so spell the word. "Foison, rich harvest" (Schmidt). Lat. fusionem. It occurs in Sh., Sonn. 53. Tp., II. i. 163 ; IV. 110. Meas., I. iv. 43 ("Teeming foison") ; Macb., IV. iii. 88 ; Ant., II. vii. 23 (ib.).

54/60. armipotent] A Chaucerian epithet (Seward), cf. Knights Ta., l. 1124 : "Marz armipotent ;" l. 1583 : "Marz the stern god armipotent." Saturn, l. 1605, says : "Myn is the ruen of the hihe halles, The fallyng of the toures and the walles," etc.

62/68. enormous] Cf. Lear, II. ii. 176 : "From this enormous state."

66/72. pluresie] v. Trench, Eng. Past and Pres., p. 237 (3rd ed.). Cf. Hml., IV. vii. 118 :—

"For goodness, growing to a purisy

Dies in his own too much."

But Shakspeare was not the only writer who shewed his "small Latin and less Greek" by this implied derivation from plus. Cf. B. and F., Custom of the Country, II. i., "grow to a plurisy and kill," etc. ; Massinger, Unnat. Combat, IV. i., "Thy plurisy of goodness is thy ill ;" Ford, 'Tis Pity, IV. iii., "plurisy of lust ;" Broken Heart, IV. ii., "that foulness Whose plurisy hath fevered faith and modesty" (cf. "puts faith in a fever," 2 N. K., I. ii. 66/73) ; The Fancies (q.

Weber), "a plurisy of faithless impudence." Add (from Nares) Atheist's Tragedy, sig. G., "plurisy of lust;" Mascal, on Cattle, "grow to a plurisy, and die thereof;" and (Wright, Clar. Pr. Hml.) Massinger, The Picture, IV. ii.

69/75. Stars must glister, &c.] Cf. Peele, Tale of Troy, "glistening like stars of pure immortal fire."

79/85. And weepe unto a girl] O. Edd. (F2, ed. 1711, weep); Seward, etc., To weep. But surely the idea of enforcement is sufficiently plain to allow the old reading to stand, and make him weep being the sense if expanded. Theobald's marginal note: "into, i. e. 'till he become tender as a Girl," has not been accepted by any of the Edd. (I may note here, that Edd. 1778 cannot be trusted for the literal accuracy of their transcripts from ed. 1750; e. g. here they write became, and girl.)

85/91. poul'd] O. Edd. pould. The way it was pronounced, probably; v. Ellis, Pronun., p. 961. See Nares, s. v. Poll, and cf. Chauc. Prolog. 177, 627, Reve's Ta., 386, "piled sculle;" Spenser, F. Q., V. ii. 6; 2 Sam. xiv. 26; Hazlitt's Dodsley, IV. 81; Coriol., IV. v. 215 (Booth's repr., p. 621 a), "He will mowe all downe before him, and leaue his passage poul'd." (Schmidt inaccurately: "O. Edd. pouled.") Seward, etc., polled. Dyce and Skeat, poll'd, making the line an alexandrine. It seems rather to scan: Stale grav|ity| to dance; | the poul'd| bach'lour|. The position of the pause confirms this, and in V. iii. 117/135, the same disyll. pronun. of bachelour occurs.

86/92. Whose youth] Seward thought the metre of this line defective (which it is not, bonfires being trisyll.), and accordingly, with his usual disregard of meaning where measure was concerned, gave: Whose freaks of youth. Dyce notes: "Some word has probably dropt out here[?]; but the construction of the passage is such as our writers frequently employ: the poet wrote "youth . . . HAVE" on account of the intervening "boys." Skipping over bonfires was one of the customs observed on Midsummer's Eve: v. Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, p. 359, ed. 1831.

102/108. liberal] "licentious, wanton." Schmidt distinguishes seven meanings of this word in Sh. Lex.

108.] With this whole speech of Palamon's we may compare and contrast the following, from Fletcher's Women Pleas'd, I. i. sp. 63:—

". . . I never call'd a fool my friend, a madman,
That durst oppose his fame to all opinions,
His life to dishonest dangers; I never loved him,
Durst know his name, that sought a virgin's ruin,
Nor ever took I pleasure in acquaintance
With men, that give as loose reins to their fancies
As the wild ocean to his raging fluxes:
A noble soul I twin with," &c

And with the special passage, the old bridegroom and young bride, compare a very interesting dialogue (too long to quote) of "An old Man courting a young Girl," in Cleveland's Works, pp. 224—8, ed. 1742, and v. n. on unwappered, infra, V. vi. 10.

106/112.] See Hickson, p. 30*, on an instance of coincidence in sentiment with this passage, which, as a proof of the identity of the writer, is "as strong as its kind will admit;" viz. Troil. and Cress., V. ii. 129-133:—

"Let it not be believed for womanhood!
Think we had mothers; do not give advantage
To stubborn critics, apt, without a theme,
For depravation, to square the general sex
By Cressid's rule: rather think this not Cressid."

For Qo phcare, F2, ed. 1711, have Sphere. For this latter reading Seward conjectured phcere, and was extremely gratified to find that this actually was the old reading! See a note on V. iii. in Ed. 1778, wherein Seward's misrepresentations, etc., are exemplified; and Gifford's Ben Jonson, pref., p. 68 (ed. 1838, Moxon).

Mr Skeat omits the entire passage, but on IV. iii. 70 (85), notes that "Phcer is not good spelling; it should be feer or ferc, as it is from the Middle English ferc, A.S. gefera, one who fares or travels with one, a comrade, companion; also, a playmate, and sometimes a wife" (p. 142). Titus And., IV. i. 89 (Booth's reprint, 642 a): "the wofull Feere And father of that chast dishonoured Dame." "In Per. Prolog. 21 O. Edd. peer, M. Edd. ferc or phcere" (Schmidt; phcere, Malone, Staunton; ferc, Globe ed.). Byron, Childe H., c. i. feres.

119/124-7] The pointing, though obvious, is most chaotic in O. Edd., Qo reading,—

"To those that prate and have done; no Companion
To those that boast and have not; a defyer
To those that would and cannot; a Rejoycer," &c.

128/134. meriz] reward. I may quote (Dyce from Mason from Johnson from) Prior, Ode to Queen Anne, "Those laurel groves, the merits of thy youth," etc. Cf. Rich. 2, I. iii. 156; L. L. L., IV. i. 21 (quibbling. Schmidt).

130/136. from eleven to ninety] Cf. Pope, R. of L., IV. :—

"Hail wayward Queen,
Who rule the sex to fifty from fifteen."

Direction.] Records, recorders, a kind of flute. See Dyce and Nares' Gloss., and Chappell's Pop. Music of the Olden Time. v. n. dir. I. i. See Chapman's Shadow of Night (Minor poems, &c.), ed. Shepherd, 1-18). Cynthia's ivory chariot ("ut ait Callimachus") was drawn by "a brace of silver hinds." Compare, too, The Phoenix Nest, 1593 (Park's Heliconia, II. 133), for a poem "The Praise of Virginitie"—"Virginitie resembleth right the rose," etc., illustrating the symbolism of the shattered rose.

140/146. windfann'd snow] Cf. W. T., IV. iv. 373-6:—

"I take thy hand, this hand,
As soft as dove's down and as pure as it,
Or Ethiopian's tooth, or the fann'd snow that's bolted
By the northern blasts twice o'er;"

and Coriol., V. iii. 64-7:—

"The noble sister of Publicola,
The moon of Rome, chaste as the icicle

That's curdied by the frost from purest snow
And hangs on Dian's temple :” etc.

Mr Skeat quotes these lines from chaste as the icicle, but The moon (Diana) of Rome draws the parallelism much closer.

140/146. female knights] Dian's Knights are spoken of again by Sh., All's Well, I. iii. 120; Much Ado, V. iii. 13 (Schmidt).

144/150. greene eye] Weber says that “the Spanish writers are peculiarly enthusiastic in the praise of green eyes,” and quotes Cervantes' novel, Del Zeloso Estremanno (given by Mr Skeat). Spalding, Letter, p. 50, refers to Romeo and Juliet, [III. v. 222]; Mids. N. D., [V. i. 342]; and to Don Quixote, Parte II., capite xi. :—“Los ojos de Dulcinea deben ser de verdes esmeraldas.” Cf. Ch. K. T., l. 1309, “his eyen bright citryne.” Seward, deeply perplexed by the epithet green, reads sheen. See Furness' R. and J., p. 212. The word has been very variously explained, but the concurrent testimonies of Old English, French, Spanish, and Italian writers have been produced to show that green eyes were considered very beautiful, and signs of long life. That this colour is unusual now-a-days, “must be confessed;” and “for this, let naturalists, if they can, account.”—(Douce.)

147/153. scurril term] Cf. Ford, Lady's Trial, IV. ii., “scurril jests;” Troil. and Cress., I. iii. 148, “Breaks scurril jests.” I have not met with the word in B. and F.

ib. port] Theobald quotes Hml., I. v. 63, to sustain his reading, porch, which Seward rejects. Dr Ingleby suggests the same emendation and parallel. But each word is peculiarly appropriate in its own place; cf. 2 H.4, IV. v. 24, “That keep'st the ports of slumber open wide To many a watchful night” (there, however, of the eyes, but in the same sense, gates). “The Latin porta is as good a word as its derivative porticus” (Skeat). Chapman (Shadow of Night, p. 8, cf. Minor Poems, p. 119), “ivory port,” “Night's port of horn” (Virg. Æn., vi. 893).

154/160. I am guiltless of election; etc.] All edd., except Dyce (last 2 edd.), place the stop after eyes, instead of, as here, after election. This, Dyce's reading, is obviously the only comprehensible arrangement of the lines. Qo has :

*Am guiltlesse of election of mine eyes,
Were I to loose one, they are equal precious,
I could doombe neither, that which, &c.*

Scene 2.

By Fletcher. Spalding, p. 51; Hickson, p. 51*.

18/24. Hoa there] Mason would read, Hold there; but in V. iv. 41/51 we have Hold hoa. v. Schmidt, s. v. Ho.

48/67. cut and long tail] “. . . and though . . . the gaoler's daughter is speaking of the unrivalled accomplishment of the horse which she imagines Palamon has given to her, it seems to be agreed that the expression Come cut and long tail was originally derived from dogs, and equivalent to ‘Come dogs of all sorts.’” See a long note (based on Nares) in Dyce's Glossary. Cf. Wit at Several Weapons, II. iii., Jonson, Love's Welcome (at Welbeck); and see Dyce's n. on Greene's George a Greene, p. 267 (Routledge's ed.).

50/70.] Alluding probably to Banks' Curtal, a celebrated dancing horse named Marocco, exhibited in London about 1589. It is said that Banks and his horse were burnt at Rome by order of the Inquisition. See Nares (ed. Wright and Halliwell) for an interesting note; and Lt.-Col. Cunningham's Marlowe, p. 365, n. (on Epigrams by J. Davies], xxx. and xlvi). References to this horse are very numerous, and may be found even fifty years after his fame had become historical; e. g. Cleveland, Works, p. 86 (ed. 1742): "Well, he's a nimble Gentleman; set him upon Banks his horse in a Saddle rampant, and it is a great question which part of the Centaure shews better Tricks." v. Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, ed. Hone, 1831, p. 243.

53/73. tune] Qo turne, F2 turn, Corr. 1750. "Whose tongue is tun'd" is misprinted turn'd in The Spanish Tragedy, Qo 1618. v. Hazlitt's Dodsley, vol. v. p. 163. Query, was turn used in this sense?

Light o' love] "An old tune of a dance, the name of which made it a proverbial expression of levity, especially in love matters. Sir J. Hawkins recovered the original tune from an old MS., and it is inserted in the notes to Much Ado about Nothing, Act IV. Sc. iii."—Nares.

57/80. Casts himself th' accounts of all his hay and provender. That Hostler must rise betimes that cozens him.] There is a strong family likeness between this horse and one in Fletcher's Love's Pilgrimage, I. i. :—

Diego. "Lazaro !

How do the horses ?

Laz. Would you would go and see, Sir !

A plague of all jades, what a clap he has given me !

As sure as you live, master, he knew perfectly

I cozen'd him on 's oats ; he look'd upon me,

And then he sneer'd, as who should say 'Take heed, Sirrah !'

And when he saw our half-peck, which you know

Was but an old court-dish, Lord, how he stamp't !

I thought 't had been for joy ; when suddenly

He cuts me a back-caper with his heels,

And takes me just o' th' crupper ; down came I

And all my ounce of oats ; then he neigh'd out,

As though," etc.

See the whole passage. According to Seward, Shirley took this scene, after Fletcher's death, from the New Inn, III. i., to patch up Fl.'s play. The passages are almost literally the same ; but is it certain that Fletcher is not the author of the passage ?

63/87. bottles] Bundles of hay, "less than a truss," according to Mr Skeat, correcting Nares' statement. Cf. M. N. D., IV. i. 37 ; Love's Pilgrimage, I. i.,—

"and every bottle

Shews at the least a dozen ; when the truth is, Sir,

There's no such matter, not a smell of provender."

64/88. strike] "four pecks, or a bushel, a strike of corn. N." Grose's Glossary (with Pegge's additions, 1839). "According to Bailey, a strike is four bushels." (Skeat. Probably a mistake of Bailey for pecks.) Cf. Scornful Lady, V. iii., "brew three strikes more in a hogshead."

66/90. A miller's mare] Cf. The Little French Lawyer, IV. v.,

Nurse. . . . "I can jump yet

Or tread a measure.

Lam. Like a miller's mare."

and The Chances, III. i.

A miller's mare, working round a beaten track (to drive the mill), was perhaps proverbial for her steady-going attention to business.

73/101. Stool Ball] Dyce quotes Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, for his account of this game. Ed. Hone, 1831, p. 97.

Strutt (p. 98) quotes from D'Urfey's Don Quixote :

"Down in a vale on a summer's day,

All the lads and lasses met to be merry ;

A match for kisses at stool-ball to play

And for cakes, and ale, and sider, and perry.

Chorus. Come all, great small,

Short tall, away to stool-ball."

86/120. Daugh. O Sir, you would faine be nibbling] O. Edd. read Daugh., and so Edd. 1778 and Dyce. Seward, Mason, and Weber, give this speech to the Jailor, but "we think it doubtful" (Edd. 1778). Nibbling seems to have had an equivocal sense, as in A. Y. L., III. iii. 83 : "As the ox hath his bow, sir, the horse his curb, and the falcon her bells, so man hath his desires ; and as pigeons bill, so wedlock would be nibbling." Cf. B. and F., The False One, V. iv. ; A Wife for a Month, V. ii. ; The Night Walker, I. i. v. Halliwell, Arch. Dict. s. v.

93/132. how y'are growne] Arcite is "the lower of the twaine," II. i. 52.

Scene 3.

Shakspeare's. "Perhaps there is nothing in every respect resembling it in the circle of the English drama. . . . The manner is admirable in which the caution, which rendered it advisable to avoid introducing the combat on the stage, is reconciled with the pomp of scenic effect and bustle. The details of the scene, with which alone we have here to do, make it clear that Shakspeare's hand was in it. The greater part, it is true, is not of the highest excellence ; but the vacillations of Emilia's feelings are well and delicately given, some individual thoughts and words mark Shakspeare, there is little of his obscure brevity, much of his thoughtfulness legitimately applied, and an instance or two of its abuse."—Spalding, Letter, p. 51.

6/7. I will stay here,—] Except that I place the dashes after here, and hear, and omit the comma after punish'd, this and the three following lines are pointed as in O. Edd., and the meaning is plain : I will stay here (. . .) not taint mine eye. Edd. 1778 and Weber print :

. . . . " ('gainst the which there is

and Dyce the same, substituting dashes for the marks of parenthesis, and (edd.

'67, '76) placing a comma after deafing. Mr Skeat places a colon after here, commas after happen and deafing, and (,—) after hear. Dr C. M. Ingleby has kindly called my attention to a note in Notes and Queries (5th S. I. May 2, '74, p. 343), by F. J. V., where Dyce's reading (with the comma after deafing omitted) is given, and the comment :—"The last line but one, thus printed, has no meaning that I can make out; should we not write—

'gainst the which there is

No deafing, but to hear—not taint mine eye.'

where 'but to hear' = so as not to hear. (See Abbott's Shakespearian Grammar, § 122.) Then Emilia will say, 'I will stay here, not taint mine eye,' &c., the intermediate words being in a parenthesis."

13/16. show well, pencill'd] Heath and Mason placed the comma after well, adopted by Weber, Dyce, and Skeat. O. Edd. omit the comma, Edd. 1778 and Knight read well-pencil'd. Seward read time shall, because sometimes are not all times. In their kind, i. e. in their natural shape, in reality, which sometime appear noble when represented by art.

16/19. price] Edd. Query, prize? cf. V. i. 42/48, iii. 135/153; but also iii. 31/40.

17/20. question's title] i. e. the title in dispute, the right of the controversy. Cf. III. i. 112/127-8; V. i. 127/132. Dyce ('67, '76) reads questant's, and supports his change very strongly by quoting Collier (on M. W., III. iv., Sh. vol. i., p. 222, sec. ed.), for the second folio misprint question in All's Well, II. i. 16, of the first folio reading, questant. But here, there were two questants, so to crown the questant's title, i. e. the disputant's title, would be unmeaning (as would also be questants', if it were proposed as an amendment).

22/28. Darkness] "The thought here is frequent in Sh.'s dramas: and the expression of it closely resembles some stanzas in the Lucrece, especially those beginning, 'Oh comfort-killing night!'" (ll. 764 sqq.) Spalding, p. 52.

23/29. dam] Qo dam. F2 dame, corr. 1750 (by a happy conjecture of Seward's!).

38/50. He whom the gods]

"Or if my destyné be schapid so,
That I schal needes have on of hem two,
So send me him that most desireth me."

Kn. Ta., ll. 1465-7.

(Note on for one.)

83/96. tytlers] i. e. contenders about a title, questants. Qo, F2, Tytlers, ed. 1711 Tytlers, and the rest tillers. None of the editors notice this quarto reading! There were eight bold Titlers, but only "two bold Titlers." See Hazlitt's Dodsley, vol. v., p. 157, n. for a curious parallel mistake.

87/100. Their noblenes peculiar to them gives] At the foot of p. 447, in Fol. 1679 is given the catchword Their, but on turning over the leaf we read The prejudice, etc., the line Their nobleness, etc., being left out, obviously by an oversight. Seward was greatly puzzled over the complexity of the passage as it stood in F2 and ed. 1711, and left the construction to "some more fortunate Expositor"! Restored, 1778. Edd. 1778 point l. 88/101: disparity, value's shortness, To, etc., but values shortness to means just the same as gives the prejudice of disparity to ; cf. 1 H.4, V. ii. 60 (v. Schmidt, s. v. Value). Weber, value's shortness To. Mr Skeat gives the general sense of the reading he follows : "Were both made into one, no woman were worthy of a man so composed. Even as they are, the share of nobleness which each singly possesses is such as to assign, to any lady alive, a prejudicial inequality, a deficiency of worth as compared with them."

120/138. a sow of lead] Cf. The Woman's Prize, IV. i.,—

"But in the way she ought, to me especially,
A sow of lead is swifter."

The Scornful Lady, V. ii.,—

"To throw the sledge, and lift at pigs of lead."

The exact expressions, a sow of lead, or a pig of lead, do not occur in Sh., but lead is often spoken of as an emblem of heaviness ; e. g. (selected from Schmidt) 2 H.4, I. i. 118 ; Cor., I. i. 184 ; Rom., I. iv. 15 ("soul of lead"—Fi soale, quibbling), II. v. 17 ; Mc., II. i. 6 ; Ant., III. xi. 72.

122/140. For he that was thus good] Sidney Walker thinks this to be not an accidental coincidence with Ἐσθλὸς ἴων, ἀλλου κρείττονος ἀντίτυχεν.

Scene 4.

As V. iii. 132 shews, the scene is not changed here. Dyce refers to V. iv. 99, but the lists were made (v. III. vi. 292) where first they fought, and the two places are therefore identical.

"The authorship of the last scene admits of no doubt. The manner is Shakspeare's, and some parts are little inferior to his very finest passages." Spalding, allowing that the reference to the jailor's daughter in this scene might be mentioned as an argument against his "hypothesis," adds in a note : "It is plain that the underplot, however bad, has been worked up with much pains ; and we can conceive that its author would have been loth to abandon it finally in the incomplete posture in which the fourth scene of this act left it. Ten lines in this scene sufficed to end the story, by relating the cure of the insane girl ; and there can have been no difficulty in their introduction, even on my supposition of this scene being the work of the other author. If the two wrote at the same time, the poet who wrote the rest of the scene may have inserted them on the suggestion of the other ; or if the drama afterwards came into the hands of that other, (which there seems some reason to believe,) he could easily insert them for himself. In any view, these lines are no argument against my theory."—Letter, p. 54. Spalding's plea certainly seems of weight, and Hickson does not mention this as an argument for his division, although he does say, perhaps too loosely, that all the last scene is by Shakspeare. Mr Swinburne takes a different view ; he says :—"In the very last scene of the Two Noble Kinsmen, we can tell with absolute certainty what speeches were appended or interpolated by Fletcher ; we can pronounce with positive conviction what passages were completed and what parts were left unfinished by Shakspeare."—Fortnightly Review, Jan. 1876, p. 41. And Mr Swinburne promises me a full examination of this scene when he comes to write on this play.

1—15.] Cf. Laws of Candy, II. i.

5. pity ; to live, still] i. e. we still have their wishing that we should be spared ;

we have not yet "outliv'd The love o' the people." Or perhaps the Qo is right : To live still, Have &c. The pointing is similar in later Edd., except Dyce and Skeat : live still Have.

8. lag hours] Mr Skeat happily quotes 1 H.4, V. i. 23,—

"For mine own part, I could be well content

To entertain the lag-end of my life

With quiet hours," and explains the general sense to be,—“We anticipate the loathsome misery of old age, and we beguile the gout and the rheum, that, in their latter hours, lay wait for grey old men that approach the gods more slowly.”

approachers] Cf. Timon, IV. iii. 216.

10. unwapper'd, not] Qo, F2, unwapper'd not, Sympson explained, “young, and unfrightened;” but Theobald and Seward (followed by Edd. 1778) read unwarp'd, Seward, however, adding a postscript: “I find in the Glossary to Urry's Chaucer, wapid and awhapid, daunted, astonish'd. This is probably the same Word that Mr Sympson may have somewhere found spelt wapper'd.” (Chau. Compl. of a Lov. Lyfe, l. 168, “awaped and amate.” ?= forpined, worn away with wope, weeping. A.S. wōp.) Knight, unwappen'd, Weber, Dyce, Skeat, unwapper'd, not. Cf. Timon, IV. iii. 38:

(? wapper'd. v. Halliwell, s. v. wappen'd; however, cf. Rich.3, I. i. 81.) See Dyce, Glossary, and Nares, s. v. wappen'd or wapper'd. Dyce explains unwapper'd to mean “unworn, not debilitated;” and wappen'd, “overworn.” (v. Ingleby, Still Lion, p. xi, sec. ed.) Dyce refers to Harman's Caueat or Warening for Common Curseters, &c., 1573, last sent. of p. 69, reprint 1814; Dekker's English Villanies, &c., ed. 1632, 2[3]d stanza of the Canter's song, sig. o. verso; and Grose's Dict. Vulg. Tongue, s. v. “Wap.” Grose's Glossary (ed. 1839), “Wapper'd, restless or fatigued; spoken of a sick person.—Glouc.” Halliwell, Arch. Dict., gives wapper, “to move tremulously;” and wapper-eyed, “having eyes that move in a quick and tremulous manner, either from a natural infirmity, or from want of sleep.”

Wapper in wapper-eyed may be formed from the verb wap or wapper, as (Dr Abbott, Sh. Gr., p. 325, § 443) “We have ‘windring’ from ‘winder,’ Tempest, IV. i. 128, formed after the analogy of ‘wander,’ ‘clamber,’ ‘waver,’ the er having apparently a frequentative force;” or—as I prefer to explain—‘winder,’ ‘wapper,’ ‘slipper’ (= slippy, Par. Daint. Dev., pp. 28, 59, 63, ed. 1810), ‘lither’ (= lithe, Hazl. Dodsl. vii. 418), ‘bitter,’ etc., are all forms of the old English adjectival suffix in -or, -er, -r, and may possess some frequentative force. (“Adjectives in -r (O.E. -or, -er, -r), bitter, fair, lither, slipper-y (O.E. sliper, and slider) meagre.”—Dr Morris, Hist. Outl. Eng. Accid., p. 285, § 321 : suffixes of Teutonic origin.)

Wapper then may be formed from wap, a word found in Morte D'Arthur (Globe ed. p. 480), where Sir Bedivere says: “I saw nothing but the waters wap and the waves wan,”—of the restless action of the waters “lapping on the crag.” This shews us the precise force of wapper, tremulous, quivering, restless; and wapper'd, worn by unrest—whether said of a crag, worn by the perpetual action of the waves, (the 'multitudinous seas,') or of a person—broken down by sorrow or infirmity. Unwapper'd here means unworn; free from traces of those attendants upon "grey approachers," the "gout and rheum," and all the "loathsome misery of age."

In Cleveland's Dialogue of "An Old Man courting a Young Girl," the Nymph says :

" If at the Resurrection we Shall chance to marry, call on me ;
By that time I perhaps may guess
How to bathe and how to dress
Thy weeping Legs, and simpathise
With perish'd Lungs and wopper Eyes," &c.

Works, ed. 1742, p. 226.

35/42. quight] Qo F2, i. e. requite, requight, l. 44. v. Schmidt, s. v. quite, vb. It is a distinct word from quit, and is rather to be referred to requite, as quit to acquit. Schmidt does not notice this distinction.

47/58. most dearly sweet] O. Edd., early. Sympon, rarely. Seward, etc., dearly, "in the sense of exceedingly, or extremely."

48/61—98.] De Quincey, essay on Lessing, Works, XII. 302 (ed. Black), refers to this speech, as follows : "iv. As a beautiful object. In those objects which are referred wholly to a purpose of utility, as a kitchen garden for instance, utility becomes the law of their beauty. With regard to the Cow in particular, which is referred to no variety of purposes, as the horse or the dog, the external structure will express more absolutely and unequivocally the degree in which the purposes of her species are accomplished ; and her beauty will be a more determinate subject for the judgment than where the animal structure is referred to a multitude of separate ends incapable of co-existing. Describing in this view, however, it will be said that Virgil presupposes in his reader some knowledge of the subject : for the description will be a dead letter to him, unless it awakens and brightens some previous notices of his own. I answer, that, with regard to all the common and familiar appearances of nature, a poet is entitled to postulate some knowledge in his readers ; and the fact is, that he has not postulated so much as Shakspeare, in his fine description of the hounds of Theseus, in the Midsummer Night's Dream, or of the horse of Arcite ;* and Shakspeare, it will not be pretended, had any didactic purpose in those passages." * "In the Two Noble Kinsmen. The first act has been often and justly attributed to Shakspeare, but the last act is no less indisputably his, and in his very finest style." Spalding (p. 56) thinks this long speech "decidedly bad, but undeniably the work of Shakspeare."

55/60. calkins] "The parts of a horse-shoe which are turned up and pointed to prevent the horse from slipping."—Dyce. (In Co. Wicklow horses' shoes are said to be cocked—? calked—when thus prepared.) By "turned up" probably Dyce (and Knight and Skeat) understood "turned down." Weber quotes from Cotgrave, s. v. Zain, "A horse that's all of one dark colour, without any starry spot or mark about him, and thereby commonly vicious."

62/75. Saturn] "The sullen Saturn," Sea Voyage, III. i. ; "might well have warm'd old Saturn," Cymb., II. v. 12; cf. Knight's Ta., ll. 1818—41, and Spalding's Letter, p. 55,—“A way is devised for reconciling the contending oracles; and the catastrophe which effects that end is in the old poet anxiously prepared by celestial agency. . . These supernal intrigues are in this play no more than hinted at in the way of metaphor.”

69/82. mannadgē] “the management or government of a horse.”—Dyce. The strict sense of Fr. manège; Ital. maneggio.

72/85. dis-seate] Cf. Mcb., V. iii. 21 (F1 dis-eate), and see the commentators in Furness' Variorum, p. 266 (this instance of the word dis-seate is not there given).

77/90. on end he stands] F2 prints these words as part of l. 89, within a bracket [()]; but the manner in which they are printed in Q0,—

“He kept him tweene his legs, on his hind hoofes
on end he stands

That Arcites leggs being higher then his head,” &c.

—and the incompleteness of the sense, shew that some words have here dropped out of the text. Weber has also observed this (referring it to illegibility of the MS.), but thinks “the sense is, however, perfect as it stands;” and Mr Skeat adds: “In fact, the half-line is rather effective.”

104/120. arowze] O. Edd., arowze; Seward, arouze; Edd. 1778, etc., arrose. It was probably pronounced as I have spelt it; note the spelling of the French arrouser in Cotgrave.—(Skeat.) Sidney Walker notes that this word is “An instance, rare in Shakespeare, of a word borrowed from the French. Troilus and Cressida, i. 3,— —————‘rend and deracinate

The unity and settled calm of states,
Quite from their fixure.’”

My friend the Rev. A. S. Palmer (author of “Leaves from a Word-hunter's Note-book,” 1876, Trübner, &c.), has sent me the following note on arowze: “There can be little doubt that ‘arowze’ here represents the French arrouser, formerly spelt arrouser, ‘To bedew, besprinkle, wet, moisten, water gently.’—Cotgrave. Compare the Scotch rouser or rooser, a watering-pot, French arrousoir, our ‘rose,’ the perforated spout of the same utensil, a sprinkler, from rosée, Prov. ros, Lat. ros, dew, the congeners of which in other languages are, Slav. rosa, Lith. rasa, Greek ῥῖσω (to bedew), Sansk. rasa, water, fluid; all traced by comparative philologists to the root rs, rsh. We may recognise as akin the word ‘rouse,’ as in Tennyson's ‘Have a rouse before the morn,’ i. e. a carouse, a drinking bout. Dekker in his Gul's Hornbook calls it ‘the Danish rowsa,’ so that Shakspeare would seem to have introduced the word with strict, though probably unconscious, verbal accuracy when he made the King of Denmark ‘take his rouse’ (Hml., I. iv.). It is the Danish ruus, intoxication; have en lille ruus, to be fuddled; Swedish rus, a drinking bout, taga sig ett rus, to get drunk; Ger. rausch, Dutch roes. All these words would thus have signified originally the moistening of one's clay, as in the slang phrase ‘heavy wet’ for a toper's boozing, soaking, or drenching himself thoroughly. Similarly in the Cleveland dialect nassy, drunk (Atkinson), is connected with German nass, wet, moist (cf. ein nasser Bruder, a toper). In Latin we may compare the use of udus and of madidus, (1) wet, drenched, (2) intoxicated, mades, to be wet, and to be drunk, the latter words being cognate with Sanskrit mad, (1) to be wet, (2) to get drunk, matta, drunk, mad, Lat. mattus, drunk, It. matto, foolish, silly, our 'mad.'

131/149. charmerr] The gods: "Enchanters, ruling us at their will."—Seward.

EPILOGUE.

By Fletcher, I suppose.

12. the tale] Evidently a reference to the Source

[POSTSCRIPT. To the notes on Act II. sc. ii. add this, from Dyce's Glossary: "laugh-and-lie-down (more properly Laugh-and-lay-down) was a game at cards, to which there is an allusion in" ll. 151/180-1. To n. on Prol. 29, Mr Furnivall adds: "for the space of two hours and a half, and somewhat more."—B. Jonson, Barth. Fair, Induction.]

§ 1. THE source of this play is the Knights Tale, in Chaucer's Sources of the play. Canterbury Tales; and a comparison of play and poem will show how closely the original story has been adhered to in the structure of the main plot. Unlike many of the plays which Shakspeare Chaucer. produced, we have no evidence, beyond the vaguest conjecture, to suggest that this play has been based on an earlier drama on the same subject.

§ 2. We know that in 1566 a play called Palæmon and Arcyte, Edwardes's Palæmon and Arcyte. by Richard Edwardes, was performed before Queen Elizabeth at Oxford; but certain indications make it quite clear, though this play has perished, that it can have had little likeness to the Two Noble Kinsmen, and may rather have resembled the Damon and Pythias (see Hazlitt's Dodsley, vol. iv.) of the same author.

§ 3. Wood's account in the Athenæ Oxonienses has mention of the play several times, but the following passages,¹ Wood mentions Edwardes's play several times. communicated to Nicholls, the historian of Elizabeth's Progresses, by Mr. Gutch, from Wood's MSS., are more detailed, and clearly show that Edwardes's play and the play before us must have differed so materially as to make it almost certain that the authors of the latter can have known nothing of the former. "Sept. 2, 1566. At night the Queen heard the first part of an English play, named Palæmon, or Palamon Arcyte, made by Mr. Richard Edwards, a gentleman of her chapel, acted with very great applause in Christ Church Hall. At the beginning of which play, there was, by part of the stage which fell, three persons slain; namely, Walker, a scholar of St. Mary Hall; one Penrice, a Brewer, and John Gilbert, Cook of Corpus Christi College, beside five that were hurt: which disaster coming to the Queen's knowledge, she sent forthwith the Vice-chancellor and her Chirurgeons to help them, and to have a care that they want nothing for their recovery. Afterwards the actors performed their parts so well, that the Queen laughed heartily thereat, and gave the author of the play great thanks for his pains. (p. 210—11.) . . . Sept. 4, 1566. At night the Queen was present at the other part of the play of Palæmon and Arcyte, which should have been acted the night before, but deferred because it was late when the Queen came from disputations at St. Mary's. When the play was ended, she called for Mr. Edwards, the author, and gave him very great thanks, with promises of reward, for his pains; then, making a pause, said to him and her retinue standing about her, this relating to part of the play: 'By Palæmon, I warrant he dallieth not in love when he was in love indeed; by Arcyte, he was a right martial knight, having a swart countenance¹ and a manly face; by Trecatio, God's pity, what a knave it is; by Perithous, throwing St. Edward's rich cloak into the funeral fire, which a stander-by would have stayed by the arm with an oath, Go fool, he knoweth his part, I warrant.' In the said play was acted a cry of hounds in the Quadrant, upon the train of a fox in the hunting of Theseus, with which the young scholars, who stood in the windows, were so much taken (supposing it was real), that they cried out, 'Now, now!—there, there!—he's caught, he's caught!' All which the Queen merrily beholding, said, 'O excellent! these boys, in very troth, are ready to leap out of the windows, to follow the hounds!' This part it seems, being repeated before certain courtiers, in the lodgings of Mr. Robert Marbeck, one of the Canons of Christ Church, by the criticisms.

players in their gowns (for they were all Scholars that acted), before the Queen came to Oxford, was by them so well liked, that they said it far surpassed Damon and Pythias, than which, they thought, nothing could be better. Likewise some said, that if the author did any more before his death, he would run mad: but this comedy was the last he made, for he died within a few months after. In the acting of the said play, there was a good part performed by the Lady Amelia, who, for gathering her flowers prettily in a garden then represented, and singing sweetly in the time of March [? May], received eight angels for a gracious reward by her Majesty's command. By whom that part was acted I know not, unless by Peter Carew, the pretty boy before mentioned." (pp. 212—13.)¹

§ 4. I have given this curious extract in full. Surely it eliminates the Oxford play of 1566 from the possible sources of the Two Noble Kinsmen? Play of 1566 not a 'source.'

§ 5. And the evidence seems equally explicit on the remaining hypothetical source of this play: a piece called Palamon and Arsett, which, we learn from Henslowe's Diary (pp. 41, 43, 44, ed. Shakespeare Soc.), was "acted several times at the Newington theatre in 1594. Mr. Collier conjectures that the last-mentioned piece may have been a rifacimento of Edwards's play, and that in 1594 Shakespeare may have introduced into Palamon and Arsett those alterations and additions which afterwards 'were employed by Fletcher in the play as it was printed in 1634.' But I suspect," continues Mr. Dyce,² "that the Palamon and Arsett of 1594 was a distinct piece from the academical drama of 1566; and I cannot persuade myself that the 'Shakespearian' portions of the Two Noble Kinsmen were composed so early as 1594—stamped as they everywhere are with the manner of Shakespeare's later years." Collier's theory answered by Dyce.

² Shakespeare, vol. viii. p. 118, ed. 1876. These are strong words from Mr. Dyce, who previously, in the preface to Aldine edition of Shakspeare's poems (p. xliii, note 65), said: "The title-page of the first edition of Fletcher's Two Noble Kinsmen attributes the play partly to Shakespeare; I do not think our poet had any share in its composition: but I must add, that Mr. C. Lamb (a great authority in such matters) inclines to a different opinion."

1594 play lost:
probably not a source.

No hint of underplot in Chaucer.

§ 6. As this play of 1594 has perished, I am unable to say how far our play resembles it, or to conjecture that from it the authors derived the underplot; they have certainly no hint of it in Chaucer, who (Knights Tale, ll. 609—616) says:—

“soone aftur the mydnyght, Palamoun
By helpyng of a freend brak his prisoun,
And fleeth the cite fast as he may goo,
For he hade yive drink his gayler soo
Of a clarre, maad of a certeyn wyn,
With nercotykes and opye of Thebes fyn,
That al that night though that men wolde him schake,
The gayler sleep, he mighte nought awake.”

But we have the strongest grounds for supposing that our play was a new play, based directly on the Knights Tale.

Prologue tells us plainly that this is a new play, based on Chaucer.

§ 7. In the Prologue (l. 1) it is called a new play; the writer (Fletcher, who takes the responsibility for the whole play) confesses his inability to do justice to the story (l. 24); he distinctly ascribes the piece to Chaucer's Tale (ll. 10—14); he is in dread for having presumed to dramatize Chaucer (ll. 15, 16, 19, 20); and he emphatically repeats his declaration of the source in the Epilogue (ll. 12, 13): “the tale we have told—for 't is no other.”

This also Mr.
Skeat's view.

§ 8. Mr. Skeat has taken the same view of the source. He says: “We may feel sure that the authors of the Two Noble Kinsmen followed Chaucer, as they professed to do, without troubling themselves with examining these earlier plays.”

Therefore the underplot not derived from preceding play or poem.

The very simplicity of the underplot is an argument for its origination by Shakspeare, for he never invented a complex plot, while its poverty and dullness must be ascribed to the fact that he only gave the merest fragmentary outline of it, which Fletcher took up and perverted and spoiled. How different it would have been had Shakspeare worked out the underplot he had designed, I cannot say, but I can well imagine.

Authorship of the *Two Noble
Kinsmen*.

§ 9. A strong case of presumptive proof has been made out in favour of the opinion that Shakspeare commenced the play, wrote some scenes, outlined others, and left the imperfect draft for Fletcher to complete.

Assumptions.

§ 10. Two preliminary considerations may be taken for granted:

(a) that two authors are discernible in the play; (b) that Fletcher is one of them. The problem is therefore to ascertain who was the other author, and what was his share in the production. The problem to be solved.

This involves an examination of the whole play, since to assume that certain scenes are by Fletcher, and therefore not in dispute, would obscure an important question, namely, How far has Shakspeare outlined the Fletcherian portions? For from showing that Fletcher's work is to be seen overlaying Shakspeare's (as in Act V.), I hope to be able to leave the inference clear that it was Shakspeare who sketched the play; and this being so, it will be necessary to suppose him to have drafted some slight narrative outline of the whole piece (thus indicating the main tenor of the underplot, though without necessarily descending to particulars), unless we prefer to imagine that he produced the last scenes of the play "before he had worked out the characterization which would essentially determine the details of the event."¹ Shakspeare the sketcher, Fletcher the padder, of the piece.

§ 11. From an examination of each scene I shall conclude that Shakspeare, having decided on dramatizing Chaucer's story, wrote Act I. (except perhaps parts of sc. i. ll. 1-37, parts of sc. ii., and all sc. v.); wrote Act II. sc. i. (i. e. the prose scene); perhaps supplied a few additional notes for this act, including some indications for the underplot which Fletcher expanded into sc. iv. and sc. vi.; wrote most of Act III. sc. i.; wrote sc. ii.;² wrote nearly all of Act IV. sc. iii.; wrote all except ll. 1-17 of Act V. sc. i.; wrote part of sc. iii., and all except ll. 86-98 of sc. iv. Results of the following inquiry stated.

Fletcher, who was thus left the main events of the Knights Tale for dramatization, devised the "trash" of the underplot, and filled in the remaining portions of the play.

§ 12. It is by no means improbable that Beaumont has lent Fletcher a hand in some scenes; parts of Act I. sc. ii., and Act V. sc. iii. (ll. 41-66) may have been touched by him, but this is too uncertain and conjectural to merit more than passing suggestion. We know that Beaumont's "judgment" was popularly supposed Had Beaumont any share?

² This scene has probably been touched here and there by Fletcher.

14* § 13. TABLE OF SH.'S AND FLETCHER'S SHARES IN THE PLAY.

to temper and restrain Fletcher's "wit;" certainly it has done so, if at all, with very little effect here.¹

Fletcher wrote the Prologue and Epilogue.

My division compared with those of other critics.

