

Bodleian Libraries

UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

This book is part of the collection held by the Bodleian Libraries and scanned by Google, Inc. for the Google Books Library Project.

For more information see:

<http://www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/dbooks>

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike 2.0 UK: England & Wales (CC BY-NC-SA 2.0) licence.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF ENGLISH

To be returned

8 JUNE 1937

XL 26.35 [Non]

1

THE

157.
Non-Juror.

A

COMEDY.

As it is Acted at the

THEATRE-ROYAL,

BY

His MAJESTY'S Servants.

Written by Mr. CIBBER.

—Pulchra Laverna
Da mihi fallere; da Justum, Sanctumq; videri, Noctem Peccatis, & Fraudibus objice Nubem.

Cha. Walmesley.

HOR.

L O N D O N;

Printed for B. LINTOT, at the Cross-Keys in Fleetstreet. MDCCXVIII.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

A

MEMORANDUM

TO THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES

FROM THE DEPARTMENT OF CHEMISTRY

BY

PROFESSOR J. H. VAN VAN COTT

DATE

APPROVED

TO THE K I N G.

S I R,

IN a Time, when all Communities
Congratulate Your MAJESTY on the Glories of Your Reign, which are continually rising from the Prosperities of Your People; be graciously pleas'd,

Dread Sir, to permit the lowest of Your Subjects from the Theatre, to take this Occasion of offering their most Humble Acknowledgments for Your Royal Favour and Protection.

YOUR Comedians, SIR, are an Unhappy Society, whom some Severe Heads think wholly Useless, and others Dangerous to the Young and Innocent: This Comedy is therefore an Attempt to remove that Prejudice, and to shew, what Honest and Laudable Uses may be made of the Theatre, when its Performances keep close to the true Purposes of its Institution: That it may be necessary to divert the Sullen and Disaffected from busying their Brains to disturb the Happiness of a Government, which (for want of proper Amusements) they often enter into Wild and Seditious Schemes to reform: And that it may likewise make those very Follies the Ridicule and Diversion even of those that committed them.

D E D I C A T I O N. iij them. Our Labours have at least this Glory to boast, That since Plays were first Exhibited in England, they were never totally suppress'd, but by those very People, that turn'd our Church, and Constitution, into Irreligion and Anarchy.

OF all Errors, those that are the Effect of Superstition make us naturally most obstinate; it is therefore no wonder, that the Blinded Profelytes of our Few Non-juring Clergy, are so hard to be recover'd by the clearest Evidences of Sense and Reason. But when a Principle is once made truly Ridiculous, it is not in the Power of Human Nature not to be asham'd of it. From which Reflection, I was first determin'd to attack those lurking Enemies of our Constitution from the Stage: And though my Success has far exceeded my Expectation, yet I grieve, when I (perhaps with Vanity) imagine it might have had thrice the good Effect on the Minds of Your M A J E S T Y's People, were it not under the Misfortune of being written by a Comedian. I am therefore in some Terror, notwithstanding its Publick Applause, to reflect how far Your MAJESTY, in Your Wisdom, may think it proper to with-hold Your Pardon for the Unlicensed Boldness of my Undertaking. I am sensible it may be justly urg'd against me, That even Truth and Loyalty might have lost their Lustre, by appearing reduc'd to want the Defence of so inconsiderable a Champion: But as I never believ'd the best Play could be supported in an Ill Cause; so was I assur'd the worst might pass, with Favour, in a Good one. And though my Duty and Concern has made me more careful in the Conduct of this, than any of my former Endeavours; I am convinc'd, that what may have been extraordinary in the Success of it, is utterly owing to a happy Choice of the Subject: And as its meeting no Opposition from our Publick Malecontents, seems, in some degree, DEDICATION.

an Argument of the Clear and Honest Truth of those Principles it vindicates; so may it of the equal Falshood of the Rebellious and Unchristian Tenets it exposes. Nay, I have yet a farther Hope, that it has even discovered the Strength and Number of the Misguided to be much less, than may have been artfully insinuated; there being no Assembly where People are so free, and apt to speak their Minds, as in a Crowded Theatre; Of which Your MAJESTY may have lately seen an Instance, in the Insuppressible Acclamations that were given on Your appearing to Honour this Play with Your Royal Presence.

BUT were the Disaffected yet as Numerous, as some Few may wish them, What Honest Englishman can ever think them formidable, that considers his Security in the Wisdom of Your MAJESTY'S Counsels, and Your Heroick Resolution to Execute them? And as every Action of vj D E D I C A T I O N.
Your

Your Regal Power has shewn the Nation, that Your greatest Glory and Delight is in being the Father of Your People; so may it Convince its Enemies, that they will always find You KING of Your Sub- jects.---But I am wandring into Thoughts that awe me into Silence; and humbly beg Leave to Subscribe my self,

May it please Your MAJESTY,

Your MAJESTY's

Most Dutiful,

and most Obedient,

Subje&t and Servant,

COLLEY CIBBER.

PROLOGUE.

Written by N. ROWE, Esq;.

*T*O Night, ye Whigs and Tories both be safe,
Nor hope, at one another's Cost, to laugh :
We mean to souse old Satan and the Pope;
They've no Relations here, nor Friends, we hope.
A Tool of theirs supplies the Comic Stage
With just Materials for Satyrick Rage :
Nor think our Colours may too strongly paint
The stiff Non-furing Separation-Saint.
Good Breeding ne'er commands us to be civil
To those who give the Nation to the Devil;
Who at our surest, best Foundations strike,
And hate our Monarch and our Church alike :
Our Church,—which, aw'd with Reverential Fear,
Scarcely the Muse presumes to mention here.
Long may She These her worst of Foes defy, —
And lift her Mitred Head triumphant to the Sky :
While theirs — But Satyr silently disdains
To name, what lives not, but in Madmen's Brains.
Like Bawds, each lurking Pastor seeks the Dark,
And fears the Justice's enquiring Clerk.

P R O L O G U E.

*In close back Rooms his routed Flocks he rallies,
And reigns the Patriarch of blind Lanes and Allies.
There safe, he lets his thundring Censures fly,
Unchristens, damns us, gives our Laws the Lie,
And excommunicates Three-Stories high. }
Why, since a Land of Liberty they hate,
Still will they linger in this Free-born State?
Here, ev'ry Hour, fresh hateful, Objects rise,
Peace, and Prosperity afflict their Eyes:
With Anguish, Prince, and People they survey,
Their just Obedience, and His righteous Sway.
Ship off, ye Slaves, and seek some Passive Land,
Where Tyrants after your own Hearts command.
To your Transalpine Master's Rule resort,
And fill an empty abdicated Court:
Turn your Possessions here to ready Rhine,
And buy ye Lands and Lordships at Urbino.*

Publiſh'd with His Majesty's Royal Licence,

THE Embassador and his Functions; written by Monsieur de Wicquefort, Privy-Councillor to the Duke of Brunswick and Lunenbourg, Zell, &c. in Two Books. 1. Shewing, the Right of Sovereigns to send Embassadors. The several Orders of Publick Ministers. Of the Birth, Learning, and Age of Embassadors, and the Trust reposed in them. Their Instructions, Letters of Credence, Powers, Passports, Entries, Audiences, Ceremonies, Visits, Apparel, Expences, Domesticks, Privileges, &c. The Competition between France and Spain, and several other Princes and States about Rank. 2. Treating of the Functions of Embassadors: Their Manner of negotiating; Their Liberty of Speech: Their secret Services, Letters, Dispatches: Of their Mediatory Treaties: Of the Treaty of Westphalia, and all other Treaties in the last Century: Of Ratifications: The Lives and Characters of the most illustrious Embassadors, and of several splendid Embassies, viz. 1. That of Sir Francis Walsingham from Q. Elizabeth to France. 2. The Duke of Buckingham to Spain and France. 3. Sir Robert Shirley, Embassador from the King of Persia to K. James 1st. 4. Mr. Lockhart Minister of England at the Pyrenean Treaty. 5. The Lord Falconbridge to the French King at Dunkirk. 6. The Duke of Crequi to Cromwell. 7. Sir John Trevor to France. 8. The Lord Hollis to France. 9. The Earl of Essex to Denmark. 10. Sir William Temple to the Hague and Nimeguen. With many other Embassies from England, France, Spain, which afford useful Historical Relations nowhere else to be found. Also, a large Account of the Constitution of the German Empire, the Manner of electing their Emperors, of the Electoral College, of the Golden Bull, of the Election of the King of the Romans, the Rights and Prerogatives of the several Electors, and the Laws and Usages of the Empire. Translated into English by Mr. Digby. Printed for Bernard Lintot. Price 25 s. small, and 35 s. large Paper.

Dramatis Personæ.

M E N.

Sir John Woodvil,

Mr. Mills.

Colonel Woodvil,

Mr. Booth.

Mr. Heartly,

Mr. Wilks.

Doctor Wolf,

Mr. Cibber.

Charles,

Mr. Walker.

W O M E N.

Lady Woodvil,

Mrs. Porter.

Maria,

Mrs. Oldfield.

The SCENE, an Anti-chamber of
Sir JOHN's House in LONDON.

THE NON-JUROR.

ACT I.

Sir John Woodvil, and the Colonel.

Col. PRAY consider, Sir.

Sir John. So I do, Sir, that I am her Father, and will dispose of her as I please.

Col. I don't dispute your Authority, Sir: But as I am your Son too, I think it my Duty to be concern'd for your Honour: Have not you countenanced his Addresses to my Sister? Has not she receiv'd them? How then is it possible, That either you or she with Honour can recede?

Sir John. Why, Sir? Suppose I was about buying a Pad-nag for your Sister, and upon Enquiry should find him not found: Pray, Sir, would there be any great Dishonour in being off o'the Bargain?

Col. With Submission, Sir, I don't take that to be the Case. Mr. Heartly's Birth and Fortune are too well known to you; and I dare swear he may defy the World, to lay a Blemish upon his Principles.

Sir John. Why then, Sir, since I must be catechis'd, I must tell you, I don't like his Principles: For I am inform'd he is a Time-server, one that basely flatters the Government, and has no more Religion than you have.

The NON-JUROR.

Col. Sir, we don't either of us think it proper to make boast of our Religion; but if you please to enquire, you will find we go to Church as orderly as the rest of our Neighbours.

Sir John. Ay! to what Church!

Col. ——— St. James's Church ——— The establish'd Church.

Sir John. Establish'd Church!

Col. Sir ———

Sir John. Nay, you need not stare, Sir; and before he values himself upon going to Church, I would first have him be sure he is a Christian.

Col. A Christian, Sir!

Sir John. Ay, that's my Question, Whether he is yet christned? I mean, by a Pastor, that had a Divine, Uninterrupted, Successive Right to mark him as a Sheep of the true Fold?

Col. Is it possible! are you an Englishman, and offer, Sir, a Question so uncharitable, not only to him, but the whole Nation?

Sir John. Nay, Sir, you may give your self what Airs of Amazement you please, — I won't argue with you; you are both of you too harden'd to be converted now; but since you think it your Duty, as a Son, to be concern'd for my Errors, I think it as much mine, as a Father, to be concern'd for yours — I'll only tell you of them, if you think fit to mend them — so — if not — take the Consequence.

Col. [aside.] O! give me Temper, Heaven! this vile nonjuring Zealot! what poisonous Principles has he swell'd him with! — Well, Sir, since you don't think it proper to argue upon this Subject, I'll wave it too: But if I may ask it without Offence, Are these your only Reasons for discountenancing Mr. Heartly's Addresses to my Sister?

Sir John. These! are they not flagrant! would you have me marry my Daughter to a Pagan! for so he is, and all of you, till you are regularly Christians. In short, Son, expect to inherit no Estate of mine, unless you resolve to come into the Pale of the Church, of which I profess my self a Member.

Col. I thought I always was, Sir, and hope I am so still, unless you have lately been converted to the Roman.

The NON - JUROR.

3

Sir John. No, Sir, I abhor the Thoughts on't; and Protest against their Errors as much as you do.

Col. If so, Sir; Where's our Difference?

Sir John. Difference! 'twould make you tremble, Sir, to know it! but since 'tis fit you should know it, look there—— [Gives him a Book] read that, and be reform'd.

Col. What's here? [Reads] The Case of Schism, &c. Thank you, Sir; I have seen enough of this in the Daily Courant; to be sorry its in any Hands, but those of the common Hangman.

Sir John. Prophanation!

Col. And though I always honour'd your Concern for the Church's Welfare; I little thought 'twas for a Church that is establish'd nō where?

Sir John. O! Perverseness! but there is no better to be expected from your Course of Life: This is all the Effects of your modern Loyalty, your Conversation at Button's. Will you never leave that foul Nest of Heresy and Schism?

Col. Yes; Sir, when I see any Thing like it there; and should think myself oblig'd to retire, where such Principles were started——I own I use the Place, because I generally meet there instructive or diverting Company.

Sir John. Yes, fine Company indeed, Arians, Party-Poets, Players and Presbyterians.

Col. That's a very unusual Mixture, Sir; but if a Man entertains me innocently, am I oblig'd to enquire into his Profession, or Principles? Would not it be ridiculous for a Protestant that loves Musick, to refuse going to the Opera, because most of the Performers are Papists? But, Sir, this seems foreign to my Business; Mr. Heartly intends this Morning to pay his Respects to you, in hopes to obtain your final Consent; and desired me to be present, as a Mediator of Articles between you.

Sir John. I am glad to hear it.

Col. That's kind, indeed, Sir.

Sir John. May be not, Sir ——for I will not be at home when he comes.

Col. Nay, pray, Sir, 'twill be but Civility, at least, to hear him.

Sir John. And because I won't tell a Lie for the Matter, I'll go out this Moment.

Col. Good Sir.

Sir John. But because I won't deceive him neither, tell him, I would not have him lose his Time, in fooling after your Sister—— In short, I have another Man in my Head for her. [Exit Sir John.]

Col. Another Man! 'twould be worth one's while to know him—— Pray Heaven this nonjuring Hypocrite has not got some beggarly Traytor in his Eye for her—— I must rid the House of him at any rate, or all the Settlement I can hope from my Father is a Castle in the Air; nor can indeed his Life be safe, while such a Villain makes it an Act of Conscience to endanger it: If his Eyes are not soon open'd against him, the Crown's more likely to inherit his Estate, than I am; and though the Government has been very favourable upon those Occasions, it is but a melancholy Business to petition for what might have been one's Birthright. My Sister may be ruin'd too—— Here she comes; if there be another Man in the Case, she no doubt can let me into the Secret.

Enter Maria.

Sister, good Morrow—— I want to speak with you.

Mar. Nay, but prithee, Brother, don't put on that wise politick Face then: Why you look as if the Minority had like to have carried a Question.

Col. Come, come, a Truce with your Raillery; what I have to ask of you is serious, and I beg you would be so in your Answer.

Mar. Well then, provided it is not upon the Subject of Love, I will be so—— but make Haste too—— for I have not had my Tea yet.

Col. Why it is, and is not upon that Subject.

Mar. O! I love a Riddle dearly—— come—— let's hear it.

Col. Nay, pish—— if you will be serious, say so.

Mar. O Lard! Sir, I beg your Pardon—— there—— there's my whole Form and Features totally disengag'd, and lifeless at your Service; now put them in what Posture of Attention you think fit.

[She leans against him, with her Arms awkwardly falling to her Knees.]

Col. Was there ever such a giddy Devil!—— prithee stand up. I have been talking with my Father, and he declares positively you shall not receive any farther Addresses from Mr. Heartly,

Mar.

Mar. Are you serious?

Col. He said it this Minute, and with some Warmth too.

Mar. I am glad on't with all my Heart.

Col. How! glad!

Mar. To a Degree: Do you think a Man has any more Charms for me for my Father's liking him? No, Sir, if Mr. Heartly can make his Way to me now, he is oblig'd to me only: Besides, now it may have the Face of an Amour indeed: Now one has something to struggle for; there's Difficulty, there's Danger, there's the dear Spirit of Contradiction in it too. O I like it mightily.

Col. I am glad this does not make you think the worse of Heartly—but however, a Father's Consent might have clapt a Pair of Horses more to your Coach perhaps, and the Want of that, may pinch your Fortune.

Mar. Burn Fortune; Am not I a fine Woman? And have not I above 5000 l. in my own Hands?

Col. Yes, Sister, but with all your Charms, you have had it in your Hands almost these four Years; pray consider that too.

Mar. Pshah! and have not I had the full Swing of my own Airs and Humours these four Years? But if I'll humour my Father, I'll warrant he'll make it three or four thousand more, with some unlick'd Lout of a Fellow to snub me into the Bargain: A comfortable Equivalent truly—No, no, let him light his Pipe with his Consent if he pleases. Willful against Wife for a Wager.

Col. Well said; nothing goes to your Heart I find.

Mar. No, no, Brother; the Suits of my Lovers shall not be ended, like those at Law, by dull Council on both Sides, I'll hear nothing but what the Plaintiff himself can say to me; 'twould be a pretty Thing indeed to confine my Airs to the Directions of a Solicitor, to look kind, or cruel, only as the Jointure propos'd, is, or is not, equal to the Fortune my Father designs me: What do you think I'll have my Features put into the Gazette to be dispos'd of, like a parcel of dirty Acres, by an old Master in Chancery to the fairest Bidder? No, if I must have an ill Match, I'll have the Pleasure of playing my own Game at least.

Col. There spoke the Spirit of a free-born Englishwoman.
—Well, I am glad you are not startled at the first Part of my News however; but farther—Pray, Sister, has my Father ever propos'd any other Man to you ?

Mar. Another Man! let me know why you ask, and I'll tell you.

Col. Why the last Words he said to me, were, That he had another Man in his Head for you.

Mar. And who is it? Who is it? tell me, dear Brother, quickly.

Col. Why you don't so much as seem surpriz'd at it!

Mar. No, but impatient, and that's as well you know

Col. Why how now, Sister? [Gravely.]

Mar. Why sure, Brother, you know very little of Female Happiness, if you suppose the Surprize of a new Lover ought to shock a Woman of my Temper——don't you know that I am a Coquette?

Col. If you are, you are the first that ever was sincere enough to own her being so.

Mar. To a Lover I grant you; but I make no more of you than a Sister, I can say any Thing to you.

Col. I should have been better pleas'd if you had not own'd it to me——it's a hateful Character.

Mar. Ay, it's no Matter for that, its violently pleasant, and there's no Law against it, that I know of. You had best advise your Friend Heartly to bring in a Bill to prevent it: All the discarded Toasts, Prudes, and superannuated Virgins would give him their Interest I dare swear: Take my Word, Coquetry has govern'd the World from the Beginning, and will do so to the End on't.

Col. Heartly's like to have a hopeful Time on't with you.

Mar. Well, but don't you really know who it is my Father intends me?

Col. Not I really, but I imagin'd you might, and therefore thought to advise with you about it.

Mar. Nay, he has not open'd his Lips to me yet——Are you sure he's gone out?

Col. You are very impatient to know methinks? What have you to do to concern your self about any Man but Heartly?

Mar. O Lud! O Lud! O Lud! don't be so wise, prithee Brother: Why if you had an empty House to let, would you be displeas'd to hear there were two People about it? Can any Woman think herself happy, that's oblig'd to marry only with a Hobson's Choice? No, don't think to rob me of so innocent a Vanity; for believe me, Brother, there is no Fellow upon Earth, how disagreeable able soever, but in the long Run of his Addresses will utter something at least, that's worth a poor Woman's hearing. Besides, to be a little serious, Heartly has a Tincture of Jealousy in his Temper, which nothing but a substantial Rival can cure him of.

Col. O your Servant, Madam, now you talk Reason; I am glad you are concern'd enough for Heartly's Faults, to think them worth your mending—Ha! ha!

Mar. Concern'd! Why did I say that—look you, I'll deny it all to him—Well, if ever I am serious with you again—

Col. Here he comes; be as merry with him as you please.

Mar. Pshah!

Enter Heartly. Maria takes a Book from the Table, and reads.

Hear. Dear Colonel, your Servant.

Col. I am glad you did not come sooner, for in the Humour my Father left me, 'twould not have been a proper Time to have press'd your Affair—I touch'd upon't—but—I'll tell you more presently; in the mean Time lose no Ground with my Sister.

Heart. I shall always think my self oblig'd to your Friendship let my Success be what it will—Madam—your most obedient—What have you got there pray?

