

Bodleian Libraries

UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

This book is part of the collection held by the Bodleian Libraries and scanned by Google, Inc. for the Google Books Library Project.

For more information see:

<http://www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/dbooks>

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike 2.0 UK: England & Wales (CC BY-NC-SA 2.0) licence.

17. a. 30.

CHAPMAN'S DRAMATIC WORKS.

THE COMEDIES AND TRAGEDIES OF GEORGE CHAPMAN
NOW FIRST COLLECTED WITH ILLUSTRATIVE NOTES AND A MEMOIR OF THE AUTHOR IN THREE VOLUMES

VOLUME THE THIRD

LONDON
JOHN PEARSON YORK STREET COVENT GARDEN
1873

THE Widdowes Teares

A Comedie.

As it was often presented in the blacke and white Friars.

Written by GEOR. CHAP.

L O N D O N,

Printed for John Browne, and are to be sold at his shop in Fleet-street in Saint Dunstanes Church-yard.

1 6 1 2.

To the right Vertuous and truly noble Gentleman, M^r IO. REED of Mitton, in the Countie of Glocester Esquire.

SIR, if any worke of this nature be worth the presenting to Friends
Worthie, and Noble; I presume this, will not want much of that value. Other Countrie men haue thought the like worthie of Dukes and Princes acceptations; Iniuſti ſdegnij; Il Pentamento Amoroſe; Califthe, Pastor
fido, &c. (all being but plaies) were all dedicate to Princes of Italie. And therefore only discourſe to ſhew my loue to your right vertuous and noble diſpoſition, This poor Comedie (of many deſired to ſee printed) I thought not utterly vnworthie that affectionate deſigne in me: Well knowing that your free iudgement weighs nothing by the Name, or Forme; or any vaine eſtimation of the vulgar; but will accept acceptable matter, as well in Plaies; as in many leſſe materialls, masking in more ſerious Titles: And ſo, till ſome worke more worthie I can ſelect, and perfect, out of my other Studies, that may better expreſſe me;
and more fit the grauitie of your ripe inclination, I reſt.

Yours at all parts moſt truly affected.

GEO. CHAPMAN.

The Actors.

Tharsalio the wooer.

Lyfander his brother.

Thir. Governour of Cyprus.

Lycas ser. to the widdow Countesse.

Argus, Gent. Vsher.

3. Lords suiters to Eudora the widdow Countesse.

Hyl. Nephew to Tharsalio, and Sonne to Lyfander.

Captaine of the watch.

2. Souldiers.

Eudora the widdow Countesse.

Cynthia, wife to Lyfander.

Sthenio.

Ianthe Gent. attending on Eudora.

Ero, waiting woman to Cynthia.

The VViddowes Teares.

A COMEDIE.

Actus Primi.

Scœna Prima.

THARSALIO Solus, with a Glasse in his hand making readie.

THow blinde imperfect Goddesse, that delights
(Like a deepe-reaching Statesman) to conuerse
Only with Fooles : Iealous of knowing spirits ;
For feare their pierfing Iudgements might dif-couer

Thy inward weaknesse, and despise thy power ;
Contemne thee for a Goddesse ; Thou that lad'st

Th'vnworthy Affe with gold ; while worth and merit
 Serue thee for nought ; (weake Fortune) I renounce
 Thy vaine dependance, and conuert my dutie
 And facrifices of my sweetest thoughts,
 To a more Noble Deitie. Sole friend to worth,
 And Patronesse of all good Spirits, Confidence, Shee be my Guide, and hers the praife of these
 My worthie vndertakings.

Enter Lyfander with a Glasse in his hand, Cynthia, Hylus, Ero.

Lyfand. Morrow Brother ; Not readie yet ?

Thar. No ; I haue somewhat of the Brother in me ; I dare say, your Wife is many times readie, and you not vp. Saue you sifter ; how, are you enamoured of my prefence ? how like you my aspect ?

Cynth. Faith no worfe then I did last weeke, the weather has nothing chang'd the graine of your complexion.

Thar. A firme prooffe, 'tis in graine, and so are not all complexions.

A good Souldiers face Sifter.

Cynth. Made to be worne vnder a Beuer.

Thar. I, and 'twould shew well enough vnder a maske too.

Lyfand. So much for the face.

Thar. But is there no obiect in this suite to whet your tongue vpon ?

Lyfand. None, but Fortune send you well to weare
 it : for shee best knowes how you got it.

Thar. Faith, 'tis the portion shee bestowes vpon yonger Brothers, valour, and good clothes : Marry, if you aske how we come by this new suite, I must take time to answere it : for as the Ballad saies, in written Bookes I find it. Brother these are the blossomes of spirit : and I will haue it said for my Fathers honour, that some of his children were truly begotten.

Lyfand. Not all?

Thar. Shall I tell you brother that I know will reioyce you? my former fuites haue been all spenders, this shall be a speeder.

Lyfand. A thing to bee heartily wisht; but brother, take heede you be not gull'd, be not too forward.

Thar. 'T had beene well for me, if you had follow'd that counsaile: You were too forward when you stept into the world before me, and gull'd me of the Land, that my spirits and parts were indeede borne too.

Cynth. May we not haue the blessing to know the aime of your fortunes, what coast, for heauens loue?

Thar. Nay, tis a proiect of State: you may see the preparation; but the designe lies hidden in the breasts of the wife.

Lyfand. May we not know't?

Thar. Not vnlesse you'le promise mee to laugh at it, for without your applause, Ile none.

Lyfand. The qualitie of it may bee such as a laugh will not be ill bestow'd vpon't; pray heauen I call not Arface sifter.

Cynth. What? the Pandresse?

Thar. Know you (as who knowes not) the exquisite Ladie of the Palace? The late Gouernours admired Widdow? The rich and haughtie Countesse Eudora? Were not shee a Iewell worth the wearing, if a man knew how to win her?

Lyfand. How's that? how's that?

Thar. Brother, there is a certaine Goddesse called Confidence, that carries a maine stroke in honourable preferments. Fortune waits vpon her; Cupid is at her becke; shee sends them both of errands. This Deitie doth promise me much assistance in this businesse.

Lyfand. But if this Deitie should draw you vp in a basket to your Countesses window, and there let you hang for all the wits in the Towne to shoot at: how then?

Thar. If shee doe, let them shoote their bolts and spare not: I haue a little Bird in a Cage here that sings me better comfort. What should be the barre? you'le say, I was Page to the Count her husband. What of that? I haue thereby one foote in her fauour alreadie; Shee has taken note of my spirit, and furuaid my good parts, and the picture of them liues in her eie: which sleepe, I know, can not close, till shee haue embrac't the substance.

Lyfand. All this fauours of the blinde Goddesse you speake of.

Thar. Why should I despaire, but that Cupid hath one dart in store for her great Ladiship, as well as for any other huge Ladie, whom she hath made stoope Gallant, to kisse their worthie followers. In a word, I am assured of my speede. Such faire attempts led by a braue resolute, are euermore seconded by Fortune.

Cynth. But brother? haue I not heard you say, your own eares haue been witnesse to her vowes, made solemnelly to your late Lord; in memorie of him, to preferue till death, the vnstain'd honour of a Widdowes bed. If nothing else, yet that might coole your confidence.

Thar. Tush sister, suppose you should protest with with solemne oath (as perhaps you haue done, if euer Heauen heares your praiers, that you may liue to see my Brother nobly interred) to feede only vpon fish, and not endure the touch of flesh, during the wretched Lent of your miserable life; would you beleue it Brother?

Lyfand. I am therein most confident.

Thar. Indeed, you had better beleue it then trie it: but pray Sister tell me, you are a woman: doe not you wies nod your heads, and smile one vpon an other when yee meete abroad?

Cynth. Smile? why so?

Thar. As who should say, are not we mad Wenches, that can lead our blind husbands thus by the noses? do you not brag amongst your selues how grossly you abuse their honest credulities ? how they adore you for Saints : and you beleue it ? while you adorne their temples, and they beleue it not ? how you vow Widow-hood in their life time, and they beleue you, when euen in the sight of their breathlesse corse, ere they be fully cold, you ioine embraces with his Groome, or his Phisition, and perhaps his poisoner ; or at least by the next Moone (if you can expect so long) solemnly plight new Hymineall bonds, with a wild, confident, vntamed Ruffine ?

Lysand. As for example.

Thar. And make him the top of his house, and foueraign Lord of the Palace, as for example. Looke you Brother, this glasse is mine.

Lysand. What of that ?

Thar. While I am with it, it takes impressiion from my face ; but can I make it so mine, that it shall bee of no vse to any other ? will it not doe his office to you or you : and as well to my Groome as to my selfe ? Brother, Monopolies are cryed downe. Is it not madness for me to beleue, when I haue conquer'd that Fort of chastitie the great Countesse ; that if another man of my making, and mettall, shall assault her : her eies and eares should lose their function, her other parts their vse, as if Nature had made her all in vaine, vnlesse I only had stumbl'd into her quarters.

Cynth. Brother : I feare mee in your trauaile, you haue drunck too much of that Italian aire, that hath infected the whole masse of your ingenuous Nature ; dried vp in you all sap of generous disposition, poisoned the very Essence of your soule, and so polluted your senses, that whatsoever enters there, takes from them contagion, and is to your fancie represented as foule and tainted, which in it selfe perhaps is spotlesse.

Thar. No sifter, it hath refin'd my senses, and made mee see with cleare eies, and to iudge of obiects, as they truly are, not as they seeme, and through their maske to discern the true face of thinges. It tells me how short liu'd Widdowes teares are, that their weeping is in truth but laughing vnder a Maske, that they mourne in their Gownes, and laugh in their Sleeues, all which I beleue as a Delphian Oracle: and am resolu'd to burne in that faith, And in that resolution doe I march to the great Ladie.

Lyfand. You lose time Brother in discourse, by this had you bore vp with the Ladie and clapt her aboard, for I knowe your confidence will not dwell long in the seruice.

Thar. No, I will performe it in the Conquerours stile. Your way is, not to winne Penelope by fuite, but by surprife. The Castle's carried by a sodaine affault, that would perhaps fit out a twelue-moneths siege. It would bee a good breeding to my yong Nephew here, if hee could procure a stand at the Palace, to see with what alacritie Ile a-coast her Countesship, in what garbe I will woo her, with what facilitie I will winne her.

Lyfand. It shall goe hard but weele heare your entertainment for your confidence sake.

Thar. And hauing wonne her Nephew ; This sweet face

Which all the Citie saies, is so like me,
Like me shall be preferr'd, for I will wed thee
To my great widdowes Daughter and sole Heire,
The louely sparke, the bright Laodice.

Lyfand. A good pleafant dreame.

Thar. In this eie I see

That fire that shall in me inflame the Mother,
And that in this shall set on fire the Daughter.
It goes Sir in a bloud ; beleue me brother,
These destinies goe euer in a bloud.

Lyfand. These diseafes doe, brother, take heede of them :

Fare you well ; Take heede you be not baffeld.

Exeunt Lyf. Cynth. Hyl. Ero. manet Tharf.

Thar. Now thou that art the third blind Deitie
That gouernes earth in all her happinesse,
The life of all endowments, Confidence ;

Direct and prosper my intention.
 Command thy seruant Deities, Loue and Fortune
 To second my attempts for this great Ladie,
 Whose Page I lately was ; That shee, whose bord
 I might not sit at, I may boord a bed
 And vnder bring, who bore so high her head. Exit.

Lyfander, Lycus.

Lyc. 'TIs miraculous that you tell me Sir : he come to woo our Ladie Mistris for his wife ?

Lyf. 'Tis a phrensie he is posselt with, and wil not be cur'd but by some violent remedie. And you shall fauour me so much to make me a spectator of the Scene. But is shee (say you) alreadie accessible for Suiters ? I thought shee would haue stood so stily on her Widdow vow, that shee would not endure the fight of a Suiter.

Lyc. Faith Sir, Penelope could not barre her gates against her woers, but shee will still be Mistris of her selfe. It is you know, a certaine Itch in femall bloud, they loue to be su'd to : but sheele hearken to no Suiters.

Lyf. But by your leaue Lycus, Penelope is not so wise as her husband Vlysses, for he fearing the iawes of the Syren, stopt his eares with waxe against her voice.
 They that feare the Adders sting, will not come neare her hissing. Is any Suiter with her now ?

Lyc. A Spartan Lord, dating himselfe our great Vice-roies Kinsman, and two or three other of his Countrie Lords, as spots in his train. He comes armed with his Altitudes letters in grace of his person, with promise to make her a Duchesse if shee embrace the match. This is no meane attraction to her high thoughts ; but yet shee disdaines him.

Lyf. And how then shall my brother presume of acceptance ? yet I hold it much more vnder her contentment, to marrie fuch a Naftie braggart, then vnder her honour to wed my brother : A Gentleman (though I fai't) more honourably defcended than that Lord: who perhaps, for all his Anceftrie would bee much troubled to name you the place where his Father was borne.

Lyc. Nay, I hold no comparifon betwixt your brother & him. And the Venerean difeafe, to which they fay, he has beene long wedded, fhall I hope firft rot him, ere fhee endure the fauour of his Sulphurous breath. Well, her Ladifhip is at hand ; y'are beft take you to your ftand.

Lyf. Thankes good friend Lycus.

Exit.

Enter Argus barehead, with whome another Vsher Lycus ioynes, going ouer the Stage. Hiarbas, and Pforabeus next, Rebus fingle before Eudora, Laodice, Sthenia bearing her traine, Ianthe following.

Reb. I Admire Madame, you can not loue whome the Viceroy loues.

Hiar. And one whose veines fwel fo with his bloud, Madam, as they doe in his Lordfhip.

Pfo. A neare and deare Kinfman his Lordfhip is to his Altitude, the Viceroy ; In care of whose good fpeede here, I know his Altitude hath not fleep't a found fleepe fince his departure.

Eud. I thanke Venus I haue, euer fince he came.

Reb. You fleepe away your Honour, Madam, if you neglect me.

Hiar. Neglect your Lordfhip? that were a negligence no leffe than difloialtie.

Eud. I much doubt that Sir, It were rather a prefumption to take him, being of the bloud Vicerioiall.

Reb. Not at all, being offered Madame.

Eud. But offered ware is not fo fweet you know. They are the graces of the Viceroy that woo me, not your Lordfhips, and I conceiue it fhould be neither

Honor nor Pleasure to you, to be taken in for an other mans faouours.

Reb. Taken in Madam? you speake as I had no houle to hide my head in.

Eud. I haue heard so indeed, my Lord, vnlesse it be another mans.

Reb. You haue heard vntruth then ; These Lords can well witnesse I can want no houfes.

Hiar. Nor Palaces neither my Lord.

Pjo. Nor Courts neither.

Eud. Nor Temples I thinke neither ; I beleeeue wee shall haue a God of him.

Enter Tharsalio.

Arg. SEE the bold fellow ; whether will you Sir ?

Thar. Away, all honour to you Madam ?

Eud. How now base companion ?

Thar. Base Madame : hees not base that fights as high as your lips.

Eud. And does that befeeme my seruant ?

Thar. Your Court-seruant Madam.

Eud. One that waited on my boord ?

Thar. That was only a preparation to my weight on your bed Madam.

Eud. How dar'st thou come to me with such a thought ?

Thar. Come to you Madam ? I dare come to you at midnight, and bid defiance to the proudest spirit that haunts these your loued shadowes ; and would any way make terrible the accessse of my loue to you.

Eud. Loue me? loue my dogge.

Thar. I am bound to that by the prouerb Madam.

Eud. Kennell without with him, intrude not here. What is it thou presum'st on ?

Thar. On your iudgement Madam, to choose a Man, and not a Giant, as these are that come with Titles, and Authoritie, as they would conquer, or rauish you. But I come to you with the liberall and ingenuous Graces, Loue, Youth, and Gentry; which (in no more deform'd a person then my selfe) deserue any Princeesse.

Eud. In your fawcie opinion Sir, and firha too; get gone; and let this malipert humour returne thee no more, for afore heauen Ile haue thee tost in blanquets.

Thar. In blanquets Madam? you must adde your sheetes, and you must be the Toffer.

Reb. Nay then Sir y'are as grosse as you are fawcie.

Thar. And all one Sir, for I am neither.

Reb. Thou art both.

Thar. Thou liest; keepe vp your smiter Lord Rebus.

Hiar. Vsest thou thus his Altitudes Cosen?

Reb. The place thou know'st protects thee.

Thar. Tie vp your valour then till an other place turne me loofe to you, you are the Lord (I take it) that wooed my great Mistris here with letters from his Altitude; which while she was reading, your Lordship (to entertaine time) strod'd and skal'd your fingers; as you would shew what an itching desire you had to get betwixt her sheetes.

Hiar. Slight, why does your Lordship endure him?

Reb. The place, the place my Lord.

Thar. Be you his Attorney Sir.

Hiar. What would you doe Sir?

Thar. Make thee leape out at window, at which thou cam'st in: Whores-sonne bag-pipe Lords.

Eud. What rudeness is this?

Thar. What tameness is it in you Madam, to sticke at the discarding of such a fuitter? A leane Lord, dub'd with the lard of others? A diseased Lord too, that opening certaine Magick Characters in an vnlawfull booke, vp-start as many aches in's bones, as there are ouches in's skinne. Send him (Mistris) to the Widdow your Tennant; the vertuous Pandresse Arface. I per-ceiue he has crownes in's Purse, that make him proud of a string ; let her pluck the Goose therefore, and her maides dresse him.

Pfo. Still my Lord suffer him ?

Reb. The place Sir, beleue it the place.

Thar. O good Lord Rebus ; The place is neuer like to be yours that you neede respect it so much.

Eud. Thou wrong'st the noble Gentleman.

Thar. Noble Gentleman? A tumor, an impostume hee is Madam ; a very hault-boy, a bag-pipe ; in whom there is nothing but winde, and that none of the sweetest neither.

Eud. Quitt the House of him, by 'thead and Shoulders.

Thar. Thankes to your Honour Madame, and my Lord Cofen the Viceroy shall thanke you.

Reb. So shall he indeede fir.

Lyc. Arg. Will you be gone fir ?

Thar. Away poore Fellowes.

Eud. What is he made of? or what Deuill fees your childish, and effeminate spirits in him, that thus yee shun him ? Free vs of thy fight ; Be gone, or I protest thy life shall goe.

Thar. Yet shall my Ghost stay still ; and haunt those beauties, and glories, that haue renderd it immortall. But since I see your bloud runnes (for the time) High, in that contradiction that fore-runs Truest agreements (like the Elements Fighting before they generate ;) and that Time Must be attended most, in thinges most worth ; I leaue your Honour freely ; and commend That life you threaten, when you please, to be Aduentur'd in your seruice ; so your Honour Require it likewise.

Eud. Doe not come againe.

Thar. Ile come againe, beleue it, and againe. Exit.

Eud. If he shall dare to come againe, I charge you shut dores vpon him.

Arg. You must shut them (Madam)

To all men else then, if it please your Honour,
For if that any enter, hele be one.

Eud. I hope, wife Sir, a Guard will keepe him out.

Arg. Afore Heauen, not a Guard (ant please your Honour.)

Eud. Thou liest bafe Affe; One man enforce a Guard?

Ile turne yee all away (by our Iles Goddeffe)

If he but fet a foote within my Gates.

Lurd. Your Honour shall doe well to haue him poison'd.

Hiar. Or begg'd of your Cofen the Viceroy. Exit.

Lyfander from his stand.

Lyfand. This brauing wooer, hath the successe expected; The fauour I obtain'd, made me witnesse to the sport; And let his Confidence bee sure, Ile giue it him home. The newes by this, is blowne through the four quarters of the Cittie. Alas good Confidence:
but the happinesse is he has a forehead of prooffe; the staine shall neuer stick there whatfoeuer his reproch be.

Enter Tharfalio.

Lyfand. WHat? in discourse?

Thar. WHell and the Furies take this vile encounter,

Who would imagine this Saturnian Peacock

Could be so barbarous to vse a spirit

Of my erection, with such lowe respect?

Fore heauen it cuts my gall; but Ile diffemble it.

Lyfand. What? my noble Lord?

Thar. Well Sir, that may be yet, and meanes to be.

Lyfand. What meanes your Lordship then to hang that head that hath beene so erected; it knocks Sir at your bosome to come in and hide it selfe.

Thar. Not a iot.

Lyfand. I hope by this time it needes feare no hornes.

Thar. Well Sir, but yet that blessing runs not alwaies in a bloud.

Lyfand. What blanqueted? O the Gods? spurn'd out by Groomes like a base Bifogno? thrust out by'th head and shoulders?

Thar. You doe well Sir to take your pleasure of me, (I may turne tables with you ere long.)

Lyfand. What has thy wits fine engine taken cold? art stuff't inth head? canst answere nothing?

Thar. Truth is, I like my entertainment the better that 'twas no better.

Lyfand. Now the Gods forbid that this opinion should run in a bloud.

Thar. Haue not you heard this principle, All thinges by strife engender?

Lyfand. Dogges and Cats doe.

Thar. And men and women too.

Lyfand. Well Brother, in earnest, you haue now set your confidence to schoole, from whence I hope't has brought home such a lesson as will instruct his master neuer after to begin such attempts as end in laughter.

Thar. Well Sir, you lesson my Confidence still; I pray heauens your confidence haue not more shallow ground (for that I know) then mine you reprehend so.

Lyfand. My confidence? in what?

Thar. May be you trust too much.

Lyfand. Wherein?

Thar. In humane frailtie.

Lyfand. Why brother know you ought that may impeach my confidence, as this successe may yours? hath your obseruation discovered any such frailtie in my wife (for that is your aime I know) then let me know it.

5 Thar. Good, good. Nay Brother, I write no bookes of Obseruations, let your confidence beare out it selfe, as mine shall me.

Lyfand. That's scarce a Brothers speech. If there be ought wherein your Brothers good might any way be question'd can you conceale it from his bosome?

Thar. So, so. Nay my faying was but generall. I glanc't at no particular.

Lyfand. Then must I presse you further. You spake (as to your selfe, but yet I ouer-heard) as if you knew some disposition of weaknesse where I most had fixt my trust. I challenge you to let me know what 'twas.

Thar. Brother? are you wife?

Lyfand. Why?

Thar. Be ignorant. Did you neuer heare of Actæon?

Lyfand. What then?

Thar. Curiositie was his death. He could not be content to adore Diana in her Temple, but he must needes dogge her to her retir'd pleasures, and see her in her nakednesse. Doe you enioy the sole priuiledge of your wiues bed? haue you no pretie Paris for your Page? No yong Adonis to front you there?

Lyfand. I thinke none: I know not.

Thar. Know not still Brother. Ignorance and credulitie are your sole meanes to obtaine that blessing. You see your greatest Clerkes, your wisest Politicians, are not that way fortunate: your learned Lawyers would lose a dozen poore mens causes to gaine a lease ant, but for a Terme. Your Phisition is ielous of his. Your Sages in generall, by seeing too much ouersee that happinesse. Only your block-headly Tradefman; your honest meaning Cittizen; your not-headed Countrie Gentleman; your vnapprehending Stinckerd is blest with the sole prerogatiue of his Wiues chamber. For which he is yet beholding, not to his starres, but to his ignorance. For if he be wise, Brother, I must tell you the case alters.

How doe you relish these thinges Brother?

Lyfand. Passing ill.

Thar. So do sick men solid meates : hearke you brother, are you not ielous ?

Lyfand. No : doe you know cause to make me ?

Thar. Hold you there ; did your wife neuer spice your broth with a dramme of sublimate ? hath shee not yeelded vp the Fort of her Honour to a staring Soldado ? and (taking courage from her guilt) plaid open bankrout of all shame, and runne the Countrie with him ? Then blesse your Starres, bow your knees to Iuno. Looke where shee appears.

Enter Cynthia, Hylus.

Cynth. WE haue fought you long Sir, there's a Messenger within, hath brought you letters from the Court, and desires your speech.

Lyfand. I can discouer nothing in her lookes. Goe, Ile not be long.

Cynth. Sir, it is of weight the bearer faies : and besides, much hastens his departure. Honourable Brother ! crie mercie ! what, in a Conquerours stile ? but come and ouercome ?

Thar. A fresh course.

Cynth. Alas you see of how sleight mettall Widdowes voves are made.

Thar. And that shall you proue too ere long.

Cynth. Yet for the honour of our sexe, boast not abroad this your easie conquest ; another might perhaps haue staid longer below flaires, it but was your confidence, that surpris'd her loue.

Hyl. My vncler hath instructed me how to accost an honorable Ladie ; to win her, not by suite, but by surpris.

Thar. The Whelp and all.

Hyl. Good Vncler let not your neare Honours change your manners, bee not forgetfull of your promise to mee, touching your Ladies daughter Laodice. My fancie runns so vpon't, that I dreame euey night of her.

Thar. A good chicken, goe thy waies, thou hast done well ; eate bread with thy meate.

Cyn. Come Sir, will you in ?

Lyfand. Ile follow you.

Cynth. Ile not stirre a foot without you. I can not fatisfie the messengers impatience.

Lyf. He takes Thar. aside. Wil you not resolue me brother ?

Thar. Of what ?

Lyfander stamps and goes out vext with Cynth. Hyl. Ero. So, there's venie for venie, I haue giuen't him 'ith speeding place for all his confidence. Well out of this perhaps there may bee moulded matter of more mirth, then my baffling. It shall goe hard but Ile make my constant sifter act as famous a Scene as Virgil did his Mistris ; who cau'd all the Fire in Rome to faile so that none could light a torch but at her nose. Now forth : At this house dwells a vertuous Dame, sometimes of worthy Fame, now like a decai'd Merchant turn'd Broker, and retails refuse commodities for vn-thrifty Gallants. Her wit I must imploy vpon this businesse to prepare my next encounter, but in such a fashion as shall make all split. Ho ? Madam Arface, pray heauen the Oister-wiues haue not brought the newes of my woing hether amongst their stale Pilcherds.

Enter Arface, Tomasin.

Arf. WHat ? my Lord of the Palace ?

Thar. Looke you.

Arf. Why, this was done like a beaten Souldier.

Thar. Hearke, I must speake with you. I haue a share for you in this riche aduenture. You must bee the Assé chardg'd with Crownes to make way to the Fort, and I the Conquerour to follow, and seise it. Seest thou this iewell ?

Arf. Is't come to that? why Tomafin.

Tom. Madam.

Arf. Did not one of the Countesses Seruing-men tell vs that this Gentleman was sped?

Tom. That he did, and how her honour grac't and entertained him in very familiar manner.

Arf. And brought him downe staires her felfe.

Tom. I forfooth, and commanded her men to beare him out of dores.

Thar. Slight, pelted with rotten egges?

Arf. Nay more, that he had alreadie possesst her sheetes.

Tom. No indeede Mistris, twas her blanquets.

Thar. Out you yong hedge-sparrow, learne to tread afore you be fledge. He kicks her out:

Well haue you done now Ladie.

Arf. O my sweet kilbuck.

Thar. You now, in your shallow pate, thinke this a disgrace to mee; such a disgrace as is a batterd helmet on a fouldiers head, it doubles his resolution. Say, shall I vse thee?

Arf. Vse me?

Thaa. O holy reformation! how art thou fallen downe from the vpper-bodies of the Church to the skirts of the Citie! honestie is stript out of his true substance into verball nicetie. Common finners startle at common termes, and they that by whole mountaines swallow downe the deedes of darknesse; A poore mote of a familiar word, makes them turne vp the white o'th eie. Thou art the Ladies Tennant.

Arf. For terme Sir.

Thar. A good induction, be succesfull for me, make me Lord of the Palace, and thou shalt hold thy Tene-ment to thee and thine eares for euer, in free smockage, as of the manner of Panderage, prouided alwaies.

Arfa. Nay if you take me vnprouided.

Thar. Prouided I say, that thou mak'st thy repaire to her presently with a plot I will instruct thee in; and for thy furer accesse to her greatnesse, thou shalt present her, as from thy selfe with this iewell.

Arfa. So her old grudge, stand not betwixt her and me.

Thar. Feare not that.

Presents are present cures for femall grudges,
Make bad, feeme good : alter the case with Iudges.

Exit.

Finis Actus Primi.

Actus Secundi.

Scœna Prima.

Lyfander, Tharfalio.

Lyfand. SO now we are our selues. Brother, that ill relisht speech you let slip from your tongue, hath taken so deepe hold of my thoughts, that they will neuer giue me rest, till I be resolu'd what 'twas you said, you know, touching my wife.

Tharf. Tush : I am wearie of this subiect, I said not so.

Lyf. By truth it selfe you did : I ouer-heard you. Come, it shall nothing moue me, whatsoeuer it be ; pray thee vnfold briefly what you know.

Tharf. Why briefly Brother. I know my sister to be the wonder of the Earth ; and the Enuie of the Heauens. Vertuous, Loiall, and what not. Briefly, I know shee hath vow'd, that till death and after death, shee hold inuiolate her bonds to you, & that her black shal take no other hew ; all which I firmly beleue. In brieft Brother, I know her to be a woman. But you know brother, I haue other yrons on th'anuile.

Exiturus.

Lyf. You shall not leaue mee fo vnſatisfied ; tell mee what tis you know.

Thar. Why Brother ; if you be ſure of your wiues loialtie for terme of life : why ſhould you be curious to ſearch the Almanacks for after-times : whether ſome wandring Æneas ſhould enioy your reuerſion ; or whether your true Turtle would fit mourning on a wither'd branch, till Atropos cut her throat : Beware of curioſitie, for who can reſolue you ? youle ſay perhaps her vow.

Lyſand. Perhaps I ſhall.

Thar. Tuſh, her ſelfe knowes not what ſhee ſhall doe, when ſhee is transform'd iuto a Widdow. You are now a ſober and ſtaid Gentleman. But if Diana for your curioſitie ſhould tranſlate you into a monckey : doe you know what gambolds you ſhould play ? your only way to bee reſolu'd is to die and make triall of her.

Lyſand. A deare experiment, then I muſt riſe againe to bee reſolu'd.

Thar. You ſhall not neede. I can ſend you ſpeedier aduertifement of her conſtancie, by the next Ripier that rides that way with Mackerell. And ſo I leaue you. Exit Thar.

Lyſand. All the Furies in hell attend thee ; has giuen me a Bone to tire on with a peſtilence ; flight know ?

What can he know ? what can his eie obſerue

More then mine owne, or the moſt pierſing ſight

That euer viewed her ? by this light I thinke

Her priuat'ſt thought may dare the eie of heauen,

And challenge th' enuious world to witneſſe it.

I know him for a wild corrupted youth,

Whom prophane Ruffins, Squires to Bawds, & Strumpets,

Drunkards, ſpeud out of Tauerns, into'th ſinkes

Of Tap-houſes, and Stewes, Reuolts from manhood ;

Debaucht perdu's, haue by their companies

Turn'd Deuill like themſelues, and ſtuft his foule

With damn'd opinions, and vnhalloved thoughts
Of womanhood, of all humanitie,
Nay Deitie it felfe.

Enter Lycus.

Lyc. WElcome friend Lycus.

Lyc. Haue you met with your capricious brother ?

Lyc. He parted hence but now.

Lyc. And has he yet resolu'd you of that point you brake with me about ?

Lyc. Yes, he bids me die for further triall of her confancie.

Lyc. That were a strange Phisicke for a iealous patient ; to cure his thirst with a draught of poison. Faith Sir, discharge your thoughts an't ; thinke 'twas but a Buzz deuised by him to set your braines a work, and diuert your eie from his disgrace. The world hath written your wife in highest lines of honour'd Fame : her vertues so admir'd in this Ile, as the report thereof founds in forraigne eares ; and strangers oft arriuing here, (as some rare sight) desire to view her presence, thereby to compare the Picture with the originall. Nor thinke he can turne so farre rebell to his blood, Or to the Truth it felfe to misconceiue Her spotlesse loue and loialtie ; perhaps Oft hauing heard you hold her faith so sacred As you being dead, no man might stirre a sparke Of vertuous loue, in way of second bonds ; As if you at your death should carrie with you Both branch and roote of all affection. T'may be, in that point hee's an Infidell, And thinkes your confidence may ouer-weene.

Lyc. So thinke not I.

Lyc. Nor I : if euer any made it good. I am resolu'd of all, sheele proue no changling.

Lyc. Well, I must yet be further satisfied ; And vent this humour by some straine of wit, Somewhat Ile doe ; but what, I know not yet. Exeunt.

Enter Sthenio, Ianthe.

Sthe. P Affion of Virginitie, Ianthe, how shall we quit ourselues of this Pandresse, that is so importunate to speake with vs? Is shee knowne to be a Pandresse?

Ian. I, as well as we are knowne to be waiting women.

Sthe. A shrew take your comparifon.

Sthe. Lets cal out Argus that bold Affe that neuer weighs what he does or saies; but walkes and talkes like one in a sleepe; to relate her attendance to my Ladie, and present her.

Ian. Who? ant please your Honour? None so fit to fet on any dangerous exploit.

Ho? Argus?

Enter Argus bare.

Arg. WHats the matter Wenches?

Seth. You must tell my Ladie here's a Gentlewoman call'd Arface, her Honours Tennant, attends her, to impart important businesse to her.

Arg. I will presently. Exit Arg.

Iant. Well, shee has a welcome present, to beare out her vnwelcome presence: and I neuer knew but a good gift would welcome a bad person to the purest.

Arface?

Enter Arface.

Arf. I Mistris.

Sthe. Giue me your Present, Ile doe all I can, to make way both for it and your selfe.

Arf. You shall binde me to your seruice Ladie.

Sthe. Stand vnseene.

Enter Lyc. Eudora, Laodice, Reb, Hiar Pfor., comming after, Argus comming to Eudora.

Arg. H Ere's a Gentlewoman (ant Please your Honour) one of your Tennants

Defires acceffe to you.

Eud. What Tennant? what's her name?

Arg. Arface, fhee faies Madam.

Eud. Arface? what the Bawde?

Arg. The Bawd Madam? fhee strikes, that's without my priuitie.

Eud. Out Affe, know'ft not thou the Pandrefse Arface?

Sth. Shee presents your Honour with this Iewell?

Eud. This iewell? how came fhee by fuch a iewell? Shee has had great Customers.

Arg. Shee had neede Madam, fhee fits at a great Rent.

Eud. Alas for your great Rent: Ile keepe her iewell, and keepe you her out, yee were best: fpeake to me for a Pandrefse?

Arg. What fhall we doe?

Sth. Goe to; Let vs alone. Arface?

Arf. I Ladie.

Sth. You muft pardon vs, we can not obtaine your acceffe.

Arf. Miftris Sthenio, tell her Honour, if I get not acceffe to her, and that instantly fhee's vndone.

Sth. This is fome thing of importance. Madam, fhee fwears your Honour is vndone if fhe fpeake not with you instantly.

Eud. Vndone?

Arf. Pray her for her Honours fake to giue mee instant acceffe to her.

Sth. Shee makes her bufineffe your Honour Madame, and entreates for the good of that, her instant fpeech with you.

Eud. How comes my Honour in queftion? Bring her to mee.

Enter Arface.

Arf. O Vr Cypriane Goddeffe faue your good Honor.

Eud. Stand you off I pray: How dare you Miftris

importune acceſſe to me thus, conſidering the laſt warning I gaue for your abſence ?

Arf. Becauſe, Madam, I haue been mou'd by your Honours laſt moſt chaſt admonition, to leaue the offenſiue life I led before.

Eud. I? haue you left it then ?

Arf. I, I aſſure your Honour, vnleſſe it be for the pleaſure of two or three poore Ladies, that haue prodigall Knights to their husbands.

Eud. Out on thee Impudent.

Arf. Alas Madam, wee would all bee glad to liue in our callings.

Eud. Is this the reform'd life thou talk'ſt on ?

Arf. I beſeech your good Honour miſtake me not, I boaſt of nothing but my charitie, that's the worſt.

Eud. You get theſe iewels with charitie, no doubt. But whats the point in which my Honour ſtands endanger'd I pray ?

Arf. In care of that Madam, I haue preſum'd to offend your chaſt eies with my preſence. Hearing it reported for truth and generally, that your Honor will take to husband a yong Gentleman of this Citie called Tharſalio.

Eud. I take him to husband ?

Arf. If your Honour does, you are vtterly vndone, for hee's the moſt incontinent, and infatiate Man of Women that euer VENVS bleſt with abilitie to pleaſe them.

Eud. Let him be the Deuill; I abhorre his thought, and could I be inform'd particularly of any of theſe ſlanderers of mine Honour, he ſhould as dearely dare it, as any thing wherein his life were endanger'd.

Arf. Madam, the report of it is ſo ſtrongly confident, that I feare the ſtrong deſtinie of marriage is at worke in it. But if it bee Madam: Let your Honours knowne vertue reſiſt and deſie it for him: for not a hundred will ſerue his one turne. I proteſt to your Honour, When (VENVS pardon mee) I winckt at my vnmaidenly exercife, I haue knowne nine in a Night made mad with his loue.

Eud. What tell'ft thou mee of his loue? I tell thee I abhorre him; and deftinie muft haue an other mould for my thoughts, then Nature or mine Honour, and a Witchcraft aboue both, to transforme mee to another fhape, as foone as to an other concept of him.

Arf. Then is your good Honour iuft as I pray for you, and good Madam, euen for your vertues fake, and comfort of all your Dignities, and Poffeffions; fixe your whole Woman-hood againft him. Hee will fo inchant you, as neuer man did woman: Nay a Goddeffe (fay his light hufwiues) is not worthie of his sweetneffe.

Eud. Goe to, be gone.

Arf. Deare Madam, your Honours moft perfect admonition haue brought mee to fuch a hate of thefe imperfections, that I could not but attend you with my dutie, and vrge his vnreasonable manhood to the fill.

Eud. Man-hood, quoth you?

Arf. Nay Beaftly-hood, I might fay, indeede Madam, but for fauing your Honour; Nine in a night faid I?

Eud. Goe to, no more.

Arf. No more Madame? that's enough one would thinke.

Eud. Well be gone I bid thee.

Arf. Alas Madam, your Honour is the chiefe of our Cittie, and to whom fhall I complaine of thefe inchaftities, (being your Ladifhips reform'd Tennant) but to you that are chafteft?

Eud. I pray thee goe thy waies, and let me fee this reformation you pretend continued.

Arf. I humbly thanke your good Honour, that was firft caufe of it.

Eud. Here's a complaint as ftrange as my Suiter.

Arf. I befeech your good Honour thinke vpon him, make him an example.

Eud. Yet againe ?

Arf. All my dutie to your Excellence. Exit. Arf.

Eud. These forts of licentious persons, when they are once reclaim'd, are most vehement against licence. But it is the course of the world to dispraise faults & use them ; that so we may vse them the safer. What might a wise Widdow resolve vpon this point now ? Contentment is the end of all worldly beings : Bestrow her ; would shee had spared her newes. Exit.

Reb. See if shee take not a contrarie way to free her selfe of vs.

Hiar. Yon must complaine to his Altitude.

Pfor. All this for triall is ; you must indure That will haue wiues, nought else, with them is sure.

Exit.

Tharfalio, Arface.

Thar. Hast thou beene admitted then ?

Arf. Admitted ? I, into her heart, Ile able it ; neuer was man so prais'd with a dispraise ; nor so spoken for in being rail'd on. Ile giue you my word ; I haue set her hart vpon as tickle a pin as the needle of a Diall ; that will neuer let it rest, till it be in the right position.

Thar. Why dost thou imagine this ?

Arf. Because I saw Cupid shoot in my wordes, and open his wounds in her lookes. Her bloud went and came of errands betwixt her face and her heart ; and these changes I can tell you are shrewd tell-tales.

Thar. Thou speak'st like a Doctriffe in thy facultie ; but howsoeuer, for all this foile, Ile retrieve the game once againe, hee's a shallow gamster that for one displeasing cast giues vp so faire a game for lost.

Arf. Well, 'twas a villanous inuention of thine, and had a swift operation, it tooke like sulphure. And yet this vertuous Countesse hath to my eare spun out many a tedious lecture of pure sisters thred against concupiscence. But euer with such an affected zeale, as my minde gaue me, shee had a kinde of secret titillation to grace my poore house sometimes ; but that shee fear'd a spice of the Sciatica, which as you know euer runs in the bloud.

Thar. And as you know, fokes into the bones. But to say truth, these angrie heates that breake out at the lips of these streight lac't Ladies, are but as symptoms of a lustfull feuer that boiles within them. For wherefore rage wiues at their husbands so, when they flie out, for zeale against the sinne ?

Arf. No, but because they did not purge that sinne.

Thar. Th'art a notable Syren, and I sweare to thee, if I prosper, not only to giue thee thy mannor-house gratis, but to marrie thee to some one Knight or other, and burie thy trade in thy Ladiship : Goe be gone.

Exit Arf.

Enter Lycus.

Thar. WHat newes Lycus ? where's the Ladie ?
Lyc. Retir'd into her Orchard.

Thar. A pregnant badge of loue, shee's melancholy.

Lyc. 'Tis with the sight of her Spartane wooer. But howsoever tis with her, you haue practis'd strangely vpon your Brother.

Thar. Why so ?

Lyc. You had almost lifted his wit off the hinges. That sparke ielousie falling into his drie melancholy braine, had well neare set the whole house on fire.

Thar. No matter, let it worke : I did but pay him in's owne coine ; Sfoot hee plied me with such a volley of vnseason'd scoffs, as would haue made Patience it selfe turne Ruffine, attiring it selfe in wounds and bloud : but is his humour better qualified then ?

Lyc. Yes, but with a medicine ten parts more dangerous then the sicknesse : you know how strange his dotage euer was on his wife ; taking speciall glorie to haue her loue and loialtie to him so renown'd abroad. To whom shee oftentimes hath vow'd constancie after life, till her owne death had brought forfooth, her widow-troth to bed. This he ioi'd in strangely, and was therein of infallible beliefe, till your furmife began to shake it; which hath loos'd it so, as now there's nought can fettle it, but a triall, which hee's resolu'd vpon.

Thar. As how man? as how?

Lyc. Hee is resolu'd to follow your aduife, to die, and make triall of her stablenesse, and you must lend your hand to it.

Thar. What to cut's throat?

Lyc. To forge a rumour of his death, to vphold it by circumstance, maintaine a publike face of mourning, and all thinges appertaining.

Thar. I, but the meanes man: what time? what probabilitie.

Lyc. Nay, I thinke he has not lickt his Whelpe into full shape yet, but you shall shortly heare ant.

Thar. And when shall this strange conception see light?

Lyc. Forthwith: there's nothing staies him, but some odde businesse of import, which hee must winde vp; least perhaps his absence by occasion of his intended triall be prolonged aboue his aimes.

Thar. Thankes for this newes i' faith. This may perhaps proue happie to my Nephew. Truth is I loue my sifter well and must acknowledge her more then ordinarie vertues. But shee hath so possesst my brothers heart with vowes, and disauowings, seal'd with oathes of second nuptials; as in that confidence, hee hath inuested her in all his state, the ancient inheritance of our Familie: and left my Nephew and the rest to hang vpon her pure deuotion; so as he dead, and shee matching (as I am resolu'd shee will) with some yong Prodigall; what must ensue, but her post-issue beggerd, and our house alreadie sinking, buried quick in ruin. But this triall may remoue it, and since tis come to this; marke but the issue Lycus, for all these solemne vowes, if I doe not make her proue in the handling as weake as a wafer ; say I lost my time in trauaile. This resolution then has set his wits in ioynt againe, hee's quiet.

Lyc. Yes, and talkes of you againe in the fairest manner, listens after your speede.

Thar. Nay hee's passing kinde, but I am glad of this triall for all that.

Lyc. Which he thinkes to be a flight beyond your wing.

Thar. But hee will change that thought ere long. My Bird you saw euen now, sings me good newes, and makes hopefull signes to me.

Lyc. Somewhat can I say too, since your messengers departure, her Ladiship hath beene something alter'd, more pensue then before, and tooke occasion to question of you, what your addictions were ? of what tast your humor was ? of what cut you wore your wit, and all this in a kind of disdainfull scorne.

Thar. Good Callenders Lycus. Well Ile pawne this iewell with thee, my next encounter shall quite alter my brothers iudgement. Come lets in, he shall commend it for a discreet and honourable attempt.

Mens iudgments sway on that side fortune leanes,
Thy wishes shall assist me :

Lyc. And my meanes.

Exeunt.

Argus, Clinias, Sthenio, Ianthe.

Arg. I Must confesse I was ignorant, what'twas to court a Ladie till now.

Sthe. And I pray you what is it now ?

Arg. To court her I perceiue, is to woo her with letters from Court, for so this Spartane Lords Court discipline teacheth.

Sth. His Lordship hath procur'd a new Pacquet from his Altitude.

Clin. If he bring no better ware then letters in's pacquet, I shall greatly doubt of his good speede.

Ian. If his Lordship did but know how gracious his Aspect is to my Ladie in this solitarie humour.

Clin. Well these retir'd walkes of hers are not vsuall; and bode some alteration in her thoughts. What may bee the cause Sthenio.

Sthe. Nay twould trouble Argus with his hundred eies to descric the cause.

Ian. Venus keepe her vpright, that shee fall not from the state of her honour; my feare is that some of these Serpentine suiters will tempt her from her constant vow of widdow-hood. If they doe, good night to our good daies.

Sthe. 'Twere a sinne to suspect her; I haue been witnesse to so many of her fearfull protestations to our late Lord against that course; to her infinite oathes imprinted on his lips, and seal'd in his heart with such imprecations to her bed, if euer it should receiue a second impressiõ; to her open and often detestations of that incestuous life (as shee term'd it) of widdowes marriages; as being but a kinde of lawfull adulterie; like vsurie, permitted by the law, not approu'd. That to wed a second, was no better then to cuckold the first: That women should entertaine wedlock as one bodie, as one life, beyond which there were no desire, no thought, no repentance from it, no restitution to it. So as if the conscience of her voves should not restraine her, yet the worlds shame to breake such a constant resolution, should repress any such motion in her.

Arg. Well, for her voves, they are gone to heauen with her husband, they binde not vpon earth: And as for Womens resolutions, I must tell you, The Planets, & (as Ptolomie saies) the windes haue a great stroke in them. Trust not my learning if her late strangeness, and exorbitant solitude, be not hatching some new Monster.

Ian. Well applied Argus; Make your husbands Monsters.

Arg. I spoke of no husbands: but you Wenches haue

the pregnant wits, to turne Monsters into husbands, as you turne husbands into monfters.

Sthe. Well Ianthe, 'twere high time we made in, to part our Ladie and her Spartane wooer.

Ian. We shall appeare to her like the two fortunate Stars in a tempest, to faue the shipwrack of her patience.

Sthe. I, and to him to, I beleue; For by this time he hath spent the last dramme of his newes.

Arg. That is, of his wit.

Sth. Iust good wittals. Ian. If not, & that my La: be not too deep in her new dumps, we shall heare from his Lordship; what such a Lord said of his wife the first night hee embrac't her: To what Gentleman such a Count was beholding for his fine children. What yong Ladie, such an old Count should marrie; what Reuells: what presentments are towards; and who penn'd the Pegmas; and so forth: and yet for all this, I know her harsh Suiter hath tir'd her to the vttermost scruple of her forbearance, and will doe more, vnlesse we two, like a paire of Sheres, cut a-funder the thred of his discourse.

Sthe. Well then, lets in; But my masters, waite you on your charge at your perils, See that you guard her approach from any more intruders.

Ian. Excepting yong Tharfalio.

Sthe. True, excepting him indeede, for a guard of men is not able to keepe him out ant please your Honour.

Arg. O Wenches, that's the propertie of true valour, to promise like a Pigmey, and performe like a Giant. If he come, Ile bee sworne I doe my Ladies commandement vpon him.

Ian. What? beate him out?

Sthe. If hee should, Tharfalio would not take it ill at his handes, for he does but his Ladies commandement.

Enter Tharfalio.

Arg. Well, by Hercules he comes not here.

Sthe. W By Venus but hee does : or else shee hath heard my Ladies praiers, and sent some gracious spirit in his likenesse to fright away that Spartane wooer, that hants her.

Thar. There stand her Sentinells.

Arg. Slight the Ghost appeares againe.

Thar. Saue yee my quondam fellowes in Armes ; faue yee ; my women.

Sthe. Your Women Sir ?

Thar. 'Twill be so. What no courtesies ? No preparation of grace ? obserue me I aduise you for your owne sakes.

Ian. For your owne sake, I aduise you to pack hence, lest your impudent valour cost you dearer then you thinke.

Clin. What senselesse boldnesse is this Tharfalio ?

Arg. Well said Clinias, talke to him.

Clin. I wonder that notwithstanding the shame of your last entertainment, and threatnings of worfe ; you would yet presume to trouble this place againe.

Thar. Come y'are a widgine ; Off with your hat Sir, acknowledge : forecast is better then labour. Are you squint ey'd ? can you not see afore you. A little forefight I can tell you might sted you much as the Starres shine now.

Clin. 'Tis well sir, tis not for nothing your brother is asham'd on you. But Sir, you must know, wee are chardg'd to barre your entrance.

Thar. But Wisler, know you, that who so shall dare to execute that charge, Ile be his Executioner.

Arg. By Ioue, Clinias, me thinks, the Gentleman speakes very honourably.

Thar. Well I see this house needes eformation, here's a fellow stands behind now, of a forwarder insight then yee all. What place hast thou ?

Arg. What place you please Sir.

Thar. Law you Sir. Here's a fellow to make a Gentleman Vsher Sir, I discharge you of the place, and doe here inuest thee into his roome, Make much of thy haire, thy wit will fuit it rarely. And for the full possession of thine office; Come, Vsher me to thy Ladie: and to keep thy hand supple, take this from me.

Arg. No bribes Sir, ant please your Worship.

Thar. Goe to, thou dost well; but pocket it for all that; it's no impaire to thee: the greatest doo't.

Arg. Sir, tis your loue only that I respect, but since out of your loue you please to bestow it vpon me, It were want of Courtship in mee to refuse it; Ile acquaint my Ladie with your comming. Exit . Arg.

Thar. How say by this? haue I not made a fit choise, that hath so soone attain'd the deepest mysterie of his profession: Good footh Wenches, a few courtesies had not beene cast away vpon your new Lord.

Sthe. Weele beleuee that, when our Ladie has a new Sonne of your getting.

*Enter Argus, Eudora, Rebus, Hiar.
Pfor.*

Eud. WHats the matter? whose that, you say, is come?

Arg. The bold Gentleman, ant please your Honour.

Eud. Why thou flering Affe thou.

Arg. Ant please your Honour.

Eud. Did not I forbid his approach by all the charge and dutie of thy seruice?

Thar. Madam, this fellow only is intelligent; for he truly vnderstood your command according to the stile of the Court of Venus; that is, by contraries: when you forbid you bid.

Eud. By heauen Ile discharge my house of yee all.

Thar. You shall not neede Madame, for I haue alreadie casheer'd your officious Vsher here, and chos'd this for his Successor.

Eud. O incredible boldnesse!

Thar. Madam, I come not to command your loue with enforst letters, nor to woo you with tedious stories of my Pedigree, as hee who drawes the thred of his descent from Ledas Distaffe; when 'tis well knowne his Grandfire cried Coniskins in Sparta.

Reb. Whom meane you Sir?

Thar. Sir, I name none, but him who first shall name himselfe.

Reb. The place Sir, I tell you still; and this Goddesses faire presence, or else my reply should take a farre other forme vpon't.

Thar. If it should Sir, I would make your Lordship an anfer.

Arg. Anfer's Latine for a Goose, ant please your honor.

Eud. Well noted Gander; and what of that?

Arg. Nothing, ant please your Honor, but that he said he would make his Lordship an answere.

Eud. Thus euery foole mocks my poore Suiter. Tell mee thou most frontlesse of all men, did'st thou (when thou had'st meanes to note me best) euer obserue so base a temper in mee, as to giue any glance at stooping to my Vassall?

Thar. Your drudge Madam, to doe your drudgerie.

Eud. Or am I now so skant of worthie Suiters, that may aduance mine honour; aduance my estate; strengthen my alliance (if I list to wed) that I must stoop to make my foot my head.

Thar. No but your side, to keepe you warme a bed. But Madame vouchsafe me your patience to that points serious answere. Though I confesse to get higher place in your graces, I could wish my fortunes more honourable; my person more gracious; my minde more adorn'd with Noble and Heroicall vertues; yet Madame (that you thinke not your blood disparadg'd by mixture with mine) daine to know this: howfoeuer

I once, only for your loue, disguis'd my selfe in the seruice of your late Lord and mine ; yet my descent is as honourable as the proudest of your Spartane attempters ; who by vnknown quills or conduits vnder ground, drawes his Pedigree from Lycurgus his great Toe, to the Viceroyes little finger, and from thence to his owne elbow, where it will neuer leaue itching.

Reb. Tis well Sir, presume still of the place.

Thar. Sfoot Madame, am I the first great personage that hath stoopt to disguises for loue ? what thinke you of our Countrie-man Hercules ; that for loue put on Omphales Apron, and fate spinning amongst her Wenches, while his Mistris wore his Lyons skin and Lamb-skin'd him, if he did not his businesse.

Eud. Most fitly thou resembl'ft thy selfe to that violent outlaw, that claim'd all other mens possessions as his owne by his meere valoure. For what lesse hast thou done ? Come into my house, beate away these Honourable persons ?

Thar. That I will Madam. Hence ye Sparta-Vel-uets.

Pfor. Hold, shee did not meane so.

Thar. Away I say, or leaue your liues I protest here.

Hiar. Well Sir, his Altitude shall know you.

Reb. Ile doe your errand Sir.

Exeunt.

Thar. Doe good Cofen Altitude ; and beg the reuerfion of the next Ladie : for Dido has betrotht her loue to me. By this faire hand Madam, a faire riddance of this Calidonian Bore.

Eud. O most prodigious audacioufnesse !

Thar. True Madam ; O fie vpon am, they are intolerable. And I can not but admire your singular vertue of patience, not common in your sexe ; and must therefore carrie with it some rare indowment of other Masculine and Heroicall vertues. To heare a rude Spartane court so ingenuous a Ladie, with dull newes from Athens, or the Viceroyes court ; how many dogs were spoil'd at the last Bull-baiting ; what Ladies dub'd their husbands Knights, and so forth.

Eud. But hast thou no shame ? No sence of what disdain I shew'd thee in my last entertainment ? chacing thee from my presence, and charging thy dutie, not to attempt the like intrusion for thy life ; and dar'st thou yet approach mee in this vnmannery manner ? No question this desperate boldnesse can not choose but goe accompanied with other infinite rudenesses.

Thar. Good Madam, giue not the Child an vnfit name, terme it not boldnes, which the Sages call true confidence, founded on the most infallible Rocke of a womans constancie.

Eud. If shame can not restraine thee, tell mee yet if any brainlesse foole would haue tempted the danger attending thy approach.

Thar. No Madam, that proues I am no Foole : Then had I been here a Foole, and a base low-spirited Spartan, if for a Ladies froune, or a Lords threates, or for a Guard of Groomes, I should haue shrunke in the wetting, and suffer'd such a delicious flower to perish in the stalke, or to be sauadgely pluckt by a prophane finger. No Madam : First let me be made a Subiect for disgrace ; let your remorselesse Guard seaze on my despised bodie, bind me hand and foot, and hurle me into your Ladiships bed.

Eud. O Gods : I protest thou dost more and more make me admire thee.

Thar. Madam, ignorance is the mother of admiration : know me better, and youle admire me lesse.

Eud. What would'st thou haue mee know ? what seekes thy comming ? why dost thou hant me thus ?

Thar. Only Madam, that the Aetna of my sighes, and Nilus of my teares, pour'd forth in your presence, might witnesse to your Honor the hot and moist affection of my hart, and worke me some measure of fauour, from your sweete tongue, or your sweeter lips, or what else your good Ladiship shall esteeme more conducible, to your diuine contentment.

Eud. Pen and Inck-horne I thanke thee. This you learn'd when you were a Seruing-man.

Thar. Madam, I am still the same creature ; and I will so tie my whole fortunes to that stile, as were it my happinesse (as I know it will be) to mount into my Lords succession, yet vow I neuer to assume other Title, or State, then your seruants : Not approaching your boord, but bidden : Not pressing to your bed, but your pleasure shall be first known if you will command me any seruice.

Eud. Thy vowes are as vaine as a Ruffins othes ; as common as the aire ; and as cheape as the dust. How many of the light huswiues, thy Muses, hath thy loue promist this seruice besides, I pray thee ?

Thar. Compare shadowes to bodies, Madam ; Pictures to the life ; and such are they to you, in my valuation.

Eud. I see wordes will neuer free me of thy boldnesse, and will therefore now vse blowes ; and those of the mortallest enforcement. Let it suffice Sir, that all this time, and to this place, you enioy your safetie ; keepe backe : No one foote follow mee further ; for I protest to thee, the next threshold past, lets passe a prepar'd Ambush to thy latest breath. Exit . Eud.

Thar. This for your Ambush, He drawes. Dare my loue with death ?

Clin. Slight ; follow ant please your Honour.

Arg. Not I by this light.

Clin. I hope Gentle-women you will.

Sthe. Not we Sir, we are no parters of fraies.

Clin. Faith nor Ile be any breaker of customes.

Exeunt.

Finis Actus Secundi.

Actus Tertij.

Scœna Prima.

Enter Lyfander and Lycus booted.

Lyc. WOuld any heart of Adamant, for satisfaction of an vngrounded humour, racke a poore Ladies innocencie as you intend to doe. It was a strange curiositie in that Emperour, that ript his Mothers wombe to see the place he lay in.

Lyf. Come do not lode me with volumes of perswasion; I am resolu'd, if shee be gold shee may abide the tast, lets away, I wonder where this wild brother is.

Enter Cynthia, Hylus, and Ero.

Cynth. SIr.

Lyfand. SI pray thee wife shew but thy selfe a woman; and be silent: question no more the reason of my iourney, which our great Viceroyes charge vrg'd in this letter doth enforce me to.

Cynth. Let me but see that letter, there is somthing in this presaging bloud of mine, tells me this sodaine iourney can portend no good, resolue me sweet, haue not I giuen you cause of discontent, by some misprision, or want of fit obseruance, let mee know that I may wreake my selfe vpon my selfe.

Lyfand. Come wife, our loue is now growne old and staid,

And must not wanton it in tricks of Court,
Nor enterchang'd delights of melting louers;
Hanging on fleeces, sighing, loth to depart;
These toies are past with vs; our true loues substance
Hath worne out all the shew, let it suffice,
I hold thee deare: and thinke some cause of weight

With no excuse to be dispenst with all,
Compells me from thy most desired embraces ;
I stay but for my Brother, came he not in last night.

Hyl. For certaine no fir, which gaue vs cause of wonder, what accident kept him abrode.

Cynth. Pray heauen it proue not some wild resolution, bred in him by his second repulse from the Countesse.

Lyfand. Trust me I something feare it, this insatiate spirit of aspiring, being so dangerous and fatall ; desire mounted on the wings of it, descends not but headlong.

Hyl. Sir, fir, here 's my Vncle. Enter Tharf.

Lyfand. What wrapt in carelesse cloake, face hid in hat vnbande, these are the ditches brother, in which outraging colts plunge both themselues and their riders.

Thar. Well, wee must get out as well as wee may, if not, there's the making of a graue sau'd.

Cynth. That's desperately spoken brother, had it not been happier the colt had beene better broken, and his rider not fallen in.

Thar. True sifter, but wee must ride colts before wee can breake them, you know.

Lyfand. This is your blind Goddesse Confidence.

Thar. Alas brother, our house is decaid, & my honest ambition to restore it, I hope be pardonable. My comfort is : the Poet that pens the storie will write ore my head magnis tamen excidit ausis ; which in our natiue Idiome, lets you know, His mind was high, though Fortune was his Foe.

Lyfand. A good resolute brother, to out-iest disgrace : come I had been on my iourney but for some priuate speech with you : lets in.

Thar. Good brother stay a little, helpe out this ragged colt out of the ditch.

Lyfand. How now.

Thar. Now I confesse my ouersight, this haue I purchas'd by my confidence.

Lyfand. I like you brother, 'tis the true Garb you know,

What wants in reall worth supply in show.

Thar. In show ? alas 'twas euen the thing it felfe,
I op't my counting houle, and tooke away
These simple fragments of my treasurie,
Husband my Countesse cri'd take more, more yet,
Yet, I in haft, to pay in part my debt,
And proue my felfe a husband of her store,
Kift and came of ; and this time tooke no more.

Cynth. But good brother.

Thar. Then were our honor'd fpoufall rites perform'd,

Wee made all thort, and fweet, and clofe, and fure.

Lyfand. Hee's wrap't.

Thar. Then did my Vfhers, and chiefe Seruants ftoope,

Then made my women curtfies, and enuied
Their Ladies fortune : I was magnified.

Lyfand. Let him alone, this fpirit will foone vanifh.

Thar. Brother and fifter as I loue you, and am true feruant to Venus, all the premifes are ferious and true, and the conclufion is : the great Countesse is mine, the Palace is at your feruice, to which I inuite you all to folemnize my honour'd nuptialls.

Lyfand. Can this be credited !

Thar. Good brother doe not you enuie my fortunate atchieument.

Lyfand. Nay I euer faid, the attempt was commendable.

Thar. Good.

Lyfand. If the iffue were fuccefffull.

Thar. A good ftate-conclufion, happie euent make good the worft attempts. Here are your widdow-vowes fifter ; thus are yee all in your pure naturalls ;
certaine morall difguifes of coineffe, which the ignorant cal modeftie, ye borrow of art to couer your buske points ; which a blunt and refolute encounter, taken vnder a fortunate aspect, eafily difarmes you off ;

and then alas what are you? poore naked finners, God wot: weake paper walls thrust downe with a finger; this is the way on't, boile their appetites to a full height of lust; and then take them downe in the nicke.

Cynth. Is there probabilitie in this; that a Ladie so great, so vertuous, standing on so high termes of honour, should so soone stoope?

Thar. You would not wonder sifter, if you knew the lure shee stoo'pt at: greatnesse? thinke you that can curb affection; no, it whets it more; they haue the full streame of bloud, to beare them: the sweet gale of their sublim'd spirits to driue them: the calme of ease to prepare them: the sun-shine of fortune to allure them: Greatnesse to waft them safe through all Rocks of infamie: when youth, wit, and person come aboard once, tell me sifter, can you chuse but hoise faile, and put forward to the maine?

Lyfand. But let me wonder at this frailtie yet; would shee in so short time weare out his memorie, so soon wipe from her eies, nay, from her heart, whom I myselfe, and this whole Ile besides, still remember with grieffe, the impressiion of his losse taking worthily such roote in vs; howe thinke you Wife?

Cynth. I am asham'd ant, and abhorre to thinke,
So great and vow'd a patterne of our sexe,
Should take into her thoughts, nay to her bed,
(O staine to woman-hood) a second loue.

Lyc. In so short time.

Cynth. In any time.

Lyfand. No wife.

Cynth. By Iuno no; sooner a lothsom Tode.

Thar. High words beleue me, and I thinke sheele keep them; next turne is yours Nephew; you shall now marrie my noblest Ladie-Daughter; the first marriage in Paphos; next my nuptialls shall be yours; these are strange occurrents brother, but pretie and patheticall; if you see mee in my chaire of Honour; and my Countesse in mine armes; you will then beleuee, I hope, I am Lord of the Palace, then shall you trie my great Ladies entertainement ; see your handes free'd of mee, and mine taking you to aduancement.

Lyfand. Well, all this rids not my bufineffe ; wife you shall bee there to partake the vnexpected honour of our Houfe. Lycus, and I will make it our recreation by the way, to thinke of your Reuells and Nuptiall sports ; Brother my stay hath beene for you ; Wife pray thee bee gone, and foone prepare for the folemnie, a Moneth returnes mee.

Cynth. Heauens guide your iourney.

Lyf. Fare-will.

Thar. Fare-well Nephew ; prosper in virilitie, but doe you heare ; keepe your hand from your voice, I haue a part for you in our Hymeneall shew.

Hyl. You speake too late for my voice, but Ile discharge the part.

Exit Cyn. Hyl.

Lyfand. Occurrents call yee them ; foule shame confound them all ; that impregnable Fort of chastitie and loyaltie, that amazement of the world, O yee Deities could nothing restraine her ? I tooke her spirit to bee too haughtie for such a depression.

