GEORGE the Second, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all to whom these Presents shall come, Greeting: WHEREAS Our trusty and well-beloved William Warburton, Doctor in Divinity, Dean of Our Cathedral Church of Bristol, hath, by his Petition, humbly represented unto Us, that the late Alexander Pope, Esq; having by his Will bequeathed unto him, the Petitioner, the Property of all such of his Works already printed, as he the said Petitioner hath written, or shall write, Commentaries, or Notes, upon; and all the Profits which should arise, after his Death, from such Editions as he, the said Petitioner, should publish, without future Alterations; and that being desirous of reaping the Fruits of his Labour, which he cannot enjoy without Our Royal Licence and Protection, he hath therefore, most humbly besought Us to grant him Our Royal Privilege and Licence for the sole Printing, Publishing and Vending the said Works, for the Term of Fourteen Years; We being graciously pleased to gratify him in his said Request, do, by these Presents, agreeable to the Statute in that Behalf made and provided, for Us, Our Heirs and Successors, give and grant unto the said Doctor William Warburton, Dean of Bristol, his Executors, Administrators, and Assigns, Our Royal Privilege and Licence for the sole Printing and Publishing the said Works, for, and during the Term of Fourteen Years; to be computed from the Day of the Date hereof; strictly forbidding and prohibiting all Our Subjects within Our Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland, and other Our Dominions, to reprint or abridge the same, either in the like, or any other Volume or Volumes whatsoever, or to import, buy, vend, utter or distribute any Copies of the same, or any Part thereof, reprinted, beyond the Seas, within the said Term of Fourteen Years, without the Consent or Approbation of the said Doctor William Warburton, Dean of Bristol, his Heirs, Executors, and Assigns, by Writing under his or their Hands and Seals first had and obtained, as they and every of them, offending herein, will answer the contrary at their Perils; whereof the Master, Wardens, and Company of Stationers of Our City of London, the Commissioners and other Officers of Our Customs, and all other Our Officers and Ministers whom it may concern, are to take Notice that due Obedience be given to Our Pleasure herein signified. Given at Our Court at Kensington, the Twenty-fourth Day of July 1759, in the Thirty-third Year of Our Reign.

By His Majesty's Command,
HOLDERNESSE.

MR. POPE, in his last illness, amused himself, amidst the care of his higher concerns, in preparing a corrected and complete Edition of his Writings^a; and, with his usual delicacy, was even solicitous to prevent any share of the offence they might occasion, from falling on the Friend whom he had engaged to give them to the public^b.

^a—“ I own the late encroachments upon my constitution
“ made me willing to see the end of all further care about me
“ or my works. I would rest for the one in a full resigna“ tion of my Being to be disposed of by the Father of all “ mercy; and for the other (though indeed a trifle, yet a “ trifle may be some example) I would commit them to the “ candour of a sensible and reflecting judge, rather than to “ the malice of every short-sighted and malevolent critic, or “ inadvertent and censorious reader. And no hand can set
“ them in so good a light.” Es. Let. cxx. to Mr. W.

^b—“ I also give and bequeath to the said Mr. Warburton,
“ the property of all such of my Works already printed as “ he hath written or shall write Commentaries or Notes up-
“ on, and which I have not otherwise disposed of or alienat-
“ ed; and as he shall publish WITHOUT FUTURE ALTE-“ RATIONS.”—His last Will and Testament.

ii A D V E R T I S E M E N T .

In discharge of this trust, the Public has here a complete Edition of his Works ; executed in such a manner, as, I am persuaded, would have been to his satisfaction.

The Editor hath not, for the sake of profit, suffered the Author's Name to be made cheap by a Subscription ; nor his Works to be defrauded of their due honours by a vulgar or inelegant Impression ; nor his Memory to be disgraced by any pieces unworthy of his talents or virtue. On the contrary, he hath, at a very great expence, ornamented this Edition with all the advantages which the best Artists in Paper, Printing, and Sculpture could bestow upon it.