Mar. [Repeating.]

“ Her lively Looks a sprightly Mind disclose,

“ Quick, as her Eyes, and as unfix'd as those—

Hear. Pray, Madam, What is it?

Mar. “ Favours to none, to all she Smiles extends—

Hear. Nay, I will see— [Struggling.]

Mar. [Putting him by.]

“ Oft she rejects—but never once offends.

Col. Have a Care, she has dipt into her own Character, and she'll never forgive you, if you don't let her through with it.

Hear. I beg your Pardon, Madam. [Gravely.]

Mar. “ Bright as the Sun, her Eyes the Gazers strike,

“ And like the Sun, they shine on all alike—um—um.

Hear. That is something like indeed.

Col. You would say so, if you knew all.

Hear. All what? Pray what do you mean?

The NON-JUROR.

Col. Have a little Patience, I'll tell you immediately.

Hear. [Aside.] Confusion! some Coxcomb now has been flattering her, I'll be curst else, she's so full of her dear self upon't.

Mar. [Turning to Heartly.]

“ If to her Share some Female Errors fall,

“ Look on her Face ——— and you'll forget them all.

Is not that natural, Mr. Heartly?

Hear. For a Woman to expect it is indeed.

Mar. And can you blame her, when 'tis at the same Time a Proof of the poor Man's Passion, and her Power?

Hear. So that you think the greatest Compliment a Lover can make his Mistress, is to give up his Reason to her!

Mar. Certainly: For what have your lordly Sex to boast of but your Understanding? And till that's entirely surrender'd to her Discretion, while the least Sentiment holds out against her, a Woman must be downright vain to think her Conquest compleated.

Hear. There we differ, Madam; for in my Opinion, nothing but the most excessive Vanity, could value or desire such a Conquest.

Mar. O! d'ye hear him, Brother? The Creature reasons with me! Nay, has the frontless Folly to think me in the wrong too! O Lud! he'd make a horrid Tyrant ——— positively I won't have him.

Hear. Well, my Comfort is, no other Man will easily know whether you'll have him or not.

Mar. [Affectedly smiling.] Am not I a horrid, vain, silly Creature, Mr. Heartly?

Hear. A little bordering upon the Baby, I must own.

Mar. Laud! how can you love one so then? But I don't think you love me though ——— do you?

Hear. Yes, Faith I do, and so shamefully, that I am in Hopes you doubt it.

Mar. Poor Man! he'd fain bring me to Reason. [Smiling in his Face.]

Hear. I would indeed, nor am a sham'd to own it ——— nay, were it but possible to make you serious only when you should be so, you would be the most perfect Creature of your Sex.

Mar. O Lud! he's civil ———

Hear. Come, come, you have good Sense, use me but with that, and make me what you please.

Mar. Laud! I don't desire to make any Thing of you, not I.

Hear.

The NON-JUROR,

9

Hear. Don't look so cold upon me, by Heaven I can't bear it.

Mar. Well! now you are tolerable. [Gently glancing on him.]

Hear. Come then, be generous, and swear at least you'll never be another's.

Mar. Ah! Lard! now you have spoil'd all again; beside, how can I be sure of that before I have seen this t'other Man, my Brother spoke to me of? [Reads to her self again.]

Hear. What Riddle's this? [To the Col.]

Col. I told you you did not know all: To be serious, my Father went out but now, on purpose to avoid you. In short, he absolutely retracts his Promises, says he would not have you fool away your Time after my Sister, and in plain Terms told me, he had another Man in his Head for her.

Hear. Another Man! Confusion! who! what is he? did not he name him?

Col. No, nor has he yet spoke of him to my Sister.

Hear. This is unaccountable—— What can have given him this sudden turn?

Col. Some Whim our Conscientious Doctor has put in his Head I'll lay my Life.

Hear. He! He can't be such a Villain, he professes a Friendship for me.

Col. So much the worse: By the way, I am now upon the scent of a Secret, that I hope shortly will prove him a Rogue to the whole Nation.

Hear. You amaze me—— But on what Pretence, what Ground, what Reason, what Interest can he have to oppose me? —— This Shock is insupportable.

[He stands fix'd, and mute.]

Col. (Aside to Maria.) Are you really as unconcern'd now as you seem to be?

Mar. Thou art a strange Dunce, Brother, thou knowest no more of Love, than I do of a Regiment —— You shall see now how I'll comfort him——

[She goes to Heartly — mimicks his Posture and Uneasiness, then looks seriously in his Face, and blurts into a Laugh.]

Hear. I don't wonder at your good Humour, Madam, when you have so substantial an Opportunity to make me uneasy for Life.

Mar. O

Mar. O lud ! how wise he is ? Well ! his Reproaches have, that greatness of Soul — the Confusion they give one is insupportable — Betty, is the Tea ready ?

Enter Betty.

Bet. Yes, Madam.

Mar. Mr. Heartly, your Servant.

[Exit.

Col. So, so, you have made a fine spot of Work on't indeed.

Hear. Dear Tom, you'll pardon me, if I speak a little freely, I own the Levity of her Behaviour, at this time, gives me harder Thoughts, than I once believ'd it possible to have of her.

Col. Indeed, my Friend, you mistake her.

Hear. O pardon me, had she any real Concern for me, the Apprehension of a Man's Addresses, whom yet she never saw, must have alarm'd her to be something more than serious.

Col. Not at all, for (let this Man be who he will) I take all this Levity, as a Proof of her Resolution to have nothing to say to him.

Hear. And pray Sir, may I not as well suspect, that this artful Delay of her good Nature to me now, is meant as a provisional Defence against my Reproaches, in case, when she has seen this Man, she should think it convenient to prefer him to Me ?

Col. No, no, she's Giddy, but not capable of so serious a Falshood.

Hear. It's a sign you don't judge her with a Lover's Eye.

Col. No; but as a stander by, I often see more of the Game than you do : Don't you know that she is naturally Coquette ? And a Coquett's Play with a serious Lover, is like a Back-game at Tables, all open at first ; she'll make you twenty Blots — and you — spare none, take them All up, to be sure, while she — gains Points upon you : So that when you eagerly expect to end the Game on your Side, slap — as you were, she whips up your Man, she's fortified, and you are in a worse Condition, than when you begun with her — Upon which, you know of Course, you curse your Fortune, and she laughs at you.

Hear. Faith

Hear. Faith you judge it rightly — I have always found it so.

Col. In short, you are in haste to be up, and she's resolv'd to make you play out the Game at her leisure; you play for the fair Stake, and she for Victory.

Hear. But still, what could she mean by going away so abruptly?

Col. You grew too serious for her.

Hear. Why who could bear such Trifling?

Col. You should have laugh'd at her.

Hear. I can't love at that easy rate.

Col. No ——— If you could, the Uneasiness would lie on her Side.

Hear. Do you then really think she has any thing in her Heart for me? —

Col. Ay, marry Sir ——— Ah! if you could but get her to own that seriously now ——— Lord! how you could love her!

Hear. And so I could, by Heaven! [eagerly embracing him.]

Col. Ay, but 'tis not the Nature of the Creature, you must take her upon her own Terms; tho' faith I thought she own'd a great deal to you, but now; Did not you observe, when you were impatient, with what a conscious Vanity she cry'd — Now you are tolerable.

Hear. Nay, the Devil can be agreeable when she pleases.

Col. Well, well, I'll undertake for her; if my Father don't stand in your Way we are well enough, and I don't question, but the Alarm he has given us, like his other politick Projects, will end all in Fumo.

Hear. What says my Lady? you don't think she's against us.

Col. I dare swear she is not, she's of so soft, so sweet a Disposition, that ev'n Provocation can't make her your Enemy.

Hear. How came so fine a Creature to marry your Father with such a vast inequality of Years?

Col. Want of Fortune, Frank. She was Poor and Beautiful; He Rich and Amorous — She made him Happy, and he her ———

Hear. A Lady.

Col. And a Jointure — Now she's the only one in the Family, that has Power with our precise Doctor, and I dare engage she'll use it with him, to persuade my Father ther ther from any thing that's against your Interest ; by the way you must know, I have some shrewd Suspicions, that this sanctify'd Rogue is carnally in love with her.

Hear. O the liquorish Rascal !

Col. You shall judge by the Symptoms : First, he's jealous of every Male Thing that comes near her ; and under a friendly Pretence of guarding my Father's Honour, has persuaded him to abolish her Assemblies : Nay, at the last Masquerade this conscientious Spy (unknown to her) was eternally at her Elbow in the Habit of a Cardinal. At Dinner he never fails to sit next her, and will eat nothing but what she helps him ; always takes her side in Argument, and when he bows after Grace, constantly Ogles her ; bids my Sister, if she would look lovely, learn to Dress by her ; and at the Tea-Table, I have seen the impudent Goat most lasciviously sip off her leavings. She lost one of her Slippers t'other Day, (by the way she has a mighty pretty Foot) and what do you think was become of it ?

Hear. You puzzle me.

Col. I gad, this love-sick Monkey had stole it for a private Play Thing, and one of the House-maids, when she clean'd his Study, found it there with one of her old Gloves in the middle of it.

Hear. A very proper Relique to put him in mind of his Devotions to Venus.

Col. But mum ! here he comes.

Enter Doctor Wolf, and Charles.

Doct. Charles, Step up into my Study, and bring down half a Dozen more of those Manual Devotions that I compos'd for the Use of our Friends in Prison : and, dost thou hear ? leave this Writing there, but bring me the Key, and then bid the Butler ring to Prayers——[Exit Charles.] Mr. Heartly, I am your most faithful Servant, I hope you and the good Colonel will stay and join in the private Duties of the Family.

Hear. With all my Heart, Sir, provided you'll do the Duty of a Subject too, and not leave out the Prayer for the Royal Family.

Doct. The good Colonel knows, I never do omit it.

Col. Sometimes, Doctor ; but I don't remember, I ever Once heard you name them.

Doct. That's

Doct. That's only to shorten the Service, lest in so large a Family, some few vain, idle Souls might think it Tediuous; and we ought, as it were, to Allure them to what's Good, by the gentlest, easiest Means we can.

Hear. How! how Doctor! Are you sure that's your only Reason for leaving their Names out?

Doct. But, pray Sir, why is Naming them so absolutely necessary? when Heaven, without it, knows the true Intention of our Hearts? — Beside, why should we, when we so easily may avoid it, give the least colour of Offence to tender Consciences?

Col. Ay! now you begin to open, Doctor —

Hear. Have a care, Sir, the Conscience that Equivocates in its Devotions, must have the blackest Colour Hell can paint it with.

Col. Well said! to him Heartly.

Hear. Your Conscience, I dare say, won't be easily convinc'd, while your Scruples turn to so good Account in a private Family.

Doct. What am I to be baited then—— but 'twont be always Holiday— [Frowning.] The Time's now yours, but mine may come.

Col. What do you mean, Sir?

Doct. Sir, I shall not explain my self, but make your best of what I've said. I'm not to be intrap'd by all your servile Spies of Power — But Power perhaps may change its Hands, and you e'er long, as little dare to speak your Mind as I do.

Col. [Taking him by the Collar.] Hark you, Sirrah! Dare you menace the Government in my hearing?

Hear. Nay, Colonel.

[Interposing.]

Doct. 'Tis well!

Col. Traytor! but that our Laws have Chains and Gibbets for such Villains, I'd this Moment crackle all thy Bones to Splinters.

[Shakes him.]

Doct. Very well! your Father, Sir, shall know my Treatment.

Hear. Nay, dear Colonel, let him go.

Col. I ask your Pardon, Frank, I am asham'd that such a Wretch could move me so.

Hear. Come, compose your self.

Doct. [Aside, and recovering himself.] No! I'll take no Notice of it — I know he's warm and weak enough to tell this as his own Story to his Father — let him — 'tis better better so— 'twill but confirm Sir John in his good Opinion of my Charity, and serve to ruin him the faster. [Exit.

Hear. Was there ever so insolent a Rascal?

Col. The Dog will one Day provoke me to beat his Brains out:

Hear. Who could have believ'd such outrageous Arrogance could have lurk'd under so Lamb-like an Outsider?

Col. This Fellow has the Spleen and Spirit of ten Beckets in him:

Hear. What the Devil is he? whence came he? what's his Original? Is he really a Doctor?

Col. So he pretends, and that he lost his Living in Ireland upon his refusing the Oaths to the Government. Now I have made the strictest Inquiries, and can't find the least Evidence, that ever he was in the Country. But (as I hinted to you) there is now in Prison a poor unhappy Rebel I went to School with, whose Pardon I am solliciting, and he assures me, he knew him very well in Flanders, and in such Circumstances, as when it can be serviceable to me to know them, he faithfully promises to discover, but begs till then I will not insist upon it.

Hear. I gad this Intelligence may be worth your Cherishing.

Col. Hah! here's my Sister again:

Enter Maria hastily, Doctor Wolf following.

Mar. You'll find Sir, I will not be us'd thus: Nor shall your Credit with my Father protect your Insolence to me.

Hear.

and

Col.

} What's the Matter?

Mar. Nothing, pray be quiet— I don't want you— stand out of the way— [They retire.

Col. What has the Dog done to her?

Mar. How durst you bolt with such Authority into my Chamber without giving me Notice?

Hear. Confusion!

Col. Now, Frank, whose turn is it to keep their Temper.

Hear. [Struggling.] 'Tis not mine I'm sure.

Col. Hold— if my Father won't resent this, 'tis then time enough for me to do it.

Doct. Com-

Doff. Compose your Transport, Madam, I came by your Father's Desire, who being inform'd, that you were Entertaining Mr. Heartly, grew Impatient, and gave his Positive Command, that you attend him instantly, or he himself, he says, will fetch you.

Hear. So! now the Storm is rising.

Doff. So for what I have done, Madam, I had his Authority, and shall leave him to answer you.

Mar. 'Tis false, he gave you no Authority to insult me; or if he had, did you suppose I would bear it from you? What is it you presume upon? your Function! Does that exempt you from the Manners of a Gentleman?

Doff. Shall I have any answer to your Father, Lady?

Mar. I'll send him none by you.

Doff. I shall inform him so —

[Exit.

Mar. A sawcy Puppy.

Col. Prithee, Sister, what has the Fellow done to you?

Hear. I beg you tell us, Madam.

Mar. Nay, no great matter — but I was sitting carelessly in my Dressing Room — a — a fastning my Garter with my Face just towards the Door, and this impudent Cur, without the least Notice, comes Bounce in upon me — and my devilish Hoop hapning to hitch in the Chair, I was an Hour before I could get down my Petticoats.

Hear. The Rogue must be corrected.

Col. Yet I gad, I can't help laughing at the Accident! What a ridiculous Figure must she make! ha! ha!

Mar. Hah! you're as Impudent as he I think: Well but had not I best go to my Father?

Hear. Now, now, dear Tom, speak to her before she goes, this is the very Crisis of my Life — [Apart to the Col.

Mar. What does he say, Brother?

Col. Why he wants to have me speak to you, and I would have him do it himself.

Mar. Ay, come, do, Heartly, I am in good Humour now.

Hear. O Maria! — my Heart is bursting —

Mar. Well, well, out with it.

Hear. Your Father, now, I see is bent on parting us — Nay, what's yet worse, perhaps, will give you to another — I cannot speak — Imagine what I want from you —

Mar. Well!

Mar. Well — O lud! one looks so filly though, when one's serious — O Ged — in short I cannot get it out.

Col. I warrant you, try again.

Mar. O lud! — well — if one must be teiz'd then — why he must Hope, I think.

Hear. Is't possible? — Thus —

Col. Buz — [Stopping his Mouth] not a Syllable, she has done very well, I bar all Heroicks; if you press it too far, I'll hold Six to Four, she's off again in a Moment.

Hear. I am silenc'd.

Mar. Now am I on Tiptoe to know what odd Fellow my Father has found out for me.

Hear. I'd give something to know him.

Mar. He's in a terrible Fufs at your being here I find — I had best go to him.

Col. By all means.

Mar. O Bless us! here he comes piping hot to fetch me! Now we are all in a fine Pickle.

Enter Sir John hastily — He takes Maria under his Arm, Cocks his Hat, Nods, frowning at Heartly, and carries her off.

Col. So — Well said Doctor! 'tis he, I'm sure has blown this Fire. What horrid Hands is this poor Family fallen into? and how the Traytor seems to triumph in his Power? How little is my Father like himself? by Nature, Open, Just, and Generous, but this vile Hypocrite drives his weak Passions like the Wind, and I foresee at last, will dash him on his Ruin.

Hear. Nothing but your speedily detecting him can prevent it.

Col. I have a Thought, and 'tis the only one that can expose him to my Father — Come Frank, be Cheerful; in some unguarded Hour, we yet, perhaps, this lurking Thief,

*Without his Holy Vizor, may surprize,
And lay th' Impostor naked to his Eyes,*

[Exeunt]

The End of the First Act.

ACT II.

Charles with a Writing in his Hand.

Charles. 'TIS so — I have long suspected where his Zeal would end, in the making of his private Fortune — But then to found it on the Ruin of his Patron's Children, makes me shudder at the Villany: What Desperation may a Son be driven to, so barbarously disinherited? — Beside his Daughter, fair Maria too is wrong'd; wrong'd in the most tender Point: For so extravagant is this Settlement, it leaves her not a Shilling, but on her conditionally marrying with the Doctor's Consent; which seems, by what I've heard, intended as an Expedient, to oblige her to accept the Doctor himself for her Husband: Now 'twere but an honest part to let Maria know this Snare, that's laid for her: This Deed's not sign'd, and might be yet prevented — It shall be so — 'twere Folly not to try — My Condition can't be worse — Who knows how far her good Nature may think herself oblig'd for the Discovery? — Must he ruin, as he has done mine, all Families he comes into?

Enter Sir John, Lady Woodvil, and Maria.

Sir John. O, Charles, your Master wants you to transcribe some Letters.

Charles. Sir, I'll wait on him. [Exit Charles, bowing respectfully to the Ladies.]

Mar. A pretty well bred Fellow that.

Sir John. Ay, ay; but he has better Qualities than his good Breeding; he is honest.

Mar. He's always clean too.

Sir John. I wonder, Daughter, when thou wilt take notice of a Man's real Merit — Humph! well bred, and clean forsooth — Would not one think now, she were describing a Coxcomb?

Mar. But, dear Papa, do you make no allowance for one's Taste?

Sir John. Taste; hah! and One's Taste? That Madam One is to me the most provoking, impertinent Jade alive; and Taste is the true Picture of her senseless, sickly Appetite:

When do you hear my Wife talk at this rate? and yet she is as young, as your fantastical Ladyship.

Lady W. Maria's of a cheerful Temper, my Dear; but I know you don't think she wants Discretion.

Sir John. I shall try that presently, and you, Sweet-heart, shall judge between us: In short, Daughter, your Course of Life is but one continual Round of playing the Fool to no purpose; and therefore I am resolv'd to make you think seriously, and marry.

Mar. That I shall do before I marry, Sir, you may depend upon't.

Sir John. Um—That I am not so sure of—but you may depend upon my having thought seriously, and that's as well: For the Person I intend you, is of all the World the only Man can make you truly happy.

Mar. And of all the World, Sir, that's the only Man, I'll positively marry.

Lady W. [Aside to Mar.] Thou hast rare Courage, Maria; If I had such a Game to play, I should be frighted out of my Wits.

Mar. Lord, Madam, he'll make nothing on't, depend upon it. [Aside.]

Sir John. Mind what I say to you—This wonderful Man, I say—First, as to his Principles both in Church and State, is unquestionable.

Mar. Sir, I leave all that to you, for I should never ask him a Question about either of them.

Sir John. You need not, I am fully satisfied of both—He is a true, stanch Member of the English Catholick Church.

Mar. Methinks though, I would not have him a Roman Catholick, Sir, because you know of Double Taxes.

Sir John. No, he's no Roman.

Mar. Very well, Sir—

Sir John. Then as to the State, he'll shortly be one of the most considerable Men in the Kingdom, and that too in an Office for Life; which, on whatsoever pretence of Misbehaviour, no Civil Government can deprive him of.

Mar. That's fine indeed; I was afraid he had been a Clergyman.

Sir John. I have not yet said what his Function is—As for his private Life—he's sober.

Mar. O! I should hate a Sot.

Sir John. Chaste.

Mar. A hem! (stifling a Laugh.)