§ 13. To enable the reader to compare my division with those of other critics of the play, I subjoin a table, based on that given in the Leopold Shakspeare, Introd., p. xcvi.

The external evidence.

§ 14. The external evidence of Shakspeare's part-authorship has been stated at length by Spalding, and need therefore only be given in a condensed form here.

¹ See William Cartwright's two sets of verses, prefixed to Works of B. & F., and cf. N. S. S. Trans., 1874, pt. i. p. 83.

² Weber's division is different: see my notes. He makes Act II. sc. i. and sc. ii. into one scene, and Act V. sc. i. into three scenes.

The title-page of the Quarto, 1634, is the earliest notice that we have of this play and of its authorship:—

Quarto, 1634
title-page.

NOBLE
KINSMEN:

Presented at the Blackfriars by the Kings Maiesties servants, with great applause:

Written by the memorable Worthies
of their time;

{ Mr. John Fletcher, and { Mr. William Shakspeare. } Gent.

[— Device —]

Printed at London by Tho. Cotes, for John Waterson : and are to be sold at the signe of the Crowne
in Pauls Church-yard. 1634.

§ 15. This statement is perfectly explicit, and the chief external arguments against its acceptance are four in number. They are as follows:—

Four cardinal objections to title-page.

I. Shakspeare's name helped to sell a book, and was prefixed to other Quarto plays known to be certainly not his.

II. The editors of the First Folio (1623) have omitted this play from their list and edition, and they profess to have given every one of his plays.

III. We have no evidence that Shakspeare collaborated with any one; he certainly did not with Fletcher.

IV. The statement on the title-page is unsupported by other evidence.

That is putting, as strongly as I am able, the case on external grounds against the Quarto title-page.

Replies to these objections.

1. Shakspeare's popularity had declined.

I. Though the Centurie of Prayse has shown that Shakspeare was not quite so "forgotten" in 1634 as Spalding considered, still Fletcher's popularity was fully as great as, if not greater than, his. For a small instance of this we may note that Fletcher's name is placed before Shakspeare's on the title-page in question; and certainly there was not in 1634 that motive of the popularity of Shakspeare's name which was a true and sufficient explanation of the false ascription of plays to him during his lifetime.

Fletcher's plays were not published till 1647, when there were no longer theatres for their representation; Shakspeare's, on the contrary, were printed in 1623, a fact which tells, if anything, against the opinion that his "old-fashioned wit" held the stage for long after his death; as the other fact tells in favour of Fletcher's continued popularity.¹

2. Omission from Folio not decisive.

II. This is the strongest objection of an external kind, but Spalding has completely refuted it by showing that the main object of the editors of the Folio (1623) was a commercial one—to discredit some fifteen pirated quarto editions; and that, so far from being the conscientious and disinterested collectors of their friend's plays which they professed to be, they really printed from such copies as first came to hand; in some cases even from those very quartos they were striving to discredit.

Spalding's exposure of the editors of F1.

Despite their protest in the preface, every page of the Folio (1623) is a testimony that no editorial care was given to the work. The editors have admitted into the collection two plays of which Shakspeare hardly wrote a dozen lines, viz., the first part of King Henry VI. and Titus Andronicus, and have omitted one of which he certainly wrote a good deal, Pericles.

After all their protestations, Troilus and Cressida is not in their table of contents, and is only inserted in some copies of the Folio, with separate paging like an independent work.² Hence, Spalding

¹ See The Centurie of Prayse, 2nd ed., pp. 270, 271, N. S. S., 1879; and Spalding's Letter, ed. F. J. Furnivall (N. S. S.), p. 113.

² See Stokes, Chronological Order of Shakspeare's Plays, pp. 132, 134, on this subject.

In the Folio (1623) Troilus is inserted after Henry VIII., between the argues, the editors either did not take the trouble, or were unable, to procure copies of these plays; but they made no acknowledgment of the omissions in their preface; on the contrary, took credit for the great care they professed to have exerted, which, with this Troilus episode, is more than enough to establish their untrustworthiness.

As Pavier the publisher may have had some right or property in Pericles which kept it out of the Folio, so Fletcher (v. Prol., l. 19) may have had some claim on the Two Noble Kinsmen (though his share in Henry VIII. suggests a slight difficulty here) which prevented its publication until after his death (in 1625).

Had Fletcher the copyright?

The second Folio (1632) being merely a revised reprint of the first (with commendatory verses only additional), its omission of our play is not evidence against Shakspeare's authorship. On the contrary (I think), the appearance of the Two Noble Kinsmen in quarto, within two years of the publication of the second Folio, rather suggests that it was so published because it had once more been improperly omitted from the collection of Shakspeare's plays; a view which gathers strength from the fact that the same publisher, T. Cotes (whose firm had been "concerned in the bringing out of F2, 1632"¹), brought out a (sixth) quarto of Pericles, another excluded play, in the following year (1635).

Second Folio no evidence, being only a reprint of F1.

III. This third objection may have had some force in the last century, but it has none now. For, not to mention Pericles, Timon, and other plays, and the fact that Fletcher wrote oftener with another than by himself, Mr. Spedding has shown, so as to satisfy the best English judges of Fletcher's style,² that Shakspeare left

³ Shakspeare has collaborated with others, as witness Pericles, Timon,

Histories and the Tragedies. The last page of Henry VIII. is No. 232, and Troilus is paged, blank (prologue), blank, 79, 80, and then blanks to end. Then follows p. 1 of Coriolanus.

Mr. Fleay is mistaken in saying (Stokes, p. 132) that Troilus is "paged 79 and 80 in its second and third pages;" counting the prologue, it is paged 79 and 80 on its third and fourth pages, and therefore does not follow Romeo so exactly as Mr. Fleay concluded. See Booth's reprint, p. 569.

² Except Mr. Swinburne, than whom "few can have studied [Fletcher] more thoroughly."—(p. 83 of) A Study of Shakespeare, pp. 82—102; Fortnightly Review,

4. No early

Shakspeare's

Langbaine.

Played by Shakspeare's

Internal evidence threefold.

Metrical evidence proves Fletcher's claim to a share.

Henry VIII. unfinished, and that Fletcher completed the drama, retouching the Shaksperian portions; and, furthermore, there is a tradition that a lost play, the History of Cardenio (? from Don Quixote), was written by Shakspeare and Fletcher (v. Darley, Introd., B. & F., p. xxii).

IV. That the authority of the title-page is unsupported by other evidence. If there is no external confirmation, at least there is no contradiction of the statement. The next known indication of the authorship does not appear till 1691, when Langbaine (English Dramatick Poets, p. 215) gave the authorship as he found it on the quarto title-page, which so well-informed a writer would not have done had he known any reason for doubting the accuracy of his statement.

§ 17. And some little presumptive support of Shakspeare's claim may be found in the fact that the play was acted at the Blackfriars by his Majesty's servants: at Shakspeare's theatre by Shakspeare's company of actors.

This leads to a further consideration: the internal evidence.

§ 18. The internal evidence of Shakspeare's part-authorship is threefold:—metrical similarities, artistic handling (regardful of character and motives rather than situations and scenic effects), and style of thought and imagery.

§ 19. The metrical evidence is conclusive of two things already assumed. It clearly divides the verse-scenes between two distinct and dissimilar styles of versification, and shows that one part agrees absolutely with the known metrical peculiarities of Fletcher.

With regard to the remaining portion of the play, the metrical

Jan. 1st, 1876. Mr. Swinburne seems to approve of F.-V. Hugo's theory of Henry VIII., which regarded "the main part of the fifth act as the work of a mere court laureate" (p. 96); but names no one as the probable author, though he thinks that "the style of the last scene savours now and then, and for some time together [italicised words not in Fortnightly article], more strongly than ever of Fletcher's most especial and distinctive qualities," and that "the whole structure of the play, if judged by any strict rule of pure art, is incomposite and incongruous, wanting in unity, consistency, and coherency of interest."

A reviewer of Mr. Swinburne's Study in the Spectator, p. 852, July 3rd, 1880, says that Mr. S.'s "remarks strike us as conclusive" against Prof. Dowden's opinion that the death-scene of Katherine is by Fletcher.

characteristics coincide *in all respects*¹ with those of Shakspeare's fourth-period plays—a family likeness which cannot be found to exist between this portion and the extant works of any other known dramatist of the period.²

Metre of non-Fletcher part coincides with the metrical peculiarities of Shakspeare only.

§ 20. This elimination of all the known Elizabethan dramatists except Shakspeare on the ground of marked metrical idiosyncrasies gives no slight presumption in favour of the statement on the Quarto title-page. It would be carrying conjecture too far to suppose not only that the author of the finest scenes of this play was some anonymous genius, but also that he alone of all the writers of the time could catch the trick of Shakspeare's style so deftly as it has here been caught. If we have to choose between two improbabilities, surely the inference that Shakspeare wrote these lines is far more rational than Professor Delius's hypothesis of "Der Anonymus" who could write blank verse as well as the author of the Winter's Tale?

If not Shakspeare, who wrote it?

No anonymous writer could write such verse.

If the author be anonymous, no other remnants of his work exist.

§ 21. Four metrical tests admitting of tabulation have been applied to this play. One, the rhyme test, though very useful in determining the relative lateness or earliness of plays in the whole series of Shakspeare's works, is not one which throws any light upon the question of authorship, except in so far as the neglect of rhyme may be regarded as specially characteristic of Shakspeare. Rhymes only occur in those parts of the play which are here assigned to Fletcher. There is not one rhyming couplet in the certainly non-Fletcherian portion.

Four chief metrical tests.

1. Rhyme-test: only gives negative evidence here.

Absence of rhyme is a characteristic of Shakspeare's latest plays.

§ 22. Next comes the 'light- and weak-ending' test, a most trustworthy witness of lateness of composition, and an index of a truly Shaksperian peculiarity.

2. 'Light- and weak-ending' test;

It has been worked out with great precision by Dr. J. K. Ingram in his paper printed in the Transactions of this Society for 1874, part ii. p. 422.

At the time when this test was first applied (1874) there was no line-numbered text of the Two Noble Kinsmen, so Dr. Ingram had to use a literal transcript of the Qo 1634 which I had made for working purposes.

² N. S. S. Trans., 1874, pt. ii. p. 454.

worked by Dr.
Ingram,

According to the Qo text, Dr. Ingram found in the Shakspeare part (Act I. scs. i., ii., iii., iv. ; Act III. scs. i., ii. ; Act V. scs. i., iii., iv.) 50 light and 34 weak endings, and in the Fletcher part (Act II. sc. iv. ; Act III. scs. iii., v., vi.) 3 light endings and 1 weak ending.

verified by me.

I have applied this test with a better text ('Leopold' Sh.), and, subdividing the play in the same way, have found Dr. Ingram's figures to be without error of any kind.

This confirmation is not weakened by the fact that I have added three examples to the Shaksperian table ; I have done so only tentatively, and I am quite ready to admit that these are not true examples if Dr. Ingram questions them.

Act III. sc. ii.

With regard to Act III. sc. ii., a word of explanation is necessary. I believe it to have been written by Shakspeare, but slightly retouched by Fletcher. I have therefore given it in the Shakspeare tables, although its ratio of 'stopt-lines' would assign it to Fletcher.

Position assigned by this test to
*Two Noble
Kinsmen*

By the 'light- and weak-ending' test the Shakspeare part of this play is placed between Winter's Tale and Henry VIII., and therefore next that other play which Shakspeare on his retirement left for Fletcher to complete.

confirms other indications of style and metre.

This position corresponds with that assigned by the other indications of metre and style, the Shaksperian scenes being everywhere stamped "with the manner of Shakspeare's later years" (Dyce).

§ 24. I next give tables of those two most important tests, the 'stopt-line' test and the 'double-ending' test. And I have to ask particular attention to the fact that, the division of the scenes between the two authors having been made originally before any systematic application of tests had taken place, these tests are now found to confirm that apportionment made primarily upon æsthetic grounds.

3. 'Stopt-line and
4. 'Double-ending' tests

similarly confirm critical division of the play.

My figures do not always coincide with Mr. Furnivall's; however, the divergences are not in any case productive of contradiction.¹

I have already noted the 'stopt-line' peculiarities of Act III. sc. ii.

¹ Dr. Ingram (N. S. S. Trans., 1874, pt. ii. p. 455) having pointed out Mr. Furnivall's error (caused by using Weber's text) in counting II. ii. as Shakspeare's, and in thinking that the test must be at fault, I need not further refer to it. Dyce makes the same mistake, Sh., vol. viii. p. 117, ed. 1876.

22* § 25-6. TABLE OF STOPT-LINE AND WEAK-ENDING TESTS.

'Stopt-line' ratios.

Leaving this scene out of consideration, the Shaksperian proportion of 'unstopt' to 'stopt' lines is never above 1 : 2 ; the Fletcherian never below that. Any line with a point or pause marked by type in the text ('Leopold') has been considered a 'stopt-line.'

Minor tests.

§ 25. There are minor tests, as the 'four-measure line' test, which Mr. Fleay has worked out, but their results are too indefinite and variable to be trusted.¹

Tabulation of 'stopt-line' and 'double-ending' tests.

§ 26. For greater convenience of comparison, I have tabulated the 'stopt-line' and 'double-ending' tests together.

Thus it is shown that while Shakspeare has only 1 'double ending' in every 3.49 lines, Fletcher has 1 'double ending' in every 1.89 lines, or nearly twice as many; and that while Shakspeare has 1 'unstopt' line in every 1.78 lines, Fletcher has only 1 in every 4.06 lines.

Deductions from table.

Such divergences, consistently preserved throughout, cannot be lightly scorned as the frenzied fancies of maniacal metre-mongers, pace Mr. Swinburne.

§ 27. "The choice of the story, in which the passion is, after all, of an artificial kind, the toleration of the 'trash' which abounds in the underplot, the faintness (as I must persist in regarding it) of the characterization, and, in general, the absence, except in occasional flashes, of the splendid genius which shows itself all through the last period of Shakspeare, I have always found very perplexing."¹

Characterization and choice of the story.

Dr. Ingram's four objections to Shakspeare's claim.

Shakspeare cannot be accused of tolerating the trash in this play, any more than in the concluding scenes of Henry VIII., for the simple reason that he never saw either play completed.

The trash of the underplot.

And even admitting the charge of faintness of characterization (a charge which Hickson has to a great extent disposed of in a different way), may we not partly find its explanation in that very "choice of the story, in which the passion is, after all, of an artificial kind," and partly in the fact that, while we are accustomed to estimate Shakspeare's powers of characterization by his complete works, we have here only a mutilated fragment wherein to trace his master-hand?

Choice of story bad.

Our tendency to judge a fragment as we should a finished play.

§ 28. How came Shakspeare to choose such a subject? He must have been early familiar with the Knights Tale, as he showed his acquaintance with Arcite's sophism (l. 298)—

How did the subject suggest itself to Shakspeare?

"thou wost not yit now
Whether sche be a womman or goddesse.
Thyn is affeccoun of holynesse,
And myn is love, as of a creature,"—

in his early play, Love's Labour's Lost, IV. iii. 64 :—

¹ Dr. J. K. Ingram, in N. S. S. Trans., 1874, pt. ii. p. 454. I have taken Dr. Ingram's objections as being the weightiest among the array of opinions unfavourable to Shakspeare's claim. See below, § 104, for the rest of Dr. Ingram's opinion.

"A woman I forswore ; but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee ;
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love," &c.¹

Renewed study
later.

He had delineated Theseus in A Midsummer Night's Dream, taking some hints from the Knights Tale;² and his attention had most probably been called to the story afresh when referring to Chaucer during the composition of Troilus and Cressida, which was a "new play" in 1609, "never staled with the stage, never clapper-clawed with the palms of the vulgar," and which must therefore have been composed only a short time before the Two Noble Kinsmen was begun.

Hence attracted by Chaucer's masterpiece, The Knights Tale.

This may account for the choice of the story, although that choice may have been as injudicious as was the similarly abandoned attempt to dramatize the history of Henry VIII.

But the Tale unsuitable for dramatization.

§ 29. Not even Shakspeare could have created a great play, full of high and passionate thoughts, and possessing firm dramatic unity, from the tale of Palamon and Arcite, any more than he could have constructed a coherent drama (though Mr. Spedding thinks differently) from a series of historical tableaux so unconnected with one central figure or group as were the salient events of Henry the Eighth's reign.³

Its spirit of fantastic chivalry had become unreal.

The romance of the two kinsmen, the springs and motives of their actions, their guiding principles and ways of thought, belonged to a state of society which it would have been necessary for the poet to create again in order to give them a reality and a justification.

Actions whose motives lie in the ephemeral laws of a capricious fashion, in the "pleasant old conventions

Of our false humanity,"

² M. N. D., I. i. 167; IV. i. 129, 130. Knights Tale, l. 642.

³ Mr. Samuel Pepys has anticipated my argument! "1663-4, January 1.—Went to the Duke's house, the first play I had been at these six months, according to my last vowe, and here saw the so much cried-up play of 'Henry the Eighth;' which, though I went with resolution to like it, is so simple a thing made up of a great many patches, that, besides the shows and processions in it, there is nothing in the world good or well done."—Centurie of Prayse, 1st ed., p. 243; 2nd ed., p. 318, and note, p. 324.

lose their rational probability when those laws no longer regulate the relations of life, or dwell in the memories of men.

The motif of the Knights Tale had reality and consistency in Chaucer's day, when courts of love with fantastic codes of chivalrous honour justified Arcite's quibble that he was false but never treacherous, and gave Palamon a legal claim to the lady, because he first saw her and first bequeathed his soul to her; but these conventionalities were dead long before the age of Elizabeth, and not even Shakspeare's Promethean touch could impart the warmth of life to their remains.¹

This was one great difficulty; another, even greater, will be mentioned below.

§ 30. We have only two acts to base our judgment on, two-fifths of the complete play.

Still, the charge of faintness of characterization has to a certain extent been successfully rebutted by Hickson; it is undeniable that the Shaksperian two-fifths give us all the positive ideas we possess of Theseus, Hippolyta, Emilia, Palamon, Arcite, and Perithous; and the rest of the play is only a confusion and perversion and obscuration of the traits indicated by Shakspeare.

The charge of faintness of characterization.

Fletcher has perverted the original design.

§ 31. Besides, several of the situations are unfavourable to the rapid development of the finer shades of character. In the first scene Theseus is in a passive attitude, assailed by the pleading queens.² The recitals of their griefs throw the other characters into the shade for some time, leaving a sense of indefiniteness at first which we should not experience were the scene acted before our eyes; but this sense soon passes away when Hippolyta and Emilia add their entreaties to those of the widowed ladies, and we become quickly impressed with the queenliness of Hippolyta's pity—

Situations unsuited for rapid development of character. Act I. sc. i.

Hippolyta.

¹ And at the present day, with all our loving study of the past, it is even harder than it was 270 years ago to reverently realize the fantastic aspects of chivalric love.

² The delineation of the three suppliants was inevitable, and they are strikingly individualized; but, as the dramatist has to dispense with them after the first act, their prominent introduction rather detracts from the artistic unity of the play viewed as a whole. Ulrici has some noteworthy remarks on this subject, Sh. Dram. Art., ii. 407 (Bohn's ed.).

Act V. In the fifth act also the main scenes are unsuited for the develop-
The kinsmen. ment of character by action, but on the whole the superiority of Emilia, the Amazon priestess, Palamon's nature to Arcite's is indicated. In this act (sc. i.) Emilia appears as one of a certain type,—the female knight of the goddess Diana,—and hence, like her mistress, has inevitably something “ sacred, shadowy, cold,” and (as her love for Flavinia shows) “ constant ” in her character. It could not have been otherwise. Imagine Emilia as any other than as she is drawn, say, a warm, affectionate, passionately sympathetic woman, and we render the climax impossible. She has to be as neutral as Britomart ;¹ she must love neither of the combatants, in order to justify the ultimate transference of rights in her from her winner to his death-bed assignee.

the main difficulty of the playwright.

§ 32. This fatal defect—the necessity of this sudden transfer as a climax—was the other main difficulty (referred to above) which Shakspeare had to contend against in dramatizing the story. He could not have drawn a strongly-marked picture of character, or even of passion and pity ; the essential conditions of the story limited him to producing a tragedy of episode, a spectacular romance.²

¹ There are several reminiscences of the Faery Queen, Bk. III., in this play: e. g. cf. V. iii. 20—28 with F. Q., III. iv. 55—59.

² The only really strong criticism—so far as I can judge—in Mr. Stack's paper, appended to Mr. Furnivall's edition of Spalding's Letter, p. 113, is in the passage in which he calls attention to Chaucer's conclusion, “ where the poem dedicates some beautiful lines to the funeral of Arcite and the grief of all, and only makes Emilia yield after years to the silent pleading of the woful Palamon and the urgency of her brother.”

But as I have shown, Emilia, instead of being (as Mr. Stack says) “ equally in love with two men at the same time,” is really in love with neither, and is therefore not overwhelmed by bereavement at all.

§ 33-7. CHARACTERIZATION AND CHOICE OF THE STORY. 27*

§ 33. Nor should we leave out of account the benumbing effect of the Fletcher scenes upon the Shaksperian portion ; it must be admitted (as Mr. Spedding has shown to be the case with Henry VIII. also) that the characterization of one portion flatly contradicts that of the other ; our sympathies, which were beginning to flow towards Palamon, the proper hero of the piece, are by Fletcher turned aside from Palamon and steadily directed towards the adventurous Arcite.

Fletcher's characterization contradicts Shakspeare's.

§ 34. Fletcher could admirably delineate the light, fashionable characters of the reign of James I.,¹ but it was manifestly impossible for such a writer to appreciate the ideality of conventional chivalry as we find it described by Chaucer and shadowed forth in the few scenes which Shakspeare has left us.

Fletcher's limitations.

§ 35. Thus Dr. Ingram's first three objections may be shown to have less force than at first sight seemed to be in them. The choice of the story need alone be admitted to have been injudicious ; but this admission cannot be held to prove anything, as Henry VIII. is equally liable to the accusation.²

Conclusion.

§ 36. Why Shakspeare left these two late plays unfinished seems hopeless to inquire. He may have himself regretted his choice of subjects, or may, at the close of his career, have thrown aside various fragments and sketches (these two being the chief), leaving them for subsequent completion by Fletcher, or other playwrights of the company.

Why did Shakspeare not finish this and other plays?

I have not given a particular analysis of the various characters, as Spalding and Hickson have both done this at some length, and I have nothing worth adding to their remarks.

§ 37. The last count of Dr. Ingram's indictment remains :— “the absence, except in occasional flashes, of the splendid genius which shows itself all through the last period of Shakspeare.”

Style of thought and imagery. Dr. Ingram.

On the other hand, we have De Quincey declaring that “the De Quincey.

¹ In this respect his only rival was Shirley. The plays of each of these men might be called Society Plays, in the sense that certain journals which reflect the vulgar, vicious, scandalous, and ludicrous aspects of self-styled “good society” are called Society Journals.

² These remarks apply somewhat to Pericles also.

supplications of the widowed Queens to Theseus, the invocations of their tutelar divinities by Palamon and Arcite, the death of Arcite, &c., are finished in a more elaborate style of excellence than any other element of Shakspeare's most elaborate scenes."

Whom are we to follow?

"Who shall decide, when doctors disagree,
And soundest casuists doubt, like you and me?"

To read Dr. Ingram's words, one would imagine the Shaksperian touches to be as rare, and, when they do occur, as conspicuous, as were those ambrosial raisins in the dull dumplings of our school-days. From De Quincey's panegyric the contrary inference seems plain, that the Shaksperian scenes are as "rich" as the most double extra superfine wedding cake of our maturer years.

The style homogeneous, not patchy,

the rhythm uniformly fine, "like perfect music unto noble words."

§ 38. De Quincey seems right in this, that the purely Shaksperian scenes are homogeneous, woven in one piece, not made up of shreds and patches. The gorgeously flowing rhythm forbids us absolutely to suppose that any mere botcher of another's thoughts could have joined such verses together; like the hands of Esau and the voice of Jacob, the incongruity would have been manifest at once; Shakspeare's words not harmonizing well with the metrical accompaniment of any Herr Anonymus.

Nature of the following inquiry.

§ 39. I cannot undertake a survey of the "finger-post" kind, in order to ascertain the actual number and intensity of the flashes of genius which are to be found in the Shaksperian scenes; but perhaps such a survey will be unnecessary when I shall have shown by comparisons that the thoughts in general are Shakspeare's thoughts, and the phrases peculiarly his phrases, for the conclusion will then be apparent that certain parts of the play are from his pen.¹

Plagiarisms

§ 40. And it is easy to distinguish between plagiarisms and self-reproductions. A plagiarism is betrayed by its environment, 't will out, be the plagiarist never so skilful. Like Arcite's nobleness of spirit, it can no more be hid

"Than fire in flax :
Than humble banks can go to law with waters
That drift winds force to raging" (V. iii. 98).

But with a self-reproduction the case is different. The resembling passage occurs naturally, incidentally ; some familiar word associates an old train of ideas, or some fresh idea finds its easiest embodiment in some old familiar phrase.

distinguished from self-reproductions.

Shakspeare repeats himself regularly and frequently ;¹ he is like the ocean, "ce vaste prodige de la monotonie inépuisablement variée,"² never quite the same, yet never wholly different. He has even noted this himself, when he asks—

Shakspeare
repeats himself.

"Why is my verse so barren of new pride,
So far from variation or quick change ?
Why with the time do I not glance aside
To new-found methods and to compounds strange ?
Why write I still all one, ever the same,
And keep invention in a noted weed,
That every word doth almost tell my name,
Showing their birth and where they did proceed ?"

Sonnet lxxvi.

§ 41. In entering upon an inquiry of the kind which follows, I am at some disadvantage ; for the systematic comparison of this play with passages from Shakspeare's other works has never before been carried out ;³ therefore, as the pioneer of this branch of the investigation, I am inevitably doomed to overlook many valuable illustrations which might greatly increase the strength of my argument.

No systematic inquiry of this kind ever before attempted.

It must never be forgotten too that only a first rough, fragmentary sketch is being compared with finished and carefully-elaborated productions.

² Victor Hugo, in his magnificent rhapsody, W. Shakspeare, p. 6. Compare Mr. Palgrave's note in the Golden Treasury, p. 323 :—"Proteus represented the everlasting changes. united with ever-recurrent sameness, of the Sea."

³ Steevens has attempted it. In a few cases he has anticipated me, but as a whole his list is of small value. Weber has sufficiently exposed his arguments.

Prologue,
by Fletcher,

§ 42. A comparison with Fletcher's prologues and epilogues places beyond a doubt that this prologue is from his pen.¹

Knight has argued that "the expression 'such a writer' is almost evidence against the double authorship;"² he might with equal cogency have asserted that the phrase "this child" (l. 16) was "almost evidence" in favour of it!

affords no evidence of authorship.

The singular, "writer," may be used for rhyme's sake merely, if it be not rather an indication that Fletcher finished the play after Shakspeare's retirement, and quietly took to himself the credit of the whole composition. But, in fact, the prologue gives no clue to the authorship, single or double, of the play.

Act I. sc. i.

§ 43. This scene bears many marks of Shakspeare's hand. It is doubtful, however, whether it is all his. I have already commented on the song in the Notes (p. 109), and pointed out its shortcomings. When writing my notes I refrained from expressing any definite opinion as to its authorship, but I inclined to the view which gave it to Fletcher. While still remaining unconvinced, I am now conscious that some indications favour its being ascribed to Shakspeare. Besides the fact that not a single line or even epithet can be paralleled from Beaumont and Fletcher's works, it may be urged against Fletcher's claim that he has written nothing else in the metre of these stanzas; whereas Shakspeare, in the Tempest (II. i. 300), has an equally indifferent song in precisely the same unusual metre:—

Song,

perhaps by Shakspeare.

"While you here do snoring lie,
Open-ey'd conspiracy
His time doth take;
If of life you have a care,
Shake off slumber and beware:
Awake! Awake!"

Shakspeare's marriage songs are none of them striking or unconventional; they are not above the level of the greater part of this one (v. Tempest, IV. i.; As You Like It, V. iv.).

¹ Note the likeness between this and that to Henry VIII. Boswell (q. Singer, Sh., vii. 4) says, "That the Prologue and Epilogue [of H. 8] were not written by Shakespeare is, I think, clear from internal evidence." Singer (p. 7) says, "Indeed they more nearly resemble the style of Fletcher."

² Studies of Shakspeare, p. 428.

As to my objection to "chough hoar," that "hoar" is an epithet with no appositeness,¹ it might be replied perhaps that the "chough hoar" (i. e. jackdaw), a thievish bird, was unlucky, while the russet-patted (red-legged, Cornish) chough was not.

The whole introduction of this scene (ll. 1—37) has probably been (like Act V. sc. i. ll. 1—17) recast by Fletcher: assuredly Shakspeare never wrote l. 27 :—

First 37 lines show marks of Fletcher's touch ;

"And as you wish your womb may thrive with fair ones."²

But excepting these introductory lines as containing interpolations, the scene is thoroughly Shaksperian.

rest of the scene by Shakspeare.

The writer (ll. 40—70) gives the audience the necessary preliminary information about the personages of the play in a most natural and business-like manner: far more artistically, in fact, than he has done in those opening speeches of Hamlet which Sheridan has ridiculed in the Critic.

The speech of the First Queen ("We are three queens") contains a most characteristically Shaksperian notion—that the wind carries infection from the unburied dead of the battle-field: ³—

ll. 39—54.

"He will not suffer us to burn their bones,
To urn their ashes, nor to take th' offence
Of mortal loathsomeness from the blest eye
Of holy Phœbus, but infects the winds
With stench of our slain lords."

So in Henry V., IV. iii. 98 :—

"And those that leave their valiant bones in France,
Dying like men, though buried in your dunghills,
They shall be famed; for there the sun shall greet them,
And draw their honours reeking up to heaven;
Leaving their earthly parts to choke your clime,
The smell whereof shall breed a plague in France."

Similarly in Coriol., III. iii. 121 :—

"Whose loves I prize
As the dead carcasses of unburied men
That do corrupt my air."

² I find that Mr. Simpson has anticipated me here; we have both noted this line quite independently. Indeed, who that knows Fletcher's style could help doing so? See N. S. S. Trans., 1874, pt. i. p. 83, and infra, § 52.

³ See Bucknill, Shakspeare's Medical Knowledge, p. 169, ed. 1860.

And even more closely, Coriol., I. iv. 33 :—

“And one infect another
Against the wind a mile.”

Lastly, Julius Cæsar, III. i. 273 :—

“Cry ‘Havoc!’ and let slip the dogs of war;
That this foul deed shall smell above the earth
With carrion men, groaning for burial.”

1. 41. The mention of the birds of prey—

“The beaks of ravens, tallents of the kites,
And pecks of crows, in the foul fields of Thebes”— is of course a commonplace of the battle-field; but this reference is in Shakspeare's manner, as seen in Julius Cæsar, V. i. 85 :—

“And in their steads do ravens, crows, and kites,
Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,
As we were sickly prey.”

1. 45. The “blest eye of holy Phœbus” is a fanciful description of the sun, but we have it again in Henry V., IV. i. 290 :—

“Sweats in the eye of Phœbus.”

Spalding (Letter, p. 30) has called attention to Shakspeare's peculiar use of verbal nouns expressing the agent, exemplified here by “thou purger of the earth.” For the word and the idea (one of Shakspeare's commonest medical metaphors) compare Julius Cæsar, II. i. 180, and for the idea, Macbeth, III. iv. 76 and the remarks infra on sc. ii.

11. 66—69.

“Hercules our kinsman,—
“Then weaker than your eyes,—laid by his club;
He tumbled down upon his Nemean hide,
And swore his sinews thawed.”¹

There is a very delicate piece of characterization in these lines. Hercules, we are told,² was ever in the mind of Theseus, and the

² Shakspeare's Plutarch, ed. Skeat, p. 278, ‘Life of Theseus,’ c. i. “The wonderful admiration which Theseus had of Hercules' courage made him in the night that he never dreamed but of his noble acts and doings; and in the daytime, pricked forwards with emulation and envy of his glory, he determined with him-little touch of vanity in the mention of "our kinsman" is admirably introduced. But the passage has great significance from another point of view.

Fletcher probably never opened North's Plutarch. Jonson, Massinger, Chapman, and the earlier writers drew from the ancient sources direct. Hence this reference points very plainly to the only dramatist who ever studied North's translation: Shakspeare. We know that he made frequent and free use of the book in his other plays. The bold treatment of classical legend is quite in his style: natural and devoid of the least taint of pedantry. The "Nemean hide" recalls "the Nemean lion's nerve" of Hamlet, I. iv. 83.

Plutarch has given a hint here, and Shakspeare alone borrowed from him.

The succeeding speeches "need no bush;" they speak for themselves. Take the climax of the Second Queen's speech:—

"Lend us a knee ;
But touch the ground for us no longer time
Than a dove's motion when the head's pluckt off ;
Tell him, if he i' th' blood-siz'd field lay swoln,
Showing the sun his teeth, grinning at the moon,
What you would do !"

II. 96—101.

It is worth noticing that the comparison in the first three lines, strange and far-fetched as it appears to us now, must have been from Shakspeare's own observation of medical treatment. His son-in-law, Dr. John Hall, in his Select Observations on English Bodies, thus treated himself for "Convulsion of the mouth and eyes :—Then was a Pigeon cut open alive, and applied to my feet, to draw down the Vapours ; for I was often afflicted with a slight Delirium."¹

The quivering of a freshly-killed bird had early been noticed by the poet :—

"Like to a new-killed bird she trembling lies."
Lucrece, l. 457.

In Hamlet (II. ii. 484) we have "o'er-sized with coagulate gore ;" an exact equivalent of the more contracted phrase "blood-sized."

self one day to do the like, and the rather, because they were near kinsmen, being cousins removed by the mother's side."

I. 100. That "horrible symptom of a painful death, which physicians call the 'sardonic grin,'" ¹ is described in the fifth line just as Shakspeare has noted it in John, III. iv. 34; Richard II., III. ii. 163; 1 Henry IV., V. iii. 62; 2 Henry VI., III. iii. 24; IV. i. 77; Hamlet, V. i. 212; Cymb., V. iii. 38 (Schmidt).

I. 107. In l. 107 the "hot grief" of the queen is like that of Hermione, "which burns worse than tears drown" (Winter's Tale, II. i. 111; cf. Lear, IV. vii. 47). Uncandied (= dissolved) is not used by Shakspeare elsewhere; but he has candy (= congeal) and discandy (= uncandy) in very similar passages.²

Note that in the fine anti-climax of the Third Queen's speech—

II. 117—119.

"O, pardon me!
Extremity, that sharpens sundry wits,
Makes me a fool"—³

we have "extremity," that is to say, "the utmost of human suffering,"⁴ personified in precisely the same sense as in Pericles, V. i. 139:—

"Yet thou dost look
Like Patience, gazing on kings' graves, and smiling
Extremity out of act."

In a passage from Plutarch, quoted infra on I. ii., we have "extremity" similarly spoken of.

II. 126—129.

It may be objected to the following lines that light, not heat, is reflected:—

"Your sorrow beats so ardently upon me,
That it shall make a counter-reflect 'gainst
My brother's heart, and warm it to some pity;"

² "Twenty consciences, that stand 'twixt me and Milan, candied be they and melt ere they molest," Tempest, II. i. 279; "the cold brook, candied with ice," Timon, IV. iii. 226; "by the discandying of this pelleted storm," Antony, III. xiii. 165 (O. Edd. discandering); "the hearts that spanielled me at heels . . . do discandy, melt their sweets on blossoming Cæsar," Antony, IV. xii. 22 (Schmidt).

³ I shall point out below (§ 68) an extraordinary imitation of this passage by Beaumont: very important as establishing B.'s acquaintance with the play, and as helping us to conjecture the date.

⁴ Singer, notes, l. c., Sh., iv. 232. The self-reproduction from Twelfth Night is obvious.

§ 43. SHAKSPERE PARALLELS TO I. i. 137—158. 'OSPREY.' 35*

but Shakspeare says just the same thing again (Troilus, III. iii. 96):—

“Man, how dearly ever parted,
How much in having, or without or in,
Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,
Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection;
As when his virtues, shining upon others,
Heat them, and they retort that heat again
To the first giver.”

The idea that as ospreys subdue before they touch their prey, ll. 137—139, so Theseus's deeds anticipate their own effects by virtue of their inherent kingliness,¹ is implied in the closely-similar description of another great warrior—Coriolanus:—

“I think he'll be to Rome
As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it
By sovereignty of nature.”—Coriol., IV. vii. 36.

The passage in which the list of suicidal agencies is given, l. 142. “cords, knives, drams, precipitance,” will be referred to in my remarks on Act III. sc. ii.

The Second Queen urges Theseus to march instantly against Creon:—

“Now you may take him
Drunk with his victory.” l. 157.

To which the Third Queen adds the consideration—

“And his army full
Of bread and sloth.” l. 158.

I have often wondered, Would Shakspeare have described a sudden attack as taking them full of bread? But happening on the following passage, I found that I had here one more link in the chain of internal evidence of Shakspeare's authorship:—

“He took my father grossly, full of bread;
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May.”
Hamlet, III. iii. 80.

¹ l. 137:—“But, O Jove! your actions,
Soon as they move, as asprays do the fish,
Subdue before they touch.”

And we know that this fulness of bread produced sloth : the "secure¹ hour" of afternoon sleep (I. v. 61).

In the days before standing armies, stage captains had to "forth and levy" their troops when necessary. But Shakspeare occasionally needs a body of troops to be in readiness for a sudden expedition ; and in such a case he accounts for the advanced preparations by saying either that they have been made for some other campaign, as here—

ll. 213—215.

"We shall find
The moiety of a number, for a business
More bigger look'd,"— or that they have been made in anticipation, as in Cymbeline, III. v. 28 :—

"Our expectation that it would be thus Hath made us forward" [sc. in collecting troops].

With the closing words of the scene may be compared Winter's Tale, IV. iv. 25 :—

"The gods themselves,
Humbling their deities to love," &c.

The speech contains the general idea of honour (as here) controlling desire :—

"Since my desires
Run not before my honour."

I might note the use of peculiar words, such as transported (ll. 55, 187), pluck (l. 191), vigour (l. 195), theme (l. 215) ; but this will be possible for any student to do for himself by comparing the Concordance with Schmidt's Lexicon.

Act I. sc. ii.

Hickson's first opinion discussed.

§ 44. Hickson (p. 36*) thinks "that either Shakspeare and Fletcher wrote the scene in conjunction, or that it was originally written by Fletcher, and afterwards revised and partially re-written by Shakspeare. From the entrance of Valerius, however, it appears to be entirely by the latter."

(Fletcher may have touched the scene, perhaps with Beaumont's help.)

If Fletcher has retouched a few of the opening speeches,—as (with Beaumont at his elbow) he may have altered a word here and there,—he has certainly not designed the scene.

On this one point of collaboration I dissent totally from Mr. Hickson, and he seems to give it up himself in the end of his essay (p. 60*):—"To sum up the result of our inquiry:—It is, that the play of The Two Noble Kinsmen is one to which Shakspeare possesses a better title than can be proved for him to Pericles;—that to him belong its entire plan and general arrangement: but that, perhaps for want of time to complete it by a day named, and probably by way of encouragement to a young [born 1576 or 1579] author of some promise, he availed himself of the assistance of Fletcher to fill up a portion of the outline."

Hickson's second opinion

I cannot reconcile the conclusions in these two quotations; they are, I think, antagonistic. Neither can face Dr. Ingram's objection as to the toleration of the trash in the underplot; indeed, that objection seems to me unanswerable, except on the hypothesis that Shakspeare, when he retired from the stage, left this play and Henry VIII. incomplete, and that they were worked up by Fletcher afterwards.

inconsistent with the first.

Neither satisfactory.

The only valid hypothesis.

But to my parallels.

The introductory speeches of this scene contain a discourse upon the function of war as a purifier of the corruptions of peace.

This application of "the doctrines of physiology to the theory of government and statesmanship" is very characteristic of Shakspeare, as Dr. Bucknill has abundantly shown.¹ "Hamlet makes peace the time of health,² though of plethoric health which ripens into war" (p. 210). "War has been stated by cynical statists to be man's natural condition, and peace but the period of exhaustion and recruitment. Shakspeare does not go quite so far as this, but he looks upon war as a disease produced by that state of the body in which health becomes rank and plethoric" (p. 264).

This idea naturally occupies a large portion of Arcite's prayer in Act V. sc. i. War is there the "great corrector of enormous times, Shaker of o'er-rank states." He cures the world "o' th' plurisy of

² Hamlet, IV. vii. 118:—

"For goodness, growing to a plurisy,
Dies in his own too-much."

See my note on V. i. 66, p. 159.

people." And as the treatment of plethoric (= "enormous") individuals was purging and bleeding, so war purges the commonwealth and heals

V. i. 64.

"with blood
The world when it is sick."¹

We may compare ² Henry IV, IV. i. (54—57) 63—66 :—

"Show awhile like fearful war,
To diet rank minds, sick of happiness,
And purge the obstructions which begin to stop
Our very veins of life."

And Macbeth, V. ii. 25 :—

"Well, march we on,
To give obedience where 'tis truly ow'd :
Meet we the medicine of the sickly weal,
And with him pour we, in our country's purge,
Each drop of us."