If the Public hath waited longer than the deference due to it's generous impatience for the Author's writings should have suffered, it was owing to a reason which the Editor need not be ashamed to tell. It was his regard to the family-interests of his deceased Friend. Mr. Pope, at his death, had left large impressions of several parts of his Works, unfold ; the property of which was adjudged to belong to his Executors ; and the Editor was willing they should should have time to dispose of them to the best advantage, before the publication of this Edition (which hath been long prepared) should put a stop to the sale.

But it may be proper to be a little more particular concerning the superiority of this Edition above all the preceding; so far as Mr. Pope himself was concerned. What the Editor hath done, the Reader must collect for himself.

The FIRST Volume, and the original poems in the SECOND, are here first printed from a copy corrected throughout by the Author himself, even to the very preface: Which, with several additional notes in his own hand, he delivered to the Editor a little before his death. The Juvenile translations, in the other part of the SECOND Volume, it was never his intention to bring into this Edition of his Works, on account of the levity of some, the freedom of others, and the little importance of all. But these being the property of other men, the Editor had it not in his power to follow the Author's intention.

The THIRD Volume, (all but the Essay on Man, which together with the Essay

on Criticism, the Author, a little before his death, had corrected and published in Quarto, as a specimen of his projected Edition) was printed by him in his last illness, but never published, in the manner it is now given. The disposition of the Epistle on the Characters of Men is quite altered: that on the Characters of Women much enlarged; and the Epistles on Riches and Taste corrected and improved. To these advantages of the THIRD Volume, must be added a great number of fine verses, taken from the Author's Manuscript-copies of these poems, communicated by him for this purpose to the Editor. These, the Author, when he first published the poems, to which they belong, thought proper, for various reasons, to omit. Some, from the Manuscript-copy of the Essay on Man, which tended to discredit fate, and to recommend the moral government of God, had, by the Editor's advice, been restored to their places in the last Edition of that Poem. The rest, together with others of the like sort, from his Manuscript-copy of the other Ethic Epistles, are here inserted at the

The FOURTH Volume contains the Satires; with their Prologue, the Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot; and Epilogue, the two poems intitled MDCCXXXVIII. The Prologue and Epilogue are here given with the like advantages as the Ethic Epistles in the foregoing Volume, that is to say, with the Variations, or additional verses from the Author's Manuscripts. The Epilogue to the Satires is likewise enriched with many and large notes, now first printed from the Author's own Manuscript.

The FIFTH Volume contains a correcter and completer Edition of the Dunciad than hath been hitherto published; of which, at present, I have only this further to add, That it was at my request he laid the plan of a fourth Book. I often told him, It was pity so fine a poem should remain disgraced by the meanness of its subject, the most insignificant of all Dunces, bad Rhymers and malevolent Cavillers: That he ought to raise and enoble it by pointing his Satire against the most pernicious of all, Minute philosophers and vi A D V E R T I S E M E N T .

Free-thinkers. I imagined, too, it was for the interests of Religion to have it known, that so great a Genius had a due abhorrence of these pests of Virtue and Society. He came readily into my opinion; but at the same time, told me, it would create him many Enemies. He was not mistaken. For tho' the terror of his pen kept them for some time in respect, yet on his death they rose with unrestrained fury in numerous Coffee-house tales, and Grub-street libels. The plan of this admirable Satire was artfully contrived to shew, that the follies and defects of a FASHIONABLE EDUCATION naturally led to, and necessarily ended in, FREE-THINKING; with design to point out the only remedy adequate to so destructive an evil. It was to advance the same ends of virtue and religion, that the Editor prevailed on him to alter every thing in his moral writings that might be suspected of having the least glance towards Fate or NATURALISM; and to add what was proper to convince the world that he was warmly on the side of MORAL GOVERNMENT and a revealed Will. And it would be great injustice tice to his memory not to declare that he embraced these occasions with the most unfeigned pleasure.

ADVERTISEMENT. vii

The SIXTH Volume consists of Mr. Pope's miscellaneous pieces in verse and prose. Amongst the Verse several fine poems make now their first appearance in his Works. And of the Prose, all that is good, and nothing but what is exquisitely so, will be found in this Edition.