Thar. But who commonly more short heeld ; then they that are high 'ith in-step.

Lyfand. Mee thinkes yet shame should haue controul'd so sodaine an appetite.

Thar. Tush, shame doth extinguish lust as oile doth fire,
The bloud once het, shame doth enflame the more,
What they before, by art difsembled most
They act more freely ; shame once found is lost ;
And to say truth Brother ; what shame is due to't ? or what congruence doth it carrie, that a yong Ladie, Gallant, Vigorous, full of Spirit, and Complexion ; her appetite newe whetted with Nuptiall delights ; to be confind to the speculation of a deaths head, or for the losse of a husband, the world affording flesh enough, make the noone-tide of her yeares, the funne-set of her pleasures.

Lyc. And yet there haue been fuch women.

Thar. Of the first stamp perhaps, when the mettall was purer then in these degenerate daies; of later yeares, much of that coine hath beene counterfaint, and besides so crackt and worne with vse, that they are growne light, and indeede fit for nothing, but to be turn'd ouer in play.

Lyfand. Not all brother.

Thar. My matchlesse sifter only excepted: for shee, you know is made of an other mettall, then that shee borrow'd of her mother. But doe you brother sadly intend the pursuite of this triall?

Lyfand. Irreuocably.

Thar. Its a high proiect: if it be once rais'd, the earth is too weake to beare so waightie an accident, it cannot bee coniu'r'd downe againe, without an earthquake, therefore beleeeue shee will bee constant.

Lyc. No, I will not.

Thar. Then beleeeue shee will not be constant.

Lyfand. Neither, I will beleeeue nothing but what triall enforces; will you hold your promise for the gouerning of this proiect with skill, and secrecie?

Thar. If it must needes bee so. But hearke you brother; haue you no other Capricions in your head to intrap my sifter in her frailtie, but to proue the firmenesse of her widdow voves after your suppos'd death.

Lyfand. None in the world.

Thar. Then here's my hand, Ile be as close, as my Ladies shoe to her foote that pinches and pleases her, and will beare on with the plot, till the vessell split againe.

Lyfand. Forge any death, so you can force beliefe. Say I was poison'd, drown'd.

Thar. Hang'd.

Lyfand. Any thing, so you assist it with likely circumstance, I neede not instruct you: that must bee your imploiment Lycus.

Lyc. Well Sir.

Thar. But brother you must fet in to; to countenance truth out, a herse there must be too; Its strange to thinke how much the eie preuailes in such impresions; I haue marckt a Widdow, that iust before was seene pleasant enough, follow an emptie herse, and weepe deuoutly.

Lyc. All those thinges leaue to me.

Lyfan. But brother for the bestowing of this herse in the monument of our Familie, and the marshalling of a Funerall.

Thar. Leaue that to my care, and if I doe not doe the mourner, as liuely as your Heire, and weepe as lustily as your Widdow, say there's no vertue in Onions; that being done, Ile come to visit the distrest widdow; apply old ends of comfort to her grieffe, but the burden of my song shall be to tell her wordes are but dead comforts; and therefore counsaile her to take a liuing comfort; that might Ferrit out the thought of her dead husband, and will come prepar'd with choise of suiters; either my Spartane Lord for grace at the Viceroyes Court, or some great Lawyer that may soder vp her crackt estate, and so forth. But what would you say brother, if you should finde her married at your arriuell.

Lyfand. By this hand split her Weasand.

Thar. Well, forget not your wager, a stately chariot with foure braue Horses of the Thracian breede, with all appurtenances. Ile prepare the like for you, if you proue Victor; but well remembred, where will you lurke the whiles?

Lyfand. Mewd vp close, some short daies iourney hence, Lycus shall know the place, write still how all things passe, brother adiew; all ioy attend you.

Thar. Will you not stay our nuptiall now so neare.

Lyfand. I should be like a man that heares a tale And heedes it not; one absent from himselfe, my wife shall attend the Countesse, and my Sonne.

Thar. Whom you shal here at your returne call me father, adiew: Ioue be your speede.

My Nuptialls done, your Funeralls succeed. Exeunt.

Enter Argus barehead.

Arg. A Hall, a hall : who's without there ? Enter two or three with cushions.

Come on, y'are proper Groomes, are yee not ? Slight I thinke y'are all Bridegroomes, yee take your pleasures so. A companie of dormice. Their Honours are vpon comming, and the roome not readie. Rushes and feates instantly.

Thar. Now, alas fellow Argus, how thou art comberd with an office ?

Arg. Perfume firrha, the roome's dampish.

Thar. Nay you may leaue that office to the Ladies, theyle perfume it sufficiently.

Arg. Cry mercie Sir, here's a whole Chorus of Syluans at hand, cornetting, & tripping ath' toe, as the ground they troad on were too hot for their feete. The deuice is rare ; and there's your yong Nephew too, he hangs in the clouds Deified with Hymens shape.

Thar. Is he perfect in's part ? has not his tongue learn'd of the Syluans to trip ath' Toe ?

Arg. Sir, beleue it, he does it pretiously for accent and action, as if hee felt the part he plaid : hee rauishes all the yong Wenches in the Palace : Pray Venus my yong Ladie Laodice haue not some little prick of Cupid in her, shee's so diligent at's rehearfalls.

Thar. No force, so my next vowes be heard, that if Cupid haue prickt her, Hymen my cure her.

Arg. You meane your Nephew Sir that presents Hymen.

Thar. Why so, I can speake nothing but thou art with in me : fie of this wit of thine, 'twill be thy destruction. But howfoeuer you please to vnderstand, Hymen fend the boy no worfe fortune : And where's my Ladies honour ?

Arg. At hand Sir, with your vnparagond sifter, please you take your chaire of Honour Sir ?

Thar. Most feruiceable Argus, the Gods reward thy feruice ; for I will not.

*Enter Eudora, leading Cynthia, Laodice, Sthenio, Ianthe, Ero, with others
following.*

Eud. Come sifter, now we must exchange that name
For stranger Titles, let's dispose our selues
To entertaine these Syluane Reuellers,
That come to grace our loued Nuptialls,
I!feare we must all turne Nymphs to night,
To sidge those sprightly wood-Gods in their dances ;
Can you doo't nimblely sifter ? sflight what aile you, are you not well ?

Cynth. Yes Madam.

Eud. But your lookes, mee thinkes, are cloudie ; suing all the Sunne-shine of this cleare honour to your husbands house.

Is there ought here that forts not with your liking ?

Thar. Blame her not Mistris, if her lookes shew care.
Excuse the Merchants sadnesse that hath made
A doubtfull venture of his whole estate ;
His liuelyhood, his hopes, in one poore bottome,
To all encounters of the Sea and stormes.
Had you a husband that you lou'd as well,
Would you not take his absent plight as ill ?
Cauill at euery fancie ? Not an obiection
That could present it selfe, but it would forge
Some vaine obiection, that did doubt his safetie ;
True loue is euer full of ieaalousie.

Eud. Ieaalous ? of what ? of euery little iourney ?
Meere fancie then is wanton ; and doth cast
At those sleight dangers there, too dotting glances ;
Misgiuing mindes euer prouoke mischances :
Shines not the Sunne in his way bright as here ?
Is not the aire as good ? what hazard doubt you ?

Arg. His horfe may stumble if it please your Honour ;

The raine may wet, the winde may blow on him ;
Many shrewd hazards watch poore trauailers.

Eud. True, and the shrewdest thou hast reckend vs,
Good sifter, these cares fit yong married wiues.

Cynth. Wiues should be stil yong in their husbands loues.

Time beares no Sythe should bear down them before him.

Our liues he may cut short, but not our loues.

Thar. Sifter be wise, and ship not in one Barke,
All your abilitie : if he miscarrie,

Your well tried wisedome should looke out for new.

Cynth. I wish them happie windes that runne that course,

From me tis farre ; One Temple seal'd our troth.

One Tomb, one houre shall end, and shroud vs both.

Thar. Well, y'are a Phœnix, there be that your cheere

Loue, with your husband be, your wisedome here.

Hearke, our sports challenge it ; Sit dearest Mistris.

Eud. Take your place worthiest seruant.

Thar. Serue me heauen. Musique.

As I my heauenly Mistris, Sit rare sifter.

Musique : Hymen descends ; and fixe Syluanes enter beneath, with Torches.

Arg. A hall, a hall : let no more Citizens in there.

Laod. O, Not my Cosen fee ; but Hymens selfe.

Sthe. He does become it most enflamingly.

Hym. Haile honor'd Bridegroom, and his Princely bride

With the most fam'd for vertue, Cynthia ;

And this yong Ladie, bright Laodice,

One rich hope of this noblest Familie.

Sthe. Hearke how he courts : he is enamour'd too.

Laod. O grant it Venus, and be euer honour'd.

Hym. In grace and loue of you, I Hymen fearcht
The groues and thickets that embrace this Palace

With this clear-flam'd, and good aboding Torch
For fummons of these fresh and flowrie Syluans,
To this faire prefence ; with their winding Haies,
Actiue and Antique dances to delight
Your frolick eies, and helpe to celebrate
These noblest nuptialls ; which great Destinie,
Ordain'd past custome and all vulgar obiect
To be the readuancement of a house,
Noble and Princely, and restore this Palace
To that name, that fixe hunderd Summers since
Was in possession of this Bridegroomes Ancetors,
The ancient and most vertue-fam'd Lyfandri.

Syluans ! the Courtships you make to your Dryads,
Use to this great Bride, and these other Dames,
And heighten with your sports, my nuptiall flames.

Laod. O would himselfe descend, and me command.

Sthe. Dance ; and his heart catch in an others hand.

Syluans, take out the Bride and the rest : They dance, after which, and all set in their places.

Hymen.

Hym. Now, what the Power and my Torches influence

Hath in the blessings of your Nuptiall ioyes (Great Bride and Bridegroom) you shall amply part Betwixt your free loues, and forgoe it neuer.

Omn. Thankes to great Hymen, and faire Syluanes euer. Excunt.

Finis Actus Tertij.

Actus Quarti.

Scœna Prima.

Tharfalio, Lycus, with his Arme in a skarfe, a night cap on's head.

Lyc. I Hope Sir by this time.

Thar. I Put on man, by our felues.

Lyc. I The edge of your confidence is well take off; would you not bee content to with-draw your wager?

Thar. Faith fellow Lycus, if my wager were weakely built, this vnexpected accident might stagger it. For the truth is, this strain is extraordinarie, to follow her husbands bodie into the Tombe, and there for his companie to burie her selfe quick: it's new and stirring, but for all this, Ile not despaire of my wager.

Lyc. Why Sir, can you thinke such a passion dissembl'd?

Thar. All's one for that, What I thinke I thinke; In the meane time forget not to write to my Brother, how the plot hath succeeded, that the newes of his death hath taken; a funerall solemnitie perform'd, his suppos'd Corse bestow'd in the monument of our Familie, thou and I horrible mourners: But aboue all that his intollerable vertuous Widow, for his loue, and (for her loue) Ero her hand-maid, are discended with his Corse into the vault; there wipe their eies time out of minde, drinke nothing but their own teares, and by this time are almost dead with famine. There's a point will sting it (for you say tis true) where left you him?

Lyc. At Dipolis Sir, some twentie miles hence.

Thar. He keepes close.

Lyc. I fir, by all meanes; skulks vnknowne vnder the name of a strange Knight.

Thar. That may carrie him without discrying, for there's a number of strange Knights abroad. You left him well.

Lyc. Well Sir, but for this iealous humour that hants him.

Thar. Well, this newes will absolutely purge that humor. Write all, forget not to describe her passion at thy discouerie of his slaughter: did shee performe it well for her husbands wager?

Lyc. Performe it, call you it? you may iest; men hunt Hares to death for their sports, but the poore beasts die in earnest: you wager of her passions for your pleasure, but shee takes little pleasure in those earnest passions. I neuer saw such an extasie of sorrow, since I knew the name of sorrow. Her hands flew vp to her head like Furies, hid all her beauties in her discheuel'd haire, & wept as she would turne fountaine. I would you and her husband had bene behind the Arras but to haue heard her. I assure you Sir, I was so transported with the spectacle, that in despite of my discretion, I was forc't to turne woman, and beare a part with her. Humanitie broke loose from my heart, and stream'd through mine eies.

Thar. In prose, thou weptst. So haue I seen many a moist Auditor doe at a play ; when the storie was but a meere fiction: And didst act the Nuntius well, would I had heard it: could'st thou dresse thy lookes in a mournfull habite ?

Lyc. Not without preparation Sir ; no more then my speech, twas a plaine acting of an enterlude to me, to pronounce the part.

Thar. As how for heauens sake ?

Lyc. Phæbus addrest his Chariot towards the West
To change his wearied Coursers, and so forth.

Thar. Nay on, and thou lou'st me.

Lyc. Lysander and my selfe beguild the way
With enterchang'd discourse, but our chiefe Theame,
Was of your dearest selfe, his honour'd wife ;
Your loue, your vertue, wondrous constancie.

Thar. Then was her Cu to whimper ; on.

Lyc. When sodainly appear'd as far as sight
A troope of horse, arm'd as we might descerne,
With Iauelines, Speares, and such accoutrements.
He doubted nought (As Innocencie euer Is free from doubting ill.)

Thar. There dropt a teare.

Lyc. My minde misgaue me.
They might be mountaners. At their approach
They vs'd no other language but their weapons,
To tell vs what they were ; Lysander drew,
And bore him selfe Achilles like in fight,

And as a Mower sweepes off t'heads of Bents,
So did Lyfanders sword shaue off the points
Of their affaulting lances.

His horfe at last, fore hurt, fell vnder him ;
I seeing I could not rescue, vs'd my spurres
To flie away.

Thar. What from thy friend ?

Lyc. I in a good quarrell, why not ?

Thar. Good ; I am answer'd.

Lyc. A lance pursued me, brought me back againe ;
And with these wounds left me t'acompanie
Dying Lyfander : Then they rifl'd vs,
And left vs.

They gone ; my breath not yet gone, gan to striue
And reuiue sence : I with my feeble ioynts
Crawl'd to Lyfander, stirr'd him, and withall
He gaspt ; cried Cynthia ! and breath'd no more.

Thar. O then shee howl'd out right.

Lyc. Passengers came and in a Chariot brought vs
Streight to a Neighbour Towne ; where I forthwith
Coffind my friend in leade ; and so conuaid him
To this sad place.

Thar. 'Twas well ; and could not show but strangely.

Lyc. Well Sir, This tale pronounc't with terrour, suited with action clothed with such likely circumstance ; My wounds in shew, her husbands herse in fight, thinke
what effect it wrought : And if you doubt, let the sad consequence of her retreat to his Tombe, bee your wofull instructer.

Thar. For all this, Ile not despaire of my wager :
These Griues that sound so lowd, proue alwaies light,

True sorrow euermore keeps out of sight.

This straine of mourning with Sepulcher, like an ouerdoing Actor, affects grossly, and is indeede so farre forc't from the life, that it bewraies it selfe to be altogether artificiall.

To set open a shop of mourning ! Tis palpable.

Truth the substance, hunts not after the shadow of popular Fame. Her officious ostentation of sorrow condemnes her sinceritie. When did euer woman mourne so vnmeasurably, but shee did dissemble ?

Lyc. O Gods ! a passion thus borne ; thus apparell'd with teares, sighes, frownings, and all the badges of true sorrow, to be dissembl'd ! by Venus I am forrie I euer set foot in't. Could shee, if shee dissembl'd, thus dally with hunger, be deafe to the barking of her appetite, not hauing these foure daies relieu'd nature with one dramme of sustenance.

Thar. For this does shee looke to bee Deified, to haue Hymnes made of her, nay to her : The Tomb where she is to be no more reputed the ancient monument of our Familie the Lyfandri ; but the new erected Altar of Cynthia : To which all the Paphian widdowes shall after their husbands Funeralls, offer their wet muckinders, for monuments of the danger they haue past, as Sea-men doe their wet garments at Neptunes Temple after a ship wracke.

Lyc. Well, Ile apprehend you, at your pleasure : I for my part will say ; that if her faith bee as constant as her loue is heartie, and vnaffected, her vertues may iustly challenge a Deitie to enshrine them.

Thar. I, there's an other point too. But one of those vertues is enough at once. All natures are not capable of all gifts. If the braine of the West, were in the heads of the learned ; then might Parish-Clerkes be common counsaile men, and Poets Aldermens deputies. My sister may turne Niobe for loue ; but till Niobe bee turn'd to a Marble, Ile not despaire but shee may proue a woman. Let the triall runne on, if shee doe not out-runne it, Ile say Poets are no Prophets, Prognosticators are but Mountbankes, & none tell true but wood-mongers.

Exit.

Lyc. A sweet Gentleman you are. I meruaile what man ? what woman ? what name ? what action doth his tongue glide ouer, but it leaues a slime vpon't. Well, Ile presently to Dipolis, where Lyfander staies ; and will not say but shee may proue fraile : But this

Ile say, If she should chance to breake, Her teares are true, though womens truths are weake. Exit.

Enter Lyfander like a Souldier disguifde at all parts, a halfe Pike, gorget, &c. he discouers the Tombe, lookes in and wonders, &c.

O Miracle of nature ! womens glorie ;
 Mens shame ; and enuie of the Deities !
 Yet must these matchlesse creatures be suspected ;
 Accus'd ; condemn'd !
 Now by th'immortall Gods,
 They rather merit Altars, Sacrifice,
 Then loue and courtship.
 Yet see the Queene of these lies here interred ;
 Tearing her haire, and drowned in her teares.
 Which Ioue should turne to Christall ; and a Mirroure
 Make of them ; wherein men may see and wonder
 At womens vertues. Shall shee famish then ?
 Will men (without dissuasions) suffer thus
 So bright an Ornament to earth, tomb'd quick.
 In Earths darke bosome : Ho !
 Who's in the Tombe there ?
Ero. Who calls ? whence are you ?
Lyf. I am Souldier of the watch and must enter.
Ero. Amongst the dead ?
Lyf. Doe the dead speake ? ope or Ile force it open.
Ero. What violence is this ? what seeke you here
 Where nought but death and her attendants dwell.
Lyf. What wretched soules are you that thus by night
 lurke here amongst the dead ?
Ero. Good Souldier doe not stirre her, Shee's weake, and quickly seiz'd with frowning and passions, and with much trouble shall we both recall her fainting spirits.
 Fiue daies thus hath shee wasted ; and not once fea-son'd her Pallate with the tast of meate ; her powers of life are spent ; and what remaines of her famisht spirit, ferues not to breath but sigh.

Shee hath exil'd her eies from sleepe, or fight, and giuen them wholly vp to ceafelesse teares ouer that ruthfull herfe of her deare Spoufe, flaine by Bantditos, Nobly borne Lyfander.

Lyfand. And hopes shee with these heauie notes and cries to call him from the dead? in these fiae daies hath shee but made him stirre a finger or fetch one gasp of that forsaken life shee mournes?

Come, honour'd Mistris; I admire your vertues;
But must reprove this vaine excesse of mone;
Rowse your selfe Ladie, and looke vp from death,
Well said, tis well; stay by my hand and rise.
This Face hath beene maintain'd with better hufwiferie.

Cyn. What are you?

Lyf. Ladie, I am Sentinell,
Set in this hallowed place, to watch and guard
On forfait of my life, these monuments
From Rape, and spoil'd of sacrilegious handes
And saue the bodies, that without you see
Of crucified offenders; that no friends
May beare them hence, to honour'd buriall.

Cyn. Thou seem'st an honest Souldier, pray thee
then

Be as thou seem'st; betake thee to thy charge
And leaue this place; adde not affliction
To the afflicted.

Lyf. You misname the children.
For what you terme affliction now, in you
Is but selfe-humour; voluntarie Penance
Impos'd vpon your selfe: and you lament
As did the Satyre once, that ran affrighted
From that hornes sound that he himselfe had winded.
Which humor to abate, my counsaile tending your term'd affliction,

What I for Phicke giue, you take for poifon.
I tell you honour'd Mistris, these ingredients
Are wholesome, though perhaps they seeme vntooth-some.

Ero. This Souldier fure, is some decai'd pothecarie.

Lyf. Deere Ghost be wise, and pittie your faire selfe

Thus, by your selfe vnnaturally afflicted :

Chide back, heart-breaking grones, clear vp those lamps,

Restore them to their first creation :

Windowes for light ; not sluces made for teares.

Beate not the fenselesse aire with needlesse cries,

Banefull to life, and bootlesse to the dead.

This is the Inne, where all Deucalions race

Sooner or later, must take vp their lodging ;

No priuiledge can free vs from this prison ;

No teares, no praiers, can redeeme from hence

A captiu'd foule ; Make vse of what you see :

Let this affrighting spectacle of death

Teach you to nourish life.

Ero. Good heare him : this is a rare Souldier.

Lyfand. Say that with abstinence you should vnlose the knot of life : Suppose that in this Tombe for your

deare Spouse, you should entomb your selfe a liuing

Corse ; Say that before your houre without due Summons from the Fates, you send your hastie foule to hell : can your deare Spouse take notice of your faith and constancie ? Shall your deare Spouse reuiue to giue you thanks ?

Cynth. Idle discourser.

Lyfan. No, your moanes are idle.

Goe to I say, be counfail'd ; raise your selfe :

Enioy the fruits of life, there's viands for you,

Now, liue for a better husband.

No ? will you none ?

Ero. For loue of courtesie, good Mistris, eate,

Doe not reiect so kinde and sweet an offer,

Who knowes but this may be some Mercurie

Disguis'de, and sent from Iuno to relieue vs ?

Did euer any lend vnwilling eares

To those that came with messages of life ?

Cynth. I pray thee leaue thy Rhetorique.

Ero. By my foule ; to speake plaine truth, I could rather with t'employ my teeth then my tongue, fo your example would be my warrant.

Cynth. Thou haft my warrant.

Lyfand. Well then, eate my wench,
Let obftinacie ftarue.

Fall to.

Ero. Perfwade my Miftris firft.

Lyfand. Slight tell me Ladie,
Are you refolu'd to die? If that be fo,
Chooſe not (for ſhame) a baſe, and beggars death :
Die not for hunger, like a Spartane Ladie ;
Fall valiantly vpon a ſword, or drinke
Noble death, expell your grieſe with poiſon,
There 'tis, ſeize it.----Tuſh you dare not die.
Come Wench thou haft not loſt a husband ;
Thou ſhalt eate, th'art now within
The place where I command.

Ero. I proteſt fir.

Lyf. Well ſaid ; eate, and proteſt, or Ile proteſt
And doe thou eate ; thou eat'ſt againſt thy will,
That's it thou would'ſt fay.

Ero. It is.

Lyf. And vnder ſuch a proteſtation
Thou loſt' thy Maiden-head.
For your owne ſake good Ladie forget this husband,
Come you are now become a happy Widdow,
A bleſſedneſſe that many would be glad of.
That and your husbands Inuentorie together,
Will raiſe you vp husbands enow.
What thinke you of me ?

Cynth. Triſler, purſue this wanton Theame no further ;

Left (which I would be loth) your ſpeech prouoke
Vnciuill language from me ; I muſt tell you,
One ioynt of him I loſt, was much more worth
Then the rackt valew of thy entire bodie.

Ero. O know what ioynt ſhee meanes.

Lyf. Well, I haue done.

And well done frailtie ; proface, how lik'ſt thou it.

Ero. Very toothsome Ingrediens furely fir,
Want but some lycor to incorporate them.

Lyf. There tis, caroufe.

Ero. I humbly thanke you Sir.

Lyf. Hold pledge me now.

Ero. Tis the poison Sir,

That preferues life, I take it.

bibit Ancill.

Lyf. Doe fo, take it.

Ero. Sighing has made me fomthing fhort-winded.

Ile pledge y'at twice.

Lyf. Tis well done ; doe me right.

Ero. I pray fir, haue you beene a Pothecarie ?

Lyf. Marrie haue I wench ; A womans Pothecarie.

Ero. Haue you good Ingredients ?

I like your Bottle well. Good Mistris taft it.

Trie but the operation, twill fetch vp

The Rofes in your cheekes againe.

Doctor Verolles bottles are not like it ;

There's no Guaicum here, I can assure you.

Lyf. This will doe well anone.

Ero. Now fie vpon't.

O I haue loft my tongue in this fame lymbo.

The fpring ants, spoil'd me thinkes ; it goes not off

With the old twange.

Lyf. Well faid wench, oile it well ; twill make it flide well.

Ero. Aristotle faies fir, in his Posterionds.

Lyf. This wench is learned ; And what faies he ?

Ero. That when a man dies, the laft thing that moues is his heart, in a woman her tongue.

Lyf. Right ; and addes further, that you women are a kind of fpinners ; if their legs be pluckt off, yet ftill they'le wag them ; fo will you your tongues.

With what an eafie change does this fame weakneffe
Of women, flipe from one extreame t' another ?

All thefe attractions take no hold of her ;

No not to take refection ; 'T muft not be thus.

Well faid wench ; Tickle that Helicon.

But fhall we quit the field with this difgrace

Giuen to our Oratorie ? Both not gaine
So much ground of her as to make her eate ?

Ero. Faith the trurh is fir : you are no fit Organe
For this bufineffe ;

Tis quite out of your Element :
Let vs alone, fheele eate I haue no feare ;
A womans tongue best fits a womans eare.

Ioue neuer did employ Mercurie,
But Iris for his Messenger to Iuno.

Lyf. Come, let me kiffe thee wench ; wilt vndertake
To make thy Miftris eate ?

Ero. It fhall go hard Sir
But I will make her turne flesh and bloud,
And learne to liue as other mortalls doe.

Lyf. Well faid : the morning hafts ; next night expect me.

Ero. With more prouifion good Sir.

Lyf. Very good. Exiturus.

Ero. And bring more wine. Shee fhuts vp the Tomb.

Lyf. What elfe ; fhalt haue enough :
O Cynthia, heire of her bright puritie,
Whofe name thou doft inherit ; Thow difdainft
(Seuer'd from all concretion) to feede
Vpon the bafe foode of groffe Elements.
Thou all art foule ; All immortalitie.
Thou fafts for Nectar and Ambrofia,
Which till thou find'ft, and eat'ft aboue the ftarres,
To all foode here thou bidd'ft celeftiall warrs. Exit.

Cynthia, Ero, the Tomb opening.

Ero. So ; lets aire our dampifh fpirits, almoft ftiff'd in this grofe muddie Element.

Cyn. How fweet a breath the calmneffe of the night
infpires the aire withall ?

Ero. Well faid ; Now y'are your felfe : did not I tell you how fweet an operation the Souldiers bottle had ? And if there be fuch vertue in the bottle ; what is there in the Souldier ? know, and acknowledge his worth when hee comes in any cafe Miftris.

Cyn. So Maide.

Ero. Gods my patience? did you looke forsooth that Iuno should haue sent you meate from her owne Trencher, in reward of your widdowes teares? you might sit and sigh first till your heart-strings broke, Ile able't.

Cyn. I feare me thy lips haue gone so oft to the bottle, that thy tongue-strings are come broken home.

Ero. Faith the truth is, my tongue hath beene so long tied vp, that tis couer'd with rust, & I rub it against my pallat as wee doe suspected coines, to trie whether it bee currant or no. But now Mistris for an vpsot of this bottle; let's haue one caroufe to the good speede of my old Master, and the good speede of my new.

Cyn. So Damzell.

Ero. You must pledge it, here's to it. Doe me right I pray.

Cyn. You say I must.

Ero. Must? what else?

Cyn. How excellent ill this humour suites our habite?

Ero. Go to Mistris, do not thinke but you and I shall haue good sport with this iest, when we are in priuate at home. I would to Venus we had some honest shift or other to get off withall; for Ile no more ant; Ile not turne Salt-peeter in this vault for neuer a mans companie liuing; much lesse for a womans. Sure I am the wonder's ouer, and 'twas only for that, that I endur'd this; and so a my conscience did you. Neuer denie it.

Cyn. Nay pray thee take it to thee.

Enter Lyfander.

Cyn. H Earke I heare some footing neare vs.

Ero. Gods me 'tis the Souldier Mistris, by Venus if you fall to your late black Santus againe, Ile discover you.

Lyf. What's here? The maid hath certainly preuail'd with her; mee thinkes those cloudes that last night couer'd her lookes are now disperst: Ile trie this further. Saue you Lady.

Ero. Honorable Souldier? y'are welcome; please you step in fir?

Lyf. With all my heart sweet heart; by your patience Ladie; why this beares some shape of life yet. Damzell, th'ast performd a seruice of high reckoning, which cannot perish vnrewarded.

Ero. Faith Sir, you are in the way to doe it once, if you haue the heart to hold on.

Cyn. Your bottle has poifond this wench fir.

Lyf. A wholsome poison it is Ladie, if I may be iudge; of which sort here is one better bottle more.

Wine is ordaind to raise such hearts as sinke,

Whom wofull starres distemper; let him drinke.

I am most glad I haue beene some meane to this part of your recouerie, and will drinke to the rest of it.

Ero. Goe to Mistris, pray simper no more; pledge the man of Warre here.

Cyn. Come y'are too rude.

Ero. Good.

Lyf. Good footh Ladie y'are honour'd in her seruice; I would haue you liue, and shee would haue you liue freely; without which life is but death. To liue freely is to feast our appetites freely; without which humanes are stones; to the satisfaction whereof I drinke Ladie.

Cyn. Ile pledge you Sir.

Ero. Said like a Mistris; and the Mistris of your selfe; pledge him in loue too: I see hee loues you; Shee's silent, shee consents fir.

Lyf. O happy starres. And now pardon Ladie; me thinks these are all of a peece.

Ero. Nay if you kisse all of a peece wee shall n'ere haue done: Well twas well offer'd, and as well taken.

Cyn. If the world should see this.

Lyf. The world! should one so rare as your selfe, respect the vulgar world?

Cyn. The praise I haue had, I would continue.

Lyc. What of the vulgar? Who hates not the vulgar, deserues not loue of the vertuous. And to affect praise of that we despise, how ridiculous it is?

Ero. Comfortable doctrine Mistris, edifie, edifie. Me thinkes euen thus it was when Dido And Æneas met in the Caue; And hearke Me thinks I heare some of the hunters. She shuts the tomb.

Finis Actus Quarti.

Actus Quinti.

Scœna Prima.

Enter Tharsalio, Lycus.

Lyc. TIs such an obstinacie in you Sir,
As neuer was conceipted, to runne on
With an opinion against all the world,
And what your eies may witnes; to ad-uēture

The famishment for grieffe of such a woman
As all mens merits met in any one,
Could not deserue.

Thar. I must confesse it Lycus,
Weele therefore now preuent it if we may,
And that our curious triall hath not dwelt
Too long on this vnneecessarie hant:
Grieffe, and all want of foode; not hauing wrought
Too mortally on her diuine disposure.

Lyc. I feare they haue, and shee is past our cure.

Thar. I must confesse with feare and shame as much.

Lyc. And that shee will not trust in any thing
What you perswade her to.

Thar. Then thou shalt hast
And call my brother from his secreet shroude,
Where he appointed thee to come and tell him

How all thinges haue succeeded.

Lyc. This is well.

If (as I say) the ill be not so growne,
That all help is denied her. But I feare
The matchlesse Deme is famisht. Thar. looks into the

Thar. Slight, whose here? tomb.

A Souldier with my sifter? wipe, wipe, see Kissing by Ioue; shee, as I lay tis shee.

Lyc. What? is shee well Sir?

Thar. O no, shee is famisht; Shee's past our comfort, shee lies drawing on.

Lyc. The Gods forbid.

Thar. Looke thou, shee's drawing on.
How faist thou?

Lyc. Drawing on? Illustrious witchcrafts.

Thar. Lies shee not drawing on?

Lyc. Shee drawes on fairely.

Our sifter Sir? This shee? can this be shee?

Thar. She, she, she, and none but she.

He dances & sings.

Shee only Queene of loue, and chastitie,
O chastitie; This women be.

Lyc. Slight tis prodigious. Thar. Horfe, horfe, horfe,

Foure Chariot Horfes of the Thracian breede,
Come, bring me brother. O the happiest euening,
That euer drew her vaile before the Sunne.
Who is't canst tell?

Lyc. The Souldier Sir that watches
The bodies crucified in this hallow'd place.
Of which to lose one, it is death to him,
And yet the lustfull knaue is at his Venerie,
While one might steale one.

Thar. What a flauie was I
That held not out my windes strength constanly,
That shee would proue thus? O incredible?
A poore eight-pennie Souldier? Shee that lately
Was at such height of interiection,
Stoope now to such a base coniunction?

By heauen I wonder now I see't in act,
My braine could euer dreame of fuch a thought.
And yet, tis true : Rare, pereles, is't not Lycus ?

Lyc. I know not what it is ; Nor what to fay.

Thar. O had I held out (villaine that I was,)
My blessed confidence but one minute longer,
I should haue beene eternis'd. Gods my fortune,
What an vnspeakable sweet fight it is ?
O eies Ile sacrifice to your deare sence.
And consecrate a Phane to Confidence.

Lyc. But this you must at no hand tell your brother.
Twill make him mad : For he that was before
So scurg'd but only with bare ieaousie.

What would he be, if he should come to know it ?

Thar. He would be lesse mad : for your only way
To cleare his ieaousie, is to let him know it.
When knowledge comes suspicion vanishes.

The Sunne-beames breaking forth swallow the mists.
But as for you Sir Gallant : howfoeuer
Your banquet seemes sweet in your lycorous pallat,
It shall be sure to turne gall in your maw.
Thy hand a little Lycus here without.

Lyc. To what ?

Thar. No bootie ferue you sir Soldado
But my poore sifter ? Come, lend me thy shoulder,
Ile climbe the croffe ; it will be fuch a cooler
To my Venerean Gentlemans hot liuer,
When he shall finde one of his crucified bodies
Stolne downe, and he to be forthwith made fast
In place thereof, for the signe

Of the lost Sentinell. Come glorifie
Firme Confidence in great Inconstancie.
And this beleuee (for all prou'd knowledge sweares)
He that beleuees in errour, neuer errs. Exeunt.

The Tomb opens, Lyfander, Cynthia, Ero.

Lyf. Tis late ; I must away.

Cyn. Not yet sweet loue.

Lyf. Tempt not my stay, tis dangerous. The law is strict, and not to bee dispenst with. If any Sentinell be too late in's watch, or that by his neglect one of the crucified bodies should be stollen from the crosse, his life buyes it.

Cyn. A little stay will not endanger them.
The daies proclaimer has not yet giuen warning.
The Cock yet has not beate his third alarme.

Lyf. What? shall we euer dwell here amongst th' Antipodes? Shall I not enioy the honour of my fortune in publique? sit in Lyfanders chaire? Raigne in his wealth?

Cyn. Thou shalt, thou shalt; though my loue to thee Hath prou'd thus sodaine and for hast lept ouer The complement of wooing, Yet only for the worlds opinion.

Lyf. Marke that againe.

Cyn. I must maintaine a forme in parting hence.

Lyf. Out vpon't, Opinion the blind Goddeffe of Fooles, Foe to the vertuous; and only friend to underferuing persons, contemne it. Thou know'st thou hast done vertuously; thou hast strangely sorrow'd for thy husband, follow'd him to death; further thou could'st not, thou hast buried thy selfe quick. (O that 'twere true) spent more teares ouer his carcase, then would ferue a whole Citie of saddest widdowes in a plague time; besides sighings, and fwownings, not to be credited.

Cyn. True, but those complements might haue their time for fashion sake.

Lyf. Right, Opinion and Fashion. Sfoot what call you time? t'haft wept these foure whole daies.

Ero. Nay berladie almost fiae.

Lyf. Looke you there; nere vpon fiae whole daies.

Cyn. Well goe and see; Returne, weele goe home.

Lyf. Hell be thy home, Huge Monsters damne yee, and your whole creation, O yee Gods; in the height of her mourning in a Tomb, within sight of so many deaths! her husbands beleeu'd bodie in her eie. He dead, a few daies before; this mirrour of Nuptiall chastitie; this Votresse of widdow-constancie: to change her faith ; exchange kisses, embraces, with a stranger ; and but my shame with-stood, to giue the vtmost earnest of her loue, to an eight-pennie Sentinell : in effect, to prostitute her selfe vpon her husbands Coffin ! Lust, impietie, hell, womanhood it selfe, adde if you can one step to this.

Enter Captaine with two or three Souldiers.

Cap. O Ne of the crucified bodies taken downe !

Lyf. Enough. (flincks away.)

Cap. And the Sentinell not to be heard off ?

1. No sir.

Cap. Make out ; hast, search about for him ; does none of you know him ? nor his name ?

2. Hee's but a stranger here of some foure daies standing ; and we neuer set eie on him, but at setting the watch.

Cap. For whom serues he ? you looke well to your watch masters.

1. For Seigneur Stratio, and whence he is, tis ignorant to vs ; we are not correspondent for any, but our owne places.

Cap. Y'are eloquent. Abroad I say, let me haue him. Exeunt.

This negligence will by the Gouvernour be wholly cast on me, he hereby will suggest to the Viceroy, that the Citie guards are very carelesly attended. He loues mee not I know ; because of late I knew him but of meane condition ; but now by fortunes iniudicious hand, guided by bribing Courtiers, hee is rais'd to this high feate of honour. Nor blushes he, to see him selfe aduanc't ouer the heads of ten times higher worths ; but takes it all forfooth, to his merits ; and lookes (as all vpstarts doe) for most huge obseruance. Well, my mind must stoope to his high place, and learne within it selfe to feuer him from that, and to adore the Authoritie the Goddesse, how euer borne by an vnworthie beast ; and let the Beasts dull apprehension take the honour done to Isis, done to himselfe. I must fit fast, and bee fure to giue no hold to these fault-hunting enemies. Exit.

Tomb opens, and Lyfander within lies along, Cynthia and Ero.

Lyf. Pray thee disturbe me not ; put out the lights.

Ero. Faith Ile take a nap againe.

Cyn. Thou shalt not rest before I be resolu'd
What happy winde hath driuen thee back to harbour ?
Was it my loue ?

Lyf. No.

Cyn. Yet say so (sweet) that with the thought thereof
I may enjoy all that I wish in earth.

Lyf. I am fought for. A crucified body is stolne while I loiter'd here ; and I must die for't.

Cyn. Die ? All the Gods forbid ; O this affright torments me ten parts more then the sad losse of my deare husband.

Lyf. (Damnation) I beleue thee.

Cyn. Yet heare a womans wit,
Take counsaile of Necessitie and it
I haue a bodie here which once I lou'd
And honour'd aboue all ; but that time's past.

Lyf. It is, reuenge it heauen.

Cyn. That shall supply at so extrem a need the vacant Gibbet.

Lyf. Canero. What ? thy husbands bodie ?

Cyn. What hurt is't, being dead it faue the liuing ?

Lyf. O heart hold in, check thy rebellious motion.

Cyn. Vexe not thy selfe deare loue, nor vse delay.
Tempt not this danger, fet thy handes to worke.

Lyf. I can not doo't ; my heart will not permit
My handes to execute a fecond murther.

The truth is I am he that slew thy husband.

Cyn. The Gods forbid.

Lyf. It was this hand that bath'd my reeking sword
In his life bloud, while he cried out for mercie,
But I remorselesse, panch't him, cut his throat,
He with his last breath crying, Cynthia.

Cyn. O thou haft told me newes that cleaues my heart,

Would I had neuer feene thee, or heard fooner
This bloudie ftorie ; yet fee, note my truth
Yet I muft loue thee.

Lyf. Out vpon the Monfter.

Goe, tell the Gouvernour ; Let me be brought To die for that moft famous villanie ;
Not for this niching bafe transgression
Of tenant negligence.

Cyn. I can not doo't.

Loue muft falue any murther : Ile be iudge
Of thee deare loue, and thefe fhall be thy paines
In fteede of yron, to fuffer thefe foft chaines.

Lyf. O I am infinitely oblig'd.

Cyn. Arife I fay, thou fauer of my life.

Doe not with vaine-affrighting confcience
Betray a life, that is not thine but mine :

Rife and preferue it. Lyf. Ha? thy husbands bodie?
Hang't vp you fay, in fteede of that that's ftolne ;
Yet I his murtherer, is that your meaning ?

Cyn. It is my Loue. Lyf. Thy loue amazes me,
The point is yet how we fhall get it thither, Ha ? Tie a halter about's necke, and dragge him to the Gallowes : fhall I my loue ?

Cyn. So you may doe indeede,

Or if your owne ftrength will not ferue, wee'le aide
Our handes to yours, and beare him to the place.
For heauens loue come, the night goes off apace.

Lyf. All the infernall plagues dwell in thy foule ;
Ile fetch a crow of yron to breake the coffin.

Cyn. Doe loue, be speedie.

Lyf. As I wifh thy damnation. Shut the Tomb.

O I could teare my felfe into Atomes ; off with this Antick, the fhirt that Hercules wore for his wife, was not more banefull. Is't poffible there fhould be fuch a latitude in the Sphere of this fexe, to entertaine fuch an extention of mifchiefe, and not turne Deuill. What is a woman ? what are the worft when the beft are fo past naming? As men like this let them trie their wiues againe. Put women to the test; discover them;

 paint them, paint them ten parts more then they doe themselues, rather then looke on them as they are;
 Their wits are but painted that dislike their painting.
 Thou foolish thirster after idle secrets, And ill's abroad;
 looke home, and store & choke thee;
 There sticks an Achelons horne of all, Copie enough.
 As much as Alizon of streames receiues,
 Or loftie Ilea showes of shadie leaues.

Enter Tharsalio.

Who's that?

Thar. I wonder Lycus failes me. Nor can I heare whats become of him. Hee would not certaine ride to Dipolis to call my brother back, without my knowledge.

Lys. My brothers voice; what makes he here abouts so vntimely? Ile slip him.

Exiturus.

Thar. Who goes there? Lys. A friend.

Thar. Deare friend, lets know you. A friend least look't for but most welcome, and with many a long looke expected here.

What fir vnbooted? haue you beene long arriu'd?

Lys. Not long, some two houres before night.

Thar. Well brother, y'haue the most rare, admirable, vnmatchable wife, that euer suffer'd for the sinne of a husband. I cannot blame your confidence indeede now: 'tis built on such infallible ground; Lycus I thinke be gone to call you to the rescue of her life;
 why shee! O incomprehensible!

Lysan. I haue heard all related since my arriuall, weele meet to morrow.

Thar. What hast brother? But was it related with what vntollerable paines, I and my Mistris, her other friends, Matrones and Magistrates, labour'd her diuer-sion from that course?

Lys. Yes, yes. Thar. What streams of teares she powr'd out; what tresses of her haire she tore! and offer'd on your suppos'd herse! Lyf. I haue heard all.

Thar. But aboue all; how since that time, her eies neuer harbour'd winck of slumber, these fixe daies; no nor tasted the least dramme of any sustenance.

Lyf. How is that affurd? Thar. Not a scruple.

Lyf. Are you fure there came no Souldier to her nor brought her victualls? Thar. Souldier? what Souldier?

Lyf. Why some Souldier of the watch, that attends the executed bodies: well brother I am in hast; to morrow shall supply this nights defect of conference; Adieu. Exit. Lyf.

Thar. A Souldier? of the watch? bring her victualls? Goe to brother I haue you in the winde; hee's vn-harrest of all his traouailing accoutrements. I came directly from's house, no word of him there; he knowes the whole relation; hee's passionate: All collections speake he was the Souldier. What should be the riddle of this? that he is stolne hether into a Souldiers disguise? he should haue staid at Dipolis to receiue news from vs. Whether he suspected our relation; or had not patience to expect it, or whether that furious, frantique capricious Deuill ieaousie hath tost him hether on his hornes, I can not coniecture. But the case is cleare, hee's the Souldier. Sister, looke to your fame, your chastetie's vncouer'd. Are they here still? here beleue it both most wofully weeping ouer the bottle. He knocks.

Ero. Who's there. Thar. Tharsalio, open.

Ero. Alas Sir, tis no boote to vexe your sifter, and your selfe, she is desperate, & will not heare perswasion, she's very weak.

Thar. Here's a true-bred chamber-maid. Alas, I am forrie for't; I haue brought her meat and Candian wine to strengthen her.

Ero. O the very naming an't, will driue her into a fwowne; good Sir forbear.

Thar. Yet open sweet, that I may blesse mine eies with fight of her faire shrine ; and of thy sweetest selfe (her famous Pandresse) open I say. Sister ? you heare me well, paint not your Tomb without ; wee know too well what rotten carcafes are lodg'd within ; open I say. Ero opens, and hee sees her head layd on the coffin, &c. Sister I haue brought you tidings to wake you out of this sleeping mummerie.

Ero. Alas shee's faint, and speech is painefull to her.

Thar. Well said frubber, was there no Souldier here lately ?

Ero. A Souldier ? when ?

Thar. This night, last night, tother night ; and I know not how many nights and daies. Cyn. Whose there ?

Ero. Your brother Mistris, that asks if there were not a souldier here. Cyn. Here was no souldier.

Ero. Yes Mistris I thinke here was such a one though you tooke no heede of him. Thar. Goe to sifter ; did not you ioyne kisses, embraces, and plight indeede with him, the vtmost pledge of Nuptiall loue with him. Deni't, deni't ; but first heare me a short storie. The Souldier was your disguis'd husband, dispute it not. That you see yonder, is but a shadow, an emptie chest containing nothing but aire. Stand not to gaze at it, tis true. This was a proiect of his owne contriuing to put your loialtie & constant vowes to the test ; y'are warnd, be arm'd. Exit.

Ero. O fie a these perils. Cyn. O Ero! we are vndone.

Ero. Nay, you'd nere be warn'd ; I euer wisht you to withstand the push of that Souldiers pike, and not enter him too deep into your bosom, but to keep sacred your widowes vowes made to Lyfander. Cyn. Thou did'st, thou did'st.

Ero. Now you may see th'euent. Well our safetie lies in our speed : heele doe vs mischief, if we preuent not his comming. Lets to your Mothers : and there cal out your mightiest friends to guard you from his furie. Let them begin the quarrell with him for practifing this villanie on your sexe to intrappe your frailties.

Cyn. Nay I reſolue to fit out one brunt more ; to trie to what aime heele enforce his proiect : were he ſome other man, vnknowne to me, his violence might awe me ; but knowing him as I doe, I feare him not. Do thou but ſecond me, thy ſtrength and mine ſhall maſter his beſt force, if he ſhould proue outragious. Deſpaire they ſay makes cowardes turne couragious. Shut vp the Tomb. Shut the Tomb.

Enter one of the Souldiers ſent out before to ſeek the Sentinell.

1. All paines are loſt in hunting out this Souldier ; his fear (adding wings to his heeles) out-goes vs as farre as the freſh Hare the tir'd hounds. Who goes there ?

Ent. 2 ſouldier another way

2. A friend. 1. O, your ſucceſſe and mine touching this Sentinell, tells, I ſuppoſe, one tale ; hee's farre enough I vndertake by this time. 2. I blame him not : the law's feure (though iuſt and can not be diſpenc'd.)

1. Why ſhould the lawes of Paphos, with more rigour, then other Citie lawes purſue offenders ? that not appeas'd with their liues forfait, exact a iuſtice of them after death ? And if a Souldier in his watch forſooth loſe one of the dead bodies, he muſt die for't: It ſeems the State needed no ſouldiers when that was made a law. 2. So we may chide the fire for burning vs ; or ſay the Bee's not good becauſe ſhe ſtings ; Tis not the body the law reſpects, but the ſouldiers neglect ; when the watch (the guard and ſafetie of the Citie) is left abandon'd to all hazards. But let him goe ; and tell me if your newes fort with mine, for Lycus ; apprehended they ſay, about Lysanders murder.

1. Tis true ; hee's at the Captaines lodge vnder guard, and tis my charge in the morning to vnclouſe the leaden coffin, and diſcouer the bodie ; The Captaine will affay an old concluſion often approv'd ; that at the murtherers fight the bloud reuiues againe, and boiles a fresh ; and euery wound has a condemning voice to crie out guiltie gainst the murtherer.

2. O world, if this be true ; his dearest friend, his bed companion, whom of all his friends he cull'd out for his bosome !

1. Tush man, in this topsie turuy world, friendship and bosom kindnes, are but made couers for mischief, meanes to compasse il. Near-allied trust, is but a bridge for trefon. The presumptions crie loud against him ; his answeres sound disiointed ; crosse-legd tripping vp one another. He names a Town whether he brought Lyfander murther'd by Mountainers, thats false, some of the dwellers haue been here, and all disclaim it. Besides, the wounds he bears in shew, are such as shrews closely giue their husbands, that neuer bleede, and finde to be counterfeit.

2. O that iade falshood is neuer found of all ; but halts of one legge still. Truth pace is all vpright : found euery where.

And like a die, sets euer on a square.

And how is Lycus his bearing in this condition ?

1. Faith (as the manner of such desperate offenders is till it come to the point) carelesse, & confident, laughing at all that seeme to pittie him. But leaue it to th'euent. Night fellow Souldier, youle not meet me in the morning at the Tomb, and lend me your hand to the vnrigging of Lyfanders herse.

2. I care not if I do, to view heauens power in this vnbottomd feller.

Bloud, though it sleepe a time, yet neuer dies.

The Gods on murtherers fixe reuengefull eies.

Exeunt.

Lyfander solus with a crow of yron, and a halter which he laies downe and puts on his disguise againe.

Come my borrow'd disguise, let me once more
Be reconcild to thee, my trustiest friend ;
Thou that in truest shape hast let me see

That which my truer selfe hath hid from me,
 Helpe me to take reuenge on a disguife,
 Ten times more false and counterfait then thou.
 Thou, false in show, hast been most true to me ;
 The seeming true ; hath prou'd more false then her.
 Assist me to behold this act of lust,
 Note with a Scene of strange impietie.
 Her husbands murderd corse ! O more then horror !
 Ile not beleue't vntri'd ; If shee but lift
 A hand to act it ; by the fates her braines flie out,
 Since shee has madded me ; let her beware my hornes.
 For though by goring her, no hope be showne
 To cure my selfe, yet Ile not bleede alone. He knocks.
Ero. Who knocks ? Lyf. The souldier ; open.

She opens & he enters

See sweet, here are the engines that must doo't,
 Which with much feare of my discouerie
 I haue at last procur'd. •
 Shall we about this worke ? I feare the morne
 Will ouer-take's ; my stay hath been prolong'd
 With hunting obscure nookes for these employments,
 The night prepares away ; Come, art resolu'd.
Cyn. I, you shall finde me constant.
Lyf. I, so I haue, most prodigiouly constant,
 Here's a rare halter to hugge him with.
Ero. Better you and I ioyne our handes and beare him thether, you take his head.
Cyn. I, for that was alwaies heauier then's whole bodie besides
Lyf. You can tell best that loded it.
Ero. Ile be at the feet ; I am able to beare against you I warrant you.
Lyf. Hast thou prepar'd weake nature to digest
 A fight so much distastfull ; hast ser'd thy heart
 I bleede not at the bloudie spectacle ?
 Hast arm'd thy fearefull eies against th'affront
 Of such a direfull obiect ?
 Thy murder'd husband ghastly staring on thee ;

His wounds gaping to affright thee ; his bodie foild with

Gore ? fore heauen my heart thruggs at it.

Cyn. So does not mine,
Loue's reſolute ; and ſtands not to conſult
With pettie terrour ; but in full carrier
Runnes blind-fold through an Armie of miſdoubts,
And interpoſing feares ; perhaps Ile weepe
Or ſo, make a forc't face and laugh againe.

Lyf. O moſt valiant loue !
I was thinking with my ſelfe as I came ; how if this Brake to light ; his bodie knowne ;
(As many notes might make it) would it not fixe
Vpon thy fame, an vnremoued Brand
Of ſhame, and hate ; they that in former times
Ador'd thy vertue ; would they not abhorre
Thy lotheſt memorie ? Cyn. All this I know,
But yet my loue to thee
Swallowes all this ; or whatſoeuer doubts
Can come againſt it.

Shame's but a feather ballanc't with thy loue.

Lyf. Neither feare nor ſhame ? you are ſteele toth' Prooffe (but I ſhall yron you) : Come then lets to worke.

Alas poore Corps how many martyrdomes
Muſt thou endure ? mangl'd by me a villaine,
And now expos'd to foule ſhame of the Gibbet ?
Fore, pietie, there is ſomewhat in me ſtrives
Againſt the deede, my very arme relents
To ſtrike a ſtroke ſo inhumane,
To wound a hallow'd herſe ? ſuppoſe twere mine,
Would not my Ghoſt ſtart vp and flie ypon thee ?

Cyn. No, I'de mall it down againe with this.

She ſnatches vp the crow.

Lyf. How now ? He catches at her throat.

Cyn. Nay, then Ile affay my ſtrength ; a Souldier and afraid of a dead man ? A ſoft-r'ode milk-fop ? come Ile doot my ſelfe.

Lyf. And I looke on ? giue me the yron.

Cyn. No, Ile not lose the glorie ant. This hand, &c.

Lys. Pray thee sweet, let it not bee said the sauge act was thine ; deliuer me the engine.

Cyn. Content your selfe, tis in a fitter hand.

Lys. Wilt thou first ? art not thou the most.

Cyn. Ill-destin'd wife of a transform'd monster ;
Who to assure him selfe of what he knew,
Hath lost the shape of man. Lys. Ha ? crosse-capers ?

Cyn. Poore Souldiers case ; doe not we know you Sir ?

But I haue giuen thee what thou cam'st to seeke.
Goe Satyrc, runne affrighted with the noise
Of that harsh sounding horne thy selfe hast blowne,
Farewell ; I leaue thee there my Husbands Corps,
Make much of that. Exit. cum Er.

Lys. What haue I done ? O let me lie and grieue, and speake no more.

Captaine, Lycus with a guard of three or foure Souldiers.

Cap. BRring him away ; you must haue patience Sir : If you can say ought to quit you of those presumptions that lie heauie on you, you shall be heard. If not, tis not your braues, nor your affecting lookes can carrie it.

We must acquite our duties.

Lyc. Y'are Captaine ath' watch Sir.

Cap. You take me right.

Lyc. So were you best doe mee ; see your presumptions bee strong ; or be assured that shall proue a deare presumption, to brand me with the murder of my friend. But you haue beene suborn'd by some close villaine to defame me.

Cap. Twill not be so put off friend Lycus, I could wish your soule as free from taint of this foule fact ; as mine from any such vnworthy practise.

Lyc. Conduct mee to the Gouvernour him selfe ; to confront before him your shallow accusations.

Cap. First Sir, Ile beare you to Lysanders Tombe, to confront the murther'd body ; and see what euidence the wounds will yeeld against you.

Lyc. Y'are wise Captaine. But if the bodie should chance not to speake ; If the wounds should bee tongue-tied Captaine ; where's then your euidence Captaine ? will you not be laught at for an officious Captaine ?

Cap. Y'are gallant Sir.

Lyc. Your Captainship commands my seruice no further.

Cap. Well Sir, perhaps I may, if this conclusion take not ; weele trie what operation lies in torture, to pull confession from you.

Lyc. Say you so Captaine ? but hearke you Captaine, Might it not concurre with the qualitie of your office, ere this matter grow to the height of a more threatning danger ; to winck a little at a by-slip, or so ?

Cap. How's that ?

Lyc. To fend a man abroad vnder guard of one of your filliest shack-rags ; that he may beate the knaue, and run's way. I meane this on good termes Captaine ; Ile be thankfull.

Cap. Ile thinke ont hereafter. Meane time I haue other employment for you.

Lyc. Your place is worthily replenisht Captaine. My dutie Sir ; Hearke Captaine, there's a mutinie in your Armie ; Ile go raise the Gouvernour. Exiturus.

Cap. No hast Sir ; heele loone be here without your fummons.

Souldiers thrust vp Lysander from the Tomb.

1. Bring forth the Knight ath' Tomb ; haue we met with you Sir ? Lyc. Pray thee souldier vse thine office with better temper. 2. Come conuay him to the Lord Gouvernour.

First afore the Captaine Sir. Haue the heauens nought else to doe, but to stand still, and turne all their malignant Aspects vpon one man ?

2. Captaine here's the Sentinell wee fought for ; hee's some new prest Souldier, for none of vs know him.

Cap. Where found you him ?

1. My truant was mich't Sir into a blind corner of the Tomb.

Cap. Well said, guard him safe, but for the Corps.

1. For the Corps Sir? bare misprision, there's no bodie, nothing. A meere blandation, a deceptio visus. Vnlesse this fouldier for hunger haue eate vp Lyfanders bodie.

Lyc. Why, I could' haue told you this before Captaine ; The body was borne away peece-meale by deuout Ladies of Venus order, for the man died one of Venus Martyrs. And yet I heard since 'twas seene whole ath' other side the downes vpon a Colestafe betwixt two huntsmen, to feede their dogges withall. Which was a miracle Captaine.

Cap. Mischiefe in this act hath a deepe bottom ; and requires more time to found it. But you Sir, it seemes, are a Souldier of the newest stamp. Know you what tis to forsake your stand ? There's one of the bodies in your charge stolne away ; how answere you that ? See here comes the Gouvernour.

Enter a Guard bare after the Gouvernour : Tharsalio, Argus, Clinias, before Eudora, Cynthia, Laodice, Sthenio, Ianthe, Ero, &c.

Guard. Stand aside there.

Cap. SRoome for a strange Gouvernour. The perfect draught of a most brainelesse, imperious vpstart. O desert ! where wert thou, when this wooden dagger was guilded ouer with the Title of Gouvernour ?

Guard. Peace Masters ; heare my Lord.

Thar. All wifedome be silent ; Now speakes Authoritie.

Gouer. I am come in person to discharge Iustice.

Thar. Of his office.

Gouer. The cause you shall know hereafter ; and it is this. A villaine, whose very sight I abhorre ; where is he ? Let mee see him.

Cap. Is't Lycus you meane my Lord ?

Gouer. Goe to firrha y'are too malipert ; I haue heard of your Sentinells escape ; looke too't.

Cap. My Lord, this is the Sentinell you speake of.

Gouer. How now Sir ? what time a day ist ?

Arg. I can not shew you precisely, ant please your Honour.

Gouer. What ? shall we haue replications ? Reioinders ?

Thar. Such a creature, Foole is, when hee bestrides the back of Authoritie.

Gouer. Sirrha, stand you forth. It is supposed thou hast committed a most inconuenient murther vpon the body of Lyfander.

Lyc. My good Lord, I haue not.

Gouer. Peace varlet ; dost chop with me ? I say it is imagined thou hast murther'd Lyfander. How it will be prou'd I know not. Thou shalt therefore presently bee had to execution, as iustice in such cafes requireth. Souldiers take him away : bring forth the Sentinell.

Lyb. Your Lordship will first let my defence be heard.

Gouer. Sirrha ; Ile no fending nor prouing. For my part I am fatisfied, it is so : thats enough for thee. I had euer a Sympathy in my minde against him. Let him be had away.

Thar. A most excellent apprehension. Hee's able yee see to iudge of a cause at first sight, and heare but two parties. Here's a second Solon.

Eud. Heare him my Lord ; presumptions oftentimes, (Though likely grounded) reach not to the truth. And Truth is oft abus'd by likelihood.

Let him be heard my Lord.

Gouer. Madam, content your selfe. I will doe iustice ; I will not heare him. Your late Lord, was my Honourable Predeceffour: But your Ladifhip muft pardon me. In matters of iuftice I am blinde.

Thar. Thats true.

Gouer. I know no perfons. If a Court fauourite write to mee in a cafe of iuftice: I will pocket his letter, and proceede. If a Suiter in a cafe of iuftice thrufts a bribe into my hand, I will pocket his bribe, and proceede. Therefore Madam, fet your heart at reft: I am feated in the Throne of iuftice; and I will doe iuftice; I will not heare him.

Eud. Not heare him my Lord?

Gouer. No my Ladie: and moreouer put you in mind, in whose prefence you ftand; if you Parrat to me long; goe to.

Thar. Nay the Vice muft fnap his Authoritie at all he meetes, how fhalt elfe be knowne what part he plaies?

Gouer. Your husband was a Noble Gentleman, but Alas hee came fhort, hee was no Statesman. Hee has left a foule Citie behinde him.

Thar. I, and I can tell you twill trouble his Lordfhip and all his Honorable affiftants of Scauingers to sweepe it cleane.

Gouer. It's full of vices, and great ones too.

Thar. And thou none of the meanest.

Gouer. But Ile turne all topfie turuie; and fet vp a new difcipline amongft you. Ile cut of all perift members.

Thar. Thats the Surgeons office.

Gouer. Caft out thefe rotten ftinking carcafes for infecting the whole Citie.

Arg. Rotten they may be, but their wenches vfe to pepper them; and their Surgeons to perboile them; and that preferues them from ftinking, ant please your Honour.

Gouer. Peace Sirrha, peace; and yet tis well faid too. A good pregnant fellow yfaith. But to proceede. I will fpew drunkenneffe out ath' Citie.

Thar. Into th' Countrie.

Gouer. Shifters shall cheate and sterue ; And no man shall doe good but where there is no neede. Braggarts shall liue at the head ; and the tumult that hant Tauernes. Affes shall beare good qualities, and wife men shall vse them. I will whip lecherie out ath' Citie, there shall be no more Cuckolds. They that heretofore were errand Cornutos, shall now bee honest shop-keepers, and iustice shall take place. I will hunt ielousie out of my Dominion.

Thar. Doe heare Brother ?

Gouer. It shall be the only note of loue to the husband, to loue the wife : And none shall be more kindly welcome to him then he that cuckolds him.

Thar. Beleeue it a wholsome reformation.

Gouer. Ile haue no more Beggars. Fooles shall haue wealth, and the learned shall liue by their wits. Ile haue no more Banckrouts. They that owe money shall pay it at their best leifure : And the rest shall make a vertue of imprisonment ; and their wiues shall helpe to pay their debts. Ile haue all yong widdowes spaded for marrying againe. For the old and wither'd, they shall be confiscate to vnthriftie Gallants, and decai'd Knights. If they bee poore they shall bee burnt to make sope ashes, or giuen to Surgeons Hall, to bee stamp't to salue for the French mesells. To conclude, I will Cart pride out ath' Towne.

Arg. Ant please your Honour Pride ant be nere so beggarly will looke for a Coch.

Gouer. Well said a mine Honour. A good significant fellow yfaith : What is he ? he talkes much ; does he follow your Ladiship ?

Arg. No ant please your Honour, I goe before her.

Gouer. A good vndertaking prence ; A well-promising forehead, your Gentleman Vsher Madam ?

Eud. Yours if you please my Lord.

Gouer. Borne ith' Citie ?

Arg. I ant please your Honour, but begot ith' Court.

Gouer. Treffellegg'd ?

Arg. I, ant please your Honour.

Gouer. The better, it beares a bredth ; makes roome
a both sides. Might I not see his pace? Argus

Arg. Yes ant please your Honour. stalkes.

Gouer. Tis well, tis very well. Giue me thy hand :
Madame I will accept this propertie at your hand, and wil weare it thredbare for your sake. Fall in there, firrha. And for the matter of Lycus Madam, I mu ft tell you, you are shallow : there's a State point in't ?
hearke you : The Viceroy has giuen him, and wee must vphold correspondence. Hee must walke ; fay one man goes wrongfully out ath' world, there are hundreds to one come wrongfully into th' world.

Eud. Your Lordship will giue me but a word in priuate.

Thar. Come brother ; we know you well : what meanes this habite ? why staid you not at Dipolis as you resolu'd, to take aduertisement for vs of your wiues bearing ?

Lyc. O brother, this iealous phrensie has borne mee headlong to ruine.

Tnar. Go to, be comforted ; vncafe your felfe ; and discharge your friend.

Gouer. Is that Lysander say you ? And is all his storie true ?

Berladie Madam this iealoufie will cost him deare : he vndertooke the person of a Souldier ; and as a Souldier must haue iustice. Madam, his Altitude in this case can not dispence. Lycus, this Souldier hath acquited you.

Thar. And that acquitall Ile for him requite ; the body lost, is by this time restor'd to his place.

Soul. It is my Lord.

Thar. These are State points, in which your Lordships time has not yet train'd your Lordship ; please your Lordship to grace a Nuptiall we haue now in hand.