Sir

Sir John. What is't you sneer at, Madam—You want one of your fine Gentleman-Rakes, I suppose, that are snapping at every Woman they meet with.

Mar. No, no, Sir, I am very well satisfied—I—I should not care for such a sort of Man no more than I should for one that every Woman was ready to snap at.

Sir John. No, you'll be secure from Jealousy; he has Experience, Ripeness of Years; he is almost Forty Nine: Your Sexes Vanities will have no Charm for him.

Mar. But all this while, Sir, I don't find that he has any Charm for our Sexes Vanity: How does he look? Is he tall, well made? Does he dress, sing, talk, laugh, and dance well? Has he a good Air, good Teeth, fine Eyes, fine fair Perriwig—Does he keep his Chaise, Coach, Chariot, and Berlin with six flouncing Flanders? Does he wear Blew Velvet, clean White Stockings, and subscribe to the Opera?

Sir John. Was there ever so profligate a Creature! What will this Age come to?

Lady W. Nay, Marina, here I must be against you—Now you are blind indeed, a Woman's Happiness has little to do with the Pleasure her Husband takes in his own Person.

Sir John. Right.

Lady W. 'Tis not how he looks, but how he loves is the Point.

Sir John. Good again!

Lady W. And a Wife is much more secure, that has Charms for her Husband, than when the Husband has only Charms for her.

Sir John. Admirable! Go on my Dear.

Lady W. Do you think, Child, a Woman of Five and twenty may not be much happier with an honest Man of Fifty, than the finest Woman of Fifty with a young Fellow of Five and twenty?

Sir John. Mark that.

Mar. Ay, but when two Five and twenties come together—Dear Papa, you must allow they have a chance to be fifty times as pleasant and frolicksome.

Sir John. Frolicksome! why you sensual Ideot, what have Frolicks to do with solid Happiness? I am ashamed of you—Go! you talk worse than a Girl at a Boarding-School—Frolicksome! as if Marriage were only a Licence for two People to play the Fool according to Law? Methinks, Madam, you have a better Example of Happiness before your Face—Here's one has ten times your Understanding, and she, you find, has made a different Choice.

Mar. Lord, Sir! how you talk? you don't consider Peoples Temper: I don't say my Lady is not in the right; but then you know, Papa, she's a Prude, and I am a Coquet; she becomes her Character very well, I don't deny it, and I hope you see every thing I do is as consistent with mine: Your wife Folks may lay down what Rules they please; but 'tis Constitution that governs us all, and you can no more bring me, Sir, to endure a Man of Forty nine, than you can persuade my Lady to dance in a Church to the Organ.

Sir John. Why you wicked Wretch, could any thing persuade you to that?

Mar. Lord, Sir! I won't answer for any thing I should do when the Whim's in my Head: You know I always lov'd a little Flirtation.

Sir John. O horrible! My poor Mother has ruin'd her; leaving her a Fortune in her own hands, has turn'd her Brain: In short, your Sentiments of Life are shameful, and I am resolv'd upon your instant Reformation; therefore, as an Earnest of your Obedience, I shall first insist, that you never see young Heartly more; for in one word, the good and pious Doctor Wolf's the Man that I have decreed your Husband.

Mar. Ho! ho! ho! [Laughing aloud.]

Sir John. 'Tis very well——this Laugh you think becomes you, but I shall spoil your Mirth——no more——give me a serious Answer.

Mar. (Gravely) I ask your Pardon, Sir, I should not have smil'd indeed, could I have suppos'd it possible that you were serious.

Sir John. You'll find me so.

Mar. I am sorry for it; but I have an Objection to the Doctor, Sir, that most Fathers think a substantial one.

Sir John. Name it.

Mar. Why, Sir, you know he is not worth a Groat.

Sir John. That's more than you know, Madam; I am able to give him a better Estate than I am afraid you'll deserve.

Mar. How, Sir?

Sir John. I have told you what's my Will, and shall leave you to think on't.

Enter Charles.

Charles. [Aside to Sir John.] Sir, if you are at leisure, the Doctor desires a private Conference with you, upon Business of Importance.

Sir John. Where is he?

Charles. In his own Chamber, Sir, just taking his leave of the Count

Count and another Gentleman, that came this Morning Express from Avignon: He has sent you too the Note you ask'd him for.

Sir John. 'Tis well; I'll come to him immediately— [Exit Charles.] Daughter, I am call'd away, and therefore have only time to tell you, as my last Resolution, that if you expect a Shilling from me, the Doctor is your Husband, or I'm no more your Father. [Exit Sir John, and drops the Paper.]

Mar. O Madam! I am at my Wits end, not for the little Fortune I may lose in disobeying my Father; but it startles me to find what a dangerous Influence this Fellow has o'er all his Actions.

Lady W. Dear Maria, I am now as much alarm'd as you; for though in compliance to your Father, I have been always inclin'd to think charitably of this Doctor, yet now I am convinc'd 'tis time to be upon our guard—he's stepping into his Estate too!

Mar. Here's my Brother, Madam, we'll consult with him.

To them the Colonel.

Col. Madam, your most obedient—Well, Sister, is the Secret out? Who is this pretty Fellow my Father has pickt up for you?

Mar. Ev'n our agreeable Doctor.

Col. You are not serious.

Lady W. He's the very Man, I can assure you, Sir.

Col. Confusion! What would the Jewish Cormorant devour the whole Family? Your Ladyship knows he is secretly in Love with you too.

Lady W. Fy! fy! Colonel.

Col. I ask your Pardon, Madam, if I speak too freely; but I am sure, by what I have seen, your Ladyship must suspect something of it.

Lady W. I am sorry any Body else has seen it; but I must own his Civilities of late have been something warmer than I thought became him.

Col. How then are these Opposites to be reconcil'd; can the Pascal have the Assurance to think both these Points are to be carried?—But he does nothing like other People; he's a Contradiction ev'n to his own Character: Most of your Non-Jurors now are generally People of a free and open Disposition, mighty Pretenders to a Conscience of Honour indeed: But you seldom see them put on the least Shew of Religion: But this formal Hypocrite always has it at his Tongue's end, and there it sticks, for it never gets into his Heart: I'll answer for him.

Lady W. Ay, but that's the Charm, that first got him into Sir John's Heart; who, good Man, is himself, I am sure, sincere; however now misguided, 'twas not so much his Principles of Government, as his well painted Piety; his seeming Self-denial, Resignation, Patience, and humble Outside, that gave him first so warm a Lodging in his Bosom.

Mar. My Lady has judg'd it perfectly right.

Col. I am afraid it's too true: There has been his surest footing! But here we are puzzled again—What subtle Fetch can he have in being really in Love with your Ladyship, and at the same time making such a Buffle to marry my Sister?

Mar. Truly one would not suspect him to be so Termagant: I fancy the Gentleman might have his hands full of one of us.

Col. And yet his Zeal pretends to be so shock'd at all indecent Amours, that in the Country he us'd to make the Maids lock up the Turkey-cocks every Saturday Night, for fear they should gallant the Hens on a Sunday.

Lady W. O! Ridiculous.

Col. Upon my Life, Madam, my Sister told me so.

Mar. I tell you so: You impudent—

Lady W. Fy! Maria, he only jests with you.

Mar. How can you be such a Monster to be playing the fool here, when you have more reason to be frighted out of your Wits? You don't know, perhaps, that my Father declares he'll settle a Fortune upon this Fellow too.

Col. What do you mean?

Lady W. 'Tis too true; 'tis not three Minutes since he said so.

Col. Nay, then 'tis time indeed his Eyes were open'd; and give me leave to say, Madam, 'tis only in your power to save not only me, but ev'n my Father too from Ruin.

Lady W. I shall easily come into any thing of that kind, that's practicable—What is't you propose?

Col. Why, if this Fellow (which I am sure of) is really in love with you, give him a fair Opportunity to declare himself, and leave me to make my advantage of it.

Lady W. I apprehend you—I am loath to do a wrong thing—

Mar. Dear Madam, it's the only way in the World to expose him to my Father.

Lady W. I'll think of it— [Mus'ing.]

Col. When you do, Madam, I am sure you will come into it.

How

How now! What Paper's this? it's the Doctor's Hand.

Mar. I believe my Father dropt it.

Col. What's here? [Reads.]

Laid out at several times for the Secret Service of His M-----

	l.	s.	d.
May the 28th, For six Baskets of Rue and Time,	00	18	00
The 29th, ditto, Two Cart-Loads of Oaken- Boughs, — — — — —	} 02	00	00
June the 10th, For ten Bushels of White Roses,	01	10	00
Ditto,—Given to the Bell-ringers of several Pa- rishes, — — — — —	} 10	15	00
Ditto,—To Simon Chaunter , Parish-Clerk, for his Selecting proper Staves adapted to the Day, —	} 05	07	06
Ditto,—For Lemons and Arrack sent into New- gate , — — — — —	} 09	05	00

Col. Well, while they drink it in Newgate, much good may it do them.

Paid to Henry Conscience , Juryman, for his extra- ordinary Trouble in acquitting Sir Preston Re- bel of his Indictment, — — — — —	} 53	15	00
Allow'd to Patrick Mac-Rogue , of the Foot-Guards, for prevailing with his Comrade to desert, —	} 04	06	06
Given as Smart-Money to Humphrey Stanch , Cob- ler, lately whipt for speaking his Mind of the Government, — — — — —	} 03	04	06
Paid to Abel Perkin , News-Writer, for divers seasonable Paragraphs, — — — — —	} 05	00	00
Aug. the 1st, Paid to John Shoplift and Thomas Highway , for endeavouring to put out the Enemies Bonfire, — — — — —	} 02	03	00
Aug. the 2d. Paid the Surgeon for Sear-cloth, for their Bruises, — — — — —	} 01	01	06

Was there ever such a Heap of stupid, cold-scented Treason? Now, Madam, I hope you see the Necessity of blowing up this Traitor: These are Lengths I did not think my Father had gone with him: What vile, what low Sedition, has he made him stoop to?

Lady W. I tremble at the Precipice he stands on!

Mar. O bless us! I am in a cold Sweat, dear Brother, leave it where you found it—

Lady W. By all means; if Sir John should know it's in your hands, it may make him desperate—

Col. You are in the right, Madam. [He lays down the Paper.]

Lady W. Let's steal into the next Room, and observe that no Body else takes it up; he'll certainly come back to look for't.

Col. But I must leave you, poor Heartly stays for me at White's; and he'll sit upon Thorns, 'till I bring him an account of his new Rival.

Mar. Well, well, get you gone then. [Exeunt.]

Enter Sir John in a Hurry.

Sir John. Undone! Ruin'd! where could I drop this Paper?—Hold—let's see— [He finds it.] Ah! here it is—What a blessed 'Scape was this? If my hotbrain'd Son had found it, I suppose by tomorrow, he would have been begging my Estate for the Discovery ——— [Enter Doctor Wolf.]

O Doctor! all's well: I have found my Paper.

Doct. I am sincerely glad of it—It might have ruin'd us.

Sir John. Well, Sir, what say our last Advices from Avignon?

Doct. All goes right—The Council has approv'd our Scheme, and press mightily for Dispatch among our Friends in England.

Sir John. But pray Doctor—

Doct. Hold, Sir,—now we are alone, give me leave to inform you better—Not that I am vain of any worldly Title; but since it has pleas'd our Court to dignify me, our Churches Right obliges me to take it.

Sir John. Pray, Sir, explain.

Doct. Our last Express has brought me this— [He shews a Writing] which (far unworthy, as I am) promotes me to the vacant See of Thetford.

Sir John. Is it possible? My Lord, I joy in your Advancement.

Doct. It is indeed a Spiritual Comfort to find my Labours in the Cause are not forgotten; though I must own some less conspicuous Instance of their Favour had better suited me: Such high Distinctions are invidious; and it would really grieve me, Sir, among my Friends, to meet with Envy where I only hope for Love; not but I submit in any way to serve them.

Sir

Sir John. Ah! good Man! this Meekness will, I hope, one Day be rewarded—but pray Sir—my Lord!—I beg your Lordship's Pardon—pray what other News? how do all our Friends? are they in Heart, and chearful?

Doct. To a Man! never in such sanguine hopes—the Court's extremely throng'd—never was there such a concourse of Warlike Exiles: though they talk, this sharp Season, of removing farther into Italy, for the benefit of milder Air: Well! The Catholicks are the sincerest Friends!

Sir John. Nay, I must do them Justice, they are truly Zealous in the Cause, and it has often griev'd my Heart, that our Churches Differences are so utterly Irreconcilable.

Doct. O nourish still that charitable Thought! there's something truly Great and Humane in it; and really, Sir, if you examine well the Doctrines laid down, by my learned Predecessor, in his Case of Schism, you will find those Differences are not so terribly material, as some obstinate Schismatics would paint them: Ah! could we but be brought to Temper, a great many seeming Contradictions might be reconcil'd on both sides: But while the Laity will interpret for themselves, there is indeed no doing it. Now, could we, Sir, like other Nations, but once restrain that monstrous Licence. Ah! Sir, a Union then might soon be practicable.

Sir John. Auh! 'twill never do here: The English are a stubborn headstrong People, and have been so long indulg'd in the use of their own Senses; that, while they have Eyes in their Heads, you will never be able to persuade them they can't see, there's no making them give up their Humane Evidences: and your Credo, quia Impossibile est, is an Argument they will always make a Jest of. No, no, it is not Force will do the thing, your Press'd Men don't always make the best Soldiers. And truly, my Lord, we seem to be wrong too in another Point, to which I have often imputed the ill Success of our Cause; And that is, the taking into our Party so many loose Persons of dissolute and abandon'd Morals; Fellows, whom in their daily private Course of Life, the Pillory and Gallows seem to groan for.

Doct. 'Tis true indeed, and I have often wish'd 'twere possible to do without them, but in a Multitude all Men won't be all Saints; and then again they are really useful; nay, and in many things, that Sober Men will not stoop to——They serve, poor Curs, to bark at the Government in the open Streets, and keep up the wholesome Spirit of Clamour in the common

common People; and, Sir, you cannot conceive the wonderful use of Clamour, 'tis so teizing to a Ministry, it makes them winch and fret, and grow uneasy in their Posts— Ah! many a comfortable Point has been gain'd by Clamour! 'tis in the Nature of Mankind to yield more to that, than Reason— E'en Socrates himself could not resist it; for wise, as he was, yet you see his Wife Xantippe carried all her Points by Clamour. Come, come, Clamour is a useful Monster, and we must feed the hungry Mouths of it; it being of the last Importance to us, that hope to change the Government to let it have no quiet.

Sir John. Well, there is indeed no resisting meer Necessity.

Doct. Besides, if we suffer our Spirits to cool here at home, our Friends abroad will send us over nothing but Excuses.

Sir John. 'Tis true, but still I am amaz'd, that France so totally should have left us— Mardyke, they say, will certainly be demolish'd.

Doct. No matter, let them go—we have made a good Exchange, our New Ally is yet better, as he is less suspected— But to give them their due, we have no Spirits among us, like the Women, the Ladies have supported our Cause with a surprizing Constancy. O! there's no daunting them, ev'n with ill Success! they will starve their very Vanities, their Vices, to feed their Loyalty: I am inform'd that my good Lady Countess of Night-and-Day, has never been seen in a new Gown, or has once thrown a Die at any of the Assemblies, since our last general Contribution.

Sir John. O my good Lord, if our Court abroad but knew what Obligations they have to your indefatigable Endeavours—

Doct. Alas! Sir, I can only boast an honest Heart, my Power is Weak, I only can assist them with my Prayers and zealous Wishes; or if I had been serviceable, have not you, Sir, overpaid me? Your Daughter, Sir, the fair Maria, is a Reward no Merit can pretend to.

Sir John. Nay, good my Lord, this tender Gratitude confounds me—O! this insensible Girl—Pray excuse me—
[Weeps.]

Doct. You seem'd concern'd, pray what's amiss?

Sir John. That I should be the Father of so blind a Child, alas! she slights the Blessing I propos'd, she sees you not, my Lord, with my fond Eyes; but lay not, I beseech you, at my Door, the ungrateful stubbornness of a thoughtless Girl.
at

Doct. Nay, good Sir, be not thus concern'd for me, we must allow her Female Modesty a time, your strict Commands perhaps too suddenly surpriz'd her; Maids must be slowly, gently dealt with; and might I, Sir, presume to advise—

Sir John. Any thing, your Will shall govern me and her.

Doct. Then, Sir, abate of your Authority, and let the Matter rest a while: Suppose I first should beg your good Lady, Sir, to be my Friend to her: Women will hear from their own Sex, what sometimes, e'vn from the Man they like, would startle them: May I have your permission, Sir, when Dinner is remov'd, to entertain my Lady on this Subject privately?

Sir John. O! by all means, and troth, it is an excellent Thought, I'll go this Instant, and prepare her to receive you, and will myself contrive your Opportunity.

Doct. You are too good to me, Sir—too bountiful.

Sir John. Nay, now, my Lord, you drive me from you.

Doct. Pray Pardon me.

Sir John. No more I beg you, good my Lord—your Servant. [Exit.

Doct. Ha! ha! What noble Harvests have been reaped from bigotted Credulity, nor ever was a better Instance of it. Would it not make one Smile! that it should ever enter into the Brains of this Man (who can in other Points distinguish like a Man) that a Protestant Church can never be secure, till it has a Popish Prince to defend it.

Enter Charles.

So Charles, hast thou finish'd those Letters?

Charles. I have brought them, Sir.

Doct. 'Tis very well, let them be seal'd without a Direction, and give them to Aaron Sham the Jew, when he calls for them—O! and—here step yourself this Afternoon to Mr. Defeazance of Gray's-Inn, and give him this Thirty Pound Bill from Sir Harry Foxhound, beg him to sit up Night and Day till the Writings are finish'd: For his Trial certainly comes on this Week, he knows we can't always be sure of a Jury, and a Moment's delay may make the Commissioners lay hold of his Estate.

Charles. My Lord, I'll take the utmost Care.

Doct. Well, Charles. [Gravely smiling.]

Charles.

Charles. Sir John has told me of the new Duty, I ought to pay you when in private.

Doct. But take especial heed, that it be only private.

Charles. Your Lordship need not caution me — my Lord, I hear another Whisper in the Family; I'm told you'll shortly be allied to it; Sir John, they say, has actually consented; I hope, my Lord, you'll find the fair Maria too, as yeilding.

Doct. Such a Proposal has indeed been started, but it will end in nothing: Maria is a giddy wanton thing, not form'd to make a wife Man happy, her Life's too vain, too sensual to elevate a Heart like mine: No, no, I have Views more serious.

Charles. O my fluttering Joy! [Aside.]

Doct. Marriage is a State too turbulent for me.

Charles. But with Sir John's Consent, my Lord, her Fortune may be considerable.

Doct. Thou know'st, Charles, my thoughts of Happiness were never form'd on Fortune.

Charles. No! I find that by the Settlement. [Aside.]

Doct. Or if they were, they would be there impossible; Maria's vain distaste of me, I know's as deeply rooted, as my Contempt of her: And canst thou think I'd stain my Character to be a Wanton's Mockery, to follow through the Wilds of Folly she would lead me, to cringe and doat upon a senseless Toy, that every Feather in a Hat can purchase?

Charles. But mayn't Sir John take it ill, my Lord, to have her slighted?

Doct. No, no, her ridiculous Aversion will secure me from his Reproaches.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Sir, my Master desires to speak with you.

Doct. I'll wait on him — Charles, you'll take care of my Directions.

Charles. I'll be sure, Sir. [Exit Doctor.]

Kind Heaven, I thank thee! this Bar so unexpectedly remov'd gives vigour to my Heart, and is, I hope, an Omen of its Fortune — But I must lose no time, the Writing may be every Moment called for --- this is her Chamber.

He knocks softly—and Betty Enters to him.

Is your Lady busy?

Betr. I think she's only a reading.

Charles.

Charles. Will you do me the Favour to let her know, if she is at leisure, I beg to speak with her upon some earnest Business.

Maria Entering with a Book.

Mar. Who's that?

Betty. She's here — Mr. Charles, Madam, desires to speak with you.

Mar. O! Your Servant Mr. Charles — Here take this odious Homer, and lay him up again, he tires me. [Exit Betty with the Book.]

How could the blind Wretch make such a horrid fuss about a fine Woman, for so many Volumes together, and give us no Account of her Amours? You have read him I suppose in the Greek, Mr. Charles.