I. i. 48.

The italicized words recall the epithet of Theseus : "thou purger of the earth."

Can we compare such passages with these in our play (V. i.), and not feel sure that they are both the expression of the same mind?

Take now the passages in sc. ii. :—

II. 19—26.

"Who, then, shall offer
To Mars's so-scorn'd altar? I do bleed
When such I meet, and wish great Juno would Resume her ancient fit of jealousy,
To get the soldier work, that peace might purge
For her repletion, and retain anew
Her charitable heart, now hard, and harsher
Than strife or war could be."

This intransitive use of purge is worth remarking, and comparing with Antony, I. iii. 53 :—

"The condemn'd Pompey,
Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace
Into the hearts of such as have not thrived
Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten ;

¹ Cf. III. i. 113 :—

"This question, sick between 's,
By bleeding must be cured."

*And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge
By any desperate change."*

Hamlet carries the metaphor somewhat further in his speech on the Polish expedition of young Fortinbras (IV. iv. 27):—

"This is the imposthume of much wealth and peace,
That inward breaks, and shows no cause without Why the man dies."

It must be mentioned that three words in this speech of Palamon's do not occur elsewhere in Shakspeare—martialist, flurted, ll. 16—24. and repletion. They are all of them common enough in other writers: the first two being found in Beaumont and Fletcher. However, the very fact of their proximity diminishes the force of any objection which might be founded on them; if, indeed, any can be founded on the absence of words in general circulation (see N. S. S. Trans., 1874, p. 114). It is more conclusive to notice the similarity of the trains of thought to those in Shakspeare's unquestioned writings. For instance, read the first hundred lines of this scene with Cymbeline, III. iii., and note the resemblances of thought, the associating circumstances being not dissimilar. Compare especially Cymbeline, III. iii.

ll. 16, 17: "This service is not service, so being done, But being so allowed."

ll. 24—26: "Prouder than rustling in unpaid-for silk; Such gain the cap of him that makes 'em fine, Yet keeps his book uncrossed."

ll. 45—49: "Did you but know the city's usuries And felt them knowingly; the art o' the court, As hard to leave as keep; whose top to climb Is certain falling, or so slippery that The fear's as bad as falling."

Two Noble Kinsmen, I. ii.

ll. 67—70: "who only attributes The faculties of other instruments To his own nerves and act: commands men [s] service, and what they win in't."

ll. 49—52: "Why am I bound By any generous bond to follow him Follows his tailor, haply so long until The followed make pursuit?"

ll. 4—12: "Thebes, and the temptings in't, before we further Sully our gloss of youth; And here to keep in abstinence we shame As in incontinence; for not to swim I' th' aid o' th' current, were almost to sink, at least to frustrate striving; and to follow The common stream, 't

Very remarkable parallel.

would bring us to an eddy Where we should turn or drown; if labour through, Our gain but life and weakness."

ll. 36—42: "I spake of Thebes, How dangerous, if we will keep our honours, It is for our residing; where every evil Hath a good colour, where every seeming good 's A certain evil; where not to be ev'n jump As they are here, were to be strangers, and Such things to be, mere monsters."

ll. 49—55: "The toil o' the war, A pain that only seems to seek out danger I' the name of fame and honour; which dies i' the search, And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph As record of fair act; nay, many times, Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse, Must court'sy at the censure."

ll. 15—23: "Scars and bare weeds The gain o' th' martialist, who did propound To his bold ends honour and golden ingots, Which though he won, he had not; and now flurled By peace, for whom he fought. Who, then, shall offer To Mars's so-scorned altar? I do bleed When such I meet, and wish great Juno would Resume her ancient fit of jealousy, To get the soldier work."

Compare the structure of

ll. 47—49 (above: "whose top to climb falling").

ll. 7—9 (above: "for not to swim striving").

ll. 7—9.

The image in ll. 7—9—swimming with the current of vice—has its counterpart in Timon, IV. i. 25:—

"Lust and liberty
Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth,
That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive,
And drown themselves in riot!"

Note the use of strive = swim.

The denunciations of Thebes may be compared with Timon's more violent denunciations of Athens, and contrasted with the very inconsistent words which Fletcher puts into the mouths of the kinsmen, beginning—

II. ii. 7.

"Where is Thebes now, where is our noble country?"

§ 44. SHAK. PAR. IN CYMBELINE TO I. ii. 42—109. LOSS OF BLOOD. 41*

The servile imitation of fashions, satirized by Palamon in his fine ll. 47—60. speech, besides the very noticeable parallel to Cymbeline, III. iii. 21,¹ has a resemblance to Pericles, I. iv. 21—27:—

“This Tarsus . . .

Whose men and dames so jetted and adorned,
Like one another's glass to trim them by.”

The whole description of the corruptions at Thebes under the rule of Creon reminds us of the state of Scotland under Macbeth (IV. iii.).

In place of Arcite's urging Palamon to leave Thebes, and Palamon's determination to stay and defy the evils which surround them, we have Malcolm's despair and Macduff's courageous resolve:—

“Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there
Weep our sad bosoms empty.

Macd. Let us rather
Hold fast the mortal sword, and like good men
Bestride our downfall'n birthdom; each new morn
New widows howl, new orphans cry, new sorrows
Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds
As if it felt with Scotland, and yelled out
Like syllable of dolour.”

The rage of Creon calls to mind Cymbeline, III. v. 67:— l. 84.

“Go in and cheer the king: he rages; none
Dare come about him.”

Lastly, note the strong family likeness between Palamon's words—

“The blood we venture
Should be as for our health”— l. 109.

and those of Coriolanus—

“The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me” (I. v. 19).

§ 45. This is by the writer of the main part of the two preceding Act I. sc. iii. by Shakspeare. scenes; whatever presumption of Shakspeare's authorship has been raised with regard to them must be allowed to attach here also. The whole scene is marked by Shakspeare's manner, but I have not succeeded in noting any parallels such as I have adduced for scenes i. and ii. This is the more remarkable because the description of Flavina has been called an imitation of a somewhat similar description in A Midsummer Night's Dream, III. ii. 198—219.

ll. 49—82.

The nature of the two passages is such, that the similarities appear to me coincidences, and not conscious imitations. Each passage has a fitness of its own.

Motive for introducing the 'Flavina' speech.

The motive of this speech of Emilia's seems to be to strengthen the wall of indifference to man which her vows to Diana have raised round her—an indifference necessary for the happy termination of the play—by adding a reasoned conviction on her part that "the love 'tween maid and maid may be more than in sex dividual."

There is not a word in the scene which Shakspeare might not have written: its rhythm is his rhythm; its mannerisms are his; its free and natural treatment of classical legend is his also.

Fine style.

Will not the description of the friendship of Theseus and Pirithous stand in point of style beside any piece of Coriolanus? They have

l. 40.

"Fought out together, where death's self was lodged;
Yet fate hath brought them off."

This may contain a reference to the commoner form of the legend, which confused Aidoneus, king of the Molossians, with the god Pluto. Plutarch gives the more ancient version (p. 289, ed. Skeat), according to which the king caused Pirithous "presently to be torn in pieces with his dog, and shut Theseus up in close prison." But (supposing "death's self was lodged" to refer to this adventure) it was necessary for dramatic purposes that fate should bring them off.

ll. 61—64.

A little further on we have one of the numerous medical references which this play contains, expressed with exquisite grace:—

"And like the elements,
That know not what nor why, yet do effect

§ 46. SHAKSPERE PARALLELS TO I. iii, AND IV. 'NIGGARD WASTE.' 43*

Rare issues by their operance, our souls
Did so to one another."¹

A second medical allusion occurs a few lines on:—

“A sickly appetite,
That loathes even as it longs.” l. 89.

The other peculiarity of sick men's longings is noted in Coriol.,
I. i. 181:—

“And your affections are
A sick man's appetite, who desires most that
Which would increase his evil.”

§ 46. The danger of too readily relying upon apparently parallel passages in an inquiry like the present may be illustrated from this scene.

Act I. sc. iv.
Danger of relying on apparent similarities illustrated from
ll. 24, 25.

Theseus asks of the kinsmen—

“They are not dead?”

To which the Herald replies—

“Nor in a state of life,” &c.

At first sight this seems to be a self-repetition from Macbeth:—

“I have drugged their possets,
That death and nature do contend about them,
Whether they live or die” (II. ii. 6).

But the resemblance is only fortuitous; here is the true original, from Chaucer (l. 157):—

“Nat fully quyk, ne fully deed they were;
But by here coote armour, and by here gere,
Heraudes knew hem wel in special.”

With this caution borne in mind, I may continue my comparisons, beginning by noting a slight verbal resemblance between l. 32, “rather than niggard, waste,” and Sonnets, i. 12, “mak'st l. 32. waste in niggarding.”

“Bear 'em speedily

Love's provocations, zeal, a mistress' task,
 Desire of liberty, a fever, madness,
 Hath set a mark—which nature could not reach to Without some imposition,—sickness in will,
 Or wrestling strength in reason."

In the notes I suggested that *imposition*¹ meant deception; but it seems to me now more probable that the passage means—take the greatest care of them, for I have known violent mental or moral shocks, when accompanied by acute physical suffering (such as might arise from careless treatment), to leave some impression of evil in the form of either chronic languor or actual insanity.

If this explanation be approved, it receives a strong confirmation from the following remarks by Dr. Bucknill on the madness of Lear:—"Insanity, arising from mental constitution, and moral causes, often continues in a certain state of imperfect development; that state which has been somewhat miscalled by Prichard, moral insanity; a state of exaggerated and perverted emotion, accompanied by violent and irregular conduct, but unconnected with intellectual aberration; until some physical shock is incurred—bodily illness, or accident, or exposure to physical suffering; and then the imperfect type of mental disease is converted into perfect lunacy, characterized by more or less profound affection of the intellect, by delusion or incoherence."² This is evidently the case in Lear; and although we have never seen the point referred to by any writer, and have again and again read the play without perceiving it, we cannot doubt from the above quotations [Lear, III. ii. 67—73; IV. vi. 102—107], and especially from the second, in which the poor madman's imperfect memory refers to his suffering in the storm, that Shakespeare contemplated this exposure and physical suffering as the cause of the first crisis in the malady. Our wonder at his profound knowledge of mental disease increases, the more carefully we study his works;

¹ Cf. Winter's Tale, I. ii. 74, and v. Singer's note; also see § 94, infra.

² It is a pity that we have not Dr. Bucknill's opinion on both the medical knowledge and mad scenes of the Two Noble Kinsmen. In the words which I have italicized we have an almost verbal, and yet quite unconscious, reproduction, by an eminent mental physiologist of our own day, of the very ideas which Shakspeare has expressed with equal precision and greater fulness of detail in this speech (ll. 37—45).

here and elsewhere he displays with prolific carelessness a knowledge of principles, half of which would make the reputation of a modern psychologist."¹

For the "cataloguing of circumstances, altogether peculiar to Shakspeare" (Hickson), we may compare Timon, IV. i. 15:—

"Piety, and fear,
Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth,
Domestic awe, night-rest, and neighbourhood,
Instruction, manners, mysteries, and trades,
Degrees, observances, customs, and laws,
Decline to your confounding contraries,
And let confusion live ;"

and contrast (as Hickson has done) the "mere flash in the pan" in II. ii. 188:—

"Am not I liable to those affections,
Those joys, griefs, angers, fears, my friend shall suffer?"

§ 47. "The only scene throughout the entire play with regard to which we entertain doubt" (Hickson), I assign to Fletcher for the following reasons:—

Act I. sc. v. by Fletcher.

First, the song is very poor stuff, and contains several Fletcherian phrases, as "quick-eyed pleasure" (see below on II. v.), the "wild air," and "sad and solemn" (occurs in a Fletcherian stage direction in Henry VIII., IV. ii. : "sad and solemn music").

Next, note the word convent, evidently imitated from the preceding scene (where it is correctly used: "all our surgeons convent 1. 30. in their behoof;") here it is meaningless: "We convent nought else 1. 9. but woes"). It is not likely that the writer of sc. iv. would so soon have repeated such an unusual word.²

Lastly, the well-known couplet at the end—

"This world's a city full of straying streets,
And death's the market-place, where each one meets"— is not original.

² Hazlitt says that Shakspeare never uses convent in the senses in which we have it here (Eliz. Lit., p. 151); but compare Measure, V. 128; Henry VIII. [? F.], V. i. 52; Coriol., II. ii. 58 (Schmidt).

Even supposing it to be older than all the instances given in my notes, it is borrowed from Chaucer, K. T., ll. 1989—1991 :—

“This world nys but a thurghfare full of woo,
And we ben pilgryms, passyng to and froo ;
Deth is an ende of every worldly sore.”

Act II. sc. i. Strange to say, this has not been hitherto pointed out by any one.
Underplot § 48. I have now come to the underplot, and must admit that I can no longer speak with that confidence which the evidence seemed to justify in the preceding scenes ; for though it may be possible to show that Shakspeare must have given some outline of this subordinate part of the play, I think that in no single scene of the underplot can we feel absolutely certain of his hand throughout. At the same time, we are liable to very great prejudice in judging of this matter, on account of the degradation to which Fletcher has reduced characters which Shakspeare had only begun to sketch in outline.¹ probably begun by Shakspeare.

Our liability to prejudice on this point.

This scene blameless.
Gaoler.

Wooper.

Daughter.

In this first scene, no fault can be found with any of the characters. The Gaoler is in no ways different from his fellow in Winter's Tale, II. ii. ; the Wooper—afterwards made the most utterly contemptible individual in the play—is a plain-spoken man of the same degree as the girl he is wooing ; the daughter herself is made to speak, Shakspeare-like, in a way that a girl of her position never spoke outside of Shakspeare's pages : her lowly utterances becoming the medium for expressing profound reflections upon captivity and adversity.

These considerations go strongly against Fletcher's claim to have written the scene under review ; for most of his reflections can be shown to be borrowed, generally without much appropriateness, and often spoiled in the borrowing.

The daughter says :—

ll. 21—24.

“I do think they have patience to make any adversity ashamed ; the prison itself is proud of 'em ; and they have all the world in their chamber.”

¹ It has been objected that these characters have no names, but this may be explained by saying that not being in the original, they were new conceptions, and needed not to be named until their delineation was complete. This fact might, however, be made an additional argument against the “old-play adapted” theory of Mr. Collier.

§ 48. FLETCHER'S EXPANSION OF SHAKSPERE'S THOUGHTS IN II. i. 47*

This comes more fitly from a third person than from the prisoners themselves.

But Fletcher borrows it all in the next scene:—

“I see two comforts rising, two mere blessings,
If the gods please, to hold here a brave patience,
And the enjoying of our griefs together.
Whilst Palamon is with me, let me perish
If I think this our prison!”

II. ii. 58—62.

In fact, the first half of scene ii. is but an expanded travesty of the words of the Gaoler's Daughter in scene i.¹

“Daugh. . . . I marvel how they would have looked, had they been victors, that, with such a constant nobility, enforce a freedom out of bondage, making misery their mirth, and affliction a toy to jest at.”

This is evidently imitated in the next scene by Fletcher (l. 2):—
“Why, strong enough to laugh at misery;” and (l. 96):—“almost wanton with my captivity.”

Again, notice the inconsistency of all sc. ii. with the girl's declaration in sc. i. :—“they eat well, look merrily, discourse of many things, but nothing of their own restraint and disasters.”

Fletcher, careless as he was, could hardly have written that speech with sc. ii. also in his mind.

Taking this scene by itself, there is nothing offensive or inadequate in it. It perfectly fulfils its purpose of being an introduction to the window scene, though it might have been further elaborated had the designer completed the play himself.

A few more considerations remain. Note first that the scene is in that form of prose dialogue so generally used by servants and people of low degree in Shakspeare. Next, that we should search Fletcher in vain to find another prose dialogue like it. His most slovenly work has some kind of rhythm, and even the Palace Yard scene (Henry VIII., V. iii.), may be turned into the same sort of rhythmical prose, half verse half prose, as we find in Act III. sc. v. Note the prose.

¹ From seeing how Fletcher has amplified the hints in sc. i., we may gather some idea of the way in which he may have expanded Shakspeare's notes of the play.

A parallel between the last line: "Lord, the difference of men," and Lear, IV. ii. 26: "Oh, the difference of man and man," has been pointed out by Steevens and by Mr. Skeat.

Plutarch
again (?).

Lastly, there may be in the Daughter's words some reminiscence of Plutarch: "Howbeit [Antonius] was of such a strong nature, that by patience he would overcome any adversity:¹ and the heavier fortune lay upon him, the more constant shewed he himself. Every man that feeleth want or adversity, knoweth by virtue and discretion what he should do: but when indeed they are overlaid with extremity, and be sore oppressed, few have the hearts to follow that which they praise and commend, and much less to avoid that they reprove and dislike: but rather to the contrary, they yield to their accustomed easy life, and through faint heart, and lack of courage, do change their first mind and purpose."²

Act II. sc. ii.
Fletcher's

use of plural
nouns.

§ 49. This scene, being admittedly Fletcher's, needs no examination. Hickson has noted that it is not conterminous with sc. i.: in the former the kinsmen are seen together in the window, yet here they begin as if just meeting: "How do you, noble kinsman?" "How do you, sir?" I may exemplify Fletcher's use of plural nouns, especially abstracts, from the first fifty lines:—prisoners, friends, kindreds, comforts, youths, games, favours, ladies, ships, clouds, praises, garlands, twins, arms, horses, seas, swords, sides, temples, gods, hands, armies, hopes, prisoners, graces, youths, embraces, kisses, cupids, necks, figures, selves, eagles, arms, fathers, maids, banishments, songs, woes, delights, hounds, echoes, javelins, rages—total, 44 in 50 lines.

To illustrate the value of offhand criticism in a question of authorship like the present, I may mention that Singer (X. 337) quotes the "beautiful lines" about the rose as "evidently by Shakspeare, as he assisted Fletcher in writing" the Two Noble Kinsmen, and compares Cymbeline, I. iv. :—

"And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north, Shakes all our buds from growing."

¹ Cf. italicized words with "patience to make any adversity ashamed:" "with such a constant nobility." And the passage about Extremity with I. i. 117: "Extremity, that sharpens sundry wits, makes me a fool."

² Life of Antonius, § 9, ed. Skeat, p. 167.

Singer cannot have seen the context: he arrived at this positive conclusion on the strength of Farmer's note, which quotes the "beautiful lines" in question:—

"Emil. Of all flowers, ll. 137—143.
 Methinks, a rose is best.
Woman. Why, gentle madam?
Emil. It is the very emblem of a maid:
 For when the west wind courts her gently,
 How modestly she blows, and paints the sun
 With her chaste blushes! When the north comes near her,
 Rude and impatient, then, like chastity,
 She locks her beauties in her bud again,
 And leaves him to base briars."

I may be excused for quoting from my note (p. 134) the following "striking parallel to this intensely Fletcherian passage," from The Loyal Subject, IV. iii. sp. 15:—

"Here, ladies, here (you were not made for cloisters),
 Here is the sphere you move in; here shine nobly,
 And by your powerful influence, command all!—
What a sweet modesty dwells round about 'em,
And, like a nipping morn, pulls in their blossoms!" [Aside.]

As illustrating another Fletcherian problem (with which I hope some day to deal), compare¹:— ll. 242, 243, parallel from Fletcher's part of Henry VIII.

"Youth and pleasure,
 Still as she tasted, should be doubled on her,"

with Henry VIII., V. v. 26:—

"All princely graces,
 That mould up such a mighty piece as this is,
 With all the virtues that attend the good,
 Shall still be doubled on her."

Before passing to the next scene, I beg to direct the particular attention of any reader who may be studying Fletcher's mannerisms to my note on II. ii. 37/40. Fletcher's

§ 55. This scene has been referred to several times already. There are many features which recall Shakspeare to our minds. It is dawn; all night the distraught girl has roamed the forest in quest of the man whom she has enabled to escape: the tumultuous fancies of her mind have found an echo in the voice of Nature:¹

"I have heard

enough to terrify any woman not nerved by maddening despair. But her grief hath slain her fear, and she is reckless, would even fall a willing victim to the wolves were she but enabled to complete his release by giving him "this file." Her passion in this scene is utterly unselfish; it is simply guided by anxiety for Palamon's liberation from his fetters, and has nothing to do with the filthy nymphomania into which Fletcher perverts it in his subsequent mad scenes.

Still, the primary cause of her madness is here seen to be disappointment. Compare Polonius's account of Hamlet's symptoms (II. ii. 146) with the indications in this scene:—

"And he, repulsed,—a short tale to make,—
 Fell into a sadness, then into a fast,
 Thence to a watch, thence into a weakness,
 Thence to a lightness, and, by this declension,
 Into the madness wherein now he raves."

Or, as Dr. Bucknill translates the "psychological opinion of the

"What! can the everlasting elements
 Feel with a worm like man?" &c.

Dr. George Macdonald, The Seaboard Parish, ch. ii. p. 9, asks:—"Was it from observation of nature in its association with human nature, or from artistic feeling alone, that Shakspeare so often represents Nature's mood as in harmony with the mood of the principal actors of his drama? I know I have so often found Nature's mood in harmony with my own, even when she had nothing to do with forming mine, that in looking back I have wondered at the fact." old courtier" into the "dulness of medical prose":—"Disappointed and rejected in his ardent addresses to Ophelia, Hamlet became melancholy, and neglected to take food; the result of fasting was the loss of sleep; loss of sleep and loss of food were followed by general weakness; this produced a lightness or instability of the mental functions, which passed into insanity."¹

Note the resemblance here.

It is curious to notice how many of these indications we have here. The melancholy is betrayed in the opening lines of the girl's soliloquy. The fasting, in her declaration:—"food took I none these two days,—sift some water." Loss of sleep, in "I have not closed mine eyes, save when my lids scoured off their brine" (the force of this expression is like Shakspeare). And instability of the mental functions, in her agonized cry:—

ll. 29—32.

"Alas!

O state of nature, fail together in me,
Since thy best props are warpt!"

Mannerisms.

l. 29.

We are thus shown the natural and gradual development of insanity; the various phases, the gradation of causes, are here faithfully displayed. I cannot ascribe the conception of such a scene to Fletcher. Here once more note that there is not the faintest imitation of Ophelia; the "cases" are distinct.

In the scene there are many Shaksperian marks of style.

The construction in l. 20, "Be bold to ring the bell," recalls Temp., IV. i. 119: "May I be bold to call these spirits?" With "Dissolve, my life!" compare Lear, IV. iv. 19:—

"Lest his ungoverned rage dissolve the life
That wants the means to lead it."

The enumeration of suicidal agencies in connection with insanity,—

l. 29.

"Let not my sense unsettle, Lest I should drown, or stab, or hang myself,"

may be compared with Ariel's words:—

¹ Mad Folk of Shakspeare, p. 70. Discussed very similarly in Shakspeare's Medical Knowledge, p. 261.

“I have made you mad ;
And even with such-like valour, men hang and drown
Their proper selves.”—Temp., III. iii. 58.

Also with the present play :—

“Those that with cords, knives, drams, precipitance,

Been death's most horrid agents,” I. i. 142—144 selves”—which seems to be a reminiscence of the mad girl's fears as expressed in the passage first quoted (“Let not,” &c.).

Finally, I have to ask the reader to refer to Hickson's paper, pp. 42*, 43*, for some further considerations which I need not repeat here.

I have expressed the opinion that Fletcher has probably re- Has Fletcher speaker. I must confess that my uncertainty about Shakspeare's claim to the scene in its entirety is chiefly based upon a sense of indefiniteness in certain passages, and a doubt whether the closing incoherencies are natural. In the main the scene is Shaksperian.

preceding scenes for some illustrative quotations. One passage Fletcher's.
there quoted (p. 145) may be repeated here, as it opens a wide field of speculation about the relation of this play to that Masque of the Inner Temple and Gray's Inn, which was presented “in the Banqueting House at Whitehall, on Saturday, the 20th day of February, 1612” (O. S.). In this Masque we have a stage direction, setting A clue to the forth the particulars of a dance, which must have either been borrowed from, or imitated by, that in the Two Noble Kinsmen. This direction has been written for the printed copy after the performance. It may be that Fletcher both wrote the Masque and finished the Two Noble Kinsmen at about the same time, and introduced the dance into the Masque for private, and the play for public, representation. The description is as follows:—"The second Anti-masque rush in, dance their measure, and as rudely depart; consisting of a Pedant, May Lord, May Lady; Servingman, Chambermaid; a Country Clown or Shepherd, Country Wench; an Host, Hostess; a He-Baboon, She-Baboon; a He-Fool, She-Fool, ushering them in. All these persons, apparelled to the life, the Men issuing out of one side of the boscage, the Women from the other. The music was extremely well fitted, having such a spirit of country jollity, as can hardly be imagined; but the perpetual laughter and applause was above the music.

"The dance likewise was of the same strain; and the dancers OR RATHER ACTORS, expressed every one their part so naturally and aptly, as when a man's eye was caught with the one, and then past on to the other, he could not satisfy himself which did best. It pleased his Majesty to call for it again at the end, as he did likewise for the first Anti-masque; but one of the statues by that time was undressed."¹ suppositions.

i.

Now that quotation strongly favours two suppositions. I have marked the words, "or rather actors," because they seem to show that this Anti-masque was presented by "his Majesty's servants," the company named on the title-page of our play; but even omitting this suggestion, there can be no doubt about the identity of the representations.

i.

Secondly, notice that this dance was a great hit, was repeated by command at the end of the piece. If it had been known to the spectators, frequenters of the playhouse, by having been previously introduced during the representation of a play there, would it have been encored at Whitehall, or even so provocative as it was of "perpetual laughter and applause"? Assuredly it would not.

This gives one more slight clue to the date. It puts the representation of the play back till after 20th February, 1612, that is, 1613, new style, and therefore near where I have conjectured it to be, July or August, 1613, shortly after the destruction of the Globe Theatre. See the paragraph on Date of Composition.

§ 59. This scene is also Fletcher's work. As an example of his self-repetitions, compare—

" Hip. Sir, by our tie of marriage,— Emil. By your own spotless honour,— Hip. By that faith, That fair hand, and that honest heart you gave me,— Emil. By that you would have pity in another, By your own virtues infinite,— Hip. By valour, By all the chaste nights I have ever pleased you,— Thes. These are strange conjurings !"	Conclusion. § 60. Here we have the description of the mad girl floating on the lake, making the flower-posies and singing her snatches of song ; an imitation obviously of the flower-scene and death of Ophelia. But we must beware of confusing this imitation of "the circumstances of Ophelia's death" with an imitation of the character of Ophelia ; as Hickson shows, there is undeniably the former, but certainly not the latter. This error has become stereotyped ; it will probably live side by side with its refutation for many a day.

§ 61. With the contemplation of the pictures in this scene, "Fletcher's masterpiece," we may contrast Timon, I. i. 30—38 ; Hamlet, III. iv. 53—63 ; Lucrece, 1366—1561, and compare the Lover's Progress, I. ii. sp. 15, where a rich 'heir,' Madam Olinda, has to choose between two rival lovers.

“Olinda. I thus look
 With equal eyes on both ; either deserves
 A fairer fortune than they can in reason
 Hope for from me ; from Lidian I expect,
 When I have made him mine, all pleasures that
 The sweetness of his manners, youth, and virtues,
 Can give assurance of ; But turning this way
 To brave Clarangè, in his face appears
 A kind of majesty which should command,
 Not sue for favour.” &c.

The whole scene is full of echoes of the Two Noble Kinsmen.¹
 A collection of Fletcher's allusions to the eye would fill many pages. Here the description of Palamon,

l. 27.

“ of an eye as heavy
 As if he had lost his mother,” resembles somewhat an expression in The Double Marriage, III.

 ii. :—

“ That's an Englishman ;
 He looks as though he had lost his dog.”

See below, § 113, for some important remarks by Mr. Swinburne on this scene.

Act. IV. sc. iii.

§ 62. I cannot do better than quote my words, written five years ago, as an introduction to the discussion of this scene :—

My first view—
 all by Shakspeare.

On the way in which we determine the authorship of this scene (with Act II. sc. i. and Act III. sc. ii.), must depend our view of Shakspeare's share in the play as a whole. But—as Spalding (p. 58) lays down—“ In truth, a question of this sort is infinitely more easy of decision where Fletcher is the author against whose claims Shakspeare's are to be balanced, than it could be if the poet's supposed assistant were any other ancient English dramatist. . . . When Fletcher is Shakspeare's only competitor, . . . we are not compelled to reason from difference in degree, because we are sensible of a striking dissimilarity in kind.”
 In continuation therefore of the principle—that the underplot is entirely from one hand—which he assumed in order to prove, Spalding, without a single word of criticism, gives this scene to Fletcher; but Hickson—and let no one refuse to accept his judgment without a careful weighing of his arguments—confidently declares Shakspeare to be the author. Be it Shakspeare's or another's, can any one read by themselves the scenes composing the underplot without feeling satisfied that we have here the very thing Spalding describes, an absolute dissimilarity in kind, and not a merely relative difference in degree? (v. N. S. S. Trans., 1874, pt. i. pp. 45*—50*). Notes, p. 155.

¹ Compare the Lover's Progress, I. ii. speeches 3 and 17, with Two Noble Kinsmen, III. vi. 275 ; sp. 19, 21, with III. vi. 239 ; sp. 27, with III. vi. 289 ; sp. 71, with IV. ii. 104, 136, III. vi. 85 ; sp. 73 (“ what a lane he made ”), with I. iv. 19 (“ make lanes in troops aghast ”).

Further consideration has made me modify the opinion there expressed: I now believe that Shakspeare wrote most of the scene, but that Fletcher has interpolated some passages.

Modified opinion: Shakspeare with touches by Fletcher.

The scene is very interesting as showing Shakspeare's humane and rational opinion as to the treatment of insane patients, so much in advance of a time when "a dark house and a whip"—gloomy isolation, heavy fetters, privation of food, and severe flogging—were the remedies employed by the most enlightened physicians.¹

Shakspeare's treatment of the insane.

The Doctor in this scene will bear comparison with any of the other doctors in Shakspeare's plays; compare him in particular with those in Lear and Macbeth; and also refer to those in Romeo and Juliet, Pericles (Cerimon), Merry Wives, Henry VIII. (Dr. Butts), and Cymbeline.

Doctor.

The sleep-walking scene in Macbeth is perhaps the most important in this connection. There, as here,² we have a Doctor watching a patient who is unconsciously betraying the cause of her disorder.

Lady Macbeth.

The similarity of the precedent facts prevent us from ascribing

² Observe the small outbreak of professional enthusiasm with a good "case:" "How prettily she's amiss! note her a little further." This illustrates that mental bias, that "professional habit of mind," which characterizes Shakspeare's medical men; or, as Dr. Bucknill (Shakspeare's Medical Knowledge, pp. 4, 5,) defines it further: that "sidelong growth of mind which special training impresses."

Having had to form an opinion on the question of a particular author's delineation of insanity, I have tried to atone for my laymanship by studying such books as seemed to bear on the subject, especially Dr. Bucknill's two works, several times referred to.

Fletcher's touch
suspected.

resemblances to imitations, although there are some features in this scene which greatly diminish my sense of certainty that it is all Shakspeare's work.

i. In the first place, I feel inclined to doubt whether the speaker's unconsciousness of being listened to is not as unnatural and improbable here as it is natural and probable in a case of somnambulism; though to this may be answered that Shakspeare implies its probability in the Queen's ejaculation to Hamlet: "this is the very coinage of your brain; this bodiless creation ecstasy is very cunning in." The circumstances which provoke these words of the Queen's are not unlike those which here make the Doctor exclaim: "How her brain coins!"

ii. Next, it may be said that the Doctor's declaration: "she has a perturbed mind, which I cannot minister too," is contradicted by the fact that he does minister to it; but perhaps it will be a sufficient explanation of this to take the Doctor to mean that it is nature and not the physician who must cure such disorders: "therein the patient must minister to" herself.¹

iii. But setting aside these questions as hypercritical, the third objection remains, that the song of which the burthen was Down-a, down-a, refers to the Fletcherian portion (III. v. 140), and must therefore have been interpolated by Fletcher, unless we prefer the opposite (and less tenable) supposition that Fletcher introduced the song there to suit the girl's statement here, a view which might be backed by pointing out that Fletcher's hedge-schoolmaster, Gerrold, is not the same as the mad girl's "Geraldo, Emilia's schoolmaster."

In any case, these words seem a very suspicious echo of Ophelia's (IV. v. 170): "you must sing a-down a-down, an you call him a-down-a. O, how the wheel [i. e. burden on't] becomes it!"

These considerations seem to give some little support to my theory that Shakspeare's draft scenes have been generally modified and interpolated by Fletcher. But nevertheless, the scene is in the main not Fletcher's. For one proof of this, we need only compare

The scene in the main not

i.

¹ It was common in those days for doctors to decline cases which they deemed incurable.

the Doctor here with the debased wretch in V. ii., to see that they are as distinct creations as are Marina and Boult in Pericles.

Again, it is most unlikely that the Shaksperisms in this scene ii. are merely stolen scraps, for they harmonize quite naturally and fully with their surroundings, and resemble, not one scene or one play, but passages too widely scattered to be collected by any plagiarist, however skilful.

The Doctor's first inquiry—"Her distraction is more at some 1. 1. time of the moon than at other some, is it not?"—may have a double point, for lunar influences "affect women as well as lunatics,"¹ as Olivia knows when she says to Viola: "'t is not that time of moon with me, to make one in so skipping a dialogue" (I. v. 214).

The Gaoler's reply accurately describes the symptoms already noted in III. ii.: "She is continually in a harmless distemper; 1. 3. sleeps little; altogether without appetite, save often drinking; dreaming of another world and a better."

In the mad girl's second speech, we have the liver correctly referred to as the "seat of animal desire and of passion founded upon it:"² "we maids that have our livers perished, cracked to 1. 19. pieces with love;" so in Tempest, IV. i. 56; As You Like It, III. ii. 443; and Twelfth Night, II. iv. 101, &c.

The description of suicidal agencies, and the dread of suicide under the influence of mental derangement, have been noted with 1. 28. reference to III. ii. 29.

The "usurer's grease" reminds us of a somewhat similar hit in 1. 31. Winter's Tale, IV. iv. 266: "how a usurer's wife was brought to bed of twenty money-bags at a burden," and the tortures here enumerated recall Paulina's question: "What studied torments hast thou, tyrant, for me? What wheels, racks, fires? What flaying, boiling? In leads or oils?" (III. ii. 176).

As people will not hunt up references in these hurrying days, I must quote Mr. Hickson's remarks upon the girl's speech, ll. 35—41. Hickson's remarks on ll. 35—41. "The allusions here will remind the reader of the following passage in King Lear (IV. vi. 126): 'Down from the waist they are centaurs, though women all above; but to the girdle do the gods inherit; beneath is all the fiend's: there's hell, there's darkness, there's the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption.' The resemblance of the two quotations is striking, but rather in style or structure, which go to prove identity of writer, than in either sentiment or imagery. Comparing the women, who 'down from the waist are centaurs,' with the lords and courtiers who 'stand in ice up to the heart,' we may perceive that there is not one circumstance that is common to both images, and that the resemblance is entirely that of manner. Of the moral purpose of this scene we need hardly speak; but we must call attention to its peculiar fitness; the subject being the punishment awarded to deceit in love, and the indulgence of ungoverned passions,—both of these acting as causes of the disturbed state of mind of the speaker. It would hardly be straining probability to suppose, that the Doctor who attended the jailor's daughter was afterwards [? had been previously] called to King Lear and Lady Macbeth. His office is purely ministerial, and his purpose is to describe the state of mind of his respective patients; consequently, if by the same writer, no difference of character can be looked for. Similar states of mind, however, call for like expressions. Macbeth, we may recollect, says:—

'Canst thou not minister to a mind diseased?'

To which the Doctor replies,

'Therein the patient
Must minister to himself.'

The latter speaks, in another place, of Lady Macbeth's state, as 'A great perturbation in nature!'

l. 51. Our doctor says of his patient, in answer to a question from her father, 'I think she has a perturbed mind, which I cannot minister to.'

l. 43. "We may observe that he has called her disorder, 'not an engrafted madness, but a most thick and profound melancholy;' and he now proceeds to give his advice as to the means of recovering her."¹

¹ N. S. S. Trans., 1874, pt. i. pp. 49*, 50*.

Considering this explicit statement by the Doctor, it may be doubted whether we are justified in calling her mad at all. He ^{The "mad" girl.} calls her disorder "melancholy," what doctors now call melancholia—"most thick," excessively morbid, not "engrafted," superinduced by external influences.¹

The girl's fifth speech, ll. 44—48, is certainly more in Fletcher's ^{ll. 44—48.} style than Shakspeare's: I suspect it to be an interpolation. Compare it with two passages in Fletcher's part, III. v. 127 (silent hanging = arras), and III. iii. 33 (arbour = garden-house). The tone of the speech, too, is quite different from that of the other speeches in this scene.

The treatment which the Doctor recommends, is most judicious ^{The treatment pursued by the Doctor.} and humane. As "our foster-nurse of nature is repose" (Lear, IV. iv.), she is to be kept quiet; the dark room has its gloominess toned down; it is to be "a place where the light may rather seem to steal in than be permitted;" as music has often "holpe madmen to their wits" (Richard II., V. v. 62, cf. Pericles, III. ii.), they are to sing to her; her lover is to be gradually associated with the idea of Palamon in her mind, the "falsehood" (hallucination, delusion) being gently eliminated by guiding its vagaries to a new object. This treatment may—the Doctor has great hopes of it—"bring her to eat, to sleep, and reduce what's now out of square in her into their former law and regiment." Meanwhile, he will come in with his "appliance." What that application was, we never learn; ^{l. 87.} for in the play, as it stands, we see this Doctor's face no more.

To sum up, the difficulty in IV. iii. is to explain how—if ^{Summing up.} Fletcher wrote it he should have written it in prose, and so immeasurably better than the other mad scenes which are admittedly his; how he has here made the Doctor so professional, so intelligent, so homogeneous with Shakspeare's other mad doctors, and so utterly unlike the despicable pander who goes by the name of "Doctor" in V. ii.?

I cannot resist the general conclusion that Shakspeare has ^{Conclusion}

"Or if that surly spirit, melancholy,
Had baked thy blood and made it heavy-thick."

written much of the scene, that most of the expressions comparable with those in his other plays are self-resemblances, not imitations ; but that Fletcher has touched up and modified the scene, to make it nearer his own delineation of the mad girl.

Act V. sc. i. § 63. This, like the first scene of Act I., requires less demonstration for its authorship to be admitted than do the minor scenes of the play, but it is the more necessary to demonstrate that authorship to the full, as thereby we raise up a body of presumptive proof in the case of the less obviously Shaksperian portions.

Shakspeare,
except ll. 1—17,
by Fletcher.

Critics who admit Shakspeare's claim at all, are unanimous in assigning this and the last two scenes to him. At the same time, the view of Messrs. Skeat¹ and Swinburne, that Fletcher has completed and interpolated some passages in those scenes, must be admitted to be more scientifically correct.

Metre of ll. 1—
17, Fletcher's.

A most cursory examination of the metre will suffice to show that Fletcher wrote the exordium, ll. 1—17 (17 verse-lines, 13 'double-endings'), but we seem to hear Shakspeare with Palamon's address :—"The glass is running now that cannot finish till one of us expire." From this on, and especially in Arcite's and Emilia's prayers, "the tense dignity and pointedness of the language, the gorgeousness and overflow of illustration, and the reach, the mingled familiarities and elevation of thought, are admirable, inimitable, and decisive."²

l. 18 to end, Shakspeare.

Arcite's prayer. Following the method of comparison, we may note the resemblance of the line—

l. 49. "that with thy power hast turned Green Neptune into purple"

to Macbeth's

"No : this my hand will rather
The multitudinous seas incarnadine,
Making the green one-red" (II. ii. 62)

—and the recurrence of the phrase "green Neptune" in Winter's Tale, IV. iv. 28. There is quite a cluster of Shaksperisms in the passage :—

¹ Mr. Skeat suspects ll. 1—17, and some parts of the prayers of Palamon and Emilia, to be by Fletcher.

² Spalding, p. 47 (1st ed.) ; p. 45 (N. S. S. ed.).

“ Whose havoc in vast field
Unearthed skulls proclaim ; whose breath blows down
 The teeming Ceres' foison ; who doth pluck
 With hand armipotent from forth blue clouds
 The mason'd turrets.”

ll. 51—55.

Here we find havoc (as in Jul. Cæs., III. i. 273 ; John, II. i. 220) ; vast field (“vasty fields of France,” Henry V., prol. 12) ; unearthed (= unburied, just such a coinage as “earthed” = buried, in Temp., II. i. 234) ; the teeming Ceres' foison (Ceres, Temp., IV. 60, 75, 117, 167 ; “teeming foison,” Meas., I. iv. 43, &c.) ; armipotent (“the a. Mars,” L. L. L., V. ii. 650, may be from Chaucer, K. T., ll. 1124, 1583) ; from forth blue clouds the masoned turrets (based on Chaucer, l. 1605, “Myn is the ruen of the hihe halles, The fallyng of the toures and the walles,” but also echoing Temp., IV. 152—“cloud-capped towers”).