Hylus and Laodice stand together.

Twixt this yong Ladie and this Gentleman.

Your Lordship there shall heare the ample storie.

And how the Affe wrapt in a Lyons skin
Fearefully rord ; but his large eares appeard
And made him laught at, that before was feard.

Gouer. Ile goe with you. For my part, I am at a non plus.

Eudora whispers with Cynthia.

Thar. Come brother ; Thanke the Countesse : shee hath swet to make your peace. Sister giue me your hand.

So ; Brother let your lips compound the strife,
And thinke you haue the only constant Wife.

Exeunt.

FINIS.

THE MEMORABLE MASKE

of the two Honorable Houfes or Inns of Court; the Middle Temple, and Lyncolns Inne.

As it was performd before the King, at White-Hall on Shroue Munday at night ;
being the 15. of February. 1613.

At the Princely celebration of the moft Royall
Nuptialls of the Palsgraue, and his thrice gracious Princede Elizabeth. &c.

With a description of their whole show; in the manner of their march on horfe-backe to the Court from the Maifter of the Rolls his houfe: with all their right Noble conforts, and moft showfull attendants.

Inuented, and fashioned, with the ground, and fpeciall ftructure of the whole worke,

By our Kingdomes moft Artfull and Ingenious Architect, INNIGO IONES.

Supplied, Aplied, Digested, and written,
By GEO: CHAPMAN.

AT LONDON,

Printed by G. Eld, for George Norton and are to be fould at his fhoppe neere Temple-bar.

TO THE MOST NOble, and constant Combiner of Honor, and Vertue, Sir EDWARD PHILIPS, Knight, M^r. of the Rolls.

His Noble and Magnificent performance, renewing the ancient spirit, and Honor of the Innes of Court; being especially furthered and followed by your most laborious and honored endeuors, (for his Maiesties seruice; and honour of the all-grace-deseruing Nuptialls, of the thrice gracious Princeesse Elizabeth, his Highness daughter) deserues especially to be in this sort consecrate, to your worthy memory and honor. Honor hauing neuer her faire hand more freely and nobly giuen to Riches (being a fit particle of this Inuention) then by yours, at this Nuptiall solemnity. To which assisted, and memorable ceremony; the ioin'd hand and industry, of the worthely honour'd Knight, Sir H. Hubberd, his Maiesties Atturny generall, deseruing, in good part a ioint memory with yours, I haue submitted it freely to his noble acceptance. The poore paines I added to this Royall seruice, being wholly chosē, and commanded by your most constant, and free

The Epistle Dedicatorie.

fauour; I hope will now appeare nothing neglectiue of their expected duties. Hearty wil, and care enough, I am assured was employ'd in me; and the onely ingenuous will, being first and principall step to vertue; I beseech you let it stand for the performing vertue it selfe. In which addition of your euer-honour'd fauours, you shall euer binde all my future seruice to your most wished Com-mandement.

God send you long health, and your Vertues will endue you with honor enough,

By your free merits euer vow'd honorer,

and most vnfainedly affectioned,

GEO. CHAPMAN.

THE MASKE OF THE

Gentlemen of the two combin'd houses,

or Inns of Court, the Middle-Temple,

and Lincolns Inne.

AT the house of the most worthely honour'd preferrer and gracer of all honorable Actions, and vertues, (fir Edward Philips Knight, Master of the Rolls) al
the Performers and their Afsistents made their Rendes vous, prepar'd to their performance, and thus fet forth.

Fiftie Gentlemen, richly attirde, and as gallantly mounted, with Foot-men perticularly attending, made the noble vant-guarde of these Nuptiall forces. Next (a fit distance obseru'd betweene them) marcht a mock-Maske of Baboons, attir'd like fantasticall Trauailers, in Neapolitane futes, and great ruffes, all horst with Asses; and dwarfe Palfries, with yellow foot-cloathes, and casting Cockle-demois about, in courtesie, by way of lardges; Torches boarn on either hand of them;

lighting their state as ridiculously, as the rest Nobly. After them were sortd two Carrs Triumphall, adorn'd with great Maske heads, Festones, scroules, and antick leaues, euery part inricht with siluer and golde. These were through-varied with different inuention, and in them aduanc't, the choice Musitions of our Kingdome, fixe in each; attir'd like Virginean Priests, by whom the Sun is there ador'd; and therefore called the Phœbades. Their Robes were tuckt vp before; strange Hoods of feathers, and scallops about their neckes, and on their heads turbants, stucke with feuerall colour'd feathers, spotted with wings of Flies, of extraordinary bignesse; like those of their countrie: And about them march't two ranks of Torches. Then rode the chiefe Maskers, in Indian habits, all of a resemblance: the ground cloath of siluer, richly embroidered, with golden Sunns, and about euery Sunne, ran a traile of gold, imitating Indian worke: their bases of the same stufte and work, but betwixt euery pane of embroidery, went a row of white Estridge feathers, mingled with sprigs of golde plate; vnder their breasts, they woare bawdricks of golde, embroidered high with with purle, and about their neckes, Ruffes of feathers, spangled with pearle and siluer. On their heads high sprig'd-feathers, compast in Coronets, like the Virginian Princes they presented. Betwixt euery set of feathers, and about their browes, in the vnder-part of their Coronets, shin'd Sunnes of golde plate, sprinkled with pearle; from whence sprung rayes of the like plate, that mixing with the motion of the feathers, shew'd exceedingly delightfull, and gracious. Their legges were adorn'd, with close long white silke-stockings: curiously embroidered with golde to the Midde-legge.

And ouer these (being on horse backe) they drew greaues or buskins embroidered with gould, & entrelac't with rewes of fethers; Altogether estrangfull, and Indian like.

In their Hands (set in seueral postures as they rode) they brandisht cane darts of the finest gould. Their vizerds of oliue collour ; but pleasingly visag'd : their hayre, blacke and lardge, wauing downe to their shoulders.

Their Horſe, for rich ſhow, equalld the Maskers themſelues ; all their caparifons being enchac't with funnes of Gould and Ornamentall Iewells. To euery one of which, was tackt a Scarffing of Siluer ; that ran ſinuouſely in workes ouer the whole caparifon, euen to the daſeling of the admiring ſpectators.

Their heads, no leſſe gracefully and properly deckt with the like light ſkarffing that hung about their eares wantonly dangling.

Euery one of theſe horſe, had two Moores, attir'd like Indian ſlaues, that for ſtate ſided them ; with ſwelling wreaths of gould, and watſhed on their heads, which aroſe in all to the number of a hundred.

The Torch-bearers habits were likewiſe of the Indian garb, but more ſtrauagant then thoſe of the Maskers ; all ſhowfully garniſht with feueral-hewd fethers. The humble variety whereof, ſtucke off the more amplie, the Maskers high beauties, ſhining in the habits of themſelues ; and reflected in their kinde, a new and delightfully-varied radiance on the beholders.

All theſe ſuſtaind torches of Virgine wax, whoſe ſtaues were great canes al ouer gilded ; And theſe (as the reſt) had euery Man his Moore, attending his horſe.

The Maskers, riding ſingle ; had euery Masker, his Torch-bearer mounted before him.

The laſt Charriot, which was moſt of all adornd ; had his whole frame fill'd with moulded worke ; mixt all with paintings, and glittering ſcarffings of ſiluer ; ouer which was caſt a Canopie of golde, boarne vp with antick figures, and all compos'd a la Grotelca. Before this in the ſeate of it, as the Chariotere ; was aduanc't a ſtrange perſon, and as ſtrangely habited, half French, halfe Swizz ; his name Capriccio ; wearing on his head a paire of golden Bellowes, a guilt ſpurre in one hand, and with the other manning the reigns of the fowre Horses that drew it.

On a feate of the same Chariot, a little more eleuate, fate Eunomia, the Virgine Priest of the Goddesse Honor, together with Phemis, her Herald: The habite of her Priest, was a Robe of white filke, gathered about the necke; a pentacle of filuered stufte about her shoulders, hanging foldedly downe, both before and behind.

A vestall vaile on her head of Tiffany, strip't with filuer, hanging with a trayne, to the earth.

The Herral was attyr'd [in an Antique Curace of filuer stufte, with labells at the wings and baffes; a short gowne of gould stufte; with wide sleeues, cut in panes: A wreath of gould on his head, and a Rod of gould in his hand.

Highest of all in the most eminent feate of the Tryumphall fat, side to side, the cœlestiall Goddesse, Honour; and the earthy Deity, Plutus; or Riches. His attire; a short robe of gould, frindg'd; his wide sleeues turn'd vp, and out-showd his naked armes: his Head and Beard sprinckl'd with showrs of gould: his Buskins, clinckant, as his other attire. The Ornaments of Honor were these: a rich full robe of blew filke girt about her, a mantle of filuer worne ouerthwart, full gathered, and descending in folds behind: a vaile of net lawne, embrodered with Oos and Spangl'd; her tresses in tucks, braided with filuer: The hinder part shadowing in waues her shoulders.

These, thus perticularly, and with proprietie adorn'd, were 'strongly attended with a full Guard of two hundred Halbardiers: two Marshals (being choice Gentlemen, of either house) Commaunder-like attir'd, to and fro coursing, to keepe all in their orders.

A showe at all parts so nouell, conceitfull and glorious, as hath not in this land, (to the proper vse and obiect it had porpos'd) beene euer before beheld. Nor did those honorable Inns of Court, at any time in that kinde, such acceptable seruice to the sacred Maiesty of this kingdome, nor were return'd by many degrees, with so thrice gracious, and royall entertainment and honor. But, (as aboue sayd) all these so marching to the Court at White Hall, the King, Bride, & Bridegroom, with all the Lords of the most honord priuy Councel, and our chief Nobility, stood in the Gallery before the Tilt-yard, to behold their arriuall; who, for the more full satisfaction of his Maiesties view, made one turn about the yeard, and dismounted: being then honorably attended through the Gallery to a Chamber appointed, where they were to make ready for their performance in the Hall, &c.

The King beeing come forth, the Maskers ascended vnseene to their scene. Then for the works.

First there appear'd at the lower end of the Hall, an Artificiall Rock, whose top was neere as high as the hall it selfe. This Rock, was in the vndermost part craggy, and full of hollow places, in whose concaues were contriv'd, two winding paire of staires, by whose greeces the Persons aboue might make their descents, and all the way be seene: all this Rocke grew by degrees vp into a gold-colour; and was run quite through, with veines of golde: On the one side whereof, eminently raised on a faire hill, was erected a siluer Temple of an octangle figure, whose Pillars were of a compos'd order, and bore vp an Architraue, Freese, and Cornish: Ouer which stood a continued Plinthe; whereon were aduanc't Statues of siluer: Aboue this, was placed a bastarde Order of Architecture, wherein were keru'd Compartements: In one of which was written in great golde Capitalls, HONORIS FANVM. Aboue all, was a Coupolo, or Type, which seem'd to be scal'd with siluer Plates.

For finishing, of all, vpon a Pedistall, was fixt a round stone of siluer, from which grew a paire of golden wings, both faign'd to bee Fortunes: the the round stone (when her feet trod it) euer affirm'd to be rouling ; figuring her inconstancy : the golden wings, denoting those nimble Powres, that pompouſly beare her about the world ; On that Temple (erected to her daughter, Honor ; and figuring this kingdome) put off by her, and fixt, for affured ſigne ſhe would neuer forſake it.

About this Temple, hung Feſtones wreath'd with ſiluer from one Pillars head to another. Beſides, the Freeſe was enricht with keruings, all ſhewing Greatnes and Magnificence.

On the other ſide of the Rocke, grewe a Groue, in whoſe vtmoſt part appear'd a vaſt, wither'd, and hollow Tree, being the bare receptacle of the Baboonerie.

Theſe following ſhould in duty haue had their proper places, after euery fitted ſpeech of the Actors ; but being preuented by the vnexpected haſte of the Printer, which he neuer let me know, and neuer ſending me a prooffe, till he had paſt thoſe ſpeeches ; I had no reaſon to imagine hee could haue been ſo forward. His fault is therefore to be ſupplied by the obſeruation, and reference of the Reader, who will eaſily perceiue, where they were to bee inferted.

After the ſpeech of Plutus (who as you may ſee after, firſt entred) the middle part of the Rocke began to moue, and being come ſome fiue paces vp towards the King, it ſplit in peeces with a great crack ; and out brake Capriccio, as before deſcribed. The peeces of the Rocke vaniſht, and he ſpake as in his place.

At the ſinging of the firſt Song, full, which was fung by the Virginian Priests ; called the Phœbades, to fixe Lutes (being uſed as an Orphean vertue, for the ſtate of the Mines opening) : the vpper part of the Rock was ſodainly turn'd to a Cloude, diſcouering a rich and refulgent Mine of golde ; in which the twelue Maskers were triumphantly feated : their Torch-bearers attending before them. All the lights being ſo ordred, that though none were ſeen, yet had their luſtre ſuch vertue, that by it, the least spangle or spark of the Maskers rich habites, might with ease and cleerenesse be discerned as far off as the feate.

Ouer this golden Mine, in an Euening sky, the ruddy Sunne was seen ready to be fet ; and behind the tops of certaine white Cliffes, by degrees descended, casting vp a banke of Cloudes ; in which, a while hee was hidden : but then gloriously shining, gaue that vsually-obseru'd good Omen, of succeeding faire weather.

Before he was fully fet, the Phoebades (shewing the custome of the Indians to adore the Sunne setting) began their obseruance with the Song, to whose place, wee must referre you for the manner and words ; All the time they were singing ; the Torch-bearers holding vp their Torches to the Sun ; to whome the Priests themselues, and the rest, did as they sung obeifance : Which was answred by other Musique and voices, at at the commandement of Honor, with al' obseruances vf'd to the King &c. As in the following places.

TO answer certaine insolent obiections made against the length of my speeches, and narrations; being (for the probability of all accidents, rising from the inuention of this Maske; and their aplication, to the persons, and places: for whome, and by whome it was presented) not conuenient, but necessary; I am enforçt to affirme this; That: as there is no Poem nor Oration so generall; but hath his one perticular proposition; Nor no riuer so extrauagantly ample, but hath his neuer-so-narrow fountaine, worthy to be namd; so all these courtly, and honoring inuentions (hauing Poesie, and Oration in them, and a fountaine, to be exprest, from whence their Riuers flow) should expressiuely-arise; out of the places, and persons for; and by whome they are presented; without which limits, they are luxurious, and paine. But what rules soeuer are set downe, to any Art, or Act (though, without their obseruation; No Art, nor Act, is true, and worthy) yet they are nothing the more followd; or those few that follow them credited. Euery vulgarly-esteemd vpart; dares breake the dreadfull dignity of antient and autenticall Poesie: and presume Luciferously, to proclame in place thereof, repugnant precepts of their owne spaune. Truth, and Worth, haue no faces, to enamour the Lycentious, but vaine-glory, and humor. The same body: the same beauty, a thousand men seeing: Onely the man whose bloud is fitted, hath that which hee calls his soule, enamour'd. And this, out of infallible cause; for, men understand not these of Mænander — est morbus oportunitas

Animæ, quod ictus, vulnus accipit graue.

But the cause of all Mens being enamour'd with Truth. And of her slight respect, in others; is the diuine Freedom; one touching with his apprehensiuë finger, the other, passing. The Hill of the Muses (which all men must clime in the regular way, to Truth) is jaid ofould, to be forcked. And the two points of it, parting at the Top; are Infania, and, diuinus furor. Infania, is that which euery Ranck-brainde writer; and iudge of Poeticall writing, is rapt withal; when hee presumes either to write or censure the height of Poesie; and that transports him with humor, vaine-glory and pride, most prophane and sacrilegious: when diuinus furor; makes gentle, and noble, the neuer so truly-inspired writer —

Emollit mores nec finit esse feros.

And the mild beames of the most holy inflamer; easely, and sweetly enter, with all vnderstanding sharpenesse, the soft, and sincerely humane; but with no Time; No Study; No meanes vnder heauen: any arrogant, all-occupation deuourer (that will Chandler-like set vp with all wares; selling, Poesies Nectar and Ambrosia; as wel as musterd, and vineagar.) The chast and restrain'd beames of humble truth will euer enter; but onely grase and glaunce at them: and the further fly them.

The aplicable argument of the Maske.

Honor, is so much respected, and ador'd; that shee hath a Temple erected to her, like a Goddesse; a Virgine Priest consecrated to her (which is Eunomia, or Lawe; since none should dare accesse to Honor, but by Vertue; of which Lawe being the rule, must needs be a chiefe) and a Herralld (call'd Phemis, or Fame) to proclame her institutions, and commandements. To amplefie yet more the diuine graces of this Goddesse; Plutus, (or Riches) being by Aristophanes, Lucian, &c. presented naturally blind, deformd, and dull witted; is here by his loue of Honor, made see, made sightly, made ingenious; made liberall: And all this conuerted and consecrate to the most worthy celebration of these sacred Nuptialls; all issuing (to conclude the necessary application) from an honorable Temple. &c.

Non est certa fides, quam non Iniuria versat.

————— Fallit portus & ipse fidem.

THE NAMES OF THE SPEAKERS.

Honour, a Goddeffe.

Plutus, (or Riches) a God.

Eunomia (or law) Priest of honor.

Phemis, Honors Herral.

Capriccio, a man of wit, &c.

THE PRESENTMENT.

Plutus appear'd furuaying the worke with this speech.

PLVTVS.

Rockes? Nothing but Rockes in these masking deuices? Is Inuention so poore shee must needes euer dwell amongst Rocks? But it may worthily haue chaunc'd (being so often presented) that their vaine Custome is now become the necessarie hand of heauen, transforming into Rocks, some stonie hearted Ladies, courted in former masks; for whose loues, some of their repulst seruants haue perisht: or perhaps some of my flintie-hearted Vsurers haue beene heere metamorphosed; betwixt whom and Ladies, there is resemblance enough: Ladies vsing to take interest, besides their principall, as much as Vsurers. See, it is so; and now is the time of restoring them to their naturall shapes: It moues, opens, excellent! This metamorphosis I intend to ouer-heare.

A ROCK, MOOVING

and breaking with a cracke about

Capriccio, he enters with a payre of Bellows on his head, a spur in one hand, and a peece of golde Ore in the other, &c.

He speakes, vt sequitur.

CAPRICCIO.

HOw hard this world is to a man of wit? hee must eate through maine Rockes for his food, or fast; a restles and tormenting stone, his wit is to him: the very stone of Sisyphus in hell; nay, the Philosophers stone, makes not a man more wretched: A man must be a second Proteus, and turne himselfe into all shapes (like Vlises) to winde through the straites of this pinching vale of miserie; I haue turn'd my selfe into a Tailor, a Man, a Gentleman, a Nobleman, a Worthy man; but had neuer the witte to turne my selfe into an Alder-man. There are manie shapes to perish in, but one to liue in, and tha's an Aldermans: Tis not for a man of wit to take any rich Figure vpon him: your bould, proud, ignorant, that's braue and clinkant, that findes crownes put into his shooes euery morning by the Fayries and will neuer tell; whose Wit is humor, whose Iudgement is fashion, whose Pride is emptinesse, Birth his full man, that is in all things something, in Sum totall, nothing. He shall liue in the land of Spruce, milke and hony flowing into his mouth sleeping.

PLVTVS.

This is no transformation, but an intrusion into my golden mines : I will heare him further.

CAPRIC.

This breach of Rockes I haue made, in needy purfuite of the blind Deity, Riches : who is myraculoufly ariued here. For (acording to our rare men of wit) heauen standing, and earth mouing, her motion (being circular) hath brought one of the most remote parts of the world, to touch at this all-exceeding Iland : which a man of wit would imagine must needs moue circularly with the rest of the world, and so euer maintaine an equal distance. But, Poets (our chiefe men of wit) answere that point directly ; most ingeniously affirming : That this Ile is (for the excellency of it) diuided from the world (diuifus ab orbe Britannus) and that though the whole World besides moues ; yet this Ile stands fixt on her owne feete, and defies the Worlds mutability, which this rare accident of the arriual of Riches, in one of his furthest-off-scituate dominions, most demonstratiuely proues.

PLVTVS.

This is a man of wit indeede, and knows of all our arriuals.

CAPRIC.

With this dull Deity Riches, a rich Iland lying in the South-sea, called Pæana, (of the Pæans (or songs) sung to the Sun, whom they there adore (being for strength and riches, called the Nauill of that South-sea) is by earths round motion mou'd neere this Brittan Shore. In which Island (beeing yet in command of the Virginian continent.) A troupe of the noblest Virginians inhabiting; attended hether the God of Riches, all triumphantly shyning in a Mine of Gould. For hearing of the most royal solemnity, of these sacred Nuptialls; they crost the Ocean in their honor, and are here arriu'd. A poore snatch at some of the Goulden Ore, that the feete of riches haue turnd vp as he trod here, my poore hand hath purchast; and hope the Remainder of a greater worke, wilbe shortly extant.

PLVT.

You Sir, that are miching about my Goulden Mines here.

CAPR.

What, can you see Sir? you haue heretofore beene presented blinde: like your Mother Fortune; and your Brother Loue.

PLVT.

But now Sir, you see I see.

CAPR.

By what good meanes, I beseech you Sir.

PLVT.

That meanes, I may vouchsafe you hereafter; meane space, what are you?

CAPR.

I am Sir a kinde of Man; A Man of wit: with whom your worship has nothing to do I thinke.

PLVT.

No Sir, nor will haue any thing to doe with him: A Man of wit? whats that? A Begger.

CAPR.

And yet no Diuell Sir.

PLV.

As I am, you meane.

CAPR.

Indeede fir your Kingdome is vnder the Earth.

PLVT.

That's true, for Riches is the Atlas that holdes it vp,
it would sinke else.

CAPR.

Tis rather a wonder, it finks not with you Sir, y'are so sinfully, and damnably heauy.

PLVT.

Sinfull? and damnable? what a Puritane? These Bellowes you weare on your head, shew with what matter your braine is pufft vp Sir: A Religion-forged
I see you are, and perfume of inspiration from these Bellowes; with which yee study to blow vp the fetled gouernments of kingdomes.

CAPR.

Your worship knockes at a wrong dore Sir, I dwell farre from the person you speak of.

PLVT.

What may you be then, beeing a man of wit? a Buffon,
a Iester. Before I would take vpon mee the title of a man of wit, and bee baffl'd by euery man of wisedome for a Buffon; I would turne Banckrout, or set vp a Tobacco shop, change clokes with an Alchemist, or ferue an Vfurder, bee a watering post for euery Groome;
stand the push of euery rascall wit; enter lifts of iests

with trencher-fooles, and bee foold downe by them, or (which is worfe) put them downe in fooling : are these the qualities a man of wit should run proud of ?

CAPR.

Your worship I see has obtaind wit, with fight, which I hope yet my poor wit wil well be able to answer; for touching my iesting, I haue heard of some Courtiers, that haue run themselues out of their states with Iusting; and why may not I then raise my selfe in the State with iesting? An honest Shoomaker, (in in a liberall Kings time) was knighted for making a cleane boote, and is it imposible, that I for breaking a cleane Iest, should bee aduanc't in Court, or Counsaile? or at least, serued out for an Ambassador to a dull Climate? Iests, and Merriments are but wild weedes in a rank foile, which being well manured, yield the wholesom crop of wisdome and discretion at time ath' yeare.

PLV.

Nay, nay, I commend thy iudgement for cutting thy cote so iust to the bredth of thy shoulders; he that cannot be a courser in the field, let him learne to play the Iack-an-Apes in the Chamber, hee that cannot perfonate the wise-man well amongst wifards, let him learne to play the foole well amongst dizzards.

CAPR.

Tis pasing miraculous, that your dul and blind worship should so sodainly turne both fightfull, and witfull.

PLVT.

The Riddle of that myracle, I may chance dissolue to you in sequell; meane time, what name sustain'ft thou? and what toies are these thou bear'ft so phantastically about thee ?

CAPR.

These, toies Sir, are the Ensignes that discouer my name and qualitie : my name being Capriccio, and I weare these Bellowes on my head, to shew I can puffe vp with glory all those that affect mee : and besides, beare this spurre, to shew I can spur-gall, euen the best that contemne me.

PLVT.

A dangerous fellowe, But what makest thou (poore man of wit) at these pompous Nuptials ;

CAPRIC.

Sir, I come hether with a charge ; To doe these Nuptial's, I hope, very acceptable seruice ; And my charge is ; A company of accomplisht Trauailers ; that are excellent at Antemaskes ; and will tender a tast of thair quallity, if your worship please.

PLVT.

Excellent well pleas'd ; of what vertue are they besides.

CAPR.

Passing graue Sir, yet exceeding acute : witty, yet not ridiculous ; neuer laugh at their owne iests : laborious yet not base, hauing cut out the skirts of the whole world, in amorous quest of your gould and siluer.

PLVT.

They shal haue enough ; cal them : I beseech thee call them : how farre hence abide they ?

CAPR.

Sir (being by another eminent qualitie the admired souldiers of the world) in contempt of softnes, and

delicacie, they lie on the naturally hard boords of that naked tree ; and will your worship assure them rewards fit for persons of their freight.

PLVT.

Dost thou doubt my reward beeing pleased ?

CAPR.

I know Sir, a man may fooner win your reward, for pleasing you, thē deseruing you. But you great wise persons, haue a fetch of State ; to employ with countenance, and encouragement, but reward with austerity and disgrace, saue your purses, and lose your honours.

PLVT.

To assure thee of reward, I will now satisfie thee touching the miraculous cause, both of my fight and wit, and which consequently moues mee to humanity, and bounty ; And all this, onely this ; my late being in loue, with the louely Goddesse Honor.

CAPRIC.

If your Worshipp loue Honor, indeed, Sir you must needes be bountifull. But where is the rare Goddesse you speake of to be seene ?

PLVTVS.

In that Rich Temple, where Fortune fixt those her goulden wings, thou seest ; And that rowling stone she vs'd to tread vpon, for signe shee would neuer forsake this Kingdome ; There is ador'd, the worthy Goddesse Honor. The swetnesse of whose voice, when I first heard her perswasions, both to my self, and the Virginian Princes arriu'd here, to doe honor and homage, to these heauenly Nuptialls, so most powerfully enamour'd mee, that the fire of my loue flew vp to the fight of mine eyes : that haue lighted within mee a whole firmament of Bounty, which may securely assure the, thy reward is certaine : & therefore call thy accomplisht company to their Autemaske.

CAPRIC.

See Sir, The time, set for their apperance, being expired ; they appeere to their seruice of them-felues.

Enter the Baboones after whose dance, being Anticke, and delightful, they returned to their Tree, when Plu-tus spake to Capriccius.

PLVTVS.

Gramercy now Capriccio, take thy men of complement, and trauaile with them to other marriages. My Riches to thy Wit ; they will get something some-where.

CAPR.

Whats this ?

PLVT.

A straine of Wit beyond a Man of Wit. I haue imployd you, and the grace of that, is reward enough ; hence ; packe, with your complemental Fardle : The fight of an attendant for reward, is abominable in the eyes of a turne-feru'd Politician, and I feare, will strike me blinde againe. I can not abide these bellows of thy head, they and thy men of wit haue melted my Mines with them, and consum'd me, yet take thy life and be gone. Neptune let thy predeceffor, Vlyffes, liue after all his flaine companions, but to make him die more miserably liuing : gaue him vp to fhip-wracks, enchantments ; men of wit are but enchanted, there is no fuch thing as wit in this world. So, take a tree, inure thy fouldiers to hardnes, tis honorable, though not clinkant.

CAPR.

Can this be poffible ?

PLVT.

Alas ! poore man of wit, how want of reward daunts thy vertue ? But becaufe I muft fend none away difcontented, from thefe all-pleafing Nuptials ; take this wedge of golde, and wedge thy felfe into the world with it, renouncing that loofe wit of thine, t'will fpoile thy complexion.

CAPR.

Honor, and all Argus eyes, to Earths all-commaunding Riches. Pluto etiam cedit Iupiter.

Exit Capr.

After this lowe Inducttion, by thefe fucceeding degrees, the chiefe Maskers were aduanc't to their difcouerie

PLVTVS.

Plutus, calls to Euno-
mia. These humble obiects can no high eyes drawe, Eunomia ? (or the facred power of Lawe)
Daughter of Ioue, and Goddefle Honors Priest ;
Appeare to Plutus, and his loue affift.

EVN.

Eunomia
in the Temple gates. What would the god of Riches ?

PLVT.

Ioine with Honor :

In purpos'd grace of these great Nuptials ;
And since to Honor none should dare acceffe,
But helpt by vertues hand (thy selfe, chaste Loue Being Vertues Rule, and her directfull light)
Help me to th' honor of her speech and fight.

EVN.

Thy will shal straight be honour'd ; all that seek Accesse to Honor, by cleer virtues beame,
Her grace preents their pains, and comes to them.

Loud Mufick, and Honor appears, descending with her Herrald Phemis, and Eunomia (her Priest) before her. The Musique ceasing Plutus spake.

PLVT.

Crowne of all merit, Goddeffs, and my Loue ;
Tis now high time, that th' end for which we come
Should be endeuor'd in our vtmost right,
Done to the sweetnes of this Nuptiall night.

HON.

Plutus? The Princes of the Virgine land,
Whom I made crosse Britan Ocean
To this most famed Ile, of all the world,
To do due homage to the sacred Nuptials
Of Loue and Beauty, celebrated here,
By this Howre of the holy Euen I know,
Are ready to performe the rites they owe
To setting Phæbus ; which (for greater State
To their apparence) their first act aduances.
And with songs Vsers their succeeding dances,
Herrald ! giue summons to the Virgine Knights
No longer to delay their purpos'd Rites.

HER.

Knights of the Virgine Land, whom bewties lights
 Would glorifie with their inflaming fights ;
 Keep now obscur'd no more your faire intent,
 To adde your Beames to this nights ornament,
 The golden-winged Howre strikes now a Plaine,
 And calls out all the pompe ye entertaine ;
 The Princely Bride-groome, and the Brides bright
 eyes,
 Sparkle with grace to your discoueries.

At these words, the Phœbades (or Priests of the Sunne appear'd first with fixe Lutes, and fixe voices, and fung to the opening of the Mine and Maskers discouery, this ful Song.

The first Song.

O Pe Earth thy wombe of golde
Shew Heauen thy cope of starres.
All glad Aspects unfolde,
Shine out, and cleere our Cares :
Kisse Heauen and Earth, and so combine
In all mixt ioy our Nuptiall Twine.

This Song ended, a Mount opened, and spread like a Skie, in which appear'd a Sunne setting ; beneath which, fate the twelue Maskers, in a Mine of golde ; twelue Torch-bearers holding their torches before them, after which Honor, &c.

HON.

Se now the setting Sun, casts vp his bank,
 And shoves his bright head at his Seas repaire,
 For signe that all daies future shall be faire.

PLVT.

May he that rules al nightes & dayes confirme it.

HON.

Behold the Sunnes faire Preists the Phæbades,
Their euening seruice in an Hymne addresse
To Phæbus setting ; which we now shall heare,
And see the formes of their deuotions there.

The Phæbades sing the first Stance of the second song, vt sequitur.

One alone 1.

*Descend (faire Sun) and sweetly rest,
In Tethis Cristal armes, thy toyle,
Fall burning on her Marble brest,
And make with Loue her billowes boyle.*

Another alone. 2.

*Blow blow, sweet windes, O blow away,
Al vapours from the fined ayre :
That to his golden head no Ray,
May languish with the least empaire.*

CHO.

*Dance Tethis, and thy loues red beames,
Embrace with Ioy he now discends :
Burnes burnes with loue to drinke thy streames,
and on him endles youth attends.*

After this Stance, Honor &c.

HON.

This superstitious Hymne, sung to the Sunne,
Let vs encounter with fit duties done
To our cleere Phœbus ; whose true piety,
Enioyes from heauen an earthly deity.

Other Musique, and voyces; and this second Stance was fung, directing their obseruance to the King.

One alone 1.

*Rise, rise O Phæbus, euer rise, descend not to th' inconstant streame,
 But grace with endles light, our skyes,
 to thee that Sun is but a beame.*

Another 2.

*Dance Ladies in our Sunnes bright rayes,
 in which the Bride and Bridegroome shine:
 Cleere sable night with your eyes dayes,
 and set firme lights on Hymens shrine.*

CHO.

*O may our Sun not set before,
 he sees his endles feed arise:
 And deck his triple crowned shore,
 with springs of humane Deities.*

This ended the Phæbades fung the third Stance.

1. *Set Set (great Sun) our rising loue shall euer celebrate thy grace:
 Whom entring the high court of Ioue,
 each God greetes rising from his place.*
2. *When thou thy siluer bow dost bend,
 all start aside and dread thy draughtes:
 How can we thee enough commend,
 commanding all worlds with thy shafts?*

CHO.

*Blest was thy mother bearing thee,
And Phœbe that delights in darts :
Thou artful Songes dost set ; and shee winds horns, lowes hounds, & high pallmd harts.*

After this Honor.

HON.

Againe our Musique and conclude this Song,
To him, to whom all Phœbus beames belong :

*The other voyces sung to other Musike the
third stance.*

1 *Rise stil (cleere Sun) and neuer set,
but be to Earth her only light :
All other Kings in thy beames met,
are cloudes and darke effects of night.*

2.

*As when the Rosie Morn doth rise,
Like Mists, all giue thy wisdome waie ;
A learned King, is, as in skies,
To poore dimme stars, the flaming day,*

CHO.

*Blest was thy Mother, bearing Thee,
Thee only Relick of her Race,
Made by thy vertues beames a Tree,
Whose armes shall all the Earth embrace.*

This done Eunomia spake to the Maskers set yet aboute.

EVN.

Virginian Princes, ye must now renounce
Your superstitious worship of these Sunnes,

Subiect to cloudy darknings and descents,
 And of your fit deuotions, turne the euent
 To this our Britan Phœbus, whose bright skie
 (Enlightned with a Christian Piety)
 Is neuer subiect to black Errors night,
 And hath already offer'd heauens true light,
 To your darke Region ; which acknowledge now ;
 Descend, and to him all your homage vow.

With this the Torch-bearers descended, and performed another Antemaske, dancing with Torches lighted at both ends; which done, the Maskers descended, and fell into their dances, two of which being past, and others with the Ladies.

Honor spake.

The Bride and Bridegroom were figured in Loue and Beauty.
 Mufique! your voyces, now tune sweet and
 hie,
 And singe the Nuptiall Hymn of Love,
 and Beauty.

Twynns, as of one age, so to one desire Twynns of which Hippocrates speakes.
 May both their bloods giue, an vnparted fire.
 And as those twynns that Fame giues all her prise,

Combind their lifes power in such Symphathies ;
 That one being merry ; mirth the other grac't :
 If one felt sorrow, th' other grieffe embrac't.
 If one were healthfull ; Health the other pleas'd :
 If one were sicke : the other was diseas'd ;
 And all waies ioynd in such a constant troth
 That one like cause had like effect in both,
 Called Twynns
 being both of an Age.
 So may these Nuptiall Twynnes, their whole
 liues store,
 Spend in such euen parts, neuer grieuing more,
 Then may the more set off their ioyes diuine ;
 As after the clouds, the Sunne, doth clereft shine.

This sayd, this Song of Loue, and Bewty was sung ; single.

Bright Panthæa borne to Pan,
Of the Noblest Race of Man,
Her white hand to Eros giuing,

*With a kifse, ioin'd Heauen to Earth
And begot fo faire a birth,
As yet neuer grac't the liuing.*

CHO.

*A Twinne that all worlds did adorne,
For fo were Loue and Bewty borne.*

2.

*Both fo lou'd, they did contend
Which the other should transcend,
Doing either, grace, and kindnes ;
Loue from Bewty did remoue,
Lightnes call'd her staine in loue,
Bewtie took from Loue his blindnefs ;*

CHO.

*Loue sparks made flames in Bewties skie,
And Bewtie blew vp Loue as hie.*

3

*Virtue then commixt her fire ;
To which Bountie did aspire,
Innocence a Crowne conferring ;
Mine, and Thine, were then vnusde,
All things common : Nought abusde,
Freely earth her frutage bearing.*

CHO.

*Nought then was car'd for, that could fade,
And thus the golden world was made.*

This fung, the Maskers danc't againe with the Ladies, after which Honor.

HON.

Now may the bleffings of the golden age,
Swimme in these Nuptials, euen to holy rage,
A Hymn to Sleep prefer, and all the ioyes
That in his Empire are of dearest choice,
Betwixt his golden slumbers euer flow,
In these ; And Theirs, in Springs as endles growe.

This fayd, the last Song was fung full.

The last Song.

*Now sleepe, binde fast, the flood of Ayre,
strike all things dumb and deafe,
And, to disturbbe our Nuptiall paire,
Let stir no Aspen leafe.
Send flocks of golden Dreames
That all true ioyes presage,
Bring, in thy oyly streames,
The milke and hony Age.
Now close the world-round sphere of blisse,
And fill it with a heauenly kisse.*

After this Plutus to the Maskers.

PLVT.

Come Virgine Knights, the homage ye haue done,
To Loue and Bewty, and our Britan Sun,
Kinde Honor, will requite with holy feasts
In her faire Temple ; and her loued Guests,
Giues mee the grace t'inuite, when she and I (Honor and Riches) will eternally
A league in fauour of this night combine,
In which Loues second hallowed Tapers shine ;

Whose Ioies, may Heauen & Earth as highly please
As those two nights that got great Hercules.

The speech ended ; they concluded with a dance, that brought them off ; Plutus, with Honor and the rest conducting them vp to the Temple of Honor.

FINIS.

A Hymne to Hymen for the most time-fitted Nuptialls of our thrice gracious Princeffe
Elizabeth, &c.

SInge, Singe a Rapture to all Nuptial eares,
Bright Hymens torches, drunke vp Parcaes tears :
Sweete Hymen ; Hymen, Mightiest of Gods,
Attoning of all-taming blood the odds ;
Two into One, contracting ; One to Two Dilating, which no other God can doe.
Mak'ft sure, with change, and lett'ft the married try,
Of Man and woman, the Variety.
And as a flower, halfe scorcht with daies long Simil. heate.
Thirsts for refreshing, with Nights cooling'fweate,
The wings of Zephire, fanning still her face,
No chere can ad to her heart-thirsty grace ;

Yet weares she gainst those fires that make her fade,
Her thicke hayrs prooffe, al hyd, in Midnights shade ;
Her Helth, is all in dewes ; Hope, all in showres,
Whose want bewailde, she pines in all her powres :
So Loue-scorch't Virgines, nourish quenchles fires ;
The Fathers cares ; the Mothers kind desires.
Their Gould, and Garments, of the newest guife,
Can nothing comfort their scorcht Phantasies,
But, taken rauish't vp, in Hymens armes,
His Circkle holds, for all their anguish, charms :
Then, as a glad Graft, in the spring Sunne
Simil. ad eandem explicat. shines,
That all the helps, of Earth, & Heauen combines
In Her sweet growth : Puts in the Morning on Her cherefull ayres ; the Sunnes rich fires, at Noone ;
At Euen the sweete deaws, and at Night with starrs,
In all their vertuous influences shares ;
So, in the Bridegroomes sweet embrace ; the Bride,
All varied Ioies tafts, in their naked pride :
To which the richest weedes : are weedes, to flowres ;
Come Hymen then : com close these Nuptial howres
With all yeares comforts. Come ; each virgin keeps
Her odorous kiffes for thee ; Goulden sleepes
Will, in their humors, neuer steepe an eie,
Till thou inuit'ft them with thy Harmony.
Why stiaiest thou ? see each Virgin doth prepare Embraces for thee ; Her white brefts laies bare
To tempt thy soft hand ; let's such glances flie
As make starres shoote, to imitate her eye.
Puts Arts attires on, that put Natures doune :
Singes, Dances, sets on euery foote a Crowne,
Sighes, in her songs, and dances ; kiffeth Ayre
Till Rites, and words past, thou in deedes repaire ;
The whole court Io sings : Io, the Ayre :
Io, the flouds, and fields : Io, most faire,
Most sweet, most happy Hymen ; Come : away ;
With all thy Comforts come ; old Matrons pray,
With young Maides Languors ; Birds bill, build, and breed

To teach thee thy kinde, euery flowre and weed
 Looks vp to gratulate thy long'd for fruites ;
 Thrice giuen, are free, and timely-granted fruites :
 There is a seed by thee now to be sowne,
 In whose fruit Earth, shall see her glories show'n,
 At all parts perfect ; and must therefore loose
 No minutes time ; from times vse all fruites flowes ;
 And as the tender Hyacinth, that growes Simil.
 Where Phæbus most his golden beames bestowes,
 Is propt with care ; is water'd euery howre ;
 The sweet windes adding their encreasing powre,
 The scattered drops of Nights refreshing dew,
 Hastening the full grace, of his glorious hew,
 Which once disclosing, must be gatherd straight,
 Or hew, and Odor both, will lose their height ;
 So, of a Virgine, high, and richly kept,
 The grace and sweetnes full growne must be reap't,
 Or, forth her spirits fly, in empty Ayre ;
 The sooner fading ; the more sweete and faire.
 Gentle, O Gentle Hymen, be not then Cruell, That kindest art to Maids, and Men ;
 These two, One Twynn are ; and their mutuall blisse,
 Not in thy beames, but in thy Bosome is.
 Nor can their hands fast, their harts ioyes make sweet ;
 Their harts, in breasts are ; and their Breasts must meete.
 Let there be Peace, yet Murmur ; and that noise,
 Beget of peace, the Nuptiall battailes ioyes.
 Let Peace grow cruell, and take wrake of all,
 The warrs delay brought thy full Festiuall.
 Harke, harke, O now the sweete Twyn murmur founds ;
Hymen is come, and all his heate abounds ;
 Shut all Dores ; None, but Hymens lights aduance.
 No found flyr ; let, dumb Ioy, enjoy a trance.
 Sing, sing a Rapture to all Nuptiall eares,
 Bright Hymens Torchcs drunke up Parcæ's teares.

F I N I S.

CAESAR

AND

POMPEY :

A Roman Tragedy, declaring their Warres.

Out of whose euent is euicted this Proposition.

Only a iust man is a freeman.

BY GEORGE CHAPMAN.

LONDON :

Printed by THOMAS HARPER, and are to be fold by Godfrey Emondson, and Thomas Alchorne.

M.DC.XXXI.

TO
THE RIGHT HONOrable, his exceeding good Lord, the Earle of Middlesex, &c.

Though (my good Lord) this martiall History suffer the diuision of Acts and Scenes, both for the more perspicuity and height of the celebration, yet neuer toucht it at the Stage; or if it had (though some may perhaps causelesly empaire it) yet would it, I hope, fall vnder no exception in your Lordships better-iudgeing estimation, since scenicall representation is so farre from giuing iust cause of any least dimimution; that the personall and exact life it giues to any History, or other such delineation of humane actions, ads to them luster, spirit and apprehension, which the only section of Acts and Scenes makes mee stand vpon thus much, since that only in some precisianismes will require a little preuention: And the hasty prose the stile auoides, obtaine to the more temperate and stai'd numerous elocution, some assistance to the acceptation and grace of it. Though ingeniously my gratitude confesseth (my Lord) it is not such as hereafter I vow to your honor; being written so long since; and had not the timely ripenesse of that age that (I thank God) I yet finde no fault with all for any old defects.

Good my Lord vouchsafe your idle minutes may admit some slight glances at this, till some worke of more nouelty and fashion may conferre this the more liking of your honors more worthy deseruings; To which his bounden affection voves all seruices.

Euer your Lordships

GEO. CHAPMAN.

The Argument.

Pompey and Cæsar bring their Armies fo neare Rome, that the Senate except against them. Cæsar vnduly and ambitiously commanding his forces. Pompey more for feare of *Cæsar*s violence to the State, then mou'd with any affectation of his own greatnesse. Their opposite pleadings, out of which admirable narrations are made, which yet not conducing to their ends, warre ends them. In which at first Cæsar is forc't to fly, whom Pompey not pursuing with such wings as fitted a speeding Conqueror ; his victory was preuented, and he vnhappily dishonor'd. Whose ill fortune his most louing and learned wife Cornelia trauailde after, with paines solemne and carefull enough ; whom the two Lentuli and others attended, till she miserably found him, and saw him monstrouly murdered.

Both the Consuls and Cato are slaughterd with their owne invincible hands ; and Cæsar (in spight of all his fortune) without his victory, victor.

ONLY A JUST MAN IS A FREE MAN.

Act I. Scene I.

Cato, Athenodorus, Porcius, Statilius.

Cat. Now will the two Suns of our Romane
Heaven
(Pompey & Cæsar) in their Tropicke burning,

With their contention, all the clouds assemble
That threaten tempests to our peace & Empire,
Which we shall shortly see poure down in bloud,
Civill and naturall, wilde and barbarous turning.

Ath. From whence presage you this ?

Cat. From both their Armies,
Now gathered neere our Italie, contending
To enter severally : Pompeys brought so neere
By Romes consent ; for feare of tyranous Cæsar,
Which Cæsar fearing to be done in fauour
Of Pompey, and his passage to the Empire ;
Hath brought on his for interuention.

And such a flocke of Puttocks follow Cæjar,
 For fall of his ill-disposed Purse
 (That neuer yet spar'd Crosse to Aquiline vertue)
 As well may make all ciuill spirits suspitious.
 Looke how against great raines, a standing Poole
 Of Paddockes, Todes, and water-Snakes put vp
 Their speckl'd throates aboue the venemous Lake,
 Croking and gasping for some fresh falne drops
 To quench their poifond thirst ; being neere to stifle
 With clotterd purgings of their owne foule bane ;
 So still, where Cæfar goes, there thrust vp head,
 Impostors, Flatterers, Fauorites, and Bawdes, Buffons, Intelligencers, select wits ;
 Close Murtherers, Montibanckes, and decaied Theeues,
 To gaine their banefull liues reliefes from him.
 From Britaine, Belgia, France, and Germanie,
 The scum of either Countrie, (chus'd by him,
 To be his blacke Guard, and red Agents here)
 Swarming about him.

Porc. And all these are said
 To be suborn'd, in chiefe, against your selfe ;
 Since Cæfar chiefly feares, that you will fit
 This day his opposite ; in the cause for which Both you were sent for home ; and he hath stolne
 Accessse so foone here ; Pompeys whole rest raisde
 To his encounter ; and on both sides, Rome
 In generall vproare.

Stat. Which Sir, if you saw,
 And knew, how for the danger, all suspect
 To this your worthiest friend (for that knowne free-dome
 His spirit will vse this day, 'gainst both the Riuals,
 His wife and familie mourne, no food, no comfort
 Allowd them for his danger) you would vse
 Your vtmost powrs to stay him from the Senate,
 All this daies Session.

Cat. Hee's too wife, Statilius,
 For all is nothing.

Stnt. Nothing Sir ? I saw

Castor and Pollux Temple, thrust vp full,
 With all the damn'd crew you haue lately nam'd :
 The market place and fuburbs swarming with them :
 And where the Senate sit, are Ruffians pointed
 To keepe from entring the degrees that goe
 Vp to the Bench ; all other but the Confuls,
Cæsar and Pompey, and the Senators,
 And all for no cause, but to keepe out Cato,
 With any violence, any villanie ;
 And is this nothing Sir ? Is his One life,
 On whom all good liues, and their goods depend,
 In Romes whole Empire ! All the Iustice there
 That's free, and simple ; all such virtues too,
 And all such knowledge ; Nothing, nothing, all !

Cat. Away Statilius ; how long shall thy loue Exceede thy knowledge of me, and the Gods ?
 Whose rights thou wrongst for my right ? haue not I
 Their powers to guard me, in a cause of theirs ?
 Their iustice, and integrity included,
 In what I stand for ? he that feares the Gods,
 For guard of any goodnesse ; all things feares ;
 Earth, Seas, and Aire ; Heauen, darknesse, broade
 day-light,

Rumor, and Silence, and his very shade :
 And what an Aspen soule hath such a creature ?
 How dangerous to his soule is such a feare ?
 In whose cold fits, is all heauens iustice shaken
 To his faint thoughts ; and all the goodnesse there
 Due to all good men, by the gods owne vowes,
 Nay, by the firmenesse of their endlesse Being,
 All which shall faile as soone as any one
 Good to a good man in them : for his goodnesse
 Proceeds from them, and is a beame of theirs.
 O neuer more, Statilius, may this feare
 Taint thy bould bosome, for thy selfe, or friend,
 More then the gods are fearefull to defend.

Athen. Come ; let him goe, Statilius ; and your fright ;

This man hath inward guard, past your yong fight.

Exeunt.

Enter Minutius, manet Cato.

Cat. Welcome ; come stand by me in what is fit.
For our poore Cities safety ; nor respect
Her proudest foes corruption, or our danger
Of what feene face foeuer.

Min. I am yours.

But what alas, Sir, can the weaknesse doe
Against our whole State of vs only two ?
You know our Statists spirits are so corrupt
And seruile to the greatest ; that what crosseth
Them, or their owne particular wealth, or honor,
They will not enterprife to faue the Empire.

Cat. I know it ; yet let vs doe like our selues.

Exeunt.

Enter some bearing Axes, bundles of rods, bare ; before two Consuls, Cæsar and Metellus ; Anthonius, and Marcellus in couples ; Senators, People, Souldiers, &c. following. The Consuls enter the Degrees, with Anthonius, and Marcellus : Cæsar staying a while without with Metellus who hath a paper in his hand.

Cæs. Moue you for entring only Pompeys army ;
Which if you gaine for him ; for me, all iustice
Will ioyne with my request of entring mine.

Met. Tis like so, and I purpose to enforce it.

Cæs. But might we not win Cato to our friendship
By honoring speeches, nor perswasive gifts ?

Met. Not possible.

Cæs. Nor by enforcie vsage ?

Met. Not all the violence that can be vsde,
Of power, or set authority can stirre him,
Much lesse faire words win, or rewards corrupt him ;
And therefore all meanes we must vse to keepe him
From off the Bench.

Cæs. Giue you the course for that,
And if he offer entry, I haue fellowes
Will serue your will on him, at my giuen signall.

They ascend.

Enter Pompey, Gabinius, Vibius, Demetrius, with papers. Enter the Lists, ascend and sit.

After whom enter Cato, Minutius, Athenodorus, Statilius, Porcius.

Cat. He is the man that fits so close to Cæsar,
And holds the law there, whispering ; see the Cowherd
Hath guards of arm'd men got, against one naked.
He part their whispering virtue.

1 Hold, keepe out.

2 What ? honor'd Cato ? enter, chuse thy place.

Cat. Come in ;

He drawes him in and sits betwixt Cæsar and Metellus.

—Away vnworthy groomes.

3. No more.

Cæs. What should one say to him ?

Met. He will be Stoicall.

Cat. Where fit place is not giuen, it must be taken.

4. Doe, take it Cato ; feare no greatest of them ;
Thou seek'st the peoples good ; and these their owne.

5. Braue Cato ! what a countenance he puts on ?
Let's giue his noble will, our vtmost power.

6. Be bould in all thy will ; for being iust,
Thou maist defie the gods.

Cat. Said like a God.

Met. We must endure these people.

Cæs. Doe ; begin.

Met. Consuls, and reuerend Fathers ; And ye people,

Whose voyces are the voyces of the Gods ;
I here haue drawne a law, by good consent,
For entring into Italy, the army
Of Romes great Pompey : that his forces here,

As well as he, great Rome, may rest secure
 From danger of the yet still smoaking fire,
 Of Catilines abhor'd conspiracy :
 Of which the very chiefe are left aliue,
 Only chastifde, but with a gentle prifon.

Cat. Put them to death then, and ftrike dead our feare,

That well you vrge, by their vnfit furuiual.
 Rather then keepe it quick ; and two liues giue it,
 By entertaining Pompeys army too.
 That giues as great caufe of our feare, as they.
 For their conspiracy, onely was to make
 One Tyrant ouer all the State of Rome.
 And Pompeys army, fufferd to be entred,
 Is, to make him, or giue him meanes to be fo.

Met. It followes not.

Cat. In purpose ; clearely Sir,
 Which Ile illuftrate, with a cleare example.
 If it be day, the Sunne's aboue the Earth ;
 Which followes not (youle anfwere) for 'tis day
 When firft the morning breakes ; and yet is then
 The body of the Sunne beneath the Earth ;
 But he is virtually aboue it too,
 Befauce his beames are there ; and who then knowes not

His golden body will foone after mount.
 So Pompeys army entred Italy,
 Yet Pompey's not in Rome ; but Pompey's beames
 Who fees not there ? and confequently, he
 Is in all meanes enthron'd in th' Emperie.

Met. Examples proue not, we will haue the army
 Of Pompey entred.

Cato. We ? which we intend you ?
 Haue you already bought the peoples voices ?
 Or beare our Confuls or our Senate here
 So fmall loue to their Country ; that their wills
 Beyond their Countrys right are fo peruerfe,
 To giue a Tyrant here entire command ?
 Which I haue prou'd as cleare as day, they doe,

If either the Conspirators suruiuing
 Be let to liue ; or Pompeys army entred ;
 Both which, beat one sole path ; and threat one danger.

Cæf. Consuls, and honor'd Fathers ; The sole entry

Of Pompeys army, Ile not yet examine :
 But for the great Conspirators yet liuing,
 (Which Cato will conclude as one selfe danger,
 To our deare Country ; and deterre all therefore
 That loue their Country, from their liues defence
 I see no reason why such danger hangs
 On their sau'd liues ; being still safe kept in prifon ;
 And since close prifon, to a Roman freedome,
 Ten fold torments more, then directest death,
 Who can be thought to loue the lesse his Country,
 That seekes to saue their liues ? And lest my selfe
 (Thus speaking for them) be vniustly toucht
 With any lesse doubt of my Countryes loue,
 Why (reuerend Fathers) may it be esteem'd
 Selfe praise in me, to proue my selfe a chiefe
 Both in my loue of her ; and in desert
 Of her like loue in me : For he that does
 Most honour to his Mistriffe ; well may boast (Without least question) that he loues her most.
 And though things long since done, were long since known,
 And so may seeme superfluous to repeat ;
 Yet being forgotten, as things neuer done,
 Their repetition needful is, in iustice,
 T'enflame the shame of that obliuion :
 For hoping it will seeme no lesse empaire
 To others acts, to truely tell mine owne ;
 Put all together ; I haue past them all
 That by their acts can boast themselues to be Their Countries louers : first in those wilde king-domes
 Subdu'd to Rome, by my vnwearied toyles.
 Which I dislauag'd and made nobly ciuill.

Next, in the multitude of those rude Realmes
 That so I fashiond ; and to Romes yong Empire
 Of old haue added : Then the battailes numbred
 This hand hath fought, and wonne for her, with all Those infinites of dreadfull enemies
 (I flue in them : Twice fiftene hundred thousand
 All able Souldiers) I haue driuen at once
 Before my forces : and in fundry onsets,
 A thousand thousand of them, put to sword :
 Besides, I tooke in lesse then ten yeares time,
 By strong assault, aboue eight hundred Cities,
 Three hundred feuerall Nations, in that space,
 Subduing to my Countrey ; all which seruice,
 I trust, may interest me in her loue,
 Publique, and generall enough, to aquit me
 Of any selfe-loue ; past her common good :
 For any motion of particular iustice
 (By which her generall Empire is maintaind)
 That I can make for those accused prisoners,
 Which is but by the way ; that so the reason
Metellus makes for entring Pompeys armie,
 May not more weighty seeme, then to agree
 With those imprison'd nobles, vitall safeties.
 Which granted, or but yeilded fit to be,
 May well extenuate the necessity
 Of entring Pompeys armie.

Cat. All that need
 I tooke away before ; and reasons gaue
 For a necessity to keepe it out
 Whose entry (I thinke) he himselfe affects not.
 Since I as well thinke he affects not th' Empire,
 And both those thoughts hold ; since he loues his Country,
 In my great hopes of him too well to seeke
 His sole rule of her, when so many soules,
 So hard a taske approue it ; nor my hopes
 Of his sincere loue to his Country, build
 On fandier grounds then Cæsars ; since he can
 As good Cards shew for it as Cæsar did,

And quit therein the close asperſion
Of his ambition, ſeeking to imploy
His army in the breaſt of Italy.

Pomp. Let me not thus (imperiall Bench and Senate)

Feele my ſelfe beat about the eares, and toſt
With others breathes to any coaſt they pleaſe :
And not put ſome ſtay to my errors in them.
The gods can witneſſe that not my ambition
Hath brought to queſtion th' entry of my army,
And therefore not ſuſpected the effect,
Of which that entry is ſuppoſde the cauſe :
Which is a will in me, to giue my power
The rule of Romes ſole Empire ; that moſt ſtrangely
Would put my will in others powers ; and powers (Vnforfeit by my fault) in others wills.
My ſelfe-loue, out of which all this muſt riſe :
I will not wrong the knowne proofes of my loue
To this my natiue Cities publique good,
To quit, or thinke of ; nor repeat thoſe proofes
Confirm'd in thoſe three triumphs I haue made ;
For conqueſt of the whole inhabited world ;
Firſt Affrick, Europe, and then Aſia,
Which neuer Confull but my ſelfe could boaſt.
Nor can blinde Fortune vaunt her partiall hand,
In any part of all my ſeruices,
Though ſome haue ſaid, ſhe was the page of Cæſar,
Both ſaying, marching, fighting, and preparing
His fights in very order of his battailes :
The parts ſhe plaid for him inuerting nature,
As giuing calmneſſe to th' enraged ſea ;
Impoſing Summers weather on ſterne winter ;
Winging the ſloweſt foot he did command,
And his moſt Cowherd making fierce of hand.
And all this euer when the force of man
Was quite exceeded in it all ; and ſhe
In th' inſtant adding her cleare deity.
Yet, her for me, I both diſclaime and ſcorne ;
And where all fortune is renounc't, no reaſon

Will thinke one man transferd with affectation
Of all Romes Empire ; for he must haue fortune
That goes beyond a man ; and where so many
Their hand-fulls finde with it ; the one is mad
That vndergoes it : and where that is clear'd ;
Th' imputed meanes to it, which is my fute
For entry of mine army, I confute.

Cat. What rests then, this of all parts being dis-claimd ?

Met. My part, Sir, rests, that let great Pompey
beare

What spirit he lifts ; 'tis needfull yet for Rome,
That this Law be establisht for his army.

Cæs. Tis then as needfull to admit in mine ;
Or else let both lay downe our armes ; for else
To take my charge off, and leaue Pompey his ;
You wrongfully accuse me to intend
A tyranny amongst ye : and shall giue
Pompey full meanes to be himselfe a tyrant.

Anth. Can this be answer'd ?

1. Conf. Is it then your wils
That Pompey shall cease armes ?

Anth. What else ?

Omnes. No, no.

2. Conf. Shall Cæsar cease his armes ?

Omn. I, I.

Anth. For shame

Then yeeld to this cleare equity, that both
May leaue their armes.

Omn. We indifferent stand.

Met. Read but this law, and you shall see a difference

Twixt equity and your indifferency ;
All mens obiections answered ; Read it Notary.

Cat. He shall not read it.

Met. I will read it then.

Min. Nor thou shalt read it, being a thing so vaine,
Pretending cause for Pompeys armies entry,
That only by thy Complices and thee ;

Tis forg'd to set the Senate in an uproare.

Met. I haue it Sir, in memory, and will speake it.

Cat. Thou shalt be dumbe as soone.

Cæs. Pull downe this Cato,

Author of factions, and to prison with him.

Gen. Come downe Sir. He drawes,

Pom. Hence ye mercenary Ruffians. and all draw.

i. Conf. What outrage shew you? sheath your infolent swords,

Or be proclaim'd your Countreys foes and traytors.

Pom. How infolent a part was this in you,

To offer the imprisonment of Cato?

When there is right in him (were forme so answer'd

With termes and place) to send vs both to prison?

If, of our owne ambitions, we should offer

Th' entry of our armies; for who knowes

That, of vs both, the best friend to his Country,

And freeest from his owne particular ends;

(Being in his power) would not assume the Empire,

And hauing it, could rule the State so well

As now 'tis gouer'nd, for the common good?

Cæs. Accuse your selfe, Sir, (if your conscience vrge it)

Or of ambition, or corruption,

Or insufficiency to rule the Empire,

And found not me with your Lead.

Pom. Lead? tis Gold,

And spirit of Gold too; to the politique drosse

With which false Cæsar founds men; and for which

His praise and honour crownes them; who founds not

The inmost fand of Cæsar? for but fand

Is all the rope of your great parts affected.

You speake well, and are learn'd; and golden speech

Did Nature neuer giue man; but to guild

A copper foule in him; and all that learning

That heartily is spent in painting speech,

Is merely painted, and no solid knowledge.

But y'auē another praise for temperance,

Which nought commends your free choice to be temperate.

For so you must be ; at least in your meales,
Since y'au'e a malady that tyes you to it ;
For feare of daily fals in your aspirings.

And your disease the gods nere gaue to man ;
But such a one, as had a spirit too great
For all his bodies passages to serue it,
Which notes th' excesse of your ambition.

The malady chancing where the pores and passages
Through which the spirit of a man is borne,
So narrow are, and straight, that oftentimes
They intercept it quite, and choake it vp.

And yet because the greatnesse of it notes
A heat mere fleshly, and of bloods ranck fire,
Goates are of all beasts subiect't to it most.

Cæs. Your selfe might haue it then, if those faults cause it ;

But deales this man ingeniously, to tax
Men with a frailty that the gods inflict ?

Pomp. The gods inflict on men, diseases neuer,
Or other outward maimes ; but to decipher,
Correct, and order some rude vice within them :
And why decipher they it, but to make
Men note, and shun, and tax it to th' extreame ?
Nor will I see my Countryes hopes abusde,
In any man commanding in her Empire ;
If my more tryall of him, makes me see more
Into his intricacies ; and my freedome
Hath spirit to speake more, then obseruers seruile.

Cæs. Be free, Sir, of your insight and your speech ;
And speak, and see more, then the world besides ;
I must remember I haue heard of one,
That fame gaue out, could see thorow Oke and stone :
And of another fet in Sicily,
That could discerne the Carthaginian Nauy,
And number them distinctly, leauing harbor,
Though full a day and nights faile distant thence :
But these things (Reuerend Fathers) I conceiue,

Hardly appeare to you worth graue beliefe :
And therefore since such strange things haue bene
feene

In my so deepe and foule detractions,
By only Lyncean Pompey ; who was most Lou'd and beleeu'd of Romes most famous whore,
Infamous Flora ; by so fine a man
As Galba, or Sarmentus ; any iester
Or flatterer may draw through a Ladyes Ring ;
By one that all his Souldiers call in sorne
Great Agamemnon, or the King of men ;
I rest vn mou'd with him ; and yeeld to you
To right my wrongs, or his abuse allow.

Cat. My Lords, ye make all Rome amaz'd to heare.

Pom. Away, Ile heare no more ; I heare it thunder

My Lords ; All you that loue the good of Rome,
I charge ye, follow me ; all such as stay,
Are friends to Cæsar, and their Countreys foes.

Cæf. Th' euent will fall out contrary, my Lords.

1. Conf. Goe, thou art a thiefe to Rome, discharge thine army,

Or be proclaim'd, forthwith, her open foe.

2. Conf. Pompey, I charge thee, helpe thy iniur'd
Country

With what powers thou hast arm'd, and leuy more.

The Ruffians. Warre, warre, O Cæsar.

Sen. and Peop. Peace, peace, worthy Pompey.

Act II. Scene I.

Enter Fronto all ragg'd, in an ouergrowne red Beard, black head, with a Halter in his hand, looking about.

VArres, warres, and preffes, fly in fire about ;
 No more can I lurke in my lasie corners,
 Nor shifting courses : and with honest meanes
 To rack my miserable life out, more,
 The rack is not so fearefull ; when dishonest
 And villanous fashions faile me ; can I hope
 To liue with virtuous ? or to raife my fortunes
 By creeping vp in Souldierly degrees ?
 Since villany varied thorow all his figures,
 Will put no better case on me then this ;
 Despaire ! come sease me : I had able meanes ;
 And spent all in the swinge of lewd affections ;
 Plung'd in all riot, and the rage of blood ;
 In full assurance that being knaue enough,
 Barbarous enough, base, ignorant enough,
 I needs must haue enough, while this world lasted ;
 Yet, since I am a poore, and ragged knaue,
 My rags disgrace my knauery so, that none
 Will thinke I am knaue ; as if good clothes
 Were knacks to know a knaue ; when all men know
 He has no liuing ? which knacks since my knauery
 Can shew no more ; and only shew is all
 That this world cares for ; Ile step out of all
 The cares 'tis sleet in. He offers to hang himselfe.