The SEVENTH, EIGHTH, and NINTH Volumes consist entirely of his Letters. The more valuable, as they are the only true models which we, or perhaps any of our neighbours, have of familiar Epistles. This collection is now made more complete by the addition of several new pieces. Yet, excepting a short explanatory letter to Col. M. and the Letters to Mr. A. and Mr. W. (the latter of which are given to shew the Editor's inducements, and the engagements he was under, to intend the care of this Edition) excepting these, I say, the rest are all here published from the Author's own printed, tho' not published, copies delivered to the Editor.

viii A D V E R T I S E M E N T.

On the whole, the advantages of this Edition, above the preceding, are these, That it is the first complete collection which has ever been made of his original Writings. That all his principal poems, of early or later date, are here given to the public with his last corrections and improvements; That a great number of his verses are here first printed from the Manuscript-copies of his principal poems of later date; That many new notes of the Author are here added to his Poems; and lastly, that several pieces, both in prose and verse, make now their first appearance before the Public.

The Author's Life deserves a just volume; and the Editor intends to give it. For to have been one of the first Poets in the world is but his second praise. He was in a higher Class. He was one of the noblest works of God. He was an honest Man. A Man who alone possessed more real virtue than, in very corrupt times, needing a Satirist like him, will sometimes fall to the share of multitudes. In this history of his life, will be contained a large account of his writings; a critique on the nature, force, and extent of his genius, exemplified from these writings; and a vindication of his moral character, exemplified by his more distinguished virtues; his filial piety, his disinterested friendships, his reverence for the constitution of his country, his love and admiration of VIRTUE, and, (what was the necessary effect) his hatred and contempt of VICE, his extensive charity to the indigent, his warm benevolence to mankind, his supreme veneration of the Deity, and above all his sincere belief of REVELATION. Nor shall his faults be concealed. It is not for the interests of his Virtues that they should. Nor indeed could they be concealed, if we were so disposed, for they shine thro' his Virtues; no man being more a Dupe to the specious appearances of virtue in others. In a word, I mean not to be his Panegyrist but his Historian. And may I, when Envy and Calumny have taken the same advantage of my absence (for, while I live, I will freely trust it to my

my Life to confute them) may I find a Friend as careful of my honest fame as I have been of His!—Together with his Works, he hath bequeathed me his DUNCES. So that as the property is transferred, I could wish they would now let his memory alone. The veil which Death draws over the Good is so sacred, that to tear it, and with sacrilegious hands, to throw dirt upon the Shrine, gives scandal even to Barbarians. And tho' Rome permitted her slaves to calumniate her best Citizens on the day of Triumph, yet the same petulancy at their Funeral would have been rewarded with execration and a Gibbet. The Public may be malicious: but is rarely vindictive or ungenerous. It would abhor all insults, on a writer dead, tho' it had borne with the ribaldry, or even set the Ribalds on work, when he was alive. And in this there is no great harm: for he must have a strange impotency of mind indeed whom such miserable scriblers can disturb or ruffle. Of all that gross Beotian phalanx who have written scurrilously against the Editor, he knows not so much as One whom a writer ter of reputation would not wish to have his enemy, or whom a man of honour would not be ashamed to own for his friend. He is indeed but slightly conversant in their works, and knows little of the particulars of their defamation: To his Authorship they are heartily welcome. But if any of them have been so far abandoned by Truth as to attack his moral character in any respect whatsoever, to all and every one of These and their Abettors, he gives the LYE in form, and in the words of honest Father Valerian, MENTIRIS IMPUDENTISSIME.

P R E F A C E.

I Am inclined to think that both the writers of books, and the readers of them, are generally not a little unreasonable in their expectations. The first seem to fancy the world must approve whatever they produce, and the latter to imagine that authors are obliged to please them at any rate. Methinks, as on the one hand no single man is born with a right of controuling the opinions of all the rest; so on the other, the world has no title to demand, that the whole care and time of any particular person should be sacrificed to its entertainment. Therefore I cannot but believe that writers and readers are under equal obligations, for as much fame, or pleasure, as each affords the other.

Every one acknowledges, it would be a wild notion to expect perfection in any work of man: and yet one would think the contrary was taken for granted, by the judgment commonly past upon Poems. A Critic supposes he has done his part, if he proves a writer to have failed in an expression, or erred in any particular point: and can it then be wondered at, if the Poets in general seem resolved not to own themselves in any error? For as long as one side will make no allowances, the other will be brought to no acknowledgments*.