We come once more on the medical reference to Mars, “shaker l. 63. of o'er-rank states,” previously noticed on I. ii. The expression, l. 62. “enormous times,” like Lear’s “enormous state” (II. ii. 176), is remarkable. Palamon’s prayer is considered by Spalding to be inferior to the other two. This inferiority may be partly due to the subject, Mars and Diana being capable of more concrete supplication than Venus: the latter being conventional, suffers by comparison with the less commonplace petitions of Arcite and Emilia. Palamon's prayer.

The description of the old man and young wife seems to me to ll. 107—118. be an exaggeration, and to err on the side of forcible expression,¹ but it is undoubtedly in Shakspeare’s manner, and like his other descriptions of old age.

Compare sc. iv. ll. 6—9 of this act :—

“ we prevent
 The loathsome misery of age, beguile
 The gout and rheum, that in lag hours attend
 For grey approachers.”

¹ But tempora mutantur. What maiden would now use Perdita’s words :—

“ I would wish
 This youth should say 'twere well ; and only therefore Desire to breed by me.”—Winter's Tale, IV. iv. 103.

So in Measure for Measure, III. i. 31 :—

“Do curse the gout, serpigo, and the rheum,
For ending thee no sooner.”¹

Winter's Tale, IV. iv. 408 :—

“Is not your father grown incapable
Of reasonable affairs? is he not stupid
With age, and altering rheums? can he speak? hear?
Know man from man? dispute his own estate?
Lies he not bedrid? and again does nothing
But what he did being childish?”

Troilus, I. iii. 172-5 :—

“the faint defects of age
Must be the scene of mirth; to cough and spit
And with a palsy-fumbling on his gorget,
Shake in and out the rivet.”

Troilus, I. ii. 29—31 : “He is a gouty Briareus,” &c.

L 103.

I have already noted the inconsistency of Palamon's declaration : “I never at great feasts sought to betray a beauty,” with the confession of his amour in III. iii. 36. Contrast the metre with the speech given at foot, in which Fletcher evidently imitates this passage.² Palamon's declaration of his purity might have been put in the mouth of young Malcolm (Mc., IV. iii. 125) :—

“I am yet
Unknown to woman, never was forsworn,
Scarcely have coveted what was mine own,
At no time broke my faith, would not betray
The devil to his fellow, and delight
No less in truth than life.”

² “. . . I never called a fool my friend, a madman,
That durst oppose his fame to all opinions,
His life to dishonest dangers; I never lov'd him,
Durst know his name, that sought a virgin's ruin,
Nor ever took I pleasure in acquaintance
With men, that give as loose rein to their fancies
As the wild ocean to his raging fluxes,” &c.

Women Pleased, I. i. sp. 63.

§ 63-5. v. i. SHAKSPERE'S. v. ii. FLETCHER'S. v. iii. SH. & FL. 65*

Hickson (p. 32*) has pointed out the coincidence of sentiment between the words:—

“I never at great feasts
Sought to betray a beauty, but have blushed
At simpering sirs that did : I have been harsh
To large confessors, and have hotly asked them
If they had mothers? I had one, a woman,
And women 't were they wronged.”

l. 102—107.

And those of Troilus (V. ii.):—

“Let it not be believed for womanhood!
Think, we had mothers; do not give advantage
To stubborn critics, apt, without a theme,
For depravation, to square the general sex
By Cressid's rule : rather think this not Cressid.”

Somewhat similarly, Miranda says:—

“I should sin
To think but nobly of my grandmother;
Good wombs have borne bad sons.” (Temp., II. ii.).

Emilia's prayer is a magnificent piece of poetry. Her character Emilia's prayer. is here delineated by Shakspeare as that of a pure and modest vestal of Diana : though bride-habited, she is maiden-hearted, and guiltless of desire.

In the notes will be found two parallels to her description of Diana:—

“White as chaste, and pure
As windfann'd snow.” l. 139.

The fanciful epithet,

“our general of ebbs and flows,” recalls The Tempest, V. i. :—

“That could control the moon, make flows and ebbs.”

§ 64. One has only to compare this with Act IV. sc. iii. to see Act V. sc. ii.
Fletcher. that it is by a different and immeasurably inferior hand.

It is this scene in particular—as it is the basest—which has given rise to the undue depreciation of any potentialities of merit which may be in the underplot.

§ 65. This scene is partly by Shakspeare, but has been touched Act V. sc. iii.
Shakspeare with touches by Fletcher. by Fletcher, and perhaps by Beaumont also. Mr. Furnivall (pref. to Spalding, p. vi) makes very merry over Emilia's phrase:—

“ Arcite may win me ;
And yet may Palamon wound Arcite to

Arcite's figure. But the italicized words formerly meant more than they do now, being equal to saying, “ Palamon may incurably cripple Arcite, ”—surely not a pleasant prospect for a bride who has no option but to accept her winner, no matter how fragmentary his condition.

The word-play in l. 46 :—

Word-play.

is very Shaksperian, and the dramatic construction of the scene is especially worthy of his genius.

Splendour of dramatic description.

We should have to go back to the Greek stage to find any scene comparable with this in its substitution of pure description for the pomp and circumstance of the tourney. We realize the unseen conflict as vividly as if it were presented to our view.

Fletcher's
touches.

It may be heresy, but I think that Fletcher had a hand in the last forty lines ; ll. 105—114, and 136 to the end, are decidedly in his manner.

Act V. sc. iv.
ll. 1-11.

§ 66. An extraordinary resemblance may be traced between Palamon's speech and that of Postumus in prison (Cymb., V. iv.) :—

“ Most welcome bondage ! for thou art a way,
I think, to liberty: yet am I better
Than one that's sick o' the gout ; since he had rather Groan so in perpetuity than be cured
By the sure physician, Death, who is the key
To unbar these locks, ” &c.

l. 8.

“ The gout and rheum that in lag hours attend For grey

“ I could be well content
To entertain the lag end of my life
With quiet hours, ”¹

and the word approachers, with Timon, IV. iii. 216.

§ 66. ACT V. SC. IV. SHAKSPERE, WITH LINES BY FLETCHER. 67*

The rare adjective unwappered is used here just as Shakspeare l. 10. employs the similar form wappered in Timon, IV. iii. 38.

In IV. i. we are told that Palamon has given a large sum of money to the marriage of the Gaoler's Daughter. Is that gift alluded to in l. 31 here?—

“Commend me to her, and, to piece her portion,
Tender her this.”

If so, these lines about the Gaoler's Daughter may have been, as Spalding says, inserted by Fletcher. The point is, however, open to doubt. Are ll. 23—38 interpolated by Fletcher?

It is curious to note that the description of the death of Arcite, which De Quincey thought in Shakspeare's finest style, seemed to Spalding “decidedly bad, but undeniably the work of Shakspeare.”

Remembering the descriptions of the horse in Venus and Adonis, and of Lamond's horsemanship in Hamlet (IV. vii. 86), we can well understand the zest with which Shakspeare would throw himself into this elaborate picture of the struggle between horse and rider; it contains some of his peculiar expressions,¹ and is deeply marked by his manner. But the speeches immediately following, ll. 84—98, are unmistakably from Fletcher's pen. However, we find the master-hand once more in the closing words of Theseus:— Arcite's death. Shakspeare and the horse. ll. 84—98 by Fletcher, rest of the scene Shakspeare.

“His part is played, and though it were too short,
He did it well; your day is lengthened, and
The blissful dew of heaven does arrose you:
The powerful Venus well hath graced her altar,
And given you your love; our master Mars
Hath vouch'd his oracle, and to Arcite gave
The grace of the contention; so the deities
Have showed due justice.”

ll. 102—109.

Theseus, blessing Palamon and Emilia, says that the beneficent dew of heaven sprinkles their marriage: “The blissful dew of Marriage blessings.

Society in general and myself in particular. This being so, I now wish that my zeal for minute accuracy had not led me to be so outspoken about some little defects in Mr. Skeat's edition. Experience has taught me that perfect accuracy is not to be found in any book.

¹ E. g. disseat, a word which confirms the folio reading (dis-eate) in Macbeth, V. iii. 21.

heaven does arrose you." Closely related are the words of Prospero, when, speaking also of marriage, he says that if Ferdinand wrong Miranda, the dewy blessings of heaven shall not besprinkle their union :

" No sweet aspersion shall the heavens let fall
To make this contract grow."

The resemblances here are very striking ; in each case the idea being that heaven bedews a marriage with blessings. Note the Romanticisms, arrose (Qo. arouse, O. F. arrouser), and aspersion.

Most of the preceding parallels from late plays.

Throughout my collection of parallels it will have been noted how few have been drawn from the early or even second period plays : all the closer self-reproductions are traced from the last two groups, and especially from the plays of the fourth period. For instance, the foregoing close parallel between this play and The Tempest.¹

The solemn reflections of Theseus at the close :—

ll. 132—4.

" For what we lack, we laugh ;
For what we have, are sorry ; still Are children in some kind," recall the melancholy words of his brother duke in Measure for Measure :—

" Happy thou art not ;
For what thou hast not, still thou striv'st to get,
And what thou hast, forgett'st."

Epilogue.

§ 67. By Fletcher.

Date of composition.

§ 68. We have no external evidence to fix the date. There are, however, several internal indications which place the Shaksperian portion about 1609, and the Fletcherian portion about 1613.

Metrical evidence puts Shakspeare's sketch about 1609.

The metrical evidence, and the self-reproductions from Cymbeline, Tempest, and Winter's Tale, place the Shaksperian part in 1609 or 1610.

Evidence for Fletcher's completion, in 1613.

The date of completion (or rather, first representation, which is

¹ This is not a further parallel from the Fletcherian portion of Henry VIII. (IV. ii. 133), for there is no reference to marriage here :—

" The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings on her."

But Fletcher evidently repeats himself in the following :—

" Blessings from heaven in thousand showers fall on you " (Rollo, II. iii.).

§ 68. TWO NOBLE KINSMEN FINISHED AND ACTED IN 1613. § 69. 69*

generally much the same thing) may be conjectured from some very slender indications which I have collected.

First, note that the prologue was intended for a first representa- Prologue.
tion of the play (l. 16); then, that the writer refers to some severe i.
losses which the company had recently sustained: "our losses fall ii.
so thick, we must needs leave." Surely this must refer to the burning of the Globe theatre on June 29th, 1613?

When did the Company's losses fall so thick as about that time?

There is a curious plagiarism from Act I. sc. i. l. 118:

Honest Man's Fortune.

"Extremity, that sharpens sundry wits, Makes me a fool,"

in Beaumont and Fletcher's play (the Beaumont part) of The Honest Man's Fortune, III. i:—

"Cunning Calamity,
That others' gross wits uses to refine,
When I most need it, dulls the edge of mine."

This supplies a terminus ad quem, for The H. M. F. was acted in 1613 (v. Notes, p. 117).

And we are given a terminus a quo by the imitation in III. iv. *Masque of Inner of the Masque of the Inner Temple and Gray's Inn, as shown above in my remarks on that scene, § 58.

Thus the Fletcherian part may be assigned to 1613, and the first representation to July or August of that year.

As it was during the performance of Henry VIII. that the Globe had been burned, there would be a peculiar significance in this allusion to "our losses" by Fletcher when introducing another "new play" at the remaining theatre of His Majesty's servants: the Blackfriars.

This is a very slight basis on which to build up an hypothesis of the date, but it is better than none.

§ 69. I originally intended to reprint here a complete catena of all preceding criticisms and opinions concerning the play; but <sup>History of opinion.</sup> having written out a considerable number, I found that such an undertaking would swell the Introduction to more than double its present size. I have therefore only given a list of references to the writings of the various critics who have pronounced upon this play, and summarised or quoted their opinions (without adducing their arguments, if any) upon the question of authorship.

Langbaine. § 70. Gerard Langbaine (1656—1692) in his list of Beaumont and Fletcher's plays, p. 215 of An account of the English Dramatick Poets, 1691, calls our play "a Tragi-Comedy," and says that it "was written by Mr. Fletcher and Mr. Shakespear." See Bibliography, prefixed to Qo. Reprint, p. vii.

Ed. 1711. § 71. Tonson's ed. of B. and F. 1711, gives Langbaine's opinion above quoted, vol. I. p. xxxix.

Pope. § 72. Alexander Pope (1688—1744), preface to Plays: "We may conclude him (Shakspeare) to be no less conversant with the ancients of his own country; from the use he has made of Chaucer in Troilus and Cressida, and in the Two Noble Kinsmen, if that play be his, as there goes a tradition it was (and indeed it has little resemblance to Fletcher, and more of our author than some of those which have been received as genuine)."

Warburton. § 73. William Warburton (1698—1779) says:—"the whole first Act of Fletcher's Two Noble Kinsmen" was written by Shakspeare, "but in his worst style." Pope and W.'s ed. vol. I. at end of Table of Editions.

Ed. 1750. § 74. Seward in his preface undertakes to "prove that either Shakespeare had a very great hand in all the acts of this play, particularly in the whole charming character of the Jailor's daughter, or else that Fletcher more closely imitated him in this than in any other part of his works." Act I. sc. i. he gives to Fletcher. Act I. sc. iii., the Flavina speech, is "probably Shakespeare's, and in his Second, if not in his very Best manner." The prison scene between the Kinsmen (II. ii.) is more worthy of Shakspeare than any part of Act I. "It is in Shakespeare's second-best manner, or in Fletcher's best." The Gaoler's Daughter, from her likeness to Ophelia, is either by Shakspeare, or "Fletcher has here equalled him in his very best manner." Act V. sc. i. may have been by Sh. and F. jointly.

Gerrold and his rout he assigns to Fletcher, on account of the Latinisms. Act V. sc. iii.—the combat scene—he thinks too like the Greek plays to be by Shakspeare.

§ 75. Richard Farmer (1735—1797), Appendix to Shakspeare, Farmer. 1773, holds that Shakspeare had a hand in the play. He has not examined the question at any length. See my notes, p. 134.

§ 76. Colman “cannot find one plausible argument for as- Ed. 1778. cribing to Shakspeare any part of the Two Noble Kinsmen,” and thinks it is by Beaumont and Fletcher.

§ 77. George Steevens (1786—1800), Shakspeare's plays by Steevens. Johnson, Steevens, and Reid, vol. xxi., note to Pericles, pp. 401—8, has a long dissertation, with many verbal parallels, to show that Fletcher alone wrote this tragedy, “in silent imitation” of Shakspeare. See also vol. xvii. p. 177.

§ 78. Edmond Malone (1741—1812), Sh. by Boswell, vol. iii. Malone. p. 303, referring to the palamon and arsett of 1594, says: “On this play the Two Noble Kinsmen was probably founded.”

§ 79. August Wilhelm von Schlegel (1767—1845), Lectures on Schlegel. Dramatic Art, translated by John Black, vol. ii. pp. 309—312, calls the play “the joint production of Shakspeare and Fletcher.” . . . “The first Acts are most carefully laboured; afterwards the piece is drawn out in an epic manner to too great a length; the dramatic law of quickening the action, towards the conclusion, is not sufficiently observed. The part of the daughter of the jailor, whose insanity is artlessly conducted in pure monologues, is certainly not Shakspeare's; for, in that case, we must suppose him to have had an intention of arrogantly imitating his own Ophelia.”¹ For Tieck's opinion, v. § 87. Weber. pp. 151—169:—“The supposition of Warburton, that the first act was his [Shakspeare's], is supported strongly by internal evidence; but few will agree with his ipse dixit, that it is written in Shakspeare's worst manner. The second act bears all the marks of Fletcher's style. Of the third, I should be inclined to ascribe the first scene to Shakspeare, and in the fourth, the third scene, which is written in prose; while the other scenes in which the madness of the Jailor's Daughter is delineated, are in verse, according to the usual practice of Fletcher. The entire last act, perhaps, with the exception of the fourth scene [i. e. sc. ii.; Weber divided Act V. sc. i. into 3 scenes], strongly indicates that it was the composition of Fletcher's illustrious associate."

Lamb. § 81. Charles Lamb (1775—1834), Dramatic Poets, vol. ii. pp. 78-9:—Act II. sc. ii. (window scene) "bears indubitable marks of Fletcher; the two which precede it [Act I. sc. i. the three queens, and sc. iii. Flavinia] give strong countenance to the tradition that Shakspeare had a hand in this play. The same judgment may be formed of the death of Arcite, and some other passages, not here given. They have a luxuriance in them which strongly resembles Shakspeare's manner in those parts of his play where, the progress of the interest being subordinate, the poet was at leisure for description."

Shelley. § 82. Percy Bysshe Shelley (1782—1822), Letter to Mary Shelley, 20th August, 1818 (Essays, Letters from abroad, &c., vol. ii. p. 107):—"I have been reading the 'Noble Kinsmen,' in which, with the exception of that lovely scene to which you added so much grace in reading to me, I have been disappointed. The Jailor's Daughter is a poor imitation and deformed. The whole story wants moral discrimination and modesty. I do not believe that Shakspeare wrote a word of it."

Hazlitt. § 83. William Hazlitt (1778—1830), Elizabethan Literature, p. 121:—"it appears to me that the first part of this play was written in imitation of Shakspeare's manner [by Beaumont and Fletcher]; but I see no reason to suppose that it was his, but the common tradition, which is, however, by no means well established. The subsequent acts are confessedly Fletcher's, and the imitations of Shakspeare which occur there (not of Shakspeare's manner as differing from his, but as it was congenial to his own spirit and feeling of nature) are glorious in themselves, and exalt our idea of the great original which could give birth to such magnificent conceptions in another. The conversation of Palamon and Arcite in prison [II. ii.] is of this description; the outline is evidently taken from that of Guiderius, Arviragus, and Belarius in Cymbeline, but filled up with a rich profusion of graces that make it his own again." . . . "The jailor's daughter, who falls in love with Palamon, and goes mad, is a wretched interpolation in the story, and a fantastic copy of Ophelia." . . . "The story of the Two Noble Kinsmen is taken from Chaucer's Palamon and Arcite; but the latter part, which in Chaucer is full of dramatic power and interest, degenerates in the play into a mere narrative of the principal events, and possesses little value or effect."

§ 84. Samuel Taylor Coleridge (1772—1834), Literary Remains, S. T. Coleridge, vol. II. pp. 320-1 :—"On comparing the prison scene of Palamon and Arcite, Act II. sc. ii., with the dialogue between the same speakers, Act I. sc. ii., I can scarcely retain a doubt as to the first act's having been written by Shakespeare. Assuredly it was not written by B. & F. I hold Jonson more probable than either of these two. The main presumption, however, for Shakespeare's share in this play rests on a point, to which the sturdy critics of this edition (and indeed all before them) were blind,—that is, the construction of the blank verse, which proves beyond all doubt an intentional imitation, if not the proper hand, of Shakespeare. Now, whatever improbability there is in the former (which supposes Fletcher conscious of the inferiority, the too poetic minus-dramatic nature of his versification, and of which there is neither proof nor likelihood), adds so much to the probability of the latter. On the other hand, the harshness of many of these very passages, a harshness unrelieved by any lyrical inter-breathings, and still more the want of profundity in the thoughts, keep me from an absolute decision."¹ *v. Spalding.

§ 86. William Spalding (1809—1859). Letter on Shakspeare's Authorship, &c., reprinted by the New Shakspeare Society. Spalding rejected Shakspeare's claim to any part of the underplot. His division of the play has been given above, § 13. But see Leopold Shakspeare, pref. p. xcvi, and Mr. Furnivall's "Forewords to N. S. S. reprint of Spalding's Letter."

Knight.

§ 87. Charles Knight (1791—1873), Studies of Shakspeare, pp. 428—447, holds that Fletcher wrote the scenes which are ordinarily ascribed to him (as by Spalding), but that the non-Fletcherian portion was the work of George Chapman. Knight quotes the opinion of Ludwig Tieck (1773—1853), which I may give here (Alt-Englisches Theater, oder Supplemente zum Shakspeare):—"I have never been able to convince myself that a single verse has been written by Shakspeare. The manner, the language, the versification, is as thoroughly Fletcher as any other of his pieces," &c. (Knight, Studies, p. 442.)

Tieck.

H. Coleridge.

§ 88. Hartley Coleridge (1796—1849), Essays and Marginalia, vol. ii. pp. 137—8 :—"There is a dialogue of maiden friendship in the Two Noble Kinsmen so like this [Midsummer Night's Dream, 'Lo, she is one of the confederacy,' III. ii.], that many have ascribed it to Shakspeare. But it was not Shakspeare's way to emulate himself. The resemblance of this scene is primâ facie evidence that it is not Shakspeare's. It is, besides, quite in the best manner of Fletcher, who, when he was not lazy, generally did his best, said all the good things that could be said on a given subject without much caring whether the occasion justified them or not. Hence Fletcher is much less injured by discription than Shakspeare. A quoted passage of Fletcher may be thoroughly understood with very little previous explanation. But Shakspeare's best things are absolutely slandered when separated from the context. In the present case, Emilia's description of her own affection to Flavia [Flavina] is a better piece of writing than Helena's reproach of Hermia; but it is a deliberate piece of good writing, an ornate wax taper ceremoniously consecrated at the shrine of female friendship, whereas Helena's speech is the quick combustion of love and anger. Still it must be confessed that if Fletcher did write the speech of Emilia, he has imitated Shakspeare's diction and versification very closely.

I. iii.

"P. S. I am now convinced that the scene in the Two Noble Kinsmen is Shakspeare's." See also Essays and Marginalia, vol. i. p. 362.

§ 89. George Darley, preface to Weber's text of B. & F. ^{Darley.} (Moxon, 1839), says:—"Shakspeare has been deemed part-author, with Fletcher, of the Two Noble Kinsmen, from a superiority to Fletcher's usual style, and a resemblance to Shakspeare's. Imitation of the latter poet by the former might account in some degree for both these facts, if such; a lower artist imitating a higher, will often surpass himself; he makes a greater effort, and has a nobler model, than usual. The other Fine Arts offer frequent examples of this. But it is quite possible, also, that Shakspeare may have contributed towards the Two Noble Kinsmen. Not only are several speeches (vide Act V. scs. i., ii., iii. [i. e. V. i.]) after his 'enormous' style of conception, but his enormous style of handling or [? and] versification, so different from Fletcher's. Palamon [read Arcite] supplicates the statue of Mars," &c., p. xlii.

§ 90. Alexander Dyce (1798—1869) has expressed several ^{Dyce.} opinions on the play. See above, § 5, and Dyce's prefaces to his various editions of this play. Dyce began by denying Shakspeare any share in the composition, but ended by accepting the conclusions of Spalding's Letter.

§ 91. Henry Hallam (1777—1859), Literature of Europe, vol. ^{Hallam.} iii. p. 598, sees "imitations of Shakspeare rather than such resemblances as denote his powerful stamp. The madness of the jailor's daughter, where some have imagined they saw the master-hand, is doubtless suggested by that of Ophelia, but with an inferiority of taste and feeling, which it seems impossible not to recognize. The painful and degrading symptom of female insanity, which Shakspeare has touched with his gentle hand, is dwelt upon by Fletcher with all his innate impurity. Can anyone believe that the former would have written the last scene in which the jailor's daughter appears on the stage [V. ii.]?"

Quarterly Review.

§ 92. Quarterly Review, vol. 83, pp. 403—7, on Dyce's B. & F., Sept. 1848, gives a convenient resumé of the opinions previously expressed. "We have a hideous Ophelia in the Jailer's Daughter, the clowns are like those in the Midsummer Night's Dream, and the schoolmaster resembles Holofernes . . ." "We confess it seems to us less unlikely that Fletcher produced the main body of the drama, and obtained help from his great contemporary in the subordinate passages; or, which we incline to believe—for we think that, in the absence of positive or strong outward evidence, these questions of authorship cannot be positively determined—that he wrote the whole himself."

Gervinus.

§ 93. Georg Gottfried Gervinus (1805—1871), Sh. Commentaries, vol. ii. p. 504 (trans. by F. E. Bunnett):—"We are, therefore, of Staunton's opinion, who would as little impute to Shakespeare a share in this as in any of the plays falsely awarded to him."

Staunton.

Mitford.

§ 94. John Mitford (1831—1859), Cursory Notes on various passages in the Text of B. & F.:—"He [Theseus, referring to the speech in Act I.]¹ thus confesses his weakness, and feels that the moral balance of the affections had been disturbed, and the power of nature oppressed and injured by the force of the various conflicts to which they had been unequally exposed. It is indeed a speech, that in its reflective and philosophical sentiments bears the impress of Hamlet's character, and marks similar to those of Shakespeare's hand.² At least the varied and beautiful ground-work here laid might have heightened into a character of noble lights and shadows in the future scenes by the hand of a master; but it is subsequently so faded and lost sight of, that we may be inclined to believe the remainder of the play to have fallen into the hands of an inferior artist, who had not power to sustain the original conception; certainly a composition offering stronger contrasts of excellence and weakness, of natural powers and artificial effect, can perhaps seldom be found."

Hickson

§ 95. Samuel Hickson, in The Westminster and Foreign Quar-

² In this play, concerning the authorship of which there is so much variety of opinion, I certainly am inclined to agree with Mr. Hallam in seeing imitations of Shakespeare rather than such resemblances as denote his powerful stamp.

terly Review for April, 1847, reprinted in N. S. S. Trans. for 1874, Appendix, p. 25*.

Hickson's division has been given above, § 13. With Spalding's Letter, his paper should be read by all students of the play.

§ 96. Samuel Weller Singer (1783—1858) seems to have Singer. admitted Shakspeare to a share in the play, but has evidently given the subject no attention. See above, § 49.

§ 97. Mr. James Spedding, letter from Gentleman's Magazine, Spedding. reprinted in N. S. S. Trans., 1874, App. p. 21.

Also note at p. 18, approving of Hickson's theory with regard to the underplot.

§ 98. Sidney Walker, Critical Examination of the Text of Shake- Walker. spere, i. 227, ii. 75, gives all act I. and act V. sc. i. to Shakspeare.

§ 99. Dr. Clement Mansfield Ingleby, Complete View of the Ingleby. Shakespeare Controversy, 1861, p. 16:—"In the same year (1623) his fellows, Heminge and Condell, issued the first folio edition of his plays complete, with the exception of Pericles and the Two Noble Kinsmen, of considerable parts of which he was unquestionably the author." See also Sh., the Man and the Book, pt. i., p. 61.

§ 100. Rev. F. G. Fleay confirms Hickson's division by metrical Fleay. tests, Sh. Manual, p. 52, but forgets here to give the two prose scenes, II. i. and IV. iii., to Shakspeare as he had done in N. S. S. Trans., 1874, App. p. 61.

§ 101. Professor A. W. Ward, English Dramatic Literature, Ward. vol. i. p. 466, reviews some of the leading theories, and inclines to Collier's view,¹ "that Shakspeare remodelled an old play called Palamon and Arsett (1594), and that Fletcher afterwards produced another version, in which he retained all of Shakspeare's 'additions,' though 'tampering with them here and there.'" But on the whole, Professor Ward remains "sceptical with regard to" the opinion that the play was written conjointly by Shakspeare and Fletcher, vol. ii. p. 232. He refers to H. von Friesen's paper in Jahrb. for 1865 for H. von Friesen. other reasons against Shakspeare's claim.

¹ Prof. Ward, i. 466, wrongly ascribes this view to Dyce instead of Collier. A few lines down he also writes Dyce instead of Darley, quoting from the passage given by me in § 89.

78* § 102-108. OPINIONS ON THE AUTHORSHIP OF THE PLAY.

- W. C. Hazlitt. § 102. Mr. W. C. Hazlitt, Shakespeare's Library, vol. iv. p. 112, says:—"Assuming the first, and portions of the last, act to be Shakespeare's, we are perhaps authorized to assume that the poet died, leaving this much written, and that for the rest we are debtors to the pen of Fletcher."
- Delius. § 103. Professor N. Delius rejects the hypothesis that either Shakspeare or Fletcher had a hand in this play, and assigns it some hypothetical "Anonymus." See Jahrbuch d. d. Sh. Gesellschaft, vols. xii. and xiii., for a full exposition of the Professor's views.
- Abbott. § 104. Dr. E. A. Abbott, N. S. S. Trans., 1874, p. 76, quite believes with Mr. Fleay "that Shakspeare's part may be disentangled from the Fletcherian part of the Two Noble Kinsmen."
- Nicholson. § 105. Dr. B. Nicholson, in the same discussion (p. 78), agreed with Dr. Abbott's remarks.
- Simpson. § 106. Mr. Richard Simpson (p. 82) "wrote that he had read the Two Noble Kinsmen carefully, and agreed with Mr. Hickson and Mr. Fleay in their division of the play," but (p. 83) thought that "the speeches of Arcite in Act I. sc. ii. are Shakspeare's, and not Fletcher's, as Mr. Hickson contends, although they do contain rather over the Shaksperian average of double-ended lines."
- Ingram. § 107. Dr. John Kells Ingram, in his paper on 'The Light- and Weak-Ending Test,' N. S. S. Trans., 1874, pp. 442-464, comes to no definite conclusion about the authorship. His four objections I have taken above (§ 27) as the most convenient statement of the chief arguments against Shakspeare's claim, and to them I may now add his concessions:—"Still, it is certain that there is much in it that is like Shakspeare, and some things that are worthy of him at his best; that the manner, in general, is more that of Shakspeare than of any other contemporary dramatist; and that the system of verse is one which we do not find in any other, while it is, in all essentials, that of Shakspeare's last period. I cannot name any one else who could have written this portion of the play." (p. 454.)
- Dowden. § 108. Prof. Edward Dowden, Shakspeare Primer, p. 156, like Dr. Ingram, hesitates to express any very positive opinion, but says, "the Shakspeare portions of the play will repay a careful study. The characterisation may be faint, but there are animated pieces of dialogue, magnificent single speeches, and remarkable Shaksperian turns of expression and imagery. . . . The underplot of Fletcher, made up of indecency and trash in about equal proportions, is but slightly connected with the nobler portion of the drama. Shakspeare's portion was probably written before his latest fragment, that of Henry VIII. He was at that time abandoning dramatic authorship, and seems to have been willing that Fletcher should be the heir to his genius."

§ 109. Dr. Hermann Ulrici (b. 1806), Sh.'s Dramatic Art Ulrici. (transl. L. D. Schmidt, vol. ii. pp. 403—411), examines the play at some length, and concludes that it is by Fletcher in imitation of Shakspeare.

§ 110. Mr. F. J. Furnivall has had several opinions on the Furnivall. question of authorship. At first, carried away by Hickson's paper and the wave of metrical tests which inundated criticism in 1874, he accepted Hickson's division. But "the light that lies in woman's eyes"—"the cleverest and most poetic-natured girl-friend" (p. vii, Spalding), helped Mr. Furnivall to a second opinion. In his Forewords to the Society's reprint of Spalding (p. ix), he does not think the "evidence that Shakspeare wrote all the parts that either Prof. Spalding or Mr. Hickson assigns to him, at all conclusive. If it could be shown that Beaumont or any other author wrote the supposed Shakspeare parts, and that Shakspeare toucht them up, that theory would suit me best. It failing, I accept, for the time, Shakspeare as the second author, subject to Fletcher having spoilt parts of his conception and work."

In the Leopold Shakspeare, Introduction, p. xcix, Mr. Furnivall's "present feeling is to substitute 'some' for the word 'many' in the passage" to be next quoted, from § 111. Mr. J. Herbert Stack's paper appended to the Society's Stack. reprint of Spalding, p. 116:—"I should incline to the middle opinion,¹ that Shakspeare selected the subject, began the play, wrote many passages; had no underplot, and generally left it in a skeleton state; that Fletcher took it up, patched it here and there, and added an underplot; that Fletcher, not Shakspeare, is answerable for all the departures from Chaucer, for all the underplot, and for the revised play as it stands."

¹ I have to request owners of the Society's reprint of Spalding to cancel the note on p. 116 (with my initials): it is an extract from a private letter, not intended for publication, and written before I had made up my mind on the subject.—H. L.

Skeat.

§ 112. Prof. W. W. Skeat's division has been given above, § 13. Prof. Skeat thinks that Fletcher has touched up the speeches of Palamon and Emilia, and does "not feel convinced that we have Shakespeare's work in ll. 1—17, or much beyond l. 68" of Act V. sc. i. On the whole he accepts Hickson's division, though with some hesitation as regards III. ii., IV. iii., and certain parts of V. i. Prof. Skeat dates the play 1612. "It may be remembered that the date of our Authorised Version of the Bible is 1611; so that we may fairly suppose our play to have been nearly contemporaneous with the publication of that important Book" (p. xxi).

Swinburne.

§ 113. Mr. A. C. Swinburne, A Study of Shakespeare, pp. 93, 142, 215—220. "Among all competent scholars and all rational students of Shakespeare there can have been, except possibly with regard to three of the shorter scenes, no room for doubt or perplexity on any detail of the subject since the perfect summary and the masterly decision of Mr. Dyce [? Spalding]. These three scenes, as no such reader will need to be told or reminded, are the two first soliloquies of the Gaoler's Daughter after the release of Palamon, and the scene of the portraits, as we may in a double sense call it, in which Emilia, after weighing against each other in solitude the likenesses of the cousins, receives from her own kinsfolk a full and laboured description of their leading champions on either side. Even setting apart for once and for a moment the sovereign evidence of mere style, we must recognise in this last instance a beautiful and significant example of that loyal and loving fidelity to the minor passing suggestions of Chaucer's text which on all possible occasions of such comparison so markedly and vividly distinguishes the work of Shakespeare's from the work of Fletcher's hand. Of the pestilent abuse and perversion to which Fletcher has put the perhaps already superfluous hints or sketches by Shakespeare for an episodic underplot, in his transmutation of Palamon's love-stricken and luckless deliverer into the disgusting burlesque of a mock Ophelia, I have happily no need as I should certainly have no patience to speak." In a note, Mr. Swinburne adds: "Except perhaps one little word of due praise for the pretty imitation or recollection of his dead friend Beaumont rather than of Shakespeare, in the description of the crazed girl whose 'careless tresses a wreath of bullrush rounded, where she sat playing with flowers for emblems at a game of love and sorrow—but liker in all else to Bellario by another fountain-side than to Ophelia by the brook of death."

I have refrained from obtruding corrections upon the various opinions here briefly enumerated, but I must ask, are we to understand from the words "dead friend Beaumont" that Mr. Swinburne places the completion of this play after Beaumont's death, March 6th, 1616? If so, we might expect "dead friend Shakespeare" also, as he died on the 23rd of the succeeding month.

§ 114. I have to thank Miss Eleanor Marx for her great kindness in hunting up and transcribing in full the opinions and arguments of the critics named in the following §§:—72, 73, 74, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 84, 88, 92, 94, and 99. Thanks.

In addition to the acknowledgments already expressed (Bibliography, p. xii) to several gentlemen for their assistance, I have to renew my thanks to Mr. Furnivall for the care with which he has seen this part of my work through the press, and for the useful headings which he has placed to the pages. I am also indebted to him for many valuable suggestions, received from time to time, which I have embodied in my work.

§ 115. The Society has now a fairly complete Trial-Edition of this "Doubtful Play," including Bibliographical Preface, Literal reprint of the Quarto, Folio Collation, chief critical variations, revised text, copious notes, Introductory Dissertation on the three-fold subject of source, authorship, and date; synoptical History of Opinion, and Concordance to every important word in the play. Conclusion.

My final revisions of the text will be found in the Leopold Shakspeare.

For seven years I have had some part or other of this work on my hands, and have gradually got through it, amid great distractions and hindrances to continuous study. Palamon and Arcite have been my companions in many places: on the hills of Wicklow, in the Libraries of Trinity College, Dublin, and the British Museum, beneath the pines of the Black Forest, in the pleasant fields of Leicestershire, and amid the brighter surroundings of my Indian home.

Here, thanks to my wife's help, the Introduction and Concordance have been finished, at least two years sooner than without her aid would have been possible, and my task is done at last.

POSTSCRIPT.

I ADD here a few parallels to those given in my Introduction to the Two Noble Kinsmen, to illustrate coincidences of thought and expression between Shakspeare's undoubted works and that play.

(1) Othello, III. iii. 386 :

“ If there be cords, or knives,
Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams,
I'll not endure it.”

2 N. K., I. i. 142 :

“ Cords, knives, drams, precipitance.”

(2) Ant. and Cleopatra, IV. xiii. 161 :

“ as it determines, so
Dissolve my life.”

2 N. K., III. ii. 29 :

“ Dissolve my life.”

(3) Ant. and Cleopatra, V. ii. 231 :

“ And when thou hast done this chare.”

2 N. K., III. ii. 20 :

“ All's chared when he is gone.”

(4) Ant. and Cleopatra, II. i. 26 :

“ That sleep and feeding may prorogue his honour
Even till a Lethe'd dullness.”

{ 2 N. K., I. i. 196 :

“ Prorogue this business.”

{ 2 N. K., I. i. 159 :

“ his army full
Of bread and sloth.”

(5) 2 Henry IV., I. i. 192—200 :

“ My lord, your son had only but the corpse,
But shadows and the shows of men to fight ;
For that same word, rebellion, did divide
The action of their bodies from their souls ;
And they did fight with queasiness, constrained,
As men drink potions, that their weapons only
Seem'd on our side ; but, for their spirits and souls,
That word, rebellion, it had froze them up,
As fish are in a pond.”

{ 2 N. K., I. ii. 96; I. ii. 112.
 { 2 N. K., III. i. 66:

“Their valiant temper
 Men lose when they incline to treachery;
 And then they fight like compell'd bears,
 Would fly, were they not tied.”

(6) 2 Henry IV., II. iii. 21—32:

“he was indeed the glass
 Wherein the noble youth did dress themselves;
 He had no legs that practised not his gait,” &c.

(See passage.)

2 N. K., I. ii. passim; note l. 44:

“what need I
 Affect another's gait,” &c.

(7) Mid. Night's Dream, IV. i. 182:

“We'll hold a feast in great solemnity.
 Come, Hippolyta.”

2 N. K., I. i. 221:

“the feast's solemnity
 Shall want till your return.”

Especially weigh the following parallels:—

(8) Ant. and Cleopatra, III. iv. 12—20:

(Octavia) “A more unhappy lady,
 If this division chance, ne'er stood between,
 Praying for both parts:
 The good gods will mock me presently,
 When I shall pray, ‘O, bless my lord and husband!’
 Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud,
 ‘O, bless my brother!’ Husband win, win brother,
 Prays, and destroys the prayer; no midway
 'Twixt these extremes at all.”

2 N. K., V. i. 151—160.

(9) Sonnet cxlvii.:

“My love is as a fever, longing still
 For that which longer nurseth the disease;
 Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
 The uncertain sickly appetite to please.”

2 N. K., I. iii. 89:

“a sickly appetite
 That loathes even as it longs.”

☞ Since the publication of my text and notes, editions of the play by the Rev. H. N. Hudson and Mr. W. J. Rolfe have appeared in U.S. America. My finally-revised text (modern spelling) is in the "Leopold" Shaksperc. Where similar readings differ only in immaterial points of spelling or type, I have given this revised text spelling as in the oldest of the several editions; but in the Concordance I have modernised all spelling for simplicity of reference. The numbers of the lines in both Quarto Reprint and Revised Text are given when necessary. Thus, V. iii. 83/95 may be read: Act V., scene iii. line 83 in Revised text (metrical) line 95 in Reprint (literal).

THE NEW SHAKSPERE SOCIETY.

OBJECTS.

1. To do honour to Shaksperc.
2. To make out the succession of his plays, and thereby the growth of his mind and art.
3. To promote the intelligent study of him.
4. To print Texts illustrating his work and his times.

SUBSCRIPTION, One Guinea a Year (payable to the Hon. Sec.), which entitles the member to

1. Admission to the Meetings of the Society, including the Annual Musical Entertainment (see p. 5).
2. Copy of the "Monthly Abstract of Proceedings" (issued for the benefit of country members), and copies of all other papers, &c., issued by the Society.
3. The Society's Publications for the year (usually three volumes). N.B.—All back Publications are in stock, and can be had in their yearly sets, at a guinea a year; so that members wishing a complete set from the beginning can make it up at once or by degrees, as is most convenient to them (see p. 6).

THE FOUNDER'S PROSPECTUS OF NOV. 1873 (REVISED).

To do honour to SHAKSPERE¹, to make out the succession of his plays, and thereby the growth of his mind and art; to promote the intelligent study of him, and to print Texts illustrating his works and his times, this New Shaksperc Society was founded in the autumn of 1873.