*Thunder, and the Gulfe opens, flames issuing ;
 and Ophioneus ascending, with the face,
 wings, and taile of a Dragon ; a skin
 coate all speckled on the throat.*

Oph. Hold Rascall, hang thy selfe in these dayes ?

The only time that euer was for a Rascall to liue in ?

Fron. How chance I cannot liue then ?

Oph. Either th'art not rascall nor villaine enough ;
Or else thou dost not pretend honesty
And piety enough to disguise it.

Fro. That's certaine, for euery asse does that.
What art thou ?

Oph. O villaine worfe then thou.

Fro. And dost breathe ?

Oph. I speake, thou hear'st, I moue, my pulse beates

Fast as thine.

Fro. And wherefore liu'ft thou ?

Oph. The world's out of frame, a thousand Rulers Wrestling it this way, and that, with as many Religions ; when, as heauens vpper Sphere is mou'd Onely by one ; so should the Sphere of earth be, and
He haue it so.

Fro. How canst thou ? what art thou ?

Oph. My shape may tell thee.

Fro. No man ?

Oph. Man ? no, spawne of a clot, none of that curfed

Crew, damn'd in the masse it selfe ; plagu'd in his birth,

Confinde to creepe below, and wrestle with the Elements ;

Teach himselfe tortures ; kill himselfe, hang himselfe ;
No such gally slaue, but at warre with heauen ;

Spurning the power of the gods, command the Elements.

Fro. What maist thou be theu ?

Oph. An endlesse friend of thine ; an immortall deuill.

Fro. Heauen bleffe vs.

Oph. Nay then, forth, goe, hang thy selfe, and thou talk'ft

Of heauen once.

Fro. I haue done ; what deuill art thou ?

Oph. Read the old stoick Pherecides, that tels thee Me truly, and sayes that I Ophioneus (for so is My name.

Fro. Ophioneus? what's that?

Oph. Deuilish Serpent, by interpretation; was generall Captaine of that rebellious host of spirits that Wag'd warre with heauen.

Fro. And so were hurl'd downe to hell.

Oph. We were so; and yet haue the rule of earth; and cares
Any man for the worst of hell then?

Fro. Why should he?

Oph. Well said; what's thy name now?

Fro. My name is Fronto.

Oph. Fronto? A good one; and has Fronto liu'd thus long
In Rome? lost his state at dice? murther'd his Brother for his meanes? spent all? run thorow worse Offices since? beene a Promoter? a Purueyor? a Pander?

A Sumner? a Sergeant? an Intelligencer? and at last Hang thy selfe?

Fro. How the deuill knowes he all this?

Oph. Why thou art a most greene Plouer in policy, I Perceiue; and maist drinke Colts-foote, for all thy Horsemane beard: S'light, what need hast Thou to hang thy selfe? as if there were a dearth Of hangmen in the land? Thou liu'ft in a good cheape State, a man may be hang'd here for a little, or Nothing. What's the reason of thy desperation?

Gro. My idle diffolute life, is thrust out of all his corners

By this searhing tumult now on foot in Rome.

Cæsar now and Pompey
Are both for battaile: Pompey (in his feare
Of Cæsars greater force) is sending hence

His wife and children, and he bent to fly.

Enter Pompey running over the Stage with his wife and children, Gabinius, Demetrius, Vibius, Pages ; other Senators, the Consuls and all following.

See, all are on their wings ; and all the City
In such an uproare, as if fire and sword
Were ransacking, and ruining their houses,
No idle person now can lurke neare Rome,
All must to armes ; or shake their heeles beneath
Her martiall halts ; whose officious pride
Ile shun, and vse mine owne swinge : I be forc't
To helpe my Countrey, when it forceth me
To this past-helping pickle ?

Oph. Goe to, thou shalt serue me ; chuse thy profession ;

And what cloth thou wouldst wish to haue thy Coat Cut out on.

Fro. I can name none.

Oph. Shall I be thy learn'd Counsaile ?

Fro. None better.

Oph. Be an Archflamen then, to one of the Gods.

Fro. Archflamen ? what's that ?

Oph. A Priest.

Fro. A Priest ? that nere was Clerke ?

Oph. No Clerke ? what then ?

The greatest Clerks are not the wisest men.

Nor skills it for degrees in a knaue, or a fooles preferment,

Thou shalt rise by fortune : let desert rise leifurely
Enough, and by degrees ; fortune preferres headlong,
And comes like riches to a man ; huge riches being Got with little paines ; and little with huge paines.

And

For discharge of the Priesthood, what thou wantst
In learning, thou shalt take out in goodfellowship :
Thou shalt equiuocate with the Sophister, prate with

The Lawyer, scrape with the Vfurur, drinke with the Dutchman, sweare with the French man, cheat With the English man, brag with the Scot, and Turne all this to Religion, Hoc est regnum Deorum Gentibus.

Fro. All this I can doe to a haire.

Oph. Very good, wilt thou shew thy selfe deeply learn'd too,

And to liue licentiously here, care for nothing hereafter ?

Fro. Not for hell ?

Oph. For hell ? soft Sir ; hop'ft thou to purchase hell

With only dicing or whoring away thy liuing ? Murthering thy brother, and so forth ? No there Remaine works of a higher hand and deeper braine, To obtaine hell. Thinkst thou earths great Potentates haue gotten their places there with Any single act of murther, poysoning, adultery, And the rest ? No ; tis a purchase for all manner Of villany ; especially, that may be priuiledg'd By Authority ; colour'd with holinesse, and enioyd With pleasure.

Fro. O this were most honourable and admirable.

Oph. Why such an admirable honorable villane shalt Thou be.

Fro. Is't possible ?

Oph. Make no doubt on't ; Ile inspire thee.

Fro. Sacred and puissant. He kneeles.

Oph. Away ; Companion and friend, giue me thy Hand ; say, dost not loue me ? art not enamourd Of my acquaintance ?

Fro. Protest I am.

Oph. Well said, protest and tis enough. And know for Infallible ; I haue promotion for thee ; both here, and Hereafter ; which not one great one amongst Millions shall euer aspire to. Alexander, nor great

Cyrus, retaine thofe titles in hell, that they did
On earth.

Fron. No? Oph. No: he that fold Seacoale here, fhall be

A Baron there; he that was a cheating
Rogue here, fhall be a Iuftice of peace there;
A knaue here, a knight there. In the meane
Space, learne what it is to liue; and thou fhalt
Haue Chopines at commandment to any height
Of life thou canft wifh.

Fro. I feare my fall is too low.

Oph. Too low foole? haft thou not heard of Vulcans falling

Out of heauen? Light a thy legges, and no matter
Thou thou halt'ft with thy beft friend euer after; tis
The more comely and fashionable. Better goe lame
In the fafhion with Pompey, then neuer fo vpright,
Quite out of the fafhion with Cato.

Fro. Yet you cannot change the old fafhion (they fay)
And hide your clouen feet.

Oph. No? I can weare Rofes that fhall fpread quite

Ouer them.

Fro. For loue of the fafhion doe then.

Oph. Goe to; I will hereafter.

Fro. But for the Priefthood you offer me, I affect it not.

Oph. No? what faift thou to a rich office then?

Fro. The only fecond meanes to raife a rafcall
In the earth.

Oph. Goe to; Ile helpe thee to the beft ith earth
then:

And that's in Sicilia; the very ftorehoufe of the Romanes, where the Lord chiefe Cenfor there Lyes now a dying; whose foule I will haue; and Thou fhalt haue his office.

Fro. Excellent; was euer great office better fupplied?

Exeunt.

Nuntius.

Now is the mighty Empresse of the earth
 (Great Rome) fast lockt vp in her fancied strength,
 All broke in vproares ; fearing the iust gods
 In plagues will drowne her so abused bleffings.
 In which feare, all without her wals, fly in ;
 By both their iarring Champions rushing out ;
 And those that were within, as fast fly forth ;
 The Consuls both are fled without one rite
 Of sacrifice submitted to the gods,
 As euer heretofore their custome was
 When they began the bloody frights of warre.
 In which our two great Souldiers now encountring,
 Since both left Rome, oppos'd in bitter skirmish, Pompey (not willing yet to hazard battaile,
 By Catos counsaile, vrging good cause) fled :
 Which firing Cæsars spirit ; he purfu'd
 So home, and fiercely, that great Pompey skorning
 The heart he tooke, by his aduised flight,
 Despisde aduice as much as his pursuite.
 And as in Lybia, an aged Lion,
 Vrg'd from his peacefull couert, feares the light,
 With his vnready and diseaf'd appearance,
 Giues way to chace a while, and coldly hunts,
 Till with the youthfull hunters wanton heat,
 He all his coole wrath frets into a flame :
 And then his sides he fwinges with his Sterne,
 To lash his strenth vp, let's downe all his browes
 About his burning eyes ; erects his mane,
 Breakes all his throat in thunders, and to wreake
 His hunters insolence, his heart euen barking ;
 He frees his fury, turnes, and rushes back
 With such a gastly horror, that in heapes,
 His proud foes fly, and he that station keeps :
 So Pompeys coole spirits, put to all their heat
 By Cæsars hard pursuit he turnd fresh head,
 And flew vpon his foe with such a rapture
 As tooke vp into furies, all friends feares ;
 Who fir'd with his first turning, all turnd head,

And gaue so fierce a charge, their followers fled,
 Whose instant issue on their both sides, see,
 And after set out such a tragedy,
 As all the Princes of the earth may come
 To take their patternes by the spirits of Rome.

Alarme, after which enter Cæsar following Craffinius calling to the Souldiers.

Craff. Stay cowherd, fly ye Cæsars fortunes ?

Cæs. Forbeare, foolish Craffinius, we contend in vaine

To stay these vapours, and must raise our Campe.

Craff. How shall we rise (my Lord) but all in vproares,
 Being still pursude ?

Enter Acilius.

The pursuit stayes, my Lord,
Pompey hath founded a retreat, resigning
 His time to you to vse, in instant rayfing
 Your ill-lodg'd army, pitching now where fortune
 May good amends make for her fault to day.

Cæs. It was not fortunes fault, but mine Acilius,
 To giue my foe charge, being so neare the sea,
 Where well I knew the eminence of his strength,
 And should haue driuen th' encounter further off ;
 Bearing before me such a goodly Country,
 So plentifull, and rich, in all things fit
 To haue suppli'd my armies want with victuals,
 And th' able Cities too, to strengthen it,
 Of Macedon and Theffaly, where now
 I rather was besieg'd for want of food,
 Then did assault with fighting force of armes.

Enter Anthony, Vibius, with others.

Ant. See, Sir, here's one friend of your foes recouer'd.

Cæs. Vibius ? In happy houre.

Vib. For me vnhappy.

Cæs. What? brought against your will?

Vib. Else had not come.

Ant. Sir, hee's your prisoner, but had made you his,

Had all the rest purfu'd the chace like him ;
He draue on like a fury ; past all friends,
But we that tooke him quick in his engagement.

Cæs. O Vibius, you deserue to pay a ranfome
Of infinite rate, for had your Generall ioyn'd
In your addression, or knowne how to conquer ;
This day had prou'd him the supream of Cæsar!

Vib. Knowne how to conquer? His fūe hundred Conquests

Atchieu'd ere this day, make that doubt vnfit
For him that flies him ; for, of issues doubtfull
Who can at all times put on for the best?
If I were mad, must hee his army venture
In my engagement? Nor are Generalls euer
Their powers disposers, by their proper Angels,
But trust against them, oftentimes, their Counsailes,
Wherein, I doubt not, Cæsars felse hath err'd
Sometimes as well as Pompey.

Cæs. Or done worfe,
In disobeying my Counsaile (Vibius)
Of which, this dayes abused light is witnesse ;
By which I might haue seene a course secure
Of this discomfiture.

Ant. Amends fits euer
Aboue repentance, what's done, with not vndone ;
But that prepared patience that you know
Best fits a souldier charg'd with hardest fortunes ;
Asks still your vse, since powers still temperate kept
Ope still the clearer eyes by one faults fight
To place the next act, in the surer right.

Cæs. You prompt me nobly Sir, repaying in me
Mine owne stayes practice, out of whose repose,
The strong convulsions of my spirits forc't me
Thus farre beyond my temper ; but good Vibius,

Be ransom'd with my loue, and haste to Pompey,
 Entreating him from me, that we may meet,
 And for that reason which I know this day
 (Was giuen by Cato, for his purfutes stay Which was preuention of our Romane blood)
 Propose my offer of our hearty peace.
 That being reconcil'd, and mutuall faith
 Giuen on our either part, not three dayes light
 May further shew vs foes, but (both our armies Disperst in Garifons) we may returne
 Within that time to Italy, such friends .
 As in our Countryes loue, containe our splenes.

Vit. Tis offerd, Sir, 'boue the rate of Cæsar,
 In other men, but in what I approue
 Beneath his merits: which I will not faile
 T' enforce at full to Pompey, nor forget
 In any time the gratitude of my seruice.

*Vi. salutes Ant. and the other,
 & exit.*

Cæf. Your loue, Sir, and your friendship.

Ant. This prepares a good induction to the change of fortune,

In this dayes issue, if the pride it kindles
 In Pompeys vaines, makes him deny a peace
 So gently offerd: for her alterd hand
 Works neuer surer from her ill to good
 On his side she hath hurt, and on the other
 With other changes, then when meanes are vfe
 To keepe her constant, yet retire refusde.

Cæf. I try no such conclusion, but desire Directly peace. In meane space Ile prepare
 For other issue in my vtmost meanes;
 Whose hopes now resting at Brundusium,
 In that part of my army, with Sabinus,
 I wonder he so long delaies to bring me,
 And must in person haste him, if this Euen
 I heare not from him.

Craff. That (I hope) flyes farre
 Your full intent, my Lord, since Pompeys navie
 You know, lies houering all alongst those seas,
 In too much danger, for what ayde soeuer

You can procure to passe your perfon safe.

Acil. Which doubt may proue the cause that stayes Sabinus ;

And, if with shipping fit to passe your army,
He yet straines time to venture, I presume
You will not passe your perfon with such Conuoy
Of those poore vessels, as may serue you here.

Cæs. How shall I helpe it ? shall I suffer this Torment of his delay ? and rack suspitions
Worse then assur'd destructions through my thoughts.

Anth. Past doubt he will be here ; I left all orderd,
And full agreement made with him to make
All vtmost haste, no least let once suspected.

Cæs. Suspected ? what suspicion should feare a friend
In such assur'd streights from his friends enlargement.
If twere his fouldiers safeties he so tenders,
Were it not better they should sinke by sea,
Then wrack their number, King and cause ashore ?
Their stay is worth their ruine, should we liue,
If they in fault were ? if their leader ! he Should dye the deaths of all ; in meane space, I
That should not, beare all, fly the fight in shame,
Thou eye of nature, and abortiue night
Fall dead amongst vs : with defects, defects
Must serue proportion ; iustice neuer can Be else restor'd, nor right the wrongs of man. Exeunt.

Pompey, Cato, Gabinius, Demetrius, Athenodorus, Porcius, Statilius.

Pomp. This charge of our fierce foe, the friendly gods
Haue in our strengthen'd spirits beaten back
With happy issue, and his forces lessen'd,
Of two and thirty Ensignes forc't from him,
Two thousand fouldiers slaine.

Cat. O boast not that,
Their losse is yours, my Lord.

Pomp. I boast it not,
But only name the number.

Gab. Which right well
You might haue raisde so high, that on their tops
Your Throne was offer'd, euer t'ouerlooke
Subuerted Cæsar, had you beene so blest
To giue such honor to your Captaines Counfailes
As their alacrities did long to merit
With prooffull action.

Dem. O twas ill neglected.

Stat. It was deferr'd with reason, which not yet
Th' euent so cleare is to confute.

Pom. If twere,
Our likeliest then was, not to hazard battaile,
Th' aduenture being so casuall; if compar'd
With our more certaine meanes to his subuersion?
For finding now our army amply storde
With all things fit to tarry surer time,
Reason thought better to extend to length
The warre betwixt vs; that his little strength
May by degrees proue none; which vrged now, (Consisting of his best and ablest souldiers)
We should haue found at one direct set battaile
Of matchlesse valours; their defects of victuall
Not tiring yet enough on their tough nerues,
Where, on the other part, to put them still
In motion, and remotion, here and there;
Enforcing them to fortifying still
Where euer they set downe; to siege a wall,
Keepe watch all night in armour: their most part
Can neuer beare it, by their yeares oppression;
Spent heretofore too much in those steele toyles.

Cat. I so aduisde, and yet repent it not,
But much reioyce in so much faued blood
As had beene pour'd out in the stroke of battaile,
Whose fury thus preuented, comprehends
Your Countreys good, and Empires; in whose care
Let me beseech you that in all this warre,
You sack no City, subiect to our Rule,

Nor put to sword one Citizen of Rome ;
 But when the needfull fury of the sword
 Can make no fit distinction in maine battaile,
 That you will please still to prolong the stroke
 Of absolute decision to these iarres,
 Considering you shall strike it with a man
 Of much skill and experience, and one
 That will his Conquest fell at infinite rate,
 If that must end your difference ; but I doubt
 There will come humble offer on his part,
 Of honor'd peace to you, for whose sweet name
 So cryed out to you in our late-met Senate,
 Lost no fit offer of that wished treaty.
 Take pity on your Countreys blood as much
 As possible may stand without the danger
 Of hindering her iustice on her foes,
 Which all the gods to your full wish dispose.

Pom. Why will you leaue vs? whither will you goe

To keepe your worthyest person in more safety
 Then in my army, so deuoted to you ?

Cat. My person is the least, my Lord, I value ;
 I am commanded by our powerfull Senate,
 To view the Cities, and the kingdomes situate
 About your either army, that which side
 Soeuer conquer, no difordered straglers
 Puft with the Conquest, or by need impeld,
 May take their swinge more then the care of one
 May curb and order in these neighbor confines
 My chiefe passe yet resolues for Vtica.

Pom. Your passe (my truest friend, and worthy Father)

May all good powers make safe, and alwayes answer
 Your infinite merits, with their like protection.
 In which, I make no doubt but we shall meet
 With mutuall greetings, or for absolute conquest
 Or peace preuenting that our bloody stroke,
 Nor let our parting be dishonor'd so,
 As not to take into our noblest notice

Your selfe (most learned and admired Father)
 Whose merits, if I liue, shall lack no honor.
Porcius, Statilius, though your spirits with mine
 Would highly chere me, yet ye shall bestow them
 In much more worthy conduct ; but loue me,
 And with me conquest, for your Countreys sake.

Sta. Our liues shall feale our loues, Sir, with worst deaths
 Aduentur'd in your seruice.

Pom. Y'are my friends.

Exeunt Cat. Athen. Por. Sat.

These friends thus gone, tis more then time we minded
 Our lost friend Vibius.

Gab. You can want no friends,
 See, our two Consuls, Sir, betwixt them bringing
 The worthy Brutus

Enter two Consuls leading Brutus betwixt them.

1. Conf. We attend (my Lord)
 With no meane friend, to spirit your next encounter,
 Six thousand of our choice Patrician youths
 Brought in his conduct.

2. Conf. And though neuer yet
 He hath saluted you with any word
 Or looke of flendrest loue in his whole life,
 Since that long time since, of his fathers death
 By your hand authord ; yet see, at your need
 He comes to serue you freely for his Country.

Pom. His friendly presence, making vp a third
 With both your persons, I as gladly welcome,
 As if Ioues triple flame had guilt this field,
 And lightn'd on my right hand, from his shield.

Bru. I well assure my selfe, Sir, that no thought
 In your ingenious construction, touches
 At the aspersion that my tendred seruice
 Proceeds from my despaire of elsewhere safety.
 But that my Countreys safety owning iustly
 My whole habilities of life and fortunes,

And you the ablest fautor of her fafty,
Her loue, and (for your loue of her) your owne
Only makes facred to your vse my offering.

Pom. Farre fly all other thought from my construction,
And due acceptance of the liberall honor,
Your loue hath done me, which the gods are witnesse,
I take as flirr'd vp in you by their fauours,
Nor lesse esteeme it then an offering holy ;
Since, as of all things, man is said the measure,
So your full merits measure forth a man.

1. Conf. See yet, my Lord, more friends.

2 Conf. Fiue Kings, your seruants.

Enter fiue Kings.

Hib. Conquest and all grace crowne the gracious

Pompey,

To serue whom in the facred Romane safety,
My selfe, Iberias King, present my forces.

Theff. And I that hold the tributary Throne
Of Grecian Theffaly, submit my homage,
To Rome, and Pompey.

Cil. So Cilicia too.

Epir. And so Epirus.

Thra. Lastly I from Thrace
Present the duties of my power and seruice.

Pom. Your royall aides deserue of Rome and Pompey

Our vtmost honors. O may now our fortune
Not ballance her broad breast twixt two light wings,
Nor on a slippery globe sustaine her steps,
But as the Spartans say, the Paphian Queene
(The flood Eurotas passing) laid aside
Her Glasse, her Ceston, and her amorous graces,
And in Lycurgus fauor ; arm'd her beauties
With Shield and Iaueline, so may fortune now,
The flood of all our enemies forces passing
With her faire Ensignes, and arriu'd at ours,

Displume her shoulders, cast off her wing'd shooes,
 Her faithlesse, and still-rowling stone spurne from her,
 And enter our powers as she may remaine
 Our firme assistent : that the generall aydes,
 Fauours, and honors you performe to Rome,
 May make her build with you her endlesse home.

Omn. The gods vouchsafe it ; and our causes right.

Dem. What suddaine Shade is this? obserue my Lords,

The night, methinks, comes on before her houre.

Thunder and lightning.

Gab. Nor trust me if my thoughts conceiue not so.

Bru. What thin clouds fly the winds, like swiftest shafts

Along aires middle region.

1 Conf. They presage

Vnusuall tempests.

2. Conf. And tis their repaire,

That timelesse darken thus the gloomy ayre.

Pom. Let's force no omen from it, but avoid
 The vapors furies now by Ioue employd.

Thunder continued, and Cæsar enters disguisde.

The wrathfull tempest of the angry night,
 Where hell flies muff'd vp in clouds of pitch,
 Mingl'd with Sulphure, and those dreadfull bolts,
 The Cyclops Ram in Ioues Artillery,
 Hath rousde the furies, arm'd in all their horrors,
 Vp to the enuious seas, in spight of Cæsar.
 O night, O ielous night, of all the noblest Beauties, and glories, where the gods haue stroke
 Their foure digestions, from thy gastly Chaos,
 Blush thus to drowne them all in this houre sign'd
 By the necessity of fate for Cæsar.
 I that haue ranfackt all the world for worth,
 To forme in man the image of the gods,

Must like them haue the power to check the worst
 Of all things vnder their celestially Empire,
 Stoope it, and burst it, or breake through it all,
 With vse and safety, till the Crowne be fet
 On all my actions ; that the hand of nature
 In all her worst works ayming at an end,
 May in a master-peece of hers be seru'd
 With tops, and state fit for his virtuous Crowne :
 Not list arts thus farre vp in glorious frame,
 To let them vanish thus in smoke and shame.
 This riuier Anius (in whose mouth now lyes
 A Pynnace I would passe in, to fetch on My armies dull rest from Brundusium)
 That is at all times else exceeding calme,
 (By reason of a purling winde that flies
 Off from the shore each morning, driuing vp
 The billows farre to sea) in this night yet,
 Beares such a terrible gale ; put off from sea,
 As beats the land wind back, and thrusts the flood,
 Vp in such uproare, that no boat dare stirre.
 And on it is disperst all Pompeys nauy
 To make my perill yet more enuious.
 Shall I yet shrink for all ? were all, yet more ?
 There is a certaine need that I must giue
 Way to my passe ; none, knowne, that I must liue.

Enter Master of a ship with Sailors

Maſt. What battaile is there fought now in the ayre.
 That threatens the wrack of nature ?
Cæſ. Master ? come.
 Shall we thrust through it all ?
Maſt. What lost man,
 Art thou in hopes and fortunes, that dar'ſt make
 So desperate a motion.
Cæſ. Launch man, and all thy feares fraight difauow,
 Thou carriest Cæſar and his fortunes now.

Act III. Scene I.

Pompey, two Conſuls, five Kings, Brutus, Gabinus, Demetrius.

Now to Pharſalia, where the ſmarting ſtrokes
Of our reſolu'd contention muſt rebound,
(My Lords and friends of Rome) I giue you all Such welcome as the ſpirit of all my fortunes,
Conqueſts, and triumphs (now come for their crowne)
Can crowne your fauours with, and ſerue the hopes
Of my deare Country, to her vtmoſt wiſh ;
I can but ſet vp all my being to giue
So good an end to my forerunning Acts ;
The powers in me that formd them hauing loſt
No leaſt time ſince, in gathering ſkill to better ;
But like ſo many Bees haue brought me home,
The ſweet of what foeuer flowers haue growne
In all the meades, and gardens of the world.
All which hath growne ſtill, as the time encrease
In which twas gather'd, and with which it ſtemm'd.
That what decay foeuer blood inferr'd,
Might with my mindes ſtore, be ſuppli'd, and cher'd,
All which, in one fire of this inſtant fight
Ile burne, and ſacrifice to euey cinder
In ſacred offering to my Countreys loue,
And therefore what euent foeuer fort,
As I no praiſe will looke for, but the good
Freely beſtow on all ; (if good ſucceed)
So if aduerſe fate fall, I wiſh no blame,
But th' ill beſalne me, made my fortunes ſhame,
Not mine, nor my fault.

1 Conf. We too well loue Pompey,
To doe him that iniuſtice.

- Bru.* Who more thirsts
The Conquest, then resolues to beare the foile ?
- Pom.* Said Brutus-like, giue feuerall witnesse all,
That you acquit me whatsoeuer fall.
- 2 Conf.* Particular men particular fates must beare,
Who fees his owne wounds lesse, to wound another ?
- Theff.* Leauē him the worst whose best is left vndone,
He only conquers whose minde still is one.
- Epir.* Free mindes, like dice, fall square, what ere the cast.
- Ibir.* Who on him selfe sole stands, stands solely fast.
- Thra.* He's neuer downe, whose minde fights still aloft.
- Cil.* Who cares for vp or downe, when all's but thought.
- Gab.* To things euent doth no mans power extend.
- Dem.* Since gods rule all, who any thing would mend.
- Pom.* Ye sweetly ease my charge, your selues vnburthening.
- Return'd not yet our trumpet, sent to know
Of Vibius certaine state ?
- Gab.* Not yet, my Lord.
- Pomp.* Too long protract we all meanes to recouer
His person quick or dead, for I still thinke
His losse seru'd fate, before we blew retreat ;
Though some affirme him seene, soone after fighting.
- Dem.* Not after, Sir, (I heard) but ere it ended.
- Gab.* He bore a great minde to extend our pursuit
Much further then it was ; and seru'd that day
(When you had, like the true head of a battaile, Led all the body in that glorious turne)
Vpon a farre-off Squadron that stood fast
In conduct of the great Marc Anthony,
When all the rest were fled, so past a man
That in their tough receipt of him, I saw him
Thrice breake thorow all with ease, and passe as faire

As he had all beene fire, and they but ayre.

Pom. He stuck at last yet, in their midst, it seem'd.

Gab. So haue I seen a fire drake glide at midnight
Before a dying man to point his graue,
And in it flick and hide.

Dem. He comes yet safe.

A Trumpet sounds, and enters before Vibius, with others.

Pom. O Vibius, welcome, what a prisoner?
With mighty Cæsar, and so quickly ransom'd?

Vib. I Sir, my ransom, needed little time,
Either to gaine agreement for the value,
Or the disbursement, since in Cæsars grace
We both concluded.

Pom. Was his grace so free.

Vib. For your respect, Sir.

Pom. Nay, Sir, for his glory.

That the maine Conquest he so surely builds on,
(Which euer is forerun with petty fortunes)
Take not effect, by taking any friend
From all the most, my poore defence can make,
But must be compleat, by his perfect owne.

Vib. I know, Sir, you more nobly rate the freedome
He freely gaue your friend; then to peruert it
So past his wisdom: that knowes much too well
Th' vncertaine state of Conquest; to raise frames
Of such presumption on her fickle wings,
And chiefly in a losse so late, and grieuous,
Besides, your forces farre exceeding his,
His whole powers being but two and twenty thousand:
And yours full foure and fourty thousand strong:
For all which yet, he stood as farre from feare
In my enlargement, as the confident glory
You please to put on him; and had this end
In my so kinde dismissal, that as kindly
I might folicite a sure peace betwixt you.

Pom. A peace? Is't possible?

Vib. Come, doe not shew this wanton incredulity too.

Tom. Beleeue me I was farre from such a thought
In his high stomach : Cato prophecied then.
What thinke my Lords our Consuls, and friend Brutus?

Omn. An offer happy.

Bru. Were it plaine and hearty.

Pom. I, there's the true inspecton to his prospect.

Bru. This streight of his perhaps may need a fleight

Of some hid stratagem, to bring him off.

Pom. Deuices of a new fordge to entrap me ?
I rest in Cæsars shades ? walke his strow'd paths ?
Sleepe in his quiet waues ? Ile sooner trust
Hibernian Boggs, and quicksands ; and hell mouth
Take for my sanctuary : in bad parts
That no extreames will better, natures finger
Hath markt him to me, to take heed of him.
What thinks my Brutus ?

Bru. Tis your best and safest.

Pom. This offer'd peace of his is sure a snare
To make our warre the bloodier, whose fit feare
Makes me I dare not now (in thoughts maturer
Then late enclin'de me) put in vse the Counsaile
Your noble father Cato (parting) gaue me,
Whose much too tender shunning innocent blood,
This battaile hazards now, that must cost more.

1 Conf. It does, and therefore now no more de-ferre it.

Pom. Say all men so ?

Omn. We doe.

Pom. I grieue ye doe,
Because I rather wish to erre with Cato
Then with the truth goe of the world besides ;
But since it shall abide this other stroke,
Ye gods that our great Romane Genius
Haue made, not giue vs one dayes conquest only,
Nor grow in conquests for some little time,
As did the Genius of the Macedons ;

Nor be by land great only, like Laconians ;
 Nor yet by sea alone, as was th' Athenians ;
 Nor slowly stirr'd vp, like the Persian Angell ;
 Nor rockt asleepe foone, like the Ionian spirit.
 But made our Romane Genius, fiery, watchfull,
 And euen from Romes prime, ioynd his youth with hers,

Grow as she grew, and firme as earth abide,
 By her encreasing pomp, at sea, and shore,
 In peace, in battaile ; against Greece as well
 As our Barbarian foes ; command yet further
 Ye firme and iust gods, our assistfull Angell
 For Rome, and Pompey, who now fights for Rome ;
 That all these royall Lawes, to vs, and iustice
 Of common safety, may the selfe-loue drowne
 Of tyrannous Cæsar ; and my care for all
 Your Altars crown'd with endlesse festiuall. Exeunt.

Cæsar, Anthony, a Soothsayer, Crassinius, Acilius, with others.

Cæs. Say (sacred Southsayer) and informe the truth,
 What liking hast thou of our sacrifice ?

Sooth. Imperiall Cæsar, at your sacred charge,
 I drew a milke white Oxe into the Temple,
 And turning there his face into the east,
 (Fearefully shaking at the shining light)
 Downe fell his horned forehead to his hoofe,
 When I began to greet him with the stroke,
 That should prepare him for the holy rites,
 With hydeous roares he laid out such a throat
 As made the secret lurkings of the god
 To answer ecco-like, in threatning sounds :
 I stroke againe at him, and then he slept,
 His life-blood boyling out at euery wound
 In streames as cleare as any liquid Ruby,
 And there began to alter my presage,
 The other ill signes, shewing th'other fortune,
 Of your last skirmish, which farre opposite now

Proues, ill beginnings good euent foreflew.
 For now the beast cut vp, and laid on th' Altar,
 His lims were all lickt up with instant flames,
 Not like the Elementall fire that burnes
 In household vses, lamely struggling vp,
 This way and that way winding as it rifes,
 But (right and vpight) reacht his proper sphere
 Where burnes the fire eternall and sincere.

Cæs. And what may that presage ?

Sooth. That euen the spirit

Of heauens pure flame flew downe and raiisht vp
 Your offerings blaze in that religious instant,
 Which shewes th' alacritie and cheerefull virtue
 Of heauens free bounty, doing good in time,
 And with what swiftnesse true deuotions clime.

Omn. The gods be honor'd.

Sooth. O behold with wonder,

The sacred blaze is like a torch enlightned,
 Directly burning iust aboue your campe !

Omn. Miraculous.

Sooth. Beleeue it, with all thanks :

The Romane Genius is alterd now,
 And armes for Cæsar.

Cæs. Soothfayer be for euer

Reuerenc't of Cæsar. O Marc Anthony,
 I thought to raise my camp, and all my tents,
 Tooke downe for swift remotion to Scotuffa.
 Shall now our purpose hold ?

Anth. Against the gods ?

They grace in th' instant, and in th' instant we Must adde our parts, and be in th' vse as free.

Craff. See Sir, the scouts returne.

Enter two scouts.

Cæs. What newes, my friends ?

1 Scou. Arme, arme, my Lord, the voward of the foe

Is rang'd already.

2 Scou. Answer them, and arme :

You cannot set your rest of battell vp

In happier houre ; for I this night beheld
 A strange confusion in your enemies campe,
 The souldiers taking armes in all dismay,
 And hurling them againe as fast to earth.
 Euery way routing ; as th' alarme were then Giuen to their army. A most causelesse feare Disperst quite through them.

Cæs. Then twas Ioue himselte
 That with his secret finger stirr'd in them.

Crass. Other presages of successe (my Lord)
 Haue strangely hapn'd in the adiacent Cities,
 To this your army : for in Tralleis,
 Within a Temple, built to Victory,
 There stands a statue of your forme and name,
 Neare whose firme base, euen from the marble paue-
 ment,

There sprang a Palme tree vp, in this last night,
 That seemes to crowne your statue with his boughs,
 Spred in wrapt shadowes round about your browes.

Cæs. The signe, Crassinius, is most strange and gracefull,

Nor could get issue, but by power diuine ;
 Yet will not that, nor all abodes besides
 (Of neuer such kinde promise of successe)
 Performe it without tough acts of our owne.
 No care, no nerue the lesse to be emloid ;
 No offering to the gods, no vowes, no prayers :
 Secure and idle spirits neuer thriue
 When most the gods for their aduancements striue.
 And therefore tell me what abodes thou buildst on
 In any spirit to act, enflam'd in thee,
 Or in our Souldiers seene resolu'd addresses ?

Crass. Great and firy virtue. And this day
 Be sure (great Cæsar) of effects as great
 In absolute conquest ; to which are prepar'd
 Enforcements resolute, from this arm'd hand,
 Which thou shalt praise me for aliue or dead.

Cæs. Aliue (ye gods vouchsafe) and my true vowes
 For life in him (great heauen) for all my foes

(Being naturall Romans) fo farre ioyntly heare
As may not hurt our Conquest ; as with feare
Which thou already strangely haft diffusde
Through all their army ; which extend to flight
Without one bloody stroke of force and fight.

Cnth. Tis time, my Lord, you put in forme your battell.

Cæs. Since we must fight then, and no offerd peace
Will take with Pompey : I rejoyce to see
This long-time lookt for, and most happy day,
In which we now shall fight, with men, not hunger,
With toyles, not sweats of blood through yeares extended,

This one day seruing to decide all iarres
'Twixt me and Pompey. Hang out of my tent
My Crimsine coat of armes, to giue my fouldiers
That euer-fure signe of resolu'd-for fight.

Craff. These hands shall giue that signe to all their longings. Exit Craff.

Cæs. My Lord, my army, I thinke best to order
In three full Squadrons: of which let me pray
Your selfe would take on you the left wings charge ;
My selfe will lead the right wing, and my place
Of fight elect in my tenth legion :
My battell by Domitius Calvinus
Shall take direction.

The Cote of Armes is hung out, and the Souldiers shoute within.

An. Hearn, your fouldiers shoute
For ioy to see your bloody Cote of Armes
Affure their fight this morning.

Cæs. O blest Euen
Bring on them worthy comforts. And ye gods
Performe your good prefages in euent
Of fit crowne for our discipline, and deeds
Wrought vp by conquest ; that my vse of it
May wipe the hatefull and vnworthy flaine

Of Tyrant from my Temples, and exchange it
 For fautor of my Country, ye haue giuen
 That title to those poore and fearefull fowles
 That euery found puts vp, in frights and cryes ; Euen then, when all Romes powers were weake and heartles,

When traiterous fires, and fierce Barbarian swords,
 Rapines, and soule-expiring slaughters fild
 Her houfes, Temples, all her ayre, and earth.
 To me then (whom your bounties haue enform'd
 With such a spirit as despiseth feare ;
 Commands in either fortune, knowes, and armes
 Against the worst of fate ; and therefore can Dispose blest meanes, encourag'd to the best)
 Much more vouchsafe that honor ; chiefly now,
 When Rome wants only this dayes conquest giuen me
 To make her happy, to confirme the brightnesse
 That yet she shines in ouer all the world ;
 In Empire, riches, strife of all the Arts,
 In gifts of Cities, and of kingdomes sent her ;
 In Crownes laid at her feet, in euery grace
 That shores, and seas, floods, Islands, Continents, Groues, fields, hills, mines, and metals can produce ;
 All which I (victor) will encrease, I vow
 By all my good, acknowledg'd giuen by you.

Act IIII Scene I.

Pompey in haste, Brutus, Gabinius, Vibius following.

THe poyson steep't in euery vaine of Empire,
 In all the world, meet now in onely me,
 Thunder and lighten me to death ; and make
 My senses feed the flame, my soule the crack.

Was euer foueraigne Captaine of fo many Armies and Nations, fo opprest as I,
 With one hofts headstrong outrage ? vrging fight,
 Yet fly about my campe in panick terrors ;
 No reason vnder heauen fuggesting caufe.
 And what is this but euen the gods deterring
 My iudgement from enforcing fight this morne ?
 The new-fled night made day with Meteors,
 Fir'd ouer Cæsars campe, and falne in mine,
 As pointing out the terrible euent
 Yet in fuspence ; but where they threat their fall
 Speake not these prodigies with fiery tongues,
 And eloquence that should not moue but rauish
 All found mindes, from thus tempting the iust gods,
 And spitting out their faire premonishing flames
 With brackish rheumes of ruder and brainsick number,
 What's infinitely more, thus wild, thus mad
 For one poore fortune of a beaten few ;
 To halfe fo many staid, and dreadfull souldiers ?
 Long train'd, long foughten ? able, nimble, perfect
 To turne and winde aduantage euery way ?
 Encrease with little, and enforce with none ?
 Made bold as Lyons, gaunt as famisht wolues,
 With still-feru'd slaughters, and continuall toyles.

Bru. You should not, Sir, forsake your owne wife Counsell,

Your owne experienc't discipline, owne practise,
 Owne god-inspired insight to all changes,
 Of Protean fortune, and her zany, warre,
 For hofts, and hels of such ; What man will thinke
 The best of them, not mad ; to see them range
 So vp and downe your campe, already fuing
 For offices falne, by Cæsars built-on fall,
 Before one stroke be struck ? Domitius, Spinther,
 Your father Scipio now preparing friends
 For Cæsars place of vniversall Bishop ?
 Are you th'obserued rule, and voucht example ;
 Who euer would commend Physitians,
 That would not follow the diseaf'd desires

Of their sick patients ? yet incurre your selfe
The faults that you so much abhorre in others.

Pom. I cannot, Sir, abide mens open mouthes,
Nor be ill spoken of ; nor haue my counfels
And circumspections, turnd on me for feares,
With mocks and scandals that would make a man
Of lead, a lightning ; in the desperat'ft onfet
That euer trampled vnder death, his life.
I beare the touch of feare for all their safeties,
Or for mine owne ? enlarge with twice as many Selfe-liues, selfe-fortunes ? they shall sinke beneath
Their owne credulities, before I crosse them.
Come, haste, dispose our battaile.

Vib. Good my Lord,
Against your Genius warre not for the world.

Pom. By all worlds he that moues me next to beare
Their scofs and imputations of my feare
For any cause, shall beare this sword to hell.
Away, to battaile ; good my Lord lead you
The whole six thousand of our yong Patricians, Plac't in the left wing to enuiron Cæsar.
My father Scipio shall lead the battaile ;
Domitius the left wing ; I the right
Against Marc Anthony. Take now your files
Ye beastly doters on your barbarous wills.

Exeunt.

Alarمه, excursions, of al: The five Kings driuen ouer the Stage, Crassinius chiefly pursuing: At the dore enter againe the five Kings. The battell continued within.

Epir. Fly, fly, the day was lost before twas fought.

Theff. The Romans feard their shadowes.

Cil. Were there euer

Such monstrous confidences, as last night
Their Cups and musique shew'd ? Before the morning
Made such amazes ere one stroke was struck ?

Iber. It made great Pompey mad, which who could mend ?

The gods had hand in it.

Tra. It made the Confuls
Run on their swords to see't. The braue Patricians Fled with their spoyled faces, arrowes sticking
As shot from heauen at them.

Theff. Twas the charge
That Cæsar gaue against them.

Epir. Come, away,
Leaue all, and wonder at this fatall day.

Exeunt.

The fight neerer ; and enter, Crassineus, a sword, as thrust through his face ; he falls. To him Pompey and Cæsar fighting : Pompey giues way, Cæsar follows, and enters at another dore.

Cæs. Pursue, pursue ; the gods foreshew'd their powers,
Which we gaue issue, and the day is ours.
Crassineus? O looke vp : he does, and shewes
Death in his broken eyes ; which Cæsars hands
Shall doe the honor of eternall closure.
Too well thou keptst thy word, that thou this day
Wouldst doe me seruice to our victory,
Which in thy life or death I should behold,
And praise thee for ; I doe, and must admire
Thy matchles valour ; euer euer rest
Thy manly lineaments, which in a tombe
Erected to thy noble name and virtues,
Ile curiously preferue with balmes, and spices,
In eminent place of these Pharfalian fields,
Inscrib'd with this true soule of funerall.

Epitaph :

*Crassineus fought for fame, and died for Rome,
Whose publique weale springs from this priuate tombe.*

Enter some taking him off, whom Cæsar helps.

Cæsar and Pompey. 169

Enter Pompey, Demetrius, with black robes in their hands, broad hats, &c.

Pom. Thus haue the gods their iustice, men their wils,
And I, by mens wils rulde ; my selfe renouncing,
Am by my Angell and the gods abhorr'd ;
Who drew me, like a vapour, vp to heauen
To dash me like a tempest 'gainst the earth :
O the deserued terrors that attend
On humane confidence ! had euer men
Such outrage of presumption to be victors
Before they arm'd ? To fend to Rome before
For houses neare the market place, their tents
Strowd all with flowers, and nosegayes ; tables couer'd
With cups and banquets ; bayes and mirtle garlands,
As ready to doe sacrifice for conquest
Rather then arme them for fit fight t'enforc it ;
Which when I saw, I knew as well th' euent
As now I feele it, and because I rag'd
In that presage, my Genius shewing me clearely
(As in a mirror) all this curst issue ;
And therefore vrg'd all meanes to put it off
For this day, or from these fields to some other,
Or from this ominous confidence, till I saw
Their spirits fettl'd in some grauer knowledge
Of what belong'd to such a deare decision ;
They spotted me with feare, with loue of glory,
To keepe in my command so many Kings,
So great an army ; all the hellish blastings
That could be breath'd on me, to strike me blinde
Of honor, spirit and soule : And should I then
Saue them that would in spight of heauen be ruinde ?
And, in their safeties ruine me and mine
In euerlasting rage of their detraction.

Dem. Vour safety and owne honor did deserue Respect past all their values ; O my Lord
Would you ?

Pom. Vpbraid me not ; goe to, goe on.

Dem. No ; Ile not rub the wound. The misery is,
The gods for any error in a man (Which they might rectify, and should ; because That man maintain'd the right) should suffer wrong
To be thus insolent, thus grac't, thus blest ?

Pom. O the strange carriage of their acts, by which Men order theirs ; and their deuotions in them ;
Much rather striving to entangle men
In pathlesse error, then with regular right
Confirme their reasons, and their pieties light.
For now Sir, whatfoeuer was foreshowne
By heauen, or prodigy ; ten parts more for vs,
Forewarning vs, deterring vs, and all
Our blinde and brainlesse frenzies, then for Cæsar ;
All yet will be ascribed to his regard
Giuen by the gods for his good parts, preferring
Their glosse (being starck impostures) to the iustice,
Loue, honor, piety, of our lawes and Countrey.
Though I thinke these are arguments enow
For my acquittall, that for all these fought.

Dem. Y'are cleare, my Lord.

Pom. Gods helpe me, as I am ;
What euer my vntoucht command of millions
Through all my eight and fifty yeares, hath woonne,
This one day (in the worlds esteeme) hath lost.
So vile is praise and dispraise by euent.
For I am still my felfe in euery worth
The world could grace me with, had this dayes Euen
In one blaze ioyn'd, with all my other Conquests.
And shall my comforts in my well-knowne felfe
Faile me for their false fires, Demetrius ?

Dem. O no, my Lord.

Pom. Take grieffe for them, as if
The rotten-hearted world could steepe my foule
In filthy putrification of their owne ?
Since their applauses faile me ? that are hisses
To euery found acceptance ? I confesse,
That till th' affaire was past, my passions flam'd,
But now tis helplesse, and no cause in me,

Rest in these embers my vnmoued foule,
 With any outward change, this dystick minding ;
 No man should more allow his owne losse, woes,
 (Being past his fault) then any stranger does.
 And for the worlds false loues, and ayry honors,
 What foule that euer lou'd them most in life,
 (Once feuer'd from this breathing sepulchre)
 Againe came and appearde in any kind
 Their kinde admirer still, or did the state
 Of any best man here, associate ?
 And euer true foule should be here so feuer'd
 From loue of such men, as here drowne their foules
 As all the world does ? Cato sole accepted,
 To whom Ile fly now, and my wife in way (Poore Lady, and poore children, worse then fatherleffe)
 Vifit, and comfort. Come Demetrius, They disguise themselues.
 We now must sute our habites to our fortunes
 And since these changes euer chance to greatest.
 Nor desire to be (Doe fortune, to exceed it, what she can)
 A Pompey, or a Cæfar, but a man. Exeunt.

Enter Cæfar, Anthony, Acilius, with souldiers.

Cæf. O We haue flaine, not conquerd, Roman blood
 Peruersts th' euent, and desperate blood let out
 With their owne swords. Did euer men before Enuy their owne liues, since another liu'd
 Whom they would willfully conceiue their foe,
 And forge a Tyrant merely in their feares
 To iustifie their slaughters ? Consuls ? furies.

Ant. Be, Sir, their faults their griefes ! The greater number
 Were only slaues, that left their bloods to ruth,
 And altogether, but six thousand flaine.

Cæf. How euer many ; gods and men can witnesse Themselues enforc't it, much against the most

I could enforce on Pompey for our peace.
 Of all flaine, yet, if Brutus only liu'd,
 I should be comforted, for his life sau'd
 Would weigh the whole six thousand that are lost.
 But much I feare his death, because the battell
 Full stricken now, he yet abides vnfound.

Acil. I saw him fighting neare the battels end,
 But suddainly giue off, as bent to fly.

Enter Brutus.

Anth. He comes here, see Sir.

Bru. I submit to Cæsar
 My life and fortunes.

Cæf. A more welcome fortune
 Is Brutus, then my conquest.

Bru. Sir, I fought
 Against your conquest, and your selfe ; and merit
 (I must acknowledge) a much sterner welcome.

Cæf. You fought with me, Sir, for I know your armes

Were taken for your Country, not for Pompey :
 And for my Country I fought, nothing lesse
 Then he, or both the mighty-stomak't Consuls ;
 Both whom (I heare) haue flaine themselues before
 They would enioy life in the good of Cæsar.
 But I am nothing worfe, how ill foeuer
 They, and the great authority of Rome
 Would faine enforce me by their mere suspitions.
 Lou'd they their Country better then her Brutus ?
 Or knew what fitted nobleffe, and a Romane
 With freer souls then Brutus. Those that liue
 Shall see in Cæsars iustice, and what euer
 Might make me worthy both their liues and loues,
 That I haue lost the one without my merit,
 And they the other with no Roman spirit.
 Are you empair'd to liue, and ioy my loue ?
 Only requite me, Brutus, loue but Cæsar,
 And be in all the powers of Cæsar, Cæsar.
 In which free wish, I ioyne your father Cato ;

For whom Ile haste to Vtica, and pray
His loue may strengthen my successe to day. Exeunt.

Porcius in haste, Marcillius bare, following. Porcius discouers a bed, and a sword hanging by it which he takes downe.

Mar. To what vse take you that (my Lord ?)

Por. Take you

No note that I take it, nor let any seruant, Besides your selfe, of all my fathers nearest,
Serue any mood he serues, with any knowledge
Of this or any other. Cæsar comes
And giues his army wings to reach this towne.
Not for the townes sake, but to faue my father.
Whom iustly he suspects to be resolu'd
Of any violence to his life, before
He will preferue it by a Tyrants fauour.
For Pompey hath miscarried, and is fled.
Be true to me, and to my fathers life ;
And doe not tell him ; nor his fury serue
With any other.

Mar. I will dye, my Lord,
Ere I obserue it.

Por. O my Lord and father.

*Cato, Athenodorus, Statilius.
Cato with a booke in his hand.*

Cat. What feares fly here on all sides ? what wilde lookes
Are squinted at me from mens mere suspicions
That I am wilde my selfe, and would enforce
What will be taken from me by the Tyrant.

Ath. No : Would you only aske life, he would thinke

His owne life giuen more strength in giuing yours

Cat. I aske my life of him ?

Stat. Aske what's his owne ?

Of him he scornes should haue the least drop in it
At his disposure.

Cat. No, Statilius.

Men that haue forfeit liues by breaking lawes,
Or haue beene ouercome, may beg their liues,
But I haue euer beene in euery iustice
Better then Cæsar, and was neuer conquer'd,
Or made to fly for life, as Cæsar was.
But haue beene victor euer, to my wish,
Gainst whomsoever euer hath opposde ;
Where Cæsar now is conquer'd in his Conquest,
In the ambition, he til now denide ;
Taking vpon him to giue life, when death
Is tenfold due to his most tyrannous selfe.
No right, no power giuen him to raise an army,
Which in despight of Rome he leades about Slaughtering her loyall subiects, like an outlaw, Nor is he better. Tongue, shew, falshood are,
To bloodiest deaths his parts so much admir'd,
Vaineglory, villany ; and at best you can,
Fed with the parings of a worthy man.
My fame affirme my life receiu'd from him ?
Ile rather make a beast my second father.

Stat. The gods auert from euery Roman minde
The name of slaue to any Tyrants power.
Why was man euer iust, but to be free,
'Gainst all iniustice ? and to beare about him
As well all meanes to freedome euery houre,
As euery houre he should be arm'd for death,
Which only is his freedome ?

Ath. But Statilius

Death is not free for any mans election,
Till nature, or the law, impose it on him.

Cat. Must a man goe to law then, when he may Enioy his owne in peace ? If I can vse
Mine owne my selfe, must I of force, referue it
To serue a Tyrant with it ? All iust men
Not only may enlarge their liues, but must,
From all rule tyrannous, or liue vniust.

Ath. By death must they enlarge their liues ?

Cat. By death.

Ath. A man's not bound to that.

Cat. Ile proue he is.

Are not the liues of all men bound to iustice ?

Ath. They are.

Cat. And therefore not to serue iniustice :
Iustice it selfe ought euer to be free,
And therefore euery iust man being a part
Of that free iustice, should be free as it.

Ath. Then wherefore is there law for death ?

Cat. That all

That know not what law is, nor freely can Performe the fitting iustice of a man
In kingdomes common good, may be enforc't.
But is not euery iust man to him selfe
The perfect't law ?

Ath. Suppose.

Cat. Then to himselfe

Is euery iust mans life subordinate.
Againe, Sir ; Is not our free soule infus'd
To euery body in her absolute end
To rule that body ? in which absolute rule
Is she not absolutely Empreffe of it ?
And being Empreffe, may she not dispose
It, and the life in it, at her iust pleasure ?

Ath. Not to destroy it.

Cat. No ; she not destroyes it
When she disliues it ; that their freedoms may Goe firme together, like their powers and organs,
Rather then let it liue a rebell to her,
Prophaning that diuine coniunction
Twixt her and it ; nay, a disjunction making Betwixt them worse then death ; in killing quick
That which in iust death liues : being dead to her
If to her rule dead, and to her aliue,
If dying in her iust rule.

Ath. The body liues not
When death hath rest it.

Cat. Yet tis free, and kept
Fit for reiuñtion in mans second life ;
Which dying rebell to the soule, is farre
Vnfit to ioyne with her in perfect life.

Ath. It shall not ioyne with her againe.

Cat. It shall.

Ath. In reason shall it ?

Cat. In apparant reason ;
Which Ile proue clearely.

Stat. Heare, and iudge it Sir.

Cat. As nature works in all things to an end,
So in th' appropriate honor of that end,
All things precedent haue their naturall frame ;
And therefore is there a proportion
Betwixt the ends of those things and their primes :
For else there could not be in their creation,
Alwayes, or for the most part, that firme forme
In their still like existence ; that we see
In each full creature. What proportion then Hath an immortall with a mortall substance ?
And therefore the mortality to which
A man is subiect ; rather is a sleepe,
Then bestiall death ; since sleepe and death are call'd
The twins of nature. For if absolute death
And bestiall fease the body of a man,
Then is there no proportion in his parts,
His soule being free from death, which otherwise
Retaines diuine proportion. For as sleepe
No disproportion holds with humane soules,
But aptly quickens the proportion
Twixt them and bodies, making bodies fitter
To giue vp formes to soules, which is their end :
So death (twin-borne of sleepe) resoluing all
Mans bodies heauy parts ; in lighter nature
Makes a reunion with the spritely soule ;
When in a second life their beings giuen,
Holds this proportion firme, in highest heauen.

Ath. Hold you our bodies shall reuiue, resumming
Our soules againe to heauen ?

Cat. Past doubt, though others
 Thinke heauen a world too high for our low reaches.
 Not knowing the sacred fence of him that sings,
Ioue can let downe a golden chaine from heauen,
 Which tyed to earth, shall fetch vp earth and seas ;
 And what's that golden chaine, but our pure foules,
 A golden beame of him, let downe by him,
 That gouern'd with his grace, and drawne by him,
 Can hoist this earthy body vp to him,
 The sea, and ayre, and all the elements
 Comprest in it : not while tis thus concret,
 But fin'd by death, and then giuen heauenly heat.

Ath. Your happy exposition of that place (Whose sacred depth I neuer heard so founded)
 Euiçts glad grant from me you hold a truth.

Stat. Is't not a manly truth, and mere diuine ?

Cat. Tis a good chearefull doctrine for good men.
 But (sonne and seruants) this is only argu'd
 To spend our deare time well, and no life vrgeth
 To any violence further then his owner
 And grauer men hold fit. Lets talke of Cæsar, He's the great subiect of all talke, and he Is hotly hasting on. Is supper ready ?

Mar. It is, my Lord.

Cat. Why then let's in and eat ;
 Our coole submission will quench Cæsars heat.

Sta. Submission ? here's for him.

Cat. Statilius,
 My reasons must not strengthen you in error,
 Nor learn'd Athenodorus gentle yeelding.
 Talke with some other deepe Philosophers.
 Or some diuine Priest of the knowing gods,
 And heare their reasons, in meane time come sup.

Exeunt.

*Cato going out arme in arme
 betwixt Athen. and Statilius.*

Act V. Scene I.

*Enter Vshers, with the two Lentuli, and Septimius before Cornelia; Cyris, Telefilla, Lælia, Drufus, with others, following, Cornelia, Septimius
and the two Lentuli reading letters.*

Cor. So may my comforts for this good newes
thriue
As I am thankfull for them to the Gods.
Ioyes vnexpected, and in desperate plight,
Are still most sweet, and proue from whence they come ;
When earths still Moonelike confidence, in ioy,
Is at her full. True ioy descending farre
From past her sphere, and from that highest heauen
That moues and is not mou'd : how farre was I
From hope of these euent, when fearefull dreames
Of Harpies tearing out my heart ? of armies
Terribly ioyning ? Cities, kingdomes falling,
And all on me ? prou'd sleepe, not twin to death,
But to me, death it selfe ? yet waking then,
These letters ; full of as much chearefull life,
I found closde in my hand. O gods how iustly
Ye laugh at all things earthly ? at all feares
That rise not from your iudgements ? at all ioyes,
Not drawne directly from your selues, and in ye,
Distrust in man is faith, trust in him ruine.
Why write great learned men ? men merely rapt
With sacred rage, of confidence, beleefe ?
Vndanted spirits ? inexorable fate
And all feare treading on ? tis all but ayre,
If any comfort be, tis in despaire.

1 Len. You learned Ladies may hold any thing.

2 Lent. Now madam is your walk from coach come neare

The promontory, where you late commanded
A Sentinell should stand to see from thence
If either with a nauy, brought by sea,
Or traine by land ; great Pompey comes to greet you
As in your letters, he neare this time promisde.

Cor. O may this Isle of Lesbos, compast in
With the Ægean sea, that doth diuide Europe from Asia. (The fweet literate world
From the Barbarian) from my barbarous dreames
Diuide my dearest husband and his fortunes.

2 Len. He's busied now with ordering offices.
By this time, madam, sits your honor'd father ^{He looks}
In Cæsars chaire of vniuerfall Bishop. _{in his letter.}
Domitius Ænobarbas, is made Confull, Spynter his Consort ; and Phaonius
Tribune, or Pretor.

Septimius with a letter.

Sep. These were only fought
Before the battaile, not obtaind ; nor mouing
My father but in shadowes.

Corn. Why should men
Tempt fate with such firme confidence ? seeking places
Before the power that should dispose could grant
them ?
For then the stroke of battaile was not struck.

1 Len. Nay, that was sure enough. Physitians know
When sick mens eyes are broken, they must dye.
Your letters telling you his victory
Loft in the skirmish, which I know hath broken
Both the eyes and heart of Cæsar : for as men
Healthfull through all their liues to grey-hayr'd age,
When sicknesse takes them once, they feldom scape :
So Cæsar victor in his general fights

Till this late skirmish, could no aduerse blow
Sustaine without his vtter ouerthrow.

2 Lent. See, madam, now ; your Sentinell : enquire.

Cor. Seeft thou no fleet yet (Sentinell) nor traine
That may be thought great Pompeys ?

Sen. Not yet, madame.

1 Lent. Seeft thou no trauellers adrest this way ?
In any number on this Lesbian shore ?

Sent. I see some not worth note ; a couple comming
This way, on foot, that are not now farre hence.

2 Lent. Come they apace ? like messengers with newes ?

Sent. No, nothing like (my Lord) nor are their habites

Of any such mens fashions ; being long mantles,
And fable hew'd ; their heads all hid in hats
Of parching Theffaly, broad brimm'd, high crown'd.

Cor. These serue not our hopes.

Sent. Now I see a ship,

A kenning hence ; that strikes into the hauen.

Cor. One onely ship ?

Sen. One only, madam, yet.

Cor. That should not be my Lord.

1 Lent. Your Lord ? no madam.

Sen. She now lets out arm'd men vpon the land.

2 Lent. Arm'd men ? with drum and colours ?

Sen. No, my Lord,

But bright in armes, yet beare halfe pikes, or beadhookes.

1 Lent. These can be no plumes in the traine of Pompey.

Cor. Ile see him in his letter, once againe.

Sen. Now, madam, come the two I saw on foot.

Enter Pompey and Demetrius.

Dem. See your Princesse, Sir, come thus farre from the City in her coach, to encounter your promise comming

About this time in your last letters.

Pom. The world is alter'd since Demetrius ; (offer to goe by.

I Lent. See, madam, two Theffalian Augurs it feemes

By their habits. Call, and enquire if either by their Skils or trauels, they know no newes of your husband.

Cor. My friends ? a word.

Dem. With vs, madam ?

Cor. Yes. Are you of Theffaly ?

Dem. I, madam, and all the world besides.

Cor. Your Country is great.

Dem. And our portions little.

Cor. Are you Augures ?

Dem. Augures madam? yes a kinde of Augures, alias Wizerds, that goe vp and downe the world, teaching
How to turne ill to good.

Cor. Can you doe that ?

Dem. I, madam, you haue no worke for vs, haue
you ?

No ill to turne good, I meane ?

Cor. Yes ; the absence of my husband.

Dem. What's he ?

Cor. Pompey the great.

Dem. Wherein is he great ?

Cor. In his command of the world.

Dem. Then he's great in others. Take him without his

Addition (great) what is he then ?

Cor. Pompey.

Dem. Not your husband then ?

Cor. Nothing the lesse for his greatnesse.

Dem. Not in his right ; but in your comforts he is.

Cor. His right is my comfort.

Dem. What's his wrong ?

Cor. My sorrow.

Dem. And that's ill.

Cor. Yes.

Dem. Y'are come to the vse of our Profession,
madam,

Would you haue that ill turnd good ? that Sorrow turnd comfort ?

Cor. Why is my Lord wrong'd ?

Cor. We professe not that knowledge, madam :
Supose he were.

Cor. Not I.

Dem. Youle suppose him good.

Cor. He is so.

Dem. Then must you needs suppose him wrong'd ;
for

All goodnesse is wrong'd in this world.

Cor. What call you wrong ?

Dem. Ill fortune, affliction.

Cor. Thinke you my Lord afflicted ?

Dem. If I thinke him good (madam) I must. Vnlesse he

Be worldly good, and then, either he is ill, or has ill :
Since, as no sugar is without poyson : so is no worldly
Good without ill. Euen naturally nourisht in it, like a Houhold thiefe, which is the worst of all theeues.

Cor. Then he is not worldly, but truly good.

Dem. He's too great to be truly good ; for worldly greatnes

Is the chiefe worldly goodnesse ; and all worldly goodnesse

(I prou'd before) has ill in it : which true good has not.

Cor. If he rule well with his greatnesse ; wherein is he ill ?

Dem. But great Rulers are like Carpenters that weare their

Rules at their backs still : and therefore to make good your

True good in him, y'ad better suppose him little, or meane.

For in the meane only is the true good.

Pom. But euey great Lady must haue her husband
Great still, or her loue will be little.

Cor. I am none of those great Ladyes.

Len. She's a Philosophresse Augure, and can turne

Ill to good as well as you.

Pom. I would then, not honor, but adore her :
could you

Submit your selfe chearefully to your husband,

Supposing him false ?

Cor. If he submit himselfe chearfully to his fortune.

Pom. 'Tis the greatest greatnes in the world you vndertake.

Cor. I would be so great, if he were.

Pom. In supposition.

Cor. In fact.

Pom. Be no woman, but a Goddesse then ; & make good thy greatnesse ;

I am chearfully false ; be chearfull.

Cor. I am : and welcome, as the world were clofde
In these embraces.

Pom. Is it possible ?

A woman, losing greatnesse, still as good,

As at her greatest ? O gods, was I euer

Great till this minute ?

Amb. Len. Pompey ?

Pom. View me better.

Amb. Len. Conquerd by Cæsar ?

Pom. Not I, but mine army.

No fault in me, in it : no conquest of me :

I tread this low earth as I trod on Cæsar.

Must I not hold my selfe, though lose the world ?

Nor lose I lesse ; a world lost at one clap,

'Tis more then Ioue euer thundred with.

What glory is it to haue my hand hurle

So vast a volley through the groning ayre ?

And is't not great, to turne griefes thus to ioyes,

That breake the hearts of others ?

Amb. Len. O tis Ioue-like.

Pom. It is to imitate Ioue, that from the wounds
Of softest clouds, beats vp the terriblest founds.

I now am good, for good men still haue leaft,
That twixt themfelues and God might rise their reft.

Cor. O Pompey, Pompey : neuer Great till now.