I am afraid this extreme zeal on both sides is ill-placed; Poetry and Criticism being by no means the universal concern of the world, but only the affair of idle men who write in their closets, and of idle men who read there.

Yet sure, upon the whole, a bad Author deserves better usage than a bad Critic: for a Writer's endeavour, for the most part, is to please his Readers, and he fails merely through the misfortune of an ill judgment; but such a Critic's is to put them out of humour; a design he could never go upon without both that and an ill temper.

I think a good deal may be said to extenuate the fault of bad Poets. What we call a Genius, is hard to be distinguished by a man himself, from a strong inclination: and if his genius be ever so great, he cannot at first discover it any other way, than by giving way to that prevalent propensity which renders him the more liable to be mistaken. The only method he has, is to make the experiment by writing, and appealing to the judgment of others: now if he happens to write ill (which is certainly no sin in itself) he is immediately made an object of

* In the former editions it was thus—For as long as one side despises a well-meant endeavour, the other will not be satisfied with a moderate approbation.—But the Author altered it, as these words were rather a consequence from the conclusion he would draw, than the conclusion itself, which he has now inserted.

ridicule. I wish we had the humanity to reflect that even the worst authors might, in their endeavour to please us, deserve something at our hands. We have no cause to quarrel with them but for their obstinacy in persisting to write; and this too may admit of alleviating circumstances. Their particular friends may be either ignorant, or insincere; and the rest of the world in general is too well-bred to shock them with a truth, which generally their Booksellers are the first that inform them of. This happens not till they have spent too much of their time to apply to any profession which might better fit their talents; and till such talents as they have are so far discredited as to be but of small service to them. For (what is the hardest case imaginable) the reputation of a man generally depends upon the first steps he makes in the world; and people will establish their opinion of us, from what we do at that season when we have least judgment to direct us.

On the other hand, a good Poet no sooner communicates his works with the same desire of information, but it is imagined he is a vain young creature given up to the ambition of fame; when perhaps the poor man is all the while trembling with the fear of being ridiculous. If he is made to hope he may please the world, he falls under very unlucky circumstances: for, from the moment he prints, he must expect to hear no more truth, than if he were a Prince, or a Beauty. If he has not very good sense (and indeed there are twenty men of wit, for one man of sense) his living thus in a course of flattery may put him in no small danger of becoming a Coxcomb: if he has, he will consequently have so much diffidence as not to reap any great satisfaction from his praise; since, if it be given to his face, it can scarce be distinguished from flattery, and if in his absence, it is hard to be certain of it. Were he sure to be commended by the best and most knowing, he is as sure of being envied by the worst and most ignorant, which are the majority; for it is with a fine Genius as with a fine fashion, all those are displeas'd at it who are not able to follow it: and it is to be feared that esteem will seldom do any man so much good, as ill-will does him harm. Then there is a third class of people, who make the largest part of mankind, those of ordinary or indifferent capacities; and these (to a man) will hate, or suspect him: a hundred honest Gentlemen will dread him as a Wit, and a hundred innocent women as a Satirist. In a word, whatever be his fate in Poetry, it is ten to one but he must give up all the reasonable aims of life for it. There are indeed some advantages accruing from a Genius to Poetry, and they are all I can think of: the agreeable power of self-amusement when a man is idle or alone; the privilege of being admitted into the best company; and the freedom of saying as many careless things as other people, without being so severely remarked upon.