It was then a disgrace to England, that while Germany could boast of a Shaksperc Society which had gathered into itself all its country's choicest scholars, England was then, and had for 20 years been, without such a Society. It was a disgrace, again, to England that even then, 257 years after SHAKSPERE's death, the study of him had been so narrow, and the criticism, however good, so devoted to the mere text and its illustration, and to studies of single plays, that no book by an Englishman existed which dealt in any worthy manner with SHAKSPERE as a whole, which tracked the rise and growth of his genius from the boyish romanticism or the sharp youngmanishness of his early plays, to the magnificence, the splendour, the divine intuition, which mark his ablest works. The profound and generous "Commentaries" of Gervinus²—an honour to a German to have written, a pleasure to an Englishman to read—was then the only book known to me that came near the true treatment and the dignity of its subject, or could be put into the hands of the student who wanted to know the mind of SHAKSPERE. (But this is so no longer. Thanks to the work of our new Society and some of its Members, we have at last, by English men, works dealing worthily with the development of our great English poet's art and mind.) I was from the first convinced that the unsatisfactory result of the long and painful study of SHAKSPERE by so many prior English scholars — several, men of great power and acuteness — arose mainly from a neglect of the only sound method of beginning that study, the chronological one.³ And this was why I founded the new Society on the basis of Shaksperc's chronology. Unless a man's works are studied in the order in which he wrote them, you cannot get at a right understanding of his mind, you cannot follow the growth of it. This had been specially brought home to me by my work at Chaucer. Until I saw that his Pity was his first original work, the key of his life was undiscovered; but that found, it at once opened his treasure-chest, the rest of the jewels he has left us were at once disclosed in their right array, the early pathetic time of his life made clear, its contrast with the later humorous one shown, and, for the first time these 470 years, the dear old man stood out as he was known in Wycliffe's time. Something of this

¹ This spelling of our great Poet's name is taken from the only unquestionably genuine signatures of his that we possess, the three on his will, and the two on his Blackfriars conveyance and mortgage. None of these signatures have an e after the k; four have no a after the first e; the fifth has the overline open-topt a (or u) which is the usual contraction for ra, but must here have been meant for re. The a and e had their French sounds, which explain the forms 'Shaxper', &c. Though it has hitherto been too much to ask people to suppose that SHAKSPERE knew how to spell his own name, I hope the demand may not prove too great for the imagination of the Members of the New Society.

² Miss Bunnett's translation, with an Introduction by myself, is published by Smith and Elder, 12s. Mr H. N. Hudson's 'Shakespeare: his Life, Art, and Character' (Sampson Low and Co.), with comments on twenty-five of his best Plays, is one of the best original commentaries of its kind in English that I know. Mrs Jamieson's Characteristics of Women (5s.) has some most subtle and beautiful studies of Shaksperc's chief woman-creations. See too Prof. Dowden's able and interesting Mind and Art of Shaksperc (12s.); his even more valuable Shaksperc Primer (1s.); Mr H. P. Stokes's Prize-Essay on the Chronology of Shaksperc's Plays (6s.). My own views of Shaksperc's four Periods, and the Groups of, and Links between, his Plays, are given in my Introduction to the Leopold Shaksperc, Cassell and Co., 10s. 6d.

³ The ordinary editions put the Plays higgledy-piggledy; often, like the Folio, beginning with Shaksperc's almost-last play, the Tempest, and then putting his third or fourth, the Two Gentlemen of Verona, next it. No wonder readers are all in a maze.

kind must take place in the mind of every one who will carefully and reverently follow SHAKSPERE'S steps on his way up to the throne of Literature, where he, our English poet, sits, the glory not of our land alone, but of the world.

Dramatic poet though SHAKSPERE is, bound to lose himself in his wondrous and manifold creations; taciturn "as the secrets of Nature" though he be; yet in this Victorian time, when our geniuses of Science are so wresting her secrets from Nature as to make our days memorable for ever, the faithful student of SHAKSPERE need not fear that he will be unable to pierce through the crowds of forms that exhibit SHAKSPERE'S mind, to the mind itself, the man himself, and see him as he was; while in the effort, in the enjoyment of his new gain, the worker will find his own great reward.

Fortunately for us, SHAKSPERE has himself left us the most satisfactory—because undesigned—evidence of the growth in the mechanism of his art, in the gradual changes in his versification during his life, changes that must strike every intelligent reader, and which I cannot at all understand the past neglect of. To cite only one such change, that from the sparing use of the unstopt line to the frequent use of it¹:—a test which, when applied to three of SHAKSPERE'S unripe, and three of his ripest (though not best) plays, gives the following result,—

Earliest Plays.	Proportion of unstopt lines to stopt ones.	Latest Plays.	Proportion of unstopt lines to stopt ones.
Loues Labour's Lost	1 in 18·14	The Tempest	1 in 3·02
The Comedy of Erroures	1 in 10·7	Cymbeline King of Britaine	1 in 2·52
The two Gent. of Verona	1 in 10·	The Winter's Tale	1 in 2·12

surely shows its exceeding value at a glance, though of course it alone is not conclusive. Working with this and other mechanical tests—such as Mr Spedding's, of the pause, of double endings (or redundant final syllables), of the weak ending in as, in, &c. (including light endings), the use of rymes, Alexandrines, &c.—we can (I said in 1873), without much trouble, get our great Poet's Plays into an order to which we can then apply the higher tests of conception, characterization, knowledge of life, music of line, dramatic development, and imagination, and see in how far the results of these tests coincide with, or differ from, those of the former ones; whether the conscious growth of power agrees or not with the unconscious change of verse.

Having settled this, we can then mark out the great Periods of SHAKSPERE'S work—whether with Gervinus and Delius we make Three, or, guided by the verse-test, with Bathurst, we make Four, or with other critics Five, and define the Characteristics of each Period.² We can then put forth a Student's Handbook to SHAKSPERE, and help learners to know him. But before this, we can lay hand on SHAKSPERE'S text, though here, probably, there will not be much to do, thanks to the labours of the many distinguished scholars who have so long and so faithfully workt at it. Still, as students, we should follow their method. First, discuss the documents: print in parallel columns the Quarto and Folio copies of such plays as have both, and determine whether any Quarto of

(Early) Loues Labour's lost, iv. 3 (p. 135, col. 1, Booth's reprint) (Late) The Tragedie of Cymbeline, iv. 2 (p. 388, col. 2, Booth's reprint)

Ber. O 'tis more then neede.
 Haue at you then, affections men at armes;
 Consider what you first did sweare vnto:
 To fast, to study, and to see no woman:
 Flat treason against the kingly state of youth.
 Say, Can you fast? your stomachs are too young:
 And abstinence ingenders maladies.
 And where that you haue vow'd to studie (Lords),
 In that each of you haue forsworne his Booke.
 Can you still dreame and pore, and thereon looke?
 For when would you, my Lord, or you, or you,
 Haue found the ground of studies excellence,
 Without the beauty of a womans face?
 From womens eyes this doctrine I deriue:
 They are the Ground, the Bookes, the Achadems,
 From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire.

Bel. No single soule
 Can we set eye on: but in all safe reason
 He must haue some Attendants. Though his H[um]or
 Was nothing but mutation, I, and that
 From one bad thing to worse: Not Frenzie, Not absolute madnesse could so far haue rau'd
 To bring him heere alone: although perhaps
 It may be heard at Court, that such as wee
 Caue heere, hunt heere, are Owt-lawes, and in time
 May make some stronger head, the which he hearing,
 (As it is like him) might breake out, and sweare
 Heel'd fetch vs in; yet is't not probable
 To come alone, either he so vndertaking,
 Or they so suffering: then on good ground we feare,
 If we do feare this Body hath a taile
 More perillous then the head.

² The doubtful Plays like Hen. VI, Titus Andronicus, Pericles (of which Mr Tennyson has convinced me that Shakspeare wrote at least the parts in which Pericles loses and finds his wife and daughter: see a print of them in the New Shakspeare Society's Transactions, Part. 1), The Two Noble Kinsmen (see West. Rev., April, 1847, and the second Paper in the Appendix to the New Shakspeare Society's Transactions, 1874, Part 1), &c., could be discussd here. The Plays just mentiond will be edited for the Society. The Sonnets and Minor Poems will be discussd in their chronological order with the Plays.

each Play, or the Folio, should be the basis of its text,¹ with special reference to Richard III. Secondly, discuss all the best conjectural readings, seeking for contemporary confirmations of them; and perhaps drawing up a Black List of the thousands of stupid or ingeniously fallacious absurdities that so-called emenders have devised. Thirdly, led by Mr Alexander J. Ellis, discuss the pronunciation of SHAKSPERE and his period, and the spelling that ought to be adopted in a scholars'-edition of his Plays, whether that of the Quartos or Folio,¹ or any of SHAKSPERE'S contemporaries. It is surely time that the patent absurdity should cease, of printing 16th- and 17th-century plays, for English scholars, in 19th-century spelling. Assuredly the Folio spelling must be nearer SHAKSPERE'S than that; and nothing perpetuates the absurdity (I imagine) but publishers' thinking the old spelling would make the book sell less. Lastly, we could (unless we then found it needless) nominate a Committee of three, two, or one, to edit SHAKSPERE'S Works, with or without a second to write his Life.

The above, the main work of the Society, will be done as in ordinary Literary and Scientific Societies, by Meetings, Papers, and Discussions; the Papers being shorter, and the Discussions much fuller, than in other bodies. The Society's first Meeting was held on Friday, March 13, 1874, at 8 P.M., at University College, Gower Street, London, W.C., as the Committee of the Council of the College have been good enough to grant the use of the College rooms to the New Shakspeare Society at a nominal charge, to cover the cost of gas and firing. Offers of Papers to be read at the Society's Meetings are wisht for, and should be made to the Director. The Papers read will be issued as the Society's Transactions, and will form Series 1 of the Society's Publications.

The second part of the New Shakspeare Society's work will be the publication of—2. A Series of SHAKSPERE'S Plays, beginning with the best or most instructive Quartos, both singly, and in parallel Texts with other sketch-Quartos or the Folio, when the Play exists in both forms; and when not, from the Folio only. This Series will include a. Reprints of the Quartos and first Folio; b. trial-editions of the whole of Shakspeare's Plays in the spelling of the Quarto or Folio that is taken as the basis of the Text. 3. A Series of the Originals and Analogues of Shakspeare's Plays, including extracts from North's Plutarch, Holinshed, and other works used by him; 4. A short Series of Shakspeare-Allusion Books, contemporary tracts, ballads, and documents alluding-to or mentioning SHAKSPERE or his works; 5. A Selection from the Contemporary Drama, from Garrick's Collection, &c.; 6. Works on Shakspeare's England, such as Harrison's celebrated Description of England, W. Stafford's Complaint, &c.; 7. A chronological Series of English Mysteries, Miracle-Plays, Interludes, Masks, Comedies, &c., up to Shakspeare's time; 8. Miscellanies, including (at Mr Tennyson's suggestion) some facsimiles of Elizabethan and Jacobite handwritings, to show what letters would be most easily mistaken by printers; and (at the late "George Eliot's" suggestion) reprints of last-century criticisms on SHAKSPERE, to show the curious variations in the history of opinion concerning him; besides other occasional works.

The Society's Transactions will be in 8vo; its Texts will be issued in a handsome quarto, the quarto for Members only; but as the Society's work is essentially one of popularization, of stirring-up the intelligent study of SHAKSPERE among all classes in England and abroad, all such publications of the Society as the Committee think fit, will be printed in a cheap form, for general circulation.

The Presidency of the Society will be left vacant till one of our greatest living poets sees that his duty is to take it.² A long list of Vice-Presidents is desired, men eminent in Literature, Art, Science, Statesmanship or rank, as well to do honour to SHAKSPERE, as to further the work of the Society on him. I hope for a thousand members—many from our Colonies, the United States, and Germany; so that the Society may be a fresh bond of union between the three great Teutonic nations of the world. I hope our New Shakspeare Society will last as long as SHAKSPERE is studied. I hope also that every Member of the Society will do his best to form Shakspeare Reading-parties, to read the Plays chronologically, and discuss each after its reading, in every set of people, Club or Institute, that he belongs to: there are few better ways of spending three hours of a winter evening indoors, or a summer afternoon on the grass. Branch Societies, or independent ones in union with us, should also be formed to promote these Readings, and the general study of SHAKSPERE, in their respective localities. To such Societies as wish it, proofs of the Papers to be read in London will be sent in advance, so that each such Society can, if it pleases, read at each of its Meetings the same Paper that is read at the Parent Society on the same night.

The Society will be managed by a Committee of Workers, with power to add to their number. The first Director will be myself, the Founder of the Society. Its Treasurer is S. L. Lee, Esq., 26, Brondesbury Villas, N.W.; its Honorary Secretary, Kenneth Grahame, Esq., care of ¹ In the first Trial-editions of the Plays in Quarto for the Society, the spelling of the text adopted as the basis of the edition, whether Quarto or Folio, will be followed.

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

THE Quarto, 1634, is here for the first time reprinted literally. The original arrangement of the text has been exactly followed, even to the division of the pages; and care has been taken to render this virtually a facsimile reproduction.

No Collation (properly so called) of the two earliest editions has hitherto appeared. Accordingly, in attempting one for the first time, I have been under the disadvantage of having no such predecessor as the Cambridge Shakespeare or Mr Furness' splendid Variorum to supply a test of the accuracy of my work.¹ This disadvantage I have tried to remedy by a very careful comparison of the proof-sheets with the original texts; and I trust that very few errors have escaped correction.

Indeed, I am almost disposed to fear censure for over-exactness in my Collation of the Folio (Appendix A); but a Collation (some scholars whose opinions are worth having agree in this) should be virtually a reprint, for what seems trivial to one reader may yet be of considerable service to another.

The following descriptive list includes most of the English Editions I have seen, all I have collated:—

I. QUARTO, 1634. The earliest extant or known edition of this play, here reprinted from Mr P. A. Daniel's copy. The text is evidently taken, as the directions and actors' names (e. g. pp. 14, 64, 80) shew, from the stage copy at the Blackfriars Theatre. It is noteworthy that between the two copies I have seen, viz. one belonging to P. A. Daniel, Esq. (kindly lent for the purposes of this reprint), and the other in the Library of Trinity College, Dublin,—there are several variations, one of which is important as clearing up an old editorial crux, and (still more so!) as explaining and establishing the Folio reading, doubted by Dyce.² One other variation is of some importance. I have collated the Daniel and T. C. D. quartos carefully, and find the following variations between them:

Daniel Qo: I. i. 179, I evy—I. ii. 77, glory on [no stop]³—I. iv. 20, succard—v. ii. 31, hon^{est},—58 He's a—59, Di'd you,—where the Dublin Qo (revised as the volume was being issued, probably), reads:—levy—glory on[;]—smeard—honest—He's a—Did you.³

¹ Mr Skeat's edition was not published until all my Collations of the other texts were completed, still it has been of some service to me in this way.

² I refer to I. iv. 20: Like to a paire of Lions, succard with prey (Daniel Qo.), where the folio reads smeard, and Dyce notes that the Qo. has succard; but Mr Skeat, using the Cambridge copies (and the Trin. Coll., Dublin, and Brit. Mus. copies are the same), reads: Like to a paire of Lions, smeard with prey, and therefore noted (p. 91) "Mr Dyce is wrong in stating that the quarto reads succard."

³ See Bacon's Essays, Appendix to the Notes, ed. W. A. Wright, M.A. Golden Treas. series, p. 359, for an interesting account of differences in old copies of the same edition.

2. FOLIO, 1679. The second folio edition of B. and F. Title : "Fifty Comedies and Tragedies written by {Francis Beaumont And John Fletcher,} Gentlemen. All in one Volume. Published by the Authors Original Copies, the Songs to each Play being added. Si quid habent veri Vatum præsagia, vivam. [Device] London, Printed by J. Maccok, for John Martyn, Henry Herringman, Richard Marriot, MDCLXXIX."

From the Preface—The Booksellers to the Reader—we learn that . . . "Besides, in this Edition you have the addition of no fewer than Seventeen Plays more than were in the former, which we have taken the pains and care to collect, and Print out of 4to in this Volume, which for distinction sake are markt with a Star in the Catalogue of them facing the first Page of the Book." . . . Accordingly we find which shews, as a collation of the texts clearly confirms, that the Folio text was taken from the Quarto ; and the revised Quarto, the reading smear'd tells us.

The numerous corrections are evidently the work of an intelligent compositor, who has removed misprints and modernised spelling as he went along. Traces of an editorial revision of the text are nowhere apparent, though the fact of a list of dramatis personæ being given would indicate that some little attention had been paid to the reprint. Hence for critical purposes the collation I have made is of small independent value ; nevertheless I have thought it deserving of a place at the end of the reprint : a thorough collation was needed, and had not hitherto been supplied. This collation, it may be added, gives some interesting illustrations of the progress which forty-five years had caused towards attaining a standard orthography. The e final (againé, etc.) is omitted ; -our (armour, etc.) generally altered to -or ; terminations in -les, -nes, etc. (careles, busines,) have the s doubled (more regard being had to uniformity than to etymology) ; and other similar modifications appear. I do not mean to affirm that the changes here indicated were introduced into all books of the period ; that the spelling had become fixed ; I only call attention to the noteworthy fact that in a reprint of a book published in 1634, there were in 1679 introduced certain changes of spelling which, with a few exceptions, are observed consistently throughout.

3. ED. 1711. B. and F. "in seven volumes.—Adorned with cuts.—Revised and Corrected : with some account of the life and writings of the Authors.—London : Printed for Jacob Tonson, at Shakespear's Head over-against Catherine-Street in the Strand. MDCCXI."

The prefatory "account" is little more than a combination of Dryden's note on Rymer's Tragedies of the Last Age, considered and examined (1673) ; and the passages in Gerard Langbaine's Account of the English Dramatick Poets (1691), relating to B. and F. This Preface cannot be considered accurate. For instance, the writer (p. xxvii) quotes 27 lines from Langbaine, in which extensive transcript he inserts one word, omits thirty-two, and substitutes for the word decease the word death. He then gives, without acknowledgment, an alphabetical list of B. and F.'s plays, almost verbally from Langbaine's list : the few additions to the older account being of no value.

The reference to our play is as follows :—" Two Noble Kinsmen, a Tragi-Comedy. This Play was written by Mr Fletcher, and Mr Shakespear. The Story is taken from Chaucer's Knight's Tale, which Mr Dryden has admirably put into modern English ; it is the first Poem in his Fables" (vol. I. p. xxxix). This—which is an unusually wide variation from Langbaine's "Two Noble Kinsmen, a Tragi-Comedy. This Play was written by Mr. Fletcher, and Mr. Shakespear." (p. 215)—gives no support to the tradition of Shakspeare's authorship beyond the inference that no contradiction of the tradition had been put forward. Langbaine is generally careful in his statements, and we may consider that he knew no reason for doubting the title-page of the Quarto, from which he probably derived his information. In the Preface, he tells us that he has given the reader "a large Account of the Title-page of each Play" which he has seen. His "large Account" of the 2 N. K. has been given above.

The text of this 1711 edition is taken from the Folio, and is quite worthless ; only one important var. lect. appears, viz., Tytlers for Tytlers, V. iii. 83/95. Strange to state, not one of the Editors have noticed the older reading ! all read tilters.

4. ED. 1750. B. and F. ten vols. "Collated with all the former Editions, and Corrected. With NOTES Critical and Explanatory. By The Late Mr THEOBALD, Mr SEWARD of Eyam in Derbyshire, and Mr SYMPSON of Gainsborough. LONDON, Printed for J. and R. TONSON, and S. DRAPER in the Strand .MDCCL."

This is the first so-called critical edition, with Introductions, Notes, &c., but the fact of the existence of these notes is rather to be regretted than otherwise (except perhaps as illustrating the ignorance of Elizabethan literature which prevailed in the last century), for the necessity has thereby been imposed upon subsequent editors of transcribing, combating, and exposing, the miserable displays of ignorance and vanity which Mr Seward of Eyam in Derbyshire has embodied in the form of notes. Coleridge asks, "Did the name of criticism ever descend so low as in the hands of those two fools and knaves, Seward and Sympson ?" (Table Talk, p. 212, ed. 1852). And if this be thought rather hard on the good easy men, the following from Gifford's preface to Ben Jonson (p. 68, ed. 1853, Moxon) shews that Coleridge was not alone in thinking lightly of their editorial qualities :—"Whether Whalley [in his edition of Jonson] was diffident of himself, or the gentlemen volunteered their assistance, I have no means of knowing, but he availed himself occasionally of the aid of Sympson and Seward, (the editors of Beaumont and Fletcher,) who led him astray, and where he would have been simply wrong, if left to himself, rendered him absurd. In one pleasant way of making notes, and swelling the bulk of the book, they all agreed. None of them printed from the earliest editions ; they took up the latest which they could find, and went smoothly on till they were stopt by some palpable error of the press. This, as the clown says, was meat and drink to them ; they immediately set themselves to conjecture what the word should be, and after a little burst of vanity, at which it is impossible to forbear a smile, they turned, for the first time, to the old copy, and invited the public to witness their sagacity, and partake in their triumph."

I have omitted all such conjectures of Seward's as I found anticipated in the old editions, with a few exceptions preserved as specimens. Theobald, who died before the edition had advanced very far, has left a few good notes; Sympson's are occasionally presentable, but as for Seward—Seward "never deviates into sense." I regret that my duty as an Editor has necessitated a reproduction of so many of the notes from the edition of 1750; far sooner would I leave them in obscure repose. Not that I wish to speak uncharitably of any one; rather, with the gentle Coleridge, I would say:—"Mr. Seward! Mr. Seward! you may be, and I trust you are, an angel; but you were an ass." (Shakesp. Notes and Lect., p. 286, ed. 1874.)

5. ED. 1778. B. and F. ten vols., the notes by various editors, viz. G. Colman, J. N., R[eed], and others. This edition was reprinted in 1811, with Whalley's ed. of Ben Jonson, the B. and F. occupying three of the four volumes. While some part of the notes is devoted to exposing not only the "carelessness," but also "the more unpardonable faults of faithlessness and misrepresentation," which characterised Messrs Seward and Sympson's edition, the remaining portion consists chiefly of quotations from those commentators, with a few insignificant and generally worthless additions. The best of the new notes are perhaps those signed R. (Reed); Colman's share in the work does not appear to have been important.

Although the text is not stretched or lopped as it had been by the metrical Procrustes (of Eyam in Derbyshire), it is nevertheless full of inaccuracies, these arising mainly from ignorance of Elizabethan words and usages, and a few also from careless revision of the proof-sheets,—Seward's errors being exposed in a note, and yet left standing in the text. But, with all its imperfections, this edition is still widely separated from its predecessor, and must be regarded as the first true critical edition of Beaumont and Fletcher's works. The editors, it may be added, hold that our play has been falsely ascribed to Shakspeare (pref. ix).

6. ED. 1812. Henry Weber's, fourteen vols. 8vo. The text has been reprinted by E. Moxon (1839, 1851, re-issued lately among Routledge's "Old Dramatists"), in two vols., with a preface by George Darley, and a glossary, but without notes.

Weber benefited by the notes of Monck Mason (1798), and produced a comparatively accurate text. My references to B. and F.'s plays are, unless where otherwise stated, to Moxon's ed., 1851, 2 vols. roy. 8vo.

7. KNIGHT'S PICTORIAL SH., eight vols., 8vo., 1839—1841. Considering Knight's fine scholarship, it is strange that the 2 N. K. text in this ed. should be almost worthless; yet such is actually the case. And the cause is not far to seek. Knight believed that the non-Fletcherian portions were by Chapman, consequently gave the play a grudging admittance into his Shakspeare, and only out of deference to tradition and opinion on the subject.

Mr Hickson also attributes the careless manner in which Knight printed the play to his having "prejudged the question" of authorship (N. Sh. Tr. 1874, I. 26*).

Knight's text is little more than a reprint of that of 1778, with a few changes, not always for the better, one or two readings in some degree worthy of him, and many marks of perfect indifference about the accuracy of the text.

Dyce, following soon after with his ed. of B. and F., pointed out many blunders of preceding editors, and Knight in the 2d ed. of the "Pictorial" adopted the majority of Dyce's corrections, and indeed may be said to have based his revised text exclusively upon Dyce's. Except that Knight's second text might afford some corroboration of Dyce's authority, it possesses no intrinsic value, and cannot be regarded as an independent critical effort. A few passages have been excluded from the text on the score of grossness, but, as is usual in "bowdlerised" editions, others just as obnoxious have been retained.

8. ED. DYCE. B. and F. 1843—6, eleven vols. It is unnecessary to speak at any length of this masterly work, which must long remain the standard edition of these authors. The text and notes are of real importance, and, considering the great extent of the undertaking, wonderfully accurate. In the second edition of his Shakspeare, Dyce admitted the 2 N. K. (adopting the division made by Spalding in his Letter, &c. 1833), and revised the text and notes carefully. The 3rd edition, 1876, with Dyce's latest corrections, has been taken as the basis of this revised text, and I have to thank Messrs Chapman and Hall for their kindness in enabling me to use the proof-sheets for some time before the actual publication of the eighth vol. of Dyce. This last edition, so far as the 2 N. K. is concerned, is almost exactly the same as that of 1867, even such a slip as is made in the Preface (Dyce's Sh. vol. viii. p. 117), where it is stated that our play is printed "in the folios of Shakespeare, 1664 and 1685," remaining uncorrected.¹

9. ED. H. TYRRELL. "Doubtful Plays," in one vol. s. a. I had not been able to obtain access to a copy of this edition until April, 1876, when I found that Mr Tyrrell had occasionally anticipated me in my restorations of the old readings. But I also found that he had followed the Quarto as an absolute and infallible guide (even in punctuation) in many places where I had felt myself compelled to depart from its authority. All Mr Tyrrell's most important readings have been noted in the critical collation affixed to the revised text, but I studied his edition too late to be able to insert his readings among my general notes. The annotations are worthless, being based chiefly upon Mr Seward's; and the text is occasionally so bad (e. g. V. iv. 10) that one cannot help thinking that its special merits are due rather to the accuracy of the Quarto text than to the editor's judicious discrimination.

10. ED. SKEAT, 1875. A school edition, with Introduction,

¹ Mr W. C. Hazlitt repeats this mistake in his ed. of Hazlitt's Eliz. Literature (Bell and Daldy, 1870, p. 119, n.): but Mr Hazlitt is, I regret to say, not conspicuous for his accuracy. (e. g. contrast the prefatory note with the mistakes or inaccurate quotations on pp. 30, 37, 75, 88, 106, 127, etc.)

Notes, critical and explanatory, and Index of words explained, by the Rev. W. W. Skeat, M.A. (Pitt Press, Cambridge). I can recommend this (the first) edition, for its systematic and apparently laborious preparation, but cannot speak very highly of the text and some of the critical notes, as they seem to be : (a) not up to date—Mr Skeat collated no edition later than Dyce's first (1843-6), and consequently lost both Dyce's later corrections and the revisions of Knight's second edition ; (b) excessively expurgated—at least the moral purification of the text has occasionally engendered much critical corruption—this however is but a matter of individual opinion, and need not be insisted on ; (c) inaccurately collated and revised, leading Mr Skeat (1) to propose (p. 119, l. 112 ; p. 150, l. 15) as conjectural emendations two readings which appear in the old editions : (2) to misquote preceding texts in the critical notes : (3) to neglect some important old readings. These faults, however, are due to hasty execution of the work, and will doubtless be corrected in a new edition. The general plan is excellent ; and many illustrative and explanatory notes are, as was to be expected, very suggestive. The Introduction, however, is plainly the work of a scholar new to the subject ; and is decidedly disappointing. We find in it Mr Skeat's usual regularity of arrangement and inclusive plan of treatment, but we miss the firmness of grasp and thoroughness of execution which render his editions of Early English texts so serviceable. The Introduction,—treating of the various questions of origin, authorship, date, evidence, tests, opinion, etc.,—appears to have been written before Mr Skeat had reached that stage of knowledge of his subject at which the work of preceding inquirers, so far as un-original, becomes merged in and replaced by the productions of his own independent and special researches. A student, tolerably familiar with his materials, cannot afford to take his information at second-hand : does not do so, at least, without sufficient verification of his authorities. This indicates a capital defect in Mr Skeat's prefatory remarks,—he has in certainly two instances of importance suffered loss by not taking his materials at first-hand. In one case, he misses all that is of the slightest interest—viz. Elizabeth's criticisms—in Wood's accounts of Edward's play acted before the queen at Oxford, by quoting Knight's meagre excerpt from one of Wood's narratives, in place of hunting up the originals (as given, for example, by Nicholls, Progr. of Eliz. ; see Introduction to the present edition) under date 1566. But Mr Skeat had a more serious loss in not studying Mr Spalding's Letter, etc., the most important dissertation (Mr Hickson's review hardly excepted,) yet published on the preliminary considerations about the authorship of this play. Mr Skeat contents himself (p. xv) with quoting (and not quite literally) three lines from Mr Spalding's Letter (p. 61), which lines are to be found (also quoted inexactly) in Mr Hickson's paper (p. 29*). Moreover, Mr Skeat repeats the careless slip made at p. 26* of the Transactions, where the signature is wrongly given.¹

¹ Skeat, Introd. p. xv. : "a letter signed J. S." F., note in N. S. Trans. '74, pt. I. p. 26*, "The Preface is signed J. S." The Letter has no "Preface"—it has Mr Spalding's initials on the last page (111) :—"W. S."

The pity of it is that Mr Skeat's Introduction omits demonstration of the many really valuable arguments put forward by Spalding at the outset of his consideration—deductions from various points of external probability, historical evidence, etc. Certainly, opinion must play an important part in an examination of the kind, but it might rest on as firm a basis of fact and logical inference as could possibly be got together, remembering that conviction “ must be grounded

On knowledge, not opinion, (for opinion
Relies on probability and accident,
But knowledge on necessity and truth).”

(Ford, Broken Heart, III. i.)

I have derived a good deal of help from Mr Skeat's book, and I believe I have in every case acknowledged my obligation, even so far as occasionally, when we happened to coincide, giving my note the benefit of Mr Skeat's authority. I am also indebted to Mr Skeat for many valuable communications, for which I sincerely thank him; and, I may be allowed to add, he has only his own high reputation as a scholar to thank for the detailed, perhaps excessively minute, criticisms I have ventured to make upon his book.

The following sources should also be mentioned as important :—

- a. Heath's MS. notes, quoted by Dyce.
- b. Monck Mason's Comments on the Plays of B. and F. 1798 : containing some comparatively good notes.
- c. Sidney Walker's Critical Examination of the Text of Shakespeare. Walker's notes are especially valuable for the metrical rearrangements of particular passages, suggested by him.
- d. Dr C. M. Ingleby and Dr B. Nicholson, two of my fellow-editors for our Society, have had the kindness to send me some important critical and illustrative comments upon this play, all of which will be found among the general notes to the revised text. I beg to return both these gentlemen my earnest thanks for their assistance. Dr Nicholson is at present preparing a complete edition of the “Doubtful Plays,”—I do but hope that the present edition may, as far as possible, serve to lighten his work on one such play.

Present edition. The plan of this edition is Mr Furnivall's, the execution my own. In at least one respect, I heartily agree with Mr Furnivall's design, viz. in the retention (as far as possible) of the old forms of spelling in the revised text. Modernised Shakspeare may be very well for people who won't read him at all if he is “wrongly spelt;” but surely scholars should rather seek to have his works, if not possibly as they were written, at least certainly as they were pronounced. Who ever wades through Dryden's Palamon and Arcite in preference to the old Knights Tale? Who has ever suggested that we should discard old Homer's dialect, and robe that ancient person's poetry in modern Greek?

And if modernisation be once granted, who will shew us where to draw the line? Are we to hew down our author to the most sweet understandings of his readers? or may we hope that by leaving him above them a little they may eventually reach him, and that without their suffering either "sickness in will, or wrestling strength in reason?"

But I should have been better satisfied if dire Necessity (in this instance, not Mr Furnivall, but the common custom of Editors) had spared me and my readers the infliction of explanatory notes. Let us have various readings to any extent, and a carefully prepared text, but why must the wretched student of modern Shakspeare go wading through a vast quagmire of critical opinion and confutation, before he is allowed to catch a glimpse of the pure Shakspeare stream, as it gleams faintly and far out over the tangled mazes of this dismal editorial swamp?

The present is only a trial-edition, in which some attempt is made to place the oldest texts before the student, to bring the chief editorial variations into a serviceable focus, and to supply a concise summary of the most important criticisms and explanations. I have done my best to render the criticism and explanations useful to the general student, but the first commentators on this play struck a note so "compact of jars," that even the last two editors have not succeeded in reducing this critical discord to an uniformly harmonious tone. To this variorum selection, in deference to the ground-plan of this edition, further notes have been added, which the reader might have had the luck to have been spared, but for certain contributions from friendly hands which induced me to let mine own ill-favoured attempts go forth in such respectable company. After all, notes are but excrescences, necessary evils; and so long as folk accept the variorum theory of Shakspeare study, so long must they submit to commentaries that are incomparable (save to Dr Parr's wig) in their immensity and density. We have "bowdlerised" editions in plenty; when will the Hercules come who will bowdlerise the editors? when the critic who, taking his stand at 1700, will give us adequate collations of the old texts, and concise explanations of any real difficulties; who though he may read the commentators for his private delectation, will let us hear nothing of them,—preferring instead to disclaim all originality, and so truly to become—original? Till then the editors and not the editee must hold first place in the general student's mind.

In addition to the gentlemen already mentioned, I beg to acknowledge my obligations to Professors J. K. Ingram, R. Atkinson, and E. Dowden, of Trinity College, Dublin; to Rev. A. S. Palmer, Mr F. J. Furnivall, and to my fellow-members of the "Mermaid Shakspeare Club," for many valuable suggestions and corrections. The whole Society owes a fresh debt of gratitude to Mr P. A. Daniel for his kindness in allowing his copy of the Quarto to be used for the purposes of this reprint.

*N*ew Playes, and Maydenheads, are neare a kin,
 Much follow'd both, for both much mony g'yn,
 If they stand found, and well: And a good Play (Whose modest Sceanes blush on his marriage day,
 And shake to loose his honour) is like hir 4
 That after holy Tye, and first nights stir
 Yet still is Modestie, and still retaines
 More of the maid to fight, than Husbands paines; 8
 We pray our Play may be so; For I am sure
 It has a noble Breeder, and a pure,
 A learned, and a Poet never went
 More famous yet twixt Po and silver Trent 12
 Chaucer (of all admir'd) the Story gives,
 There constant to Eternity it lives;
 If we let fall the Noblenesse of this,
 And the first sound this child heare, be a hiss, 16
 How will it shake the bones of that good man,
 And make him cry from under ground, O fan
 From me the witles chaffe of such a wrighter (lighter
 That blastes my Bayes, and my sam'd workes makes 20
 Then Robin Hood? This is the feare we bring;
 For to say Truth, it were an endlesse thing,
 And too ambitious to aspire to him;
 Weake as we are, and almost breathlesse swim 24
 In this deepe water. Do but you hold out
 Your helping hands, and we shall take about,
 And something doe to save us: You shall heare
 Sceanes though below his Art, may yet appeare 28
 Worth two houres travell. To his bones sweet sleepe:
 Content to you. If this play doe not keepe,
 A little dull time from us, we perceave
 Our lasses fall so thicke, we must needs leave. 32

2. Qu. Honoured Hypolita	[I. 1]
Most dreaded Amazonian , that ha'ft flaine	84
The Sith-tuskd-Bore; that with thy Arme as strong
As it is white, waft neere to make the male
To thy Sex captive; but that this thy Lord
Borne to uphold Creation, in that honour	88
Firft nature flilde it in, shrunke thee into
The bownd thou waft ore-flowing; at once fubduing
Thy force, and thy affection: Soldireffe
That equally canft poize sternenes with pittie,	92
Whom now I know haft much more power on him
Then ever he had on thee, who ow'ft his strength,
And his, Love too: who is a Servant for
The Tenour of the Speech. Deere Glaffe of Ladies	96
Bid him that we whom flaming war doth fcortch,
Vnder the fhadow of his Sword, may coole us:
Require him he advance it ore our heades;
Speak't in a womans key: like fuch a woman	100
As any of us three; weepe ere you faile; lend us a knee;
But touch the ground for us no longer time
Then a Doves motion, when the head's pluckt off:
Tell him if he i'th blood cizd field, lay fwolne	104
Showing the Sun his Teeth; grinning at the Moone
What you would doe.
Hip. Poore Lady, fay no more:
I had as leife trace this good action with you	108
As that whereto I am going, and never yet

You may behold 'em (Lady, Lady, alacke)
He that will all the Treasure know o'th earth
124 Must know the Center too; he that will fish
For my leaft minnow, let him lead his line
To catch one at my heart. O pardon me,
Extremity that sharpens fundry wits
128 Makes me a Foole.
Emili. Pray you fay nothing, pray you,
Who cannot feele, nor see the raine being in't, Knowes neither wet, nor dry, if that you were 132 The ground-peece of some Painter, I would buy you
T'instruct me gainst a Capitall greefe indeed
Such heart peirc'd demonstration; but alas
Being a naturall Sifter of our Sex
136 Your sorrow beates so ardently upon me,
That it shall make a counter reflect gainst
My Brothers heart, and warme it to some pitty
Though it were made of stone: pray have good comfort.
140 Thef. Forward to'th Temple, leave not out a lot
O'th sacred Ceremony.
1. Qu. O This Celebration
Will long last, and be more costly then,
144 Your Suppliants war: Remember that your Fame
Knowles in the eare, o'th world: what you doe quickly,
Is not done rashly; your first thought is more.
Then others laboured medittance: your premeditating
148 More then their actions: But oh Iove, your actions
Soone as they mooves as Asprays doe the fish,
Subdue before they touch, thinke, deere Duke thinke
What beds our slaine Kings have.
152 2. Qu. What greifes our beds
That our deere Lords have none.
3. Qu. None fit for'th dead:
Those that with Cordes, Knives, drams precipitance,
156 Weary of this worlds light, have to themselves
Beene deathes most horrid Agents, humane grace
Affords them dust and shaddow.
1. Qu. But our Lords

- Ly bliftring fore the vifitating Sunne, [1. 1]
 And were good Kings, when living.
- Thef.* It is true. and I will give you comfort,
 To give your dead Lords graves :
 The which to doe, muft make fome worke with Creou ; 164
1. Qu. And that worke presents it felfe to'th doing :
 Now twill take forme, the heates are gone to morrow.
 Then, booteles toyle muft recompence it felfe,
 With it's owne fweat ; Now he's fecure, 168
 Not dreames, we ftand before your puiffance
 Wrinching our holy begging in our eyes
 To make petition cleere.
2. Qu. Now you may take him, 172
 Drunke with his victory.
3. Qu. And his Army full
 Of Bread, and floth.
- Thef.* Artefuis that beft knoweft 176
 How to draw out fit to this enterprife,
 The prim'ft for this proceeding, and the number
 To carry fuch a bufineffe, forth and levy
 Our worthieft Instruments, whilft we defpatch 180
 This grand act of our life, this daring deede
 Of Fate in wedlocke.
1. Qu. Dowagers, take hands
 Let us be Widdowes to our woes, delay 184
 Commends us to a famifhing hope.
- All.* Farewell.
2. Qu. We come unfeafonably : But when could greefe
 Cull forth as unpanged judgement can, fit't time 188
 For beft folicitation.
- Thef.* Why good Ladies,
 This is a fervice, whereto I am going,
 Greater then any was ; it more imports me 192
 Then all the actions that I have foregone,
 Or futurely can cope.
1. Qu. The more proclaiming

You should be so transported, as much sorry
I should be such a Suitour; yet I thinke
Did I not by th'abstaying of my joy
212 Which breeds a deeper longing, cure their surfeit
That craves a present medicine, I should plucke
All Ladies scandall on me. Therefore Sir
As I shall here make tryall of my prayes,
216 Either presuming them to have some force,
Or sentencing for ay their vigour dombe,
Prorogue this busines, we are going about, and hang
Your Sheild afore your Heart, about that necke
220 Which is my fee, and which I freely lend
To doe these poore Queenes service.

All Queens. Oh helpe now
Our Cause cries for your knee.

224 Emil. If you grant not
My Sister her petition in that force,
With that Celerity, and nature which
Shee makes it in: from henceforth ile not dare
228 To aske you any thing, nor be so hardy
Ever to take a Husband.

Thef. Pray stand up.

I am entreating of my selfe to doe
232 That which you k neele to have me; Pyrrithous
Leade on the Bride; get you and pray the Gods
For successe, and returne; omit not any thing
In the pretended Celebration: Queenes

Follow

Follow your Soldier (as before) hence you [I. 1]
 And at the banckes of Auly meete us with
 The forces you can raise, where we shall finde
 The moytie of a number, for a busines,
 More bigger look't; since that our Theame is haste 247
 I stamp this kisse upon thy currant lippe,
 Sweete keepe it as my Token; Set you forward
 For I will see you gone. Exeunt towards the Temple.

Pirithous. Sir
 Ile follow you at heeles; The Feasts solempnity
 Shall want till your returne. 248
Thef. Cofen I charge you
 Boudge not from Athens; We shall be returning
 Ere you can end this Feast; of which I pray you
 Make no abatement; once more farewell all. 252

Pal. Your advice

Is cride up with example : what strange ruins
Since first we went to Schoole, may we perceive
16 Walking in Thebs ? Skars, and bare weedes
The gaine o'th Martialist, who did propound
To his bold ends, honour, and golden Ingots,
Which though he won, he had not, and now flurled
20 By peace for whom he fought, who then shall offer
To Marfis so scornd Altar ? I doe bleede
When such I meete, and with great Iuno would Resume her ancient fit of Ielouzie
24 To get the Soldier worke, that peace might purge
For her repletion, and retaine anew
Her charitable heart now hard, and harsher
Then strife, or war could be.