Charles. Not lately, Madam.

Mar. But do you so violently admire him now?

Charles. The Criticks say he has his Beauties, Madam. But Ovid has been always my Favorite,

Mar. Ovid! O! he's ravishing —

Charles. And so art thou to Madness. [Aside.]

Mar. Lord! how could one do to learn Greek, was you a great while about it?

Charles. It has been half the Business of my Life, Madam.

Mar. That's cruel now! then you think one can't be Mistress of it in a Month or two.

Charles. Not easily, Madam.

Mar. They tell me it has the softest Tone for Love, of any Language in the World, I fancy I could soon learn it — I know two Words of it already.

Charles. Pray, Madam, what are they?

Mar. Stay let me see — O — ay — Zoe, kai Psyc' e.

Charles. I hope you know the English of 'em, Madam.

Mar. O lud! I hope there's no Harm in it; I am sure I heard the Doctor say it to my Lady — Pray what is it?

Charles. You must first imagine, Madam, a tender Lover gazing on his Mistress, and then indeed they have a softness in 'em, as thus — Zoe, kai psyche! my Life, my Soul!

Mar. O the Impudent young Rogue! how his Eyes spoke too! [Aside.]

What the duce! can he want with me! —

Charles. I have startled her, she muses. [Aside.]

Mar. It always ran in my Head this Fellow had something in him above his Condition — I'll know presently. [Aside.] Well, but your Business with me Mr. Charles, you have something of Love in your Head now, Ill lay my Life on't.

Charles.

Charles. I never yet durst own it, Madam.

Mar. Why, what's the Matter?

Charles. My Story is too Melancholy to entertain a Mind so much at Ease as yours.

Mar. O! I love melancholy Stories of all things.—

Charles. But mine, Madam, can't be told, unless I give my Life into your Power.

Mar. O Lud! you have not done any Body a Mischiefe, I hope.

Charles. I never did a private Injury; if I have done a publick Wrong, I'm sure it might, in me, at least, be called an honest Error.

Mar. Pray whom did you serve before you liv'd with the Doctor?

Charles. I was not born to serve; and had not an unfortunate Education ruin'd me, might have now appear'd, like what I am by Birth, a Gentleman.

Mar. I am surpriz'd! Your Education, say you, ruin you? Lord! I am concern'd for you. Pray let me know your Story; and if any Services are in my Power, I am sure you may command them.

Charles. Such soft Compassion, from so fair a Bosom, o'er-pays the worst that can attend my owning what I am.

Mar. O your Servant — but pray let's hear.

Charles. My Father's elder Brother, Madam, was a Gentleman of an antient Family in the North, who having then no Child himself, begg'd me from my Nurse's Arms, to be adopted as his own, with an Assurance too of making me his Heir; to which my Father (then alas! in the Infancy of his Fortune) easily consented. This Uncle being himself secretly disaffected to the Government, gave me of course, in my Education, the same unhappy Prejudices, which since have ended in the Ruin of us both.

Mar. Then you were bred a Roman-Catholick.

Charles. No, Madam; but I own in Principles of very little difference, which I imbib'd chiefly from this Doctor; he having been five Years my Governor. As I grew up, my Father's Merit had rais'd his Fortune under the present Government; and fearing I might be too far fix'd in Principles against it, desired me from my Uncle Home again: But I, as I then thought my self bound in Gratitude, excus'd my going in Terms of Duty to my Father; whom since alas! I too justly have provok'd ever to hope a Reconciliation. I saw too late my Folly, and had no Defence against his Anger,

Anger, but by artfully confirming him in a Belief, that I had perish'd with my Uncle in the late Rebellion.

Mar. Bless us! what do you mean? you were not actually in it, I hope!

Charles. I can't disown the Guilt — but since the Royal Mercy has been refus'd to none that frankly have confess'd with Penitence their Crime (which from my Heart I most sincerely do) in that is all my Hope — My Youth and Education's all th' Excuse I plead; if they deserve no Pity, I am determin'd to throw off my Disguise, and bow me to the Hand of Justice.

Mar. Poor Creature! Lord! I can't bear it.

(with Concern.)

Charles. But then unknown, and friendless as I am; to whom, alas! can I apply for Succour!

[Weeps.]

Mar. O Lord! I'll serve you, depend upon it: My Brother shall have no rest 'till he gets your Pardon.

Charles. Your kind Compassion, Madam, has prevented, what, if I durst, I should have mention'd, I hope too, I shall personally deserve his Favour; if not, your generous Inclination to have sav'd me, even in my last Despair of Life, will give my Heart a Joy.

Mar. Lord! the poor unfortunate Boy loves me too; what shall I do with him? But, Mr. Charles, pray once more to your Story — what was it that really drew you into the Rebellion?

Charles. This Doctor, Madam, who, as he is now your Father's, was then my Uncle's Bosom-Counsellor: 'Twas his insidious Tongue that painted it to us as an incumbent Duty, on which the Welfare of our Souls depended; he warm'd us too into such a weak Belief of vile Reports, as Infamy should blush to mention — we were assur'd, that half the Churches here in Town were lying all in sacrilegious Ruines; which since, I found, maliciously was meant, even of those that are magnificently rising from their new Foundations!

Mar. But, pray — while you were in Arms how did the Doctor dispose of himself?

Charles. He! — went with us, Madam, none so active in the Front of Resolution, till Danger came to face him; then indeed a friendly Fever seiz'd him, which on the first Alarm of the King's Forces marching towards Preston, gave him a cold Pretence to leave the Town; in the Defence of which my Uncle

Uncle lost his Life, and I my only Friend, with all my long fed Hopes of Fortune.

Mar. Poor Wretch ! but how came you to avoid being Prisoner ?

Charles. Upon our Surrender of the Place, I brib'd a Townsman to employ me, as his Servant, in a backward Working-house, where, from my Youth, and Change of Habit, I pass'd without Suspicion till the whole Affair was over — But then, alas ! whither to turn I knew not : My Life grew now no more my Care — Perish, I saw, I must, whether as a Criminal, or a Beggar, was my only Choice.

Mar. O Lord ! tell me quickly how you came hither.

Charles. In this Despair I wander'd up to London, where I scarce knew one Mortal, but some few Friends in Prison. What could I do ? I ventur'd even thither for my Safety ; where 'twas my Fortune first to see your Father, Madam, distributing Relief to several : He knew my Uncle well ; and being inform'd of my Condition, he charitably took me Home ; and here has ever since conceal'd me as a menial Servant to the Doctor. The Detestation of whose vile, dishonest Practices at last have waked me to a Sense of all my blinded Errors ; of which this Writing is his least of sordid Instances. [Gives it to Maria.]

Mar. You frighten me ; pray what are the Purposes of it ! 'Tis neither sign'd nor seal'd.

Charles. No, Madam, therefore to prevent it by this timely Notice, was my Business here with you : Your Father gave it the Doctor first to shew his Council, who having since approv'd it, I understand this Evening 'twill be executed,

Mar. But what is it ?

Charles. It grants to Doctor Wolf in present four hundred Pounds per Annum, of which this very House is part ; and at your Father's Death invests him in the whole Remainder of his Free Estate. For you indeed there is a Charge of four thousand Pound upon it ; provided you marry only with the Doctor's Consent ; if not, 'tis added to my Lady's Jointure. But your Brother, Madam, is without Conditions utterly disinherited.

Mar. I am confounded — what will become of us ! my Father now I find was serious — O this insinuating Hypocrite ----- let me see ----- ay ----- I will go this Minute ----- Sir, dare you trust this in my Hands for an Hour only ?

Charles.

Charles. Any thing to serve you ---- my Life's already in your Hands.

Mar. And I dare secure it with my own --- Hark! they ring to Dinner; pray, Sir, step in, say I am oblig'd to dine Abroad, and whisper one of the Footmen to get an Hackney Coach immediately; then do you take a proper Occasion to slip out after me to Mr. Double's Chambers in the Temple, there I shall have Time to talk farther with you. You'll excuse my Hurry --- Here Betty, my Scarf, and a Mask. [Ex. Maria.]

Charles. What does my Fortune mean me? She'll there talk farther with me! Of what! What will she talk of? O my Heart! methought she look'd at parting too, as kindly conscious of some Obligation to me: And then how soft, how amiably tender was her pity of my Fortune. But O! I rave! keep down my vain aspiring Thoughts, and to my lost Condition level all my Hopes.

*Rather content with Pity let me live,
Than hope for more than she resolves to give.* [Ex.]

The End of the Second A C T.

A C T III.

Maria, and Betty taking off her Scarf, &c.

Mar. HAS any one been to speak with me, Betty?
Betty. H Only Mr. Heartly, Madam, he said he would call again, and bid his Servant stay below to give him Notice when you came Home.

Mar. You don't know what he wanted?

Betty. No, Madam, he seem'd very uneasy at your being Abroad.

Mar. Well --- go, and lay up those Things-- [Exit Betty.]
 Ten to One, but his wise Head now has found out something to be jealous of; if he lets me see it, I shall be sure to make him infinitely easy --- Here he comes.

Enter Heartly.

Hear. Your humble Servant, Madam, } gravely.

Mar. Your Servant, Sir,

Hear. You have been Abroad, I hear.

Mar. Yes, and now, I am come Home, you see.

Hear. You seem to turn upon my Words, Madam, is there any Thing particular in them?

Mar. As much, as there is in my being Abroad, I believe.

Hear. Might not I say you had been Abroad, without giving Offence?

Mar. And might not I as well say, I was come Home, without your being so grave upon't?

Hear. Do you know any Thing should make me grave?

Mar. I know, if you are so, I am the worst Person in the World you could possibly shew it to.

Hear. Nay, I don't suppose you do any thing, you won't justify.

Mar. O! then I find I have done something you think I can't justify.

Hear. I don't say that neither, perhaps I am in the wrong in what I have said; but I have been so often us'd to ask Pardon for your being in the wrong, that I am resolv'd henceforth never to rely on the insolent Evidence of my own Senses.

Mar.

Mar. You don't know now, perhaps, that I think this pretty smart Speech of yours is very Dull ; but since that's a Fault you can't help, I will not take it ill. Come now, be as sincere on your Side, and tell me seriously ---- Is not what real Business I had Abroad, the very Thing you want to be made easy in ?

Hear. If I thought you would make me easy, I would own it.

Mar. Now we come to the Point --- To morrow Morning then, I give you my Word to let you know it all, till when there is a Necessity for its being a Secret, and I insist upon your believing it.

Hear. But pray, Madam, what am I to do with my private Imagination in the mean Time, that is not in my Power to confine: And sure you won't be offended, if to avoid the Tortures That may give me, I beg you'll trust me with the Secret now.

Mar. Don't press me, for positively I will not.

Hear. Cannot, had been a kinder Term ---- is my Disquiet of so little Moment to you ?

Mar. Of none, while your Disquiet dares not trust the Assurances I have given you ; if you expect I should confide in you for Life, don't let me see you dare not take my Word for a Day ; and if you are wise, you'll think so fair a Trial of your Faith a Favour.

Hear. If you intend it such ---- it is a Favour, if not 'tis something --- so --- come let's wave the Subject.

Mar. With all my Heart: Have you seen my Brother lately ?

Hear. Yes, Madam, and he tells me, it seems, the Doctor is the Man your Father has resolv'd upon.

Mar. 'Tis so; nay and what will more surprize you, he leaves me only to the Choice of him, or of no Fortune.

Hear. And may I, without Offence, beg leave to know, what Resolutions, Madam, you have taken upon it ?

Mar. I have not taken any, I do not know what to do ; what would you advise me to ?

Hear. I advise you to? Nay, you are in the right to make it a Question.

Mar. He says he'll settle all his Estate upon him too.

Hear. O take it, take it, to be sure, it's the fittest Match in the World, you can't do a wiser Thing certainly.

Mar. 'Twill be as wise at least, as the Ways you take to prevent it.

Hear. I find, Madam, I am not to know what you intend to do ; and I suppose I am to be easy at that too.

Mar. When I intend to marry him, I shall not care whether you are easy, or no.

Hear. If your Indifference to me, were a Proof of your Inclination to him, the Gentleman need not despair.

Mar. Very well, Sir, I'll endeavour to take your Advice, I promise you.

Hear. O ! that won't cost you much Trouble, I dare say, Madam.

Mar. About as much, I suppose, as it cost you to give it me.

Hear. Upon my Word, Madam, I gave it purely to oblige you.

Mar. Then to return your Civility, the least I can do is to take it.

Hear. Is't possible ? How can you torture me with this Indifference ?

Mar. Why do you insult me with such a bare-fac'd Jealousy ?

Hear. Is it a Crime to be concern'd for what becomes of you ? Has not your Father openly declar'd against me, in Favour of my Rival ? How is it possible, at such a Time, not to have a thousand Fears ? What though they all are false and groundless, are they not still the Effect of Love alarm'd, and anxious to be satisfied ? I have an open, artless Heart, that cannot bear Disguises, but when 'tis griev'd, in spite of me, 'twill shew it ---- Pray pardon me --- But when I am told you went out in the utmost Hurry with some Writings to a Lawyer, and took the Doctor's own Servant with you, ev'n in the very Hour your Father had propos'd him, as your Husband ! ---- Good Heaven ! what am I to think ? Can I, must I suppose my Senses fail me ? If I have Eyes, have Ears, and have a Heart, must it be still a Crime to think I see, and hear ---- Yet by my Torments feel I love.

Mar. [Aside.] Well ! I own it looks ill-natur'd now, not to shew him some Concern ---- but then this Jealousy ---- I must, and will get the better of.

Hear. Speak Maria, is still my Jealousy a Crime ?

Mar. If you still insist on it, as a Proof of Love, then I must tell you, Sir, 'tis of that kind, that only slighted Hearts are pleas'd with ; when I am so reduc'd, then I perhaps may bear it --- The Fact you charge me with I grant is true, I have been Abroad, as you say : But still let Appearances appearances look ne'er so pointing, while there is a Possibility in Nature, that what I have done may be innocent, I won't bear a Look, that tells me to my Face you dare suspect me : If you have Doubts, why don't you satisfy them before you see me ? Can you suppose, that I'm to stand confounded, as a Criminal before you ? How despicable a Figure must a Woman make, to bear but such a Moment ? Come, come, there's nothing shews so low a Mind, as these grave, and insolent Jealousies. The Man, that's capable of ever seeing a Woman, after he believes her false, is capable on her Submission, and a little Flattery, were she really false, poorly to forgive and bear it.

Hear. You won't find me, Madam, of so low a Spirit ; but since I see your Tyranny arises from your mean Opinion of me, 'tis Time to be my self, and disavow your Power, you use it now beyond my bearing ; not only impose on me to disbelieve my Senses, but do it with such an imperious Air, as if my Honest, manly Reason were your Slave, and this poor groveling Frame that follows you, durst shew no Signs of Life, but what you deign to give it.

Mar. Oh ! you are in the right ---- go on ---- suspect me still, believe the worst you can ---- 'tis all true ---- I don't justify my self ---- Why do you trouble me with your Complaints ? If you are Master of that manly Reason you have boasted, give me a manly Proof of it, at once resume your Liberty, despise me, go, go off in Triumph now, and let me see you scorn the Woman, whose vile, o'er-bearing Falseness, would insult your Senses.

Hear. O Heaven ! is this the End of all ? Are then those tender Protestations you have made me (for such I thought them) when with the softest kind Reluctance your rising Blushes gave me something more, than Hope ---- What all ---- O Maria ! All but come to this ?

Mar. [Aside] O Lud ! I am growing silly, if I hear on, I shall tell him every thing ; 'tis but another struggle, and I shall conquer it ---- So so you are not gone, I see.

Hear. Do you then wish me gone, Madam ?

Mar. Your manly Reason will direct you.

Hear. This is too much ---- my Heart can bear no more. O ! ---- what ? am I rooted here ! 'Tis but a Pang, and I am free for ever.

Enter Charles, with two Writings.

Mar. At last I am reliev'd ! Well, Mr. Charles, is it done ?

Charles. I did not stir from his Desk, Madam, till it was intirely finish'd, Mar. Where's the Original?

Charles. This is it, Madam.

Mar. Very well, that, you know you must keep, but come, we must lose no Time, we will examine this in the next Room. Now I feel for him. [Aside.

[Exit Maria, with Charles.

Hear. O Rage! Rage! this is not to be born ---- she's gone, she's lost, fordidly has sold her self to Fortune, and I must now forget her ---- Hold, if possible, let me cool a Moment ---- Interest! No, that could not tempt her ---- She knows I'm Master of a larger Fortune, than there her utmost Hopes can give her, that on her own Conditions she may be mine: --- But what's this secret Treaty then within! what's doing there! who can resolve that Riddle? --- And yet perhaps, like other Riddles, when 'tis explain'd, nothing may seem so easy: But why again, might she not trust me too with the Secret! That! that entangles all afresh, and sets me on the Rack of Jealousy.

Enter Colonel

Col. How now, Frank! what in a Rapture?

Hear. Prithee, pardon me, I am unfit to talk with you.

Col. What is Maria in her Airs again?

Hear. I know not what she is.

Col. Do you know where she is?

Hear. Retir'd this Moment to her Chamber, with the Doctor's Servant.

Col. Why thou art not jealous of the Doctor, I hope?

Hear. Perhaps she'll be less reserv'd to you, and tell you wherein I have mistaken her.

Col. Poor Frank, thou art a perfect Sir Martin in thy Amours, every Plot I lay upon my Sister's Inclination for thee, thou art sure to ruin by thy own unfortunate Conduct.

Hear. I own I have too little Temper, and too much real Passion for a modish Lover.

Col. Come, come, prithee be easy once more, I'll undertake for you, if you'll fetch a cool Turn in the Park upon Constitution Hill, in less than half an Hour, I'll come to you.

Hear. Dear Tom, thou art a Friend indeed! O I have a Thousand Things ---- but you shall find me there.

[Exit Heartly.

Col. Poor Frank! now has he been taking some honest Pains to make himself miserable.

Enter

Enter Maria, and Charles.

How now, Sister, what have you done to Heartly? The poor Fellow looks, as if he had kill'd your Parrot.

Mar. Pshah! you know him well enough, I have only been setting him a Love-Lesson, it a little puzzles him to get through it at first, but he'll know it all by to-morrow; you will be sure to be in the way, Mr. Charles?

Charles. Madam, you may depend upon me, I have my full Instructions. [Exit. Charles.]

Col. O ho! There's the Business then, and it seems Heartly was not to be trusted with it; ha! ha! and prithee what is this mighty Secret, that's transacting between Charles and you?

Mar. That's what he would have known indeed, but you must know, I don't think it proper to let you tell him neither, for all your sly manner of asking.

Col. O! pray take your own Time, dear Madam, I am not in haste to know, I can assure you, I came about another Affair, our Design upon the Doctor: Now while my Father takes his Nap after Dinner, would be the properest Time to put it in Execution: prithee go to my Lady, and persuade her to it this Moment.

Mar. Why won't you go with me?

Col. No, I'll place my self unknown to her in this Passage; for, should I tell her I design to over-hear him, she might be scrupulous.

Mar. That's true ---- but hold, on second Thoughts, you shall know part of this Affair between Charles and me; nay, I give you leave to tell it Heartly too, on some Conditions, 'tis true, I did design to have surpriz'd you, but now --- my Mind's alter'd, that's enough.

Col. Ay, for any Mortal's Satisfaction ---- but here comes my Lady.

Mar. Away then to your Post --- but let me see you, when this Affair is over.

Col. I'll be with you.

[Ex. Col.]

Enter Lady Woodvil.

Mar. Well, Madam, has your Ladyship consider'd my Brother's Proposal about the Doctor?

Lady W. I have Child, and am convinc'd it ought not to be delay'd a Moment: I have just sent to speak with him here --- Sir John too presses me to give him a Hearing upon your Account: but must I play a treacherous Part now, and instead of persuading you to the Doctor, ev'n persuade the Doctor against you.

Mar. Dear Madam, don't be so nice, if Wives were never to dissemble, what wou'd become of many wilful Husband's Happiness?

Lady W. Nay, that's true too.

Mar. I'd give the World now methinks, to see this solemn Interview; sure there can't be a more ridiculous Image, than unlawful Love peeping his sly Head out from under the Cloak of Sanctity! O! that I were in your Ladyship's Place, I would lead that dancing Blood of his such a profane Courant --- your wise Fellows make the rarest Fools too: But your Ladyship will make a Rogue of him, and that will do our Business at present.