I believe, if any one, early in his life, should contemplate the dangerous fate of authors, he would scarce be of their number on any consideration. The life of a Wit is a warfare upon earth; and the present spirit of the learned world is such, that to attempt to serve it (any way) one must have the constancy of a martyr, and a resolution to suffer for its sake. I could wish people would believe, what I am pretty certain they will not, that I have been much less concerned about Fame than I durst declare till this occasion, when methinks I should find more credit than I could heretofore: since my writings have had their fate already, and it is too late to think of prepossessing the reader in their favour. I would plead it as some merit in me, that the world has never been prepared for these Trifles by Prefaces, byassed by recommendation, dazled with the names of great Patrons, wheedled with fine reasons and pretences, or troubled with excuses. I confess it was want of consideration that made me an author; I writ because it amused me; I corrected because it was as pleasant to me to correct as to write; and I published because I was told, I might please such as it was a credit to please. To what degree I have done this, I am really ignorant ; I had too much fondness for my productions to judge of them at first, and too much judgment to be pleased with them at last. But I have Reason to think they can have no reputation which will continue long, or which deserves to do so : for they have always fallen short not only of what I read of others, but even of my own Ideas of Poetry.

If any one should imagine I am not in earnest, I desire him to reflect, that the Ancients (to say the least of them) had as much Genius as we : and that to take more pains, and employ more time, cannot fail to produce more compleat pieces. They constantly apply'd themselves not only to that art, but to that single branch of an art, to which their talent was most powerfully bent ; and it was the business of their lives to correct and finish their works for posterity. If we can pretend to have used the same industry, let us expect the same immortality : Tho' if we took the same care, we should still lie under a farther misfortune : they writ in languages that became universal and everlasting, while ours are extremely limited both in extent and in duration. A mighty foundation for our pride ! when the utmost we can hope, is but to be read in one Island, and to be thrown aside at the end of one Age.

All that is left us is to recommend our productions by the imitation of the Ancients : and it will be found true, that in every age, the highest character for sense and learning has been obtained by those who have been most indebted to them. For, to say truth, whatever is very good sense, must have been common sense in all times; and what we call Learning, is but the knowledge of the sense of our predecessors. Therefore they who say our thoughts are not our own, because they resemble the Ancients, may as well say our faces are not our own, because they are like our Fathers: And indeed it is very unreasonable, that people should expect us to be Scholars, and yet be angry to find us so.

I fairly confess that I have served myself all I could by reading; that I made use of the judgment of authors dead and living; that I omitted no means in my power to be informed of my errors, both by my friends and enemies: But the true Reason these pieces are not more correct, is owing to the consideration how short a time they, and I, have to live: One may be ashamed to consume half one's days in bringing sense and rhyme together; and what Critic can be so unreasonable, as not to leave a man time enough for any more serious employment, or more agreeable amusement?

The only plea I shall use for the favour of the public, is, that I have as great a respect for it, as most authors have for themselves; and that I have sacrificed much of my own self-love for its sake, in preventing not only many mean things from seeing the light, but many which I thought tolerable. I would not be like those Authors, who forgive themselves some particular lines for the sake of a whole Poem, and vice versa a whole Poem for the sake of some particular lines. I believe no one qualification is so likely to make a good writer, as the power of rejecting his own thoughts; and it must be this (if any thing) that can give me a chance to be one. For what I have published, I can only hope to be pardoned; but for what I have burn'd, I deserve to be prais'd. On this account the world is under some obligation to me, and owes me the justice in return, to look upon no verses as mine that are not inserted in this collection. And perhaps nothing could make it worth my while to own what are really so, but to avoid the imputation of so many dull and immoral things, as partly by malice, and partly by ignorance, have been ascribed to me. I must further acquit myself of the presumption of having lent my name to recommend any Miscellanies, or Works of other men; a thing I never thought becoming a Person who has hardly credit enough to answer for his own.

In this office of collecting my pieces, I am altogether uncertain, whether to look upon myself as a man building a monument, or burying the dead.

If Time shall make it the former, may these Poems (as long as they last) remain as a testimony, that their Author never made his talents subservient to the mean and unworthy ends of Party or Self-interest; the gratification of public prejudices, or private passions; the flattery of the undeserving, or the insult of the unfortunate. If I have written well, let it be considered that 'tis what no man can do without good sense, a quality that not only renders one capable of being a good writer, but a good man. And if I have made any acquisition in the opinion of any one under the notion of the former, let it be continued to me under no other title than that of the latter.