28 Arcite, Are you not out ?

Meete you no ruine, but the Soldier in
The Cranckes, and turnes of Thebs ? you did begin
As if you met decaies of many kindes :
32 Perceive you none, that doe arowse your pittie
But th'un-confiderd Soldier ?

Pal. Yes, I pittie

Decaies where ere I finde them, but such most 36 That sweating in an honourable Toyle
Are paide with yce to coole 'em.

Arcite, Tis not this

I did begin to speake of : This is vertue
40 Of no respect in Thebs, I spake of Thebs
How dangerous if we will keepe our Honours,
It is for our resyding, where every evill
Hath a good cullor ; where eve'ry seeming good's
44 A certaine evill, where not to be ev'n lumps
As they are, here were to be strangers, and Such things to be meere Monsters.

Ruine to Thebes, who is at hand to feale
The promise of his wrath.
- 104 Arc. Let him approach ;
But that we feare the Gods in him, he brings not
A jot of terrour to us ; Yet what man
Thirds his owne worth (the case is each of ours)
108 When that his actions dredgd, with minde affurd
Tis bad he goes about.
Pal. Leave that unreasond.
Our services stand now for Thebes, not Creon,
- 112 Yet to be neutrall to him, were dishonour ;
Rebellious to oppose : therefore we must
With him stand to the mercy of our Fate,
Who hath bounded our last minute.
- 116 Arc. So we must ;
If sed this warres a foote ? or it shall be
On faile of some condition.
Val. Tis in motion
- 120 The intelligence of state came in the instant
With the defier.

Pal. Lets to the king, who, were he [I. 2]
 A quarter carrier of that honour, which
 His Enemy come in, the blood we venture 124
 Should be as for our health, which were not spent,
 Rather laide out for purchase: but alas
 Our hands advanc'd before our hearts, what will
 The fall o'th froke doe damage? 128
Arci. Let th'event,
 That never erring Arbitratour, tell us
 When we know all our selves, and let us follow
 The becking of our chance. Exeunt. 132

Scæna 3. Enter Pirithous, Hipolita, Emilia. [I. 3]

Pir. No further.
Hip. Sir farewell; repeat my wishes
 To our great Lord, of whose succes I dare not
 Make any timerous question, yet I wish him 4
 Exces, and overflow of power, and't might be
 To dure ill-dealing fortune; speede to him,
 Store never hurtes good Gouvernours.
Pir. Though I know 8
 His Ocean needs not my poore drops, yet they
 Muft yeild their tribute there: My precious Maide,
 Those best affections, that the heavens infuse
 In their best temperd peices, keepe enthroand 12
 In your deare heart.
Emil. Thanckes Sir; Remember me
 To our all royall Brother, for whose speede
 The great Bellona ile follicite; and 16
 Since in our terrene State petitions are not
 Without giftes understood: Ile offer to her
 What I shall be advifed she likes; our hearts
 Are in his Army, in his Tent. 20
Hip. In's bosome:
 We have bin Soldiers, and wee cannot weep
 When our Friends don their helmes, or put to fea,
 Or tell of Babes broachd on the Launce, or women 24
 That

[I. 3] That have sod their Infants in (and after eate them)
The brine, they wept at killing 'em ; Then if You stay to see of us such Spincfters, we 28 Should hold you here for e ver.

Pir. Peace be to you

As I purfue this war, which fhall be then Beyond further requiring.

Exit Pir.

32 Emil. How his longing
Followes his Friend ; fince his depart, his fportes
Though craving ferioufnes, and skill, paff flightly
His careles execution, where nor gaine
36 Made him regard, or loffe confider, but Playing ore bufines in his hand, another
Directing in his head, his minde, nurfe equall
To thefe fo differing Twyns ; have you obferv'd him,
40 Since our great Lord departed ?

Hip. With much labour :

And I did love him fort, they two have Cabind
In many as dangerous, as poore a Corner,
44 Perill and want contending, they have skift
Torrents whose roring tyranny and power
I'th leaft of thefe was dreadfull, and they have Fought out together, where Deaths-felfe was lodgd,
48 Yet fate hath brought them off : Their knot of lov
Tide, weau'd, intangled, with fo true, fo long,
And with a finger of fo deepe a cunning
May be outworne, never undone. I thinke
52 Thefeus cannot be umpire to himfelfe
Cleaving his confcience into twaine, and doing
Each fide like Iuftice, which he loves beft.

Emil. Doubtleffe

56 There is a beft, and reason has no manners
To fay it is not you : I was acquainted
Once with a time, when I enjoyd a Play-fellow ;
You were at wars, when fhe the grave enrichd,
60 Who made too proud the Bed, tooke leave o'th Moone
(which then lookt pale at parting) when our count
Was each a eleven.

	Hip. Twas Flavia .	[I. 3]
	Emil. Yes	64
	You talke of Pirithous and Theseus love ; Theirs has more ground, is more maturely feafond, More buckled with strong Iudgement. and their needes
2. Hearfes ready with Palamon : and Arcite : the 3. Queenes. Theseus : and his Lordes ready.	The one of th'other may be said to water	68
	Their intertangled rootes of love, but I
	And thee (I figh and spoke of) were things innocent, Lou'd for we did, and like the Elements
	That know not what, nor why, yet doe effect	72
	Rare issues by their operance ; our foules Did so to one another ; what she lik'd, Was then of me approv'd, what not condemn'd
	No more arraignment, the flowre that I would plucke	76
	And put betweene my breasts, oh (then but beginning To swell about the blossome) she would long Till shee had such another, and commit it
	To the like innocent Cradle, where Phenix like	80

	For my most ferious decking, had mine eare	84
	Stolne some new aire, or at adventure humd on From mifcally Coyndage ; why it was a note Whereon her spirits would sojourne (rather dwell on)
	And sing it in her slumbers ; This rehearfall (Which fury-innocent wots well) comes in Like old importments bastard, has this end, That the true love tweene Mayde, and mayde, may be More then in sex individuall.	88
		92
	Hip. Y'are ont of breath And this high speeded-pace, is but to fay That you shall never (like the Maide Flavina) Love any that's call'd Man.	96
Emil. I am sure I shall not.
Hip. Now alacke weake Sifter, I must no more beleve thee in this point (Though, in't I know thou dost beleve thy selfe,)	100
	Then

[I. 3] Then I will trust a fickely appetite,
That loathes even as it longs ; but sure my Sister
If I were ripe for your perswasion, you
104 Have faide enough to shake me from the Arme
Of the all noble Thefeus, for whose fortunes,
I will now in, and kneele with great affurance,
That we, more then his Pirothous, possesse
108 The high throne in his heart.

Emil. I am not against your faith,
Yet I continew mine.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Scæna 1. Enter Iailor, and Wooer.

Iailor. I may depart with little, while I live, some thing I
May cast to you, not much : Alas the Prifon I
Keepe, though it be for great ones, yet they feldome
4 Come ; Before one Salmon, you shall take a number
Of Minnowes : I am given out to be better lyn'd
Then it can appeare, to me report is a true
Speaker : I would I were really, that I am 8 Deliverd to be : Marry, what I have (be it what it will) I will assure upon my daughter at
The day of my death.

Wooer. Sir I demaund no more then your owne offer,
12 And I will estate your Daughter in what I Have promised,

a—Q1.

Iailor.

Iailor. Wel, we will talke more of this, when the folemny [II. 1]
Is past; But have you a full promise of her?

Enter Daughter.

When that shall be seene, I tender my consent. 16

Woer. I have Sir; here shee comes.

Iailor. Your Friend and I have chanced to name
You here, upon the old busines: But no more of that.
Now, so soone as the Court hurly is over, we will 20
Have an end of it: I'th meane time looke tenderly
To the two Prisoners. I can tell you they are princes.

Daug. These strewings are for their Chamber; tis pittie they Are in prison, and twer pittie they should be out: I 24
Doe thinke they have patience to make any adversty
Aham'd; the prison it selfe is proud of 'em; and
They have all the world in their Chamber.

Iailor. They are fam'd to be a paire of absolute men. 28

Daugh. By my troth, I thinke Fame but stammers 'em, they Stand a greife above the reach of report. (doers.

Iai. I heard them reported in the Battaile, to be the only

Daugh. Nay most likely, for they are noble sufferers; I 32
Mervaile how they would have lookd had they beene
Victors, that with such a constant Nobility, enforce
A freedome out of Bondage, making misery their Mirth, and affliction, a toy to jest at. 36

Iailor. Doe they so?

Daug. It seemes to me they have no more sence of their Captivity, then I of ruling Athens: they eate
Well, looke merrily, discourse of many things, 40
But nothing of their owne restraint, and disastres:
Yet sometime a devided sigh, martyrd as twer
I'th deliverance, will breake from one of them.
When the other presently gives it so sweete a rebuke, 44
That I could wish my selfe a Sigh to be so chid,
Or at least a Sigher to be comforted.

Woer. I never saw em.

Iailor. The Duke himselfe came privately in the night, 48

Enter Palamon, and Arcite, above.

And so did they, what the reason of it is, I

Know

[II. 1] Know not : Looke yonder they are ; that's Arcite lookes out.

52 Daugh. No Sir, no, that's Palamon : Arcite is the Lower of the twaine ; you may perceiue a part
Of him.

Iai. Goe too, leave your pointing ; they would not 56 Make us their object ;out of their fight.

Daugh. It is a holliday to looke on them :Lord, the Diffrence of men.

Exeunt,

[II. 2] Scæna 2. Enter Palamon, and Arcite in prison.

Pal. How doe you Noble Cofen ?

Arcite. How doe you Sir ?

Pal. Why strong ynough to laugh at misery,
4 And beare the chance of warre yet, we are prifoners
I feare for ever Cofen.

Arcite. I beleeeve it,
And to that destiny have patiently
8 Laide up my houre to come.

Pal. Oh Cofen Arcite,
Where is Thebs now ? where is our noble Country ?
Where are our friends, and kindreds ? never more
12 Muft we behold thofe comforts, never fee
The hardy youthes ftrive for the Games of honour
(Hung with the painted favours of their Ladies)
Like tall Ships under faile:then start among't 'em
16 And as an Eastwind leave 'em all behinde us,
Like lazy Clowdes, whilst Palamon and Arcite,
Even in the wagging of a wanton leg
Out-ftript the peoples praifes, won the Garlands, 20 Ere they have time to wifh 'em ours.O never Shall we two exercife, like Twyns of honour,
Our Armes againe, and feele our fyry horfes
Like proud Seas under us, our good Swords, now
24 (Better the red-eyd god of war nev'r were)
Bravifhd our fides, like age muft run to ruft,
And decke the Temples of thofe gods that hate us,

These hands shall never draw'em out like lightning
To blast whole Armies more. [II. 2] 28

Arcite. No Palamon,

Those hopes are Prisoners with us, here we are
And here the graces of our youthes must wither
Like a too-timely Spring ;here age must finde us, 32

And which is heaviest (Palamon) unmarried,
The sweete embraces of a loving wife
Loden with kisses, armd with thousand Cupids
Shall never claspe our neckes, no issue know us, 36

No figures of our selves shall we ev'r see,
To glad our age, and like young Eagles teach 'em
Boldly to gaze against bright armes, and say
Remember what your fathers were, and conquer. 40

The faire-eyd Maides, shall weepe our Banishments,
And in their Songs, curse ever-blinded fortune
Till shee for shame see what a wrong she has done
To youth and nature ;This is all our world ; 44

We shall know nothing here but one another,
Heare nothing but the Clocke that tels our woes.
The Vine shall grow, but we shall never see it :
Sommer shall come, and with her all delights ; 48
But dead-cold winter must inhabite here still.

Pal. Tis too true Arcite. To our Theban houndes,
That shooke the aged Forrest with their ecchoes,
No more now must we halloa, no more shake 52

Our pointed Iavelyns, whilst the angry Swine
Flyes like a parthian quiver from our rages,
Strucke with our well-steeld Darts :All valiant uses.
(The foode, and nourishment of noble mindes,) 56

In us two here shall perish ;we shall die
(which is the curse of honour) lastly
Children of greife, and Ignorance.

Arc. Yet Cofen, 60

Even from the bottom of these miseries
From all that fortune can inflict upon us,
I see two comforts ryfing, two meere blessings,
If the gods please, to hold here abrave patience, 64

And

- [II. 2] And the enjoying of our greefes together.
Whilft Palamon is with me, let me perish
If I thinke this our prison.
- 68 Pala. Certainly,
Tis a maine goodnes Cofen, that our fortunes
Were twyn'd together; tis most true, two foules
Put in two noble Bodies, let 'em suffer
- 72 The gaule of hazard, fo they grow together,
Will never fincke, they must not, say they could
A willing man dies sleepeing, and all's done.
Arc. Shall we make worthy uses of this place
- 76 That all men hate fo much?
Pal. How gentle Cofen?
Arc. Let's thinke this prison, holy sanctuary,
To keepe us from corruption of worse men,
- 80 We are young and yet desire the waies of honour,
That liberty and common Conuersation
The poyson of pure spirits; might like women
Wooe us to wander from. What worthy blessing
- 84 Can be but our Imaginations
May make it ours? And heere being thus together,
We are an endles mine to one another;
We are one anothers wife, ever begetting
- 88 New birthes of love; we are father, friends, acquaintance,
We are in one another, Families,
I am your heire, and you are mine: This place
Is our Inheritance: no hard Oppressour
- 92 Dare take this from us; here with a little patience
We shall live long, and loving: No surfeits seeke us:
The hand of war hurts none here, nor the Seas
Swallow their youth: were we at liberty,
- 96 A wife might part us lawfully, or bufines,
Quarrels consume us, Envy of ill men
Crave our acquaintance, I might ficken Cofen,
Where you should never know it, and fo perish
- 100 Without your noble hand to close mine eies,
Or praies to the gods; a thousand chaunces
Were we from hence, would seaver us.

Pal. You have made me [II. 2]
 (I thanke you Cofen Arcite) almost wanton 104
 With my Captivity : what a misery
 It is to live abroade ? and every where :
 Tis like a Beast me thinkes : I finde the Court here,
 I am sure a more content, and all those pleasures 108
 That wooe the wils of men to vanity,
 I see through now, and am sufficient
 To tell the world, tis but a gaudy shadow,
 That old Time, as he passes by takes with him, 112
 What had we bin old in the Court of Creon,
 Where sin is Iustice, lust, and ignorance,
 The vertues of the great ones : Cofen Arcite,
 Had not the loving gods found this place for us 116
 We had died as they doe, ill old men, unwept,
 And had their Epitaphes, the peoples Curfes,
 Shall I say more ?
Arc. I would heare you fill. 120
Pal. Ye shall.
 Is there record of any two that lov'd
 Better then we doe Arcite ?
Arc. Sure there cannot. 124
Pal. I doe not thinke it possible our friendship
 Should ever leave us.
Arc. Till our deathes it cannot

Enter Emilia and her woman.

And after death our spirits shall be led 128
 To those that love eternally. Speake on Sir.
 This garden has a world of pleasures in't.
Emil. What Flowre is this ?
Wom. Tis calld Narcissus Madam. 132
Emil. That was a faire Boy certaine, but a foole,
 To love himselfe, were there not maides enough ?
Arc. Pray forward.
Pal. Yes. 136
Emil. Or were they all hard hearted ?
Wom. They could not be to one so faire.
Emil. Thou wouldst not.

Wom.

- [II. 2] Wom. I thinke I should not, Madam.
Emil. That's a good wench :
But take heede to your kindnes though.
Wom. Why Madam ?
- 144 Emil. Men are mad things.
Arcite. Will ye goe forward Cofen ?
Emil. Canst not thou worke such flowers in filke wench ?
Wom. Yes.
- 148 Emil. Ile have a gowne full of 'em and of these,
This is a pretty colour, wilt not doe
Rarely upon a Skirt wench ?
Wom. Deinty Madam.
- 152 Arc. Gofen, Cofen, how doe you Sir ? Why Palamon ?
Pal. Never till now I was in prison Arcite.
Arc. Why whats the matter Man ?
Pal. Behold, and wonder.
- 156 By heaven shee is a Goddesse.
Arcite. Ha.
Pal. Doc reverence.
She isa Goddesse Arcite.
- 160 Emil. Of all Flowres.
Me thinkes a Rose is best.
Wom. Why gentle Madam ?
Emil. It is the very Embleme of a Maide.
- 164 For when the west wind courts her gently
How modestly she blowes, and paints the Sun,
With her chaste blushes ? When the North comes neere her,
Rude and impatient, then, like Chastity
- 168 Shee lockes her beauties in her bud againe,
And leaves him to bafe briers.
Wom. Yet good Madam,
Sometimes her modesty will blow so far
- 172 She fals for't : a Mayde
If shee have any honour, would be loth
To take example by her.
Emil. Thou art wanton.
- 176 Arc. She is wondrous faire.
Pal. She is all the beauty extant.

Emil.

Emil. The Sun grows high, lets walk in, keep these flowers, [II. 2]
Weele see how neere Art can come neere their colours;
I am wondrous merry hearted, I could laugh now. 180

Wom. I could lie downe I am sure.

Emil. And take one with you ?

Wom. That's as we bargaine Madam,

Emil. Well, agree then. 184

Exeunt Emilia and woman.

Pal. What thinke you of this beauty ?

Arc. Tis a rare one.

Pal. Is't but a rare one ?

Arc. Yes a matchles beauty. 188

Pal. Might not a man well lofe himselfe and love her ?

Arc. I cannot tell what you have done, I have,
Besheew mine eyes for't, now I feele my Shackles.

Pal. You love her then ? 192

Arc. Who would not ?

Pal. And defire her ?

Arc. Be fore my liberty.

Pal. I saw her firft. 196

Arc. That's nothing

Pal. But it shall be.

Arc. I saw her too.

Pal. Yes, but you must not love her. 200

Arc. I will not as you doe ; to worship her ;
As she is heavenly, and a blessed Goddess ;
(I love her as a woman, to enjoy her)
So both may love. 204

Pal. You shall not love at all.

Arc. Not love at all.

Who shall deny me ?

Pal. I that firft saw her ; I that tooke possession 208

Firft with mine eye of all those beauties

In her reveald to mankindc : if thou lou'ft her,

Or entertain'ft a hope to blast my wishes,

Thou art a Traytour Arcite and a fellow 212

Falſe as thy Title to her : friendship, blood

And all the tyes betweene us I disclaime

If

[II. 2] If thou once thinke upon her.

216 Arc. Yes I love her,

And if the lives of all my name lay on it,

I must doe so, I love her with my soule,

If that will lose ye, farewell Palamon,

220 I say againe, I love, and in loving her maintaine

I am as worthy, and as free a lover

And have as just a title to her beauty

As any Palamon or any living

224 That is a mans Sonne.

Pal. Have I cald thee friend ?

Arc. Yes, and have found me so ; why are you mov'd thus ?

Let me deale coldly with you, am not I

228 Part of you blood, part of your soule ? you have told me

That I was Palamon, and you were Arcite.

Pal. Yes.

Arc. Am not I liable to those affections,

232 Those joyes, greifes, angers, feares, my friend shall suffer ?

Pal. Ye may be.

Arc. Why then would you deale so cunningly,

So strangely, so unlike a noble kinsman

236 To love alone ? speake truely, doe you thinke me

Vnworthy of her fight ?

Pal. No ; but unjust,

If thou pursue that fight.

240 Arc. Because an other

First sees the Enemy, shall I stand still

And let mine honour downe, and never charge ?

Pal. Yes, if he be but one.

244 Arc. But say that one

Had rather combat me ?

Pal. Let that one say so,

And use thy freedome ; els if thou pursuest her,

248 Be as that curst man that hates his Country,

A branded villaine.

Arc. You are mad.

Pal. I must be.

252 Till thou art worthy, Arcite, it concernes me,

E

And

And in this madnes, if I hazard thee . . . [II. 2]
 And take thy life, I deale but truely.

Arc. Fie Sir.

You play the Childe extreamely : I will love her, 256
 I must, I ought to doe so, and I dare,
 And all this justly.

Pal. O that now, that now

Thy false-felfe and thy friend, had but this fortune 260
 To be one howre at liberty, and graspe
 Our good Swords in our hands, I would quickly teach thee
 What tw'er to filch affection from another :

Thou art baser in it then a Cutpurse ; 264

Put but thy head out of this window more,
 And as I have a soule, Ile naile thy life too't.

Arc. Thou dar'ft not foole, thou canst not, thou art feeble.
 Put my head out ? Ile throw my Body out, 268
 And leape the garden, when I see her next

Enter Keeper.

And pitch between her armes to anger thee.

Pal. No more ;the keeper's comming ; I shall live
 To knocke thy braines out with my Shackles. 272

Arc. Doe.

Keeper. By your leave Gentlemen :

Pal. Now honest keeper ?

Keeper. Lord Arcite, you must presently to'th Duke ; 276
 The cause I know not yet.

Arc. I am ready keeper.

Keeper, Prince Palamon, I must awhile bereave you
 Of your faire Cosens Company. 280

Exeunt Arcite, and Keeper.

Pal. And me too,
 Even when you please of life ;why is he fent for ?
 It may be he shall marry her, he's goodly,
 And like enough the Duke hath taken notice 284
 Both of his blood and body :But his falsehood,
 Why should a friend be treacherous ? If that
 Get him a wife so noble, and so faire ;
 Let honest men ne're love againe. Once more 288

[II. 2] I would but see this faire One : Blessed Garden,
And fruite, and flowers more blessed that still bloffom
As her brighr eies shine on ye. would I were 292 For all the fortune of my life hereafter
Yon little Tree, yon blooming Apricocke ;
How I would spread, and fling my wanton armes
In at her window ;I would bring her fruite
296 Fit for the Gods to feed on :youth and pleasure
Still as she tasted should be doubled on her,
And if she be not heavenly I would make her
So neere the Gods in nature, they should feare her.

Enter Keeper.

300 And then I am sure she would love me : how now keeper
Wher's Arcite,

Keeper, Banishd :Prince Pirithous

Obtained his liberty ; but never more

304 Vpon his oth and life must he set foote
Vpon this Kingdome.

Pal. Hees a blessed man,

He shall see Thebs againe, and call to Armes

308 The bold yong men, that when he bids 'em charge,
Fall on like fire : Arcite shall have a Fortune,
If he dare make himselfe a worthy Lover,
Yet in the Feild to strike a battle for her ;

312 And if he lose her then, he's a cold Coward ;
How bravely may he beare himselfe to win her
If he be noble Arcite ;thousand waies.
Were I at liberty, I would doe things

316 Of such a vertuous greatnes, that this Lady,
This blushing virgine should take manhood to her
And seeke to ravish me.

Keeper, My Lord for you

320 I have this charge too.

Pal. To discharge my life.

Keep. No, but from this place to remooove your Lordship,
The windowes are too open.

324 Pal. Devils take 'em

That are so envious to me ; pre'thee kill me.

Keep. And hang for't afterward. [II. 2]
Pal. By this good light
 Had I a sword I would kill thee. 328
Keep. Why my Lord?
Pal. Thou bringst such pelting scurvy news continually
 Thou art not worthy life; I will not goe.
Keep. Indeede you must my Lord. 332
Pal. May I see the garden?
Keep. Noe.
Pal. Then I am resolute, I will not goe. (rous
Keep. I must constrain you then: and for you are dange- 336
 He clap more yrons on you.
Pal. Doe good keeper.
 He shake 'em so, ye shall not sleepe,
 He make ye a new Morriffe, must I goe? 340
Keep. There is no remedy.
Pal. Farewell kinde window.
 May rude winde never hurt thee. O my Lady
 If ever thou hast felt what sorrow was, 344
 Dreame how I suffer. Come; now bury me.

Exeunt Palamon, and Keeper.

Scæna 3. Enter Arcite. [II. 3]

Arcite. Banish'd the kingdome? tis a benefit,
 A mercy I must thanke 'em for, but banish'd
 The free enjoying of that face I die for,
 Oh twas a studdied punishment, a death 4
 Beyond Imagination: Such a vengeance
 That were I old and wicked, all my sins
 Could never plucke upon me. Palamon;
 Thou ha'ft the Start now, thou shalt stay and see 8
 Her bright eyes breake each morning gainst thy window,
 And let in life into thee; thou shalt feede
 Vpon the sweetenes of a noble beauty,
 That nature nev'r exceeded, nor nev'r shall: 12
 Good gods? what happines has Palamon?
 Twenty to one, hee'le come to speake to her,
 And if she be as gentle, as she's faire,

- [II. 3] I know she's his, he has a Tongue will tame (can come'
Tempests, and make the wild Rockes wanton. Come what
The worst is death; I will not leave the Kingdome,
I know mine owne, is but a heape of ruins,
20 And no redresse there, if I goe, he has her.
I am resolu'd an other shape shall make me.
Or end my fortunes. Either way, I am happy :
Ile see her, and be neere her, or no more.

Enter .4. Country people, & one with a garland before them.

- 24 1. My Masters, ile be there that's certaine.
2. And Ile be there.
3. And I.
4. Why then have with ye Boyes; Tis but a chiding,
28 Let the plough play to day, ile tick'lt out
Of the Iades tailes to morrow.
1. I am sure
To have my wife as jealous as a Turkey :
32 But that's all one, ile goe through, let her mumble.
2. Clap her aboard to morrow night, and stoa her,
And all's made up againe.
3. I, doe but put a feskue in her fist, and you shall see her
36 Take a new lesson out, and be a good wench.
Doe we all hold, against the Maying ?
4. Hold? what should aile us ?
3. Arcas will be there.
40 2. And Sennois.
And Rycas, and 3. better lads nev'r dancd under green Tree,
And yet know what wenchs : ha ?
But will the dainty Domine, the Schoolemaster keep touch
44 Doe you thinke : for he do's all ye know.
3. Hee'l eate a hornebooke ere he faile : goe too, the matter's too farre driven betweene him, and the Tanners daughter, to let slip now, and she must see the Duke, and she must 48 launce too.
4. Shall we be lufy.
2. All the Boyes in Athens blow wind i'th breech on's,
and

and heere ile be and there ile be, for our Towne, and here [II. 3] againe, and there againe: ha, Boyes, heigh for the wea- 52 vers.

1. This muft be done i'th woods.

4. O pardon me.

2. By any meanes our thing of learning fees fo: where he 56
 himfelfe will edific the Duke moft parloufly in our behalves:
 hees excellent i'th woods, bring him to'th plaines, his learning makes no cry.

3. Weele fee the fports, then every man to's Tackle: and 60
 Sweete Companions lets rehearfe by any meanes, before
 The Ladies fee us, and doe sweetly, and God knows what May come on't.

4. Content; the fports once ended, wee'l performe. Away 64
 Boyes and hold.

Arc. By your leaves honeft friends: pray you whither goe you.

4. Whither? why, what a queftion's that? 68

Arc. Yes, tis a queftion, to me that know not.

3. To the Games my Friend.

2. Where were you bred you know it not?

Arc. Not farre Sir, 72

Are there fuch Gamcs to day?

1. Yes marry are there:

And fuch as you neuer faw; The Duke himfelfe
 Will be in perfon there. 76

Arc. What paftimes are they?

2, Wraftling, and Running; Tis a pretty Fellow.

3. Thou wilt not goe along.

Arc. Not yet Sir. 80

4. Well Sir

Take your owne time, come Boyes

1. My minde mifgives me

This fellow has a veng'ance tricke o'th hip, 84

Marke how his Bodi's made for't

2. Ile be hangd though

If he dare venture, hang him plumb porredge,

He wraffle? he roft eggs. Come lets be gon Lads. Exeunt 4. 88

Arc.

[II. 3] Arc. This is an offerd oportunity
I durst not wish for. Well, I could have wrestled,
The best men calld it excellent, and run
92 Swifter, then winde upon a feild of Corne
(Curling the wealthy eares) never flew : Ile venture,
And in some poore disguise be there, who knows
Whether my browes may not be girt with garlands?
96 And happines preferre me to a place,
Where I may ever dwell in sight of her. Exit Arcite,

[II. 4] Scæna 4. Enter Iailors Daughter alone.
Daugh. Why should I love this Gentleman? Tis odds
He never will affcct me; I am bafe,
My Father the meane Keeper of his Prifon,
4 And he a prince; To marry him is hopelesse;
To be his whore, is witles; Out upon't;
What pushes are we wenchs driven to
When fifteene once has found us? First I saw him,
8 I (seeing) thought he was a goodly man;
He has as much to please a woman in him,
(If he please to bestow it so) as ever
These eyes yet lookt on; Next, I pittied him,
12 And so would any young wench o' my Conscience
That ever dream'd, or vow'd her Maydenhead
To a yong handsome Man; Then I lov'd him,
(Extreamely lov'd him) infinitely lov'd him;
16 And yet he had a Cofen, faire as he too.
But in my heart was Palamon, and there
Lord, what a coyle he keeps? To heare him
Sing in an evening, what a heaven it is?
20 And yet his Songs are sad-ones; Fairer spoken,
Was never Gentleman. When I come in
To bring him water in a morning, first
He bowes his noble body, then salutes me, thus:
24 Faire, gentle Mayde, good morrow, may thy goodnes,
Get thee a happy husband; Once he kist me,
I lov'd my lips the better ten daies after,
Would he would doe so ev'ry day; He greives much,
28 And me as much to see his misery.

What

What should I doe, to make him know I love him, [II. 4]
 For I would faine enjoy him? Say I ventur'd
 To fet him free? what saies the law then? Thus much
 For Law, or kindred: I will doe it, 32
 And this night, or to morrow he shall love me. Exit.

Scæna 4. Enter Theseus, Hipolita, Pirithous, [II. 5]

Emilia: Arcite with a Garland, &c.

Thef: You have done worthily; I have not seene
 Since Hercules, a man of tougher fynewes;
 What ere you are, you run the best, and wrastle,
 That these times can allow. 4

Arcite. I am proud to please you.

Thef. What Countrie bred you?

Arcite. This; but far off, Prince.

Thef. Are you a Gentleman? 8

Arcite. My father said so;

And to those gentle uses gave me life.

Thef. Are you his heire?

Arcite. His yongest Sir. 12

Thef. Your Father

Sure is a happy Sire then: what proves you?

Arcite. A little of all noble Qualities:

I could have kept a Hawke, and well have holloa'd 16

To a deepe crie of Dogges; I dare not praise

My feat in horfemanhip: yet they that knew me

Would say it was my best peece: last, and greatest,

I would be thought a Souldier. 20

Thef. You are perfect.

Pirith. Vpon my foule, a proper man.

Emilia. He is so.

Per. How doe you like him Ladie? 24

Hip. I admire him,

I have not seene so yong a man, so noble

(If he say true,) of his fort.

Emil. Beleeve, 28

His mother was a wondrous handsome woman,

His face me thinkes, goes that way.

Hyp. But his Body

And

This short flourish of Cornets and Showtes within.

- [II. 5] And frie minde, illustrate a brave Father.
Per. Marke how his vertue, like a hidden Sun
 Breakes through his baser garments.
Hyp. Hee's well got fure.
- 36 Thef. What made you seeke this place Sir ?
Arc. Noble Thefeus.
 To purchafe name, and doe my ableft service
 To fuch a well-found wonder, as thy worth,
- 40 Fo onely in thy Court, of all the world
 dwells faire-eyd honor.
Per. All his words are worthy.
Thef. Sir, we are much endebted to your travell,
- 44 Nor shall you loofe your wifh : Perithous
 Ditpofe of this faire Gentleman.
Perith. Thankes Thefeus.
 What ere you are y'ar mine, and I shall give you
- 48 To a moft noble fervice, to this Lady,
 This bright yong Virgin ; pray obferve her goodneffe ;
 You have honoured hir faire birth-day, with your vertues,
 And as your due y'ar hers : kiffe her faire hand Sir.
- 52 Arc. Sir, y'ar a noble Giver : deareft Bewtie,
 Thus let me feale my vowd faith : when your Servant
 (Your moft unworthie Creature) but offends you.
 Command him die, he fhall.
- 56 Emil. That were too cruell.
 If you deferue well Sir ; I fhall foone fee't : (you.
 Y'ar mine, and fomewhat better than your rancke Ile ufe
Per. Ile fee you furnifh'd, and becaufe you fay
- 60 You are a horfeman, I muft needs intreat you
 This after noone to ride, but tis a rough one.
Arc. I like him better (Prince) I fhall not then Freeze in my Saddle.
- 64 Thef. Sweet, you muft be readie,
 And you Emilia, and you (Friend) and all
 To morrow by the Sun, to doe obfervance
 To flowry May, in Dians wood : waite well Sir
- 68 Vpon your Miftris : Emely, I hope
 He fhall not goe a foote.

Emil. That were a shame Sir, [II. 5]
 While I have horses: take your choice, and what
 You want at any time, let me but know it; 72
 If you serve faithfully, I dare assure you
 You'll finde a loving Mistris.

Arc. If I doe not,
 Let me finde that my Father ever hated, 76
 Disgrace, and blowes.

Thef. Go leade the way; you have won it:
 It shall be so; you shall receive all dues
 Fit for the honour you have won; Twere wrong else, 80
 Sister, befhrew my heart, you have a Servant,
 That if I were a woman, would be Master,
 But you are wife.

Emil. I hope too wife for that Sir. Florish. Exeunt omnes. 84

Scæna 6. Enter Iaylors Daughter alone. [II. 6]

Daughter. Let all the Dukes, and all the divells rore,
 He is at liberty: I have venturd for him,
 And out I have brought him to a little wood
 A mile hence, I have sent him, where a Cedar 4
 Higher than all the rest, spreads like a plane
 Fast by a Brooke, and there he shall keepe close,
 Till I provide him Fyles, and foode, for yet
 His yron bracelets are not off. O Love 8
 What a stout hearted child thou art / My Father
 Durst better have indur'd cold yron, than done it:
 I love him, beyond love, and beyond reason,
 Or wit, or safetie: I have made him know it 12
 I care not, I am desperate, If the law
 Finde me, and then condemne me for't; some wenches,
 Some honest harted Maides, will sing my Dirge.
 And tell to memory, my death was noble, 16
 Dying almost a Martyr: That way he takes,
 I purpose is my way too: Sure he cannot
 Be so unmanly, as to leave me here,
 If he doe, Maides will not so easly 20
 Trust men againe: And yet he has not thank'd me
 For what I have done: no not so much as kist me,

And

[II. 6] And that (me thinkes) is not so well ; nor scarcely
 24 Could I persuade him to become a Freeman,
 He made such scruples of the wrong he did
 To me, and to my Father. Yet I hope
 When he considers more, this love of mine
 28 Will take more root within him : Let him doe
 What he will with me, so he use me kindly,
 For use me so he shall, or ile proclaime him
 And to his face, no-man : Ile presently
 32 Provide him necessaries, and packe my cloathes up,
 And where there is a path of ground Ile venture
 So hee be with me ; By him, like a shadow
 Ile ever dwell ; within this houre the whoobub
 36 Will be all ore the prision : I am then
 Kissing the man they looke for : farewell Father ;
 Get many more such prisoners, and such daughters,
 And shortly you may keepe your selfe. Now to him :

[III. 1]

Actus Tertius.

Cornets in sundry places.
 Noise and hallowing as people a Maying.

Scæna 1. Enter Arcite alone.

Arcite. The Duke has lost Hypolita ; each tooke
 A severall land. This is a solemne Right
 They owe bloomed May, and the Athenians pay it
 4 To'th heart of Ceremony : O Queene Emilia
 Fresher then May, sweeter
 Then hir gold Buttons on the bowes, or all
 Th' enamell'd knackes o'th Meade, or garden, yea
 8 (We challenge too) the bancke of any Nymph
 That makes the streame seeme flowers ; thou o Iewell
 O'th wood, o'th world, hast likewise blest a pace
 With thy sole presence, in thy rumination
 12 That I poore man might eftsoones come betweene
 And chop on some cold thought, thrice blest chance
 To drop on such a Mistris, expectation most gilltlesse on't : tell me O Lady Fortune
 16 (Next after Emely my Soveraigne) how far

I may be proud. She takes strong note of me, [III. 1]
 Hath made me neere her; and this beuteous Morne
 (The prim'ft of all the yeare) presents me with
 A brace of horses, two such Steeds might well 20
 Be by a paire of Kings backt, in a Field
 That their crownes titles tride: Alas, alas
 Poore Cofen Palamon, poore prifoner, thou
 So little dream'ft upon my fortune, that 24
 Thou thinkst thy selfe, the happier thing, to be
 So neare Emilia, me thou deem'ft at Thebes,
 And therein wretched, although free; But if Thou knew'ft my Mittris breathd on me, and that 28
 I ear'd her language, livde in her eye; O Coz
 What passion would enclose thee.
Enter Palamon as out of a Bush, with his Shackles: lends his fist at Arcite.
Palamon. Traytor kinsfeman,
 Thou shouldst perceive my passion, if these signes 32
 Of prifonment were off me, and this hand
 But owner of a Sword: By all othes in one
 I, and the iustice of my love would make thee
 A confest Traytor, o thou most perfidious 36
 That ever gently lookd the voydes of honour.
 That eu'r bore gentle Token; falsest Cofen
 That ever blood made kin, call'ft thou hir thine?
 Ile prove it in my Shackles, with these hands, 40
 Void of appointment, that thou ly'ft, and art
 A very theefe in love, a Chaffy Lord
 Nor worth the name of villaine: had I a Sword
 And these house clogges away. 44
Arc. Deere Cofin Palamon,
Pal. Cofoner Arcite, give me language, such
 As thou hast shewd me feate.
Arc. Not finding in 48
 The circuit of my breast, any grosse stufte
 To forme me like your blazon, holds me to
 This gentleneffe of answer; tis your passion
 That thus mistakes, the which to you being enemy, 52
 Cannot to me be kind: honor, and honestie

- [III. 1] I cherish, and depend on, how so ev'r
You skip them in me, and with them faire Coz
56 Ile maintaine my proceedings; pray be pleas'd
To shew in generous termes, your griefes, since that
Your question's with your equall, who professes
To cleare his owne way, with the minde and Sword
60 Of a true Gentleman.
Pal. That thou durst Arcite.
Arc. My Coz, my Coz, you have beene well advertif'd
How much I dare, y'ave feene me use my Sword
64 Against th'advice of feare: fure of another
You would not heare me doubted, but your silence
Should breake out, though i'th Sanctuary.
Pal. Sir,
68 I have feene you move in such a place, which well
Might justifie your manhood, you were calld (faire
A good knight and a bold; But the whole weeke's not
If any day it rayne: Their valiant temper
72 Men loose when they encline to trecherie,
And then they fight like compell'd Beares, would fly
Were they not tyde.
Arc. Kinsman, you might as well
76 Speake this, and act it in your Glasse, as to
His eare, which now disdaines you.
Pal. Come up to me,
Quit me of these cold Gyves, give me a Sword
80 Though it be rustie, and the charity
Of one meale lend me; Come before me then
A good Sword in thy hand, and doe but fay
That Emily is thine, I will forgive
84 The trespassse thou hast done me, yea my life
If then thou carry't, and brave soules in shades
That have dyde manly, which will seeke of me
Some newes from earth, they shall get none but this 88 That thou art brave, and noble.
Arc. Be content,
Againe betake you to your hawthorne house,
With counsaile of the night, I will be here
92 With wholesome viands; these impediments

Will I file off, you shall have garments, and Perfumes to kill the smell o'th prison, after When you shall stretch your selfe, and say but Arcite	[III. 1]
I am in plight, there shall be at your choyce Both Sword, and Armour.	96
Pal. Oh you heavens, dares any So noble beare a guilty busines! none But onely Arcite , therefore none but Arcite	100
In this kinde is so bold. Arc. Sweete Palamon .
Pal. I doe embrace you, and your offer, for Your offer doo't I onely, Sir your person Without hipocriſy I may not wiſh	104
	Winde hornes of Cornets.
More then my Swords edge ont. Arc. You heare the Hornes ; Enter your Muſicke leaſt this match between's Be croft, er met, give me your hand, farewell. Ile bring you every needfull thing : I pray you Take comfort and be ſtrong.	108
Pal. Pray hold your promiſe ; And doe the deede with a bent brow, moſt crtaine You love me not, be rough with me, and powre This oile out of your language ; by this ayre I could for each word, give a Cuffe : my ſtomach not reconcild by reaſon,	112 116
Arc. Plainely ſpoken, Yet pardon me hard language, when I ſpur
	Winde hornes.
My horſe, I chide him nor ; content, and anger In me have but one face. Harke Sir, they call The ſcatterd to the Banket ; you muſt gueſſe I have an office there.	120
Pat. Sir your attendance Cannot pleaſe heaven, and I know your office Vnjuſtly is atcheev'd.	124
Arc. If a good title, I am perſwaded this queſtion ſicke between's,	128
	By

[III. 1] By bleeding must be cur'd. I am a Suitour,
That to your Sword you will bequeath this plea
And talke of it no more.

132 Pal. But this one word :
You are going now to gaze upon my Miftris,
For note you, mine she is.

Arc, Nay then.

136 Pal. Nay pray you,
You talke of feeding me to breed me strength
You are going now to looke upon a Sun
That strenghtens what it lookes on, there

140 You have a vantage ore me, but enjoy't till
I may enforce my remedy. Farewell.

Exeunt.