Lady W. If he makes himself one, 'tis his own Fault.

Mar. Dear Madam, one Moments Truce with the Prude, I beg you, don't start at his first Declaration, but let him go on till he shews the very bottom of his ugly Heart.

Lady W. I'll warrant you, I'll give a good Account of him ---- here he comes.

Mar. Then I hope, Madam, you will give me Leave to be Commode. and steal off.

Lady W. Very well. [Ex. Maria, and Enter Doctor.]

Doct. I am told, Madam, you design me the Happiness of your Commands; I am proud you think me worthy of them in any sort.

Lady W. Please to sit, Sir.

Doct. Did not Sir John inform you too, that I had desir'd a private Conference with your Ladyship?

Lady W. He did, Sir.

Doct. 'Tis then by his Permission we are thus happily alone.

Lady W. True, and 'tis on that Account, I wanted to advise with you.

Doct. Well, but, dear Lady, ah! [sighing] you can't conceive the Joyousness I feel, in this so unexpected Interview, ah! ah! I have a Thousand friendly Things to say to you--- Ah! ah! and how stands your precious Health? Is your naughty Cold abated yet? I have scarce closed my Eyes these two Nights, with my Concern for you, and every watchful Interval has sent a Thousand Sighs and Prayers to Heaven for your Recovery.

Lady W. Your Charity was too far concern'd for me.

Doct. Ah! don't say so, don't say so --- you merit more, than mortal Man can do for you.

Lady

Lady W. Indeed, you over-rate me.

Doct. I speak it from my Soul ! indeed ! indeed ! indeed !
I do. [Presses her Hand.

Lady W. O dear ! you hurt my Hand, Sir.

Doct. Impute it to my Zeal, and want of Words to express my Heart ; ah ! I would not harm you for the World, no, bright Creature, 'tis the whole Business of my Soul to -----

Lady W. But to our Affair, Sir.

Doct. Ah ! thou heavenly Woman !

[Laying his Hand on her Knee.

Lady W. Your Hand need not be there, Sir.

Doct. Ah ! I was admiring the Softness of this Silk, Madam.

Lady W. Ay, but I am ticklish.

Doct. They are indeed come to a prodigious Perfection in this Manufacture ---- How wonderful is Humane Art ! ---- Here it disputes the Prize with Nature --- that all this soft, and gaudy Lustre, should be wrought from the poor Labours of a Worm ! [Stroking it.

Lady W. But our Business, Sir, is upon another Subject ; Sir John informs me, that he thinks himself under no Obligation to Mr. Heartly, and therefore resolves to give you Maria : Now pray be sincere, and let me know what your real Intentions are ?

Doct. Is it possible ! Can you, Divine Perfection, be still a Stranger to my real Thoughts ? Has no one Action of my Life inform'd you better ? Since I must plainly speak them then, Maria's but a Feint, a Blind to screen my real Thoughts from shrewd Suspicion's Eye, and shield your spotless Fame from worldly Censure. Could you then think 'twas for Maria's sake, your Balls, Assemblies, and your Toilet Visits have been restrain'd ? Would I have urged Sir John to make that Fence to inclose a Butterfly ? No, soft, and serious Excellence, your Virtues only were the Object of my Care, I could not bear to see the Gay, the Young, and the Inconstant daily basking in your diffusive Beams of Beauty, without a secret Grudge, I might say, Envy ev'n of such Insects Happiness.

Lady W. Well, Sir, I take all this, as I suppose you intended it, for my Good, my spiritual Welfare.

Doct. Indeed I meant you serious, cordial Service.

Lady W. I dare say you did, you are above the low and momentary Views of this World.

Doct. Ah! I should be so --- and yet, alas! I find this mortal Cloathing of my Soul is made like other Mens, of sensual Flesh and Blood, and has its Frailties.

Lady W. We all have those, but yours I know, are well corrected by your divine, and virtuous Contemplations.

Doct. And yet our Knowledge of Eternal Beauties, do not restrain us wholly from the love of all that's mortal -- Beauty here, 'tis true must die, but while it lives, 'twas given us to admire, to wake the sluggish Heart, and charm the sensible: At the first Sight of you, I felt unusual Transports in my Soul, and trembled at the Guilt that might ensue; but on Reflection found my Flame receiv'd a Sanction from your Goodness, and might be reconcil'd with Virtue; on this I chased my flandrous Fears, let in the harmless Passion at my Eyes, and gave up all my Heart to Love.

Col. [Behind.] Indeed! so warm Sir Roger, but I shall cool your Passion with a Witness. [Exit.]

Lady W. These gay Professions, Sir, shew more the Courtier than the Zealot; nor could I think a Mind so fortify'd as yours, could have been open to such vain Temptations.

Doct. What Bosom can be Proof 'gainst such Artillery of Love? I may resist, call all my Prayers, my Fastings, Tears and Penance to my Aid, but yet, alas! these have not made an Angel of me: I am still but Man, Virtue may strive, but Nature will be uppermost: Permit me then on this fair Shrine to pay my Vows, and offer up a Heart---

Lady W. Hold, Sir, you've said enough to put you in my Power, suppose I now should let my Husband, Sir, your Benefactor, know the Favour you design'd him. [She rises.]

Doct. You cannot be so cruel?

Lady W. Nor will, on one Condition.

Doct. Name it.

Lady W. That instantly you renounce all Claim and Title to Maria, and use your utmost Interest with Sir John to give her, with her full Fortune to Mr. Heartly: If you are wise, consider on't. [Sir John, and Col. behind.]

[The Doctor turning accidentally sees them.]

Doct. Ha! the Colonel there! his Father with him too! here may have been some Treachery; what's to be done?

[Aside.]

Col.

Col. Now, Sir, let your Eyes convince you.

Sir John. They do, that yours, Sir, have deceiv'd } you, all this I knew of. } Apart.

Col. How, Sir!

Sir John. Observe, and be convinc'd.

Doct. I have it.

[Mus'ing.]

Lady W. [To the Doctor.] Methinks this Business needs not, Sir, so long a Pause.

Doct. Madam, I cannot easily give up such honest Hopes.

Lady W. Honest!

Doct. Perhaps my Years are thought unequal to my Flame, but, Lady, those were found no strong Objection 'twixt Sir John and you; and can you blame me then for following so sure a Guide in the same youthful Path to Happiness.

Lady W. Is this your Resolution then?

Col. Will you let him go on, Sir?

Sir John. Yes, Sir, to confound your Slander. }
} Apart.

Col. Monstrous!

Doct. Can you suppose my Heart less capable of Love; than his? Is it for me to push the Blessing from me too? For tho' my Flame has been of long Duration, my conscious want of Merit kept it still conceal'd, till his good Nature brought it to this blest Occasion; and can you then, so authoriz'd, refuse your friendly Pity to my Sufferings? One Word from you compleats my Joy; in you, Madam, is my only Hope, my Fear, my Ease, my Pain, my Torment, or my Happiness; Maria! O! Maria!

Col. Confusion!

Sir John. [Coming forward with the Colonel.] Now, vile Detractor of all Virtue, is your outrageous Malice yet confounded? Did I not tell you too, he only made an Interest here to gain your Sister?

Col. His Devil has outreacht me.

[Aside.]

Sir John. Is this your rank Detection of his Treachery?

Doct. Sir John, I did not see you, Sir, I doubt you are come too soon, I have not yet prevail'd with her. [Aside to him.]

Sir John. Ah! good Man, be not concern'd; your Trouble shall be shorter for't, I'll force her to Compliance.

Lady W. What have you done --- your Impatience has ruin'd all.

}
} Apart

Col. I see it now too late.

Sir John. Now, Sir! will your base Prejudice of Party never be at rest? Am I to be still thought partial, blind, and obstinate to-favour so much injur'd Virtue; if thou art a Man not lost to

Conscience

Conscience, or to Honour, then like a Man repair this Wrong, confess the Rancour of thy vile Suspicion, and throw thee at his Feet for Pardon.

Doct. What mean you, Sir ?

Lady W. [Aside.] While he is in this Temper, he will not easily be undeceiv'd---I've yet an After-game to play, till when, 'tis best to leave him in his Error. [Ex. Lady Woodvil.]

Sir John. What ! mute ! defenceless ! hardned in thy Malice ?

Col. I scorn the Imputation, Sir, and with the same repeated Honesty avow (howe'er his Cunning may have chang'd Appearances) that you are still deceiv'd, that all I told you, Sir, was true, these Eyes, these Ears were Witnesses of his audacious Love, without the mention of my Sister's Name, directly, plainly, grossly tending to abuse the Honour of your Bed.

Sir John. Audacious Monster ! were not your own Senses Evidence against your frontless Accusation ? I see your Aim ; Wife, Children, Servants, all are bent against him, and think to weary me by groundless Clamours to discard him, but all shall not do, your Malice on your own vile Heads ; to me, it but the more endears him ; either submit, and ask his Pardon for this Wrong——

Doct. Good Sir !

Sir John. Or this Instant leave my Sight, my House, my Family for ever.

Doct. What means this Rashness, Sir ! on my Account it must not be, what would the World report of it ? I grant it possible he loves me not, but you must grant it too as possible he might mistake me ! it must be so——He is too much your Son to do his Enemy a wilful Injury : If he, I say, suppos'd my Converse with your Lady Criminal, to accuse me then, was but the Error of his Virtue, not his Baseness, you ought to love him, thank him for such watchful Care : Was it for him to see, as he believ'd, your Honour in so foul a danger, and stand concernless by ? The Law of Heaven, of Nature, and of Filial Duty, all oblig'd him to allarm your Vengeance, and detect the Villany.

Sir John. O Miracle of Charity !

Doct. Come, come, such Breaches must not be, betwixt so good a Son, and Father ; forget, forgive, embrace him, cherish him, and let me bless the Hour I was the Occasion of so sweet a Reconcilement.

Sir John. I cannot bear such Goodness ! O sink me not into the Earth with Shame—— Hear this, perverse, and Repro-

Reprobate! O! couldst thou wrong such more than mortal Virtue!

Col. Wrong him! the hardned Impudence of this painted Charity ———

Sir John. Peace, Monster ---.

Col. Is of a blacker, deeper Dye, than the great Devil himself in all his Triumphs over Innocence ever wore.

Sir John. O graceless Infidel!

Col. No, Sir, though I would hazard Life to save you from the Ruine he misleads you to; could die to reconcile my Duty to your Favour; yet on the Terms that Villain offers, 'tis Merit to refuse it; I glory in the Disgrace your Errors give me ---- But, Sir, I'll trouble you no more: To Day is his ---- to Morrow may be mine. [Exit. Col.

Doct. I did not think he had had so hard a Nature.

Sir John. O, my good Lord, your charitable Heart discovers not the Rancour that's in his: but what better can be hoped for, from a Wretch so swell'd with Spleen, and Rage of Party.

Doct. No, no, Sir, I am the Thorn that galls him; 'tis me, 'tis me he hates; he thinks I stand before him in your Favour; and 'tis not fit indeed I should do so; for fallen, as he is, he's still your Son, and I alas! an Alien, an Intruder here, and ought in Conscience to retire, and heal these hapless Breaches in your Family.

Sir John. What means your Lordship?

Doct. But I'll remove this Eye-sore ---- Here Charles! ----

[Enter Charles.

Sir John. For Goodness sake.

Doct. Bring me that Writing I gave you to lay up this Morning.

Charles. Now Fortune favour us. [Aside.] Exit Charles.

Sir John. Make haste, good Charles, it shall be sign'd this Moment.

Doct. Not for the World; 'twas not to that End I sent for it, but to refuse your kind Intentions; for with your Children's Curses, Sir, I dare not, must not take it.

Sir John. Nay good, my Lord, you carry it now too far;
my Daughter is not wrong'd by it, but if not obstinate, may still be happy; and for my wicked Son, shall he then
Heir my Lands, to propagate more miserable Schismatics?
No, let him depend on you, whom he has wrong'd; perhaps in Time, he may reflect upon his Father's Justice; be reconcil'd to your rewarded Virtues, and reform his fatal Errors.

Re-enter

Re-enter Charles with a Writing.

Doct. That would be indeed a Blessing.

Sir John. If Heaven should at last reclaim him, the Power to right him still is yours; in you I know he yet would find a fond forgiving Father.

Doct. The Imagination of so blest an Hour, softens me to a Tenderness I can't support.

Sir John. O the dear, good Man! come, come, let's in to execute this Deed.

Doct. Will you then force me to accept this Trust? For, call it what you will, with me, it shall never be more than such.

Sir John. Let that depend upon the Conduct of my Son.

Doct. Well, Sir, since yet it may prevent his Ruine, I consent.

*So sweet a Hope must all my Fears controul,
I take the Trust, as Guardian to his Soul.*

[Exeunt.]

The End of the Third ACT.

ACT.

A C T IV.

Maria and Charles.

Mar. YOU were a Witness then?

Charles. I saw it sign'd, seal'd, and deliver'd, Madam.

Mar. And all pass'd without the least Suspicion?

Charles. Sir John sign'd it with such Earnestness, and the Doctor receiv'd it with such a seeming Reluctance, that neither had the Curiosity to examine a Line of it.

Mar. Well, Mr. Charles, whether it succeeds to our Ends, or not, we have still the same Obligations to you: You saw with what a friendly Warmth my Brother heard your Story, and I don't in the least doubt his Success in your Affair at Court.

Charles. What I have done, my Duty bound me to: But pray, Madam, give me leave, without Offence, to ask you one innocent Question.

Mar. Freely, Sir.

Charles. Have you never suspected then, that in all this Affair I have had some secret, stronger Motive to it, than barely Duty?

Mar. Yes ---- but have you been in no Apprehensions I should discover that Motive? [Gravely.]

Charles. Pray, pardon me, I see already, I have gone too far.

Mar. Not at all, it loses you no Merit with me, nor is it in my Nature to use any one ill, that loves me, unless I lov'd that one again, then indeed, there might be Danger ---- Come, don't look grave, my Inclinations to another, shall not hinder me paying every One, what's due to their Merit, I shall therefore always think my self oblig'd to treat your Misfortunes and your Modesty with the utmost Tenderness.

Charles. By the dear, soft Ease you have given my Heart, I never hoped for more.

Mar. Then I'll give you a great deal more, and to shew my particular good Opinion of you, I'll do you a Favour, Mr. Charles, I never did any Man since I was born ---- I'll be sincere with you.

Charles. Is it then possible you can have lov'd another, to whom you never were sincere? Mar.

Mar. Alas ! you are but a Novice in the Passion --- Sincere-ty is a dangerous Virtue, and often surfeits what it ought to nourish ; therefore I take more Pains to make the Man I love believe I slight him, than (if possible) I would to convince you of my Esteem and Friendship.

Charles. Be but sincere in that, Madam, and I can't complain.

Mar. Nay, I'll give you a Proof of it, I'll shew you all the Good-nature you can desire ; you shall make what Love to me you please now ; but then I'll tell you the Consequence, I shall certainly be pleas'd with it, and that will flatter you, till I do you a Mischief. Now do you think me sincere ?

Charles. I scarce consider that, but I'm sure you are agreeable.

Mar. Why look you there now ! do you consider, that a Woman had as live be thought agreeable, as handsome ? And how can you suppose, from one of your Sense, that I am not pleas'd with being told so ?

Charles. Was ever Temper so enchanting ?

Mar. Or Vanity more venial ! I'm pleas'd with you:

[Smiling,

Charles. Distracting ! sure never was Despair administred with a Hand so gentle.

Mar. So ! now you have convinc'd me, I have a good Understanding too --- Why I shall certainly have the better Opinion of yours, for finding it out now.

Charles. Your good Opinion's what I aim at.

Mar. Ay, but the more I give it you, the better you'll think of me still ; and then I must think the better of you again, and then you the better of me upon that too ; and so at last I shall think seriously, and you'll begin to think ill of me. But I hope, Mr. Charles, your good Sense will prevent all this.

Charles. I see my Folly now, and blush at my Presumption : but yet to cure my weaning Heart, and reconcile me to my Doom, be yet sincere, and satisfy one sickly Longing of my Soul.

Mar. To my Power, command me.

Charles. O ! tell me then the Requisites I want, and what's the secret Charm that has prefer'd my Rival to your Heart.

Mar. Come then, be chearful, and I'll answer like a Friend. The Gentleness, and Modesty of your Temper, would make with mine but an unequal Mixture : with you you I shou'd be ungovernable, not know my self; your Compliance would undo me. I am by Nature Vain, Thoughtless, Wild, and Wilful; therefore ask a higher Spirit to controul and lead me. For whatever outward Airs I give my self, I am within convinc'd, a Woman makes a very wrong Figure in Happiness, that does not think Superiority best becomes her Husband.—But what's yet more, tho' I confess you have Qualities uncommon in your Sex, and such as ought to warm a Heart to love; yet here you come too late; Compassion's all within my Power: And I know you cannot but have seen, I am under Obligations, I need not explain to you.

Charles. I am satisfied—You treat me with so kind and gentle a Concern, that I must submit to it.

Mar. [Apart.] Well! when all's done, he's a pretty Fellow; and the first sure, that ever heard Reason against himself with so good an Understanding.

Enter a Servant with a Letter to Charles.

Serv. Sir, the Colonel order'd me to give this into your own Hands.

Mar. From my Brother?—Where is he?

Serv. I left him, Madam, at the Secretary's-Office with one Sir Charles Trueman, and Mr. Heartly. [Exit Serv.]

Charles. Ha! my Father! O! Heaven, 'tis his Hand too! Now I tremble!

Mar. Come, Sir, take heart; I dare say there's good News in't, and I should be glad to hear it—But no Ceremony; pray read to your self first.

Charles. Since you command me, Madam. [Reads to himself.]

Maria. [Apart.] Lord! how one may live, and learn! I could not have believ'd, that Modesty in a young Fellow could have been so amiable a Virtue: And though, I own, there is I know not what of dear Delight in indulging one's Vanity with them; yet, upon serious Reflection, we must confess, that Truth and Sincerity have a Thousand Charms beyond it. And I now find more Pleasure in my self-denying Endeavours to make this poor Creature easy, than ever I took in humbling the Airs and Assurance of a Man of Quality—I believe I had as good confess all this to Heartly, and ev'n make up the Buffle with him too—But then he will so teaze one for Instances of real Inclination—O Ged—I can't bear the Thought on't—And yet we must come together too—Well! Nature knows the way to be sure, and so I'll ev'n trust to her for't—Bless me! What's the Matter? you seem concern'd, Sir.

[To Charles wiping his Tears.
E Charles.

Charles. I am indeed, but 'tis with Joy! O! Madam! my Father's reconcil'd to me: This Letter is from him.

Mar. Pray let's hear.

Charles. [Reading.]

Dear Charles,

This Day, by Colonel Woodvil, I receiv'd the joyful News of your being yet alive, and well: Though that's but half my Comfort. He has assur'd me too, you have renounc'd those Principles, that made me think your Death my Happiness. The Services you have intended his Family, and may do the Government, in your just Detection of a Traytor that would ruin both, have been so well receiv'd at Court, and so generously represented there by the Colonel and Mr. Heartly, that they have obtain'd an Order for your Pardon; which I now stay the passing of, before I throw my Arms about you, that I may leave no Doubt or Fear behind to interrupt the Fulness of my Joy. I am inform'd, that in revealing your self to a certain fair Lady, you have let fall some Words, that shew you have an innocent, tho' hopeless Passion for her. Your Youth excuses what is past; but now consider how far you owe your Life to Mr. Heartly: I therefore charge you, on my Blessing, to give up every idle Thought of Love, that may interrupt his Happiness, or abate the Merit of what you've done to deserve the Pardon of your Sovereign, or of your affectionate forgiving Father,

Charles Trueman.

Mar. I am overjoy'd at your good Fortune.

Charles. You, Madam, are the Source of all—but I am now unfit to thank you. [Weeps.]

Mar. You owe me nothing, Sir; Success was all I hoped for.

Charles. Pray excuse me---It would be Rudeness to trouble you with the tender Thoughts this must give a Heart oblig'd like mine. [Exit Charles.]

Mar. Poor Creature! how full his honest Heart is? What early Vicissitudes of Fortune has he run through? Well! this was handsomely done of Heartly, considering what he had felt upon his Account, to be so concern'd for his Pardon.