But if this publication be only a more solemn funeral of my remains, I desire it may be known that I die in charity, and in my senses; without any murmurs against the justice of this age, or any mad appeals to posterity. I declare I shall think the world in the right, and quietly submit to every truth which time shall discover to the prejudice of these writings; not so much as wishing so irrational a thing, as that every body should be deceived merely for my credit. However, I desire it may then be considered, That there are very few things in this collection which were not written under the age of five and twenty: so that my youth may be made (as it never fails to be in Executions) a case of compassion. That I was never so concerned about my works as to vindicate them in print, believing, if any thing was good, it would defend itself, and what was bad could never be defended. That I used no artifice to raise or continue a reputation, depreciated no dead author I was obliged to, bribed no living one with unjust praise, insulted no adversary with ill language; or, when I could not attack a Rival's works, encouraged reports against his Morals. To conclude, if this volume perish, let it serve as a warning to the Critics, not to take too much pains for the future to destroy such things as will die of themselves; and a Memento mori to some of my vain contemporaries the Poets, to teach them that, when real merit is wanting, it avails nothing to have been encouraged by the great, commended by the eminent, and favoured by the public in general.

Variations in the Author's Manuscript Preface.

AFTER pag. xvii. l. 4. it followed thus—
For my part, I confess, had I seen things in this view at first, the public had never been troubled either with my writings, or with this apology for them. I am sensible how difficult it is to speak of ones self with decency: but when a man must speak of himself, the best way is to speak truth of himself, or, he may depend upon it, others will do it for him. I'll therefore make this Preface a general confession of all my thoughts of my own Poetry, resolving with the same freedom to expose myself, as it is in the power of any other to expose them. In the first place, I thank God and nature, that I was born with a love to poetry; for nothing more conduces to fill up all the intervals of our time, or if rightly used, to make the whole course of life entertaining: Cantantes licet usque (minus via lædet.) 'Tis a vast happiness to possess the pleasures of the head, the only pleasures in which a man is sufficient to himself, and the only part of him which, to his satisfaction, he can employ all day long. The Muses are amicæ omnium horarum; and, like our gay acquaintance, the best company in the world as long as one expects no real service from them. I confess there was a time when I was in love with myself, and my first productions were the children of self love upon innocence. I had made an Epic Poem, and Panegyrics on all the Princes in Europe, and thought myself the greatest genius that ever was. I can't but regret those delightful visions of my childhood, which, like the fine colours we see when our eyes are shut, are vanished for ever. Many tryals and sad experience have so undeceived me by degrees, that I am utterly at a loss at what rate to value myself. As for fame I shall be glad of any I can get, and not repine at any I miss; and as for vanity, I have enough to keep me from hanging myself, or even from wishing those hanged who would take it away. It was this that made me write. The sense of my faults made me correct: besides that it was as pleasant to me to correct as to write.

At p. xix. l. 12.—In the first place I own that I have used my best endeavours to the finishing these pieces. That I made what advantage I could of the judgment of authors dead and living; and that I omitted no means in my power to be informed of my errors by my friends and my enemies: And that I expect no favour on account of my youth, business, want of health, or any such idle excuses. But the true reason they are not yet more correct is owing to the consideration how short a time they, and I, have to live. A man that can expect but sixty years may be ashamed to employ thirty in measuring syllables and bringing sense and rhyme together. We spend our youth in pursuit of riches or fame, in hopes to enjoy them when we are old, and when we are old, we find it is too late to enjoy any thing. I therefore hope the Wits will pardon me, if I reserve some of my time to save my soul; and that some wise men will be of my opinion, even if I should think a part of it better spent in the enjoyments of life than in pleasing the critics.

Amidst advent'rous Rovers of the Pen :

And after so much undeserv'd success,

Thus hazarding at last to make it less.

Encomiums fuit not this censorious time,
Itself a Subject for satyric rhyme; 10

Ignorance honour'd, Wit and Worth defam'd,

Folly triumphant, and ev'n Homer blam'd!

But to this Genius, join'd with so much Art,

Such various Learning mix'd in ev'ry part,

Poets are bound a loud applause to pay; 15
 Apollo bids it, and they must obey.

And yet so wonderful, sublime a thing,
 As the great ILIAD, scarce could make me sing;
 Except I justly could at once commend
 A good Companion, and as firm a Friend. 20
 One moral, or a mere well-natur'd deed
 Can all desert in Sciences exceed.