Pom. O my Cornelia : let vs still be good,
And we fhall still be great : and greater farre
In euery folid grace, then when the tumor
And bile of rotten obseruation fweld vs.
Griefes for wants outward, are without our cure,
Greatneffe, not of it felfe, is neuer fure.
Before, we went vpon heauen, rather treading
The virtues of it vnderfoot, in making
The vicious world our heauen ; then walking there
Euen here, as knowing that our home ; contemning
All forg'd heauens here raifde ; fetting hills on hills.
Vulcan from heauen fell, yet on's feet did light,
And flood no leffe a god then at his height ;
At loweft, things lye faft ; we now are like
The two Poles propping heauen, on which heauen moues ;

And they are fixt, and quiet, being aboute
All motion farre ; we reft aboute the heauens.

Cor. O, I more ioy, t'embrace my Lord thus fixt,
Then he had brought me ten inconstant conquests.

Len. Miraculous standing in a fall fo great,
Would Cæſar knew Sir, how you conquerd him
In your conuiction.

Pom. Tis enough for me
That Pompey knows it. I will ſtand no more
On others legs : nor build one ioy without me.
If euer I be worth a houſe againe,
Ile build all inward : not a light ſhall ope
The common outway : no expence, no art,
No ornament, no dore will I vſe there,
But raife all plaine, and rudely, like a rampier,
Againſt the falſe ſociety of men
That ſtill batters
All reaſon peecemeale. And for earthy greatneſſe
All heavenly comforts rarifies to ayre,
Ile therefore liue in darke, and all my light,

Like Ancient Temples, let in at my top.
 This were to turne ones back to all the world,
 And only looke at heauen. Empedocles
 Recur'd a mortall plague through all his Country,
 With stopping vp the yawning of a hill,
 From whence the hollow and vnwholfome South
 Exhald his venomd vapor. And what else
 Is any King, given ouer to his lusts,
 But euen the poyfon'd cleft of that crackt mountaine,
 That all his kingdome plagues with his example ?
 Which I haue stopt now, and so cur'd my Country
 Of such a sensuall pestilence :
 When therefore our diseaf'de affections
 Harmefull to humane freedome ; and stormelike
 Inferring darknesse to th' infected minde Oppresse our comforts : tis but letting in
 The light of reason, and a purer spirit,
 Take in another way ; like roomes that fight
 With windowes gainst the winde, yet let in light.

Amb. Len. My Lord, we seru'd before, but now adore you.

Sen. My Lord, the arm'd men I discou'rd lately
 Vnshipt, and landed ; now are trooping neare.

Pom. What arm'd men are they ?

Len. Some, my Lord, that lately
 The Sentinell discover'd, but not knew.

Sen. Now all the sea (my Lords) is hid with ships, Another Promontory flanking this,
 Some furlong hence, is climb'd, and full of people,
 That easily may see hither ; it seemes looking
 What these so neare intend : Take heed, they come.

Enter Achilles, Septius, Saluius, with souldiers.

Arch. Haile to Romes great Commander ; to whom Ægypt
 (Not long since seated in his kingdome by thee,
 And sent to by thee in thy passage by)
 Sends vs with answer : which withdraw and heare.

Pom. Ile kiffe my children first.

Sep. Blessè me, my Lord.

Pom. I will, and Cyris, my poore daughter too.
Euen that high hand that hurld me downe thus low,
Keepe you from rising high : I heare : now tell me.
I thinke (my friend) you once seru'd vnder me :

Septius only nods with his head.

Pom. Nod onely ? not a word daigne ? what are these ?

Cornelia ? I am now not worth mens words.

Ach. Please you receiue your ayde, Sir ?

Pom. I, I come.

Exit Pom. They draw and follow.

Cor. Why draw they ? See, my Lords ; attend them vfhers.

Sen. O they haue flaine great Pompey.

Cor. O my husband.

Sept. Cyr. Mother, take comfort.

Enter Pompey bleeding.

O my Lord and father.

Pom. See heauens your sufferings, is my Countries
loue,

The iustice of an Empire ; pietie ;
Worth this end in their leader : last yet life
And bring the gods off fairer : after this
Who will adore, or serue the deities ?

He hides his face with his robe.

Enter the Murtherers.

Ach. Helpe hale him off : and take his head for Cæsar.

Sep. Mother ? O saue us ; Pompey ? O my father.

Enter the two Lentuli and Demetrius bleeding, and kneele about Cornelia.

1 Len. Yet fals not heauen ? Madam, O make good

Your late great spirits ; all the world will fay,
 You know not how to beare aduerse euent,
 If now you languish.

Omn. Take her to her coach.

They beare her out.

Cato with a booke in his hand.

O Beastly apprehenders of things manly,
 And merely heauenly : they with all the reasons
 I vse for iust mens liberties, to beare
 Their liues and deaths vp in their owne free hands ;
 Feare still my resolution though I feeme
 To giue it off like them : and now am woonne
 To thinke my life in lawes rule, not mine owne,
 When once it comes to death ; as if the law
 Made for a sort of outlawes, must bound me
 In their subiection ; as if I could
 Be rackt out of my vaines, to liue in others ;
 As so I must, if others rule my life ;
 And publique power keepe all the right of death,
 As if men needs must serue the place of iustice ;
 The forme, and idoll, and renounce it selfe ?
 Our selues, and all our rights in God and goodnesse ?
 Our whole contents and freedoms to dispose,
 All in the ioyes and wayes of arrant rogues ?
 No stay but their wilde errors, to sustaine vs ?
 No forges but their throats to vent our breaths ?
 To forme our liues in, and repose our deaths ?
 See, they haue got my sword. Who's there ?

Enter Marcillius bare.

Mar. My Lord.

at. Who tooke my sword hence ? Dumb ? I doe not aske

For any vse or care of it : but hope
 I may be answered. Goe Sir, let me haue it.

Exit Mar.

Poore slaues, how terrible this death is to them ?
 If men would sleepe, they would be wroth with all
 That interrupt them : Phyfick take to take
 The golden rest it brings : both pay and pray
 For good, and foundest naps : all friends confenting
 In those kinde inuocations ; praying all
 Good rest, the gods vouchsafe you ; but when death (Sleepes naturall brother) comes ; (that's nothing
 worfe,

But better ; being more rich ; and keeps the store ;
 Sleepe euer fickle, wayward still, and poore)
 O how men grudge, and shake, and feare, and fly
 His sterne approaches ? all their comforts taken
 In faith, and knowledge of the blisse and beauties
 That watch their wakings in an endlesse life :
 Dround in the paines and horrors of their sense
 Sustainde but for an houre ; be all the earth
 Rapt with this error, Ile pursue my reason,
 And hold that as my light and fiery pillar,
 Th' eternall law of heauen and earth no firmer.
 But while I seeke to conquer conquering Cæsar,
 My soft-splen'd seruants ouerrule and curb me.

He knocks, and Brutus enters.

Where's he I sent to fetch and place my sword
 Where late I left it ? Dumb to ? Come another !

Enter Cleanthes.

Where's my sword hung here ?

Cle. My Lord, I know not.

Ent. Marcilius.

Cat. The rest, come in there. Where's the sword
 I charg'd you

To giue his place againe ? Ile breake your lips ope, Spight of my freedome ; all my seruants, friends ;
 My sonne and all, will needs betray me naked
 To th' armed malice of a foe so fierce
 And Beare-like, mankinde of the blood of virtue.
 O gods, who euer saw me thus contemn'd ?
 Goe call my sonne in ; tell him, that the lesse
 He shewes himselfe my sonne, the lesse Ile care
 To liue his father.

Enter Athenodorus, Porcius : Porcius kneeling; Brutus, Cleanthes and Marcilius by him.

Por. I beseech you, Sir,
Rest patient of my duty, and my loue ;
Your other children think on, our poore mother,
Your family, your Country.

Cat. If the gods
Giue ouer all, Ile fly the world with them.

Athenodorus, I admire the changes,
I note in heauenly prouidence. When Pompey
Did all things out of course, past right, past reason,
He stood inuincible against the world :
Yet, now his cares grew pious, and his powers
Set all vp for his Countrey, he is conquered.

Ath. The gods wills secret are, nor must we measure
Their chaft-referued deepes by our dry shallowes.
Sufficeth vs, we are entirely such
As twixt them and our consciences we know
Their graces, in our virtues, shall present
Vnspotted with the earth ; to'th high throne
That ouerlookes vs : for this gyant world
Let's not contend with it, when heauen it selfe Failes to reforme it : why should we affect
The least hand ouer it, in that ambition ?
A heape tis of digested villany ;
Virtue in labor with eternall Chaos
Prest to a liuing death, and rackt beneath it.
Her throwes vnpietied ; euery worthy man
Limb by limb sawne out of her virgine wombe,
To liue here peecemeall tortur'd, fly life then ;
Your life and death made presidents for men. Exit.

Cat. Ye heare (my masters) what a life this is,
And vse much reason to respect it so.
But mine shall serue ye. Yet restore my sword,
Lest too much ye presume, and I conceiue
Ye front me like my fortunes. Where's Statilius?

Por. I think Sir, gone with the three hundred Romans
In Lucius Cæfars charge, to ferue the victor.

Cat. And would not take his leaue of his poore
friend ?

Then the Philosophers haue stoop't his spirit,
Which I admire, in one so free, and knowing,
And such a fiery hater of base life,
Besides, being such a vow'd and noted foe
To our great Conqueror. But I aduifde him
To spare his youth, and liue.

Por. My brother Brutus
Is gone to Cæfar.

Cat. Brutus? Of mine honor
(Although he be my fonne in law) I must fay
There went as worthy, and as learned a Prefident
As liues in Romes whole rule, for all lifes actions ;
And yet your sifter Porcia (his wife)
Would scarce haue done this. But (for you my sonne)
Howeuer Cæfar deales with me ; be counfaielde
By your experienc't father, not to touch
At any action of the publique weale,
Nor any rule beare neare her politique sterne :
For, to be vpright, and sincere therein
Like Catos sonne, the times corruption
Will neuer beare it : and, to sooth the time,
You shall doe basely, and vnworthy your life ;
Which, to the gods I wish, may outweigh mine
In euery virtue ; howfoeuer ill
You thriue in honor.

Por. I, my Lord, shall gladly
Obey that counfell.

Cat. And what needed you
Vrge my kinde care of any charge that nature
Imposes on me ? haue I euer showne
Loues least defect to you ? or any dues
The most indulgent father (being discreet)
Could doe his dearest blood ? doe you me right
In iudgement, and in honor ; and dispence

With passionate nature : goe, neglect me not,
But send my sword in. Goe, tis I that charge you.

Cor. O my Lord, and father, come, aduise me.

Exeunt.

Cat. What haue I now to thinke on in this world?
No one thought of the world, I goe each minute
Discharg'd of all cares that may fit my freedome.
The next world, and my foule, then let me serue
With her last vtterance ; that my body may
With sweetnesse of the passage drowne the fowre
That death will mix with it : the Consuls foules
That flew themselues so nobly, scorning life
Led vnder Tyrants Scepters, mine would see.
For we shall know each other ; and past death
Retaine those formes of knowledge learn'd in life ;
Since, if what here we learne, we there shall lose,
Our immortality were not life, but time.
And that our foules in reason are immortall,
Their naturall and proper obiects proue ;
Which immortality and knowledge are.
For to that obiect euer is referr'd
The nature of the foule, in which the acts
Of her high faculties are still employde.
And that true obiect must her powers obtaine
To which they are in natures aime directed.
Since twere absurd to haue her set an obiect
Which possibly she neuer can aspire.

Enter a Page with his sword taken out before.

Pag. Your sword, my Lord.

Cat. O is it found ? lay downe Vpon the bed (my boy) Exit Pa. Poore men ; a boy
Must be presenter ; manhood at no hand
Must serue so foule a fact ; for so are calde
(In common mouths) mens fairest acts of all.
Vnsheath ; is't sharpe ? tis sweet. Now I am safe,
Come Cæsar, quickly now, or lose your vassall.

Now wing thee, deare foule, and receiue her heauen.
The earth, the ayre, and seas I know, and all
The ioyes, and horrors of their peace and warres,
And now will see the gods state, and the starres.

*He falls upon his sword, and enter Statilius at another side of the Stage with his sword
drawne, Porcius, Brutus, Cleanthes and Marcilius holding his hands.*

Stat. Cato? my Lord?

Por. I sweare (Statilius)

He's forth, and gone to seeke you, charging me
To seeke elsewhere, lest you had flaine your selfe;
And by his loue entreated you would liue.

Sta. I sweare by all the gods, Ile run his fortunes.

Por. You may, you may; but shun the victor now,
Who neare is, and will make vs all his slaues.

Sta. He shall himselfe be mine first, and my slaues.
Exit.

Por. Looke, looke in to my father, O (I feare)
He is no fight for me to beare and liue. Exit.

Omn. 3. O ruthfull spectacle?

Cle. He hath ript his entrals.

Bru. Search, searce; they may be found.

Cle. They may, and are.

Giue leaue, my Lord, that I may see them vp
Being yet vnperisht.

Ca. Stand off; now they are He thrusts him back not. & plucks out his entrals.

Have he my curse that my lifes least part faues.
Iust men are only free, the rest are slaues.

Bru. Myrror of men.

Mar. The gods enuied his goodnesse.

Enter Cæsar, Anthony, Brutus, Acilius, with Lords and Citizens of Vtica.

Cæs. Too late, too late; with all our haste. O
Cato,

All my late Conquest, and my lifes whole acts,
Most crownde, most beautified, are blasted all
With thy graue lifes expiring in their scorne.
Thy life was rule to all liues ; and thy death
(Thus forcibly despising life) the quench
Of all liues glories.

Ant. Vnreclaimed man ?

How censures Brutus his sterne fathers fact ?

Bru. Twas not well done.

Cæf. O censure not his acts ;

Who knew as well what fitted man, as all men.

Enter Achilius, Septimius, Saluius, with Pompeys head.

All kneeling. Your enemies head great Cæsar.

Cæf. Curfed monsters,

Wound not mine eyes with it, nor in my camp

Let any dare to view it ; farre as nobleffe

The den of barbarisme flies, and blisse

The bitterest curfe of vext and tyrannifde nature,

Transferre it from me. Borne the plagues of virtue

How durst ye poyson thus my thoughts ? to torture

Them with instant rapture.

Omn. 3. Sacred Cæsar.

Cæf. Away with them ; I vow by all my comforts,

Who slack seemes, or not fiery in my charge,

Shall suffer with them.

All the souldiers. Out base murderers ;

Tortures, tortures for them : hale them out.

Omn. Cruell Cæsar.

Cæf. Too milde with any torture.

Bru. Let me craue

The ease of my hate on their one curst life.

Cæf. Good Brutus take it ; O you coole the poyson

These villaines flaming pou'rd vpon my spleen

To suffer with my lothings. If the blood

Of euery common Roman toucht so neare ;

Shall I confirme the false brand of my tyranny

With being found a fautor of his murther
Whom my deare Country chufde to fight for her?

Ant. Your patience Sir, their tortures well will quit
you :

Bru. Let my flaves vse, Sir, be your president.

Cæf. It shall, I sweare: you doe me infinite honor.

O Cato, I enuy thy death, since thou

Enuiedst my glory to preferue thy life.

Why fled his sonne and friend Statilius?

So farre I fly their hurt, that all my good

Shall fly to their desires. And (for himfelfe)

My Lords and Citizens of Vtica,

His much renowne of you, quit with your most.

And by the sea, vpon some eminent rock,

Ereçt his sumptuous tombe; on which aduance

With all fit state his statue; whose right hand

Let hold his sword, where, may to all times rest

His bones as honor'd as his soule is blest.

FINIS.

THE TRAGEDY OF ALPHONSUS
EMPEROUR
OF GERMANY

As it hath been very often Acted (with great applause) at the Privat houfe in BLACK-FRIERS by his late MAIESTIES Servants.

By George Chapman Gent.

LONDON,
Printed for HUMPHREY MOSELEY, and are to be fold at his Shopp at the Princes-Arms in St. Pauls Church-yard 1654.

To the Reader

I Shall not need to bespeak thee Courteous, if thou hast seen this Piece presented with all the Elegance of Life and Action on the Black-Friers Stage ; But if it be a Stranger to thee, give me leave to prepare thy acceptation, by telling thee, it was receiv'd with general applause, and thy judgement (I doubt not) will be satisfied in the reading.

I will not raise thy Expectation further, nor delay thy Entertainment by a tedious Preface. The Design is high, the Contrivement subtle, and will deserve thy grave Attention in the perusal.

Farewell.

Dramatis Personæ.

A Lphonfus Emperour of Germany.
King of Bohemia.

Bishop of Mentz.

Bishop of Collen.

Bishop of Tryer.

Pallatine of the Rhein.

Duke of Saxon.

Marquefs of Brandenburgh.

Prince Edward of England.

Richard Duke of Cornwall.

Lorenzo de Cipres, Secretary to the Emperour.

Alexander his Son, the Emperours Page.

Ifabella the Emprefs.

Hedewick Daughter to the Duke of Saxon.

Captain of the Guard.

Souldiers.

Jaylor.

Two Boores.

} The seven Electors of the Ger- man Empire.

ALPHONSUS

Emperour of Germany.

Enter Alphonfus the Emperour in his night-gown, and his shirt, and a torch in his hand, Alexander de Tripes his Page following him.

Al. BOy, give me the Master Key of all the doors.

To Bed again, and leave me to my self.

Exit Alexder.

Is Richard come ? have four Electors fworn
To make him Keifar in despite of me ?
Why then Alphonfus it is time to wake.
No Englishman, thou art too hot at hand,
Too shallow braind to undermine my throne ;
The Spanish Sun hath purifi'd my wit,
And dry'd up all grofs humours in my head,
That I am fighted as the King of Birds,
And can discern thy deepest Stratagem.
I am the lawful German Emperour,

Chosen, enstall'd, by general consent ;
 And they may tearm me Tyrant as they please,
 I will be King, and Tyrant if I please ;
 For what is Empire but a Tyrannie ?
 And none but children use it otherwise.
 Of seven Electors, four are falln away,
 The other three I dare not greatly trust ;
 My Wife is Sister to mine enemy,
 And therefore wisely to be dealt withall ;
 But why do I except in special,
 When this position must be general,
 That no man living must be credited,
 Further than tends unto thy proper good.
 But to the purpose of my silent walk ;
 Within this Chamber lyes my Secretary,
Lorenzo de Cipres, in whose learned brain
 Is all the compass of the world containd ;
 And as the ignorant and simple age
 Of our forefathers, blinded in their zeal,
 Receiv'd dark answers from Appollo's shrine,
 And honour'd him as Patron of their blifs ;
 So I, not muffled in simplicitie,
 Zealous indeed of nothing but my good,
 Hast to the Augur of my happiness,
 To lay the ground of my ensuing Wars.
 He learns his wisdom, not by flight of Birds,
 By prying into sacrificed beasts,
 By Hares that cros the way, by howling Wolves,
 By gazing on the Starry Element,
 Or vain imaginary calculations ;
 But from a fetled wisdom in it self
 Which teacheth to be void of passion.
 To be Religious as the ravenous Wolf,
 Who loves the Lamb for hunger, and for prey ;
 To threaten our inferiors with our looks ;
 To flatter our Superiors at our need ;
 To be an outward Saint, an inward Devill ;
 These are the lectures that my Master reads.
 This Key commands all Chambers in the Court ;

Now on a fudain will I try his wit,
I know my comming is unlook'd for.

He opens the door and finds Lorenzo sleep a loft.

Nay fleep, Lorenzo, I will walk a while.
As nature in the framing of the world,
Ordain'd there should be nihil vacuum ;
Even fo me thinks his wifdom should contrive,
That all his Study should be full of wit,
And every corner ftuff with fentences ?
What's this ? Plato ? Aristotle ? tuff thefe are ordinary,
It feems this is a note but newly written. [He reads a note which he finds among his Books.

Una arbufa non alit duos Erithicos ; which being granted, the Roman Empire will not fuffice Alphonfus King of Caftile, and Richard Earl of Cornwall his competitor ; thy wifdom teacheth thee to cleave to the ftrongeft ; Alphonfus is in poffeffion, and therefore the ftrongeft, but he is in hatred with the Electors, and men rather honour the Sun rifing than the Sun going down. I marry this is argued like himfelf, and now me thinks he wakes.

[Lorenzo Rifeth, and fnatches at his fword which hung by his Bed-fide]

Loren. What are there thieves within the Emperour's Court ?
Villain thou dy'ft ; what mak'ft thou in my Chamber ?
Alphon. How now Lorenzo, wilt thou flay thy Lord ?

Loren. I do befeech your facred Majesty to pardon me,
I did not know your grace.

Alphon. Ly down Lorenzo, I will fit by thee,
The ayr is fharp and piercing ; tremble not,
Had it been any other but our felf,
He muft have been a villain and a thief.

Loren. Alas my Lord ! what means your excellence,
To walk by night in thefe fo dangerous times ?

Alphon. Have I not reason now to walk and watch,
 When I am compast with so many foes ?
 They ward, they watch, they cast, and they conspire,
 To win confederate Princes to their aid,
 And batter down the Eagle from my creast.
 O, my Lorenzo, if thou help me not,
 Th' Imperial Crown is shaken from my head,
 And giv'n from me unto an English Earl.
 Thou knowest how all things stand as well as we,
 Who are our enemies, and who our friends,
 Who must be threatned, and who dallyed with,
 Who won by words, and who by force of arms ;
 For all the honour I have done to thee.
 Now speak, and speak to purpose in the cause ;
 Nay rest thy body, labour with thy brain,
 And of thy words my self will be the scribe.

Loren. Why then my Lord, take Paper, Pen and Ink,

Write first this maxim, it shall do you good.

1. A Prince must be of the nature of the Lion and the Fox ; but not the one without the other.

Alphon. The Fox is subtil, but he wanteth force ;
 The Lion strong, but scorneth policie ;
 I'll imitate Lyfander in this point,
 And where the Lion's hide is thin and scant,
 I'll firmly patch it with the Foxes fell.
 Let it suffice I can be both in one.

Loren. 2. A Prince above all things must seem devout ; but there is nothing so dangerous to his state, as to regard his promise or his oath.

Alphon. Tush, fear not me, my promises are sound,
 But he that trusts them shall be sure to fail.

Loren. Nay my good Lord, but that I know your Majesty,

To be a ready quickwitted Scholar,
 I would bestow a comment on the text.

3. Trust not a reconciled friend ; for good turns cannot blot out old grudges.

Alphon. Then must I watch the Palatine of the Rhein,
I caus'd his Father to be put to death.

Loren. Your Highness hath as little cause to trust
'The dangerous mighty Duke of Saxony ;
You know, you fought to banish him the Land ;
And as for Cullen, was not he the first
That sent for Richard into Germany ?

Alphon. What's thy opinion of the other four ?

Alphon. That Bohemie neither cares for one nor other,
But hopes this deadly strife between you twain,
Will cast th' Imperial Crown upon his head.
For Trier and Brandenberg, I think of them
As simple men that wish the common good ;
And as for Mentz I need not censure him,
Richard hath chain'd him in a golden bond,
And sav'd his life from ignominious death.

Alphon. Let it suffice, Lorenzo, that I know,
When Churfurst Mentz was taken Prisoner,
By young victorious Otho Duke of Brunschweige
That Richard Earl of Cornwall did disburse
The ranfome of a King, a million,
To save his life, and rid him out of bands,
That sum of gold did fill the Brunschweige bags ;
But since my self have rain'd a golden shower.
Of bright Hungarian Ducates and Crusadoes,
Into the private Coffers of the Bishop,
The English Angels took their wings and fled ;
My crosses bless his Coffers, and plead for me,
His Voice is mine, bought with ten tun of Gold,
And at the meeting of the seven Electors,
His Princely double-dealing holiness
Will spoyl the English Emperour of hope.
But I refer these matters to the sequel.
Proceed Lorenzo forward to the next.

Loren. I'm glad your grace hath dealt so cunningly, With that victorious fickle minded Prelate ; for in election his voice is first but to the next.

4. 'Tis more safety for a Prince to be feared than loved.

Alphon. Love is an humour pleaseth him that loves ;
Let me be hated, so I please my self.
Love is an humour mild and changeable ;
But fear engraves a reverence in the heart.

Loren. 5. To keep an usurped Crown, a Prince must swear, forswear, poyson, murder, and commit all kind of villanies, provided it be cunningly kept from the eye of the world.

Alphon. But my Lorenzo that's the hardest point,
It is not for a Prince to execute,
Physicians and Apothecaries must know,
And servile fear or Counsel-breaking bribes,
Will from a Peasant in an hour extort
Enough to overthrow a Monarchy.

Loren. Therefore my Lord set down this sixth and last Article.

6. Be alwaies jealous of him that knows your secrets,
And therefore it behooves you credit few ;
And when you grow into the least suspect,
With silent cunning must you cut them off.
As for example, Fulvio Lentulus,
A most renowned Neapolitan,
Gave me this Box of poyson, t'was not long
But therewithall I sent him to his grave.

Alphon. And what's the special vertue of the same ?

Loren. That it is twenty days before it works.

Alphon. But what is this ?

Loren. This an infection that kils suddainly ;
This but a toy to cast a man asleep.

Alphon. How ? being drunk ?

Loren. No, being smelt unto.

Alphon. Then smell Lorenzo, I did break thy sleep ;
And, for this time, this lecture shall suffice.

Loren. What have you done my Lord ? y'ave made me safe,

For stirring hence these four and twenty hours.

Alphon. I see this charms his senses suddainly.

How now Lorenzo, half asleep already ?
Aeneas Pilot by the God of dreams,
Was never lull'd into a founder trance ;
And now Alphonfus over-read thy notes. [He reads.
These are already at my fingers ends,
And lest the world should find this little Schedule,
Thus will I rend the text, and after this,
On my behaviour fet so fair a glofs,
That men shall take me for a Convertite ;
But some may think, I should forget my part,
And have been over rash in renting it,
To put them out of doubt I study sure,
I'll make a backward repetition,
In being jealous of my Counsel keepers,
This is the poyson that kills sudainly,
So didst thou unto Julius Lentulus,
And blood with blood must be requited thus.
Now am I safe, and no man knows my Counsels.
Churfurst of Mentz, if now thou play thy part,
Erning thy gold with cunning workmanship,
Upon the Bemish Kings ambition,
Richard shall shamefully fail of his hope,
And I with triumph keep my Emperie. Exit.

*Enter the King of Bohemia, the Bishops of Mentz, Collen, Trier, the Pallatine of the Rhein,
The Duke of Saxon, The Marquejs of Brandenburg.*

Bohe. Churfursts and Princes of the Election,
Since by the adverte fortune of our age,
The sacred and Imperial Majesty
Hath been usurp'd by open Tyranny,
We the seven Pillars of the German Empire,
To whom successively it doth belong
To make election of our Emperours,
Are here assembled to unite a new
Unto her former strength and glorious type,
Our half declining Roman Monarchy,

And in that hope, I Henry King of Bohem, Churfurst and Sewer to the Emperour,
 Do take my feat next to the sacred throne.

Mentz. Next feat belongs to Julius Florius
 Archbishop of Mentz, Chancelor of Germany,
 By birth the Duke of fruitful Pomerland.

Pal. The next place in election longs to me,
George Caffimirus Palgrave of the Rhein,
 His Highness Taster, and upon my knee
 I vow a pure sincere innated zeal
 Unto my Country, and no wrested hate,
 Or private love shall blind mine intellect.

Collen. Brave Duke of Saxon, Dutchlands greatest hope,
 Stir now or never, let the Spanish tyrant,
 That hath dishonoured us, murder'd our Friends,
 And stain'd this feat with blood of innocents,
 At last be chastis'd with the Saxon sword,
 And may Albertus Archbishop of Collen, Chancelor of Gallia and the fourth Elector ;
 Be thought unworthy of his place and birth,
 But he assist thee to his utmost power.

Sax. Wisdom, not words, must be the soveraign salve,
 To search and heal these grievous festred wounds,
 And in that hope Augustus Duke of Saxon,
 Arch-Marshall to the Emperour, take my place.

Trier. The like doth Frederick Arch-Bishop of Trier,
 Duke of Lorraine, Chancelour of Italie.

Bran. The seventh and last is Foachim Carolus,
 Marques of Brandenburg, overworn with age,
 Whose Office is to be the Treasurer ;
 But Wars have made the Coffers like the Chair.
 Peace bringeth plenty, Wars bring poverty ;
 Grant Heavens, this meeting may be to effect,
 Establish Peace, and cut off Tyrannie.

Enter the Emprefs Isabella King John's Daughter.

Emprefs. Pardon my bold intrusion mighty Churfursts,

And let my words pierce deeply in your hearts.

O! I beseech you on my bended Knees,

I the poor miserable Emprefs,

A stranger in this Land, unus'd to broyls,

Wife to the one, and Sister to the other

That are Competitors for Sovereignty ;

All that I pray, is, make a quiet end ;

Make Peace between my Husband and my Brother.

O think how grief doth stand on either side,

If either party chance to be amis ;

My Husband is my Husband ; but my Brother,

My heart doth melt to think he should miscarry.

My Brother is my Brother ; but my Husband,

O how my joynts do shake fearing his wrong !

If both should dye in these uncertain broyls.

O me, why do I live to think upon't !

Bear with my interrupted speeches Lords,

Tears stop my voice, your wisdoms know my meaning.

Alas I know my Brother Richard's heart

Affects not Empire, he would rather choose

To make return again to Palestine,

And be a scourge unto the Infidels ;

As for my Lord, he is impatient,

The more my grief, the lesser is my hope.

Yet Princes thus he sends you word by me,

He will submit himself to your award,

And labour to amend what is amis.

All I have said, or can devise to say,

Is few words of great worth, Make unity.

Bohe. Madam, that we have suffer'd you to kneel
so long,

Agrees not with your dignity nor ours ;

Thus we excuse it, when we once are set,

In solemn Council of Election,

We may not rise till somewhat be concluded.

So much for that : touching your earnest fute,
Your Majestie doth know how it concerns us,
Comfort your self, as we do hope the best ;
But tell us, Madam, wher's your Husband now ?

Emprefs. I left him at his prayers, good my Lord.

Saxon. At prayers ? Madam that's a miracle.

Pall. Vndoubtedly your Highness did mistake ;
'Twas fure some Book of Conjuraton ;
I think he never said pray'r in his life.

Emprefs. Ah me, my fear, I fear, will take effect ;
Your hate to him, and love unto my Brother,
Will break my heart, and spoil th' Imperial peace.

Mentz. My Lord of Saxon, and Prince Pallatine,
This hard opinion yet is more than needs ;
But, gracious Madam, leave us to our selves.

Emprefs. I go, and Heav'n that holds the Hearts of Kings,

Direct your Counsels unto unity. Exit.

Bohe. Now to the depth of that we have in hand ;
This is the question, whether the King of Spain
Shall still continue in the Royal throne,
Or yield it up unto Plantagenet,
Or we proceed unto a third Election.

Saxon. E're such a viperous blood-thirsty Spaniard Shall suck the hearts of our Nobility,
Th' Imperial Sword which Saxony doth bear,
Shall be unsheath'd to War against the world.

Pall. My hate is more than words can testifie,
Slave as he is he murdered my Father.

Coll. Prince Richard is the Champion of the world,
Learned, and mild, fit for the Government.

Bohe. And what have we to do with Englishmen ?
They are divided from our Continent.
But now that we may orderly proceed
To our high Office of Election,
To you my Lord of Mentz it doth belong,
Having first voice in this Imperial Synod,
To name a worthy man for Emperour.

Mentz. It may be thought, most grave and reverend Princes,
That in respect of divers fums of gold,
Which Richard of meer charitable love,
Not as a bribe, but as a deed of Alms,
Disburs'd for me unto the Duke of Brunschweige,
That I dare name no other man but he,
Or should I nominate an other Prince,
Upon the contrary I may be thought
A most ingrateful wretch unto my Friend ;
But private cause must yield to publick good ;
Therefore me thinks it were the fittest course,
To choose the worthiest upon this Bench.

Bohem. We are all Germans, why should we be yoak'd
Either by Englishmen or Spaniards ?

Saxo. The Earl of Cornwall by a full consent
Was sent for out of England.

Mentz. Though he were,
Our later thoughts are purer than our first,
And to conclude, I think this end were best,
Since we have once chosen him Emperour,
That some great Prince of wisdom and of power,
Whose countenance may overbear his pride,
Be joynd in equal Government with Alphonsus.

Bohem. Your Holiness hath soundly in few words
Set down a mean to quiet all these broyls.

Trier. So may we hope for peace if he amend ;
But shall Prince Richard then be joynd with him ?

Pal. Why should your Highness ask that question ?
As if a Prince of so high Kingly Birth,
Would live in couples with so base a Cur ?

Bohe. Prince Pallatine, such words do ill become thee.

Saxon. He said but right, and call'd a Dog a Dog.

Bohe. His Birth is Princely.

Saxo. His manners villanous,
And vertuous Richard scorns so base a yoak.

Bohe. My Lord of Saxon, give me leave to tell
 you,
 Ambition blinds your judgement in this case ;
 You hope, if by your means Richard be Emperour,
 He, in requital of so great advancement,
 Will make the long-desired Marriage up
 Between the Prince of England and your Sister,
 And to that end Edward the Prince of Wales,
 Hath born his Uncle Company to Germany.

Saxo. Why King of Bohem i't unknown to thee,
 How oft the Saxons Sons have marryed Queens,
 And Daughters Kings, yea mightiest Emperours ?
 If Edward like her beauty and behaviour,
 He'l make no question of her Princely Birth ;
 But let that pass, I say, as erst I said,
 That vertuous Richard scorns so base a yoak.

Mentz. If Richard scorn, some one upon this Bench,
 Whose power may overbear Alphonfus pride,
 Is to be named. What think you my Lords ?

Saxon. I think it was a mighty mass of Gold,
 That made your grace of this opinion.

Mentz. My Lord of Saxony, you wrong me much,
 And know I highly scorn to take a bribe.

Pal. I think you scorn indeed to have it known :
 But to the purpose, if it must be so,
 Who is the fittest man to joyn with him ?

Collen. First with an Oxe to plough will I be yok'd.

Mentz. The fittest is your grace in mine opinion.

Bohem. I am content, to stay these mutinies,
 To take upon me what you do impose.

Saxon. Why here's a tempest quickly overblown.
 God give you joy my Lord of half the Empire ;
 For me I will not meddle in the matter,
 But warn your Majestie to have a care,
 And vigilant respect unto your person,
 I'l hie me home to fortifie my Towns,
 Not to offend, but to defend my self.

Pal. Ha' with you Cofin, and adieu my Lords,

I am afraid this suddain knitted Peace,
Will turn unto a tedious lasting War ;
Only thus much we do request you all,
Deal honourably with the Earl of Cornwall,
And so adieu. Exeunt. Saxon. and Palf.

Brand. I like not this strange Farewel of the Dukes.

Bohem. In all elections some are malcontent.
It doth concern us now with speed to know,
How the Competitors will like of this,
And therefore you my Lord Archbishop of Trier,
Impart this order of arbitrament
Unto the Emperour bid him be content,
To stand content with half or lose the whole,
My Lord of Mentz go you unto Prince Richard,
And tell him flatly here's no Crown, nor Empire
For English Islanders ; tell him, 'twere his best,
To hie him home to help the King his Brother,
Against the Earl of Leicester and the Barons.

Collen. My Lord of Mentz, sweet words will qualifie,
When bitter tearms will adde unto his rage.
'Tis no small hope that hath deceiv'd the Duke ;
Therefore be mild ; I know an Englishman,
Being flattered, is a Lamb, threatned, a Lion ;
Tell him his charges what so e're they are Shalbe repaid with treble vantages ;
Do this ; we will expect their resolutions.

Mentz. Brother of Collen, I entreat your grace
To take this charge upon you in my stead ;
For why I shame to look him in the face.

Collen. Your Holiness shall pardon me in this,
Had I the profit I would take the pains ;
With shame enough your Grace may bring the message.

Mentz. Thus am I wrong'd, God knows, unguiltily.

Brand. Then arm your countenance with innocency,

And boldly do the message to the Prince ;
For no man else will be the messenger.

Mentz. Why then I must, since ther's no remedy.

Exit Mentz.

Brand. If Heav'n that guides the hearts of mighty men,
Do calm the Winds of these great Potentates,
And make them like of this Arbitrament,
Sweet Peace will triumph thorough Christendom,
And Germany shall blefs this happy day.

Enter Alexander de Toledo the Page.

Alexand. O me most miserable ! O my dear Father !

Bohem. What means this passionate accent ? what art thou

That founds these acclamations in our ears ?

Alex. Pardon me Princes, I have lost a Father,
O me, the name of Father kills my heart.

O ! I shall never see my Father more,
H'as tane his leaue of me for age and age,

Collen. What was thy Father ?

Alex. Ah me ? whot was a not ?
Noble, Rich, valiant, well-belov'd of all,
The glory and the wifdom of his age,
Chief Secretary to the Emperour.

Collen. Lorenzo de Toledo, is he dead ?

Alex. Dead, ay me dead, ay me my life is dead,
Strangely this night bereft of breath and sense,
And I, poor I, am comforted in nothing,
But that the Emperour laments with me,
As I exclame, so he, he rings his hands,
And makes me mad to see his Majesty
Excruciate himself with endless forrow.

Collen. The happiest news that euer I did hear ;
Thy Father was a villain murderer,
Witty, not wise, lov'd like a Scorpion,
Grown rich by the impoverishing of others,
The chiefest caufe of all these mutinies,
And Cæsar's tutor to all villanie.

Alex. None but an open lyar terms him so.

Col. What Boy, so malepert ?

Bohem. Good Collen bear with him, it was his Father,

Dutch land is blessed in Lorenzo's Death.

Brand. Did never live a viler minded man.

Exeunt. Manet Alex.

Alex. Nor King, nor Churfurst should be privileg'd

To call me Boy, and rayl upon my Father,
Were I wehrfafflig ; but in Germany,
A man must be a Boy at 40. years,
And dares not draw his weapon at a Dog,
Till being foundly box'd about the ears,
His Lord and Master gird him with a sword ;
The time will come I shall be made a man,
Till then I'll pine with thought of dire revenge,
And live in Hell untill I take revenge.

A C T. II.

Enter Alphonfus, Richard Earl of Cornwall, Mentz, Trier, Prince Edward, Bohemia, Collen, Brandenburge, Attendants, and Pages with a sword.

Bohem. Behold here comes the Princes hand in hand;

Pleas'd highly with the sentence as it seems.

Alphon. Princes and Pillars of the Monarchy,
We do admire your wisdoms in this cause,
And do accept the King of Bohemia,
As worthy partner in the Government.
Alas my Lords, I flatly now confesse,
I was alone too weak to underprop
So great a burden as the Roman Empire,

And hope to make you all admire the course
That we intend in this conjunction.

Richard. That I was call'd from England with consent

Of all the seven Electors to this place,
Your selves best know, who wrote for me to come.
'Twas no ambition mov'd me to the journey,
But pitty of your half declining State ;
Which being likely now to be repayr'd,
By the united force of these two Kings,
I rest content to see you satisfied.

Mentz. Brave Earl, wonder of Princely patience,
I hope your grace will not mis-think of me,
Who for your good, and for the Empires best,
Bethought this means to set the world at Peace.

Edward. No doubt this means might have been thought upon,
Although your Holiness had dy'd in Prison.

Mentz. Peace, peace young Prince, you want experience ;
Your Unckle knows what cares accompany,
And wait upon the Crowns of mightiest Kings,
And glad he is that he hath shak'd it off.

Edward. Hark in your ear my Lord, hear me
one word,
Although it were more than a million,
Which these two Kings bestow'd upon your grace,
Mine Unckle Richards million sav'd your life.

Mentz. You were best to say, your Vnckle brib'd me then.

Edward. I do but say mine Vnckle sav'd your life,
You know Count Mansfield your fellow Prisoner,
Was by the Duke of Brunschwig put to death.

Mentz. You are a Child my Lord, your words are wind.

Edward. You are a Fox my Lord, and past a Child.

Bohem. My Lord of Cornwall, your great forward-
ness,

Crossing the Seas with aid of Englishmen,
Is more than we can any way requite ;
But this your admirable patience,
In being pleas'd with our election,
Deserves far more than thanks can satisfie,
In any thing command the Emperours,
Who live to honour Richard Earl of Cornwall.

Alpho. Our deeds shall make our Proteftations
good,
Mean while, brave Princes, let us leave this place,
And solace us with joy of this accord.

Enter Ifabella the Emprefs, Hedewick the Duke of Saxon's Daughter, apparelled like Fortune, drawn on a Globe, with a Cup in her hand, wherein are Bay leaves, whereupon are written the lots. A train of Ladies following with Musick.

Emprefs. To gratulate this unexpected Peace,
This glorious league confirm'd against all hope,
Joyful Ifabella doth present this shew,
Of Fortunes triumph, as the custom is
At Coronation of our Emperours ;
If therefore every party be well pleas'd,
And stand content with this arbitrimēt,
Then daign to do as your Progenitors,
And draw in sequence Lots for Offices.

Alphon. This is an order here in Germany,
For Princes to disport themselves with all,
In sign their hearts so firmly are conjoyn'd,
That they will bear all fortunes equally,
And that the world may know I scorn no state,
Or course of life to do the Empire good,
I take my chance : My Fortune is to be the Forrester.

Emp. If we want Venison either red or fallow,
Wild bore or bear, you must be fin'd my Lord.

Bohem. The Emperour's Taster I.

Emp. Your Majesty hath been tasted to so oft,

That you have need of small instructions.

Richard. I am the bowr, Sifter what is my charge?

Emp. Tyr'd like a Carter, and a Clownish Bowr,
To bring a load of Wood into the Kitchin.
Now for my self, Faith I am Chamber Maid,
I know my charge : proceed unto the next.

Alphon. Prince Edward standeth melancholy still,
Please it your Grace, my Lord, to draw your lot.

Emp. Nephew you must be solemn with the sad,
And given to myrth in sportful Company,
The German Princes when they will be lusty,
Shake of all cares, and Clowns and they are Fellows.

Edward. Sweet Aunt, I do not know the Country
guife,
Yet would be glad to learn all fashions.

Since I am next, good Fortune be my guide.

Brand. A most ingenuous countenance hath this Prince,
Worthy to be the King of England's Heir.

Edward. Be it no disparagement to you my Lords,
I am your Emperour.

Alphon. Sound trumpets, God save the Emperour.

Collen. The world could never worfe have fitted me,

I am not old enough to be the Cook.

Emprefs. If you be Cook, there is no remedy
But you must dres one Mefs of meat your self.

Branden. I am Phyfician.

Trier. I am Secretary.

Mentz. I am the Jester.

Edward. O excellent ! is your Holiness the Vice ?
Fortune hath fitted you y'faith my Lord,
You'l play the Ambodexter cunningly.

Mentz. Your Highness is to bitter in your Jests.

Alphon. Come hither Alexander, to comfort thee,
After the death of thy beloved Father,
Whose life was deer unto his Emperour,
Thou shalt make one in this solemnity,
Yet e're thou draw, my self will honour thee,

And as the custom is make thee a man.
Stand stiff Sir Boy, now com'ft thou to thy tryal ;
Take this, and that, and therewithall this Sword ;

He gives Alexander Box on the ear or two.

If while thou live, thou ever take the like,
Of me, or any man, I here pronounce
Thou art a schelm, otherwise a man.
Now draw thy lot, and Fortune be thy speed.

Edward. Vnckle I pray why did he box the fellow ?
Foul lubber as he is, to take fuch blows.

Richard. Thus do the Princes make their Pages
men.

Edward. But that is strange to make a man with blows.

We fay in England that he is a man,
That like a man dare meet his enemy,
And in my judgement 'tis the founder tryal.

Alex. Fortune hath made me Marshall of the triumphs.

Alphon. Now what remains ?

Emperefs. That Fortune draw her lot.

She opens it, and gives it to the Emperefs to read.

Emperefs. Sound trumpets, Fortune is your Emperefs.

Alphon. This happens right ; for Fortune will be Queen.

Now Emperour you muft unmask her face,
And tell us how you like your Emperefs,
In my opinion England breeds no fairer.

Bohe. Fair Hedewick the Duke of Saxons daughter,
Young Prince of England, you are bravely match'd.

Edward. Tell me sweet Aunt, is that this Saxon Princess,

Whose beauties fame made Edward cros the Seas ?

Emperefs. Nephew, it is ; hath fame been prodigal,
Or over sparing in the Princess praise ?

Edward. Fame I accuse thee, thou did'ft niggardize,
And faintly found my loves perfections.

Great Lady Fortune, and fair Emperess,
Whom chance this day hath thrown into my arms,
More welcome than the Roman Emperess. [Edward kisses her.

Hede. See dodh, dafs ist hier kein gebranch,
Mein Got ist dafs dir Englisch manier,
dafs dich.

Edward. What meaneth this? why chafes my Emperess?

Alphon. Now by my troth, I did expect this jest,
Prince Edward us'd his Country fashion.

Edward. I am an Englishman, why should I not?

Emp. Fy Nephew Edward, here in Germany
To kifs a Maid, a fault intollerable.

Edward. Why should not German Maids be kift aswell as others?

Richard. Nephew, because you did not know the fashion,

And want the language to excuse your self,
I'll be your spokes-man to your Emperess.

Edward. Excuse it thus: I like the first so well,
That tell her, she shall chide me twice as much
For such an other; nay tell her more than so,
I'll double kifs on kifs, and give her leave
To chide and baul, and cry ten thousand dafs dich,
And make her weary of her fretting humour,
E're I be weary of my kissing vein,

Dafs dich a Jungfrau angry for a kifs.

Empress. Nephew, she thinks you mock her in her mirth.

Edward. I think the Princes make a scorn of me.
If any do, I'll prove it with my Sword,
That English Courtship leaves it from the world.

Bohem. The pleasant'st accident that I have seen.

Bran. Me thinks the Prince is chaf'd as well as she.

Rich. Gnediges frawlin.

Hede. Dass dich, must ich arme kindt zu schanden gemacht werden.

Edward. Dass dich I have kist as good as you,

Pray Unckle tell her ; if she mislike the kifs, I'l take it off agen with such an other.

Rich. By Lirbes frawlin nim es all fur gutti

Es ist die Englisch manier Und gebrauch.

Hede. Ewer gnaden weiffst woll es ist mir ein grosse schande.

Edward. Good Aunt teach me so much Dutch to ask her pardon.

Empress. Say so: Gnediges frawlin bergebet mirs, ich wills nimmermehr thuen,

Then kifs your hand three times upst Dutch.

Edward, Ich wills nimmermehr thuen,

if I understand it, right,

That's as much to say, as I'l do so no more.

Empr. True Nephew.

Edward. Nay Aunt pardon me I pray, I hope to kifs her many thousand times,

And shall I go to her like a great Boy, and say I'l do so no more.

Empress. I pray Cofin say as I tell you.

Edward. Gnediges frawlin bergebet mirs ich wills nimmermehr thuen.

Alphon. Worwahr knw schandt.

Hedew. Gnediger hochgeborner Furst vndt herr

Wan ich konte so viel englisch sprechen ich wolt ewer Gnaden.

Fur wahr ein fultz geben, ich hoffe aber ich soll einmahl

So viel lernen das Die mich verstehen soll.

Edward. What says she ?

Alphon. O excellent young Prince look to your self,

She swears she'll learn some English for your sake,
To make you understand her when she chides.

Edward. I'll teach her English, she shall teach me
Dutch,

Gnediges frawlin, &c.

Bohem. It is great pitty that the Duke of Saxon,
Is absent at this joyful accident,
I see no reason if his Grace were here,
But that the Marriage might be solemniz'd,
I think the Prince of Wales were well content.

Edward. I left sweet England to none other end ;
And though the Prince her Father be not here,
This Royal presence knows his mind in this.

Emp. Since you do come so roundly to the purpose,
'Tis time for me to speak, the Maid is mine,
Giv'n freely by her Father unto me,
And to the end these broyls may have an end,
I give the Father's interest and mine own,
Unto my Nephew Edward Prince of Wales.

Edward. A Jewel of incomparable price,
Your Majesty hath here bestowed on me,
How shall I ask her if she be content ?

Empr. Say thus, ist ewer gnaden woll hie-mit zufrieden.

Edward. Ist ewer Gnaden woll hiemit zufrieden.

Hede. Was ihr durleichtigkeit das will das will mein batter vndt
Was mein batter will darmit muss ich zufrieden sein.

Alphon. It is enough, she doth confirm the match ;
We will dispatch a Post unto her Father,
On Sunday shall the Revels and the Wedding,
Be both solemnized with mutual joy.
Sound trumpets, each one look unto his charge,
For preparation of the Festivals. Exeunt.

Manent Alphonfus and Alexander.

Alphon. Come hither Alexander, thy Fathers joy.
If tears and sighs, and deep-fetcht deadly groans,
Could serve t' evert inexorable fate,
Divine Lorenzo, whom in life my heart,
In death my soul and better part adores,
Had to thy comfort and his Prince's honour,
Surviv'd, and drawn this day this breath of life.

Alexan. Dread Cæsar, prostrate on my bended Knee,
I thank your Majesty for all favours shewn
To my deceased Father and my self.
I must confesse, I spend but bootles tears,
Yet cannot bridle nature, I must weep,
Or heart will break with burden of my thoughts ;
Nor am I yet so young or fond withall,
Causeless to spend my gall, and fret my heart,
'Tis not that he is dead, for all must dye ;
But that I live to hear his lives reproach.
O sacred Emperour, these ears have heard,
What no Sons ears can unrevenged hear,
The Princes all of them, but specially,
The Prince Elector Archbishop of Collen,
Revil'd him by the names of murderer,
Arch villain, robber of the Empires fame,

And Cæsars tutor in all wickedness,
 And with a general voice applaus'd his death,
 As for a special good to Christendome.

Alphon. Have they not reason to applaud the deed
 Which they themselves have plotted? ah my Boy,
 Thou art too young to dive into their drifts.

Alex. Yet old enough I hope to be reveng'd.

Alphon. What wilt thou do, or whither wilt thou run?

Alex. Headlong to bring them death, then dye my self.

Alphon. First hear the reason why I do mistrust them.

Alex. They had no reason for my Father's death,
 And I scorn reason till they all be dead.

Alphon. Thou wilt not scorn my Counsel in revenge?

Alex. My rage admits no Counsel but revenge.

Alphon. First let me tell thee whom I do mistrust.

Alex. Your highness said you did mistrust them
 all.

Alpho. Yea Alexander, all of them, and more than
 all,

My most especiall neereft dearest friends.

Alex. Alls one to me, for know thou Emperour,
 Were it thy Father, Brother, or thine Empress,
 Yea were't thy self, that did'st conspire his death,
 This fatal hand should take away thy life.

Alphon. Spoke like a Son, worthy so dear a Father.
 Be still and hearken, I will tell thee all,
 The Duke of Saxon—

Alex. O, I thought no less.

Alphon. Suppress thy choler, hearken to the rest.
Saxon I say so wrought with flattering Mentz,
Mentz with Bohemia, Trier, and Brandenburg,
 For Collen and the Palsgrave of the Rhein
 Were principals with Saxon in the Plot,
 That in a general meeting to that purpose,
 The seven selected Emperours electors,
 Most hainously concluded of the murder ;

The reason why they doom'd him unto death,
Was his deep wisdom and found policy ;
Knowing while he did live my state was firm,
He being dead my hope must dye with him.
Now Alexander will we be reveng'd
Upon this wicked whore of Babylon,
This hideous monster with the seven-fold head :
We must with cunning level at the heart,
With pierc'd and perisht all the body dyes :
Or strike we off her heads by one and one,
Behoveth us to use dexterity,
Lest she do trample us under her feet,
And triumph in our honours overthrow.

Alex. Mad and amaz'd to hear this tragick doom,
I do subscribe unto your sound advice.

Alphon. Then hear the rest ; these seven gave but the sentence

A neerer hand put it in execution,
And but I lov'd Lorenzo as my life,
I never would betray my dearest Wife.

Alex. What ? what the Empress accessary to ?

Alphon. What cannot kindred do ? her Brother
Richard,

Hoping thereby to be an Emperour,
Gave her a dram that sent him to his grave.

Alex. O my poor Father, wert thou such an eye-fore,

That 9. the greatest Princes of the earth
Must be confederate in thy tragedy ?
But why do I respect their mightiness,
Who did not once respect my Fathers life ?
Your Majesty may take it as you please,
I'll be reveng'd upon your Emperers,
On English Richard, Saxon, and the Palsgrave,
On Bohem, Collen, Mentz, Trier, and Brandenburg,
If that the Pope of Rome himself were one
In this confederacy, undaunted I,
Amidst the College of his Cardinals,
Would press, and stab him in St. Peters chair,

Though clad in all his Pontificalibus.

Alphon. Why Alexander? do'st thou speak to me
As if thou didst mistrust my forwardness?
No, thou shalt know my love to him was such,
And in my heart I have proscrib'd them all,
That had to do in this conspiracy.
The bands of Wedlock shall not serve her turn,
Her fatal lot is cast among the rest,
And to conclude, my soul doth live in Hell
Till I have set my foot upon their necks,
That gave this spur of sorrow to my heart;
But with advice it must be managed,
Not with a head-long rage as thou intend'st,
Nor in a moment can it be perform'd,
This work requires long time, dissembling looks,
Commixt with undermining actions,
Watching advantages to execute.
Our foes are mighty, and their number great,
It therefore follows that our Stratagems
Must branch forth into manifold deceits,
Endless devices, bottomless conclusions.

Alexan. What by your Majesty is prescrib'd to me,
That will I execute or dye the death.
I am content to suck my sorrows up,
And with dull patience will attend the time,
Gaping for every opportunity
That may present the least occasion;
Although each minute multiply mine anguish,
And to my view present a thousand forms
Of senseless bodies in my Fathers shape,
Yelling with open throat for just revenge.

Alphon. Content thy self, he shall not cry in vain,
I have already plotted Richards death.

Alex. That hath my Fathers sacred Ghost inspir'd,
O tell me, shall I stab him suddainly?
The time seems long, till I be set a work.

Alphon. Thou knowest in griping at our lots to day,
It was Prince Richard's hap to be the bowr;

So that his Office is to drive the Cart,
And bring a load of Wood into the Kitchin.

Alex. O excellent, your Grace being Forester,
As in the thicket he doth load the Cart,
May shoot him dead, as if he were a Deer.

Alphon. No Alexander, that device were shallow,
Thus it must be, there are two very bowrs
Appointed for to help him in the Wood,
These must be brib'd or cunningly feduc'd,
Instead of helping him to murder him.

Ale. Verbum fatis sapienti, it is enough,
Fortune hath made me Marshal of the sports
I hope to Marshal them to th' Devils Feast.
Plot you the rest, this will I execute,
Dutch bowrs as towfandt schelms and gold to tempt
them.

Alphon. 'Tis right, about it then, but cunningly.

Alex. Else let me lose that good opinion
Which by your Highness I desire to hold,
By Letters which I'll strew within the Wood,
I'll undermine the bowrs to murder him,
Nor shall they know who set them so a work,
Like a familiar will I fly about,
And nimbly haunt their Ghosts in every nook.

Exit. Manet Alphonfus.

Alphon. This one nayl helps to drive the other out,
I flew the Father, and bewitch the Son,
With power of words to be the instrument
To rid my foes with danger of his life.
How easily can subtil age intice,
Such credulous young novices to their death?
Huge wonders will Alphonfus bring to pass,
By the mad mind of this enraged Boy;
Even they which think themselves my greatest friends,
Shall fall by this deceit, yea my Arch-enemies
Shall turn to be my chief confederates.
My solitary walks may breed suspect,
I'll therefore give my self to Companie,
As I intended nothing but these sports,

Yet hope to fend most actors in this Pageant,
To Revel it with Rhadamant in Hell. Exit.

Enter Richard Earl of Cornwall like a Clown.

Richard. How far is Richard now unlike the man
That crost the Seas to win an Emperie ?
But as I plod it like a plumper Bowr,
To fetch in Fewel for the Kitchin fire,
So every one in his vocation,
Labours to make the pastimes plaufible ;
My Nephew Edward jets it through the Court,
With Princess Hedewick Emprefs of his Fortune,
The demy Cæsar in his hunters suit,
Makes all the Court to Ring with Horns and Hounds,
Collen the Cook bestirs him in the Kitchin ;
But that which joyes me most in all these sports,
Is Mentz, to see how he is made an Afs ?
The common scorn and by-word of the Court ;
And every one to be the same he seems,
Seems to forget to be the same he is.
Yet to my roabs I cannot fuit my mind,
Nor with my habit shake dishonour off.
The seven Electors promis'd me the Empire,
The perjurd Bishop Mentz did swear no less,
Yet I have seen it shar'd before my face,
While my best friends do hide their heads for shame ;
I bear a shew of outward full content,
But grief thereof hath almost kill'd my heart.
Here rest thee Richard, think upon a mean,
To end thy life, or to repair thine honour,
And vow never to see fair Englands bounds,
Till thou in Aix be Crowned Emperour.

Enter two Bows.

Holla, me thinks there cometh Company,
The Bows I troe that come to hew the Wood,
Which I must carry to the Kitchen Fire,
I'll lye a while and listen to their talk.

Enter Hans and Jerick two Dutch Bowrs.

Je. Kom hier hans wore bist dow, warumb bist dow so trawrick? bis frolick kan wel gelt verdienen, wir wil ihn bey potts tawfandt todt schlagen.

Hanf. Lat mich die brieffe sehen.

Rich. Me thinks they talk of murdering some body, I'l listen more.

Reads the Letter.

Hans vnd Jerick, mein liebe freinde, ich bitte lasset es bey euch bleiben in geheim, vnd schlaget den Engellander zu todt.

Rich. What's that? Hans vnd Jerick my good friend, I pray be secret and murder the Englishman.

Jerick reads.

Hear weiter, den er ist kein bowre nicht, er ist ein Juncker, vnd hatt viel gelt vnd kleinothen bey sich.

Rich. For he is no Bowre but a Gentleman, and hath store of Gold and Jewels by him.

Jeric. Noch weiter: ihr solt solche gelegenheit nicht verfahren, vnd wan ihr gethan habet, ich will euch sagen, was ich fur ein guter Karl bin, der euch raht gegeben habe.

Rich. Slip not this opportunity, and when you have done, I will discover who gave you the Counfel.

Jerick. Wat sagst dow, wilt dow es thun ?

Hans. Wat will ich nich fur gelt thun ? see potts tausendt, dar ist er.

Jerick. Ja, bey potts tausends clapperment, er ist, holla guter morgen, gluck zu Juncker.

Hans. Juncker, der dibell he is ein bobvre !

Rich. Dow bist ein schelm, weich von mir.

Jerick. Holla, holla, bist dow so hoffer tick ? Juncker bobvre, kompt hier, oder dieser vnd jenner selleuch holen.

Rich. Ich bien ein Furst, bried mich nicht ihr schelms, ihr berrahters.

Bath. Sla to, sla to, wir will pow furstlick tractieren.

Richard having nothing in his hand but his whip, defends himself a while and then fall's down as if he were dead :

Rich. O Got, nimb meine seele in deine hande.

Jerick. O excellent, hurtick he is todt, he is todt.

Lat vns see, wat he hat for gelt bey sich, holla hier is all enough, all satt, dor is for dich, and dor is for mich, vnd ditt will ich darto haben :

Jerick puts the chain about his neck.

Hans. How so Hans Parhals, geue mir die kette hier.

Jerick. Ja ein dreck, dit kett stehet hupsch vmb mein hals, ditt will ich tra-gen.

Hans. Dat dich potts belten leiden dat
coltu nimmermehr thun dow schelm.

Jerick. Wat solt dow mich schelm heiten, nimb dat.

Hans. Dat dich hundert tonnen dibells, harr ich will dich lernen.

Jerick. Wiltud haben oder stechen ?

Hans. Ich will redlich haben ;

Jerick. Nun wollen, dar ist mein ruck, cla to.

They must have axes made for the nonst to fight withall, and while one strikes, the other holds his back without defence.

Hans. Nimb dow das, vnd dar hast mein ruck.

Jerick. Noch amahl: O excellent, ligt dow dar, nun will ich alles haben, gelt vnd
kett, vnd alle mit einander, O hurtig,

frisch=bp lustig, nun bin ich ein hurtig Juncker.

Richard rises up again and snatcheth up the fellows hatchet that was flain.

Rich. Nè Hercules contra duos, yet pollicy hath gone beyond them both.

Du hundler schelm, morder, kehre dich,
seestu mich? gebe mir die kett vnd gelt
wieder;

Jerick. Wat bistu wieder labendig wor= den, so mus ich meren, wat wiltu stechen
oder haben?

Richard. So will ich machen du schelm.

Jerick. Harr, harr, bistu ein redlich karle, so sicht redlich, O ich sterb, ich sterb, lat mich leben!

Richard. Sagt mir dan wer hatt die brieffe geschrieben? Lie nicht sondern sagt die warheit:

Jerick. O mein fromer, guter, edler, gef= trenger Juncker, dar ist dat gelt vnd kett
wieder, pow soll alles haben, aber wer hatt die brieffe geschrieben, dat wet ich bey meiner seele nicht.

Rich. Lig dor still, still ich sag.

The villain swears, and deeply doth protest
He knows not who incited them to this,
And as it seems the scrowl imports no less.

So sterb du mir schelm.

Jerick. Ⓞ ich sterb, awe, awe, awe dat
dich der dibell hole!

As Richard kills the Bowr. Enter Saxon and the Palsgrave.

Saxon. Ⓕ dich an loser schelm, hastu
dein gesellen todt geschlagen?

Palsgr. Ⓕast vs den schelmen angreiffen.

Richard. Call you me schelme how dare you then Being Princes offer to lay hands on me?

That is the Hangmans Office here in Dutch-land.

Saxon. But this is strange, our Bours can speak no English,

What bistum more than a damn'd murderer?

That thou art so much we are witnesses.

Rich. Can then this habit alter me so much,
That I am call'd a villain by my friends?

Or shall I dare once to suspect your graces,

That for you could not make me Emperour,

Pittyng my sorrow through mine honour lost,

You set these slaves to rid me of my life,

Yet far be such a thought from Richard's heart.

Pals. How now? what do I hear Prince Richard speak?

Rich. The same: but wonder that he lives to speak.

And had not policy helpt above strength,

These sturdy swains had rid me of my life.

Sax. Far be it from your Grace for to suspect us.

Rich. Alas, I know not whom I should suspect;
But yet my heart cannot misdoubt your Graces?

Saxon. How came your Highness into this apparrel?

Rich. We as the manner is drew lots for Offices,
My hap was hardest to be made a Carter,
And by this letter which some villain wrote,

I was betray'd, here to be murdered ;
 But Heav'n which doth defend the Innocent,
 Arm'd me with strength and policy together,
 That I escap'd out of their treacherous snare.

Palf. Were it well founded, I dare lay my life,
 The Spanish tyrant knew of this conspiracie ;
 Therefore the better to dive into the depth
 Of this most devillish murderous complot,
 As also secretly to be beholders,
 Of the long-wisht for wedding of your daughter,
 We will disrobe these bowrs of their apparel,
 Clapping their rustick cases on our backs,
 And help your Highness for to drive the Cart.
 T' may be the traytor that did write these lines,
 Mistaking us for them will shew himself.

Richard. Prince Palatine this plot doth please me
 well,

I make no doubt if we deal cunningly,
 But we shall find the writer of this scroul.

Saxon. And in that hope I will disrobe this slave.
 Come Princes in the neighbouring thicket here,
 We may disguise our selves, and talk at pleasure ;
 Fye on him heavy lubber how he weighs.

Richard. The sin of murder hangs upon his soul,
 It is no mervail then if he be heavy.

Exeunt.

A C T . III.

Enter to the Revels.

Edward with an Imperial Crown. Hedewig the Emprefs. Bohemia the Taster. Alphonfus the Forrester. Mentz the Gester. Emprefs the Chambermaid. Brandenburg Physician. Tryer Secretarie. Alexander the Marshal, with his Marshals staff, and all the rest in their proper apparel, and Attendants and Pages.