Enter Lady Woodvil.

Lady W. Dear Maria, what will become of us? The Tyranny of this subtle Priest is insupportable: He has so fortified himself in Sir John's Opinion by this last Misconduct of your Brother, that I begin to lose my usual Power with him.

Mar.

Mar. Pray explain, Madam.

Lady W. In spite of all I cou'd urge, he is this Minute bringing the Doctor to make his Addresses to you.

Mar. I am glad on't : for the Beast must come like a Bear to the Stake, I'm sure: He knows I shall bait him.

Lady W. No, no, he presses it, to keep Sir John still blind to his wicked Design upon me----Therefore I came to give you notice, that you might be prepar'd to receive him.

Mar. I am oblig'd to your Ladyship: Our Meeting will be a tender Scene, no doubt on't.

Lady W. You have heard, I suppose, what an extravagant Settlement your Father has sign'd to.

Mar. Yes, Madam; but I am glad your Ladyship's like to be a Gainer by it, however: For when I marry, it will be without the Doctor's Consent, depend upon't.

Lady W. No, Child, I did not come into Sir John's Family with a Design to injure it, or make any one of it my Enemy: Whenever that Four Thousand Pound falls into my Hands, you'll find it as firmly yours, as if it had been given you, without that odious Condition.

Mar. Madam, I think my self as much oblig'd by this kind Intention, as the Performance: But if your Ladyship could yet find a way to prove this Hypocrite a private Villain to my Father, I am not without Hopes the Publick will soon have enough against him, to give a Turn to the Settlement.

Lady W. But suppose that fails, what will become of your poor Brother?

Mar. But, dear Madam, I cannot suppose this Fellow must not be hang'd at last; and then, you know, the same honest Hand that ties him up, releases the Settlement.

Lady W. Not absolutely, neither; for this very House is given him in present, which, tho' that were to be the End of him, would then be forfeited.

Mar. Why, then my Brother must ev'n petition the Government. There have been Presidents of the same Favour, Madam. If not, he must pay for his Blundering, and lay his next Plot deeper, I think.

Lady W. I am glad you are so chearful upon it, however; it looks as if you had something in Petto to depend upon. But here comes the Doctor.

Enter Sir John, with the Doctor.

Sir John. Daughter, since you have the Happiness to be thought Amiable in the Eye of this Good Man, I expect you give him an instant Opportunity to improve it into an Amity for Life.

Mar. I hope, Sir, I shall give him no Occasion to alter his Opinion of me.

Sir John. Why, that's well said; come, Sweet-heart, we'll use no Ceremony. [Exit Sir John, with Lady W.]

Maria and the Doctor stand some Time mute, in formal Civilities, and a conscious Contempt of each other.

Mar. Please to sit, Sir. ——— What can the ugly Cur say to me? He seems a little puzzled. This puts me in mind of the tender Interview between Lady Charlotte, and Lord Hardy in the Funeral. [Aside.]

Doct. Look you, fair Lady, not to make many Words, I am convinc'd, notwithstanding your good Father's Favour, I am not the Person you desire to be alone with, upon this Occasion.

Mar. Your Modesty----is pleas'd to be in the right, Sir.

Doct. Humh! if I don't flatter my self, you have always had a very ill Opinion of me.

Mar. A worse, Sir, of no Mortal breathing.

Doct. Humh! and it is likely, it may be immoveable.

Mar. No Rock so firm.

Doct. Humh! from these Premises then, I may reasonably conclude----you hate me heartily.

Mar. Most sincerely, Sir.

Doct. Well! there is, however, some Merit in speaking Truth; therefore to be as just on my side, I ought in Conscience to let you know, that I have as cordial a Contempt for you too.

Mar. O! fy! you flatter me. [Affecting a Blush.]

Doct. Indeed I don't; you wrong your own Imperfections to think so.

Mar. These Words from any Tongue but yours, might shock me; but coming from the only Man I hate----they charm me.

Doct. Admirable! there seems good Sense in this: Have you never observ'd, Madam, that sometimes the greatest Discords raise the most agreeable Harmony?

Mar. Yes. But what do you infer from thence?

Doct. That while we still preserve this Temper in our Hate, a mutual Benefit may rise from it.

Mar. O! never fear me, Sir; I shall not fly out; being convinc'd, that nothing gives so sharp a Point to one's Aversion, as good Breeding; as, on the contrary, ill Manners often hide a secret Inclination. Doct.

Doct. Most accurately distinguish'd---- Well, Madam, is there no Project you can think of now, to turn this mutual Aversion, as I said, into a mutual Benefit?

Mar. None, that I know of, unless we were to marry for our mutual Mortification.

Doct. What would you give then, to avoid marrying me?

Mar. My Life, with Joy, if Death alone cou'd shun you.

Doct. When you marry any other Person --- my Consent is necessary.

Mar. So I hear indeed----But pray, Doctor, tell me, how could your Modesty receive so insolent a Power, without putting my poor Father out of Countenance with your Blushes?

Doct. You over-rate my Prudence: I sought it not, but he would crowd it in among other Obligations: He is good-natur'd, and I could not shock him by a Refusal. Wou'd you have had me plainly told him, what a despicable Opinion I had of his Daughter?

Mar. Or rather, what a favourable one you had of his Wife, Sir?

Doct. Humh! you seem to lose your Temper.

Mar. Why do you suppose, the whole Family does not see it, except my Father?

Doct. If you will keep your Temper, I have something to propose to you.

Mar. Your Reproof is just; but I only rais'd my Voice, to let you know, I know you.

Doct. You might have spar'd your Pains, it being of no Consequence to my Proposal, what you think of me.

Mar. Not unlikely. Come, Sir, I am ready to receive it.

Doct. In one Word then----I take it for granted, that you would marry Mr. Heartly----Am I right?

Mar. Once in your Life, you are.

Doct. Nay, no Compliments; let us be plain---Would you marry him?

Mar. You are mighty nice, methinks---Well--I would.

Doct. Then I won't consent to it----Now, if you have any Proposal to make me----so----if not, our Amour's at an end; and we part as Civil Enemies, as if we had been married this Twelvemonth---Think of it.

Mar. (Aside.) O the mercenary Villain, he wants to have a Fellow-feeling, I find----What shall I do with him----bite him---pretend to comply, and make my Advantage of it---Well, Sir, I understand every thing but the Sum---if we agree upon that, it's a Bargain.

Doct. Half.

Mar. What, Two Thousand Pound for your Consent only?

Doct. Why, is not Two Thousand Pound worth Two Thousand Pound? Don't you actually get so much by it? Is not the half better than nothing? Come, come, say, I have us'd you like a Friend.

Mar. Nay, I think it's the only civil Thing you have done, since you came into the Family.

Doct. Do you then make your Advantage of it.

Mar. Why, as you say, Doct., 'tis better than nothing. But how is my Father to be brought into this?

Doct. Leave that to my Management.

Mar. What Security tho' do you expect for this Money?

Doct. O! when I deliver my Consent in Writing, Heartly shall lay it me down in Bank-Bills.

Mar. Well! on one Proviso, I'll undertake that too.

Doct. Name it.

Mar. Upon your immediately owning to my Father, that you are willing to give up your Interest to Mr. Heartly.

Doct. Humh! stay----I agree to it----you shall have Proof of it this Evening----But in the mean time, let me warn you too; Don't expect, after I have hinted what you desire to your Father, to make your Advantages now by betraying me to him. You know my Power there; if you do, I can easily give it a Counter-Turn: So discover what you please, I shall only pity you.

Mar. O! I shall not stand in my own Light; I know your Power, and your Conscience too well, dear Doct.

Doct. Nay, I dare depend upon your being true to your own Interest. Here comes your Father, I will break it to him immediately. You'll prepare Mr. Heartly in the mean time.

Mar. Without fail.

Doct. I am satisfied.

Enter Sir John.

Sir John. Well, Sir, is my Daughter prudent? Has she at last, a true and virtuous Sense of Happiness?

Doct. She understands me better than I hoped, Sir.

Mar. Well said Equivocation. [Aside.]

Doct. If you please, Sir John, we'll take a Turn in the Garden, I have something there to offer to you.

Sir John.

Sir John. With all my Heart, Sir,—— Maria.——
There's a Toy for thee—— Now thou art again my Daughter. [Gives her a Ring.
Come, Sir, I wait on you.

[Exeunt Sir John and Doctor.

Mar. What this Fellow's Original was, I know not; but by his Conscience and Cunning, he would make an admirable Jesuit——Here comes my Brother, and I hope with a good Account of him——Well! Brother, What Success?

Enter Colonel.

Col. All that my honest Heart could wish for——Substantial Affidavits! that will puzzle him to Answer; I have planted a Messenger at the next Door, who has a Warrant in his Pocket, when I give the Word, to take him.

Mar. Why should not you do it immediately, he's now in the Garden with my Father.

Col. No; our seizing him now for Treason, I am afraid won't convince my Father of his Villany: My Design is not only to get my Father out of his Hands, but to drive the pernicious Principles he has infill'd, out of my Father too.

Mar. That I doubt will be difficult.

Col. Not at all, if we can first prove him a private Villain to him. My Father's Honesty will soon reflect, and may receive as sudden a Turn as his Credulity.

Mar. That's true again; and I hope I am furnish'd with a new Occasion to begin the Alarm to him.

Col. Pray what is't?

Mar. Not to trouble you with Particulars; but in short, I have agreed with the Doctor, that Heartly shall give him
Two Thousand Pounds for his Consent; without which, you know, by my Father's late Settlement, Heartly and I can never come together.

Col. And does the Monster really insist upon't?

Mar. Not only that, but ev'n defies me to make an Advantage of the Discovery.

Col. One would think the Villain suspects his Footing in the Family is but short-liv'd, he is in such Haste to have his Pennyworths out on't. But prithee, Sister, What Secret's this, that you have yet behind in those Writings that Charles brought to you?

Mar. O! that's what I can't yet tell you,

Col. Why, pray?

Mar. Because, when you have done all you can, I am resolv'd to reserve some Merit against him to my self.

Col. But why do you suppose I would not assist in it?

Mar. You can't, it's now too late.

Col. Pshaw! this is rash, and ridiculous.

Mar. Ay, may be so; I suppose Heartly will be of that Opinion too: But if he is, you had better advise him to keep it to himself.

Col. You will have your obstinate Way, I find.

Mar. It can't be worse than yours, I'm sure; remember how you came off in your last Project; I know you meant well, but you are disinherited for all that.

Col. That's no Surprise to me; but I am ashamed however.

Mar. By the way; What have you done with Heartly? why is he not here?

Col. He has been here, but you must excuse him; he was obliged to call in Haste for Charles, whom he took home with him in his own Coach, where his Father waited to receive him.

Mar. The poor Boy by this Time then has seen him. Sure their meeting must have been a moving Sight; I would give the World methinks for a true Account of it.

Col. You'll have it from Heartly by and by; 'tis at his House they meet: The Father, Sir Charles Trueman, hapned to be Heartly's intimate Acquaintance.

Mar. Well! I own Heartly has gained upon me by this.

Col. I am glad to hear that at least. But I must let my Lady know what Progress we have made in the Doctor's Business, and beg her Assistance to finish him, [Ex. Col.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. Madam, Mr. Heartly.

Mar. Desire him to walk in.

Enter Heartly.

Heartly. To find you thus alone, Madam, was an Happiness I did not expect from the Temper of our last parting.

Mar. I should have been as well pleas'd now to have been thank'd, as reproach'd for my good Nature; but you will be in the Right, I find.

Heartly.

Hear. Indeed you took me wrong; I literally meant, that I was afraid you would not so soon think I had deserv'd this Favour.

Mar. Well, then, one of us has been in the Wrong at least.

Hear. 'Twas I, I own it——More is not in my Power; all the Amends that have been, I have made you: My very Joy of seeing you, has waited, till what you had at Heart unask'd, was perfected; my own Pardon was postpon'd, till I had secur'd one ev'n for a Rival's Life, whom you so justly had compassionated.

Mar. Pooh! but why would you say unask'd now? Don't you consider your doing it so, is half the Merit of the Action?——Lord! you have no Art; you should have left me to have taken Notice of that; only imagine now, how kind, and handsome an Acknowledgment you have robb'd me of?

Heart. And yet how artfully you have paid it? With what a wanton, charming Ease you play upon my Tenderness?

Mar. Well, but was not you silly now?

Hear. (Gazing on her) Come——You shall not be serious——You can't be more agreeable.

Mar. O! but I am serious.

Hear. Then I'll be so——Do you forgive me all?

Mar. What. [Looking on her Fan, as not hearing him.]

Hear. Are we Friends, Maria?

Mar. O Lord! but you have told me nothing of poor Charles; Pray how did his Father receive him?

Hear. Must you needs know that, before you answer me?

Mar. Lord! you are never well till you have talk'd one out of Countenances.

Hear. Come, I won't be too particular, you shall answer nothing——Give me but your Hand only.

Mar. Pshah! I won't pull off my Glove, not I.

Hear. I'll take it as it is then,

Mar. Lord! there, there, eat it, eat it.

[Putting it awkwardly to him.]

Hear. And so I could by Heav'n.

[Kisses it eagerly, and pulls off her Glove.]

Mar. O my Glove! my Glove! my Glove!——Pooh! you are in a perfect Storm! Lord! if you make such a Rout with ones Hand only, What would you do if you had ones Heart?

Hear

Hear. That's impossible to tell—But you were asking me of Charles, Madam.

Mar. O! ay, that's true! Well, now you are good again—Come tell me all that Affair, and then you shall see—how I will like you. [Wantonly.]

Hear. O! that I could thus play with Inclination!

Mar. Pshah! but you don't tell me now.

Hear. There is not much to tell—Where two such tender Passions met, Words had but faintly spoke them. The Son conducted to the Door, with sudden Fear stopt short, and bursting into Sighs, o'er-charg'd with Shame, and Joy, had almost fainted in my Arms: The Father, touch'd with his Concern, mov'd forward with a kindly Smile to meet him. At this he took new Life, and springing from his Hold, fell prostrate at his Feet; where mute, and trembling, for a while he lay: At length with streaming Eyes, and faltering Tongue, he begg'd his Blessing, and his Pardon. The tender Father caught him in his Arms, and dropping his fond Head upon his Cheek, kiss'd him, and sigh'd out, Heaven protect thee! then gave into his Hand the Royal Pardon; and turning back his Face to dry his Manly Eyes, he cry'd, Deserve this Royal Mercy, Charles, and I am still thy Father. The grateful Youth, raising his Heart-swollen Voice, reply'd, May Heaven preserve the Royal Life that gave it. But here, their Passions grew too strong for farther Speech: Silent Embraces, alternate Sighs, and mingling Tears, were all their Language now. The moving Scene became too tender for my Eyes, and call'd methought, for Privacy; there unperceiv'd I left them, to recover into breathing Sense, and utterable Joy.

Mar. Well! of all the inmost Transports of the Soul, there's none that dance into the Heart, like Friendly Reconcilements.

Hear. Those Transports might be ours, Maria, would you but try your Power to pardon.

Mar. Which of those Two now do you think was happiest at that Meeting?

Hear. O! the Father, doubtless; Great Souls feel a kind of honest Glory in Forgiving, that far exceeds the Transport of receiving Pardon.

Mar. Now I think to bend the stubborn Mind to ask it, is an equal Conquest; and the Joy superior to receive, where the Heart wishes to be under Obligations.

Hear. Put me into the happy Boy's Condition, and I may then, perhaps, resolve you better. Mar.

Mar. You shall positively bring him into Acquaintance,

Hear. Upon my Word I will.

Mar. And shew him to all the Women of Taste; and I'll have you call him my pretty Fellow too.

Hear. I will indeed: But hear me ---.

Mar. I'm positive, if he had White Stockings he would cut down all the Dangers at Court in a Fortnight!

Hear. O! no doubt on't; but ---

Mar. You can't conceive how prettily he makes Love now.

Hear. Not so well, as you make your Defence, Maria.

Mar. O Lord! I had forgot --- he's to teach me Greek too.

Hear. O, the trifling Tyrant! How long, Maria, do you think you can find out new Evasions for what I say unto you?

Mar. Lord, you are horrid silly! But since 'tis Love that makes you such a Dunce --- poor Heartly, --- I forgive you.

Hear. That's kind, however --- But to compleat my Joy, be kinder yet --- and ---

Mar. O! I can't, I can't --- Lord! did you never ride a Horse-Match?

Hear. Was ever so wild a Question?

Mar. Because if you have, it runs in my Head, you certainly gallop'd a Mile beyond the Winning Post to make sure on't.

Hear. Now I understand you: But since you will have me touch every Thing so very tenderly, Maria, How shall I find proper Words to ask you the Lover's last necessary Question?

Mar. O! there's a Thousand Points to be adjusted, before that's answer'd.

Col. (Coming unexpectedly between them.) Name them this Moment then, for positively this is the last Time of asking.

Mar. Pshah! Who sent for you?

Col. I only came to teach you to speak plain English, my Dear.

Mar. Lord! mind your own Business, can't you?

Col. So I will; for I will make you do more of yours in Two Minutes, than you would have done without me in a Twelvemonth. Why, how now! What! do you think the Man's to dangle after your ridiculous Airs for ever?

Mar. This is mighty pretty.

Col.

Col. You'll say so on Thursday Sevenight, (for let Affairs take what Turn they will in the Family); that's positively your Wedding-Day — Nay, you sha'n't stir.

Mar. Was ever such Assurance?

Hear. Upon my Life, Madam, I am out of Countenance: I don't know how to behave my self to him.

Mar. No, no, let him go on, only — This is beyond whatever was known, sure!

Hear. Admirable! I hope it will come to something.

[Aside.

Col. Ha! ha! If I were to leave you to your selves now, what a Couple of pretty out-of-Countenance Figures you would make; Humming and Hawing upon the vulgar Points of Jointure, and Pin-Money — Come, come! I know what's proper o'both Sides, you shall leave it to me.

Hear. I had rather Maria would name her own Terms to me.

Col. Have you a Mind to any Thing particular? [To Maria.

Mar. Why sure! What! Do you think I'm only to be fill'd out here as you please, and sweetned, and suppd up like a Dish of Bohea?

Col. Why, pray Madam, when your Tea's ready, what have you to do but to drink it? But you, I suppose, expect a Lover's Heart, like your Lamp, should be always flaming at your Elbow, and when it's ready to go out, you indolently supply it with the Spirit of Contradiction.

Mar. And so you suppose, that your Assurance has made an End of this Matter?

Col. Not till you have given him your Hand upon it.

Mar. That then would compleat it?

Col. Perfectly.

Mar. Why then take it, Heartly. [Giving her Hand to Heart.

Hear. O soft Surprize! Exsttick Joy.

Mar. Now I presume you are in high Triumph, Sir. (To the Col.)

Col. No, Sister, now you are consistent with that good Sense I always thought you Mistress of.

Mar. I'm afraid, Mr. Heartly, we are both oblig'd to him.

Hear. If you think so, Maria, my Heart —

Is under double Obligations laid. (Embracing him.)

Col. — If it cements our Friendship, I am overpaid.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

Heartly, and Maria.

Mar. WELL, now, Heartly, you have nothing to do but to look forward, and, if possible, to forget what I have been to you: Though 'tis a horrid Restraint you lay upon our Sex: You first make it the Business of your Lives to blow up our Vanity, and then preposterously expect we should be prudent and humble: That is, you invite us to a Feast, where 'tis criminal to taste, or have an Appetite; You put a Sword into a Child's Hand, and then are angry if it does Mischeif.

Hear. You give up too much, Maria; I never treated you so: What might have been Flattery to most Women, was but honest Truth to you.

Mar. Why look you there now! Is not that enough to turn any poor Woman into a Changeling?

Hear. No, because 'tis true; charge me with a Falshood and I submit.

Mar. Nay then, did you not once tell me, that all my Airs and Follies were merely put on in Compliance to the World, and that good Sense was only natural to me; that ev'n my Affectation (I have not forgot your Words) carried more Sincerity, than the serious Vows of other Women.

Hear. By all my Happiness I think so still.

Mar. What, seriously?

Hear. Upon my Soul I do.

Mar. Lord! that's delightful! Do you really love me then, Heartly? Do, tell me, for now I begin to believe every Thing you say to me. But don't neither — I am vain still — 'Twas my Vanity that made me ask you.