[III. 2] Scæna 2. Enter Iaylors daughter alone.

Daugh. He has mistooke; the Beake I meant, is gon
After his fancy, Tis now welnigh morning,
No matter, would it were perpetuall night,

4 And darkenes Lord o'th world, Harke tis a wolfe :
In me hath greife flaine feare, and but for one thing
I care for nothing, and that's Palamon.

I wreake not if the wolves would jaw me, fo
8 He had this File ; what if I hallowd for him ?
I cannot hallow : if I whoop'd ; what then ?
If he not answear'd, I should call a wolfe,
And doe him but that fervice. I have heard

12 Strange howles this live-long night, why may't not be
They have made prey of him ? he has no weapons,
He cannot run, the Iengling of his Gives
Might call fell things to listen, who have in them

16 A fence to know a man unarm'd, and can Smell where resistance is. Ile fet it downe
He's torne to peeces, they howld many together
And then they feed on him : So much for that,

20 Be bold to ring the Bell ; how stand I then ?
All's char'd when he is gone, No, no I lye,
My Father's to be hang'd for his escape,
My selfe to beg, if I priz'd life so much

24 As to deny my act, but that I would not,

Should

Should I try death by duffons : I am mop't, [III. 2]
 Food tooke I none these two daies.
 Sipt some water. I have not clofd mine eyes
 Save when my lids scowrd off their bine ; alas 28
 Diffolue my life, Let not my fence unsettle
 Least I should drowne, or stab or hang my selfe.
 O state of Nature, faile together in me,
 Since thy best props are warpt : So which way now ? 32
 The best way is, the next way to a grave :
 Each errant step beside is torment. Loe
 The Moone is down, the Cryckets chirpe, the Schreichowle
 Calls in the dawne ; all offices are done 36
 Save what I faile in : But the point is this
 An end, and that is all. Exit.

Scæna 3. Enter Arcite, with Meate, Wine, and Files. [III. 3]
Arc. I should be neere the place, hoa. Cofen Palamon.
Enter Palamon.

Pal. Arcite.
Arc. The same : I have brought you foode and files,
 Come forth and feare not, her'esno Thefeus. 4
Pal. Nor none so honest Arcite.
Arc. That's no matter,
 Wee'l argue that hereafter : Come take courage,
 You shall not dye thus beaftly, here Sir drinke 8
 I know you are faint, then ile talke further with you
Pal. Arcite, thou mightst now poyson me.
Arc. I might.

But I must feare you first : Sit downe, and good now 12
 No more of these vaine parlies, let us not Having our ancient reputation with us
 Make talke for Fooles, and Cowards, To your health, &c.
Pal. Doe. 16
Arc. Pray sit downe then, and let me entreate you
 By all the honesty and honour in you,
 No mention of this woman, t'will disturbe us,
 We shall have time enough. 20
Pal. Well Sir, Ile pledge you. (blood man.
Arc. Drinke a good hearty draught, it breeds good
 Doe

[III. 3] Doe not you feele it thaw you ?

24 Pal. Stay, Ile tell you after a draught or two more.

Arc. Spare it not, the Duke has more Cuz : Eate now.

Pal. Yes.

Arc. I am glad you have so good a stomach.

28 Pal. I am gladder I have so good meate too't.

Arc. Is't not mad lodging, here in the wild woods Cofen

Pal. Yes, for then that have wilde Consciencies. (I see,

Arc. How tafts your vittails? your hunger needs no sawce

32 Pal. Not much.

But if it did, yours is too tart : sweete Cofen : what is this ?

Arc. Venifon.

Pal. Tis a lusty meate :

36 Giue me more wine ; here Arcite to the wenches

We have known in our daies. The Lord Stewards daughter.

Doe you remember her ?

Arc. After you Cuz.

40 Pal. She lov'd a black-haird man.

Arc. She did so ; well Sir.

Pal. And I have heard some call him Arcite. and

Arc. Out with't faith.

44 Pal. She met him in an Arbour :

What did she there Cuz ? play o'th virginals ?

Arc. Something she did Sir.

Pal. Made her groane a moneth for't ; or 2. or 3. or 10.

48 Arc. The Marshals Sifter,

Had her share too, as I remember Cofen,

Else there be tales abroade, you'l pledge her ?

Pal. Yes.

52 Arc. A pretty broune wench t'is-There was a time

When yong men went a hunting, and a wood,

And a broade Beech : and thereby hangs a tale : heigh ho.

Pal. For Emily, upon my life ; Foole

56 Away with this straind mirth ; I fay againe

That figh was breathd for Emily ; bafe Cofen,

Dar'ft thou breake first ?

Arc. you are wide.

60 Pal. By heaven and earth, ther's nothing in thee honest.

Arc. Then Ile leave you : you are a Beaft now : [III. 3]
Pal. As thou makft me, Traytour. (fumes :
Arc. Ther's all things needfull, files and fhirts, and, per-Ile come againe fome two howres hence, and bring 64
 That that fhall quiet all,
Pal. A Sword and Armour.
Arc. Feare me not ; you are now too fowle ; farewell.
 Get off your Trinkets, you fhall want nought ; 68
Pal. Sir ha :
Arc. Ile heare no more. Exit.
Pal. If he keepe touch, he dies for't. Exit.

Scæna 4, Enter Iaylors daughter. [III. 4]

Daugh. I am very cold, and all the Stars are out too,
 The little Stars, and all, that looke like aglets :
 The Sun has feene my Folly : Palamon ;
 Alas no ; hees in heaven ; where am I now ? 4
 Yonder's the fea, and ther's a Ship ; how't tumbles
 And ther's a Rocke lies watching under water ;
 Now, now, it beates upon it ; now, now, now,
 Ther's a leak fprung, a found one, how they cry ? 8
 Vpon her before the winde, you'l loofe all els :
 Vp with a courfe or two, and take about Boyes.
 Good night, good night, y'ar gone ; I am very hungry,
 Would I could finde a fine Frog ; he would tell me 12
 Newes from all parts o'th world, then would I make
 A Carecke of a Cockle fhell, and fayle
 By east and North East to the King of Pigmes,
 For he tels fortunes rarely. Now my Father 16
 Twenty to one is trust up in a trice
 To morrow morning, Ile fay never a word.

Sing. For ile cut my greene coat, afoote above my knee,
And ile clip my yellow lockes ; an inch below mine eie. 20
hey, nonny, nonny, nonny,
He's buy me a white Cut, forth for to ride
And ile goe seeke him, throw the world that is fo wide
hey nonny, nonny, nonny. 24
 O for a pricke now like a Nightingale, to put my breaft Against

[III. 4] Against. I shall sleepe like a Top else. Exit.

[III. 5] Scæna 6. Enter a Schoole master. 4. Countrymen : and Baum. 2. or 3. wenches, with a Taborer.

Sch. Fy, fy, what tediousity, & difenfanity is here among ye? have my Rudiments bin labourd so long with ye? milkd unto ye, and by a figure even the very plumbroth & marrow of 4 my understanding laid upon ye? and do you still cry where, and how, & wherfore? you most course freeze capacities, ye jave Iudgements, have I saide thus let be, and there let be,
 and then let be, and no man understand mee, proh deum,
 8 medius fidius, ye are all dunces: For why here stand I.
 Here the Duke comes, there are you clofe in the Thicket; the Duke appeares, I meete him and unto him I utter learned things, and many figures, he heares, and nods, and hums, and 12 then cries rare, and I goe forward, at length I fling my Cap up; marke there; then do you as once did Meleager, and the Bore break comly out before him: like true lovers, cast your felves in a Body decently, and sweetly, by a figure trace, and 16 turne Boyes.

1. And sweetly we will doe it Master Gerrold.

2. Draw up the Company, Where's the Taborour.

3. Why Timothy.

20 Tab. Here my mad boyes, have at ye.

Sch. But I say where's their women?

4. Here's Frix and Maudline.

(Barbery.)

2. And little Luce with the white legs, and bouncing

24 1. And freckeled Nel; that never faild her Master.

Sch. Wher be your Ribands maids? swym with your Bodies
 And carry it sweetly, and deliverly

And now and then a fauour, and a friske.

28 Nel. Let us alone Sir.

Sch. Wher's the rest o'th Muficke.

3. Disperfd as you commanded.

Sch. Couple then

32 And see what's wanting; wher's the Bavian?

My friend, carry your taile without offence

Or scandall to the Ladies; and be sure

You tumble with audacity, and manhood,

And when you barke doe it with judgement. [III. 5]

Bau. Yes Sir.

Sch. Quo usque taudem. Here is a woman wanting

4. We may goe whistle: all the fat's i'th fire.

Sch. We have, 40

As learned Authours utter, washd a Tile,
We have beene fatuus, and laboured vainely.

2. This is that scornefull peece, that scurvey hilding
That gave her promise faithfully, she would be here, 44
Cicely the Sempsters daughter:

The next gloves that I give her shall be dog skin;
Nay and she faile me once, you can tell Arcas
She swore by wine, and bread, she would not breake. 48

Sch. An Eele and woman,
A learned Poet sayes: unles by'th taile
And with thy teeth thou hold, will either faile,
In manners this was false position 52

1. A fire ill take her; do's she finch now?

3. What

Shall we determine Sir?

Sch. Nothing, 56

Our bufines is become a nullity
Yea, and a woefull, and a pittious nullity.

4. Now when the credite of our Towne lay on it,
Now to be frampall, now to pilfe o'th nettle, 60
Goe thy waies, ile remember thee, ile fit thee,

Enter Iaylors daughter.

Daughter. *The George alow, came from the South, from
The coast of Barbary a.
And there he met with brave gallants of war* 64

By one, by two, by three, a

*Well haild, well haild, you jolly gallants,
And whither now are you bound a
O let me have your company till come to the found a* 68

There was three fooles, fell out about an howlet

The one fed it was an owle

The other he fed nay,

The third he fed it was a hawke, and her bels wer cut away. 72

3. Ther's

[III. 5] 3. Ther's a dainty mad woman Mr. comes i'th Nick as mad as a march hare: if wee can get her daunce, wee are made againe: I warrant her, fhee'l doe the rarest gambols.

76 1. A mad woman? we are made Boyes.

Sch. And are you mad good woman?

Daugh. I would be forry else,

Give me your hand.

80 Sch. Why?

Daugh. I can tell your fortune.

You are a foole: tell ten, I have pozd him: Buz

Friend you must eate no white bread, if you doe

84 Your teeth will bleede extreamely, shall we dance ho?

I know you, y'ar a Tinker: Sirha Tinker

Stop no more holes, but what you should.

Sch. Dij boni. A Tinker Damzell? (play

88 Daug. Or a Conjuror: raise me a devill now, and let him Quipassa, o'th bells and bones.

Sch. Goe take her, aud fluently perswade her to a peace:

Et opus exegi, quod nec Iouis ira, nec ignis.

92 Strike up, and leade her in.

2, Come Lasse, lets trip it.

Daugh. Ile leade.

(Winde Hornes:

3. Doe, doe.

96 Sch. Perswafively, and cunningly: away boyes,

Ex. all but Schoolemaster.

I heare the hornes: give me some

Meditation, and marke your Cue;

Pallas inspire me.

Enter Thef. Pir. Hip. Emil. Arcite: and traine.

100 Thef. This way the Stag tooke.

Sch. Stay, and edifie.

Thef. What have we here?

Per. Some Countrey sport, upon my life Sir.

104 Per. Well Sir, goe forward, we will edifie.

Ladies fit downe, wee'l stay it.

(Ladies.

Sch. Thou doughtie Duke all haile: all haile sweet

Thef. This is a cold beginning.

108 Sch. If you but favour; our Country pastime made is,

We are a few of those collected here [III. 5]
 That ruder Tongues distinguish villager,
 And to say veritie, and not to fable;
 We are a merry rout, or else a rable 112
 Or company, or by a figure, Choris
 That fore thy dignitie will dance a Morris.
 And I that am the rectifier of all
 By title Pedagogus, that let fall 116
 The Birch upon the breeches of the small ones,
 And humble with a Ferula the tall ones,
 Doe here present this Machine, or this frame,
 And daintie Duke, whose doughtie dismall fame 120
 From Dis to Dedalus, from post to pillar
 Is blowne abroad; helpe me thy poore well willer,
 And with thy twinckling eyes, looke right and straight
 Vpon this mighty Morr—of mickle waight 124
 Is—now comes in, which being glewd together
 Makes Morris, and the cause that we came hether.
 The body of our sport of no small study
 I first appeare, though rude, and raw, and muddy, 128
 To speake before thy noble grace, this tenner:
 At whose great feete I offer up my penner.
 The next the Lord of May, and Lady bright,
 The Chambermaid, and Servingman by night 132
 That seeke out silent hanging: Then mine Hoff
 And his fat Spowfe, that welcomes to their cost
 The gauled Traveller, and with a beckning
 Informes the Tapster to inflame the reckning: 136
 Then the beast eating Clowne, and next the foole,
 The Bavian with long tayle, and eke long toole,
Cum multis alijis that make a dance,
 Say I, and all shall presently advance. 140
Thef. I, I by any meanes, deere Domine.
Per. Produce. Muficke Dance.
Intrate filij, Come forth, and foot it,
 Ladies, if we have beene merry
 And have pleasd thee with a derry, 144
 And a derry, and a downe

Knocke for Schoole. Enter
 The Dance.

Say

[III. 5] Say the Schoolemaster's no Clowne :

148 Duke, if we have pleas'd three too
And have done as good Boyes should doe,
Give us but a tree or twaine
For a Maypole, and againe

152 Ere another yeare run out,
Wee'l make thee laugh and all this rout.

Thef. Take 20. Domine ; how does my sweet heart.

Hip. Never so pleas'd Sir.

156 Emil. Twas an excellent dance, and for a preface
 I never heard a better. (warded.)

Thef. Schoolemaster, I thanke yon, One see'em all re-

Per. And heer's somethng to paint your Pole withall.

160 Thef. Now to our sports againe.

Sch. May the Stag thou huntst stand long,

And thy dogs be swift and strong :

May they kill him without lets,

164 And the Ladies eate his dowfets : Come we are all made.

Winde Hornes.

Dij Deaq ; omnes, ye have danc'd rarely wenches. Exeunt.

[III. 6] Scæna 7. Enter Palamon from the Bush.

Pal. About this houre my Cofen gave his faith

To visit me againe, and with him bring

Two Swords, and two good Armors ; if he faile

4 He's neither man, nor Souldier ; when he left me

I did not thinke a weeke could have restord

My lost strength to me, I was growne so low,

And Crest-falne with my wants : I thanke thee Arcite,

8 Thou art yet a faire Foe ; and I feele my felfe

With this refreshing, able once againe

To out dure danger : To delay it longer

Would make the world think when it comes to hearing,

12 That I lay fattng like a Swine, to fight

And not a Souldier : Therefore this blest morning

Shall be the last ; and that Sword he refuses,

If it but hold, I kill him with ; tis Iustice :

16 So love, and Fortune for me : O good morrow.

Enter Arcite with Armors and Swords.

Arcite.

Arc. Good morrow noble kinefman,	[III. 6]
Pal. I have put you To too much paines Sir.
Arc. That too much faire Cofen, Is but a debt to honour, and my duty.	20
Pal. Would you were fo in all Sir; I could with ye As kinde a kinfman, as you force me finde A beneficiall foe, that my embraces Might thanke ye, not my blowes.	24
Arc. I fhall thinke either Well done, a noble recompence.
Pal. Then I fhall quit you.	28
Arc. Defy me in thefe faire termes, and you fhew More then a Miftris to me, no more anger As you love any thing that's honourable; We were not bred to talke man, when we are arm'd And both upon our guards, then let our fury Like meeting of two tides, fly ftrongly from us, And then to whom the birthright of this Beauty Truely pertaines (without obbraidings, fcornes, Dispifings of our perfons, and fuch powtings Fitter for Girles and Schooleboyes) will be feene And quickly, yours, or mine: wilt please you arme Sir, Or if you feele your felfe not fitting yet And furnifhd with your old ftrength, ile ftay Cofen And ev'ry day difcourfe you into health, As I am fpard, your perfon I am friends with, And I could wifh I had not faide I lov'd her Though I had dide; But loving fuch a Lady And juftifying my Love, I muft not fly from't.	32 36 40 44
Pal. Arcite , thou art fo brave an enemy That no man but thy Cofen's fit to kill thee, I am well, and lufly, choofe your Armes.	48
Arc. Choofe you Sir.
Pal. Wilt thou exceede in all, or do'ft thou doe it To make me ipare thee?	52
Arc. If you thinke fo Cofen, You are deceived, for as I am a Soldier.

[III. 6] I will not spare you.

56 Pal. That's well said.

Arc. You'll finde it

Pal. Then as I am an honest man and love,
With all the justice of affection

60 Ile pay thee soundly : This ile take.

Arc. That's mine then,

Ile arme you first.

Pal. Do : pray thee tell me Cofen,

64 Where gotst thou this good Armour.

Arc. Tis the Dukes,

And to fay true, I stole it ; doe I pinch you ?

Pal. Noe.

68 Arc. Is't not too heavie ?

Pal. I have worne a lighter,

But I shall make it serve.

Arc. Ile buckl't close.

72 Pal. By any meanes.

Arc. You care not for a Grand guard ?

Pal. No, no, wee'l use no horses, I perceive

You would faine be at that Fight.

76 Arc. I am indifferent.

Pal. Faith so am I : good Cofen, thrust the buckle
Through far enough.

Arc. I warrant you.

80 Pal. My Caske now.

Arc. Will you fight bare-armd ?

Pal. We shall be the nimbler.

Arc. But use your Gauntlets though ; those are o'th leaft,

84 Prethee take mine good Cofen.

Pal. Thanke you Arcite.

How doe I looke, am I false much away ?

Arc. Faith very little ; love has usd you kindly.

88 Pal. Ile warrant thee, Ile strike home.

Arc. Doe, and spare not ;

Ile give you cause sweet Cofen.

Pal. Now to you Sir,

92 Me thinks this Armo'rs very like that, Arcite,

H

Thou

Thou wor'ft that day the 3. Kings fell, but lighter. [III. 6]

Arc. That was a very good one, and that day
I well remember, you outdid me Cofen,
I never ſaw ſuch valour: when you chargd 96
Vpon the left wing of the Enemy,
I ſpurd hard to come up, and under me
I had a right good horſe.

Pal. You had indeede 100
A bright Bay I remember.

Arc. Yes but all
Was vainely labour'd in me, you outwent me,
Nor could my wiſhes reach you; yet a little 104
I did by imitation.

Pal. More by vertue,
You are modeſt Cofen.

Arc. When I ſaw you charge firſt, 108
Me thought I heard a dreadfull clap of Thunder
Breake from the Troope.

Pal. But ſtill before that flew
The lightning of your valour: Stay a little, 112
Is not this peece too ſtreight?

Arc. No, no, tis well.

Pal. I would have nothing hurt thee but my Sword,
A bruife would be diſhonour. 116

Arc. Now I am perfect.

Pal. Stand off then.

Arc. Take my Sword, I hold it better.

Pal. I thanke ye: No, keepe it, your life lyes on it, 120
Here's one, if it but hold, I aſke no more,
For all my hopes: My Cauſe and honour guard me.

Arc. And me my love: * Is there ought elſe to ſay?

Pal. This onely, and no more: Thou art mine Aunts Son. 124
And that blood we deſire to ſhed is mutuall,
In me, thine, and in thee, mine: My Sword
Is in my hand, and if thou killſt me
The gods, and I forgive thee; If there be 128
A place prepar'd for thoſe that ſleepe in honour,
I wiſh his wearie ſoule, that falls may win it:

They bow fe-
verall wayes:
then advance and ſtand.

Fight

[III. 6] Fight bravely Cofen, give me thy noble hand.

132 Arc. Here Palamon : This hand shall never more
Come neare thee with such friendship.

Pal. I commend thee.

Arc. If I fall, curse me, and say I was a coward,

136 For none but such, dare die in these just Tryalls.

Once more farewell my Cofen,

Pal. Farewell Arcite.

Fight.

Hornes within : they stand.

Arc. Loe Cofen, loe, our Folly has undon us.

140 Pal. Why ?

Arc. This is the Duke, a hunting as I told you,

If we be found, we are wretched, O retire

For honours sake, and safely presently

144 Into your Bush agen ; Sir we shall finde

Too many howres to dye in, gentle Cofen :

If you be seene you perish instantly

For breaking prison, and I, if you reveale me,

148 For my contempt ; Then all the world will scorne us,

And say we had a noble difference,

But base disposers of it.

Pal. No, no, Cofen

152 I will no more be hidden, nor put off

This great adventure to a second Tryall :

I know your cunning, and I know your cause,

He that faints now, shame take him, put thy selfe

156 Vpon thy present guard.

Arc. You are not mad ?

Pal. Or I will make th'advantage of this howre

Mine owne, and what to come shall threaten me,

160 I feare lesse then my fortune : know weake Cofen

I love Emilia, and in that ile bury

Thee, and all crosses else.

Arc. Then come, what can come

164 Thou shalt know Palamon, I dare as well

Die, as discourse, or sleepe : Onely this feares me,

The law will have the honour of our ends.

Have at thy life.

Pal. Looke to thine owne well Arcite.

[III. 6]

Fight againe. Hornes.

Enter Theseus, Hipolita, Emilia, Perithous and traine.

Thefeus. What ignorant and mad malicious Traitors,
Are you? That gainst the tenor of my Lawes
Are making Battaile, thus like Knights appointed,
Without my leave, and Officers of Armes? 172
By Caflor both shall dye.

Pal. Hold thy word Thefeus,
We are certainly both Traitors, both despisers
Of thee, and of thy goodnesse: I am Palamon 176
That cannot love thee, he that broke thy Prison,
Thinke well, what that deserves; and this is Arcite
A bolder Traytor never trod thy ground

A Falsér neu'r seem'd friend: This is the man 180
Was begd and banish'd, this is he contemnes thee
And what thou dar'ft doe; and in this disguise

Against this owne Edi&t followes thy Sifter,
That fortunate bright Star, the faire Emilia 184
Whose fervant, (if there be a right in seeing,
And first bequeathing of the soule to) justly

I am, and which is more, dares thinke her his.
This treacherie like a most trusty Lover, 188
I call'd him now to answer; if thou bee'ft

As thou art spoken, great and vertuous,
The true decider of all injuries,
Say, Fight againe, and thou shalt see me Thefeus 192
Doe such a Iustice, thou thy selfe wilt envie,
Then take my life, Ile woove thee too't.

Per. O heaven,
What more then man is this! 196
Thef. I have sworne.
Arc. We seeke not

Thy breath of mercy Thefeus, Tis to me
A thing as soone to dye, as thee to say it, 200
And no more mov'd: where this man calls me Traitor.
Let me say thus much; if in love be Treason,
In service of so excellent a Beutie,

As

- [III. 6] As I love most, and in that faith will perish,
As I have brought my life here to confirme it,
As I have serv'd her truest, worthiest,
As I dare kill this Cofen, that denies it,
208 So let me be most Traitor, and ye please me :
For scorning thy Ediēt Duke, aske that Lady
Why she is faire, and why her eyes command me
Stay here to love her ; and if she say Traytor,
212 I am a villaine fit to lye unburied.
Pal. Thou shalt have pittie of us both, o Thefeus,
If unto neither thou shew mercy, stop,
(As thou art just) thy noble eare against us,
216 As thou art valiant ; for thy Cofens foule
Whose 12. strong labours crowne his memory,
Lets die together, at one instant Duke,
Onely a little let him fall before me,
220 That I may tell my Soule he shall not have her.
Thef. I grant your wish, for to say true, your Cofen
Has ten times more offended, for I gave him
More mercy then you found, Sir, your offenses
224 Being no more then his : None here speake for 'em
For ere the Sun set, both shall sleepe for ever.
Hipol. Alas the pittie, now or never Sister
Speake not to be denide ; That face of yours
228 Will beare the curses else of after ages
For these lost Cofens.
Emil. In my face deare Sister
I finde no anger to 'em ; nor no ruyn,
232 The misadventure of their owne eyes kill 'em ;
Yet that I will be woman, and have pittie,
My knees shall grow to'th ground but Ile get mercie.
Helpe me deare Sister, in a deede so vertuous,
236 The powers of all women will be with us,
Most royall Brother.
Hipol. Sir by our tye of Marriage.
Emil. By your owne spotlesse honour.
240 Hip. By that faith,
That faire hand, and that honest heart you gave me.

Emil. By that you would have pitty in another, [III. 6]
By your owne vertues infinite.

Hip. By valour, 244
By all the chaste nights I have ever pleafd you.

Thef. These are strange Conjurings. (our dangers,
Per. Nay then Ile in too : By all our friendship Sir, by all
By all you love most, warres ; and this sweet Lady. 248

Emil. By that you would have trembled to deny
A blushing Maide.

Hip. By your owne eyes : By strength
In which you swore I went beyond all women, 252
Almost all men, and yet I yeilded Thefeus.

Per. To crowne all this ; By your most noble soule
Which cannot want due mercie, I beg first.

Hip. Next heare my prayers. 256
Emil. Laft let me intreate Sir.
Per. For mercy.
Hip. Mercy.
Emil. Mercy on these Princss. 260
Thef. Ye make my faith reele : Say I felt
Compassion to'em both, how would you place it ?
Emil. Vpon their lives : But with their banishments.
Thef. You are a right woman, Sifter ; you have pitty, 264
But want the vnderstanding where to use it.
If you desire their lives, invent a way
Safer then banishment : Can these two live
And have the agony of love about 'em, 268
And not kill one another ? Every day
The'ld fight about you ; howrely bring your honour
In publique question with their Swords ; Be wise then
And here forget 'em ; it concernes your credit, 272
And my oth equally : I have said they die,
Better they fall by'th law, then one another.
Bow not my honor.

Emil. O my noble Brother, 276
That oth was rashly made, and in your anger,
Your reason will not hold it, if such vowes
Stand for expresse will, all the world must perish.

Beside

- [III. 6] Befide, I have another oth, gainst yours
Of more authority, I am fure more love,
Not made in passion neither, but good heede.
Thef. What is it Sifter ?
- 284 Per. Vrge it home brave Lady.
Emil. That you would nev'r deny me any thing
Fit for my modest fuit, and your free granting :
I tye you to your word now, if ye fall in't,
- 288 Thinke how you maim your honour ;
(For now I am fet a begging Sir, I am deafe
To all but your compassion) how, their lives
Might breed the ruine of my name ; Opinion,
- 292 Shall any thing that loves me perish for me ?
That were a cruell wifedome, doe men proyne
The fraight yong Bowes that blush with thousand Bloffoms
Because they may be rotten ? O Duke Thefeus
- 296 The goodly Mothers that have ground for these,
And all the longing Maides that ever lov'd,
If your vow stand, shall curse me and my Beauty,
And in their funerall songs, for these two Cofens
- 300 Despise my crueltie, and cry woe worth me,
Till I am nothing but the scorne of women ;
For heavens sake save their lives, and banish 'em.
Thef. On what conditions ?
- 304 Emil. Swear'em never more
To make me their Contention, or to know me,
To tread upon thy Dukedome, and to be Where ever they shall travel, ever strangers to one another.
- 308 Pal. Ile be cut a peeces
Before I take this oth, forget I love her ?
O all ye gods despise me then : Thy Banishment
I not mislike, so we may fairely carry
- 312 Our Swords, and cause along : else never trifle,
But take our lives Duke, I must love and will,
And for that love, must and dare kill this Cofen
On any peece the earth has.
- 316 Thef. Will you Arcite
Take these conditions ?

Pal.

Pal. H'es a villaine then. [III. 6]
Per. These are men.
Arcite. No, never Duke: 'Tis worse to me than begging. 320
 To take my life so basely, though I thinke
 I never shall enjoy her, yet ile preserve
 The honour of affection, and dye for her,
 Make death a Devill. 324
Thef. What may be done? for uow I feele compaffion.
Per. Let it not fall agen Sir.
Thef. Say Emilia
 If one of them were dead, as one must, are you 328
 Content to take th'other to your husband?
 They cannot both enjoy you; They are Princes
 As goodly as your owne eyes, and as noble
 As ever fame yet spoke of; looke upon'em, 332
 And if you can love, end this difference,
 I give consent, are you content too Princes?
Both. With all our foules.
Thef. He that the refuses 336
 Must dye then.
Both. Any death thou canst invent Duke.
Pal. If I fall from that mouth, I fall with favour,
 And Lovers yet unborne shall blesse my athes. 340
Arc. If she refuse me, yet my grave will wed me,
 And Souldiers sing my Epitaph.
Thef. Make choice then.
Emil. I cannot Sir, they are both too excellent 344
 For me, a bayre shall never fall of these men.
Hip. What will become of 'em?
Thef. Thus I ordaine it,
 And by mine honor, once againe it stands, 348
 Or both shall dye. You shall both to your Countrey,
 And each within this moneth accompanied
 With three faire Knights, appeare againe in this place,
 In which Ile plant a Pyramid; and whether 352
 Before us that are here, can force his Cofen
 By fayre and knightly strenght to touch the Pillar,
 He shall enjoy her: the other loofe his head,

And

[III. 6] And all his friends ; Nor shall he grudge to fall,
Nor thinke he dies with interest in this Lady :
Will this content yee ?

Pal. Yes : here Cofen Arcite

360 I am friends againe, till that howre.

Arc. I embrace ye.

Thef. Are you content Sister ?

Emil, Yes, I must Sir,

364 Els both miscarry.

Thef. Come shake hands againe then,

And take heede, as you are Gentlemen, this Quarrell
Sleepe till the howre prefixt, and hold your course.

368 Pal. We dare not faile thee Thefeus.

Thef. Come, Ile give ye

Now ufage like to Princes, and to Friends :

When ye returne, who wins, Ile settle heere,

372 Who loofes, yet Ile weepe upon his Beere.

Exeunt.

[IV. 1]

Actus Quartus.

Scæna 1. Enter Iailor, and his friend.

Iailor. Heare you no more, was nothing faide of me
Concerning the escape of Palamon ?
Good Sir remember.

4 1. Fr. Nothing that I heard,
For I came home before the busines
Was fully ended : Yet I might perceive
Ere I departed, a great likelihood
8 Of both their pardons : For Hipolita,
And faire-eyd Emilie, upon their knees
Begd with such hanfom pittie, that the Duke
Me thought stood staggering, whether he should follow
12 His rash o'th, or the sweet compassion
Of those two Ladies ; and to second them,
That truly noble Prince Perithous
Halfe his owne heart, fet in too, that I hope
16 All shall be well : Neither heard I one question

I

Of

Of your name, or his scape. Enter 2. Friend. [IV. 1]

Iay. Pray heaven it hold so.

2. Fr. Be of good comfort man; I bring you newes,

Good newes. 20

Iay. They are welcome,

2. Fr. Palamon has cleerd you,

And got your pardon, and discovered (Daughters,
How, and by whose meanes he escapt, which was your 24

Whose pardon is procurd too, and the Prifoner

Not to be held ungratefull to her goodnes,

Has given a fumme of money to her Marriage,

A large one ile affure you. 28

Iay. Ye are a good man

And ever bring good newes.

1. Fr. How was it ended?

2. Fr. Why, as it should be; they that nev'r begd 32

But they prevaild, had their suites fairely granted,

The prifoners have their lives.

1. Fr. I knew t'would be so.

2. Fr. But there be new conditions, which you'l heare of 36
At better time.

Iay. I hope they are good.

2. Fr. They are honourable,

How good they'l prove, I know not. 40

Enter Wooer.

1. Fr. T'will be knowne.

Woo. Alas Sir, wher's your Daughter?

Iay. Why doe you aske?

Woo. O Sir when did you see her? 44

2. Fr. How he lookes?

Iay. This morning. (the sleepe?)

Woo. Was she well? was she in health? Sir, when did

1. Fr. These are strange Questions. 48

Iay. I doe not thinke she was very well, for now

You make me minde her, but this very day

I ask'd her questions, and she answered me

So farre from what she was, so childishly. 52

So fillily, as if she were a foole,

An

[IV. 1] An Inocent, and I was very angry.

But what of her Sir? (as good by me

56 Woo. Nothing but my pittie; but you must know it, and
As by an other that lesse loves her:

Iay. Well Sir.

1. Fr. Not right?

60 2. Fr. Not well?——Wooer, No Sir not well.

Woo. Tis too true, she is mad.

1. Fr. It cannot be.

Woo. Beleeve you'll finde it so.

64 Iay. I halfe suspected

What you told me: the gods comfort her:

Either this was her love to Palamon,

Or feare of my miscarrying on his scape,

68 Or both.

Woo. Tis likely.

Iay. But why allthis haste Sir?

Woo. Ile tell you quickly. As I late was angling

72 In the great Lake that lies behind the Pallace,

From the far shore, thicke set with reedes, and Sedges,

As patiently I was attending sport,

I heard a voyce, a shrill one, and attentive

76 I gave my eare, when I might well perceive

T'was one that sung, and by the smallnesse of it

A boy or woman. I then left my angle

To his owne skill, came neere, but yet perceivd not

80 Who made the sound; the rushes, and the Reeds

Had so encompassd it: I laide me downe

And listned to the words she song, for then

Through a small glade cut by the Fisher men,

84 I saw it was your Daughter.

Iay. Pray goe on Sir?

Woo. She sung much, but no fence; onely I heard her

Repeat this often. Palamon is gone,

88 Is gone to'th wood to gather Mulberies,

Ile finde him out to morrow.

1. Fr. Pretty foule.

Woo. His shackles will betray him, hee'l be taken,

And what shall I doe then ? Ile bring a beavy, [IV. 1]
 A hundred blacke eyd Maides, that love as I doe
 With Chaplets on their heads of Daffadillies,
 With cherry-lips, and cheekes of Damaske Roses,
 And all wee'l daunce an Antique fore the Duke, 96
 And beg his pardon ; Then she talk'd of you Sir ;
 That you must loose your head to morrow morning,
 And she must gather flowers to bury you,
 And see the house made handsome, then she sung 100
 Nothing but Willow, willow, willow, and betweene
 Ever was, Palamon, faire Palamon,
 And Palamon, was a tall yong man. The place
 Was knee deepe where she sat ; her careles Treffes, 104
 A wreake of bull-rush rounded ; about her stucke
 Thousand fresh water flowers of severall cullors.
 That me thought she appeared like the faire Nymph
 That feedes the lake with waters, or as Iris 108
 Newly dropt downe from heaven ; Rings she made
 Of rushes that grew by, and to 'em spoke
 The prettiest poesies : Thus our true love's tide,
 This you may loose, not me, and many a one : 112
 And then she wept, and sung againe, and sigh'd,
 And with the same breath smil'd, and kist her hand.
 2. Fr. Alas what pittie it is ?
Woer. I made in to her. 116
 She saw me, and straight fought the flood, I sav'd her,
 And fet her safe to land : when presently
 She slipt away, and to the Citty made,
 With such a cry, and swiftnes, that beleeve me 120
 Shee left me farre behinde her ; three, or foure,
 I saw from farre off crosse her, one of 'em
 I knew to be your brother, where she staid,
 And fell, scarce to be got away : I left them with her. 124
Enter Brother, Daughter, and others.
 And hether came to tell you : Here they are.
Daugh. May you never more enjoy the light, &c.
 Is not this a fine Song ?
Bro. O a very fine one. 128
Daugh.

- [IV. 1] Daugh. I can fing twenty more.
Bro. I thinke you can,
Daugh. Yes truely can I, I can fing the Broome, 132 And Bony Robin. Are not you a tailour ?
Bro. Yes,
Daugh. Wher's my wedding Gowne ?
Bro. Ile bring it to morrow.
136 Daugh. Doe, very rarely, I must be abroad else
To call the Maides, and pay the Minstrels
For I must loofe my Maydenhead by cocklight
Twill never thrive else.
140 O faire, oh sweete, &c. Singes.
Bro. You must ev'n take it patiently.
Jay. Tis true,
Daugh. Good 'ev'n, good men, pray did you ever heare
144 Of one yong Palamon ?
Jay. Yes wench we know him.
Daugh. Is't not a fine yong Gentleman ?
Jay. Tis, Love.
148 Bro. By no meane croffe her, she is then distemperd
For worfe then now she shoves.
1. Fr. Yes, he's a fine man.
Daugh. O, is he so ? you have a Sister.
152 1. Fr. Yes.
Daugh. But she shall never have him, tell her so,
For a tricke that I know, y'had best looke to her,
For if she see him once, she's gone, she's done,
156 And undon in an howre. All the young Maydes
Of our Towne are in love with him, but I laugh at 'em
And let 'em all alone, Is't not a wise course ?
1. Fr. Yes. (by him,
160 Daugh. There is at least two hundred now with child
There must be fowre ; yet I keepe close for all this,
Close as a Cockle ; and all these must be Boyes,
He has the tricke on't, and at ten yeares old
164 They must be all gelt for Musitians,
And fing the wars of Theseus.
2. Fr. This is strange.

- Daugh.* As ever you heard, but say nothing. [IV. 1]
 1. Fr. No. (him, 168)
- Daugh.* They come from all parts of the Dukedome to Ile warrant ye, he had not so few laft night
 As twenty to dispatch, hee'l tickl't up
 In two howres, if his hand be in. 172
- Iay.* She's loft
 Paft all cure.
- Bro.* Heaven forbid man.
- Daugh.* Come hither, you are a wife man. 176
1. Fr. Do's she know him?
 1. Fr. No, would she did.
- Daugh.* You are mafter of a Ship?
Iay. Yes. 180
- Daugh.* Wher's your Compaffe?
Iay. Heere.
Daugh. Set it too'th North.
- And now direct your course to'th wood, wher Palamon 184
 Lyes longing for me; For the Tackling
 Let me alone; Come waygh my hearts, cheerely.
- All.* Owgh, owgh, owgh, tis up, the wind's faire, top the Bowling, out with the maine faile, wher's your 188
 Whistle Mafter?
- Bro.* Lets get her in.
Iay. Vp to the top Boy.
Bro. Wher's the Pilot? 192
1. Fr. Heere,
Daugh. What ken'ft thou?
 2. Fr. A faire wood.
- Daugh.* Beare for it mafter: take about: Singes. 196
When Cinthia with her borrowed light, &c. Exeunt.
- Scæna 2. Enter Emilia alone, with 2. Pictures. [IV. 2]
- Emilia.* Yet I may binde those wounds up, that must
 And bleed to death for my fake elfe; Ile choofe, (open
 And end their strife: Two such yong hanfom men
 Shall never fall for me, their weeping Mothers, 4
 Following the dead cold ashes of their Sonnes
 Shall never curse my cruelty: Good heaven,
 What

- [IV. 2] What a sweet face has Arcite? if wife nature
 8 With all her best endowments, all those beauties
 She fowes into the birthes of noble bodies,
 Were here a mortall woman, and had in her
 The coy denials of yong Maydes, yet doubtles,
 12 She would run mad for this man: what an eye?
 Of what a fyry sparkle, and quick sweetnes,
 Has this yong Prince? Here Love himselfe fits smyling,
 Iust such another wanton Ganimead,
 16 Set Love a fire with, and enforced the god
 Snatch up the goodly Boy, and fet him by him
 A shining constellation: What a brow,
 Of what a spacious Majesty he carries?
 20 Arch'd like the great eyd Iuno's, but far sweeter,
 Smoother then Pelops Shoulder? Fame and honour
 Me thinks from hence, as from a Promontory
 Pointed in heaven, should clap their wings, and fling
 24 To all the under world, the Loves, and Fights
 Of gods, and such men neere 'em. Palamon,
 Is but his foyle, to him, a meere dull shadow,
 Hee's swarth, and meagre, of an eye as heavy
 28 As if he had lost his mother; a still temper,
 No stirring in him, no alacrity,
 Of all this sprightly sharpenes, not a smile;
 Yet these that we count errors may become him:
 32 Narcissus was a sad Boy, but a heavenly:
 Oh who can finde the bent of womans fancy?
 I am a Foole, my reason is lost in me,
 I have no choice, and I have ly'd so lewdly
 36 That women ought to beate me. On my knees
 I aske thy pardon: Palamon, thou art alone,
 And only beutifull, and these the eyes,
 These the bright lamps of beauty, that command
 40 And threaten Love, and what yong Mayd dare crosse 'em
 What a bold gravity, and yet inviting
 Has this browne manly face? O Love, this only
 From this howre is Complexion: Lye there Arcite,
 44 Thou art a changling to him, a meere Gipsy.

And

And this the noble Bodie : I am fotted, [IV. 2]
 Vtterly loft : My Virgins faith has fled me.
 For if my brother but even now had ask'd me
 Whether I lov'd, I had run mad for Arcite, 48
 Now if my Sifter; More for Palamon,
 Stand both together : Now, come aske me Brother,
 Alas, I know not : aske me now sweet Sifter,
 I may goe looke; What a meere child is Fancie, 52
 That having two faire gawdes of equall sweetnesse,
 Cannot distinguish, but must crie for both:

Enter Emil. and Gent.

Emil. How now Sir?

Gent. From the Noble Duke your Brother 56
 Madam, I bring you newes : The Knights are come.

Emil. To end the quarrell?