Alex. Princes and Princes Superiors, Lords and Lords fellows, Gentlemen and Gentlemens Masters, and all the rest of the States here affembled, as well Masculine as Feminine, be it known unto you by these presence, that I Alexander de Toledo, Fortunes chief Marshal, do will and command you, by the authority of my said Office, to take your places in manner and form following, First the Emperour and the Emprefs, then the Taster, the Secretary, the Forrester, the Physician, as for the Chambermaid and my self, we will take our places at the neither end, the Jester is to wait up, and live by the crums that fall from the Emperours trencher, But now I have Marshal'd you to the table, what remains?

Mentz. Every fool can tell that, when men are fet to dinner they commonly expect meat.

Edward. That's the best Jest the fool made since he came into his Office. Marshal walk into the Kitchin, and see now the Churfurst of Collen bestirs himself.

Exit. Alex.

Mentz. Shall I go with him too? I love to be imploy'd in the Kitchin.

Edward. I prethee go, that we may be rid of thy wicked Jest.

Mentz. Have with thee Marshal, the fool rides thee. Exit. on Alex. back.

Alphon. Now by mine honour, my Lord of Mentz plays the fool the worst that ever I saw.

Edward. He do's all by contraries; for I am sure he playd the wiseman like a fool, and now he plays the fool wisely.

Alphon. Princes and Churfursts let us frolick
now,

This is a joyful day to Christendome,
When Christian Princes joyn in amity,
Schinck bowls of Reinfal and the purest Wine,
We'll spend this evening lustie upsie Dutch,
In honour of this unexpected league.

Empref. Nay gentle Forrester, there you range
amifs,

His looks are fitly suited to his thoughts,
His glorious Emprefs makes his heart triumph,
And hearts triumphing makes his countenance stai'd,
In contemplation of his lives delight.

Edward. Good Aunt let me excuse my self in this,

I am an Emperour but for a day,
She Emprefs of my heart while life doth last;
Then give me leave to use Imperial looks,
Nay if I be an Emperour I'll take leave,
And here I do pronounce it openly,
What I have lately whisper'd in her ears,
I love mine Emprefs more than Empery,
I love her looks above my fortunes hope.

Alphon. Saving your looks dread Emperour es gelt
a bowl,

Unto the health of your fair Bride and Emprefs.

Edward. Sam Got es soll mir en liebe

Drunk sein, so much Dutch have I learnt since I came into Germany.

Bran. When you have drunk a dozen of these bowls,
So can your Majesty with a full mouth,
Trowl out high Dutch, till then it sounds not right,

Drauff es gelt noch eins ihr Maiestat.

Edward. Sam Got lasz lauffen.

Bohem. My Lord of Brandenburg spoken like a good Dutch Brother ;
But most unlike a good Physician,
You should consider what he has to do,
His Bride will give you little thanks to night.

Alphon. Ha, ha my Lord, now give me leave to laugh,
He need not therefore shun one Beaker full.
In Saxon Land you know it is the use,
That the first night the Bridegroom spares the Bride.

Bohem. 'Tis true indeed, that had I quite forgotten.

Edward. How understand I that ?

Alphon. That the first night,
The Bride and Bridegroom never sleep together.

Edward. That may well be, perchance they wake together.

Bohem. Nay without fallace they have several Beds.

Edward. I in one Chamber, that is most Princely.

Alphon. Not onely several Beds, but several Chambers,

Lockt foundly too, with Iron Bolts and Bars.

Empr. Beleeve me Nephew, that's the custom here.

Edward. O my good Aunt, the world is now grown new,

Old customs are but superstitions.

I'm sure this day, this presence all can witness,
The high and mighty Prince th' Archbishop of Collen,
Who now is busie in the skullery,
Joyn'd us together in St. Peters Church,

And he that would disjoyn us two to night,
'Twixt jest and earnest be it proudly spoken,
Shall eat a piece of ill-digesting Iron.

Bride wilt dow dis nicht ben mee schlafen.

Hede. Da behute mich Gott fur, Ich hoffe Eure maiestat wills von mir mist, bege-ran.

Edward. What says she behute mich Got fur?

Alphon. She says God blefs her from such a deed.

Edward. Tush Empress, clap thy hands upon thy head,

And God will blefs thee, I have a Jacobs staff,
Shall take the Elevation of the Pole ;
For I have heard it sayd, the Dutch North star,
Is a degree or two higher than ours.

Bohem. Nay though we talk lets drink, and Em-perour,

I'll tell you plainly what you must trust unto,
Can they deceive you of your Bride to night,
They'll surely do't, therefore look to your self.

Edward. If she deceive me not, let all do their worst.

Alphon. Assure you Emperour she'l do her best.

Edward. I think the Maids in Germany are mad,
E're they be marryed they will not kifs,
And being marryed will not go to Bed.
We drink about, let's talk no more of this,
Well warn'd half arm'd our English proverb say

Alphon. Holla Marshal, what says the Cook ?

Enter Alexander.

Belike he thinks we have fed so well already,
That we disdain his simple Cookery.

Alex. Faith the Cook says so, that his Office was to dress a mess of meat with that Wood which the English Prince should bring in, but he hath neither feen Dutch Wood nor English Prince, therefore he desires you hold him excus'd.

Alphon. I wonder where Prince Richard stays so long.

Alex. An't, please your Majesty, he's come at length,
And with him has he brought a crew of Bows,
A hipse bowr maikins fresh as Flow'rs in May,
With whom they mean to dance a Saxon round,
In honour of the Bridegroom and his Bride.

Edward. So has he made amends for his long tar-rying.
I prethee Marshall them into the presence.

Alphon. Lives Richard then? I had thought th' had't made him sure.

Alex. O, I could tear my flesh to think upon 't,
He lives and secretly hath brought with him,
The Palsgrave and the Duke of Saxonie,
Clad like two Bows, even in the same apparel.
That Hans and Jerick wore when they went out to murder him,
It now behooves us to be circumspect.

Alphon. It likes me not; Away Marshal bring them.

Exit. Alexander.

I long to see this sports conclusion.

Bohem. I't not a lovely sight to see this couple Sit sweetly billing like two Turtle Doves.

Alphon. I promise you it sets my Teeth an Edge,
That I must take mine Emprefs in mine arms.
Come hither Ifabel, though thy roabs be homely,
Thy face and countenance holds colour still.

*Enter Alexander, Collen, Mentz, Richard, Saxony, Palfgrave, Collen Cook, with a gamon of raw bacon, and links or puddings in a platter, Richard, Palfgrave, Saxon, Mentz,
like Clowns with each of them a Miter with Corances on their heads.*

Collen. Dread Emperour and Emperefs for to day,
I Your appointed Cook untill to morrow,
Have by the Marshal fent my iust excuse,
And hope your Highnefs is therewith content,
Our Carter here for whom I now do fpeak,
Says that his Axletree broke by the way,
That is his answer, and for you fhall not famifh,
He and his fellow bowrs of the next dorp,
Haue brought a fchinkel of good raw Bacon,
And that's a common meat with us, unfod,
Defiring you, you would not fcorn the fare ;
'Twil make a cup of Wine tafte nippitate.

Edward. Welcome good fellows, we thank you for your prefent.

Richard. So spell fresh up, and let us
rommer daunfen.

Alex. Pleafe it your Highnefs to dance with your Bride?

Edward. Alas I cannot dance your German dances.

Bohem. I do befeech your Highnefs mock us not,
We Germans have no changes in our dances,
An Almain and an upspring that is all,
So dance the Princes, Burgers, and the Bowrs.

Brand. So daunc'd our Auncestors for thoufand years.

Edw. It is a fign the Dutch are not new fangled.
I'll follow in the meafure ; Marshal lead.

Alexander and Mentz have the fore dance with each of them a glafs of Wine in their hands, then Edward and Hedewick, Palsgrave and Emprefs, and two other couple, after Drum and Trumpet.

The Palsgrave whispers with the Emprefs.

Alphon. I think the Bowr is amorous of my Emprefs ;
Fort bowr and leffel morgen, when thou com'ft to houle.

Collen. Now is your Graces time to steal away,
Look to't or else you'l lie alone to night.

Edward steals away the Bride.

Alex. (Drinketh to the Palsgrave.) Skelt bowre.

Palsgrave. Sam Gott.

The Palsgrave requests the Emprefs.

By Jungfraw helpe mich doch ein Jungfraw drunck

Es gelt guter freundt ein frolocken drink.

Alphon. Sain Gott mein frundt ich will gern bescheidt thun

(Alphonfus takes the Cup of the Palsgrave, and drinks to the King of Bohemia, and after he hath drunk puts poyson into the Beaker.)

Half this I drinke unto your Highness health,
It is the first since we were joynd in Office.

Bohem. I thank your Maiefty, I'le pledge you half.
(As Bohem is a drinking, e're he hath drunk it all out, Alphonfus pulls the Beaker from his mouth).

Alphon. Hold, hold, your Maiefty, drink not too much.

Bohem. What means your Highness.

Alphon. Methinks that something grates between my teeth,

Pray God there be not poyson in the bowl.

Bohem. Marry God forbid.

Alex. So were I pepper'd.

Alphon. I highly do mistrust this schelmish bowr,
Lay hands on him, I'll make him drink the rest.

Was ist was ist wat will you mit mee
machen

Alphon. Drink out, drink out oder der dibell soll dich holen.

Palf. Ey geb you to frieden ich will gern drink.

Saxon. Drink not Prince Pallatine, throw it on the ground,

It is not good to trust his Spanish flies.

Bohem. Saxon and Palfgrave, this cannot be good.

Alphon. 'Twas not for nought my mind misgave me so ;

This hath Prince Richard done t'entrap our lives.

Richard. No Alphonfus, I disdain to be a traytor.

Emprejs. O sheath your swords, forbear these needless broyls.

Alphon. Away, I do mistrust thee as the rest.

Bohem. Lord's hear me speak, to pacify these broyls ;

For my part I feel no distemperature,

How do you feel your self ?

Alphon. I can not tell, not ill, and yet methinks
I am not well.

Bohem. Were it a poyson 'twould begin to work.

Alphon. Not so, all poysons do not work alike.

Palf. If there were poyson in, which God forbid,
The Emprejs and my self and Alexander,

Have cause to fear as well as any other.

Alphon. Why didst thou throw the Wine upon the earth ?

Hadst thou but drunk, thou hadst satisfied our minds.

Palf. I will not be enforc't by Spanish hands.

Alphon. If all be well with us, that schuce shall ferve

If not, the Spaniards blood will be reveng'd.

Rich. Your Maiesty is more afraid than hurt.

Bohem. For me I do not fear my self a whit,
Let all be friends, and forward with our mirth.

Enter Edward in his night-gown and his shirt.

Richard. Nephew, how now ? is all well with you ?

Bohem. I lay my life the Prince has lost his bride.

Edward. I hope not so, she is but stray'd a little.

Alphon. Your Grace must not be angry though we laugh.

Edward. If it had hapned by default of mine,
You might have worthily laught me to scorn ;
But to be so deceiv'd, so over reach'd,
Even as I meant to clasp her in mine arms,
The grief is intollerable, not to be guest,
Or comprehended by the thought of any,
But by a man that hath been so deceiv'd,
And that's by no man living but my self.

Saxon. My Princely Son-in-Law God give you joy.

Edward. Of what my Princely Father ?

Saxon. O' my Daughter.

Your new betroathed Wife and Bed-fellow.

Edward. I thank you Father, indeed I must confels

She is my Wife, but not my Bed-fellow.

Saxon. How so young Prince ? I saw you steal her hence,

And as me thought she went full willingly.

Edward. 'Tis true, I stole her finely from amongst
you,

And by the Arch-Bishop of Collens help,
Got her alone in to the Bride-Chamber,
Where having lockt the Door, thought all was well.

I could not speak but pointed to the Bed,
 She answered Ja and gan for to unlace her ;
 I seeing that suspected no deceit,
 But straight untruff my points, uncas'd my felf,
 And in a moment flipt between the Sheets ;
 There lying in deep contemplation,
 The Princess of her felf drew neer to me,
 Gave me her hand, fpake prettily in Dutch
 I know not what, and kiff me lovingly,
 And as I fhrank out of my luke warm place
 To make her room, she clapt thrice with her feet,
 And through a trap-door funck out of my fight ;
 Knew I but her Confederates in the deed——
 I fay no more.

Emprefs. Tuff Cofin, be content ;
 So many Lands, fo many fashions,
 It is the German ufe, be not impatient,
 She will be fo much welcomer to morrow.

Rich. Come Nephew, we'l be Bed-fellows to-night.

Edward. Nay if I find her not, I'le lye alone,
 I have good hope to ferret out her Bed,
 And fo good night fweet Princess all at once.

Alphon. Godnight to all ; Marshal difcharge the train.

Alex. To Bed, to Bed the Marshal crys 'tis time.

Exeunt.

Flourish Cornets, Manent. Saxon, Richard, Palfgrave, Collen, Emprefs.

Saxon. Now Princes it is time that we advife,
 Now we are all faft in the Fowlers gin,
 Not to efcape his fubtle fnares alive,
 Unlefs by force we break the Nets afunder.
 When he begins to cavil and pick quarrels,
 I will not truff him in the leaft degree.

Emprefs. It may befeem me evil to mifftruff
 My Lord and Emperour of fo foul a faft ;
 But love unto his honour and your lives,

Makes me with tears intreat your Excellencies
To fly with speed out of his dangerous reach,
His cloudy brow foretells a suddain storm
Of blood not natural but prodigious.

Rich. The Castle gates are shut, how should we fly ;
But were they open, I would lose my life,
E're I would leave my Nephew to the slaughter ;
He and his Bride were sure to bear the brunt.

Saxon. Could I get out of doors, I'd venture that,
And yet I hold their persons dear enough,
I would not doubt, but e're the morning Sun,
Should half way run his course into the South,
To compass and begirt him in his Fort,
With Saxon lansknights and brunt-bearing Switzers,
Who lye in Ambuscado not far hence,
That he should come to Composition,
And with safe conduct bring into our tents,
Both Bride and Bridegroom, and all other friends.

Empress. My Chamber Window stands upon the Wall,
And thence with ease you may escape away.

Saxon. Prince Richard, will you bear me Company ?

Richard. I will my Lord.

Saxon. And you Prince Pallatine ?

Palf. The Spanish Tyrant hath me in suspect
Of poysoning him, I'l therefore stay it out,
To fly upon't were to accuse my self.

Empress. If need require, I'le hide the Pallatine.
Untill to morrow, if you stay no longer.

Saxon. If God be with us, e're to morrow noon
We'll be with Ensigns spread before the Walls ;
We leave dear pledges of our quick return.

Emp. May the Heavens prosper your iust intents.
Exeunt.

Enter Alphonfus.

Alphon. This dangerous plot was happily overheard,

Here didst thou listen in a blessed howr.

Alexander, where do'st thou hide thy self ?

I've fought thee in each Corner of the Court,
And now or never must thou play the man.

Alex. And now or never must your Highness stir.
Treason hath round encompassed your life.

Alphon. I have no leasure now to hear thy talk.
Seest thou this Key ?

Alex. Intends your Majesty, that I should steal into the Princes Chambers,
And sleeping stab them in their Beds to night ?
That cannot be.

Alphon. Wilt thou not hear me speak ?

Alex. The Prince of England, Saxon, and of Collen,
Are in the Empress chamber privily.

Alphon. All this is nothing, they would murder me,

I come not there to night ; seest thou this Key ?

Alex. They mean to fly out at the Chamber Window,
And raise an Army to beseege your Grace ;
Now may your Highness take them with the deed.

Alphon. The Prince of Wales I hope is none of them.

Alex. Him and his Bride by force they will recover.

Alphon. What makes the cursed Palsgrave of the Rhein ?

Alex. Him hath the Empress taken to her charge,
And in her Closet means to hide him safe.

Alphon. To hide him in her Closet ? of bold deeds,
The dearest charge that e're she undertook,
Well let them bring their Complots to an end,
I'll undermine to meet them in their works,

Alex. Will not your Grace surprize them e're they fly ?

Alphon. No, let them bring their purpose to effect,
I'll fall upon them at my best advantage,
Seest thou this Key ? there take it Alexander ;
Yet take it not unless thou be resolv'd ;
Tush I am fond to make a doubt of thee ;

Take it I say, it doth command all Doors,
And will make open way to dire revenge.

Alex. I know not what your Majesty doth mean.

Alphon. Hie thee with speed into the inner Chamber,

Next to the Chappel, and there shalt thou find
The danty trembling Bride coucht in her Bed,
Having beguil'd her Bridegroom of his hopes,
Taking her farewell of Virginitie,
Which she to morrow night expects to lose,
By night all Cats are gray, and in the dark,
She will imbrace thee for the Prince of Wales,
Thinking that he hath found her Chamber out,
Fall to thy business and make few words,
And having pleas'd thy senses with delight,
And fill'd thy beating vains with stealing joy,
Make thence agen before the break of day,
What strange events will follow this device,
We need not study on, our foes shall find.

How now ? how standst thou ? hast thou not the heart ?

Alex. Should I not have the heart to do this deed,
I were a Bastard villain and no man ;
Her sweetness, and the sweetness of revenge,
Tickles my senses in a double sense,
And so I wish your Majesty good night.

Alphon. God night, sweet Venus prosper thy attempt.

Alex. Sweet Venus and grim Ate I implore, Stand both of you to me auspicious. Exit. Alexander.

Alphon. It had been pittie of his Fathers life,
Whose death hath made him such a perfect villain.
What murder, wrack, and causeless enmity,
'Twixt dearest friends that are my strongest foes,
Will follow suddainly upon this rape,
I hope to live to see, and laugh thereat,
And yet this peece of practice is not all.
The King of Bohem though he little feel it,
Because in twenty hours it will not work,
Hath from my Knives point suck'd his deadly bane,
Whereof I will be least of all suspected ;

For I will feign my self as sick as he,
 And blind mine enemies eyes with deadly groans ;
 Upon the Palsgrave and mine Emperers,
 Heavy suspect shall light to bruze their bones ;
 Though Saxon would not suffer him to taste,
 The deadly potion provided for him,
 He cannot save him from the Sword of Iustice,
 When all the world shall think that like a villain,
 He hath poyson'd two great Emperours with one draught ;
 That deed is done, and by this time I hope,
 The other is a doing, Alexander
 I doubt it not will do it thorowly.
 While these things are a brewing I'l not sleep,
 But sudainly break ope the Chamber doors,
 And rush upon my Emprefs and the Palsgrave,
 Holla wher's the Captain of the Guard ?

Enter Captain, and Souldiers.

Cap. What would you Majesty ?

Alphon. Take six travants well arm'd and followe.
They break with violence into the Chamber, and Alphonfus trayles the Emprefs by the hair.

Enter Alphonfus, Emprefs, Souldiers, &c.

Alphon. Come forth thou damned Witch, adulterous
 Whore,

Foul scandal to thy name, thy fex, thy blood.

Emp. O Emperour, gentle Husband, pittie me.

Alphon. Canst thou deny thou wert confederate,
 With my arch enemies that fought my blood ?
 And like a Strumpet through thy Chamber Window,
 Hast with thine own hands helpt to let them down,
 With an intent that they should gather arms,
 Besiege my Court, and take away my life ?

Emp. Ah my Alphonfus.

Alphon. Thy Alphonfus Whore ?

Emp. O pierce my heart, trail me not by my hair

What I have done, I did it for the best.

Alphon. So for the best advantage of thy lust,
Hast thou in secret Clytemnestra like,
Hid thy Ægestus thy adulterous love.

Emp. Heav'n be the record 'twixt my Lord and
me,
How pure and sacred I do hold thy Bed.

Alphon. Art thou so impudent to bely the deed,
Is not the Palsgrave hidden in thy Chamber ?

Emp. That I have hid the Palsgrave I confes ;
But to no ill intent your conscience knows.

Alphon. Thy treasons, murders, incests, forceries,
Are all committed to a good intent ;
Thou know'st he was my deadly enemy.

Emp. By this device I hop'd to make your friends :

Alphon. Then bring him forth, we'l reconcile our selves.

Emp. Should I betray so great a Prince's life ?

Alphon. Thou holdst his life far dearer than thy Lords,

This very night hast thou betrayd my blood,
But thus, and thus, will I revenge my self,
And but thou speedily deliver him,
I'le trail thee through the Kennels of the Street,
And cut the Nose from thy bewitching face,
And into England fend thee like a Strumpet.

Emp. Pull every hair from off my head,
Drag me at Horfes tayls, cut off my nose
My Princely tongue shall not betray a Prince.

Alph. That will I try.

Emp. O Heav'n revenge my shame.

Enter Palsgrave.

Pal. Is Cæsar now become a torturer,
A Hangman of his Wife, turn'd murderer ?
Here is the Pallatine, what wouldst thou more ?

Alphon. Upon him Souldiers, strike him to the ground.

Emp. Ah Souldiers, spare the Princely Pallatine.

Alphon. Down with the damn'd adulterous murderer.

Kill him I fay, his blood be on my head.

They kill the Pallatine.

Run to the Tow'r, and Ring the Larum Bell,
That fore the world I may excuse my self,
And tell the reason of this bloody deed.

Enter Edward in his night gown and shirt.

Edw. How now? what means this sudain strange Allarm?

What wretched dame is this with blubbered cheeks,
And rent dishevel'd hair?

Emp. O my dear Nephew,
Fly, fly the Shambles, for thy turn is next.

Edward. What, my Imperial Aunt? then break my heart.

Alphon. Brave Prince be still; as I am nobly born,
There is no ill intended to thy person.

Enter Mentz, Tryer, Branden. Bohem.

Mentz. Where is my Page? bring me my two hand Sword.

Tryer. What is the matter? is the Court a fire

Bran. Whose that? the Emperour with his weapon drawn?

Bohem. Though deadly sick yet am I forc'd to rife,
To know the reason of this hurley burley.

Alphon. Princes be filent, I will tell the caufe,
Though sudainly a griping at my heart
Forbids my tongue his wonted course of speech.
See you this Harlot, traytrefs to my life,
See you this murderer, stain to mine honour,
These twain I found together in my Bed,
Shamefully committing lewd Adultery,
And hainously conspiring all your deaths,

I mean your deaths, that are not dead already ;
As for the King of Boheme and my self,
We are not of this world, we have our transports
Giv'n in the bowl by this adulterous Prince,
And least the poyson work too strong with me,
Before that I have warnd you of your harms,
I will be brief in the relation.

That he hath staind my Bed, these eyes have seen,
That he hath murder'd two Imperial Kings,
Our speedy deaths will be too sudain proof ;
That he and she have bought and sold your lives,
To Saxon, Collen, and the English Prince,
Their Ensigns spread before the Walls to morrow
Will all too sudainly bid you defiance.

Now tell me Princes have I not just cause,
To slay the murderer of so many souls ?
And have not all cause to applaud the deed ?
More would I utter, but the poysons force
Forbids my speech, you can conceive the rest.

Bohem. Your Majesty reach me your dying hand,
With thousand thanks for this so just revenge.
O, how the poysons force begins to work !

Mentz. The world may pittie and applaud the deed.

Brand. Did never age bring forth such hainous acts.

Edward. My senses are confounded and amaz'd.

Emp. The God of Heav'n knows my unguiltiness.

Enter Messenger.

Mes. Arm, arm my Lords, we have descry'd a far,
An Army of ten thousand men at arms.

Alphon. Some run unto the Walls, some draw up the Sluce,
Some speedily let the Purculles down.

Mentz. Now may we see the Emperours words are true.

To prison with the wicked murderous Whore. Exeunt.

ACT. IV.

Enter Saxon and Richard with Souldiers.

Saxon. My Lord of Cornwall, let us march before,
To speedy rescue of our dearest friends,
The reward with the armed Legions,
Committed to the Prince of Collen's charge,
Cannot so lightly pass the mountain tops.

Richard. Let's summon suddenly unto a Parly,
I do not doubt but ere we need their helps,
Collen with all his forces will be here.

Enter Collen with Drums and an Army.

Richard. Your Holiness hath made good haft
to day,
And like a beaten Souldier lead your troops.

Collen. In time of peace I am an Arch-Bishop,
And like a Church-man can both sing and say ;
But when the innocent do suffer wrong,
I cast my rocket off upon the Altar,
And like a Prince betake my self to arms.

Enter above Mentz, Tryer, and Brandenburg.

Mentz. Great Prince of Saxonie, what mean these arms ?

Richard of Cornwall, what may this intend ?
Brother of Collen no more Churchman now,
Instead of Miter, and a Crossier Staff,
Have you betane you to your Helme and Targe ?
Were you so merry yesterday as friends,

Cloaking your treason in your Clowns attire ?

Saxon. Mentz, we return the traytor in thy face.
To save our lives, and to release our friends,
Out of the Spaniards deadly trapping Snares,
Without intent of ill, this power is rais'd ;
Therefore grave Prince Marquess of Brandenburg,
My loving Cofin, as indifferent Judge,
To you an aged Peace-maker we speak,
Deliver with safe conduct in our tents,
Prince Edward and his Bride, the Pallatine,
With every one of high or low degree,
That are suspicious of the King of Spain,
So shall you see that in the self same howr
We marched to the Walls with colours spread,
We will cashier our troups, and part good friends.

Brand. Alas my Lord, crave you the Pallatine ?

Rich. If craving will not serve, we will command.

Brand. Ah me, since your departure, good my Lords,

Strange accidents of blood and death are hapned.

Saxon. My mind misgave a massacre this night.

Rich. How do's Prince Edward then ?

Sax. How do's my Daughter ?

Collen. How goes it with the Palsgrave of the Rhein ?

Brand. Prince Edward and his Bride do live in health,

And shall be brought unto you when you please.

Saxon. Let them be presently deliver'd ?

Coll. Lives not the Palsgrave too ?

Mentz. In Heaven or Hell he lives, and reaps the merrit of his deeds.

Coll. What damned hand hath butchered the Prince ?

Saxon. O that demand is needless, who but he,
That seeks to be the Butcher of us all ;
But vengeance and revenge shall light on him.

Bran. Be patient noble Princes, hear the rest.
The two great Kings of Bohem and Castile,

God comfort them, lie now at point of death,
Both poyson'd by the Palsgrave yesterday.

Rich. How is that possible? so must my Sister,
The Pallatine himself, and Alexander,
Who drunk out of the bowl, be poysoned too.

Mentz. Nor is that hainous deed alone the cause,
Though cause enough to ruin Monarchies;
He hath defil'd with lust th' Imperial Bed,
And by the Emperour in the fact was slain.

Collen. O worthy guiltless Prince; O had he fled.

Rich. But say where is the Empress, where's my Sister.

Mentz. Not burnt to ashes yet, but shall be shortly.

Rich. I hope her Majesty will live to see
A hundred thousand flattering turncoat slaves,
Such as your Holiness, dye a shameful death.

Brand. She is in prison, and attends her tryal.

Sax. O strange heart-breaking mischievous intents,
Give me my children if you love your lives,
No safety is in this enchanted Fort.
O see in happy hour there comes my Daughter,
And loving son, scapt from the Massacre.

Enter Edward and Hedewick.

Edward. My body lives, although my heart be slain,

O Princes this hath been the dismal'st night,
That ever eye of sorrow did behold,
Here lay the Palsgrave weltring in his blood,
Dying Alphonfus standing over him,
Upon the other hand the King of Bohem,
Still looking when his poyson'd bulk would break;
But that which pierc'd my soul with natures touch
Was my tormented Aunt with blubberd cheeks,
Torn bloody Garments, and disheveld' hair,
Waiting for death; deservedly or no,
That knows the searcher of all humane thoughts;
For these devices are beyond my reach.

Saxon. Sagt doch liebes Doister wo wart dow dieselbienast.

Hede. Als wo wo solt ich sein ich war in bette.

Saxon. Wert dow allein so wart dow gar vorschrocken.

Hede. Ich ha mist audes gemeint dam
das ich wolt allein geschlaffne haben, aber
umb mitternast kam meiner bridegroom bndt schlaffet bey mir, bis wir mit dem
getummel erwacht waren.

Edward. What says she? came her Bridegroom to to her at midnight?

Rich. Nephew, I see you were not over-reach'd;
Although she slipt out of your arms at first,
You seiz'd her surely, e're you left the chace.

Saxon. But left your Grace your Bride alone in Bed?

Or did she run together in the Larum?

Edward. Alas my Lords, this is no time to jest;
I lay full sadly in my Bed alone,
Not able for my life to sleep a wink,
Till that the Larum Bell began to Ring,
And then I started from my weary couch.

Saxon. How now? this rimes not with my daughters speech,
She says you found her Bed, and lay with her.

Edward. Not I, your Highness did mistake her words.

Collen. Deny it not Prince Edward, 'tis an honour.

Edward. My Lords I know no reason to deny it;
T'have found her Bed, I would have given a million.

Saxon. Hedewick der Furst sagt er
hatt nicht be dir schlafin.

Hede. Es gefelt ihm also zum lagun aber ich habes woll gerfület.

Rich. She say's you are difpos'd to jest with her ;
But yesternight she felt it in good earnest.

Edward. Unckle these jests are too unfavorie,
Ill suited to these times, and please me not,

Lab ich bin you geschlapien yesternight.

Hede. Ich leff, warum sult ihrs fragen.

Saxon. Edward, I tell thee 'tis no jesting matter,
Say plainly, wa'st thou by her I or no ?

Edward. As I am Prince, true heir to Englands
Crown,
I never toucht her body in a Bed.

Hede. Das haste gethan order holle mich der diuell.

Rich. Nephew, take heed, you hear the Princess words.

Edward. It is not she, nor you, nor all the world,
Shall make me say I did anothers deed.

Saxon. Anothers deed ? what, think'st thou her a whore ?

Saxon strikes Edward.

Edward. She may be Whore, and thou a villain
too.

Strook me the Emperor I will strike again.

Collen. Content you Princes, buffet not like boys.

Richard. Hold you the one, and I will hold the other.

Hede. Oh her got, help, help, oich arms kindt.

Saxon. Souldiers lay hands upon the Prince of Wales,
Convey him speedily unto a prison,
And load his Legs with grievous bolts of Iron ;

Some bring the Whore my Daughter from my fight ;
And thou smooth Englishman to thee I speak,
My hate extends to all thy Nation,
Pack thee out of my fight, and that with speed
Your English practises have all to long,
Muffled our German eyes, pack, pack I say.

Richard. Although your Grace have reason for your rage,
Yet be not like a madman to your friends.

Saxon. My friends? I scorn the friendship of such mates,
That seek my Daughters spoil, and my dishonour ;
But I will teach the Boy another lesson,
His head shall pay the ransom of his fault.

Richard. His head ?

Saxon. And thy head too, O how my heart doth fwell !

Was there no other Prince to mock but me ?
First woo, then marry her, then lye with her,
And having had the pleasure of her Bed,
Call her a Whore in open audieuce,
None but a villain and a slave would do it,
My Lords of Mentz, of Tryer, and Brandenburg,
Make ope the Gates, receive me as a friend,
I'll be a scourge unto the English Nation.

Mentz. Your Grace shall be the welcom't guest alive,

Collen. None but a madman would do such a deed.

Saxon. Then Collen count me mad, for I will do it.

I'll set my life and Land upon the hazard,
But I will thoroughly found this deceit.
What will your Grace leave me or follow me ?

Collen. No Saxon know I will not follow thee.
And leave Prince Richard in so great extreame.

Saxon. Then I defy you both, and so farwell.

Rich. Yet Saxon hear me speak before thou go,
Look to the Princes life as to thine own,
Each perisht hair that falleth from his head

By thy default, shall cost a Saxon City,
Henry of England will not lose his heir,
 And so farwel and think upon my words.

Saxon. Away, I do disdain to answer thee.
 Pack thee with shame again into thy Country,
 I'll have a Cock-boat at my proper charge,
 And send th' Imperial Crown which thou hast won,
 To England by Prince Edward after thee. Exeunt.

Man. Rich. and Coll.

Collen. Answer him not Prince Richard, he is mad,
 Choler and grief have rob'd him of his senses.
 Like accident to this was never heard.

Rich. Break heart and dye, fie hence my troubled spirit,

I am not able for to underbear
 The weight of sorrow which doth bruze my soul,
 O Edward, O sweet Edward, O my life.
 O noble Collen last of all my hopes,
 The only friend in my extremities,
 If thou dost love me, as I know thou dost,
 Unsheath thy sword, and rid me of this sorrow.

Collen. Away with abject thoughts, fie Princely
Richard,

Rouse up thy self, and call thy senses home,
 Shake of this base pusillanimitie,
 And cast about to remedie these wrongs,

Richard. Alas I see no means of remedie.

Collen. Then hearken to my Counsel and advice,
 We will Intrench our selves not far from hence,
 With those small pow'rs we have, and fend for more,
 If they do make assault, we will defend ;
 If violence be offer'd to the Prince,
 We'll rescue him with venture of our lives ;
 Let us with patience attend advantage,
 Time may reveal the author of these treasons,
 For why undoubtedly the sweet young Princess,
 Fowly beguiled by night with cunning shew,
 Hath to some villain lost her Maiden-head.

Rich. O that I knew the foul incestuous wretch,
Thus would I tear him with my teeth and nails.
Had Saxon sense he would conceive so much,
And not revenge on guiltless Edwards life.

Collen. Periwade your self he will be twice advis'd,
Before he offer wrong unto the Prince.

Rich. In that good hope I will have patience.
Come gentle Prince whose pitty to a stranger
Is rare and admirable, not to be spoken.

England cannot requite this gentleness.

Collen. Tush talk not of requital, let us go,
To fortifie our selves within our trench. Exeunt.

Enter Alphonso (carried in the Couch) Saxony, Mentz, Tryer, Brandenburg, Alexander.

Alphon. O most excessive pain, O raging Fire !
Is burning Cancer or the Scorpion,
Descended from the Heavenly Zodiack,
To parch mine Entrals with a quenchless flame ?
Drink, drink I say, give drink or I shall dye.
Fill a thousand bowls of Wine, Water I say
Water from forth the cold Tartarian hills.
I feel th' ascending flame lick up my blood,
Mine Entrals shrink together like a scowl
Of burning parchment, and my Marrow fries,
Bring huge Cakes of Ice, and Flakes of Snow.
That I may drink of them being dissolved.

Saxon. We do beseech your Majestie have patience,

Alphon. Had I but drunk an ordinary poyson,
The sight of thee great Duke of Saxony,
My friend in death, in life my greatest foe,
Might both allay the venom and the torment ;
But that adulterous Palsgrave and my Wife,
Upon whose life and soul I vengeance cry,
Gave me a mineral not to be digested,
Which burning eats, and eating burns my heart.
My Lord of Tryer, run to the King of Bohem,

Commend me to him, ask him how he fares,
 None but my self can rightly pittie him ;
 For none but we have fympathie of pains.
 Tell him when he is dead, my time's not long,
 And when I dye bid him prepare to follow.

Exit Tryer.

Now, now it works a fresh ; are you my friends ?
 Then throw me on the cold fwift running Rhyn,
 And let me bath there for an hour or two,
 I cannot bear this pain.

Mentz. O would th' impartial fates affliēt on me,
 Thefe deadly pains, and ease my Emperour,
 How willing would I bear them for his fake.

Alphon. O Mentz, I would not wish unto a Dog,
 The leaft of thousand torments that affliēt me,
 Much lefs unto your Princely holinefs.
 See, fee my Lord of Mentz, he points at you.

Mentz. It is your fantasie and nothing elfe ;
 But were death here, I would difpute with him,
 And tell him to his teeth he doth unjuftice,
 To take your Majesty in the prime of youth ;
 Such wither'd rotten branches as my self,
 Should firft be lopt, had he not partial hands ;
 And here I do proteft upon my Knee,
 I would as willingly now leave my life,
 To fave my King and Emperour alive,
 As erft my mother brought me to the world.

Brand. My Lord of Mentz, this flattery is too
 grofs,
 A Prince of your experience and calling,
 Should not fo fondly call the Heavens to witnefs.

Mentz. Think you my Lord, I would not hold my word ?

Brand. You know my Lord, death is a bitter gueft.

Mentz. To ease his pain and fave my Emperour,
 I fwetly would embrace that bitternefs.

Alex. If I were death, I knew what I would do.

Mentz. But fee, his Majesty is faln a fleep,

Ah me, I fear it is a dying flumber.

Alphon. My Lord of Saxonie do you hear this jest.

Saxon. What should I hear my Lord ?

Alphon. Do you not hear
How loudly death proclames it in mine ears,
Swearing by trophies, Tombs and deadmens Graves,
If I have any friend so dear to me,
That to excuse my life will lose his own,
I shall be presently restor'd to health.

Enter Tryer.

Mentz. I would he durst make good his promises.

Alphon. My Lord of Tryer, how fares my fellow Emperour ?

Tryer. His Majesty is eas'd of all his pains.

Alphon. O happy news, now I have hope of health.

Mentz. My joyful heart doth spring within my bodie,

To hear those words,
Comfort your Majesty I will excuse you,
Or at the least will bear you Company.

Alphon. My hope is vain, now, now my heart will break,

My Lord of Tryer you did but flatter me,
Tell me the truth, how fares his Majesty.

Tryer. I told your Highness, eas'd of all his pain.

Alphon. I understand thee now, he's eas'd by death,

And now I feel an alteration ;
Farewel sweet Lords, farewel my Lord of Mentz,
The truest friend that ever earth did bear,
Live long in happiness to revenge my death,
Upon my Wife and all the English brood.
My Lord of Saxonie your Grace hath cause.

Mentz. I dare thee death to take away my life.
Some charitable hand that loves his Prince.
And hath the heart, draw forth his Sword and rid me
of my life.

Alex. I love my Prince, and have the heart to do it.

Mentz. O stay a while.

Alex. Nay now it is to late.

Bran. Villain what hast thou done ? th'ast slain a Prince.

Alex. I did no more than he intreated me,

Alphon. How now, what make I in my Couch so late ?

Princes why stand you so gazing about me ?
Or who is that lies slain before my face ?
O I have wrong, my soul was half in Heaven,
His holiness did know the joys above,
And therefore is ascended in my stead.
Come Princes let us bear the body hence ;
I'll spend a Million to embalm the same.
Let all the Bells within the Empire Ring,
Let Mass be said in every Church and Chappel,
And that I may perform my latest vow,
I will procure so much by Gold or friends,
That my sweet Mentz shall be Canonized,
And numbred in the Bed-role of the Saints,
I hope the Pope will not deny it me,
I'll build a Church in honour of thy name,
Within the antient famous Citie Mentz,
Fairer than any one in Germany,
There shalt thou be interr'd with Kingly Pomp,
Over thy Tomb shall hang a sacred Lamp,
Which till the day of doom shall ever burn,
Yea after ages shall speak of thy renown,
And go a Pilgrimage to thy sacred Tomb.
Grief stops my voice, who loves his Emperour,
Lay to his helping hand and bear him hence,
Sweet Father and redeemer of my life. Exeunt.

Manet Alexander.

Alex. Now is my Lord sole Emperour of Rome,
And three Conspirators of my Fathers death,

Are cunningly sent unto Heaven or Hell ;
Like subtilty to this was never seen.
Alas poor Mentz I pittying thy prayers,
Could do no less than lend a helping hand,
Thou wert a famous flatterer in thy life,
And now hast reapt the fruits thereof in death ;
But thou shalt be rewarded like a Saint,
With Masses, Bells, dirges and burning Lamps,
'Tis good, I envie not thy happinefs :
But ah the sweet remembrance of that night,
That night I mean of sweetnefs and of stealth,
When for a Prince, a Princess did imbrace me,
Paying the first fruits of her Marriage Bed,
Makes me forget all other accidents.
O Saxon I would willingly forgive,
The deadly trespass of my Fathers death,
So I might have thy Daughter to my Wife,
And to be plain, I have best right unto her,
And love her best, and have deserv'd her best ;
But thou art fond to think on such a match ;
Thou must imagin nothing but revenge,
And if my computation fail me not.
Ere long I shall be thorowly reveng'd.

Exit.

Enter the Duke of Saxon, and Hedewick with the Child.

Saxon. Come forth thou perfect map of miserie,
Desolate Daughter and distressed Mother,
In whom the Father and the Son are curst ;
Thus once again we will assay the Prince.
'T may be the sight of his own flesh and blood
Will now at last pierce his obdurate heart.
Jailor how fares it with thy prisoner ?
Let him appear upon the battlements.

Hede. Ⓞ mein deere vatter, ich habe
in dis lang lang 30. weeken, welche mich
duncket sein 40. jahr gewesen, ein litte

Engliſch gelernet, vnd ich hope, he will me verſtohn, vnd ſhew me a litte pittie.

Enter Edward on the Walls and Failor.

Saxon. Good morrow to your grace Edward of Wales,

Son and immediate Heir to Henry the third,
King of England and Lord of Ireland,
Thy Fathers comfort, and the peoples hope ;
'Tis not in mockage nor at unawares,
That I am ceremonious to repeat
Thy high deſcent joynd with thy Kingly might ;
But therewithall to intimate unto thee
What God expecteth from the higher powers,
Juſtice, and mercie, truth, ſobrietie,
Relenting hearts, hands innocent of blood.
Princes are Gods chief ſubſtitutes on earth,
And ſhould be Lamps unto the common fort.
But you will ſay I am become a Preacher,
No, Prince, I am an humble ſuppliant,
And to prepare thine ears make this exordium,
To pierce thine eyes and heart, behold this ſpectacle,
Three Generations of the Saxon blood,
Deſcended lineallie from forth my Loyns,
Kneeling and crying to thy mightineſs ;
Firſt look on me, and think what I have been,
For now I think my ſelf of no account,
Next Cæſar, greateſt man in Germanie,
Neerly a lyed, and ever friend to England ;
But Womens ſighs move more in manly hearts,
O ſee the hands ſhe elevates to Heaven,
Behold thoſe eyes that whilome were thy joyes,
Uttering dumb eloquence in Chriſtal tears ;
If theſe exclames and ſighs be ordinarie,
Then look with pittie on thy other ſelf,
This is thy fleſh, and blood, bone of thy bone,
A goodly Boy the Image of his fire.

Turn'st thou away? O were thy Father here,
 He would, as I do, take him in his arms,
 And sweetly kifs his Grand-child in the face.
 O Edward too young in experience,
 That canst not look into the grievous wrack,
 Ensuing this thy obstinate deniall ;
 O Edward too young in experience,
 That canst not see into the future good,
 Ensuing thy most just acknowledgement ;
 Hear me thy truest friend, I will repeat them ;
 For good thou hast an Heir indubitate,
 Whose eyes already sparckle Majesty,
 Born in true Wedlock of a Princely Mother,
 And all the German Princes to thy friends ;
 Where on the contrary thine eyes shall see,
 The speedy Tragedie of thee and thine ;
 Like Athamas first will I ceize upon
 Thy young unchristened and despised Son,
 And with his guileless brains bepaint the Stones ;
 Then like Virginus will I kill my Child,
 Unto thine eyes a pleasing spectacle ;
 Yet shall it be a momentarie pleasure,
Henry of England shall mourn with me ;
 For thou thy self Edward shall make the third,
 And be an actor in this bloody Scean.

Hede. Ah myne seete Edouart, mein herzkin, myne scherzkin, mein herziges, einiges herz, mein allerleibest husband,
 ꝛ preedee mein leese see me sciendlich one,
 good seete harte tell de trut : and at lest to me, and dyne allerleefest schild shew pittty! dan ich bin dyne, vnd dow bist
 myne, dow hast me geben ein kindelein ;
 O Edouart, seete, Edouart erbarmet sein!

Edw. O Hedewick peace, thy speeches pierce my foul.

Hede. Hedewick doe yow excellencie
hight me Hedewick leete Edouart yow Sweete ich bin yowr allerlieueste wife.

Edward. The Priest I must confes made thee my Wife,

Curst be the damned villanous adulterer,
That with so fowl a blot divorc'd our love.

Hede. © mein allerliebester, hieborne
Furst und Herr, dinck dat unser Herr Gott sitts in himmells trone, and sees dat
hart und will my cause woll recken :

Saxon. Edward hold me not up with long delays ;
But quickly say, wilt thou confes the truth ?

Edward. As true as I am born of Kingly Linage,
And am the best Plantagenet next my Father,
I never carnallie did touch her body.

Saxon. Edward this answer had we long ago,
Seest thou this brat ? speak quickly or he dyes.

Edward. His death will be more piercing to thine
eyes,
Than unto mine, he is not of my kin.

Hede. © Father, © myne Vatter spare
myne kindt
© Edouart © Prince Edouart speak
now oder nimmermehr die kindt ist mein,
it soll nicht sterben :

Saxon. Have I dishonoured my self so much,
To bow my Knee to thee, which never bow'd
But to my God, and am I thus rewarded ?
Is he not thine ? speak murderous-minded Prince.

Edward. O Saxon, Saxon mitigate thy rage.

First thy exceeding great humilitie,
When to thy captive prifoner thou didft kneel,
Had almoft made my lying tongue confefs,
The deed which I proteft I never did ;
But thy not caufeless furious madding humour,
Together with thy Daughters pitious cryes,
Whom as my life and foul I dearly love,
Had thorowly almoft perfwaded me,
To fave her honour and belie my felf,
And were I not a Prince of fo high blood,
And Bastards have no fcepter-bearing hands,
I would in filence fmother up this blot,
And in compaffion of thy Daughters wrong,
Be counted Father to an others Child ;
For why my foul knows her unguiltinefs.

Saxon. Smooth words in bitter fenfe ; is thine anfwer ?

Hede. Û batter geue mir mein kindt,
die kindt ift mein.

Saxon. Das weis ich woll, er fagt es
ift nicht fein ; therefore it dyes.

He dashes out the Childs brains.

Hede. Û Got in feinem trone, Û mein
kindt mein kindt.

Saxon. There murderer take his head, and breathless lymbes,
Ther's flesh enough, bury it in thy bowels,
Eat that, or dye for hunger, I proteft,
Thou getst no other food till that be spent.
And now to thee lewd Whore, dishonour'd strumpet,
Thy turn is next, therefore prepare to dye.

Edward. O mighty Duke of Saxon, spare thy Child.

Sax. She is thy Wife Edward, and thou shouldst spare her.

One Gracious word of thine will fave her life.

Edward. I do confes Saxon she is mine own,
As I have marryed her, I will live with her,
Comfort thy self sweet Hedewick and sweet Wife.

Hede. Ach, ach und wehe, warumb sagt your Excellence nicht so before, now ist to late, unser arme kindt ist kilt.

Edward. Though thou be mine, and I do pittie thee,
I would not Nurse a Bastard for a Son.

Hede. O Edouard now ich mark your mening ich sholdt be your whore, mein Vatter ich bekehr upon meine knee, fast mich lieber sterben, ade falce Edouart, falce Prince, ich bekehrs nicht.

Saxon. Unprincely thoughts do hammer in thy
head,
I'ft not enough that thou hast sham'd her once,
And seen the Bastard torn before thy face ;
But thou wouldst get more brats for Butcherie ?
No Hedewick thou shalt not live the day.

Hede. O Herr Gott, nimb meine seele
in deiner henden.

Saxon. It is thy hand that gives this deadly stroak.

Hede. O Herr Sabote, das mein unschuldt an tag kommen mocht.

Edward. Her blood be on that wretched villains
head,
That is the cause of all this misery.

Saxon. Now murderous-minded Prince, hast thou beheld
Vpon my Child and Childs Child, thy desire,
Swear to thy self, that here I firmly swear,
That thou shalt surely follow her to morrow,
In Company of thy adulterous Aunt,

Jaylor convey him to his Dungeon,
If he be hungrie, I have thrown him meat,
If thirstie let him suck the newly born lymb.

Edward. O Heavens and Heavenly powers, if you be just,
Reward the author of this wickedness.

Exit Edw. & Jaylor.

Enter Alexander.

Alex. To arms great Duke of Saxonie, to arms,
My Lord of Collen, and the Earl of Cornwall,
In rescue of Prince Edward and the Emprefs,
Have levy'd fresh supplies, and presently
Will bid you battail in the open Field.

Sax. They never could have come in fitter time ;
Thirst they for blood ? and they shall quench their thirst.

Alex. O piteous spectacle ! poor Princess Hedewick.

Sax. Stand not to pittie, lend a helping hand.

Alex. What slave hath murdered this guiltless
Child ?

Sax. What ? dar'st thou call me slave unto my face ?

I tell thee villain, I have done this deed.
And seeing the Father and the Grand fires heart,
Can give consent and execute their own,
Wherefore should such a rascal as thy self
Presume to pittie them, whom we have slain ?

Alex. Pardon me, if it be presumption
To pittie them, I will presume no more.

Sax. Then help, I long to be amidst my foes.

Exeunt.

Alarum and Retreat. ACT. V.

Enter Richard and Collen with Drums and Souldiers.

Richard. What means your Excellence to found retreat ?

This is the day of doom unto our Friends ;
Before Sun set, my Sister, and my Nephew,
Vnless we rescue them must lose their lives :
The cause admits no dalliance nor delay.
He that so tyrant-like hath slain his own,
Will take no pittie on a strangers blood.

Collen. At my entreaty e're we strike the battail,
Let's summon out our enemies to a parle.
Words spoken in time, have vertue, power, and price,
And mildness may prevail and take effect,
When dynt of Sword perhaps will aggravate.

Rich. Then found a Parly to fulfill your mind,
Although I know no good can follow it. A Parley.

Enter Alphonso, Emprefs, Saxon, Edward prisoner, Tryer, Brandenburg, Alexander and Souldiers.

Alphon. Why now now Emperour that should have been,

Are these the English Generals bravado's ?
Make you assault so hotly at the first,
And in the self same moment found retreat ?
To let you know, that neither War nor words,
Hove power for to divert their fatall doom,
Thus are we both resolv'd ; if we triumph,
And by the right and justice of our cause
Obtain the victorie, as I doubt it not,
Then both of you shall bear them Company,
And e're Sun set we will perform our oaths,
With just effusion of their guilty bloods ;

If you be Conquerours, and we overcome,
Carry not that conceit to rescue them,
My self will be the Executioner,
And with these Poyuards frustrate all your hopes,
Making you triumph in a bloodie Field.

Saxon. To put you out of doubt that we intend it,
Please it your Majesty to take your Seate,
And make a demonstration of your meaning.

Alphon. First on my right hand bind the English
Whore,
That venemous Serpent nurs't within my breast
To suck the vitall blood out of my veins,
My Empress must have some preheminnence,
Especially at such a bloodie Banquet,
Her State, and love to me deserves no less.

Saxon. That to Prince Edward I may shew my love,
And do the latest honour to his State,
These hands of mine that never chained any,
Shall fasten him in fetters to the Chair.
Now Princes are you ready for the battail ?

Collen. Now art thou right the picture of thy self,
Seated in height of all thy Tyrannie ;
But tell us what intends this spectacle.

Alphon. To make the certaintie of their deaths more plain,
And Cancel all your hopes to save their lives,
While Saxon leads the troupes into the Field,
Thus will I vex their souls, with sight of death,
Loudly exclaiming in their half dead ears ;
That if we win they shall have companie,
Viz. The English Emperour,
And you my Lord Archbishop of Collen,
If we be vanquisht, then they must expect
Speedy dispatch from these two Daggers points.

Collen. What canst thou tyrant then expect but death ?

Alphon. Tush hear me out, that hand which shed their blood,
Can do the like to rid me out of bonds.

Rich. But that's a damned resolution.

Alphon. So must this desperate disease be cur'd.

Rich. O Saxon I'll yield my self and all my power,
To save my Nephew, though my Sister dye.

Sax. Thy Brothers Kingdom shall not save his life.

Edward. Uncle, you see these savage minded men.
Will have no other ranfome but my blood,
England hath Heirs, though I be never King,
And hearts and hands to scourge this tyrannie,
And so farewell.

Emp. A thousand times farewell,
Sweet Brother Richard and brave Prince of Collen.

Sax. What Richard, hath this object pierc'd thy heart ?

By this imagine how it went with me,
When yesterday I slew my Children.

Rich. O Saxon I entreat thee on my Knees.

Sax. Thou shalt obtain like mercy with thy kneeling,
As lately I obtained at Edward's hands.

Rich. Pitty the tears I powr before thy feet.

Sax. Pitty those tears? why I shed bloudie tears.

Rich. I'll do the like to save Prince Edwards life.

Sax. Then like a Warrior spill it in the Field,
My grievfull anger cannot be appeaz'd,
By sacrifice of any but himself.

Thou hast dishonour'd me, and thou shalt dye ;
Therefore alarum, alarum to the fight,
That thousands more may bear thee company.

Rich. Nephew and Sister now farewell for ever.

Ed. Heaven and the Right prevail, and let me die ;
Uncle farewell.

Emp. Brother farewell untill wee meet in Heaven.

Exeunt. Manent Alphon. Edw. Emp. Alex.

Alphon. Here's farewell, Brother, Nephew, Vncle, Aunt,

As if in thousand years you should not meet ;
Good Nephew, and good Aunt content your selves,
The Sword of Saxon and these Daggers-points,

Before the Evening-Star doth shew it self,
Will take sufficient order for your meeting.
But Alexander, my trustie Alexander,
Run to the Watch-Tow'r as I pointed thee,
And by thy life I charge thee look unto it
Thou be the first to bring me certain word
If we be Conquerors, or Conquered.

Alex. With carefull speed I will perform this charge.

Exit.

Alphon. Now have I leasure yet to talk with you.
Fair Ifabel. the Palsgrave's Paramour,
Wherein was he a better man than I?
Or wherfore should thy love to him, effect
Such deadly hate unto thy Emperour?
Yet welfare wenches that can love Good fellows,
And not mix Murder with Adulterie.

Emp. Great Emperor, I dare not call you Husband,
Your Conscience knows my hearts unguiltinefs.

Alpho. Didst thou not poison or consent to poison us?

Emp. Should any but your Highness tell me so,
I should forget my patience at my death,
And call him Villain, Liar, Murderer.

Alphon. She that doth so miscall me at her end,
Edward I prethee speak thy Conscience,
Thinkst thou not that in her prosperitie
Sh'hath vext my Soul with bitter Words and Deeds?
O Prince of England I do count thee wise
That thou wilt not be cumber'd with a wife,
When thou hadst stoln her daintie rose Corance,
And pluck'd the flow'r of her virginie.

Edw. Tyrant of Spain thou liest in thy throat.

Alpho. Good words, thou seeest thy life is in our hands.

Edw. I see thou art become a common Hangman,
An Office farre more fitting to thy mind
Than princelie to the Imperiall dignitie.

Alphon. I do not exercise on common persons,

Your Highness is a Prince, and she an Empress,
I therefore count not of a dignitie.

Hark Edward how they labour all in vain,
With loss of many a valiant Soldiers life,
To rescue them whom Heaven and we have doom'd
Dost thou not tremble when thou think'st upon't ?

Edw. Let guiltie minds tremble at sight of Death,
My heart is of the nature of the Palm,
Not to be broken, till the highest Bud
Be bent and ti'd unto the lowest Root ;
I rather wonder that thy Tyrants heart
Can give consent that those thy Butcherous hands
Should offer violence to thy Flesh and Blood.
See how her guiltless innocence doth plead
In silent Oratorie of her chastest tears.

Alphon. Those tears proceed from Fury and curst
heart.

I know the stomach of your English Dames.

Emp. No Emperour, these tears proceed from grief.

Alphon. Grief that thou canst not be reveng'd of Vs.

Emp. Grief that your Highness is so ill advis'd,
To offer violence to my Nephew Edward ;
Since then there must be sacrifice of Blood,
Let my heart-blood save both your bloods unspilt,
For of his death, thy Heart must pay the guilt.

Edw. No Aunt, I will not buy my life so dear :
Therefore Alphonso if thou beest a man
Shed manly blood, and let me end this strife.

Alphon. Here's straining curt'sie at a bitter Feast,
Content thee Empress for thou art my Wife,
Thou shalt obtain thy Boon and die the death,
And for it were unprincely to deny
So slight request unto so great a Lord,

Edward shall bear thee company in Death. A Retreat.
But hark the heat of battail hath an end ;
One side or other hath the victory, Enter Alexander.
And see where Alexander sweating comes ;

Speak man what newes speak, shall I die or live ?
Shall I stab fure, or els prolong their lives
To grievous Torments ? speak, am I Conquerour ?
What, hath thy haft bereft thee of thy speech ?
Hast thou not breath to speak one fillable ?
O speak, thy dalliance kills me, wonn or lost ? Amaz'd

Alex. Lost. lets fall the Alphon. Ah me my Senfes fail ! my fight Daggers.

is gon.

Alex. Will not your Grace dispatch the Strumpet
Queen ?

Shall she then live, and we be doom'd to death ?
Is your Heart faint, or is your Hand too weak ?
Shall fervill fear break your so sacred Oaths ?
Me thinks an Emperour should hold his word ;
Give me the Weapons I will soon dispatch them,
My Fathers yelling Ghost cries for revenge,
His Blood within my Veins boyls for revenge ;
O give me leave Cæsar to take revenge.

Alphon. Vpon condition that thou wilt protest
To take revenge upon the Murtherers,
Without respect of dignity, or State,
Afflicted, speedy, pittilefs Revenge,
I will commit this Dagger to thy trust,
And give thee leave to execute thy Will.

Alex. What need I here reiterate the Deeds
Which deadly sorrow made me perpetrate ?
How neer did I entrap Prince Richard's life ?
How fure set I the Knife to Mentz his heart ?
How cunninglie was Palsgrave doom'd to death ?
How subtilly was Bohem poisoned ?
How flily did I fatisfie my lust
Commixing dulcet Love with deadly Hate,
When Princeffe Hedwick lost her Maidenhead,
Sweetly embracing me for Englands Heir ?

Edw. O execrable deeds !

Emp. O salvage mind !

Alex. Edward, I give thee leave to hear of this,
But will forbid the blabbing of your tongue.

Now gracious Lord and sacred Emperour,
 Your highness knowing these and many more,
 Which fearles pregnancie hath wrought in me,
 You do me wrong to doubt that I will dive
 Into their hearts that have not spar'd their betters,
 Be therefore suddain left we die our selves.
 I know the Conquerour hafts to rescue them.

Alphon. Thy Reasons are effectually, take this Dagger ;

Yet pause a while.

Emp. Sweet Nephew now farewell.

Alphon. They are most dear to me whom thou must kill.

Edward. Hark Aunt he now begins to pittie you.

Alex. But they consented to my Fathers death.

Alphon. More then consented, they did execute.

Emp. I will not make his Majestie a Lyar,
 I kill'd thy Father, therefore let me die,
 But save the life of this unguilty Prince.

Edward. I kill'd thy Father, therefore let me die,
 But save the life of this unguiltie Empress.

Alphon. Hark thou to me, and think their words as wind.

I kill'd thy Father, therefore let me die,
 And save the lives of these two guiltless Princes.
 Art thou amaz'd to hear what I have said ?
 There, take the weapon, now revenge at full
 Thy Fathers death, and those my dire deceits
 That made thee murderer of so many Souls.

Alex. O Emperour, how cunningly wouldst thou entrap

My simple youth to credit Fictions ?
 Thou kill my Father, no, no Emperour,
Cæsar did love Lorentzo all too dearly :
 Seeing thy Forces now are vanquished,
 Frustrate thy hopes, thy Highness like to fall
 Into the cruel and revengefull hands
 Of merciless incensed Enemies,
 Like Caius Cassius wearie of thy life,

Now wouldst thou make thy Page an instrument
By suddain stroak to rid thee of thy bonds.

Alphon. Hast thou forgotten how that very night
Thy Father dy'd, I took the Master-Key,
And with a lighted Torch walk'd through the Courts.

Alex. I must remember that, for to my death
I never shall forget the flightest deed,
Which^e on that dismall Night or Day I did.

Alphon. Thou wast no sooner in thy restfull Bed,
But I disturb'd thy Father of his rest,
And to be short, not that I hated him,
But for he knew my deepest Secrets,
With cunning Poison I did end his life :
Art thou his Son ? expres it with a Stabb,
And make account if I had prospered,
Thy date was out, thou wast already doom'd,
Thou knewst too much of me to live with me.

Alex. What wonders do I hear great Emperour ?
Not that I do stedfastlie believe
That thou didst murder my beloved Father ;
But in meer pittie of thy vanquish'd state
I undertake this execution :
Yet, for I fear the sparkling Majestie
Which issues from thy most Imperial eyes
May strike relenting Passion to my heart,
And after wound receiv'd from fainting hand,
Thou fall halfe dead among thine Enemies,
I crave thy Highness leave to bind thee first.

Alphon. Then bind me quickly, use me as thou please

Emp. O Villain, wilt thou kill thy Sovereign ?

Alex. Your Highness sees that I am forc'd unto it.

Alphon. Fair Empress, I shame to ask thee pardon,
Whom I have wrong'd so many thousand waies.

Emp. Dread Lord and Husband, leave these desperat thoughts,
Doubt not the Princes may be reconcil'd.

Alex. 'T may be the Princes will be reconcil'd,
But what is that to me ? all Potentates on Earth

Can neuer reconcile my griev'd Soul.
 Thou flew'st my Father, thou didst make this hand
 Mad with Revenge to murder Innocents,
 Now hear, how in the height of all thy pride
 The rightfull Gods have powr'd their justfull wrath
 Upon thy Tyrants head, Devill as thou art.
 And sav'd by miracle these Princes lives ;
 For know, thy side hath got the Victory ;
Saxon triumphs over his dearest friends ;
Richard and Collen, both are Prisoners,
 And every thing hath sort'd to thy wish ;
 Only hath Heaven put it in my mind
 (for he alone directed then my thoughts
 Although my meaning was most mischievous)
 To tell thee thou hadst lost, in certain hope
 That suddainly thou wouldst have slain them both,
 For if the Princes came to talk about it,
 I greatly feard their lives might be prolong'd.
 Art thou not mad to think on this deceit ?
 Ile make the madder, with tormenting thee.
 I tell thee Arch-Thief, Villain, Murtherer,
 Thy Forces have obtain'd the Victory,
 Victory leads thy Foes in captive bands ;
 This Victory hath crown'd thee Emperour,
 Only my self have vanquisht Victory,
 And triumph in the Victors overthrow.

Alphon. O Alexander spare thy Princes life.

Alex. Even now thou didst entreat the contrary.

Alphon. Think what I am that begg my life of thee.

Alex. Think what he was whom thou hast doom'd to death.

But least the Princes do surprize us here
 Before I have perform'd my strange revenge,
 I will be suddain in the execution.

Alphon. I will accept any condition.

Alex. Then in the presence of the Emperess,
 The captive Prince of England, and my self,
 Forswear the joyes of Heaven, the sight of God,

Thy Soules falvation, and thy Saviour Christ,
Damning thy Soul to endless pains of Hell.
Do this or die upon my Rapiers point.

Emp. Sweet Lord and Husband, spit in's face.
Die like a man, and live not like a Devill.

Alex. What? wilt thou save thy life, and damn thy Soul?

Alph. O hold thy hand, Alphonfus doth renounce.

Edward. Aunt stop your ears, hear not this Blafphemy.

Empr. Sweet Husband think that Christ did dy for thee.

Alphon. Alphonfus doth renounce the joyes of Heaven,
The fight of Angells and his Saviours blood,
And gives his Soul unto the Devills power.

Alex. Thus will I make delivery of the Deed,
Die and be damn'd, now am I satisfied.

Edward. O damned Mifcreant, what hast thou done?

Alex. When I have leasure I will answer thee :
Mean while I'll take my heels and save my self.
If I be ever call'd in question,
I hope your Majesties will save my life,
You have so happily preserved yours ;
Did I not think it, both of you should die.

Exit Alex.

Enter Saxon, Branden. Tryer, (Richard and Collen as prisoners) and Soldiers.

Saxon. Bring forth these daring Champions to the Block,
Comfort your selves you shall have company.
Great Emperor, where is his Majestie?
What bloody spectacle do I behold?

Emp. Revenge, revenge, O Saxon, Brandenburg,
My Lord is slain, Cæsar is doom'd to death.

Edward. Princes make haste, follow the mur-therer.

Saxon. Is Cæsar slain ?

Edward. Follow the Murtherer.

Emp. Why stand you gasing on an other thus ?
Follow the Murtherer.

Saxon. What Murtherer ?

Edward. The villain Alexander hath slain his Lord,
Make after him with speed, so shall you hear
Such villanie as you have never heard.