Hear. Now I don't take it so.

Mar. There was some in't I am sure, tho' it begins to dwindle, I can tell you.

Hear. No matter, I love you as you are, I would not have you lose your Pleasantry, Maria.

Maria. Well, do, let me be silly sometimes.

Hear. O! I can play with you, for that Matter.

Mar.

Mar. Pshaw ! you'll laugh at me.

Hear. Not while you are good in Essentials.

Mar. Indeed I'll be very good.

Hear. O fy ! that will be the way to make me so.

Mar. Lord ! What signifies Sense, where there is so much Pleasure in Folly ?

Hear. No perfect Passion ever was without it ; the Pleasure would subside were we always to be wise in it.

Mar. For my Part I think so : But will you really stand to the Agreement tho' that I have made with the Doctor ?

Hear. Why not ? You shall not break your Word upon my Account, tho' he might be a Villain you gave it to.

Mar. Well, I take it as a Compliment ; not but I have some Hopes of getting over it, and justly too ; but don't let me tell you now. I love to surprize --- Tho' you shall know all, if you desire it.

Hear. No, Maria, I don't want the Secret ; I am satisfied in your Inclination to trust me.

Mar. Well then, I'll keep the Secret, only to shew you, that you upon Occasion may trust me with one.

Hear. After that, Maria, it would be wronging you to ask it : But pray, Madam, has the Doctor yet given you any Proof of his having declin'd his Interest to your Father ?

Mar. Yes, he told me just now, he had brought him to pause upon it, and does not question in Two Days to compleat it ; but desires in the mean Time you will be ready and punctual with the Premium.

Hear. Suppose I should talk with Sir John my self ; 'tis true he has slighted me of late, but however, I ought at least to ask his Consent, though I have but little Hopes of it.

Mar. By all Means, do so --- Here he comes --- This may open another Scene of Action too, that we are preparing for.

Enter Sir John, and Lady Woodvil, who walks apart with Maria.

Sir John. Mr. Heartly, I am glad I have met with you here.

Hear. I have endeavour'd twice to Day, Sir, to pay my Respects to you.

Sir John. Sir, I'll be plain with you --- I went out to avoid you ; but where the Welfare of a Child is concern'd, you

you must not take it ill, if we don't stand upon Ceremony. --- However, since I have Reason now to be more in Temper, than perhaps I was, at that Time, I should be glad to talk with you.

Hear. I take it as a Favour, Sir.

Sir John. Sir, --- Doctor Wolf informs me, that he is well assured you were born the Year before the Revolution : Now Sir, I should be glad to be well satisfied in that Point ; a greater Consequence depending on it, perhaps, than you imagine.

Hear. Sir, I have been always told that was my Age ; but for your farther Satisfaction I appeal to the Register.

Sir Jo. Sir, I dare believe you, and am glad to hear it.

Hear. But pray, Sir, may I beg leave to ask, why you are so concerned to know this ?

Sir Jo. Because, Sir, if this be true, I am satisfied you may be a regular Christian ; the Doubt of which, may have, perhaps, done you some Disservice in my private Opinion.

Hear. Sir, if that can reconcile me to it, I shall be thankful for the Benefit, without considering why I that way came to deserve it.

Sir Jo. That Argument might hold us now too long. --- But, Sir, --- here's the Case --- your Principles and mine have the Misfortune to differ : Yours being (as I take it) entirely on the Revolution Side.

Hear. If I am not misinform'd, Sir, you your self commanded a Regiment in Defence of it.

Sir John. I did so, and thought it just. --- 'T would be fruitless, perhaps, to offer you the Reasons, that since have alter'd my Opinion : But now, Sir, even supposing that I err in Principle, you must still allow, that Conscience is the Rule that every honest Man ought to walk by.

Hear. 'Tis granted, Sir.

Sir John. Then give me leave to tell you, Sir, that giving you my Daughter, would be to act against that Conscience I pretend to, and consequently the same Ties oblige me to bestow her, where the same Principles with mine, I think deserve her. --- Now, Sir, consult your own Honour, and tell me, how you can still pursue my Daughter, without doing Violence to mine ?

Hear. But, Sir, to shorten this Dispute, suppose the Doctor (whom I presume you design her for) actually consents to give me up his Interest ; might not that soften your Objections to me ?

Sir

Sir John. But why do you suppose, Sir, he would give up his Interest?

Hear. I only judge from what your Daughter tells me, Sir.

Sir John. My Daughter!

Hear. I appeal to her.

Mar. And I appeal ev'n to your self, Sir ——— Has not the Doctor just now in the Garden spoke in Favour of Mr. Heartly to you? Nay, pray, Sir, be plain, because more depends on that, than you can easily imagine or believe.

Sir John. What senseless Insinuation have you got in your Head now?

Mar. Be so kind, Sir, first to answer me, that I may be better able to inform you.

Sir John. Well, I own he has declined his Interest, in Favour of Mr. Heartly: But I must tell you, Madam, he did it in so modest, so friendly, so good-natur'd, so conscientious a Manner, that I now think my self more than ever bound in Honour to espouse him.

Mar. But now, Sir, (only for Arguments Sake) suppose I could prove, that all this seeming Virtue was utterly Artificial; that his Regard to Mr. Heartly was neither founded upon Modesty, Friendship, Good-Nature, nor Conscience; or in short, that he has basely betray'd and sold the Trust you made him; like a Villain barter'd, bargain'd to give me to Mr. Heartly, for half the Four Thousand Pound you have valued his Consent at. I say, suppose this were the Case, where would be his Virtue then, Sir?

Sir John. And I say 'tis impious to suppose it.

Hear. Under Favour, Sir, how is it possible your Daughter could know the Doctor had spoke to you upon this Head, if he himself had not told her so, in Consequence of his Agreement?

Sir John. Sir, I don't admit your Consequence: Her knowing it from him is no Proof, that he might not still resign her from a Principle of Modesty or Good Nature.

Mar. Then, Sir, from what Principle must you suppose that I accuse him?

Sir John. From an obstinate Prejudice to all that's Good and Virtuous.

Mar. That's too hard, Sir. What Blot has stain'd my Life, that you can think so of me. But, Sir, the worst your Opinion can provoke me to, is to marry Mr. Heartly, without either his Consent or yours.

Sir John. What, do you brave me, Madam?

Hear.

Mar. [in Tears] No Sir, but I Scorn a Lye, and will so far vindicate my Integrity, as to insist on your believing me, if not, as a Child whom you abandon, I have a right to throw my self into other Arms for Protection.

Hear. O Maria! how thy Spirit Charms me! [apart to her.]

Sir John. I am Confounded! those Tears cannot be Counterfeit, nor can this be True.

Lady W. Indeed, my Dear, I fear it is, it would be Cruel to her Concern to think it wholly false, can you suppose she'd urge so gross an Accusation only to expose her self to the Justice of your Resentment?

Sir John. What are you against him too? then he has no Friend but me, and I cannot, at so short a warning, give him up to Infamy, and Baseness.

Lady W. Good Sir, be Compos'd, and ask your Heart one farther Question:

Sir John. What would you say to me?

Lady W. In all our Mutual Course of Happiness, have I ever yet deceiv'd you with a falsehood?

Sir John. Never, I grant it, nor has my Honest Heart yet Wrong'd thy Goodness with a Jealous Thought of it.

Lady W. Would you then believe me, should I accuse him too? even of Crimes, that Vertue Blushes but to mention.

Sir John. To what Extravagance would you drive me?

Lady W. I would before have undeceiv'd you, when his late Artifice turn'd the Honest Duty of your Son, into his own Reproach, and Ruine: But knowing then your Temper was inaccessible, I durst not offer it. But now, in better Hope of being believ'd, I here avow the Truth of all he was accus'd of then.

Sir John. Will you Distract me? my Senses could not be deceiv'd.

Lady W. Indeed, they were, he saw you listning, and at the Instant turn'd his Impious Barefac'd Love to me, into Equivocal Intercessions pretending to Maria.

Sir John. You Startle me.

Lady W. Could you otherwise suppose, your Son would have brought you to be Witness of his own Weak Malice in Accusing him?

Sir John. I'm all Astonishment!

Lady W. Come, Sir, Suspend your Wonder, Respite your Belief ev'n of this, till grosser Evidence convinces you: Suppose I here, before your Face, should let you see his Villany; make him repeat his Odious Love to me, at once throw off his Mask, and shew the Barefac'd Traytor.

Sir John. Is it possible? Make me but Witness of that Fact, and I shall soon Accuse my self, and own my Folly equal to his Baseness: But Pardon me, as I in such a Case would not believe, ev'n him Accusing you, so am I bound in equal Charity to think, you yet may be deceiv'd, in what you Charge on him.

Lady W. 'Tis Just — let it be so — we'll yet suppose him Innocent, till you your self pronounce him Guilty: and since I have stak'd my Faith upon the Truth of what I urge, 'tis fit we bring him to immediate Tryal: But then Sir, I must beg you to descend ev'n to the poor Shifts we are Reduc'd to.

Sir John. All, to any thing to ease me of my Doubts, propose them.

Lady W. They that would set Toils for Beasts of Prey, must lurk in humble Caves to watch their Haunts.

Sir John. Place me where you please.

Lady W. Under this Table is your only Stand, the Carpet will conceal you.

Sir John. Be it so, I'll take my Post, what more?

Lady W. Mr. Hearily, shall we beg your Leave, and you Maria, take the least suspected way to send the Doctor to me immediately.

Mar. I have a Thought will do it, Madam, — come Sir,
[Exit Mar. and Hear.]

Lady W. Here Sir, take this Cushion, you will be Easier, Sir John goes under the Table.] Now Sir, you must consider how desperate a Disease I have undertaken to Cure, therefore you must not winch nor stir too soon, at any freedom you Observe me take with him; be sure lie Close and Still, and when the Proof is full, appear at your Discretion.

Sir John. Fear not, I'll be Patient.

Lady W. Hush! he comes.

Enter Doctor with a Book.

Doct. Your Woman told me, Madam, you were here alone, and desir'd to speak with me.

Lady W. I did Sir, but that we may be sure we are alone, pray shut the Outward Door, and see that Passage too be Clear, another Surprize might Ruine us — is all safe?

Doct. I have taken care Madam.

Lady W. I am afraid I interrupt your Meditations.

Doct. Say rather you improve them: You, Madam, were the subject of my solitary Thoughts, I take in all the little aids I can to Guard my Frailty, and truly I have receiv'd great great Consolation from an Unfortunate Example here before me.

Lady W. Pray of what kind Sir?

Doct. I had just dipt into poor Eloisas Passion for Abelard; It is indeed a piteous Conflict! How Terrible! How Penitent a Sense she shews of Guilty Pleasures past, and fruitless Pains to shut them from her Memory.

Lady W. I have read her Story Sir.

Doct. Is it not Pitiful?

Lady W. A Heart of Stone might feel for her.

Doct. O! think then, what I endure for you, such are my Pains; but such is my Sincerity, tho' I fear my being reduc'd to feign a Passion for Maria, in my late Surprize, has done dishonour to the Vows I then prefer'd to You.

Lady W. 'Twas on that Point, I wanted now to talk with you, not knowing then, how far you might mistake my Silence: Now had I clos'd with the Colonel in Accusing You, it would have been plain I was your Enemy; as had I join'd in your Defence against him, it had been as grossly evident I was his; but since I have Uses for his Friendship, and, as I saw your Credit with Sir John needed no support, I hope you'll think betwixt the two Extremes I have acted but a Prudent Part.

Doct. Let me presume to hope then, what I did, you Judge was Self-Defence, and pure Necessity.

Lady W. 'Twas wonderful! Surprizing to perfection! The Wit of it — but I won't tell you, what effect it had upon me.

Doct. Why, Madam? let me beseech you.

Lady W. No, 'twas nothing — beside — what need you ask me?

Doct. Why do you thus decoy my foolish Heart, and feed it, with such Hybla drops of Flattery? You cannot sure think Kindly of me.

Lady W. O well feign'd Fear! You too, I find can flatter in your Turn: You know how well the subtle force of Modesty prevails. O Men! Men! Men!

Doct. 'Twere Arrogance to think I have deserv'd this Goodness: but treat me as you please, I'll be at least sincere to you, and frankly own, I still suspect, that all this softning Favour is but Artifice.

Lady W. Well! well! I'd have you think so.

Doct. What Transport would it give, to be assur'd I wrong you! but O! I fear this Shaddow of Compliance is only meant to lure me from Maria, and then as fond Ixions were of old, to fill my Arms with Air.

Lady W. Methinks this Doubt of me, seems rather founded on your second Thoughts of not resigning Her; 'tis she, I find, is your substantial Happiness.

Doct. O that you could but fear I thought so! how easy 'twere to prove my Coldness, or my Love.

Lady W. O Sir, you have convinc'd me Now of Both.

Doct. Can all this pretty Anger then be real? take heed, fair Creature, it flatters more, than Kindness.

Lady W. I can assure you Sir, I should have spar'd you this trouble, had I known how deeply you were engag'd to her.

Doct. Nay then I must believe you; but indeed you wrong me, to prove my Innocence, 'tis not an Hour since I press'd Sir John to give Maria to Young Heartly.

Lady W. O! all Artifice! you knew that modest resignation, would make Sir John but warmer in your Interest.

Doct. Since you will rip the secret from my Heart — know then, I actually have Sold her, like a Bawble, to her Childish Lover, for two thousand times her Value.

Lady W. Are you serious?

Doct. As this is true, or false, may I in you be Blest, or Miserable.

Lady W. But how can you suppose Sir John will ever hear of it.

Doct. Alas! poor Man! he knows not his own Weakness, he's molded into any shape, if you but gently stroke his Humour: I dare depend on his Consent — beside, I intend to Morrow to perswade him 'tis for the Interest of our Cause it should be so, and then I have him sure.

Lady W. Fy! how is that possible? he can't be so implicitly Credulous, You don't take him sure for a Roman Catholic.

Doct. Um — not absolutely — But, poor Soul! he little thinks how near he is one. 'Tis true, name to him but Rome, or Popery, he Startles, as at a Monster: But Gild its grossest Doctrines with the Stile of English Catholic, he swallows down the Poison, like a Cordial.

Lady W. Nay, if he's so far within your Power, it cannot fail, He must consent: well Sir, now I give you leave to guess the Reason, why I too, at our last meeting, so warmly press'd you to resign Maria.

Doct. Is it possible? was I then so early your Concern?

Lady

Lady W. You cannot blame me sure, for having there oppos'd your Happiness.

Doct. I dye upon the Transport. [taking her Hand.]

Lady W. Be sure you are secret now: your least Imprudence makes these, like Fairy favours vanish in a Moment.

Doct. How can you form so vain a Fear?

Lady W. Call it not vain, for let our Converse end in what it may, you still shall find, my Fame is Dear to me, as Life.

Doct. Where can it find so sure a guard? the grave Austerity of my Life will strike Suspicion Dumb, and yours may mock the Malice of Detraction: I am no Giddy, Loose-Liv'd Courtier, whose false professions end only in his Boast of Favours: No, fair spotless Miracle, the Mysteries of Love are only fit for Hearts Recluse, and Elevate as mine: my Happiness, like yours, depending on my Secrecy.

Lady W. 'Tis you must answer for this Folly.

Doct. I take it whole upon my self, the guilt be only mine, but be our Transports Mutual — come lovely Creature, let us withdraw to privacy, where murmuring love shall hush thy Fears, and lose them in the Burning Joy.

[Sir John stepping softly behind him seizes him by the Throat.]

Sir John. Traitor!

Doct. Ah! (Astonish'd)

Sir John. Is this thy Sanctity? this thy Doctrine! these thy Meditations! If stung with my Abuses I now should Stab thee to the Heart, what Devil durst murmur 'twere not an Act of Justice? But since thy Vile Hypocrisy unmask'd, must make Mankind Abhor thee, be thy own shame, thy living Punishment.

Doct. Do! Triumph Sir — your Artifice has well succeeded — I see your Ends! you needed not so deep a Plot to part with me. [Trembling.]

Sir John. Suppress thy weak evasions — Ungrateful Wretch! Have I for this redeem'd thee from the Jaws of gaping Poverty, Fed, Cloath'd, Loved, Preferr'd thee to my Bosom, to my Family, and Fortune? Wife, Children, Friends, Servants, all that were not Friends to thee, accounted as my Enemies; nay more to Crown my Faith in thee, I have relied on thy Integrity ev'n for my Future Happiness: And how hast thou, in one short Day requited me? Taking the Advantage of my Blinded Passion, thou hast turn'd the Duty of my Son to his Undoing; Sordidly hast Sold the Trust I made thee of my Daughter, Attempted, like a Felonious Traytor, to seduce my Wife, and hast I fear, with Poisonous Doctrines too ensnar'd my Soul.

Lady W. Now Heav'n be prais'd his Heart seems Conscious of his Error. [aside.]

Sir John. But why do I reproach thee? had I not been the weakest of Mankind, thou never couldst have prov'd so great a Villain — whether Heaven intends all this to Punish, or to Save me, yet I know not; my Senses stagger at the view, and my Reflexion's lost in Wild Astonishment.

[He stands musing.]

Doct. This snare was worthy of you, Madam, 'tis you have made this Villain of me. [apart to Lady W.]

Lady W. You would have made me worse, but I have only shewn him what you were before.

Doct. I thank you.

Lady W. Thank your own Ingratitude, and Wickedness: but I must now pursue my Victory. [Exit Lady W.]

Doct. [Apert.] No. It ends not here. He was not brought to listen to this proof alone! There's something deeper yet design'd against me — I must be speedy — suppose I talk with Charles, allarm him with our Common Danger, Point out his Ruine as our only means of Safety, and like the Panther in the Toil provok'd, turn short with Vengeance on my Hunters!

Sir John. What! still within my Sight! of all my Follies, which is it tells thee, that I now shall keep my Temper.

Doct. [Turning boldly to him.] Whom do you menace, me Sir. Reflect upon your own condition first, and where you are.

Sir John. What would the Villain drive at! I prithee leave me, I cannot look on thee! thy overbearing Insolence confounds me: But since thy Wickedness has turn'd my Eyes upon my self, and to thy crimes detected, I hope to owe my future Innocence, as the sore Wound the Viper gives, the Viper best can Cure: For that one good may Heaven like me forgive thee: But seek thy Biding in some other place — out of my House, this Instant, Hence! be gon! and see my shameful Face no more.

Doct. Nay then, 'tis time to be my self, and let you know, that I am Master here, Turn you out Sir, this House is Mine; and now Sir, at your Peril dare to Insult me.

Sir John. O! Heaven! 'tis true, thou hast disarm'd my Justice, and turn'd its Sword into my own weak Bosom — I had forgot my Folly, 'tis fit it should be so, and Heaven is Just,

Just, at once to let me see my Crime, and Punishment — O my poor Injur'd Son! — Whither shall I fly to hide me from the World?

Enter Lady Woodvil.

Lady W. Whither are you going Sir?

Sir John. I know not — but here it seems I am a Trespasser — the Master of this House has warn'd me hence, and since the Right is now in him, 'tis Just I should resign it.

Lady W. You shall not stir: he dares not Act with such abandon'd Insolence, No Sir, Possession still is yours, if he pretends a Right, let him by open Course of Law maintain it.

Doct. Are these the shifts you are reduc'd to? no, Madam, I shall not wait so slow a Vengeance, you'll find I have a shorter way to Rout you. — here! Charles! [Exit Doctor.]

Sir John. Nay then there is an end of all — I have provok'd a Serpent — my Life, I see, must Pay the Forfeit of my Folly!

Lady W. Come Sir, take Heart! your Life, in spite of him, is Free, and I hope your Actions too: However, tell me freely, have you rashly done anything, for which the Law may Question you?

Sir John. I think, not strictly, 'tis true I have lately trust-ed him with Summs of Money, which he pretended, if accounted for, might Endanger both of us.

Lady W. O! the Subtle Villain! those Summs are Innocent, I dare answer for them: But is there nothing more?

Sir John. Not, that I can call to Mind, more Criminal.

Lady W. Pray tell the worst, that we may Arm against him.

Sir John. Sometimes with my own Hand, I have reliev'd the wants of Wretched Prisoners to the State.

Lady W. We have no Laws, that Frown on Acts of Charity, if that were Criminal, the Government it self is guilty.