Gent. Yes.

Emil. Would I might end first : 60
 What finnes have I committed, chast Diana,
 That my unspotted youth must now be soyld
 With blood of Princes? and my Chastitie
 Be made the Altar, where the lives of Lovers, 64
 Two greater, and two better never yet
 Made mothers joy, must be the sacrifice
 To my unhappy Beautie?

Enter Thejeus, Hipolita, Perithous and attendants.

Thejeus. Bring 'em in quickly, 68
 By any meanes, I long to see'em.
 Your two contending Lovers are return'd,
 And with them their faire Knights : Now my faire Sifter,
 You must love one of them. 72

Emil. I had rather both,
 So neither for my sake should fall untimely

Enter Messengers. Curtis.

Thef. Who saw'em?

Per. I a while. 76

Gent. And I.

Thef. From whence come you Sir?

Mess. From the Knights.

Thef.

- [IV. 2] Thef. Pray speake
 You that have seene them, what they are.
Meff. I will Sir,
 And truly what I thinke: Six braver spirits
 84 Then these they have brought, (if we judge by the outside)
 I never saw, nor read of: He that stands
 In the fittest place with Arcite, by his seeming
 Should be a stout man, by his face a Prince,
 88 (His very lookes so say him) his complexion,
 Nearer a browne, than blacke; sterne, and yet noble,
 Which shewes him hardy, fearelesse, proud of dangers:
 The circles of his eyes shew faire within him,
 92 And as a heated Lyon, so he lookes;
 His haire hangs long behind him, blacke and shining
 Like Ravens wings: his shoulders broad, and strong,
 Armd long and round, and on his Thigh a Sword
 96 Hung by a curious Bauldricke; when he frownes
 To feale his will with, better o' my conscience
 Was never Souldiers friend.
Thef. Thou ha'ft well describde him,
 100 Per. Yet a great deale short
 Me thinkes, of him that's first with Palamon.
Thef. Pray speake him friend.
Per. I ghesse he is a Prince too,
 104 And if it may be, greater; for his shew
 Has all the ornament of honour in't:
 Hee's somewhat bigger, then the Knight he spoke of,
 But of a face far sweeter; His complexion
 108 Is (as a ripe grape) ruddy: he has felt
 Without doubt what he fights for, and so apter
 To make this cause his owne: In's face appears
 All the faire hopes of what he undertakes,
 112 And when he's angry, then a fetled valour
 (Not tainted with extreames) runs through his body,
 And guides his arme to brave things: Feare he cannot,
 He shewes no such soft temper, his head's yellow,
 116 Hard hayr'd, and curld, thicke twind like Ivy tops,
 Not to undoe with thunder; In his face

K

The

The liverie of the warlike Maide appears, [IV. 2]
 Pure red, and white, for yet no beard has blest him.
 And in his rowling eyes, fits victory, 120
 As if she ever ment to corect his valour :
 His Nose stands high, a Character of honour.
 His red lips, after fights, are fit for Ladies.
Emil. Must these men die too? 124
Per. When he speakes, his tongue
 Sounds like a Trumpet ; All his lyneaments
 Are as a man would with 'em, strong, and cleane,
 He weares a well-steeld Axe, the staffe of gold, 128
 His age some five and twenty.
Meff. Ther's another,
 A little man, but of a tough soule, seeming
 As great as any : fairer promifes 132
 In such a Body, yet I never look'd on.
Per. O, he that's freckle fac'd ?
Meff. The same my Lord,
 Are they not sweet ones? 136
Per. Yes they are well.
Meff. Me thinkes,
 Being so few, and well disposd, they show
 Great, and fine art in nature, he's white hair'd, 140
 Not wanton white, but such a manly colour
 Next to an aborne, tough, and nimble fet,
 Which shoves an active soule ; his armes are brawny
 Linde with strong finewes : To the shoulder peece, 144
 Gently they swell, like women new conceav'd,
 Which speakes him prone to labour, never fainting
 Vnder the waight of Armes ; stout harted, still,
 But when he stirs, a Tiger ; he's gray eyd, 148
 Which yeelds compassion where he conquers : sharpe
 To spy advantages, and where he finds 'em,
 He's swift to make 'em his : He do's no wrongs,
 Nor takes none ; he's round fac'd, and when he smiles 152
 He shoves a Lover, when he frownes, a Souldier :
 About his head he weares the winners oke,
 And in it stucke the favour of his Lady :

His

- [IV. 2] His age, some fix and thirtie. In his hand
He beares a charging Staffe, embost with filver.
Thef. Are they all thus?
Per. They are all the sonnes of honour.
- 160 Thef. Now as I have a soule I long to see'em.
Lady you shall see men fight now.
Hip. I wish it,
But not the cause my Lord; They would show
164 Bravely about the Titles of two Kingdomes;
Tis pittie Love should be so tyrannous:
O my soft harted Sitter, what thinke you?
Weepe not, till they weepe blood; Wench it must be.
- 168 Thef. You have steeld'em with your Beautie: honord
To you I give the Feild; pray order it, (Friend,
Fitting the persons that must use it.
Per. Yes Sir.
- 172 Thef. Come, Ile goe visit 'em: I cannot stay,
Their fame has fir'd me so; Till they appeare,
Good Friend be royall.
Per. There shall want no bravery.
- 176 Emilia. Poore wench goe weepe, for whofoever wins, Loofes a noble Cosen, for thy sins. Exeunt.
- [IV. 3] Scæna 3. Enter Iailor, Wooer, Doctor.
Doct. Her distraction is more at some time of the Moone,
Then at other some, is it not?
Iay. She is continually in a harmelesse distemper, sleepe
4 Little, altogether without appetite, save often drinking,
Dreaming of another world, and a better; and what Broken peece of matter so'ere she's about, the name
Palamon lardes it, that she farces ev'ry bufines
Enter Daughter.
- 8 Withall, fyts it to every question; Looke where Shee comes, you shall perceive her behaviour.
Daugh. I have forgot it quite; The burden o'nt, was downe
A downe a, and pend by no worse man, then
- 12 Giraldo, Emilias Schoolemaster; he's as Fantastickall too, as ever he may goe upon's legs,
For in the next world will Dido see Palamon, and

Then will she be out of love with Eneas. [IV. 3]

Doct. What stuffs here? pore soule. 16

Ioy. Ev'n thus all day long.

Daugh. Now for this Charme, that I told you of, you must Bring a peece of silver on the tip of your tongue,

Or no ferry: then if it be your chance to come where 20

The blessed spirits, as the's a fight now; we maids

That have our Lyvers, peris'd, crakt to peeces with Love, we shall come there, and doe nothing all day long

But picke flowers with Proserpine, then will I make 24

Palamon a Nofegay, then let him marke me,—then.

Doct. How prettily she's amisse? note her a little further.

Dau. Faith ile tell you, sometime we goe to Barly breake,
We of the blessed; alas, tis a sore life they have i'th 28

Thother place, such burning, frying, boyling, hissing,

Howling, chattring, cursing, oh they have shrowd

Measure, take heede; if one be mad, or hang or

Drowne themselves, thither they goe, Jupiter bleffe 32

Vs, and there shall we be put in a Caldron of Lead, and Vsurers greafe, amongst a whole million of Cutpurfes, and there boyle like a Gamon of Bacon

That will never be enough. Exit. 36

Doct. How her braine coynes?

Daugh. Lords and Courtiers, that have got maids with Child, they are in this place, they shall stand in fire up to the

Nav'le, and in yce up to'th hart, and there th'offending part 40

burnes, and the deceaving part freezes; in troth a very greevous punishment, as one would thinke, for such a Trifle, beleve me one would marry a leaprous witch, to be rid on't

Ile assure you. 44

Doct. How she continues this fancie? Tis not an engrafted
Madnesse, but a most thicke, and profound mellencholly.

Daugh. To heare there a proud Lady, and a proud City wiffe, howle together: I were a beast and il'd call it good 48

sport: one cries, o this smoake, another this fire; One cries, o, that ever I did it behind the arras. and then howles; th'other curfes a suing fellow and her garden house.

Sings. I will be true, my stars, my fate, &c. Exit. Daugh. 52

Taylor.

- [IV. 3] Iay. What thinke you of her Sir? (minister to.
Doct. I thinke she has a perturbed minde, which I cannot Iay. Alas, what then ?
- 56 Doct. Vnderstand you, she ever affected any man, ere
 She beheld Palamon ?
Iay. I was once Sir, in great hope, she had fixd her Liking on this gentleman my friend. (great
- 60 Woo. I did thinke so too, and would account I had a Pen-worth on't, to give halfe my state, that both
 She and I at this present stood unfainedly on the Same tearmes. (the
- 64 Do. That intemperat surfeit of her eye, hath distemperd
 Other senses, they may returne and fettle againe to Execute their preordaind faculties, but they are Now in a most extravagant vagary. This you
 68 Must doe, Confine her to a place, where the light
 May rather seeme to steale in, then be permitted; take Vpon you (yong Sir her friend) the name of Palamon, say you come to eate with her, and to 72 Commune of Love; this will catch her attention, for This her minde beates upon; other objects that are Inferted tweene her minde and eye, become the pranks
 And friskins of her madnes; Sing to her, such greene 76 Songs of Love, as she sayes Palamon hath sung in Prison; Come to her, sticke in as sweet flowers, as the Season is mistres of, and thereto make an addition of Som other compounded odours, which are grateful to the 80 Sence: all this shall become Palamon, for Palamon can Sing, and Palamon is sweet, and ev'ry good thing, desire
 To eate with her, crave her, drinke to her, and still Among, intermingle your petition of grace and acceptance
 84 Into her favour: Learne what Maides have benee her Companions, and play-pheeres, and let them repaire to Her with Palamon in their mouthes, and appeare with Tokens, as if they suggested for him, It is a falselhood
 88 She is in, which is with falselhoods to be combated.
 This may bring her to eate, to sleepe, and reduce what's Now out of square in her, into their former law, and

Regiment ; I have seene it approved, how many times [IV. 3]
 I know not, but to make the number more, I have 92
 Great hope in this. I will betweene the passages of This project, come in with my applyance : Let us
 Put it in execution ; and hasten the successe, which doubt not
 Will bring forth comfort. Florish. Exeunt. 96

Actus Quintus. [V. 1]

Scæna 1. Enter Theseus, Perithous, Hipolita, attendants.

Thef. Now let'em enter, and before the gods
 Tender their holy prayers : Let the Temples
 Burne bright with sacred fires, and the Altars
 In hallowed clouds commend their swelling Incense 4
 To those above us : Let no due be wanting,
Florish of Cornets.

They have a noble worke in hand, will honour
 The very powers that love 'em.

Enter Palamon and Arcite, and their Knights.

Per Sir they enter. 8

They: You valiant and strong harted Enemies
 You royall German foes, that this day come
 To blow that neareness out that flames betweene ye ;
 Lay by your anger for an houre, and dove-like 12
 Before the holy Altars of your helpers
 (The all feard gods) bow downe your stubborne bodies,
 Your ire is more than mortall ; So your helpe be,
 And as the gods regard ye, fight with Iustice, 16
 I le leave you to your prayers, and betwixt ye
 I part my wishes.

Per. Honour crowne the worthiest.

Exit Theseus, and his traine.

Pal. The glasse is running now that cannot finish 20
 Till one of us expire : Thinke you but thus,
 That were there ought in me which strove to shew
 Mine enemy in this businesse, wer't one eye
 Against another : Arme opprest by Arme : 24

[V. 1] I would destroy th'offender, Coz, I would Though parcell of my felfe: Then from this gather
How I should tender you.

28 Arc. I am in labour
To push your name, your auncient love, our kindred
Out of my memory; and i'th felfe same place
To feate something I would confound: So hoyft we 32 The sayles, that must these vessells port even where
The heavenly Lymiter pleases.

Pal. You speake well;
Before I turne, Let me embrace thee Cofen

36 This I shall never doe agen.

Arc. One farewell.

Pal. Why let it be so: Farewell Coz.

Exeunt Palamon and his Knights.

Arc. Farewell Sir;

40 Knights, Kinsfemen, Lovers, yea my Sacrifices
True worshippers of Mars, whose spirit in you
Expells the feedes of feare, and th'apprehension
Which still is farther off it, Goe with me

44 Before the god of our profession: There Require of him the hearts of Lyons, and
The breath of Tigers, yea the fearcenesse too,
Yea the speed also, to goe on, I meane:

48 Else wish we to be Snayles; you know my prize
Must be drag'd out of blood, force and great feate
Must put my Garland on, where she stickes
The Queene of Flowers: our intercession then

52 Must be to him that makes the Campe, a Ceftron
Brymd with the blood of men: give me your aide
And bend your spirits towards him. They kneele.

56 Greene Nepture into purple.
Comets prewarne, whose havocke in vaste Feild
Vnearthed skulls proclaime, whose breath blowes downe,
The teeming Ceres foyzon, who dost plucke

60 With hand armenypotent from forth blew cloudes,
The mafond Turrets, that both mak'ft, and break'ft

The

The stony girthes of Citties : me thy puple, [V. 1]
 Yongest follower of thy Drom, instruct this day
 With military skill, that to thy lawde 64
 I may advance my Streamer, and by thee,
 Be fil'd the Lord o'th day, give me great Mars
 Some token of thy pleafure.

Here they fall on their faces as formerly, and there is heard clanging of Armor, with a short Thunder as the burst of a Battaile, whereupon they all rise and bow to the Altar.

O Great Corrector of enormous times, 68
 Shaker of ore-rank States, thou grand decider
 Of dustie, and old tytles, that healt with blood
 The earth when it is sicke, and curst the world
 O'th pluresie of people ; I doe take 72
 Thy signes auspiciously, and in thy name
 To my designe ; march boldly, let us goe. Exeunt.

Enter Palamon and his Knights, with the former obfervance.

Pal. Our stars must glister with new fire, or be
 To daie extinct ; our argument is love, 76
 Which if the goddesse of it grant, she gives Victory too, then blend your spirits with mine,
 You, whose free noblenesse doe make my cause
 Your personall hazard ; to the goddesse Venus 80
 Commend we our proceeding, and implore
 Her power unto our partie. Here they kneele as formerly.

Haile Sovereigne Queene of secrets, who hast power
 To call the feircest Tyrant from his rage ; 84
 And weepe unto a Girle ; that ha'ft the might Even with an ey-glance, to choke Mars's Drom
 And turne th'allarme to whispers, that canst make
 A Cripple florish with his Crutch, and cure him 88
 Before Apollo ; that may'ft force the King

To be his subjects vassaile, and induce
 Stale gravitie to daunce, the pould Bachelour
 Whose youth like wanton Boyes through Bonfyres 92
 Have skipt thy flame, at seaventy, thou canst catch
 And make him to the scorne of his hoarse throate

Abufe

- [V. 1] Abuse yong laies of love ; what godlike power
96 Haft thou not power upon ? To Phæbus thou
Add'ft flames, hotter then his the heavenly fyres
Did scortch his mortall Son, thine him ; the huntresse
All moyft and cold, some fay began to throw
100 Her Bow away, and figh : take to thy grace
Me thy vowd Souldier, who doe beare thy yoke
As t'wer a wreath of Roses, yet is heavier
Then Lead it felfe, stings more than Nettles ;
104 I have never beene foule mouthd againft thy law,
Nev'r reveald secreet, for I knew none ; would not
Had I kend all that were ; I never practifed
Vpon mans wife, nor would the Libells reade
108 Of liberall wits : I never at great feastes
Sought to betray a Beautie, but have blush'd
At fimpring Sirs that did : I have beene harfh
To large Confessors, and have hotly ask'd them
112 If they had Mothers, I had one, a woman,
And women t'wer they wrong'd. I knew a man
Of eightie winters, this I told them, who
A Lasse of foureteene bridged;twas thy power
116 To put life into dust, the aged Crampe
Had screw'd his square foote round,
The Gout had knit his fingers into knots,
Torturing Convulsions from his globie eyes,
120 Had almost drawne their spheeres, that what was life
In him seem'd torture : this Anatomie
Had by his yong faire pheare a Boy, and I Beleev'd it was his, for she swore it was,
124 And who would not beleeeve her ? briefe I am
To those that prate and have done ; no Companion
To those that boast and have not ; a defyer
To those that would and cannot ; a Rejoycer,
128 Yea him I doe not love, that tells clofe offices
The fowlest way, nor names concealements in
The boldest language, such a one I am,
And vow that lover never yet made figh
132 Truer then I. O then most soft sweet goddesse

Give me the victory of this question, which [V. 1]
Is true loves merit, and bleſſe me with a ſigne
Of thy great pleaſure.

Here Muſicke is heard, Doves are ſeene to flutter, they fall againe upon their faces, then on their knees.

Pal. O thou that from eleven, to ninetie raig'n't 136
In mortall boſomes, whoſe chaſe is this world
And we in heards thy game; I give thee thankes
For this faire Token, which being layd unto Mine innocent true heart, armes in affurance They bow. 140
My body to this buſineſſe: Let us riſe
And bow before the goddeſſe: Time comes on: Exeunt.

Still Muſicke of Records.

Enter Emilia in white, her haire about her ſhoulders, a whea-ten wreath: One in white holding up her traine, her haire ſtucke with flowers: One before her carrying a ſilver Hynde, in whic his conveyd Incenſe and ſweet odours, which being ſet upon the Altar her maides ſtanding a loofe, ſhe ſets fire to it, then they curſey and kneele.

Emilia. O ſacred, ſhadowie, cold and conſtant Queene,
Abandoner of Revells, mute contemplative, 144
Sweet, ſolitary, white as chaſte, and pure
As windefand Snow, who to thy femall knights
Alo w't no more blood than will make a bluſh,
Which is their orders robe. I heere thy Prieſt 148
Am humbled fore thine Altar, O vouchſafe
With that thy rare greene eye, which never yet
Behe!d thing maculate, looke on thy virgin,
And ſacred ſilver Miſtris, lend thine eare 152
(Which nev'r heard ſcurrill terme, into whoſe port Ne're entred wanton found,) to my petition
Seaſond with holy feare; This is my laſt
Of veſtall office, I am bride habited, 156
But mayden harted, a husband I have pointed,
But doe not know him, out of two, I ſhould
Chooſe one, and pray for his ſuccceſſe, but I
Am guiltleſſe of election of mine eyes, 160
Were I to looſe one, they are equall precious,

[V. 1] I could doo'mbe neither, that which peris'h'd should Goe too't unsentenc'd : Therefore most modest Queene,

164 He of the two Pretenders, that best loves me
And has the truest title in't, Let him
Take off my wheaten Gerland, or else grant
The fyle and qualitie I hold, I may 168 Continue in thy Band.

Here the Hynde vanishes under the Altar: and in the place ascends a Rose Tree, having one Rose upon it.

See what our Generall of Ebbs and Flowes
Out from the bowells of her holy Altar
With sacred act advances : But one Rose,

172 If well inspir'd, this Battaile shal confound
Both these brave Knights, and I a virgin flowre
Must grow alone unpluck'd.

Here is heard a sodaine twang of Instruments, and the Rose falls from the Tree.

The flowre is false, the Tree descends : O Mistris

176 Thou here dischargest me, I shall be gather'd,
I thinke so, but I know not thine owne will ;
Unclaspe thy Misterie : I hope she's pleas'd,
Her Signes were gracious.

They curtsy and Exeunt.

[V. 2] Scæna 2. Enter Doct̄or, Iaylor and Wooer, in habite of Palamon.

Doct̄. Has this advice I told you, done any good upon her ?

Wooer. O very much ; The maids that hept her company
Have halfe perswaded her that I am Palamon ; within this 4 Halfe houre she came smiling to me, and asked me what I
Would eate, and when I would kisse her : I told her
Presently, and kist her twice.

Doct̄. Twas well done ; twentie times had bin far better,

8 For there the cure lies mainly

Wooer. Then she told me

She would watch with me to night, for well she knew
What houre my fit would take me.

12 Doct̄. Let her doe so,

And when your fit comes, fit her home,

And presently.	[V. 2]
Wooer. She would have me sing.
Doct̄or. You did so ?	16
Wooer. No.
Doct̄. Twas very ill done then, You should observe her ev'ry way.
Wooer. Alas	20
I have no voice Sir, to confirme her that way.
Doct̄or. That's all one, if yee make a noyse, If she intreate againe, doe any thing, Lye with her if she aske you.	24
Iaylor. Hoa there Doct̄or.
Doct̄or. Yes in the waie of cure.
Iaylor But first by your leave I'th way of honestie.	28
Doct̄or. That's but a nicenesse, Nev'r cast your child away for honestie ; Cure her first this way, then if shee will be honest, She has the path before her.	32
Iaylor. Thanke yee Doct̄or.
Doct̄or. Pray bring her in And let's see how shee is.
Iaylor. I will, and tell her	36
Her Palamon staies for her : But Doct̄or, Me thinkes you are i'th wrong itill.
Doct̄. Goe, goe : you Fathers are fine Fooles : her honesty ? And we should give her phyficke till we finde that :	40
Wooer. Why, doe you thinke she is not honest Sir ?
Doct̄or. How old is she ?
Wooer. She's eighteene.
Doct̄or. She may be,	44
But that's all one, tis nothing to our purpose, What ere her Father saies, if you perceave Her moode inclining that way that I spoke of Videlicet, the way of flesh, you have me.	48
Wooer. Yet very well Sir.
Doct̄or. Please her appetite And doe it home, it cures her ipso facto,

[V. 2] The mellencholly humour that infects her.

Wooer. I am of your minde Doct̄or.

Enter Iaylor, Daughter, Maide.

Docter. You'll finde it fo; she comes, pray honour her.

Iaylor. Come, your Love Palamon staies for you childe,
56 And has done this long houre, to vifite you.

Daughter. I thanke him for his gentle patience,
He's a kind Gentleman, and I am much bound to him,
Did you nev'r see the horfe he gave me?

60 Iaylor. Yes.

Daugh. How doe you like him?

Iaylor. He's a very faire one.

Daugh. You never ſaw him dance?

64 Iaylor. No.

Daugh. I have often.

He daunces very finely, very comely,
And for a figge, come cut and long taile to him,
68 He turnes ye like a Top.

Iaylor. That's fine indeede.

Daugh. Hee'l dance the Morris twenty mile an houre,
And that will founder the beſt hobby-horfe
72 (If I have any ſkill) in all the pariſh,
And gallops to the turne of Light a'love,
What thinke you of this horfe?

Iaylor. Having theſe vertues

76 I thinke he might be brought to play at Tennis.

Daugh. Alas that's nothing.

Iaylor. Can he write and reade too.

Daugh. A very faire hand, and caſts himſelfe th'accounts
80 Of all his hay and provender: That Hoſtler
Muſt riſe betime that cozens him; you know
The Cheſtnut Mare the Duke has?

Iaylor. Very well.

84 Daugh. She is horribly in love with him, poore beaſt,
But he is like his maſter coy and ſcornfull.

Iaylor. What dowry has ſhe?

Daugh. Some two hundred Bottles,

88 And twenty ſtrike of Oates; but hee'l ne're have her;

He

He lifpes in's neighing able to entice	[V. 2]
A Millars Mare,
Hee'l be the death of her.
Doct̄or. What stufse she utters ?	92
Iaylor. Make curtsie, here your love comes.
Wooer. Pretty foule
How doe ye ? that's a fine maide, ther's a curtsie.
Daugh. Yours to command ith way of honestie ;	96
How far is't now to'th end o'th world my Masters ?
Doct̄or. Why a daies Iorney wench.
Daugh. Will you goe with me ?
Wooer. What shall we doe there wench ?	100
Daugh. Why play at stoole ball,
What is there else to doe ?
Wooer. I am content
If we shall keepe our wedding there :	104
Daugh. Tis true
For there I will assure you, we shall finde
Some blind Priest for the purpose, that will venture
To marry us, for here they are nice, and foolish ;	108
Besides my father must be hang'd to morrow
And that would be a blot i'th bufineffe
Are not you Palamon ?
Wooer. Doe not you know me ?	112
Daugh. Yes, but you care not for me ; I have nothing
But this pore petticoate, and too corse Smockes.
Wooer. That's all one, I will have you.
Daugh. Will you surely ?	116
Wooer. Yes by this faire hand will I.
Daugh. Wee'l to bed then.
Wooer. Ev'n when you will.
Daugh. O Sir, you would faine be nibling.	120
Wooer. Why doe you rub my kisse off ?
Daugh. Tis a sweet one,
And will perfume me finely against the wedding.
Is not this your Cofen Arcite ?	124
Doct̄or. Yes sweet heart,
And I am glad my Cofen Palamon

[V. 2] Has made fo faire a choice.

128 Daugh. Doe you thinke hee'l have me ?

Doctor. Yes without doubt.

Daugh. Doe you thinke fo too ?

Iaylor. Yes.

(growne,

132 Daugh. We shal have many children : Lord, how y'ar

My Palamon I hope will grow too finely

Now he's at liberty : Alas poore Chicken

He was kept downe with hard meate, and ill lodging

136 But ile kisse him up againe.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. What doe you here, you'l loofe the noblest fight
That ev'r was seene.

Iaylor. Are they i'th Field ?

140 Mess. They are

You beare a charge there too.

Iaylor. Ile away straight

I must ev'n leave you here.

144 Doctor. Nay wee'l goe with you,

I will not loofe the Fight.

Iaylor. How did you like her ?

Doctor. Ile warrant you within these 3. or 4. daies

148 Ile make her right againe. You must not from her

But still preserve her in this way.

Wooer. I will.

Doc. Lets get her in.

152 Wooer. Come sweete wee'l goe to dinner

And then weele play at Cardes.

Daugh. And shall we kisse too ?

Wooer. A hundred times

156 Daugh. And twenty.

Wooer. I and twenty.

Daugh. And then wee'l sleepe together.

Doc. Take her offer.

160 Wooer. Yes marry will we.

Daugh. But you shall not hurt me.

Wooer. I will not sweete.

Daugh. If you doe (Love) ile cry.

Florish Exeunt.

Scæna.

Scena 3. Enter Theseus, Hipolita, Emilia, Perithous: and [V. 3]
some Attendants, T. Tucke: Curtis.

Emil. Ile no step further.

Per. Will you loofe this fight ?

Emil. I had rather see a wren hawke at a fly
Then this decifion ev'ry; blow that falls 4
Threats a brave life, each stroake laments
The place whereon it fals, and founds more like
A Bell, then blade: I will stay here,
It is enough my hearing shall be punishd, 8
With what shall happen, gainst the which there is No deaffing, but to heare; not taint mine eye
With dread fights, it may shun.

Pir. Sir, my good Lord 12
Your Sifter will no further.

Thef. Oh she must.
She shall see deeds of honour in their kinde,
Which sometime show well pencild. Nature now 16
Shall make, and act the Story, the beleife
Both feald with eye, and eare; you must be present,
You are the victours meede, the price, and garlond
To crowne the Questions title. 20

Emil. Pardon me,
If I were there, I'd winke
Thef. You must be there;
This Tryall is as t'wer i'th night, and you 24
The onely star to shine.

Emil. I am extinct,
There is but envy in that light, which showes
The one the other: darkenes which ever was 28
The dam of horroure, who do's stand accurst
Of many mortall Millions, may even now
By casting her blacke mantle over both
That neither could finde other, get her selfe 32
Some part of a good name, and many a murther
Set off wherto she's guilty.

Hip. You must goe.

Emil. In faith I will not. 36

Thef.

[V 3] Thef. Why the knights must kindle
 Their valour at your eye : know of this war
 You are the Treafure, and must needs be by 40 To give the Service pay.

Emil, Sir pardon me,
 The tittle of a kingdome may be tride
 Out of it felfe.

44 Thef. Well, well then, at your pleasure,
 Those that remaine with you, could with their office
 To any of their Enemies.

Hip. Farewell Sifter,
 48 I am like to know your husband fore your felfe
 By some small start of time, he whom the gods
 Doe of the two know best, I pray them he
 Be made your Lot.

Exeunt Theseus, Hipolita, Perithous, &c.

52 Emil. Arcite is gently visagd ; yet his eye
 Is like an Engyn bent, or a sharpe weapon
 In a soft sheath ; mercy, and manly couraga
 Are bedfellowes in his visage : Palamon
 56 Has a most menacing aspect, his brow
 Is grav'd, and seemes to bury what it frownes on,
 Yet sometime tis not so, but alters to
 The quality of his thoughts ; long time his eye
 60 Will dwell upon his object. Mellencholly
 Becomes him nobly ; So do's Arcites mirth,
 But Palamons fadnes is a kinde of mirth,
 So mingled, as if mirth did make him fad,
 64 And fadnes, merry ; those darker humours that Sticke misbecomingly on others, on them
 Live in faire dwelling.

Cornets. Trompets found as to a charge.

Harke how yon spurs to spirit doe incite
 68 The Princes to their prooffe, Arcite may win me,
 And yet may Palamon wound Arcite to
 The spoyling of his figure. O what pittie Enough for such a chance ; if I were by 72 I might doe hurt, for they would glance their eies

Toward my Seat, and in that motion might [V. 3]
 Omit a ward, or forfeit an offence
 Which crav'd that very time : it is much better
 (Cornets. a great cry and noice within crying a Palamon.)
 I am not there, oh better never borne 76
 Then minister to such harme, what is the chance ?

Enter Servant.

Ser. The Crie's a Palamon.

Emil. Then he has won : Twas ever likely,
 He lookd all grace and successe, and he is 80
 Doubtlesse the prim'ft of men : I pre'thee run
 And tell me how it goes.

Showt, and Cornets : Crying a Palamon.

Ser. Still Palamon.

Emil. Run and enquire, poore Servant thou haft lost, 84
 Vpon my right side still I wore thy picture,
Palamons on the leff, why so, I know not,
 I had no end in't ; else chance would have it so.

Another cry, and showt within, and Cornets.

On the finifter side, the heart lyes ; Palamon 88
 Had the best boding chance : This burft of clamour
 Is sure th'end o'th Combat. Enter Servant.

Ser. They saide that Palamon had Arcites body
 Within an inch o'th Pyramid, that the cry 92
 Was generall a Palamon : But anon, Th'Assistants made a brave redemption, and
 The two bold Tytlers, at this instant are Hand to hand at it. 96

Emil. Were they metamorphisd
 Both into one ; oh why ? there were no woman
 Worth so compofd a Man : their single share,
 Their noblenes peculier to them, gives 100
 The prejudice of disparity values shortnes

Cornets. Cry within, Arcite, Arcite.

To any Lady breathing———More exulting ?
Palamon still ?

Ser. Nay, now the found is Arcite. 104

Emil. I pre'thee lay attention to the Cry.

Cornets,

[V. 3] Cornets. a great shout and cry, Arcite, victory.

Set both thine eares to'th busines.

Ser. The cry is

108 Arcite, and victory, harke Arcite, victory,
The Combats consummation is proclaim'd
By the wind Instruments.

Emil. Halfe fights saw

112 That Arcite was no babe ; god's lyd, his richnes
And cofflines of spirit look't through him, it could
No more be hid in him, then fire in flax,
Then humble banckes can goe to law with waters,

116 That drift windes, force to raging : I did thinke
Good Palamon would miscarry, yet I knew not
Why I did thinke so ; Our reasons are not prophets
When oft our fancies are : They are comming off :

120 Alas poore Palamon. Cornets.

Enter Theseus, Hipolita, Pirithous, Arcite as victor, and attendants, &c.

Thef. Lo, where our Sister is in expectation,
Yet quaking, and unfetled : Fairest Emily,
The gods by their divine arbitrament

124 Have given you this Knight, he is a good one
As ever strooke at head : Give me your hands ;
Receive you her, you him, be plighted with
A love that growes, as you decay ;

128 Arcite. Emily,

To buy you, I have lost what's deereft to me,
Save what is bought, and yet I purchase cheapely,
As I doe rate your value.

132 Thef. O loved Sister,

He speakes now of as brave a Knight as ere Did spur a noble Steed : Surely the gods
Would have him die a Batchelour, leaft his race

136 Should shew i'th world too godlike : His behaviour
So charmd me, that me thought Alcides was
To him a fow of lead : if I could praise

Each part of him to'th all ; I have spoke, your Arcite

140 Did not loofe by't ; For he that was thus good

Encountred yet his Better, I have heard [V. 3]
 Two emulous Philomels, beate the eare o'th night
 With their contentious throates, now one the higher,
 Anon the other, then againe the first, 144
 And by and by out breasted, that the fence
 Could not be judge betweene 'em : So it far'd
 Good space betweene these kinsmen ; till heavens did
 Make hardly one the winner : weare the Girland 148
 With joy that you have won : For the subdude,
 Give them our present Iustice, since I know
 Their lives but pinch 'em ; Let it here be done :
 The Sceane's not for our seeing, goe we hence, 152
 Right joyfull, with some sorrow. Arme your prize,
 I know you will not loose her : Hipolita
 I see one eye of yours conceives a teare
 The which it will deliver. Floriſh. 156
Emil. Is this wyning ?
 Oh all you heavenly powers where is you mercy ?
 But that your wils have faide it must be so,
 And charge me live to comfort this unfriended, 160
 This miserable Prince, that cuts away
 A life more worthy from him, then all women ;
 I should, and would die too.
Hip. Infinite pittie 164
 That fowre such eies should be so fixd on one
 That two must needs be blinde fort.
Thef. So it is. Exeunt.
 Scæna 4. Enter Palamon and his Knightes pyniond : Iaylor, [V. 4]
Executioner &c. Gard.
 Ther's many a man alive, that hath out liv'd
 The love o'th people, yea i'th selfefame state
 Stands many a Father with his childe ; some comfort
 We have by so considering : we expire 4
 And not without mens pittie. To live still,
 Have their good wishes, we prevent
 The loathsome misery of age, beguile
 The Gowt and Rheume, that in lag howres attend 8
 For grey approachers ; we come towards the gods
 Yong

- [V. 4] Yong, and unwapper'd not, halting under Crymes
 Many and stale : that fure shall please the gods
 12 Sooner than fuch, to give us Nectar with 'em,
 For we are more cleare Spirits. My deare kinsmen.
 Whose lives (for this poore comfort) are laid downe,
 You have sould 'em too too cheape.
- 16 1. K. What ending could be
 Of more content ? ore us the victors have Fortune, whose title is as momentary,
 As to us death is certaine : A graine of honour
 20 They not ore'-weigh us.
 2. K. Let us bid farewell ;
 And with our patience, anger tottring Fortune,
 Who at her certain'ft reeles.
- 24 3. K. Come ? who begins ?
Pal. Ev'n he that led you to this Banket, shall Taste to you all : ah ha my Friend, my Friend,
 Your gentle daughter gave me freedome once ;
 28 You'l fee't done now for ever : pray how do'es she ?
 I heard she was not well ; her kind of ill gave me some sorrow.
Jaylor. Sir she's well restor'd,
 32 And to be marryed shortly.
Pal. By my short life
 I am most glad on't ; Tis the latest thing
 I shall be glad of, pre'thee tell her so :
 36 Commend me to her, and to peece her portion
 Tender her this.
 1. K. Nay lets be offerers all.
 2. K. Is it a maide ?
- 40 Pal. Verily I thinke so,
 A right good creature, more to me deserving
 Then I can quight or speake of.
All K. Commend us to her. They give their purses.
- 44 Jaylor. The gods requight you all,
 And make her thankefull.
Pal. Adiew ; and let my life be now as short,
 As my leave taking. Lies on the Blocke.

1. K. Leade couragiour Cofin.

[V. 4]

1. 2. K. Wee'l follow cheerefully.

A great noife within crying, run, save hold :

Enter in haft a Meffenger.

Meff. Hold, hold, O hold, hold, hold.

Enter Pirithous in hafte.

Pir. Hold hoa : It is a curfed haft you made

If you have done fo quickly : noble Palamon,

52

The gods will fhew their glory in a life.

That thou art yet to leade.

Pal. Can that be,

When Venus I have faid is falfe ? How doe things fare ?

56

Pir. Arife great Sir, and give the tydings eare

That are moft early sweet, and bitter.

Pal. What

Hath wakt us from our dreame ?

60

Pir. Lift then : your Cofen

Mounted upon a Steed that Emily

Did firft beftow on him, a blacke one, owing

Not a hayre worth of white, which fome will fay

64

Weakens his price, and many will not buy

His goodneffe with this note : Which fuperftition

Heere findes allowance : On this horfe is Arcite

Trotting the ftones of Athens, which the Calkins

68

Did rather tell, then trample ; for the horfe

Would make his length a mile, if't pleaf'd his Rider

To put pride in him : as he thus went counting

The flinty pavement, dancing as t'wer to'th Muficke

72

His owne hoofes made ; (for as they fay from iron

Came Mufickes origen) what envious Flint,

Cold as old Saturne, and like him poffeft

With fire malevolent, darted a Sparke

76

Or what feirce fulphur elfe, to this end made,

I comment not ; the hot horfe, hot as fire

Tooke Toy at this, and fell to what diforder

His power could give his will, bounds, comes on end,

80

Forgets fchoole dooing, being therein traind,

And of kind mannadge, pig-like he whines

At

- [V. 4] At the sharpe Rowell, which he freats at rather 84 Then any jot obaies; seekes all foule meanes
 Of boyftrous and rough Iadrie, to dif-feate
 His Lord, that kept it bravely : when nought serv'd,
 When neither Curb would cracke, girthbreake nor diltiring
 88 Dif-roote his Rider whence he grew, but that (plunges
 He kept him tweene his legges, on his hind hoofes
 on end he stands
 That Arcites leggs being higher then his head
 92 Seem'd with ftrange art to hang : His victors wreath
 Even then fell off his head : and prefently
 Backeward the Iade comes ore, and his full poyze
 Becomes the Riders loade : yet is he living,
 96 But fuch a vefsell tis, that floates but for
 The furge that next approaches : he much defires
 To have fome fpeech with you : Loe he appeares.
Enter Thefeus, Hipolita, Emilia, Arcite, in a chaire.
Pal. O miferable end of our alliance
 100 The gods are mightie Arcite, if thy heart,
 Thy worthie, manly heart be yet unbroken
 Give me thy laft words, I am Palamon,
 One that yet loves thee dying.
 104 Arc. Take Emilia
 And with her, all the worlds joy : Reach thy hand
 Farewell : I have told my laft houre ; I was falie,
 Yet never treacherous : Forgive me Cofen :
 108 One kiffe from faire Emilia : Tis done :
 Take her : I die.
Pal. Thy brave foule feeke Elizium. (thee,
Emil. Ile clofe thine eyes Prince ; bleffed foules be with 112 Thou art a right good man, and while I live,
 This day I give to teares.
Pal. And I to honour.
Thef. In this place firft you fought : ev'n very here
 116 I fundred you, acknowledge to the gods
 Our thanks that you are living :
 His part is playd, and though it were too fhort
 He did it well : your day is lengthned, and,

The blissefull dew of heaven do's arowze you. [V. 4]
 The powerfull Venus, well hath grac'd her Altar,
 And given you your love : Our Master Mars
 Haft vouch'd his Oracle, and to Arcite gave
 The grace of the Contention : So the Deities 124
 Have shewd due justice : Beare this hence.
Pal. O Cofen,
 That we should things desire, which doe cost us
 The losse of our desire ; That nought could buy 128
 Deare love, but losse of deare love.
Thef. Never Fortune
 Did play a subtler Game : The conquerd triumphes,
 The victor has the Losse : yet in the passage, 132
 The gods have beene most equall : Palamon,
 Your kinfeman hath confest the right o'th Lady
 Did lye in you, for you first saw her, and Even then proclaimd your fancie : He restord her 136
 As your stolne Iewell, and desir'd your spirit
 To fend him hence forgiven ; The gods my justice
 Take from my hand, and they themselves become
 The Executioners : Leade your Lady off ; 140
 And call your Lovers from the stage of death,
 Whom I adopt my Frinds. A day or two Let us looke sadly, and give grace unto
 The Funerall of Arcite, in whose end 144
 The visages of Bridegroomes weele put on
 And simile with Palamon ; for whom an houre,
 But one houre since, I was as dearely sorry,
 As glad of Arcite : and am now as glad, 148
 As for him sorry. O you heavenly Charmers,
 What things you make of us ? For what we lacke
 We laugh, for what we have, are sorry still,
 Are children in some kind. Let us be thankfull 152
 For that which is, and with you leave dispute
 That are above our question ; Let's goe off,
 And beare us like the time. Florish. Exeunt.

Epilogue.

EPILOGVE.

- I *Would now aske ye how ye like the Play,
But as it is with Schoole Boyes, cannot say,
I am cruell fearefull : pray yet stay a while,*
4 *And let me looke upon ye : No man smile ?
Then it goes hard I see ; He that has Lov'd a yong handsome wench then, show his face :
Tis strange if none be heere, and if he will*
8 *Against his Conscience let him hiffe, and kill
Our Market : Tis in vaine, I see to stay yee,
Have at the worst can come, then ; Now what say ye ?
And yet mistake me not : I am not bold*
12 *We have no such cause. If the tale we have told
(For tis no other) any way content ye)
(For to that honest purpose it was ment ye)
We have our end ; and ye shall have ere long*
16 *I dare say many a better, to prolong
Your old loves to us : we, and all our might,
Rest at your service, Gentlemen, good night.*