Brand. My Lord of Tryer, we both with our light Horse

Will scoure the Coasts and quickly bring him in.

Saxon. That can your Excellence alone perform,
Stay you my Lord, and guard the Prisoners,
While I, alas, unhappiest Prince alive,
Over his Trunk consume my self in Tears.

Hath Alexander done this damned deed ?
That cannot be, why should he slay his Lord ?
O cruel Fate, O miserable me !

Me thinks I now present Mark Antony,
Folding dead Julius Cæsar in mine arms.

No, no, I rather will present Achilles,
And on Patroclus Tomb do sacrifice.
Let me be spurn'd and hated as a Dogg,
But I perform more direfull bloody Rites
Than Thetis Son for Menetiades.

Edward. Leave mourning for thy Foes, pittie thy Friends.

Sax. Friends have I none, and that which grieves
my Soul,
Is want of Foes to work my wreak upon ;
But were you Traitors 4, four hundred thousand,
Then might I satisfie my self with Blood.

Enter Brandenb. Alexand. and Soldiers.

Saxon. See Alexander where Cæsar lieth slain,
The guilt whereof the Traitors cast on thee ;

Speak, canst thou tell who slew thy Sovereign ?

Alexan. Why who but I ? how should I curse my self

If any but my self had done this deed ?

This happy hand, blest be my hand therefore,

Reveng'd my Fathers death upon his Soul :

And Saxon thou hast cause to curse and bann

That he is dead, before thou didst inflict

Torments on him that so hath torn thy heart.

Saxon. What Mysteries are these ?

Bran. Princes, can you inform us of the Truth ?

Edward. The Deed's so heinous that my faltering tongue

Abhorres the utterance. Yet I must tell it.

Alex. Your Highness shall not need to take the pains,

What you abhor to tell, I joy to tell,

Therefore be silent and give audience.

You mighty men, and Rulers of the Earth,

Prepare your Ears to hear of Stratagems

Whose dire effects have gaul'd your princely hearts,

Confounded your conceits, muffled your eyes :

First to begin this villanous Fiend of Hell

Murder'd my Father, sleeping in his Chair,

The reason why, because he only knew

All Plotts, and complots of his villanie ;

His death was made the Basis and the Ground

Of every mischief that hath troubled you.

Saxon. If thou, thy Father and thy Progenie

Were hang'd and burnt, and broken on the Wheel,

How could their deaths heap mischief on our heads ?

Alex. And if you will not hear the Reason chuse.

I tell thee I have slain an Emperour,

And thereby think my self as good a man

As thou, or any man in Christendom,

Thou shalt entreat me ere I tell thee more.

Brand. Proceed.

Alex. Not I.

Saxon. I prethe now proceed.

Alex. Since you intreat you then, I will proceed.

This murtherous Devill having flain my Father,
 Buz'd cunningly into my credulous ears,
 That by a General Councill of the States,
 And as it were by Act of Parlement,
 The seven Electors had fet down his death,
 And made the Emprefs Executioner,
 Transferring all the guilt from him to you.
 This I believ'd, and first did fet upon
 The life of Princely Richard, by the Boors,
 But how my purpose faild in that, his Grace best knows ;

Next, by a double intricate deceit,
 Midst all his Mirth was Bohem poyfoned,
 And good old Mentz to save Alphonso's life,
 (Who at that instant was in perfect health)
 Twixt jest and earnest was made a Sacrifice ;
 As for the Palatine, your Graces knew
 His Highness and the Queens unguiltines ;
 But now my Lord of Saxon hark to me,
 Father of Saxon should I rather call you,
 Twas I that made your Grace a Grandfather :
 Prince Edward plow'd the ground, I sow'd the Seed,

Poor Hedewick bore the most unhappy fruit,
 Created in a most unluckie hour,
 To a most violent and untimely death.

Sax. O loathsome Villain, O detested deeds,
 O guiltless Prince, O me most miserable.

Brand. But tell us who reveal'd to thee at last

This shamefull guilt, and our unguiltines ?

Alex. Why that's the wonder Lords, and thus it was :

When like a tyrant he had tane his feat,
 And that the furie of the Fight began,

Upon the higheft Watch-Tow'r of the Fort,
It was my office to behold alofft
The Warres event, and having feen the end,
I faw how Victory with equal wings
Hang hovering 'twixt the Battails here and there,
Till at the laft, the Englifh Lyons fled,
And Saxon's fide obtain'd the Victory ;
Which feen, I pofted from the turrets top,
More furiously than ere Laocoon ran,
When Trojan hands drew in Troy's overthrow,
But yet as fatally as he or any.
The tyrant feeing me, ftar'd in my face,
And fuddainly demanded whats the newes,
I, as the Fates would have it, hoping that he Even in a twinkling would have flain 'em both,
For fo he fwore before the Fight began,
Cri'd bitterly that he had loft the day,
The found whereof did kill his daftard heart,
And made the Villain desperatly confefs
The murther of my Father, praying me,
With dire revenge, to ridd him of his life ;
Short tale to make, I bound him cunningly,
Told him of the deceit, triumphing over him,
And laftly with my Rapier flew him dead.

Sax. O Heavens! juftly have you tane revenge.

But thou, thou murtherous adulterous flave,
What Bull of Phalaris, what ftange device,
Shall we invent to take away thy life ?

Alex. If Edward and the Emprefs, whom I fav'd,
Will not requite it now, and fave my life,
Then let me die, contentedly I die,
Having at laft reveng'd my Fathers death.

Sax. Villain, not all the world fhall fave thy life.

Edw. Hadft thou not been Author of my Hedewicks death,

I would have certainly fav'd thee from death ;
 But if my Sentence now may take effect,
 I would adjudge the Villain to be hang'd
 As here the Jewes are hang'd in Germany.

Sax. Young Prince it shall be so ; go dragg the Slave

Unto the place of execution :
 There let the Fudas, on a Jewish Gallows,
 Hang by the heels between two English Mastives,
 There feed on Doggs, let Doggs there feed on
 thee,
 And by all means prolong his miserie.

Alex. O might thy self and all these English
 Currs,
 Instead of Mastive-Doggs hang by my side,
 How sweetly would I tugg upon your Flesh.

Exit Alex.

Sax. Away with him, suffer him not to speak.
 And now my lords, Collen, Tryer, and Brandenburg,
 Whose Hearts are bruz'd to think upon these woes,
 Though no man hath such reason as my self,
 We of the seven Electors that remain,
 After so many bloody Massacres,
 Kneeling upon our Knees, humbly intreat
 Your Excellence to be our Emperour.
 The Royalties of the Coronation
 Shall be, at Aix, shortly solemnized.

Cullen. Brave Princely Richard now refuse it
 not,
 Though the Election be made in Tears,
 Joy shall attend thy Coronation.

Richard. It stands not with mine Honour to deny
 it,
 Yet by mine Honour, fain I would refuse it.

Edward. Uncle, the weight of all these Miseries Maketh my heart as heavy as your own,
 But an Imperial Crown would lighten it,
 Let this one reason make you take the Crown.

Richard. What's that sweet nephew?

Edward. Sweet Uncle, this it is,
Was never Englishman yet Emperour,
Therefore to honour England and your self,
Let private sorrow yield to publike Fame,
That once an Englishman bare Cæsar's name.

Richard. Nephew, thou hast prevail'd; Princes stand up,
We humbly do accept your sacred offer.

Cullen. Then sound the Trumpets, and cry Vivat
Cæsar.

All. Vivat Cæsar.

Cullen. Richardus Dei gratia Romanorum Imperator,
semper Augustus, Comes Cornubiæ.

Richard. Sweet Sister now let Cæsar comfort you,
And all the rest that yet are comfortless;
Let them expect from English Cæsar's hands
Peace, and abundance of all earthly Joy.

FINIS

REVENGE

FOR

HONOUR.

A

TRAGEDIE,

BY

GEORGE CHAPMAN.

LONDON,

Printed for Richard Marriot, in S. Dunstan's
Church-yard, Fleetstreet. 1654.

The Persons Acting.

Almanzor Caliph of Arabia.
Abilqualit his eldest Son.
Abrahen his Son by a second Wife.
 Brother to Abilqualit.
Tarifa an old General, Conqueror of Spain, Tutor to Abilqualit.
Mura a rough Lord, a Souldier, Kin-man by his Mother, to Abrahen.
Simanthes a Court Lord, allyed to Abrahen.
Selinthus an honest, merrie Court
 Lord.
Mesithes a Court Eunuch, Attendant
 on Abilqualit.
Osman a Captain to Tarifa.
Gafelles another Captain.
Caropia Wife to Mura, first beloved of Abrahen, then of Abilqualit.
Perilinda her Woman.

Souldiers, Guard.
Muts. Attendants.

PROLOGUE.

O *Vr Author thinks 'tis not i'th power of Wit,
Invention, Art, nor Industrie, to fit
The severall phantasies which in this age
With a predominant humour rule the Stage.
Some men cry out for Satyr, others chuse
Meerly to story to confine each Muse ;
Most like no Play, but such as gives large birth
To that which they judiciously term mirth.
Nor wil the best works with their liking crown,
Except 't be grac'd with part of foole or clown.
Hard and severe the task is then to write,
So as may please each various appetite.
Our Author hopes wel though, that in this Play,
He has endeavour'd so, he justly may Gain liking from you all, unlesse those few
Who wil dislike, be't ne're so good, so new ;
Whe rather Gentlemen, he hopes, cause I Am a mean Actor in this Tragedie :
You've grac'd me sometimes in another Sphear,
And I do hope you'l not dislike me here.*

REVENGE FOR HONOUR.

ACTUS PRIMUS. Scena I.

Enter Selinthus, Gafelles, and Ofman.

Sel. NO murmurings, Noble Captains.

Gaf. NO Murmurings, Cofen ?
this Peace is worse to men of war and action
then fasting in the face o'th' fo, or lodging on the cold earth. Give me the Camp, fay I, where in the Sutlers palace on pay-day
we may the precious liquor quaff, and kisse his buxome wife ; who though she be not clad in Persian Silks, or costly Tyrian Purples, has a clean skin, soft thighes, and wholsome corps,
fit for the trayler of the puiffant Pike,
to sollace in delight with.

Of. Here in your lewd Citie,

the Harlots do avoid us fons o'th' Sword
 worfe then a fevere Officer. Befides, here men o'th' Shop can gorge their muftie maws with the delicious Capon, and fat limbs of Mutton large enough to be held fhoulders
 o' th' Ram ancouge the 12 Signes, while for pure want

Your fouldier oft dines at the charge o' th' dead,
 'mong tombs in the great Mofque.

Sel. 'Tis beleev'd Coz,
 and by the wifef few too, that i' th' Camp
 you do not feed on pleafant poult; a fallad,
 and without oyl or vinegar, appeafes fometimes your guts, although they keep more noife
 then a large pool ful of ingendring frogs.
 Then for accoutrements, you wear the Buff,
 as you believ'd it herefie to change
 for linnen : Surely moft of yours is fpent in lint, to make long tents for your green wounds
 after an onflaught.

Gaf. Coz. thefe are fad truths, incident to fraile mortals !

Sel. You yet crie
 out with more eagerneffe ftill for new wars,
 then women for new fashions.

Cf. 'Tis confefs'd,
 Peace is more oppofite to my nature, then the running ach in the rich Ufurers feet, when he roars out, as if he were in hel before his time. Why, I love mischief, Coz, when one may do't feecurely ; to cut throats
 with a licencious pleafure ; when good men and true o' th' Jurie, with their froftie beards fhall not have power to give the noble wefand, which has the fteele defied, to th' hanging mercy
 of the ungracious cord.

Sel. Gentlemen both,
 and Cozens mine, I do believe't much pity,
 to ftrove to reconvert you from the faith

you have been bred in : though your large discourse and praise, wherein you magnifie your Mistrifs, Warr, shall scarce drive me from my quiet sheets,
to sleep upon a turfe. But pray say, Cozens, How do you like your General, Prince,
is he a right Mars ?

Gaf. As if his Nurfe had lapt him in swadling clouts of steele ; a very Hector and Alcibiades.

Sel. It seems he does not relish
these boasted sweets of warre : for all his triumphs,
he is reported melencholy.

Of. Want of exercife
renders all men of actions, dul as dormife ;
your Souldier only can dance to the Drum,
and sing a Hymn of joy to the sweet Trumpet :
there's no musick like it.

Enter Abrahen, Mura, and Simanthes.

Ab. I'll know the cause,
he shall deny me hardly else.

Mu. His melancholy
known whence it rises once, 't may much conduce to help our purpose.

Gaf. Pray Coz. what Lords are these ?
they seem as full of plot, as Generals are in Siege, they're very serious.

Sel. That young Stripling is our great Emperors son, by his last wife :
that in the rich Imbroiderys, the Count Hermes ;
one that has hatcht more projects, then the ovens
in Egypt chickens ; the other, though they call friends, his meer opposite Planet Mars,
one that does put on a reserv'd gravitie,
which some call wisdom, the rough Souldier Mura, Governour i' th' Moroccos.

Of. Him we've heard of before : but Cozen, shall that man of trust,

thy tailor, furnish us with new accoutrements ?
 hast thou tane order for them ?

Sel. Yes, yes, you shal flourish in fresh habiliments ; but you must promise me not to ingage your corporal oathes
 you wil see't satisfied at the next press,
 out of the profits that arise from ransome of those rich yeomans heires, that dare not look the fierce foe in the face.

Gaf. Doubt not our truths,
 though we be given much to contradictions,
 we wil not pawn oaths of that nature.

Sel. Well then, this note does fetch the garments :
 meet me Cozens anon at Supper. Exeunt. Gaf. Of.

Of. Honourable Coz. we wil come give our thanks. Enter Abilqualit.

Ab. My gracious brother, make us not such a stranger to your thoughts,
 to consume all your honors in close retirements ;
 perhaps since you from Spain return'd a victor,
 with (the worlds conqueror) Alexander, you greive Nature ordain'd no other earths to vanquish ;
 if't be so, Princely brother, we'le bear part in your heroique melancholy.

Abil. Gentle youth, press me no farther, I stil hold my temper
 free and unshaken, only some fond thoughts of trivial moment, cal my faculties
 to private meditations

Sim. Howfoe're your Highnesse
 does please to term them, 'tis meer melancholy, which next to sin, is the greatest maladie
 than can oppres mans soul.

Sel. They say right :
 and that your Grace may see what a meer madnesse,
 a very mid-summer frenzy, 'tis to be melancholy, for any man that wants no monie,
 I (with your pardon) wil discusse unto you
 All forts, all sises, persons and conditions, that are infected with it ; and the reasons why it in each arises.

Ab. Learned Selinthus,
Let's taste of thy Philosophie.

Mu. Pish, 'Tis unwelcome
to any of judgment, this fond prate :
I marvel that our Emperor dos permit
fools to abound ith' Court !

Sel. What makes your grave Lordship in it, I do beseech you ? But Sir, mark me,
the Kernel of the text enucleated,
I shall confute, refute, repel, refute, explode, exterminate, expunge, extinguish like a rush candle, this same heresie,
that is shot up like a pernicious Mushroom,
to poison true humanitie.

Ab. You shall stay and hear a lecture read on your disease ; you shall, as I love virtue.

Sel. First the cause then from whence this flatus Hypochondriacus
this glimmering of the gizzard (for in wild fowl,
'tis term'd so by Hypocrates) arises,
is as Averroes and Avicen,
with Abenbucar, Baruch and Abostii,
and all the Arabick writers have affirm'd, a meer defect, that is as we interpret, a want of——

Abil. Of what, Selinthus ?

Sel. Of wit, and please your Highnesse,
That is the cause in gen'ral, for particular and special causes, they are all deriv'd from severall wants ; yet they must be considerd, ponderd, perpended, or premeditated.

Sim. My Lord, y'ad best be brief,
your Patient will be wearie else.

Sel. I cannot play the fool rightly, I mean, the Physician without I have licence to expalcat on the disease. But (my good Lord) more briefly,
I shall declare to you like a man of wisdom and no Physician, who deal all in simples, why men are melancholy. First, for your Courtier.

Sim. It concerns us all to be attentive, Sir.

Sel. Your sage and serious Courtier, who does walk

with a State face, as he had drest himself ith' Emperors glasse, and had his beard turn'd up by the' irons Roial, he will be as pensive
as Stallion after Catum, when he wants suits, begging suits, I mean. Me thinks, (my Lord)
you are grown something solemn on the sudden ;
since your Monopolies and Patents, which made your purse swell like a wet sponge, have been reduc'd to th' last gasp. Troth, it is far better to confesse here, then in a worser place.
Is it not so indeed ?

Abil. What ere he does by mine, I'me sure h'as hit the cause from whence your grief springs, Lord Simanthes.

Sel. No Egyptian Soothfayer has truer inspirations, then your small Courtiers from causes and wants manifold ; as when the Emperors count'nance with propitious noise does not cry chink in pocket, no repute is with Mercer, nor with Tailor ; nay sometimes too
the humor's pregnant in him, when repulse is given him by a Beautie : I can speak this though from no Memphian Priest, or sage Caldean, from the best Mistris (Gentlemen) an Experience.
Last night I had a mind t'a comly Semstrefs, who did refuse me, and behold, ere since
how like an Afs I look.

Enter Tarifa.

Tar. What, at your Counsels, Lords ? the great Almanzor
requires your presence, Mura ; has decree'd
the Warr for Persia. You (my gracious Lord)

Prince Abilqualet, are appointed Chief :
And you, brave spirited Abrahen, an Assistant to your victorious Brother : You, Lord Mura, destin'd Lieutenant General.

Abil. And must I march against the foe, without thy company ? I relish not th' employment.

Tar. Alas, my Lord,
Tarifa's head's grown white beneath his helmet ;
and your good Father thought it charity to spare mine age from travel : though this ease will be more irksome to me than the toil
of war in a sharp winter.

Abr. It arrives just to our wish. My gracious brother, I
anon shall wait on you : mean time, valiant Mura,
let us attend my Father.

Exeunt Ab. Mura, Sim.

Abil. Good Selinthus, vouchsafe a while your absence, I shall have employment shortly for your trust.

Sel. Your Grace shall have as much power to command
Selinthus, as his best fanci'd Mistress. I am your creature. Exit.

Tar. Now, my Lord,
I hope y'are cloath'd with all those resolutions that usher glorious minds to brave achievements.
The happy genius on your youth attendant
declares it built for Victories and Triumphs ;
and the proud Persian Monarchie, the sole emulous opposer of the Arabique Greatness, courts (like a fair Bride) your Imperial Arms,
waiting t'invest You Sovereigne of her beauties.
Why are you dull (my Lord ?) Your cheerful looks should with a prosperous augury presage
a certain Victory : when you droop already,
as if the foe had ravish'd from your Crest
the noble Palm. For shame (Sir) be more sprightly ; your sad appearance, should they thus behold you,

would half unfoul your Army.

Abil. 'Tis no matter,
Such looks best fute my fortune. Know (Tarifa)
I'm undispos'd to manage this great Voiage, and must not undertake it.

Tar. Must not, Sir!
Is't possible a love-sick youth, whose hopes are fixt on marriage, on his bridal night should in soft slumbers languish? that your Arms should rust in ease, now when you hear the charge, and see before you the triumphant Prize destin'd t'adorn your Valour? You should rather be furnish'd with a power above these passions;
and being invok'd by the mighty charm of Honour,
flie to atchieve this war, not undertake it.
I'd rather you had said, Tarifa ly'd,
then utter'd such a sound, harsh and unwelcome.

Abil. I know thou lov'st me truly, and durst I to any born of woman, speak my intentions,
the fatal cause which does withdraw my courage
from this imployment, which like health I covet, thou shouldst enjoy it fully. But (Tarifa)
the said discov'ry of it is not fit for me to utter, much lesse for thy vertue to be acquainted with.

Tar. Why (my Lord?)
my loyaltie can merit no suspicion from you of falshood: whatsoere the cause be or good, or wicked, 't meets a trustie silence, and my best care and honest counsel shall indeavour to reclaim, or to assist you if it be good, if ill, from your bad purpose.

Abil. Why, that I know Tarifa. 'Tis the love thou bear'st to honour, renders thee unapt to be partaker of those resolutions that by compulsion keep me from this Voiage:
For they with such inevitable sweetnesse
invade my sence, that though in their performance

my Fame and Vertue even to death do languish,
I must attempt, and bring them unto act, or perish i' th' pursuance.

Tar. Heaven avert
a mischief so prodigious. Though I would not with over-fawcie boldnesse presse your counsels ;
yet pardon (Sir) my Loialtie, which timorous of your lov'd welfare, must intreat, beseech you with ardent love and reverence, to disclose the hidden cause that can estrange your courage from its own Mars, with-hold you from this Action
so much ally'd to honour : Pray reveal it :
By all your hopes of what you hold most precious,
I do implore it ; for my faith in breeding your youth in warrs great rudiments, relieve Tarifa's fears, that wander into strange unwelcome doubts, lest some ambitious frenzy
'gainst your imperial fathers dignitie
has late seduc'd your goodnes.

Abr. No, Tarifa,
I ne're durst aim at that unholy height
in viperous wickednesse ; a sinlesse, harmlesse (ift can be truly term'd one) 'tis my foul labours even to dispaire with : 't faine would out,
did not my blushes interdict my language :
'tis unchast love, Tarifa ; nay, tak't all,
and when thou hast it, pity my misfortunes,
to fair Caropia, the chaste, vertuous wife to furly Mura.

Tar. What a fool Desire is !
with Giant strengths it makes us court the knowledg of hidden mysteries, which once reveal'd, far more inconstant then the air, it fleets
into new wishes, that the coveted secret had slept still in oblivion.

Abil. I was certaine
'twould fright thy innocence, and look to be besieged with strong disswasions from my purpose :
but be assur'd, that I have tir'd my thoughts

with all the rules that teach men moral goodnesse,
 so to reclaime them from this love-sick loofeness ;
 but they (like wholesome medicines misapplied)
 fac'd their best operation, fond and fruitlesse.
 Though I as wel may hope to kifs the Sun-beams
 'cause they shine on me, as from her to gaine
 one glance of comfort ; yet my mind, that pities
 it self with constant tendernesse, must needs revolve the cause of its calamity, and melt i' th' pleasure of so sweet a sadnes.

Tar. Then y'are undone for ever ; Sir, undon beyond the help of councel or repentance.
 'Tis most ignoble, that a mind unshaken
 by fear, should by a vain desire be broken ;
 or that those powers no labour e're could vanquish,
 should be orecome and thral'd by fordid pleasure.
 Pray (Sir) consider, that in glorious war,
 which makes Ambition (by base men termed sin)
 a big and gallant Virtue, y'ave been nurs'd, lull'd (as it were) into your infant sleeps by th' furly noise o' th' trumpet, which now summons
 you to victorious use of your indowments :
 and shall a Mistrisse stay you ! such a one too,
 as to attempt, then war it self's more dangerous !

Abil. All these perswasions are to as much purpose,
 as you should strive to reinvest with peace,
 and all the ioyes of health and life, a soul
 condemn'd to perpetuity of torments.
 No (my Tarifa) though through all disgraces,
 losse of my honour, fame, nay hope for Empire,
 I should be forc'd to wade to obtain her love ;
 those seas of mischief would be pleasing streams,
 which I would hast to bath in, and passe through them with that delight thou would'st to victory,
 or slaves long chain'd to' th' oare, to sudden freedome.

Tar. Were you not Abilqualit, from this time then our friendships (like two rivers from one head rising) should wander a dissever'd course,
 and never meet againe, unlesse to quarrel.

Nay, old and stiffe, now as my iron garments,
were you my son, my sword should teach your wildness
a swift way to repentance. Y'are my Prince, on whom all hopes depend ; think on your Father,
that lively Image of majestick goodness,
who never yet wrong'd Matron in his lust,
or man in his displeasure. Pray conjecture your Father, Countrie, Army, by my mouth beseech your pietie to an early pittie of your yet unslain Innocence. No attention !
Farwel : my praies shall wait you, though my Counsels be thus despis'd. Farwel Prince ! Exit.

Abil. 'Las good man, he weeps.

Such tears I've seen fall from his manly eyes once when ye lost a battel. Why should I put off my Reason, Valor, Honour, Virtue, in hopes to gain a Beautie, whose possession renders me more uncapable of peace, then I am now I want it ? Like a sweet,
much coveted banquet, 'tis no sooner tasted,
but it's delicious luxury's forgotten.

Besides, it is unlawful. Idle fool,
there is no law, but what's prescribed by Love, Natures first moving Organ ; nor can ought what Nature dictates to us be held vicious.

On then, my fowl, and destitute of fears,
like an adventrous Mariner, that knows storms must attend him, yet dares court his peril, strive to obtain this happy Port. Mefithes
(Loves cunning Advocate) does for me besiege (with gifts and vows) her Chastitie. She is compass'd with flesh, that's not invulnerable, and may by Love's sharp darts be pierc'd. They stand firm, whom no art can bring to Love's command.

Enter Abrahen.

Abr. My gracious brother !

Abil. Dearest Abrahen, welcome.

Tis certainly decreed by our dread Father,
we must both march against th' insulting foe.

How does thy youth, yet uninur'd to travel,
relish the Imploiment ?

Abr. War is sweet to those that neuer have experienc'd it. My youth cannot desire in that big Art a nobler Tutor then you (my Brother :) Like an Eglet following her dam, I shall your honour'd steps trace through all dangers, and be proud to borrow a branch, when your head's coverd ore with Lawrel,
to deck my humbler temples.

Abil. I do know thee
of valiant active soul ; and though a youth,
thy forward spirit merits the Command of Chief, rather then Second in an Armie.
Would heaven our Roial Father had bestow'd
On thee the Charge of General.

Abr. On me, Sir !
Alas, 'tis fit I first should know those Arts that do distinguish Valour from wild rashness.
A Gen'ral (Brother) must have abler nerves of Judgment, then in my youth can be hop'd for.
Your self already like a flourishing Spring
teeming with early Victories, the Souldier expects should lead them to new Triumphs, as if you had vanquisht fortune.

Abil. I am not so ambitious (Abrahen) of particular glories,
but I would have those whom I love partake them.
This Persian war, the last of the whole East left to be managed, if I can perswade
the great Almanzor, shall be the trophee of thy yet maiden Valour. I have done enough already to inform Succession, that Abilqualit durst on fiercest foes run to fetch Conquest home, and would have thy name
as great as mine in Arms, that Historie might register, our Familie abounded with Heroes, born for Victorie.

Abr. 'Tis an honour,
which, though it be above my powers, committed to my direction, I would seek to manage with care above my years, and courage equal to his, that dares the horrid'ft face of danger :
But 'tis your noble courtesie would thrust
this masc'line honor (far above his merits)
on your regardless Brother ; for my Father,
he has no thought tending to your intentions ;
nor though your goodness should desire, would hardly be won to yeild consent to them.

Abil. Why, my Abrahen, w'are both his sons, and should be both alike
dear to's affections ; and though birth hath given me
the larger hopes and Titles, 'twere unnatural, should he not strive t' indow thee with a portion apted to the magnificence of his Off-spring.
But thou perhaps art timorous, lest thy first effayes of valour should meet fate disastrous.
The bold are Fortunes darlings. If thou hast courage to venture on this great imploiment, doubt not, I shall prevail upon our Father
t' ordain thee Chief in this brave hopefull Voiage.

Abr. You imagine me beyond all thought of gratitude ; and doubt not that I'll deceive your trust. The glorious Ensignes waving i' th' air once, like so many Comets, shall speak the Persians funerals, on whose ruines
we'l build to Fame and Victorie new temples, which shall like Pyramids preserve our memories,
when we are chang'd to ashes.

Abil. Be sure, continue in this brave minde ; I'll instantly folicite our Father to confirm thee in the Charge of General. I'll about it.

Exit.

Abr. Farewell gracious Brother.
This haps above my hopes. 'Las, good dull fool,
I see through thy intents, clear, as thy soul
were as transparent as thin air or Cristal.

He would have me remov'd, march with the Armie,
 that he mean time might make a fure defeat
 on our aged fathers life and Empire : 'tmust be certain as the light. Why should not his with equall heat, be like my thoughts, ambitious ?
 Be they as harmlefs as the prai'rs of Virgins,
 I'll work his ruine out of his intentions.
 He like a thick cloud stands 'twixt me and Greatneffe :
 Greatneffe, the wise mans true felicity, Honour's direct inheritance. My youth wil quit fufpicion of my subtil practice :
 then have I furly Mura and Simanthes,
 my allyes by my dead Mothers bloud, my affiftants,
 his Eunuch too Mefithes at my fervice.
Simanthes fhall inform the King, the people defire Prince Abilqualit's flay ; and Mura whose blunt demeanour renders him oraculous, make a fhrewd inference out of it. He is my halt
 Brother,
 th' other's my Father ; names, meer airie titles !
 Soveraigntie's onely facred, Greatneffe goodneffe, true felf-affection Juftice, every thing righteous that's helpfull to create a King.

Enter Mura, Simanthes.

Abr. My trustie friends, y'are welcome :
 our fate's above our wifhes ; Abilqualit
 by whatfo'ere pow'r mov'd to his own ruine, would fain inforce his charge of General on me,
 and flay at home.

Sim. Why, how can this conduce
 t' advance our purpofe ?

Abr. Tis the maineft engine could ever move to ruine him. Simanthes, you fhall inform our Father, tis the people out of their tender love defires his flay.
 You (Mura) fhall infer my Brothers greatneffe with people ; out of it, how nice it is and dangerous.

The air is open here ; come, wee'll discourse with more secure privacie our purpose.
Nothing's unjust, unfacred, tends to advance
us to a Kingdom ; that's the height of chance.

ACTUS SECUNDUS. Scena 1.

Enter Almanzor, Mura, and Simanthes.

Al. How? not go, Simanthes?

Sim. My dread Sovereign,
I speak but what the well affected people out of their loyal care and pious duty injoyn'd me utter : they do look upon him
as on your eldest Son, and next Successor, and would be loth the Persian War should rob their eies of light, their souls of joy and comfort, this flourishing Empire leave as it were widow'd of its lov'd Spouse : They humbly do beseech your Maiesty would therefore destine some more fitting General, whose los (as heaven avert such a misfortune) should it happen, might lesse concern the State.

Al. 'Tis not the least
among the blessings Heaven has showr'd upon us, that we are happie in such loving Subjects,
to govern whom, when we in peace are ashes,
we leave them a Successor whom they truly reverence:
A loving people and a loving Sovereign makes Kingdoms truly fortunate and flourishing.
But I beleeve (Simanthes) their intents,
though we confirm them, will scarce take effect :

My Abilqualit (like a Princely Lion, in view of's prey (wil scarcely be orecom
to leave the honour of the Persian War, in's hopes already vanquish'd by his valour,
and rest in lazy quiet, while that Triumph
is ravish'd by another.

Sim. With the pardon of your most sacred Majestie, 'tis fit then your great commands forbid the Princes Voyage :
boldnesse inforces youth to hard atchievements
before their time, makes them run forth like Lapwings from their warm nest, part of the shel yet sticking unto their downie heads. Sir, good succeffe is oft more fatal far then bad ; one winning cast from a flatt'ring Die tempting a Gamester to hazard his whole fortunes.

Mur. This is dull,
fruitless Philosophy, he that falls nobly winns as much honour by his losse, as conquest.

Sim. This rule may hold wel among common men, but not 'mong Princes. Such a prince as ours is,
who knows as wel to conquer mens affections
as he does enemies, should not be expos'd to every new cause, honourable danger.
Prince Abilqualit's fair and winning carriage has stolne possession of the peoples hearts,
they doate on him since his late Spanish conquest,
as new made brides on their much coveted husbands ;
and they would pine like melancholy turtles,
should they so soone lose the invaluable object
both of their love and reverence : Howsoe're, what ere your awful wil (Sir) shall determine,
as heaven, is by their strict obedience held sacred and religious.

Al. Good Simanthes, let them receive our thanks for their true care of our dear Abilqualit.
Wee'l consider of their request, say.

Sim. Your highnesse humblest creature.

Exit.

Mu. I do not like this.

Al. Like what? Valiant Mura,
we know thy counfels so supremely wife,
and thy true heart so excellently faithful,
that whatfoere displeases thy sage Judgment,
Almanzor's wifdome must account diftaftful.
What is't dislikes thee?

Mu. Your Majestie knows me
a downright Souldier, I affect not words;
but to be brief, I relish not your fon shoud (as if you were in your tomb already) ingrofs so much the giddie peoples favours.
'Tis neither fit for him, nor safe for you to suffer it.

Al. Why, how can they, Mura,
Give a more ferious testimony of reverence
to me, then by conferring their affections, their pious wishes, zealous contemplations
on him that fits the nearest to my heart,
my Abilqualit, in whose hopeful virtues
my age more glories then in all my conquests?

Mu. May you prove fortunate in your pious care of the Prince Abilqualit. But (my Lord)
Mura is not so prone to idle language
(the Parasits best ornament) to utter ought, but what (if you'll please to give him audience hee'll show you a blunt reason for.

Al. Come, I see
into thy thoughts, good Mura; too much care of us, informs thy loyal soul with fears the Princes too much popularity
may breed our danger: banish those suspicions;
neither dare they who under my long reign
have been triumphant in so many blessings, have the least thought may tend to disobedience:
or if they had, my Abilqualit's goodnesse would ne're consent with them to become impious.

Mu. 'Tis too secure a confidence betrays minds valiant to irreparable dangers.
Not that I dare invade with a foule thought the noble Princes loyalty ; but (my Lord)

 when this same many headed beast (the people)
 violent, and so not constant in affections, subject to love of novelty, the sicknesse proper t'all humane specially light natures, do magnifie with too immoderate praises
 the Princes actions, doate upon his presence, nay chaine their souls to th' shadow of his foot-steps,
 as all excesses ought to be held dangerous,
 especially when they do aim at Scepters,
 their too much dotage speaks, you in their wishes are dead alreadie, that their darling hope
 the Prince might have the Throne once.

Al. 'Tis confes'd, all this a serious truth.

Mu. Their mad applauses
 oth' noble Prince, though he be truly virtuous, may force ambition into him, a mischief
 Seasing the soul with too much craft and sweetness,
 as pride or lust do's minds unstay'd and wanton :
 'tmakes men like poyson'd rats, which when they've swallow'd
 the pleasing bane, rest not until they drink,
 and can rest then much lesse, until they burst with't.

Al. Thy words are stil oraculous.

Mu. Pray then think with what an easie toil the haughty Prince,
 a demy God by th' popular acclamations,
 nay, the world's Sovereign in the vulgar wishes,
 had he a resolution to be wicked,
 might snatch this diadem from your aged temples ?
 What law so holy, tye of blood so mightie, which for a Crown, minds sanctified and religious have not presum'd to violate ? How much more then may the soul dazzling glories of a Scepter work in his youth, whose constitution's fierie, as overheated air, and has to fan it into a flame, the breath of love and praises blown by strong thought of his own worth and actions.

Al. No more of this, good Mura.

Mu. They dare already limit your intentions, demand (as 'twere) with cunning zeal (which rightly interpreted, is infolence) the Princes abode at home. I wil not fay it is, but I guefs, 't may be their fubtle purpofe while we abroad fight for new kingdomes purchafe depriv'd by that means of our faithful fuccors, they may deprive you of this crown, inforce upon the prince this Diadem ; which however he may be loth t'accept, being once poffeffed of't and tafted the delights of fupreme greatnefs, hee'l be more loath to part with. To prevent this, not that I think it wil, but that may happen, 'tis fit the Prince march. I've obferved in him too of late a fullen Melancholly, whence rifing i'le not conjecture : only I fhould grieve, Sir, beyond a moderate forrow, traitorous practife fhould take that from you which with loyal blood ours and your own victorious arms have purchas'd. and now I have difcharg'd my honeft confcience cenfure on't as you please ; henceforth I'me filent.

Al. Would thou hadft been fo now, thy loyal fears have made me fee how miserable a King is, whose rule depends on the vain people fuffrage. Black now and horrid as the face of ftorms appears al Abilqualits lovely vertues, because to me they only make him dangerous, and with great terror fhall behold thofe actions which with delight before we view'd, and dotage ; like Mariners that blefs the peaceful feas, which when fufpected to grow up tempeftuous, they tremble at. Though he may ftill be virtuous, 'tis wifdome in us, to him no injuflice, to keep a vigilant eie o're his proceedings and the wild peoples purpofes.

Enter Abil.

Al. Abilqualit!
come to take your leave, I do conjecture.

Abil. Rather, Sir, to beg your gracious licence, I may stil at home attend your dread commands, and that you'd please to nominate my hopeful brother Abrahen

(in lieu of me) chief of your now raised Forces for th' Persian expedition,

Al. Dare you (Sir) presume to make this suit to us?

Abil. Why? (my roial Lord)

I hope this cannot pull your anger on your most obedient Son : a true affection to the young Prince my brother, did beget this my request ; I willingly would have his youth adorn'd with glorie of this conquest.
No tree bears fruit in Autumn, 'less it blossome first in the Spring : 'tis fit he were acquainted in these soft years with military action, that when grown perfect man, he may grow up too perfect in warlike discipline.

Al. Hereafter

we shall by your appointment guide our Counsels.
Why do you not intreat me to resigne
my Crown, that you the peoples much lov'd minion may with't impale your glorious brow ? Sir, henceforth or know your duty better, or your pride shall meet our just wak'd anger. To your Charge, and march with speed, or you shall know what 'tis to disobey our pleasure. When y'are King, learn to command your Subjects ; I will mine (Sir.)
You know your Charge, perform it.

Exit Alm. and Mura.

Abil. I have done.

Our hopes (I see) resemble much the Sun,
that rising and declining cast large shadows ;
but when his beams are dress'd in's midday brightnesse, yeelds none at all : when they are farthest from successe, their guilt reflection does display
the largest show of events fair and prosp'rous.
With what a settled confidence did I promise
my self, my stay here, Mura's wish'd departure ?
when stead of these, I finde my fathers wrath destroying mine intentions. Such a fool is self-compassion, soothing us to faith of what we wish should hap, while vain desire of things we have not, makes us quite forget those w'are possess'd of.

Enter Abrahen.

Abr. Alone the engine works beyond or hope or credit. How I hug with vast delight, beyond that of stoln pleasures forbidden Lovers taste, my darling Mistriss, my active Brain ! If I can be thus subtle while a young Serpent, when grown up a Dragon how glorious shall I be in cunning practise ? My gracious brother !

Abil. Gentle Abrahen, I am griev'd my power cannot comply my promise : my Father's so averse from granting my request concerning thee, that with angrie frowns he did express rather a passionate rage then a refusall civil, or accustom'd to his indulgent disposition.

Abr. Hee's our Father, and so the tyrant Custome doth inforce us to yeeld him that which fools call natural, when wise men know 'tis more then servile duty, a slavish, blind obedience to his pleasure, be it nor just, nor honourable.

Abil. O my Abrahen, these founds are unharmonious, as unlookt for from thy unblemish'd innocence : though he could put off paternal pietie, 't gives no priviledg for us to wander from our filial dutie : though harsh, and to our natures much unwelcom be his decrees, like those of Heaven, we must not presume to question them.

Abr. Not, if they concern our lives and fortunes ? 'Tis not for my self I urge these doubts ; but 'tis for you, who are my Brother, and I hope, must be my Sovereigne, my fears grow on me almost to distraction :

 Our Father's age betrayes him to a dotage,
 which may be dang'rous to your future safetie ;
 he does suspect your Loyaltie.

Abil. How, Abrahen ?

Ab. I knew 'twould start your innocence ; but 'tis truth,
 a sad and serious truth ; nay his suspicion almost arriv'd unto a fetled faith that y'are ambitious.

Abil. 'Tis impossible.

Ab. The glorious shine of your illustrious vertues are grown too bright and dazling for his eyes to look on as he ought, with admiration ;
 and he with fear beholds them, as it were,
 through a perspective, where each brave action
 of yours survey'd though at remotest distance, appears far greater then it is. In brief, that love which you have purchas'd from the people that sing glad Hymns to your victorious fortunes, betrayes you to his hate ; and in this Voiage which he inforces you to undertake,
 he has set spies upon you.

Abil. 'Tis so : afflictions
 do fall like hailstones, one no sooner drops, but a whole Showre does follow. I observ'd indeed, my Abrahen, that his looks and language was dress'd in unaccustom'd clouds, but did not imagine they'd presag'd so fierce a tempest.
 Ye gods, why do you give us gifts and graces,
 share your own attributes with men, your virtues,
 when they betray them to worse hate then vices ?
 But Abrahen, prithee reconfirm my feares
 by testimonial how this can be truth ;
 for yet my innocence with too credulous trust fooths up my soul, our father should not thus put that off which does make him so, his sweetnesse, to feed the irregular flames of false suspicions and foul tormenting jealousies.

Ab. Why, to me,
to me (my Lord) he did with strong Injunctions
give a solicitous charge to overlook your actions.
My Abrahen (quoth he) I'me not so unhappie, that like thy brother thou shouldst be ambitious,
who does affect, 'fore thy ag'd Fathers ashes, with greedie lust my Empire. Have a strict and cautious diligence to observe his carriage,
'twil be a pious care. Mov'd with the base indignity, that he on 'me should force
the office of a spy ; your spy, my noble and much lov'd brother : my best manhood scarce could keep my angry tears in ; I resolv'd
I was in duty bound to giue you early intelligence of his unjust intentions, that you in wisdom might prevent all dangers might fall upon you from them, like swift lightning, killing 'cause they invade with sudden fierceness.

Abil. In afflicting me, misery is grown witty.

Ab. Nay besides (Sir)
the fullen Mura has the self same charge too
confin'd and fetled on him ; which his blind duty will execute. O brother, your soft passive nature, do's like jet on fire
when oyls cast on't, extinguish : otherwise,
this base suspicion would inflame your sufferance,
nay make the purest loyalty rebellious.
However, though your too religious piety forces you 'ndure this foul disgrace with patience, look to your safety, brother, that dear safety
which is not only yours, but your whole Empires :
for my part, if a faithfull brothers service
may aught avail you, tho against our father,
since he can be so unnaturally suspicious,
as your own thoughts, command it.

Enter Selinthus and Mefithes.

Sel. Come, I know,
although th' art lost some implements of manhood

may make thee gracious in the fight of woman,
yet th' ast a little engine, cal'd a tongue,
by which thou canst orecome the nicest female,
in the behalf of friend. Infooth, you Eunuchs may well be stil'd Pimps-royal, for the skill
you have in quaint procurement.

Mef. Your Lordship's merry, and would inforce on me what has been your office far oftner than the cunningst Squire belonging to the smock transitory. May't please your Highnesse.

Abil. Ha! Mefithes.

Ab. His countenance varies strangely, some affaure the Eunuch gives him notice of, 't should seem,
begets much pleasure in him.

Abil. Is this truth?

Mef. Else let me taste your anger.

Abil. My dear Abrahen,
wee'l march to night, prethee give speedie Notice to our Lieutenant Mura, to collect the forces from their severall quarters, and draw them into Battalia on the plain behind the Citie, lay a strict command he stir not from the Ensigns til our self arrive in person there. Be speedie, brother, a little hastie busines craves our presence.
We wil anon be wiith you, my Mefithes.

Exeunt Abil. and Mef.

Sel. Can your grace imagine whether his highness goes now?

Ab. No, Selinthus ;
canst thou conjecture at the Eunuchs busines?
what ere it was, his countenance seem'd much altred :
Il'd give a talent to have certain knowledg
what was Mefithes message.

Sel. I'll inform you
at a far easier rate. Mefithes businesse
certes concern'd a limber petticoate,
and the smock soft and slipperie ; on my honour,
has been providing for the Prince, some female that he takes his leave of Ladies flesh

ere his departure.

Ab. Not improbable, it may be so.

Sel. Nay, certain (Sir) it is so:
and I believe, your little bodie earns after the same sport. You were once reported a wag would have had business of ingendring with furly Mura's Lady: and men may conjecture y'are no chaster then a vot'rie:
yet though she would not solace your desires,
there are as handsome Ladies will be proud to have your Grace inoculate their stocks with your graft-royal.

Ab. Thou art Selinthus still,
and wilt not change thy humor. I must go and find out Mura; so farwel Selinthus, thou art not for these warrs, I know.

Exit.

Sel. No truly,
nor yet for any other, 'less 't be on a naked yeilding enemy; though there may be as hot service upon such a foe
as on those clad in steel: the little squadron,
we civill men assault body to body,
oft carry wild-fire, about them privately,
that findges us ith' service from the crown
even to the sole, nay sometimes hair and all off.
But these are transitory perills.

Enter Gafilles, Osman.

Couzens,
I thought you had been dancing to the drum.
Your General has given order for a march this night, I can assure you.

Gaf. It is Couzen, something of the soonest; but we are prepar'd
at all times for the journey.

Sel. To morrow morning may serve the turn though. Hark you, Couzens mine;
if in this Persian War you chance to take a handsome she Captive, pray you be not unmindfull

of us your friends at home ; I will disburfe her ranfome, Couzens, for I've a months mind to try if ftrange flesh, or that of our own Countrey has the compleater relifh.

Of. We will accomplifh thy pleafure, noble Couzen.

Sel. But pray do not take the firft fay of her your felves. I do not love to walk after any of my kindred ith' path of copulation.

Gaf. The firft fruits fhall be thy own, dear Couz. But fhall we part (never perhaps to meet agen) with dry lips, my right honoured Coz ?

Sel. By no means,
though by the Alcharon wine be forbidden,
you Souldiers in that cafe make't not your faith.
Drink water in the Camp, when you can purchafe no other liquor ; here you fhall have plenty of wine, old and delicious. I'le be your leader, and bring you on, let who will bring you off.
To the encounter, come let us mareh, Couzens.

Exeunt Omnes.

Song.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Abilqualit, Caropia, and Mefithes, Perilinda.

Car. No more, my gracious Lord, where real love is needleffe are all expreffions ceremonious :
the amorous Turtles, that at firft acquaintance ftrive to exprefse in murmuring notes their loves,
do when agreed on their affections change their chirps to billing.

Abil. And in feather'd arms incompaffe mutually their gawdy necks.

Mef: How do you like these love tricks, Perilinda ?

Per. Very well ;

but one may sooner hope from a dead man
to receive kindness, than from thee, an Eunuch.
You are the coldest creatures in the bodies,
no snow-balls like you.

Mef. We must needs, who have not that which like fire should warm our constitutions,
the instruments of copulation, girls,
our toys to please the Ladies.

Abil. Caropia, in your well becoming pity of my extrem afflictions and stern sufferings, you've shown that excellent mercy as must render what ever action you can fix on, virtuous.
But Lady, I till now have been your tempter,
one that desired hearing, the brave resistance
you made my brother, when he woo'd your love, only to boast the glory of a conquest which seem'd impossible, now I have gain'd it by being vanquisher, I my self am vanquish'd your everlasting Captive.

Car. Then the thralldome will be as prosperous as the pleasing bondage of palms, that flourish most when bow'd down fastest ;
Constraint makes sweet and easie things laborious,
when love makes greatest miseries seem pleasures.
Yet 'twas ambition (Sir) join'd with affection that gave me up a spoil to your temptations.
I was resolv'd, if ever I did make a breach on matrimonial faith, 't should be with him that was the darling of kind fortune
as well as liberall nature ; who possess'd
the height of greatness to adorn his beauty ;
which since they both conspire to make you happy,
I thought 't would be a greater sin to suffer
your hopeful person, born to sway this Empire, in loves hot flames to languish, by refusal to a consuming fever, then t' infringe
a vow which ne're proceeded from my heart

when I unwillingly made it.

Abil. And may break it with confidence, secure from the least guilt, as if 't had only in an idle dream been by your fancy plighted. Madam, there can be no greater misery in love, than separation from the object which we affect ; and such is our misfortune
we must ith' infancy of our desires breath at unwelcome distance ; ith' mean time, lets make good use of the most precious minutes
we have to spend together.

Car. Else we were unworthy to be titled lovers ;
but
I fear loath'd Mura may with swift approach disturb our happiness.

Abil. By my command hee's mustering up our forces.
Yet Mesithes, go you to Abrahen, and with intimations from us, strengthen our charge. Come my Caropia, love's wars are harmless, for who ere do's yeild,
gains as much honor as who wins the field.

ACTUS TERTIUS SCENA I.

Enter Abilqualit and Caropia, as rising from bed, Abrahen without, Perilinda.

A Br. Open the door, I must and will have entrance
unto the Prince my brother, as you love your life and safety and that Ladies honor, whom you are lodg'd in amorous twines with, do not deny me entrance to you, I am Abrahen, your loyal brother Abrahen.

Abil. 'Tis his voice, and there can be no danger in't, Caropia, be not difmaid, though w'are to him discover'd. Your fame shall taste no blemish by't. Now brother, 'tis something rude in you, thus violently to presse upon our privacies.

Abr. My affection shall be my Advocate, and plead my care of your lov'd welfare, as you love your honour, haste from this place, or you'll betray the Lady to ruin most inevitable. Her husband has notice of your being here, and's comming on wings of jealousy and desperate rage to intercept you in your close delights. In brief, I over heard a trusty Servant of his ith' Camp come and declare your highness was private with Caropia: at which tidings the sea with greater haste when vext with tempests, so sudden and boystrous, flies not towards the shore, then he intended homewards. He by this needs must have gain'd the City; for with all my power

I hasted hitherward, that by your absence you might prevent his veiw of you.

Abil. Why? the slave dare not invade my person, had he found me in fair Caropias armes: 'twould be ignoble, now I have cauf'd her danger, should I not defend her from his violence. I'll stay though he come arm'd with thunder.

Abr. That will be a certain means to ruin her: To me count that cure, I'll stand between the Lady, and Mura's fury, when your very fight, giving fresh fire to th' injury, will incense him 'gainst her beyond all patience.

Car. Nay, besides his violent wrath breaking through his allegiance may riot on your person. Dear my Lord withdraw your self, there may be some excuse
when you are absent thought on, to take off
Mura's suspicion : by our loves, depart
I do beseech you. Hapless I was born to be most miserable.

Abil. You shall over-rule me.
Better it is for him with unhallowed hands to act a sacrileg on our Prophets tombe then to profane this purity with the least offer of injurie ; be careful Abrahen, to thee I leave my heart. Farewell Caropia, your tears inforce my absence. Exit Abil.

Abr. Pray hast my Lord
lest you should meet the inrag'd Mura : now Madam where are the boasted glories of that virtue, which like a faithful Fort withstood my batt'ries ?
demolish'd now, and ruin'd they appear ;
like a fair building totter'd from its base
by an unruly whirlwind, and are now instead of love the objects of my pitie.

Car. I'm bound to thank you Sir, yet credit me ;
my sin's so pleasing 't' cannot meet repentance.
Were Mura here, and arm'd with all the horrors rage could invest his powers with ; not forgiven Hermits with greater peace shal hast to death,
then I to be the Martyr of this cause,
which I so love and reverence.

Abr. 'Tis a noble
and wel becoming constancie, and merits
a lover of those Supreme eminent graces, that do like ful winds swel the glorious Sails
of Abilqualit's dignitie and beautie !
yet Madam, let me tell you, though I could not envie my brothers happinesse, if he could have enjoy'd your priceless love with safetie, free from discoverie, I am afflicted

beyond a moderate sorrow, that my youth which with as true a zeal, courted your love, should appear so contemptible to receive a killing scorn from you : yet I forgive you, and do so much respect your peace, I wish you had not find so carelessly to be betray'd ith' first fruitions of your wishes to your suspicious husband.

Car. 'Tis a fate Sir,
 which I must stand, though it come dress'd in flames,
 killing as circular fire, and as prodigious
 as death presaging Comets : there's that strength in love, can change the pitchie face of dangers to pleasing formes, make ghastly fears seeme beau-teous ;

and I'me resolv'd, since the sweet Prince is free from Mura's anger, which might have been fatal
 if he should here have found him, unresistless
 I dare his utmost fury.

Abr. 'Twill bring death with't sure as stifling dampe ; and 'twere much pitie
 so sweet a beautie should unpitied fall, betray'd to endlesse infamie ; your husband knowes only that my brother in your chamber was entertained ; the servant that betrayed you, curse on his diligence, could not affirm he saw you twin'd together : yet it is death by the law, you know, for any Ladie at such an hour, and in her husbands absence ;
 to entertain a stranger.

Car. 'Tis considered Sir,
 and since I cannot live to enjoy his love,
 I'll meet my death as willingly as I met Abilqualit's dear embraces.

Abr. That were too severe a crueltie. Live Caropia, til the kind destinies take the loath'd Mura
 to their eternal Mansions, til he fall either in war a sacrifice to fortune, or else by stratagem take his destruction

from angry Abilqualit, whose faire Empreffe you were created for : there is a mean yet to save th' opinion of your honour spotlesse, as that of Virgin innocence, nay to preserve, (though he doth know (as certainly he must do) my Brother have enjoy'd thee) thee stil precious in his deluding fancie.

Car. Let me adore you if you can give effect to your good purpose.
But tis impossible.

Abr. With as secure an ease
't shal be accomplish'd as the blest desires of uncross'd lovers : you shal with one breath
dissolve these mists that with contagious darknesse threaten the lights both of your life and honour.
Affirm my brother ravish'd you.

Car. How my Lord ?

Abr. Obtained by violence entry into your chamber where his big lust seconded by force, despight of yours and your Maids weak resistance
surpris'd your honor : when't shall come to question,
my brother cannot so put off the truth,
he owes his own affection and your whiteness,
but to acknowledg it a rape.

Car. And so by saving mine, betray his fame and safety,
to the lawes danger, and your fathers justice,
which with impartial doome will most severely sentence the Prince, although his son.

Abr. Your fears and too affectionate tenderneffe wil ruine
all that my care has builded. Sure, Mefithes has (as my charge injoin'd him) made relation

Enter Mura.

to him of Abilqualit's action. See your Husband, resolve on't, or y'are miserable.

Mu. Furies,
where is this lustful Prince, and this lascivious
Strumpet ? ha Abrahen, here ?

Abr. Good Cozen Mura, be not so passionate, it is your Prince has wrought your injury ; resolve to bear your crosses like a man : the great'st afflictions should have the greatest fortitude in their sufferings
from minds resolv'd and noble. 'Las poor Ladie,
'twas not her fault ; his too unruly lust
'tis, has destroy'd her puritie.

Mu. Ha, in tears !
Are these the liverie of your fears and penitence,
or of your sorrows (minion) for being rob'd
so soon of your Adulterer ?

Abr. Fie, your passion is too unmannerly ; you look upon her with eyes of rage, when you with grief and pitie ought to surveigh her innocence. My Brother, degenerate as he is from worth, and meerly
the beast of lust, (what fiends would fear to violate) has with rude insolence destroyed her honor,
by him inhumane ravished.

Car. Good Sir be so merciful as to set free a wretch from loath'd mortalitie, whose lifes so great and hateful burden now sh'as lost her honor :
'Twil be a friendly charitie to deliver her from the torment of it.

Mu. That I could contract the foul of universal rage into this swelling heart, that it might be as full of poisonous anger as a dragons
when in a toile infnar'd. Caropia ravished !
Methinks the horror of the found should fright to everlasting ruine, the whole world, start natures Genius.

Abr. Gentle Madam, pray withdraw your self, your sight, til I have wrought a cure upon his temper, wil but adde to his affliction.

Car. You're as my good Angel,

I'll follow your directions.

Exit.

Abr. Cozen Mura,

I thought a person of your masculine temper,
in dangers fostred, where perpetual terrors have been your play-fellowes, would not have resented with such effeminate passion a disgrace, though ne're so huge and hideous.

Mu. I am tame,
collected now in all my faculties,
which are so much oppress'd with injuries,
they've lost the anguish of them: can you think, Sir,
when all the winds fight, the inrag'd billows that use to imprint on the black lips of clouds
a thousand brinie kisses, can lie stil,
as in a lethargie? that when baths of oyl are pour'd upon the wild irregular flames
in populous Cities, that they'll then extinguish?
Your mitigations adde but seas to seas,
give matter to my fires to increase their burning,
and I ere long enlightned by my anger
shall be my owne pile, and consume to ashes.

Abr. Why, then I see indeed your injuries have ravished hence your reason and discourse,
and left you the meere prostitute of passion.
Can you repaire the ruins you lament so with these exclames? was ever dead man call'd to life again by fruitful sighs? or can your rage reedifie Caropias honour, slain and betray'd by his foul lust? Your manhood, that heretofore has thrown you on all dangers,
me thinks should prompt you to a noble vengeance,
which you may safely prosecute with Justice,
to which this crime, although he be a Prince,
Renders him liable.

Mu. Yes, I'le have justice or I'le awake the sleepy Deities, or like ambitious Gyants wage new wars
with heaven it self, my wrongs shall steel my courage, and on this vicious Prince like a fierce Sea-breach

my juſt wak'd rage ſhall riot till it ſink
in the remorceleſſe eddie, ſink where time
ſhall never find his name but with diſgrace to taint his hatefull memory.

Abr. This wildneſſe neither befit your wiſdom nor your courage,
which ſhould with ſetled and collected thoughts walk on to noble vengeance. He before was by our plots proſcrib'd to death and ruine to advance me to the Empire ; now with eaſe
we may accompliſh our deſigns

Mu. Would heaven
I nere had given conſent, o'ecome by love
to you to have made a forfeit on my allegiance,
'tis a juſt puniſhment, I by him am wrong'd,
whom for your ſake I fearleſſe fought to ruin.

Abr. Are you repentant grown, Mura ? this ſoftneſe ?
ill ſuits a perſon of your great reſolves,
on whom my fortunes have ſuch firm dependance.
Come, let Caropia's fate invoke thy vengeance
to gain full maſtry o're all other paſſions, leave not a corner in thy ſpacious heart
unfurniſh'd of a noble rage, which now will be an attribute of glorious juſtice :
the law you know with loſs of fight doth puniſh
all rapes, though on mean perſons ; and our father is ſo ſevere a Juſticer, not blood can make a breach upon his faith to juſtice.
Beſides, we have already made him dangerous in great Almanzors thoughts, and being delinquent
he needs muſt ſuffer what the meaneſt offender merits for ſuch a treſpaſs.

Mu. I'me awake now,
the lethargy of horror and amaze
that did obſcure my reaſon, like thoſe dul
and lazy vapors that o'reſhade the Sun, vaniſh, and it reſumes its native brightneſs.
And now I would not but this devil Prince had done this act upon Caropia's whiteness, since't yeilds you free access unto the Empire,

The deprivall of's fight do's render him incapable of future soveraignty.

Abr. Thou'rt in the right,
and hast put on manly considerations :
Caropia (since shee's in her will untainted)
ha's not forgon her honor : he dispatc'd once,
as we will have him shortly, 't shall go hard else,
a tenant to his marble, thou agen
wedded in peace maist be to her pure vertues,
and live their happy owner.

Mu. I'le repair to great Almanzor instantly, and if his partial piety do descend to pitty,
I will awake the Executioner of justice, death, although in sleep more heavy than he can borrow from his natural coldness ;
on this good sword I'le wear my causes justice
till he do fall its sacrifice.

Abr. But be sure you do't with cunning secrecie, perhaps,
should he have notice of your just intentions,
he would repair to th' Army, from which safegard
our best force could not pluck him without danger to the whole Empire.

Mu. Doubt not but I'le manage with a discreet severity my vengeance, invoke Almanzors equity with sudder
and private haste.

Abr. Mean time
I will go put a new design in practice that may be much conducing to our purpose.
Like clocks, one wheele another on must drive,
affairs by diligent labor only thrive. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Selinthus, Gafelles, Ofman, and Souldiers.

Sel. No quarrelling good Couzens, lest it be with the glafs, 'caufe 'tis not of fize fufficient to give you a magnificent draught. You will have fighting work enough when you're i' th' wars,

do not fall out among your felves.

Of. Not pledg
my peerleffe Miftrefse health ? Souldier, thou'rt mortall,
if thou refuse it.

Gaf. Come, come, he fhall pledg it, and 'twere a Tun. Why, w'are all as dull as dormife in our liquor : Here's a health to the Prince Abilqualit.

Soul. Let go round :
I'd drink't, were it an Ocean of warm bloud flowing from th'emie. Pray, good my Lord what news is stirring ?

Sel. It fhould feem, Souldier, thou canst not read ; otherwise the learn'd Pamphlets that flie about the ftreets, would fatisfie thy curiositie with news ; they'r true ones,
full of discreet intelligence.

Of. Cofens, fhals have a Song ? here is a Souldier in's time hath fung a dirge unto the foe
oft in the field.

Soul. Captain, I have a new one,
the Souldiers Joy 'tis call'd.

Sel. That is an harlot.
Preethee be muficall, and let us tafte
the sweetneffe of thy voice.

A Song.

Gaf. Whift, give attention.

Soul. How does your Lordship like it ?

Sel. Very well.

And fo here's to thee. There's no drum beats yet, and 'tis cleer day ; fome hour hence 'twill be

Enter Abr. Mef.

time to break up the Watch. Ha ! young Lord

Abrahen,
and trim Mefithes with him ! what the divel does he make up fo early ? He has been a bat-fowling all night after those Birds,

those Ladie-birds term'd wagtails ; what strange business

can he have here, tro ?

Abr. 'Twas wel done, Mefithes !
and trust me, I shal find an apt reward,
both for thy care and cunning. Prethee haft to Lord Simanthes, and deliver this note to him with best diligence, my dear Eunuch ;
thou'rt halfe the soul of Abrahen :

Mef. I was borne
to be intituled your most humble vassal ;
I'll haft to the Lord Simanthes.

Exit.

Sel. How he cringes !
These youths that want the instruments of Manhood,
are very supple in the hams.

Abr. Good morrow
to noble Lord Selinthus : what companions have you got here thus early ?

Sel. Blades of metal, tall men of war, and't please your Grace, of my own blood and family, men who gather'd a fallad on the enemies ground, and eaten it in bold defiance of him ;
and not a Souldier here but's an Achylles,
valiant as stoutest Mirmidon.

Abr. And they never had juster cause to shew their valor ;
the Prince my dearest brother, their Lord General's became a forfeit to the stern laws rigour ;
and 'tis imagin'd, our impartial father,
will sentence him to lose his eyes.

Gaf. Marry heaven
defend, for what, and 't like your Grace !

Abr. For a fact which the severe law punishes with los of natures precious lights ; my teares wil scarce permit me utter't : for a rape committed on the fair wife of Mura.

Of. Was it for nothing else, and please your Grace ?
ere he shal lose an eie for such a trifle,
or have a haire diminish'd, we wil lose our heads ; what, hoodwink men like fullen hawks for doing deeds of nature ! I'me asham'd the law is such an Afs.

Sel. Some Eunuch Judg, that could not be acquainted with the sweets
due to concupiscencial parts, invented
this law, I'll be hang'd else. 's Life, a Prince,
and such a hopeful one, to lose his eyes,
for satisfying the hunger of the stomach
beneath the wast, is crueltie prodigious, not to be suffer'd in a common-wealth of ought but geldings.

Abr. 'Tis vain to sooth
our hopes with these delusions, he wil suffer less he be reskued. I would have you therfore
if you ow any service to the Prince,
my much lamented brother, to attend without least tumult 'bout the Court, and if there be necessity of your ayd, I'le give you notice when to imploy it.

Sel. Sweet Prince, wee'l swim
in blood to do thee or thy brother service.
Each man provide their weapons.

Abr. You will win
my brothers love for ever, nay my father, though hee'l seem angry to behold his justice
deluded, afterwards when his rage is past, will thank you for your loyalties : Pray be there with all speed possible, by this my brothers commanded 'fore my father, Ile go learn the truth, and give you notice : pray be secret and firm to your resolves.

Exit.

Sel. For him that finches in such a cause, I'le have no more mercy on him. Heres Tarifa Enter Tarifa and Mura.
the Princes sometimes Tutor, Mura with him a walking towards the Court, let's take no notice of them, lest they discover our intentions by our grim looks. March fair and softly Couzens, wee'l be at Court before them.

Tar. You will not do this, Mura !

Mu. How Tarifa ?

will you defend him in an act so impious ?
Is't fit the drum should cease his furlly language,
when the bold Souldiers marches, or that I should passe o're this affront in quiet filence, which Gods and men invoke to speedy vengeance ?
which I will have, or manhood shall be tame
as Cowardice.