Sir John. How far our private converse may affect me — That I know not. If Charles Betrays me not, I think his Malice cannot reach me.

Lady W. Then Sir, be easy, for he has lost his Influence there: Charles has long since perceiv'd his Villany, and grew from thence a secret Convert to the Cause of Truth, and Loyalty: of which he has given such Meritorious Proof, that Mr. Heartly, and your Son this very Day, Sir, have obtain'd his Pardon.

Sir John. You tell me Wonders! Pardon'd! and a Convert say you! how strongly are our Hearts persuaded by Example! what Darkness have I Wander'd in! How Amiable is such Royal Mercy! yet with what hardned Malice, has that Slave traduced it?

Enter Maria hastily.

Mar. O Sir! I am frighted out of my Senses! for Heavens sake be gon! Fly, this Moment, this Wicked Fellow has Designs upon your Life.

Lady W. How!

Sir John. What dost thou mean? explain.

Mar. As I was passing by the Hall, I heard him Earnest in Discourse with Charles, and upon their Naming you, I stopt a while to listen, where, I heard the Doctor Urge to him, that you were False at Heart, that from your late Frivolous pretence to break with him, he was convinc'd your Malice now would stop at nothing to undo him, that Charles himself was equally in Danger, and that to save your own Life, you certainly design'd to Sacrifice theirs to the Government, which there was no Possibility of preventing, but by their immediate joining in a Charge of Treason against You.

Lady W. O the Villain! 'tis well we are secure in Charles.

Sir John. If we are not, why be it, as it may — I will not stir — I'll stand upon my Innocence, or if that's Betray'd, will throw me on the Mercy of that Royal Breast, whose Vertues my Credulity has Injur'd.

Lady W. and Mar. Ah! [A Pistol is heard from within.]

Sir John. What means, that Pistol?

Lady W. Don't stir, I beg you Sir.

Mar. What Terrors has this Monster brought into our Family?

Lady W. What will it end in?

Sir John. How Wretched has my Folly made me?

Lady W. How now! what's the Matter?

Enter Betty.

Bet. O Dear Madam! I shall faint away, there's Murther doing.

Sir John. Who! where, what is it!

Bet. The Doctor Sir; and Mr. Charles, were at high Words just now in the Hall, and upon a suddain there was a Pistol Fir'd between them; Oh! I am afraid poor Mr. Charles is Kill'd.

Sir John. How!

Bet. Oh! here he comes himself Sir, he will tell you more.

Enter Heartly, Charles, and the Doctor held by Servants.

Hear.

Hear. Here bring in this Ruffian, this is Villany beyond Example.

Sir John. What means this Outrage?

Lady W. I Tremble.

Charles. Don't be alarm'd, Madam, there's no Mischief done, what was intended, the Doctor here can best inform you.

Doct. [to Heartly.] You Sir shall answer for this Insult? What am I held for? who's here, that dares assume a Right to Question me?

Hear. Keep your Temper, Sir, we'll Release you presently, but Sir John must first know the Bottom of his Obligations to you.

Sir John. Mr. Heartly, I am asham'd to look on you.

Doct. What Sir! shall my own Servant abuse me, brave me, lift his Hand against me, and I not dare to Punish him.

Hear. Your Servant Sir! we know him better.

Doct. Then Sir, I demand my Liberty, that the Government too may know him.

Charles. Yes, and let it too be known, you first seduc'd me to Rebel, and now would have me Expiate my Offence with Perjury.

Doct. How Sir?

Charles. Yes, Perjury! for such it must have been, should I have charg'd, as you'd have had me, this Gentleman with Treason: What Facts have I been Privy to, that reach that Name? The Worst I know of him, is, that all the Factious Falshoods you have rais'd against the best of Princes, he, blinded with your Hypocrisy, believ'd.

Doctor. 'Tis well Sir, you are protected now.

Charles. This, Sir, in short has been our Cause of Quarrel: The Doctor finding I receiv'd with Coldness his vile designs against your Life, began to offer menaces on mine, if I comply'd not; at which I smiling told him, the Disappointments of his Love had made him Desperate: This stung him into Rage, and fastning at my Throat, he answer'd Villain! you'll be Humbler, when you groan in Chains for this: Here indeed all Temper left me, when disengaging from his hold, with One Home Blow I fell'd him reeling to the Pavement; at this grown Desperate, he ran with Fury to some Pistols that hung above the Chimney, to Revenge him, I in the Instant as he reach'd one, seiz'd upon his Wrist, and as we grappled Sir, the Pistol firing to the Cieling, alarm'd the Family, when Mr. Heartly, and your Servants rush'd in to part us.

Sir John. Insatiate Villain! O my Shame!

Doct.

Doct. Well Sir! now you have heard this Mighty Charge! what have you more against me?

Hear. More Sir, I hope is needless, but if Sir John is yet unsatisfied —

Sir John. O! I have seen too much! every new instance of his Wickedness but adds afresh to my Confusion.

Lady W. Now Sir is your time }
Hear. I go this Minute, Madam. } apart.

Doct. I Value not your whisper'd menaces, for know to your Confusion, my Vengeance is not yet Defeated: You'll find Sir, that to Rebel, or to Conceal a Rebel, are in the Eye of Law both Equal Acts of Treason: That fact I'm sure is evident against you; There! there stands in Proof the striking Traytor you have Shelter'd! this Sir, your whole Family can Charge you with, and Swear it home they shall, or Load their Souls with Perjury: but then to dash your few remaining Days with Bitterness of Misery, Remember I, Sir, whom Mortally you hate, succeed the Instant Heir to your Possessions: Now farewell, and let Disgrace, and Beggary be your Childrens Portion.

As he is going out, the Collonel stops him.

Col. Hold, Sir, not so fast, you cannot pass.

Doct. Who, Sir, shall dare to stop me?

Col. Within there! March!

Enter a Messenger with a file of Musqueteers.

Mess. Is your Name Wolf Sir?

Doct. What if it be Sir!

Mess. Then Sir I have a Warrant against you for High Treason

Doct. Me Sir? [Startled.]

Mess. Do you know one Collonel Perth Sir?

Doct. Ha! then I am Betray'd indeed.

Hear. This Perth, it seems, Sir, has menag'd his Correspondence at Avignon, from whence he came last Night Express; but the Government having Immediate Notice of his Arrival, he was this Morning seiz'd, and Examind before the Council, where, among other Facts, he has confess'd he knew the Doctor actually in Arms at the first Rebellious rising in Northumberland, which has been since by other Witnesses confirm'd.

Col. And, Sir, to Convince you, that ev'n the Doctrine he has Broach'd could never flow from the pure Fountain of our Establish'd Faith: Here are Affidavits in my Hand, that prove him under his Disguise a lurking Emiffary of Rome, that that he is actually a Priest in Popish Orders, and has several times been seen, as such, to Officiate Publick Mass in the Church of Noſtre Dame at Antwerp.

Mar. Hear. and Lady W. How!

Sir John. I start with Horror, ev'n at the Danger I am freed from.

Col. And now, Sir, had not your Insatiate Villanys to this Family forc'd me to this close Inquiry into your Private Life, Perhaps you might have pass'd unquestion'd, among the Rout of Enemies, whom our Government Despises.

Doct. Well Sir! now then you know your worst of me: But know, what you call Criminal, may yet before your Triumph is secure, not only find its Pardon but Reward: I yet may Live, Sir, to retort your Insult, at least the Days that are allotted me, will want for no supports of Life, while this Conveyance calls me Master.

Sir John. There! there indeed he stings me to the Heart! for that rash Act reproach, and endless Shame will haunt me.

Mar. No Sir——be Comforted! for ev'n there too his abandon'd hope must leave him.

Sir John. Why dost thou torture me! did I not Sign that Deed!

Mar. Yes, Sir, but in that Deed you'll find, my Brother, Not that Traytor is your Heir: For know the fatal Deed, which you intended, Sir, to Sign is here ev'n yet unseal'd and Innocent.

Omnes. Ha! {The Doctor hastily opens the Deed to examine it, and all the Company seem surpriz'd.

Sir John. What means she?

Mar. I mean Sir, that this Deed, by accident falling into this Gentlemans Hands, his generous Concern for our Family discover'd it to me; when I reduc'd to this Extremitie, instantly procur'd that other to be drawn exactly like it, which in your Impatience, Sir, to execute, pass'd unsuspected for the Original: their only difference is, that, wherever here you read the Doctors Name, there you'll find my Brothers only, throughout, and wholly, Sir, in every Article investing him in all that Right, and Title, which you intended for your Mortal Enemy.

Doct. Distraction! Outwitted by a Brainless Girl.

[Throws down the Writing in Rage.]

All the Servants having attended to the Discovery, break out into Huzzahs of Joy, &c. while Sir John, the Col. Charles and Maria severally embrace: Heartly, and Lady Woodvil silently join in their Congratulations.

Doct.

Doct. I cannot bear their irksome Joy — come Sir, lead me where you please — a Dungeon would receive me now.

Col. Secure your Prisoner.

Ser. Huzzah! a Traytor! a Traytor!

[Exit Mess. Soldiers, Doctor, and Servants.]

Mar. Now Heartly, I hope I have made attonement for your Jealousy.

Hear. You have Banisht it for ever: This was beyond your self surprizing.

Col. Sister —

Mar. Come no set Speeches, If I deserve your Thanks, return them in a Friendship here. [Pointing to Charles.]

Col. The Business of my Life shall be to merit it.

Charles. And mine to speak my Sense of Obligations.

Sir John. O my Child! for this Deliverance, I only can reward thee here. [gives Maria to Heartly.]

For thee my Son, whose filial Virtues I have Injur'd; this Honest Deed in every Article shall be ratified: I see your Eyes are all upon me, expecting from that vile Traytors Practices, some Voluntary Instance of my Hearts Conversion: I must be Blind indeed, were I not now convinc'd He must in all things have alike deceiv'd me, as the Dial that mis-tels one Hour, of Consequence is false through the whole round of Day. Let it suffice, I see my Errors with a Conscious Shame; but hope, when I am justly Weigh'd, you'll find those Errors rose but from a Ductile Heart, not Disinclin'd to Truth, but fatally misled by false Appearances:

Col. Whoever knows your Private Life, must think you, Sir, in this Sincere:

Hear. And Now Sir, since I am sure, it will no more Offend you, give me leave to Observe, that of all the Arts our Enemies make use on to Embroil us, none seem so Audaciously Preposterous, as their Insisting, that a Nations best Security is the Word of a Prince, whose Religion Indulges him to give it, and at the same time Obliges him to break it: And tho' perhaps in lesser Points our Politick Disputes won't suddenly be ended, methinks there's one Principle, that all Partys might easily come into, that no Change of Government can give us a Blessing equal to our Liberty.

Grant us but this and then of Course you'll own,

To Guard that Freedom, GEORGE must fill the Throne.

F I N I S.

Epilogue. Spoken by Mrs. Oldfield.

HOW Wild, how Frantick is the vain Essay,
That Builds on Modern Politicks a Play!
Methinks to Write at all, is Bold enough,
But in a Play to stand a Faction Buff!
Not Rome's Old Stage presum'd, (or Fame's a Fibber.)
And Moderns to attempt it! well said CIBBER!
Was 't not enough the Criticks might pursue him!
But must he rouse a Party to undo him!
These Blows I told him on his Play would fall,
But he unmov'd, cry'd — Blood! we'll Stand it all,
When PRIESTS turn TRAYTORS where's the mighty matter?
Since when has Treason been exempt from Satyr?
And should from Guilt a Faction's Clamour Rise,
Such Spite must speak them Englands Enemies,
But if Old Englands Friends allow 'tis right,
Ware sure their Power can chace the Jacobite,
And put their Malice, like their Troops, to Flight.
As for the Criticks, Those, he owns, may Teize him,
Because he never took such Pains to please them,
In Time, Place, Action, Rules by which Old Wits
Made Plays, as — Dames do Puddings, by Receipts:
But hopes again ev'n Rebels cannot say,
Tho' Vanquish'd, they're Insulted in his Play:
Nay more — To set their Cause in fairest light,
H' has made a Man of Sense — A Jacobite!
(Tho' by our Bards good leave, (to take it right,
His Sense was shewn, when turn'd from Jacobite)
Thus too the Fair, that may be wrong Inclind,
He Hopes to CHARLES's Passion will be Kind,
And own, at worst, on their Reflecting Pillow,
The Rebel, after all's, a Pretty Fellow!
But why, you'll say, was I made HEARTLYS Wife?
Consider, Fair ones, HEARTLY sav'd his Life:
So that you see, the Boy han't quite Miscarried
Beside —
Are all those Dears so Happy you have Married?
How often, in that State, has Love seen Elves
So Cramm'd with Comfort, they could Hang themselves?
The Worst you can against his Satyr Plead,
Is that My Lord of THETFORD's Hang'd indeed:
If that seems hard, why Grant him your Reprieve,
And by an Act of Grace, let this NON-JUROR Live.

B O O K S Printed for Bernard Lintot.

W Iquefort's Embassador, Large Paper	1	15	0
———— Ditto Small Paper	1	5	0
Mr. Popes Homer; Vol. I. II. III. IV.	5	0	0
———— Ditto Small Paper	2	16	0
———— His Miscellaneous Works	1	5	0
———— Ditto, Small Paper	0	14	0
Mr. Serjeant Lutwyche's Reports, Vol. I. II.	2	18	0
Bobun of the Rights of Boroughs	0	12	0
Basneages Hist. of the Jews	1	5	0
Lawrence of Gardening	0	1	0
———— Part II.	0	2	0
Mr. Pointer's Chronological Hist. 2 Vols.	0	5	0
Continuation the 1 st . V. of King George	0	1	0
———— 2.	0	1	0
———— 3.	0	1	0
Poems by the Earl of Rochester and Lord Roscomon	0	3	6
Poems on several Occasions by Mr. Fenton	0	3	6
Poems by his Grace of Buckingham	0	3	6
Poems entituled Oxford and Camb. Misc.	0	5	0
Poems in 4 Vols. 8 ^o .	0	18	0
Poems by the Lady Chudleigh 3 ^d Edit.	0	2	0
Poems by the great Shakespear	0	3	0
Windfor Forest 2 Edit.	0	1	0
Essay on Criticism 5 Edit.	0	1	0
Rape of the Lock 5 Edit.	0	1	0
Temple of Fame 2 Edit.	0	1	0
Ode on St. Cecilia's Day	0	0	6
What d' ye call it, a Farce 2 Edit.	0	1	0
Art of Walking the Streets 2 Edit.	0	1	0
By Mr. Gay . { Three Hours after Marriage	0	1	0
Wife of Bath	0	1	0
Journey to Exeter	0	0	6
Plays by the Rt. Honble L ^d Lansdown	0	3	6
Plays by Sr. Richard Steel	0	3	0
Plays by Nich. Rowe , Esq; 2 Vol.	0	10	0
Plays by Mr Southern 2 Vol.	0	5	0
By N. Rowe . { The Tragedy of Jane Shore 3 Edit,	0	1	6
Esq; { The Lady Jane Gray 2 Edit,	0	1	6

Dennis's

Books Printed for Bernard Lintot.

Dennis's Remarks on Cato	0	1	0
——— Essay on Publick Spirit	0	0	6
——— On the Writings of Shakespeare	0	1	0
——— Grounds of Criticism	0	1	6
——— Liberty Asserted, a Tragedy	0	1	6
——— Appius and Virginia , a Tragedy	0	1	6
Dr. Kings Miscellanies	0	5	0
——— Art of Cookery 2 Edit.	0	1	6
——— Art of Love	0	3	6
——— Useful Transactions 3 Parts	0	3	0
——— Useful Miscellanies	0	0	6
La Motte's Remarks on Homer	0	1	0
Roman Catholick System of Allegiance	0	1	0
Geddes Tract against Popery	0	5	0
Homer by Mad. Dacier 5 Vol.	0	15	0
Horace 2 Vol, Eng. and Lat.	0	10	0
E. of Lauderdale's Virgil 2 Edit.	0	5	0
Q. Curtius Englished by Mr. Digby	0	5	0
C. Nepos Eng.	0	2	0
Trapps Prælectiones Poeticæ 2 Vol.	0	6	0
Drydens Art of Painting 2 Edit. with Additions	0	5	0
Art of getting Pretty Children 2 Edit.	0	1	6
C. Gabalis Diverting History	0	1	6
Mottos to the Tatler and Spectator	0	1	6
The invisible Mistrefs, by Mr. Cibber	0	1	0
Muscipula	0	0	6
Moliere's Comedys 6 Vols. Eng.	0	15	0
Theophrastus's Characters	0	4	0
Dr. King's Demy Gods 2 Edit	0	2	0
Du Pile of mixing Colours	0	0	6
Cymbalum Mundi	0	1	0
Lives of the Popes	0	5	0
Le Clercs Abridgment of Clarendon	0	2	0
Hist. of Formosa 2 Edit.	0	5	0
——— of Holland 2 Vols.	0	10	0
——— of Guinea	0	6	0
——— of Saracens , by Cockley 1 Vol.	0	5	0
——— Ditto 2 Vol.	0	5	0
Capt. Rogers Voyage to the South Sea 2 Edit.	0	5	0
Capt. Cooks Voyage to Ditto 2 Vols.	0	10	0
Perraults Lives 2 Vols.	0	5	0
Mrs. Phillips's Letters, viz. Orinda to Polyarchus	0	3	0
Dialogues of the Nature of the Gods	0	2	0
Kennedy of the Diseases of the Eyes	0	2	0
Johnsons Nouns and Verbs	0	1	0
——— Decerpta ex Ovidij Fastis	0	1	0
——— Ovids Metamorphosis	0	1	0
——— Piedrus	0	1	0
Modern Policy	0	0	6
			Monthly

Books Printed for Bernard Lintot.

Monthly Catalogues of Books Publish'd	0	0	3
Managers Pro and Con	0	0	6
Annotations on the Tatlers	0	2	0
Conduct of the Irish Purse	0	0	6
Monthly Amusements, each	0	1	0
Votes of Parliament 1714, 15, 16, 17
Report of the Secret Committee	0	3	6
General Stanhopes Answer to the Report of the Commissioners	0	0	6
Bobuns Institutio Legalis 2 Edit.	0	6	0
Complete Court-Keeper 2 Edit	0	6	0
Court Keepers Companion	0	2	6
Accomplish'd Conveyancer 3 Vols.	0	18	0
Clerks Remembrancer	0	4	0
Grand Precedent for Conveyancing	0	6	0
Modern Justice 2 Edit.	0	5	0
Appendix to the Modern Justice	0	1	0
Manwoods Forest Laws	0	5	0
Nelsons Reports in Chancery	0	3	6
Noys Rights o'th' Crown	0	2	0
Lord Chief Justice Egerton against Cooks Reports	0	1	6
A Table to the Statutes	0	0	6
Discourse on Treason and Bills of Attainder	0	1	6
Journals of the House of Commons	0	3	0
Rules of Government, by Sir John Heywood	0	1	0
Diseases incident to Tradesmen	0	3	6
Advice to young Gentlemen	0	1	6
Du Pins Abbrev. of Church Hist. 4 Vols.	0	10	0
Bp. Williams's Sermons, Boyles Lecture	0	5	0
Dr. Tillys Sermons	0	5	0
——— his Devotions	0	2	0
Mr. Fidde's Body of Divinity Vol. 1.	1	5	0
——— on the Sacrament	0	1	0
Dean Gardiner on the Beatitudes 2 Vol	0	6	0
Dr. Goddards Six Sermons	0	1	0
Mr. Lamb's Abridgment of Bishop Pearson on the Creed	0	2	6
Timothy and Philatheus 3 Vols.	0	15	0
Essay on Private Judgment in religious matters	0	3	0
Seneca's Morals 11th Edit. illustrated with Cuts,	0	5	0
Plato's Immortality of the Soul	0	1	0
Thorp's Assize Sermon	0	0	4
Laurence's Assize Sermon	0	0	4
Sermon at the Funeral of a Day Labourer	0	0	4
Bryar's Catechism	0	0	6
——— Prayers and Meditations	0	0	3
Trapp on the Lord's Prayer	0	1	0
Peck on the Creation	0	1	0
Stevens's Sermon against Popery	0	0	4
Mesech and Kedar , v. Trapp	0	0	4
Facksons Assize Sermon	0	0	4