Tar. It was a deed so barbarous, that truth it self blushes as well as justice
to hear it mention'd : but consider Mura,
he is our Prince, the Empires hope, and pillar of great Almanzors age. How far a publick regard should be prefer'd before your private desire of vengeance ! which if you do purchase from our impartial Emperors equity,
his los of fight, and so of the succefsion,
will not restore Caropia to the honor
he ravish't from her. But so foule the cause is,
I rather should lament the Princes folly than plead in his behalf.

Mur. 'Tis but vain,
there is your warrant, as you are high Marshal,
to summon him to make his speedy appearance
'fore the Tribunall of Almanzor ;
so pray you execute your office.

Exit.

Tar. How one vice can like a small cloud when 't breaks forth in showers, black the whole heaven of vertues ! O my Lord,

Enter Abilqualit, Muts, whispering, seem to make protestations. Exeunt.

that face of yours which once with Angell brightnesse cheer'd my faint fight, like a grim apparition frights it with ghastly terror : you have done

a deed that startles vertue till it shakes as it got a palfie. I'me commanded to fummon you before your father, and hope you'l obey his mandate.

Abil. Willingly,
what's my offence, Tarifa ?

Tar. Would you knew not,
I did preface your too unruly passions would hurry you to some difast'rous act,
but ne're imagin'd you'd have been so lost to masculine honor, to commit a rape
on that unhappy object of your love,
whom now y'ave made the spoil of your foul lust,
the much wrong'd wife of Mura.

Abil. Why, do's Mura charge me with his Caropia's rape ?

Tar. This warrant sent by your angry father, testifies

he means to appeach you of it.

Abil. 'Tis my fortune, all natural motions when they approach their end, hast to draw to't with accustom'd swiftneffe. Rivers with greedier speed run neere their out-falls, than at their springs. But I'me resolv'd, let what happen that will, I'le stand it, and defend Caropia's honor, though mine own I ruin ;
Who dares not dye to justifie his love,
deserves not to enjoy her. Come, Tarifa, what e're befall, I'me resolute. He dies glorious, that falls loves innocent sacrifice. Exeunt.

ACTUS QUARTUS. Scena I.

Enter Almanzor, Abilqualit, Tarifa and Mura.

Al. NO more Tarifa, you'l provoke our anger,
if you appear in this cause so solicitous,
the act is too apparent : nor shal you need (injur'd Mura) to implore our justice, which with impartial doome shall fal on him

 more rigorously, then on a strange offender.
O Abilqualit, (for the name of Son, when thou forfookst thy native virtue, left thee ;))
 Were all thy blood, thy youth and fortunes glories of no more value, then to be expos'd to ruine for one vice ; at whose name only the furies start, and bashful fronted justice hides her amaz'd head ? But it is now bootless to shew a fathers pitie, in my grief for thy amifs. As I'me to be thy Judg, be resolute, I'll take as little notice,
 thou art my off-spring, as the wandring clouds
 do of the showers, which when they've bred to ripe-
 nesse,
 they straight disperse through the vast earth forgotten.

Abil. I'me forrie Sir, that my unhappie chance should draw your anger on me ; my long silence
 declares I have on that excelling sweetnesse, that unexampled pattern of chaste goodnesse ;
Caropia acted violence. I confes,
 I lov'd the Ladie, and when no perswasions
 serv'd to prevail on her, too stubborn, incens'd,
 by force I fought my purpose and obtain'd it ;
 nor do I yet (so much I prize the sweetnesse of that unvalued purchase) find repentance in any abject thought ; what ere falls on me from your sterne rigor in a cause so precious,
 will be a pleasing punishment.

Al. You are grown
 a glorious malefactor, that dare brave thus the awful rod of justice ! Lost young man, for thou'rt no child of mine ; dost not consider to what a state of desperate destruction thy wild lust has betray'd thee ! What rich blessings (that I may make thee sensible of thy sins by showing thee thy suffering) hast thou lost by thy irregular folly ! First my love, which never more must meet thee, scarce in pitié ;

the glorie flowing from thy former actions
stopt up for ever ; and those lustful eies, by whose deprival (thou'rt depriv'd of being capable of this Empire) to the law, which wil exact them, forfeited. Cal in there a Surgeon, and our Mutts to execute this act

Enter Surg. Muts.

of justice on the unworthie traitor, upon whom my just wak'd wrath shall have no more compassion, then the incens'd flames have on perishing wretches that wilfully leap into them.

Tar. O my Lord,
that which on others would be fitting justice,
on him your hopeful though offending son,
wil be exemplar crueltie ; his youth Sir,
that hath abounded with so many vertues,
is an excuse sufficient for one vice :
he is not yours only, hee's your Empires,
destin'd by nature and succeffions priviledg,
when you in peace are shrowded in your marble,
to weild this Scepter after you. O do not,
by putting out his eies, deprive your Subjects of light, and leave them to dul mournful darknesse.

Al. 'Tis but in vain, I am inexorable.
If those on which his eyes hang, were my heart strings,
I'de cut them out rather then wound my Justice ;
nor dos't befit thy vertue intercede
for him in this cause horrid and prodigious ;
the crime 'gainst me was acted ; 'twas a rape
upon my honour, more then on her whitnesse ;
his was from mine derivative, as each stream is from its spring ; so that he has polluted
by his foul fact, my fame, my truth, my goodnesse, strucken through my dignitie by his violence :
nay, started in their peaceful urnes, the ashes of all my glorious Ancestors ; defil'd
the memorie of their stil descendent vertues ;
nay, with a killing frost, nipt the fair blossomes,

that did presage such goodly fruit arising from his own hopeful youth.

Mur. I ask but justice ;
those eyes that led him to unlawful objects,
tis fit should suffer for't a lasting blindness ;
the Sun himself, when he darts rays lascivious,
such as ingender by too piercing fervence intemperate and infectious heats, straight wears obscuritie from the clouds his own beams raises.
I have been your Souldier Sir, and fought your battails ;

for all my services, I beg but justice,
which is the Subjects best prerogative,
the Princes greatest attribute ; and for a fact,
then which, none can be held more black and hideous,
which has betrai'd to an eclipse the brightest star in th' heaven of vertues : the just law does for't ordain a punishment, which I hope you the laws righteous guider, wil accordiug to equitie see executed.

Tar. Why ! that law
was only made for common malefactors,
but has no force to extend unto the Prince,
to whom the law it self must become subject.
This hopeful Prince, look on him, great Almanzor ;
and in his eyes, those volumes of all graces,
which you like erring Meteors would extinguish :
read your own lively figure, the best storie
of your youths noblest vigor ; let not wrath (Sir)
o'ecome your pietie, nay your humane pity.
'Tis in your brest, my Lord, yet to shew mercie ;
that precious attribute of heavens true goodnesse,
even to your self, your son ! me thinks that name should have a power to interdict your Justice in its too rigorous progreffs.

Abil. Dear Tarifa,
I'me more afflicted at the intercessions,
then at the view of my approaching torments,
which I wil meet with fortitude and boldness,

too base to shake now at one personal danger,
when I've incoutr'd thousand perils fearless ;
Nor do I blame my gracious fathers Justice,
though it precede his nature. I'd not have him (for my sake) forfeit that for which hee's famous,
his incorrupt'd equitie, nor repine
I at my destinie ; my eies have had delights sufficient in Caropia's beauties,
to serve my thoughts for after contemplations ;
nor can I ever covet a new object, since they can ne're hope to incoutr any of equal worth and sweetness.

Yet hark Tarifa, to thy secrecie
I wil impart my dearest, inmost counsels ;
if I should perish, as 'tis probable
I may, under the hands of these tormentors ;
thou maist unto succession show my innocence ;
Caropia yeild'd without least constraint,
and I injoy'd her freely.

Tar. How my Lord ?

Abil. No words on't,
as you respect my honour ! I'd not lose the glorie I shall gain by these my sufferings ;
come grim fures, and execute your office. I wil stand
you,
unmov'd as hills at whirlwinds, and amidst the torments you inflict, retain my courage.

Al. Be speedie villaines.

Tar. O stay your cruel hands,
you dumb ministers of injur'd Justice,
and let me speak his innocence ere you further afflict his precious eye-sight.

Al. What does this mean, Tarifa !

Tar. O my Lord,
the too much braverie of the Princes spirit
'tis has undone his fame, and pul'd upon him
this fatal punishment ; 'twas but to save the Ladies honour, that he has assum'd her rape upon him, when with her consent

the deed of shame was acted.

Mur. Tis his fears makes him traduce her innocence : he who did not flick to commit a riot on her person, can make no conscience to destroy her fame
by his untrue suggestions.

Al. 'Tis a baseness
beyond thy other villanie (had shee yeilded)
thus to betraie for transitorie torture,
her honour, which thou wert ingag'd to safeguard even with thy life. A son of mine could never show this ignoble cowardize : Proceed to execution, I'll not hear him speak,
he his made up of treacheries and falshoods.

Tar. Wil you then be to the Prince so tyrannous ? Why, to me just now he did confes his only motive to undergoe this torment, was to save Caropia's honour blameless.

Abil. I am more troubled
Sir, with his untimely frenzie,
then with my punishment ; his too much love to me, has spoild his temperate reason. I confes Caropia yeilded ! Not the light is half so innocent as her spotlesse virtue.
'Twas not wel done, Tarifa, to betray the secret of your friend thus, though Shee yeilded, the terror of ten thousand deaths shall never force me to confes it.

Tar. Agen, my Lord, even now
he does confes, she yeilded, and protests that death shall never make him say shee's guiltie :
the breath scarce pass'd his lips yet.

Abil. Haplesse man,
to run into this lunacie !
Fie Tarifa,
so treacherous to your Friend !

Tar. Agen, agen.
Wil no man give me credit ?

Enter Abrahen.

Abr. Where is our roial father ? where our brother ?
As you respect your life and Empires safetie,
dismifs these tyrannous instruments of death and crueltie unexemplified. O Brother, that I should ever live to enjoy my eie-sight,
and see one halfe of your dear lights indanger'd.
My Lord, you've done an act, which my just fears tels me, wil shake your Scepter ! O for heavens fake, look to your future safetie ; the rough Souldier hearing their much lov'd General, My good Brother was by the law betrai'd to some sad danger,
have in their pietie beset the pallace ;
think on some means to appease them, ere their furie grow to its ful unbridled height ; they threaten your life, dear Sir : pray send my brother to them,
his fight can only pacifie them.

Al. Have you your Champions !
We wil prevent their insolence, you shal not boast, you have got the Empire by our ruine.
Muts, Strangle him immediately.

Abr. Avert
such a prodigious mischief, heaven, Hark, hark Enter, Enter.

they're entred into th' Court ; desist you monsters,
my life shal stand betwixt his and this violence,
or I with him wil perish. Faithful Souldiers, hast to defend your Prince, curse on your flownesse.
Hee's dead ; my fathers turn is next. O horror, would I might sink into forgetfulnesse !
What has your furie urg'd you to ?

Al. To that which whofo murmurs at, is a faithlesse traitor Enter Simanthes.

to our tranquillitie. Now Sir, your busines ?

Sim. My Lord, the Citie
is up in arms, in rescue of the Prince ;
the whole Court throngs with Souldiers.

Al. 'Twas high time, to cut this viper off, that would have eat his passage

through our very bowels to our Empire.

Nay, we wil stand their furies, and with terror
of Majestie strike dead these insurrections.

Enter Souldiers.

Traitors, what means this violence ?

Abr. O dear Souldiers,
your honest love's in vain ; my Brother's dead,
strangled by great Almanzor's dire command, ere your arrival. I do hope they'l kill him
in their hot zeal.

Al. Why do you stare so, traitors ?
'twas I your Emp'ror that have done this act,
which who repines at, treads the self same steps of death that he has done. Withdraw and leave us, wee'd be alone. No motion ! Are you statues ?
Stay you, Tarifa here. For your part, Mura, you cannot now complain but you have justice ;
so quit our prence.

Of. Faces about, Gentleman.

Exeunt.

Abr. It has happ'ned above our wishes, we shall have no need now to imploy your handkercher. Yet give it me.
You'r fure 'tis right, Simanthes.

Al. Tarifa,
I know the love thou bearst Prince Abilqualit makes thy big heart swell as 't had drunk the fome of angry Dragons. Speak thy free intentions, Deserv'd he not this fate ?

Tar. No : You're a Tyrant,
one that delights to feed on your own bowels,
and were not worthie of a Son so vertuous.
Now you have tane his, add to your injustice,
and take Tarifa's life, who in his death,
shoud it come flying on the wings of torments,
would speak it out as an apparant truth :
the Prince to me declar'd his innocence,
and that Caropia yeilded.

Al. Rife Tarifa ;

we do command thee, rise : a sudden chilnesse,
such as the hand of winter casts on brooks,
thrills our ag'd heart. I'll not have thee ingrois forrow alone for Abilqualit's death :
I lov'd the boy well, and though his ambition
and popularitie did make him dangerous,
I do repent my furie, and will vie with thee in sorrow. How he makes death lovely !
Shall we fix here, and weep till we be statues ?

Tar. Til we grow stiff as the cold Alablasters must be erected over us. Your rashnesse has rob'd the Empire of the greatest hope it ere shall boast agen. Would I were ashes.

Al. He breathes (me thinks :) the over-hastie
foul
was too discourteous to forsake so fair
a lodging, without taking solemne leave first of the owner. Ha, his handkercher !
Thou'rt lib'ral to thy Father even in death,
leav'ft him a legacie to drie his tears,
which are too slow ; they should create a deluge.
O my dear Abilqualit !

Tar. You exceed now
as much in grief as you did then in rage,
One drop of this pious paternal softnesse had ransom'd him from ruine. Dear Sir, rise :
my grief's divided, and I know not whether
I should lament you living, or him dead.
Good Sir, erect your looks. Not stir ! His sorrow makes him insensible. Ha, there's no motion left in his vital spirits : The excesse of grief has stifled up his pow'rs, and crack'd
(I fear) his ag'd hearts cordage. Help, the Emperor, the Emperor's dead ; Help, help.

Abrahen, Simanthes, Mesithes, Muts.

Abr. What dismal outcrie's this ?
our royal father dead ! The handkercher has wrought
I see.

Tar. Yes ; his big heart
vanquish'd with forrow, that in's violent rage,
he doom'd his much lov'd son to timeles death,
could not endure longer on its weak strings,
but crack'd with weight of forrow. Their two spirits, by this, are met in their delightful passage to the blest shades ; we in our tears are bound to cal you our dread Sovereign.

Omnes. Long live Abrahen
Great Caliph of Arabia.

Abr. 'Tis a title
we cannot covet, Lords, it comes attended with so great cares and troubles, that our youth start at the thought of them, even in our forrows which are so mightie on us ; our weak spirits are readie to relinquish the possession they've of mortalitie, and take swift flight
after our roial friends. Simanthes, be it your charge to see all fitting preparation provided for the funerals. Enter Selinthus.

Sel. Where's great Almanzor ?

Abr. O Selinthus, this day is the hour of funerals grief ; for his crueltie to my brother, has translated him to immortalitie.

Sel. Hee'll have attendants to wait on him to our great prophets paradise, ere he be readie for his grave. The Souldiers all mad with rage for the Princes slaughter, have vow'd by all oaths Souldiers can invent,
(and that's no smal store) with death and destruction
to pursue fullen Mura.

Abr. Tarifa,
use your authoritie to keep their violence in due obedience. We're so fraught with grief, we have no room for any other passion in our distracted bosome. Take these roial bodies and place them on that couch ; here where they fell, they shal be imbalm'd. Yet put them out of our fight,

their veiws draw fresh drops from our heart.

Anon we'l shew our felves to chear the afflicted

Subject. a Shout.

Omnes. Long live Abrahen, great Caliph of Arabia.

Exeunt.

Abr. And who can say now, Abrahen is a villain ?

I am saluted King with acclamations

that deaf the Heavens to hear, with as much joy

as if I had atchiev'd this Scepter by means fair and vertuous. 'Twas this handkercher

that did to death Almanzor ; so infected

its least insensible vapour has full power ;

apply'd to th' eye, or any other Organ,

can drink its poyson in to vanquish Nature,

though nere so strong and youthful. 'Twas Simanthes

devis'd it for my brother, and my cunning

transferr'd it to Almanzor ; 'tis no matter,

my worst impiety is held now religious.

'Twixt Kings and their inferiors there's this ods,

These are meer men, we men, yet earthly gods.

Exit.

Abil. 'Twas well the Muts prov'd faithful, other-
wife

I'd lost my breath with as much speed and silence

as those who do expire in dreams, their health seeming no whit abated. But 'twas wisely consider'd of me, to prepare those sure instruments of destruction : The suspicion

I had by Abrahen of my fathers fears of my unthought ambition, did instruct me

by making them mine, to secure my safety.

Would the inhumane Surgeon had tane

these blessed lights from me ; that I had liv'd for ever

doom'd to perpetual darkness, rather then

Tarifa's fears had so appeach'd her honour.

Well, villain Brother, I have found that by my seeming death, which by my lives best arts I ne're should have had knowledg of. Dear Father, though thou to me wert pitiless, my heart weeps tears of blood, to see thy age thus like a lofty pine fall, eaten through by th' gin from its own Stock descending: He has agents in his ungracious wickedness: Simanthes he has discover'd: Were they multitudes as numerous as collected fands, and mighty in force as mischief, they should from my Justice meet their due punishment. Abrahen by this is proclaim'd Caliph, yet my undoubted right, when't shall appear I'me living, wil reduce the people to my part; the armie's mine, whither I must withdraw unseen: the night wil best secure me. What a strange Chimera of thought possesses my dul brain! Caropia, thou hast a share in them: Fate, to thy mercie I do commit my self; who scapes the snare once, has a certain caution to beware. Exit.

Scen. 2. Enter Caropia and Perilinda.

Car. Your Lord is not returned yet!

Per. No, good Madam: pray do not thus torment your self, the Prince (I warrant you) wil have no injurie by saving of your honour; do you think his father wil be so extreme outrageous for such a trifle, as to force a woman with her good liking?

Car. My ill boding soul beats with presages ominous. Would heaven I'd stood the hazard of my incens'd Lords furie, rather than he had run this imminent danger. Could you ne're learn, which of the slaves it was betray'd our clofe loves to loath'd Mura's notice?

Per. No indeed could I not ; but here's my Lord, pray Madam do not grieve so ! Enter Mura.

Mu. My Caropia,
drefs up thy looks in their accustom'd beauties,
cal back the constant fpring into thy cheeks,
that droope like lovely Violets, o're charg'd with too much mornings dew ; fhoot from thy eies
a thoufand flames of joy. The luftful Prince, that like a foul thief, rob'd thee of thy honour
by his ungracious violence, has met his roial fathers Justice.

Car. Now my fears carry too fure an augury ! you would fain
footh me, my Lord, out of my flood of forrows ;
what reparation can that make my honour,
though he have tafted punishment ?

Mu. His life
is faln the off-fpring of thy chafitie, which his hot luft polluted : nay, Caropia,
to fave himfelf, when he but felt the torment applied to his lascivious eies ; although at firft he did with impudence acknowledg thy rape, he did invade thy fpotlefs virtue,
protefted, only 'twas to fave thy honor,
he took on him thy rape, when with confent
and not constrain'd, thou yeildedft to the loofnefs
of his wild vicious flames.

Car. Could he be fo unjuft, my Lord ?

Mu. He was, and he has paid for't ;
the malicious Souldier, while he was a lofing
his eies, made violent head to bring him refkue, which pul'd his ruine on him. But no more of fuch a prodigie ; may his black memorie perifh even with his afhes. My Caropia, the flourishing trees widow'd by winters violence
of their fair ornaments, when 'tis expir'd once,
put forth again with new and virgin freshnefs,
their bufhie beauties ; it fhould be thy emblem.

Display agen those chaste immaculate glories,
 which the harsh winter of his lust had wither'd ;
 and I'll agen be wedded to thy vertues,
 with as much joy, as when thou first enrich'd me
 with their pure maiden beauties. Thou art dul,
 and dost not gratulate with happie welcoms,
 the triumphs of thy vengeance.

Car. Are you sure, my Lord, the Prince is dead ?

Mu. Pish, I beheld him breathlesse.

Take comfort best Caropia, thy disgrace
 did with his loath'd breath vanish.

Car. I could wish though,
 that he had falne by your particular vengeance,
 rather then by th' laws rigor ; you're a Souldier of glorie, great in war for brave performance :
 me thinks 't had been far nobler, had you call'd him to personal satisfaction : had I been your husband, you my wife, and ravished by him ;
 my resolution would have arm'd my courage to 've stroke him thus : The dead Prince sends you that. Stab him.

Mu. O, I am flain !

Car. Would it were possible to kil even thy eternitie. Sweet Prince, how shal I satisfy thy unhappie ruins !
 Ha, not yet breathlesse ! To increase thy anguish even to despair, know, Abilqualit was more dear to me, then thy foul selfe was odious,
 and did enjoy me freely.

Au. That I had but breath enough to blast thee.

Car. 'Twas his brother (curse on his art) seduc'd me to accuse him of my rape. Do you groane, prodigie !
 take this as my last bountie. Stab again.

Enter Perilinda.

Per. O Madam, Madam,

what shall we do ? the house is round beset with Souldiers ; Madam, they do sweare they'le tear
my Lord, for the sweet Princes death, in pieces.

Car. This hand has fav'd their furie that just labour : yet I'le make use of their malice, help to convey him into's Chamber.

Enter Osman, Gasselles, Souldiers.

Gaf. Where is this villain, this traitor Mura ?

Car. Heaven knowes what violence their furie may assault me with ; be't death,
't shall be as welcome, as sound healthful sleeps to men oppres'd with sickneffe. What's the matter ?
what means this outrage ?

Of. Marry, Ladie gay,
We're come to cut your little throat ; pox on you,
and all your sex ; you've caus'd the noble Princes death, wild-fire take you fort, weel talk with you at better leifure : you must needs be ravished !
and could not like an honest woman, take the curtesie in friendly fort !

Gaf. We trifle :
her husband may escape us. Say, where is he ?
or you shall die, ere you can pray.

Sold. Here, here I have found the vallain ! what, do
you

fleep so soundly ? ne're wake more, this for the Prince, you rogue : let's tear him piecemeale.
Do you take your death in filence, dog !

Car. You appear indow'd with some humanitie,
you have tane his life ; let not your hate last after death ; let me embalm his bodie with my tears, or kil me with him.

Of. Now you've said the word,
we care not if we do.

Enter Tarifa.

Tar. Slaves, unhand
the Ladie, who dares offer her least violence, from this hand meets his punishment. Gafelles, Ofman, I thought you had been better temper'd, then thus to raise up mutinies. In the name of Abrahen our now Caliph, I command you, desist from these rebellious practices, and quietly retire into the Camp, and there expect his pleasure.

Gaf. Abrahen Caliph!

There is some hopes then, we shall gain our pardons :

Long live great Abrahen. Souldiers, flink away, our vow is consummate.

Car. O my deare Lord!

Tar. Be gone.

Of. Yes, as quietly as if we were in flight before the foe; the general pardon at the coronation, wil bring us off, I'me sure.

Tar. Alas, good Madam! I'me sorrie that these miferies have faln with so much rigor on you; pray take comfort: your husband prosecuted with too much violence Prince Abilqualit's ruine.

Car. It appeared so! what worlds of woes have hapless I given life to, and yet survive them!

Tar. Do not with such furie torment your innocent self. I'me sure the Emperor Abrahen, wil number 't 'mongst his greatest sorrows, that he has lost your husband. I must give him notice of these proceedings. Best peace keep you, and settle your distractions.

Car. not until I'me settled in my peaceful urne. This is yet some comfort to me, 'midst the floods of woes, that do overwhelm me for the Princes death, that I reveng'd it safely; though I prize my life at no more value then a foolish ignorant Indian does a Diamond, which for a bead of Jet or glafs, he changes :

 Nor would I keep it, were it not with fuller,
 more noble braverie, to take revenge
 for my Lord Abilqualit's timeleffe flaughter.
 I muſt uſe craft and myſterie. Diſſembling is held the natural qualitie of our Sex, nor wil't be hard to praćtice. This fame Abrahen, that by his brothers ruine weilds the Scepter,
 whether out of his innocence or malice,
 'twas that perſwaded me to accuſe him of my rape. The die is caſt, I am reſolv'd to thee my Abilqualit I wil come.
 A death for love, 's no death but Martyrdom. Exit.

ACTUS QUINTUS. Scena I.

Enter Abilqualit, Selinthus, Gaſſelles, Ofman, Souldiers, and Muts.

Abil. NO more, good faithful Souldiers ; thank the powers
 divine, has brought me back to you in ſafety ;
 the traitorous praćtiſes againſt our life,
 and our deare fathers, poiſon'd by our brother ;
 we have diſcoverd, and ſhall take juſt vengance
 on the unnatural paricide : Retire into your tents, and peacefully expect the event of things, you Ofman and Gaſſelles
 ſhall into th' Citie with me.

Of. We wil march through the world with thee, dear Sovereign, great Abilqualit.

Abil. Selinthus,
 give you our dear Tarifa ſpeedie notice
 we are again among the living : pray him to let our loyal Subjects in the Citie,
 have ſure intelligence of our eſcape ;

and dearest friends and fellowes, let not your too loud expressions of your joy, for our unlook'd for welfare, subject to discoverie our unexpected safety.

Sel. Never fear : they'r trustie Mirmidons, and wil stick close to you their dear Achilles ; but my Lord, the wisest may imagine it were safer for you to rest here 'mong your armed legions, then to intrust your person in the City, whereas it seems by the pass'd storie, you'le not know friends from enemies.

Abil. Selinthus,
Thy honest care declares the zealous duty thou ow'st thy Sovereign : but what danger can assault us there, where there is none suspects we are alive ? we'l go surveigh the state of things, i' th' morning we will seize the Palace, and then proclaim our Right. Come, valiant Captains, you shall be our companions.

Gaf. And we'l guard you safe, as you were encompass'd with an Army.

Sel. You guard your own fools heads : I'st fit his safety, on which our lives and fortunes have dependance, should be expos'd unto your single valour ? Pray once let your friends rule you, that you may rule them hereafter. Your good brother Abrahen has a strong faction, it should seem i' th' Court : and those these Blood-hounds follow'd the sent hotly till they had worried Mura. He has other allies of no mean consequence ; your Eunuch Mefithes his chief Favourite, and Simanthes.

Abil. It was that Villain that betray'd my Love to him and slaught'ed Mura.

Sel. Wery likely,
An arranter, falser Parasite, never was cut like a Colt. Pray Sir, be wise this once, at my intreaties ; and for ever after use your discretion as you please : these night works

I do not like ; yet e're the morning I will bring Tarifa to you.

Abil. You shall o're rule us. Poor Caropia, these thoughts are thy vot'ries ; love thy active fire, flames out when present, absent in desire. Exeunt.

Scen. 2. Enter Abrahen, Simanthes and Mefithes.

Abr. What State and Dignitie's like that of Scepters ?

With what an awful Majesty resembles it
the Powers above ? the inhabitants of that Superior world are not more subject to them, then these to us ; they can but tremble
when they do speak in thunder ; at our frowns these shake like Lambs at lightning. Can it be impiety by any means to purchase this earthly Deity, Sovereignty. I did sleep this night with as secure and calme a peace,
as in my former innocence. Conscience, thou'rt but a terror, first devis'd by th' fears of Cowardise, a sad and fond remembrance, which men should shun, as Elephants clear springs,
left they beheld their own deformities,

Enter Mefithes.

and start at their grim shadowes. Ha, Mefithes !

Mef. My Royal Lord !

Abr. Call me thy Friend, Mefithes, thou equally dost share our heart, best Eunuch ;
there is not in the stock of earthly blessings
another I could wish to make my state completely fortunate, but one ; and to atcheive possession of that blis, thy diligence must be the fortunate Instrument.

Mef. Be it dangerous
as the affrights Sea men do fain in Tempests, I'll undertake it for my gracious Sovereign,
and perish, but effect it.

Abr. No, there is not the least shew of peril in't ; 'tis the want of fair Caropia's long coveted beauties that doth afflict thy Abrahen. Love, Mefithes, is a most stubborn Malady in a Lady, not cur'd with that felicity, that are other passions,
and creeps upon us by those ambushes,
that we perceive our selves sooner in love,
then we can think upon the way of loving.

The old flames break more brightly from th' ashes
where they have long layn hid, like the young Phenix that from her spicie pile revives more glorious.
Nor can I now extinguish't ; it has pass'd the limits of my reason, and intend my wil, where like a fixt Star 't fettles, never to be removed thence.

Mef. Cease your fears ;
I that could win her for your brother, who could not boast half your masculine Perfections, for you will vanquish her. Enter Simanthes.

Sim. My Lord, the widow of slaughtered Mura, fair Caropia does humbly intreat access to your dread presence ;
Shall we permit her entrance ?

Abr. With all freedom and best regard. Mefithes, this arrives beyond our wish. I'll trie my eloquence in my own cause ; and if I fail, thou then shalt be my Advocate.

Mef. Your humblest vassal.

Abr. With-draw and leave us, and give strict order none approach our presence till we do call. It is not fit her sorrows Enter Car.
should be survey'd by common eie. Caropia, welcom ;
and would we could as easily give thee comfort
as we allow thee more then mod'rate pitie.
In tears those eyes cast forth a greater lustre,
then sparkling rocks of Diamonds inclos'd
in swelling seas of Pearl.

Car. Your Majestie
is pleas'd to wanton with my miseries,
which truly you, if you have nature in you,
ought to bear equall part in your dear brothers
untimely losse, occasion'd by my falshood, and your improvident counsel: 'Tis that calls
these hearty sorrows up, I am his Murdresse.

Abr. 'Twas his own destinie, not our bad intentions took him away from earth; he was too heavenly, fit only for th' societie of Angels,
'mongst whom he sings glad hymns to thy perfections,
celebrating with such eloquence thy beauties,
that those immortal effences forget to love each other by intelligence, and doat on the Idea of thy Sweetnesse.

Car. These gentle blandishments, and his innocent carriage
had I as much of malice as a Tigresse rob'd of her young, would melt me into meeknesse.
But I'll not be a woman.

Abr. Sing out, Angel,
and charm the world (were it at mortal diff'rence)
to peace with thine enchantments. What soft murmurs are those that steal through those pure rosie organs, like aromattick west-winds, when they flie
through fruitful mists of fragrant mornings dew,
to get the Spring with child of flowers and spices?
Disperse these clouds, that like the vail of night,
with unbecoming darknesse shade thy beauties,
and strike a new day from those orient eies,
to gild the world with brightnesse.

Car. Sir, these flatteries
neither befit the ears of my true sorrows, nor yet the utt'rance of that reall sadnesse should dwel in you. Are these the fun'ral rites you pay the memorie of your roiall Father, and much lamented Brother?

Abr. They were mortall, and to lament them, were to shew I envi'd

th' immortal joyes of that true happineffe their glorious souls (disfranchis'd from their flesh)
 possesse to perpetuities and fulnesse.

Besides, (Caropia) I have other griefs more neer my heart, that circle't with a sicknesse will shortly number me among their fellowship, if speedier remedie be not apply'd
 to my most desp'rate maladie.

Car. I shall

(if my hand fail not my determin'd courage)
 send you to their societie far sooner
 then you expect or covet. Why, great Sir, what grief, unlesse your sorrow for their losse,
 is't can afflict you, that command all blessings men wittie in ambition of excesse can wish, to please their fancies ?

Abr. The want only

of that which I've so long desired ; thy love,
 thy love, Caropia, without which my Empire,
 and all the pleasures flowing from its greatnesse,
 will be but burdens, soul-tormenting troubles.
 There's not a beam shot from those grief drown'd

Comets

but (like the Sun's, when they break forth of showers) dart flames more hot and piercing. Had I never doated before on thy divine perfections, viewing thy beautie thus adorn'd by sadnesse,
 my heart, though marble, actuated to softnesse, would burn like sacred incense, it self being the Altar, Priest, and Sacrifice.

Car. This is as unexpected, as unwelcome, Sir.

 Howere you're pleas'd to mock me and my griefs
 with these impertinent, unmeant discourfes,
 I cannot have so prodigal a faith,
 to give them the least credit ; and it is unkindly done, thus to deride my sorrows.
 the virgin Turtles hate to joyn their pureness with widow'd mates ; my Lord, you are a Prince, and such as much detest to utter falshoods,

as Saints do perjuries : why should you strive then to lay a bait to captivate my affections, when your greatnesse conjoin'd with your youths masculine beauties,

are to a womans frailtie, strong temptations ?
You know the storie too of my misfortunes,
that your dead brother, did with vicious loosnesse,
corrupt the chaste streams of my spotlesse vertues,
and left me foiled like a long pluck'd rose,
whose leaves dissever'd, have forgon their sweetnesse.

Abr. Thou hast not (my Caropia ;) thou to me art for thy sent still fragrant, and as precious as the prime virgins of the Spring, the violets,
when they do first display their early beauties,
til all the winds in love, do grow contentious,
which from their lips should ravish the first kisses.

Caropia, thinkst thou I should fear the Nuptials of this great Empire, 'cause it was my brothers ?
As I succeeded him in all his glories,
'tis fit I do succeed him in his love.

'Tis true, I know thy fame fell by his practise,
which had he liv'd, hee'd have restored by marriage,
by it repair'd thy injur'd honors ruines.

I'me bound to do it in religious conscience ;
It is a debt his incens'd ghost would quarrel
me living for, should I not pay't with fulnesse.

Car. Of what frail temper is a womans weak-
nesse !

words writ in waters, have more lasting Effence,
then our determinations.

Abr. Come, I know,
thou must be gentle, I perceive a combat in thy soft heart, by th' intervening blushes
that strive to adorn thy cheek with purple beauties,
and drive the lovelie liverie of thy sorrows,
the Ivorie paleness, out of them. Think, Caropia, with what a settled unrevolting truth
I have affected thee ; with what heat, what pureness ;

and when upon mature confiderations,
 I found I was unworthie to enjoy a treasure of fuch excellent grace and goodneffe,
 I did defist, fmothering my love in anguifh ;
 anguifh ! to which the foul of humane torments,
 compar'd, were pains not eafie, but delicious ;
 yet ftill the fecret flames of my affections,
 like hidden virtues in fome bashful man,
 grew great and ferventer by thofe fuppreffions.
 Thou wert created only for an Empreffe ;
 defpife not then thy deftinie, now greatneffe,
 love, Empire, and what ere may be held glorious,
 courts thy acceptance like obedient Vaffals.

Car. I have confider'd, and my ferious thoughts
 tel me, tis folly to refufe thefe profers :
 to put off my mortalitie, the pleasures of life, which like ful fstreams, do flow from great-nefse,
 to wander i' th' unpeopled air, to keep focietie with ghafly apparitions, where's neither voice of friends, nor vifiting fuitors breaths to delight our ears, and all this for the fame of a fell murtherers. I have blood enough alreadie on my foul, more then my tears can e're wafh off. My roial Lord, if you can be fo merciful and gracious,
 to take a woman laden with afflictions,
 big with true forrow, and religious penitence
 for her amifs, her life and after actions, fhall studie to deferve your love. But furely
 this is not ferious.

Abra. Not the vowes which votries make to the powers above, can be more fraught with binding fanctitie.
 This holy kifs
 confirms our mutual vowes : never til now was I true Caliph of Arabia.

Enter, Enter, Enter.

Abr. Ha, what tumult's that !
Be you all furies, and thou the great'st of divels,
Abrahen wil stand you all, unmov'd as mountains.
This good sword
if you be air, shal disinchant you from your borrow'd figures.

Abil. No, ill-natur'd monster, we're all corporeal, and survive to take revenge on thy inhumane acts, at name of which, the bashful elements do shake as if they teem'd with prodigies. Dost not tremble at thy inhumane villaines ? Dear Caropia, quit the infectious viper, lest his touch
poison thee past recoverie.

Abr. No, she shall not ;
nor you, until this body be one wound
Lay a rude hand upon me ! Abilquatit,
how ere thou scapst my practises with life,
I am not now to question ; we were both sons to one father, whom, for love of Empire,
when I belev'd thee strangled by those Muts,
I sent to his eternal rest ; nor do I repent the fact yet, I have been titled Caliph
a day, which is to my ambitious thoughts, honor enough to eternize my big name to all posteritie. I know thou art of valiant noble soul ; let not thy brother fal by ignoble hands, oppres'd by number ;
draw thy bright weapon ; as thou art in Empire,
thou art my rival in this Ladies love,
whom I esteem above all joyes of life :
for her and for this Monarchie, let's trie
our strengths and fates : the impartial fates to him, who has the better cause, in justice must needs design the victorie.

Abil. In this offer,
though it proceed from desperatenesse, not valor ;

thou showst a masculine courage, and we wil not render our cause so abject as to doubt, but our just arme has strength to punish thy most unheard of treacheries.

Tar. But you shall not be so unjust to us and to your right, to try your causes most undoubted Justice, 'gainst the dispairing ruffian ; Souldiers, pul the Lady from him, and disarm him.

Abil. Stay ! though he doth merit multitudes of death, we would not murder his eternitie by sudder execution ; yeild your self, and we'l allow you libertie of life, til by repentance you have purg'd your sin ; and so if possible, redeem your soul from future punishment.

Abr. Pish, tel fools of souls, and those effeminate cowards that do dreame of those fantastick other worlds : there is not such a thing in nature, all the soul of men is resolution, which expires never from valiant men, till their last breath, and then with it like to a flame extinguisht'd for want of matter, 't dos not dy, but rather ceases to live. Injoy in peace your Empire, and as a legacy of Abrahens love, take this fair Lady to your Bride.

stab her.

Abil. Inhumane Butcher ! has slain the Lady. Look up, best Caropia, run for our surgeons : I'le give half my Empire to save her precious life.

Abr. She has enough, or mine aym fail'd me, to procure her passage to the eternal dwellings : nor is this cruelty in me ; I alone was worthy to have injoy'd her beauties. Make good haste Caropia, or my soul, if I have any, will hover for thee in the clouds. This was the fatal engine which betray'd our father to his untimely death, made by Simanthus for your use, Abilqualit: and who has this about him and would be a slave to your base mercy, deserved death more than by dayly tortures;

and thus I kiss'd my last breath. Blast you all. dies.

Tar. Damn'd desperate villain.

Abil. O my dear Caropia,
my Empire now will be unpleasing to me
since I must lose thy company. This surgeon, where's this surgeon?

Sel. Drunk perhaps.

Car. 'Tis but needlesse,
no humane help can save me: yet me thinks I feel a kind of pleasing ease in your imbraces. I should utter something, and I have strength enough, I hope, left yet to effect my purpose. In revenge for your suppos'd death, my lov'd Lord, I slew my husband,

Abil. I'me sorry thou hast that sin to charge thy soul with,
twas rumour'd by the souldiers.

Sel. Couzens mine, your necks are safe agen now.

Car. And came hither with an intent to have for your sake slain your brother

Abrahen, had not his curtesie and winning carriage
alter'd my resolution, with this poniard
I'de struck him here about the heart. Stabs Abil.

Abil. O I am slain, Caropia, and by thy hand. Heavens, you are just, this is revenge for thy dear honor which I murdered,
though thou wer't consenting to it.

Car. True, I was so,
and not repent it yet, my sole ambition
was to have liv'd an Empreffe, which since fate would not allow, I was resolv'd no woman
after my selfe should ere enjoy that glory, you dear Abilqualit: which since my weak strength has serv'd me to performe, I dye willingly as an infant. O now I faint, life's death to those that keep it by constraint. dye.

Tar. My dear Lord,
is there no hopes of life ? must we be wretched ?

Abil. Happier, my Tarifa, by my death :
but yesterday I playd the part in jest which I now act in earnest. My Tarifa, the Empire's thine, I'me sure thou'lt rul't with justice, and make the subject happy. Thou hast a Son of hopefull growing vertues to succeed thee, commend me to him, and from me intreat him

to shun the temptings of lascivious glances.

Sel. 'Las good Prince !
hee'le dy indeed. I fear, he is so full of serious thoughts and Counfels.

Abil. For this slaughtred body,
let it have decent burial with slain Muras,
but let not Abrahens corps have so much honor to come ith' royal monument : lay mine
by my dear fathers : for that trecherous Eunuch, and Lord Simanthes, use them as thy justice tells thee they have merited ; for Lord Selinthus, advance him (my Tarifa) hee's of faithfull and well deserving vertues.

Sel. So I am,
I thought 'twould come to me anon :
poor Prince, I e'ne could dy with him.

Abil. And for those fouldiers, and those our most faithfull

Muts, that my life once sav'd, let them be well rewarded ; death and I are almost now at unitie. Farewell. dys.

Tar. Sure I shall not survive these sorrows long. Muts, take those Traitors to prison ; we will shortly passe their sentence, which shall be death inevitable. Take up that fatal instrument of poisonous mischief,

and see it burn'd, Gafelles. Gentlemen,
Fate has made us your King against our wishes.

Sel. Long live Tarifa, Caliph of Arabia.

Tar. We have no time now for your acclamations ;
these are black sorrows Festival. Bear off in state that royal Bodie ; for the other,
since twas his will, let them have burial,
but in obscuritie. By this it may,
as by an ev'dent rule be understood,
they're onely truly great, wh' are truly good.

Recorders

Exeunt omnes.

Flourish.

FINIS.

EPILOGUE.

I'M much displeas'd the Poet has made me
The Epilogue to his sad Tragedie.
Would I had dy'd honestly amongst the rest,
Rather then live to th' last, now to be prest
To death by your hard Censures. Pray you say,
What is it you dislike so in this Play,
That none applauds ? Beleeve it, I should faint,
Did not some smile, and keep me by constraint
From the sad qualm. Wnat pow'r is in your breath,
That you can save alive, and doom to death,
Even whom you please ? thus are your judgments free,
Most of the rest are slain, you may save me.
But if death be the word, I pray bestow it
Where it best fits. Hang up the Poet.

NOTES AND ILLUSTRATIONS.

PAGE I.

The Widdowes Teares.

Although it cannot be said that there were two editions of The Widdowes Teares in 1612, the copies with that date have some variations, probably introduced at the instance of the author, who seems to have been rather more anxious about the correctness of his productions than most of his contemporaries.

“The plot of Lyfander and Cynthia is borrowed from Petronius Arbiter’s Satyricon, being the story of the Matron of Ephesus related by Eumolpus : a story since handled by several other pens, as Janus Doufa, the father, in his notes on this story, and Gabbema, in the last edition of Petronius, who observe that it was translated into Latin verse by Romulus, an antique grammarian : and into French rhyme by Hebertus. We have it not only in the Seven Wife Masters, but also I have read the same story in the Cento Novelle Antiche di Carlo Gualteruzzi, Nov. 51.”—Langbaine.

PAGE 17.

O the Gods? spurn'd out by Groomes like a base Bisogno?

This is a term of contempt frequently used in our old plays. It is probably derived from the Ital. bisogno, or the Fr. besoin (want, need), and is generally applied to people in want or of the lower rank. See Churchyard’s Challenge, 1593, p. 85, and Love’s Cure, by Beaumont and Fletcher, Act 2, sc. 1.

PAGE 18.

No yong Adonis to front you there?

Some of the copies read “mystical” instead of yong.

PAGE 18.

Your not-headed Countrie Gentleman.

So in Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, the yeman is thus described :—

“ A nott-head had he with a brown vifage.”

A perfon was faid to be nott-pated when the hair was cut fhort and round. Ray fays the word was, in his time, ftill ufed in Effex for polled or fhorn.

PAGE 20.

So there's venie for venie.

i.e. touch for touch, bout for bout ; a technical term at fencing and cudgel-playing, from the French venue. The word occurs in act iii. fc. 2, of The Old Law ; but appears to have been out of fhation with the fantaftic gallants of the times very early. Captain Bobadil, in Every Man in his Humour, act i. fc. 5, fays, in anfwer to Mafter Matthew's request for one venue, “ Venue! fie ; “ moft grofs denomination as ever I heard : O, the ftoccata, “ while you live, fir, note that.”

PAGE 23.

by the next Ripier that rides that way with Mackerell.

“ Ripiers (riparii),” fays Minfhieu, “ be thofe that ufe to bring fifh from the fea-coaft to the inner parts of the land. It is a word made of the Latin ripa, the bank or fhore.”

PAGE 23.

a Bone to tire on.

i.e. to peck at : a term of falconry.

PAGE 29.

Admitted? I, into her heart, Ile able it.

An old phrafe, fignifying to undertake, or anfwer for. So in King Lear (act iv. fc. 7) :—

“ None does offend, none, I fay, none I'll able 'em.”

PAGE 34.

who penn'd the Pegmas.

i.e., the bills fixed up at pageants to give fome account of their contents.

PAGE 71.

*There fticks an Achelons horne of all, Copie enough,
As much as Alizon of ftreames receiues.*

Or lofty Ilea shoves of shadie leaues.

The first line of this passage seems hopelessly corrupt. I once thought the words, "Copie enough," were attributable rather to the printer's devil than to Lyfander, and had got interpolated into the text through the stupidity of the compositor and the negligence of the "reader." But I find that a former Editor of this play explains "Copie" as Copia, and supposes the passage to refer to the Cornucopia, or horn of plenty.

PAGE 116.

Twinns of which Hippocrates speaks.

See also The Gentleman Vsher (Vol. I., p. 309).

PAGE 142.

*Read the old stoick Pherecides, that tels thee
Me truly, and sayes that I Ophioneus—
Deuillish Serpent, by interpretation; was generall Captaine of that rebellious host of spirits that Wag'd warre with heauen.*

See the Fragments of Pherecides, the stoic, a rather recondite author.

PAGE 155.

those dreadfull bolts

The Cyclops Ram in Ioues Artillery.

This energetic expression, thoroughly characteristic of Chapman, occurs also in Bussy d'Ambois (Vol. II, p. 70.)

PAGE 201.

Una arbuta non alit duos Erithicos:—

Οὐ τρέφει μία λόχμη δύο ἐριθάκους. Schol. Aristoph. Vesp. 922. Stephani Thesaur. f. Ἐρίθακος. Plin. Hist. Nat. X, 29, 44.

PAGE 202.

I'll imitate Lyfander] See Plutarch. Lyfand. VII.

PAGE 203.

That Bohemie neither cares.

'Bohemia' in this verse, which in the original edition is erroneously given to Alphonfus, is to be read as a diffyllable, as if it was written 'Bemia.' The same contraction occurs on page 213, where, however, the word is used as a trifyllable:

And do accept the king of Bohemia.

PAGE 207.

When we once are set.

I am unable to say, whether or not the custom alluded to in the text was really observed in the elective council; thus much, however, is certain, that it admirably harmonizes with the directions contained in the Golden Bull: 'They (viz. the Electors) shall proceed to the Election and shall not in any manner depart out of the said Citie of Franckford, before that the greater part of them shall have chosen a temporall head or governour of the world or of Christendome, a King of Romains, to be Emperour, which if they shall prolong or deferre the space of thirty dayes from the day of taking their oathes, then the said thirty dayes being expired, they shall eate nothing but bread and water, nor by any meanes goe away from the said Citie, untill or before they or the greater number of them shall have chosen the ruler or temporall head of Christendome, as aforefaid.'

PAGE 214.

Count Mansfield.

This name was familiar to the poet's contemporaries, the famous Count Ernest Mansfield having paid a visit to London in 1621 or 1622.

See also Byron's Conspiracie (Vol. II, p. 199).

PAGE 220.

Ein filtz geben.

i. e. I should chide you. This expression frequently occurs in the plays of Ayrrer, of Duke Heinrich Julius, in Simplicissimus, and other writers of the time.

PAGE 234.

Bowls of Reinfal.

'Reinfal (Rainfal), vinum Rifolium, Wein von Rivoglio in Istrien' says Schmeller in his Bayerisches Wörterbuch, III. 95; and O. Schade in his Altdeutsches Wörterbuch s. h. v. has adopted this explanation. Karajan, Fontes Rer. Austriac (Vienn. 1855), I. 1, 17, however, has shown that there is no place of that name in Istria. J. Grimm, in his Preface to F. F. Rößler's Deutsche Rechtsdenkmäler aus Böhmen und Mähren (Prag, 1845), I. VII, thinks the 'Reinfal' to have come from Rivoli near Verona or from Botzen in the Tyrol. Compare also Zedler's Universal-Lexikon (Leipzig und Halle, 1742), XXXI 282 sq.; Brandt's Narrenschiff ed. by Zarncke, 63, 87; and Keller Fasnachtsspiele (Mittheil. def. Liter. Vereins XLVI), 362.

PAGE 234.

Nay, gentle Forrester.

Before this verse a line or two seem to have dropped out, in which the Emperor may have spoken of Prince Edward's not joining in the universal merriment.

PAGE 235—9.

Sam Got.

'Sam Got' either means 'with God,' or it may be an abbreviation of 'sam mir Got,' i. e. so mir Gott helfe. See Schade's Althochdeutsches Wörterbuch s. Sam, and Lauremberg's Scherzgedichte ed. by Lappenberg, 256.

PAGE 238.

With Corances on their heads.

The much discussed 'crants' in Hamlet V. I, receives a new light from this passage. Messrs. Halliwell and Wright in their new edition of Nares' Glossary have repeated the remark of Nares', that 'no other example of the word has been found,' whilst it occurs twice in this tragedy. They are further of opinion, that Shakespeare probably found this word in some legend of Hamlet, which we cannot but think most improbable, as the word could only be found in a German (or Danish) legend, and Shakespeare therefore must be supposed to have read German or Danish. Besides no German legend of Hamlet is known to exist. Shakespeare, in our opinion, made the acquaintance of this German importation at the Steelyard, or he witnessed some German funeral in London, where the coffin of a young girl, according to the German custom, was decked with 'crances;' nay, both may have been the case, and we imagine the word thus to have found its way into Shakespeare and Chapman. At all events it was not an entire stranger to their contemporaries. Mr. Lettfoam has very justly observed, that 'crants' is not the plural, but the singular number (see Shakespeare's Works ed. by Dyce, 2nd Ed. VII. 239). From the present passage it would appear that we ought to write 'crance;' this is confirmed by the Anglicised form of the German Christian name 'Hans,' which in Mr. W. Durrant Cooper's 'Lift of Foreign Protestants and Aliens' is usually spelt 'Hance,' or 'Haunce.'

PAGE 238.

An upspring.

'Upspring,' neither means an 'upstart,' as most Shakespearean editors (as well as Nares, though he cites the present line from Alphonfus) have imagined, nor the German 'Walzer,' as Schlegel has translated it in Hamlet I, 4, but it is the 'Hüpfauft,' the last and consequently wildest dance at the old German merrymakings. See Ayrer's Dramen ed. by Keller, IV. 2840 and 2846 :

Ey, jtz geht erst der hüpfauft an.

Ey, Herr, jtz kummt erst der hüpfauft.

No epithet could therefore be more appropriate to this drunken dance, than Shakespeare's 'fwaggering.'

PAGE 262.

And should be lamps.

Compare the Golden Bull (1619) Chap. I: '— the seven Electors of the Empire, by whom (as by seven Candlestickes, shining in the unities of a sevenfold spirit) the holy Empire should be illuminated.' The Latin text has 'velut septem candelabra lucentia.'

PAGE 263.

Mein allerlievest husband.

According to Dr. Wm. Bell (Shakespeare's Puck, III. 207 fq.) this 'decidedly Teutonic word occurs only once in the English language,' viz. in 2 Henry VI, I. 1: 'mine alderlievest soveraign.'

PAGE 271.

Her dainty rose-Corance.

See Note on p. 238. In Germany a 'Rosenkranz' served as a symbol of virginity, and therefore in old popular songs often denotes maidenhead itself. Uhland's Volk. Lieder, I. No. 2 and 3 (with Note in Vol. II. 997); I. No. 114 and 173 (p. 456). Shakespeare and his contemporaries also symbolize maidenhead as a rose. All's Well that Ends Well, IV.

2 : " But when you have our roses." Othello, V. 2 : " When I have plucked thy rose." Chapman, Buffy d'Ambois (Vol. II. p. 30).

Honour, whats that ? your second maidenhead :
And what is that ? a word ; the word is gone,
The thing remaines ; the rose is pluckt, the stalke Abides.

PAGE 281.

Than ere Laocoon ran.

For the fact alluded to compare Virg. Æn., II. 40 sqq.

PAGE 285.

Revenge for Honour. 1654.

" This play," says Langbaine, " I have seen acted many years ago at the Nursery in Barbican."

INDEX.

- Accius Nævius, ii. 17.
 Acheron, i. 230.
 Achilles, i. 235 ; [ii. 142, 253 ;
 iii. 53, 278.
 Actæon, i. 196 ; iii. 18.
 Adelfasia, i. 327, 344.
 Adonis, ii. 377.
 Æneas, iii. 23, 64.
 Agamemnon, iii. 139.
 Agincourt, i. 235.
 Ajax, ii. 58.
 Alcides, i. 232 ; ii. 208, 270.
 Alcoran, Turkish, ii. 243 ; wine forbidden by, iii. 314.
 Ale-Knights, i. 316.
 Alexander the Great, i. 103 ; ii.
 283 ; iii. 144, 292.
 Alexandria, i. 39.
 Alizon, iii. 71.
 Alphonfus, Emperor of Germany, iii. 195 ſqq.
 Amiens, Siege of, ii. 220.
 Anius, river, iii. 156.
 Antigone, ii. 123.
 Antipodes, the, i. 196 ; ii. 81.
 Apollo, ii. 195 ; iii. 200.
 Arabia, i. 41.
 Arctos, ii. 287.
 Ardennes, Foreſt of, ii. 24, 137,
 262.
 Argus, i. 196 ; iii. 110.
 Ariadne, i. 28.
 Arion, ii. 233.
 Ariſtophanes, iii. 100.
 Ariſtotle, iii. 60, 201.
 Armenia, ii. 24.
 Arras pictures, ii. 214.
 Afs in lion's ſkin, ii. 19, 20 ; iii.
 85.
 Ate, iii. 245.
 Athamas, iii. 263.
 Atlas, ii. 22, 42, 287 ; iii. 105.
 Atropos, iii. 23.
 Auguſtus Cæſar, ii. 64, 266.
 Aurora, i. 261 ; ii. 287.
 Bacchus, i. 98.
 Beauty, deſcribed as a quin-teſſence, i. 116.
 Bees, ſimile of, iii. 157.
 Berenice, i. 29.
 Blackthorn, the, ii. 269.
 Boötes, ii. 83.
 Brutus, ii. 123.
 Byron, Duke of, ii. 179—320.
 Cæſar, iii. 126 ſqq., 278.
 Caius Caſſius, iii. 274.
 Camel, the, begs horns of Jove,
 ii. 125, 233.
 Camillus, ii. 7, 256.
 Caſſandra, ii. 140.
 Caſſimere, Duke, ii. 145.
 Catiline's conſpiracy, iii. 132.
 Cato, iii. 126 ſqq.
 Cerberus, ii. 53, 68.
 Character of a virtuous wife,
 i. 308.
 Chymæra, ii. 67.
 Cicero, quoted, i. 75.
 Clotho, ii. 59.
 Clytemneſtra, iii. 247.
 Cornelia, iii. 126.
 Corrucus, i. 16, 26.
 Cratinus, i. 113.
 Creon, ii. 123.
 Cupid, i. 36, 118, 226, 294 ; ii.
 30, 263, 329 ; iii. 8, 29, 48.
Curculio of Plautus, i. 241, 343.

- Curtius, ii. 218.
 Cyclops, the, ii. 70, 218; iii. 155.
 Cynthia, i. 190; ii. 65.
 Cyrus, iii. 145.
 Cythæron, ii. 78.
 Dapsyle, ii. 262.
 Demades, ii. 134.
 Demetrius Phalerius, ii. 134.
 Demosthenes, ii. 134.
 Deucalion, iii. 58.
 Diana, i. 29, 267; iii. 18, 23.
 Dido, i. 236, 343; ii. 341; iii. 64.
 Diogenes, i. 58.
 Domitian, ii. 125.
 Dreux, Siege of, ii. 209.
 Eagle, the, i. 160; ii. 169.
 Echo, i. 107.
 Elizabeth, Princess, marriage of, iii. 89 sqq.
 Elizabeth, Queen, ii. 13; her Speech to the Duke of Byron, 229.
 Empedocles on Etna, iii. 185.
 Epaminondas, ii. 7, 110.
 Epilepsy, iii. 138.
 Eros, iii. 116.
 Effex, Earl of, ii. 281, 309.
 Etna, ii. 271.
 Eunomia, iii. 94, 110.
 Euphorbus, ii. 123.
 Eupolis, i. 113.
 Eurotas, iii. 154.
 Eurys, i. 41.
 Eve and the serpent, i. 60.
 Field, Nat., performs the character of Buffy D'Ambois, ii. 3; account of, 407.
 Flora, a noted Roman courtesan, iii. 139.
 Fox, the, who lost his tail, i. 117; compared with the lion, iii. 202.
 Ganymede, ii. 374.
 Garlic, i. 215, 217, 236.
Gesta Romanorum, ii. 360.
 Guevara's Golden Epistles, i. 302, 344.
 Habakuk, i. 63.
 Hart, Mr., acts the part of Buffy D'Ambois, ii. 407.
 Hazlitt, William, on Monsieur D'Olive, i. 341.
 Hecate, ii. 92.
 Hector, holds up the brazen lance, ii. 23.
 Helen of Greece, i. 198.
 Helicon, i. 227; ii. 368.
 Hella the forceress, i. 33.
 Hercules, i. 266, 278; ii. 93, 141, 173, 195, 341, 366; iii. 38, 70, 119, 230.
 Hermes, i. 232.
 Hero and Leander, ii. 366.
 Herod, ii. 65.
 Hippocrates, his account of the twins, i. 309; iii. 116; on the flatus Hypochondriacus, 293.
 Homer, his discernment in spite of blindness, i. 9; his battle of the Frogs and Mice, 278; his Iliads and Odysses, ii. 127; his purpose in the character of Achilles, 142; his critics, 160.
 Horns, praise of, i. 182.
 Howard, Sir Thomas, ii. 99.
 Hubberd, Sir H., iii. 89.
 Hudibras, i. 344.
 Huguenots, the scourge of, ii. 258, 295.
 Hybla, i. 288, 317.
 Hydra, ii. 45.
 Hymen, ii. 194, 371; iii. 48, 50, 51; Hymn to, 120.
 Jacob's staff, iii. 236.
 Ida, ii. 367.
 Jewish Executions in Germany, iii. 282.
 Ilea, iii. 71.
 Io, iii. 121.
 Jones, Inigo, iii. 87.
 Iris, iii. 61.

- Isis, statue of, i. 6 ; honour done to, iii. 68.
 Judas, iii. 282.
 Juno, ii. 47, 208 ; iii. 19, 58, 61, 62.
 Jupiter Ammon, ii. 58.

 Kings, ii. 123, 139, 191, 284.

 Lachesis, ii. 59.
 Lamb, Charles, on Buffy D'Ambois, ii.
 Laocoon, iii. 281.
 Leda's Distaff, iii. 37.
 Lesbos, isle of, iii. 179.
 Louis XI., his Scots guard, ii. 305.
 Lucian, iii. 100.
 Lucifer, ii. 287.
 Lycurgus, 38, 154.

 Machiavelli, i. 138.
 Manlius, ii. 305.
 Marcus Aurelius, ii. 360.
 Mars, i. 154.
 Meander, i. 268.
 Medea, i. 333.
 Memphis, i. 6.
 Menander, quoted, iii. 99.
 Menelaus, i. 140.
 Menetiades, iii. 278.
 Mentz, described, iii. 260.
 Mercury, i. 151 ; iii. 58, 61.
 Middlesex, Earl of, Dedication to, iii. 125.
 Middleton, quoted, ii. 408.
 Minos, i. 75.
 Mirror of Magistrates, ii. 360.
 Monopolies, iii. 9.
 Morpheus, i. 146.
 Morrice-dance, i. 228.

 Nafu (see Ovid).
 Neptune, iii. 110.
 Nero, i. 330 ; ii. 266.
 Niobe, iii. 55.

 Olympus, ii. 22.
 Omphale, iii. 38.

 Ophioneus, iii. 140.
 Ophir, gold of, ii. 205.
 Orpheus, ii. 306.
 Ovid, quoted, i. 220.
 Oxford, Earl of, ii. 144.
 Padua, ii. 377.
 Pæana, iii. 103.
 Palm, simile of, iii. 272, 315.
 Pan, i. 118.
 Pandarus, i. 221.
 Panthea, iii. 116.
 Parcæ, iii. 120.
 Paris and Helen, ii. 126.
 Parnassus, i. 256 ; ii. 370.
 Patroclus, iii. 278.
 Peleus, ii. 67.
 Pelides, ii. 205.
 Pelion, beasts of, ii. 67, 78.
 Penelope, iii. 10, 11.
 Perseus and Andromeda, i. 29.
 Pettie's Pallace of Pleasure, i. 327, 344.
 Phalaris, Bull of, iii. 281.
 Pharfalia, iii. 157, 168.
 Phemis, iii. 94.
 Pherecides, the stoic, iii. 142.
 Philips, Sir Edward, Dedication to, iii. 89, 91.
 Phœbus, iii. 53, 111, 113, 122.
 Phoenix, the, i. 78.
 Pindus and Ossa, ii. 93.
 Plato, ii. 101, 212 ; iii. 201.
 Plautus, i. 261 ; quoted, 262, 343.
 Plutus, iii. 94, 96, 100, 101, &c.
 Po, lilies of the, i. 288 ; and Ticino, ii. 197.
 Pompey, ii. 143 ; iii. 126 et seq. scipius.
 Porus, King of Æthiopia, i. 41, 44, 47, 48.
 Proteus, iii. 102.
 Ptolemy, King of Egypt, i. 17, 39.
 Pygmalion, and the statue, i. 221.
 Pythagoras, ii. 123 ; on witches, 372.

 Queen Elizabeth, ii. 13, 229.

- Rainbow, the, ii. 131.
 Reed, Jo., of Mitton, Dedication to, iii. 3.
 Rhesus, king of Arabia, i. 41, 44, 47, 48.
 Rhine, the, described, iii. 258.
 Rome, i. 12, 325 ; ii. 145.

 Saturn, i. 195 ; ii. 46.
 Satyr, the, affrighted by the sound of his own horn, iii. 57.
 Savorala, de Urinis, i. 217, 342.
 Scamander, ii. 205.
 Scylla and Charybdis, ii. 53.
 Semele, ii. 194.
 Sertorius, ii. 303.
 Shelley, P. B., takes a motto from Chapman's Conspiracie of Byron for his Revolt of Islam, ii. 413.
 Sleep and Death, iii. 176, 188.
 Solon, iii. 81.
 Song of Love and Beauty, iii. 116.
 Sophocles, ii. 123.
 Sophrofyne, ii. 262.
 Spenser, Edm., his eleventh Eclogue, i. 343.
 Syphilus, ii, 112, iii. 102.

 Tennyson, quoted, i. 339.
 Terence, his Heautontimorumenos the model of All Fools, i. 339.
 Tethis, iii. 113.
 Themistocles, ii. 7.

 Theorbo, the, i. 144, 145, 170, 226.
 Tithonus, i. 258 ; ii. 56.
 Tobacco, i. 16, 137, 175, 214 ; praise of, 216.
 Trout, i. 149.

 Valentines, chosen blindfold, i. 199 ; St. Valentine's day, 235.
 Venice, ii. 377.
 Venus, i. 238 ; ii. 77, 366 ; iii. 12, 27, 33, 36, 43, 80.
 Violets, iii. 351.
 Virgil, iii. 20; quoted, 103.
 Virginius, iii. 263.
 Ulysses, ii. 253 ; iii. 11, 102, 110.
 Utica, iii. 152, 192, 194.
 Vulcan, i. 154 ; iii. 145.

 Walsingham, Sir Thomas, Dedicatory Sonnet to, i. 111 ; Dedication of Byron's Conspiracie to, ii. 181.
 Wife, character of a virtuous, i. 308.
 Winchester goose, i. 233, 342.
 Wind and the Sun, Fable of, ii. 117.

 Xerxes, ii. 7.
 Youth, i. 19.
 Zephyr, iii. 120.