'Tis great delight to laugh at some mens ways,
 But a much greater to give Merit praise.

To Mr. P O P E on his Pastorals.

IN these more dull, as more censorious days,
 When few dare give, and fewer merit praise,
 A Muse sincere, that never Flatt'ry knew,
 Pays what to friendship and desert is due.
 Young, yet judicious; in your verse are found 5
 Artstrengthening Nature, Sense improv'd by Sound.
 Unlike those Wits, whose numbers glide along
 So smooth, no thought e'er interrupts the song:
 Laboriously enervate they appear,
 And write not to the head, but to the ear: 10

Our minds unmov'd and unconcern'd they lull,
And are at best most musically dull :
So purling streams with even murmurs creep,
And hush the heavy hearers into sleep.
As smoothest speech is most deceitful found, 15
The smoothest numbers oft are empty found.
But Wit and Judgment join at once in you,
Sprightly as Youth, as Age consummate too:
Your strains are regularly bold, and please
With unforc'd care, and unaffected ease, 20 }
With proper thoughts, and lively images :
Such as by Nature to the Antients shewn,
Fancy improves, and judgment makes your own:
For great mens fashions to be follow'd are,
Altho' disgraceful 'tis their clothes to wear. 25
Some in a polish'd style write Pastoral,
Arcadia speaks the language of the Mall;
Like some fair Shepherdess, the Sylvan Muse,
Should wear those flow'rs her native fields produce;
And the true measure of the Shepherd's wit 30
Should, like his garb, be for the Country fit;
Yet must his pure and unaffected thought
More nicely than the common swains be wrought.
So, with becoming art, the Players dress
In silks the shepherd, and the shepherdess; 35

Yet still unchang'd the form and mode remain,
Shap'd like the homely ruffet of the swain.
Your rural Muse appears to justify
The long lost graces of Simplicity :
So rural beauties captivate our sense 40
With virgin charms, and native excellence.
Yet long her Modesty those charms conceal'd,
'Till by mens Envy to the world reveal'd;
For Wits industrious to their trouble seem,
And needs will envy what they must esteem. 45
Live and enjoy their spite! nor mourn that fate,
Which would, if Virgil liv'd, on Virgil wait;
Whose Muse did once, like thine, in plains delight;
Thine shall, like his, soon take a higher flight;
So Larks, which first from lowly fields arise, 50
Mount by degrees, and reach at last the skies.

W. WYCHERLEY.

To Mr. POPE, on his Windfor-Forest.

HAIL, sacred Bard! a Muse unknown before
Salutes thee from the bleak Atlantic shore.
To our dark world thy shining page is shown,
And Windfor's gay retreat becomes our own.

The Eastern pomp had just bespoke our care,
And India pour'd her gaudy treasures here :
A various spoil adorn'd our naked land,
The pride of Persia glitter'd on our strand,
And China's Earth was cast on common sand : }
Toss'd up and down the glossy fragments lay, 10
And dress'd the rocky shelves, and pav'd the painted bay.

Thy treasures next arriv'd : and now we boast
A nobler cargo on our barren coast :
From thy luxuriant Forest we receive
More lasting glories than the East can give. 15
 Where-e'er we dip in thy delightful page,
What pompous scenes our busy thoughts engage!
The pompous scenes in all their pride appear,
Fresh in the page, as in the grove they were.
Nor half so true the fair Lodona shows 20
The sylvan state that on her border grows,
While she the wond'ring shepherd entertains
With a new Windsor in her wat'ry plains ;
Thy juster lays the lucid wave surpass,
The living scene is in the Muse's glass. 25
Nor sweeter notes the echoing forests cheer,
When Philomela fits and warbles there,

Than when you sing the greens and op'ning
glades,

And give us Harmony as well as Shades :

A Titian's hand might draw the grove, but you 36
Can paint the grove, and add the Music too.

With vast variety thy pages shine ;

A new creation starts in ev'ry line.

How sudden trees rise to the reader's sight,

And make a doubtful scene of shade and light,

And give at once the day, at once the night !

And here again what sweet confusion reigns,

In dreary deserts mix'd with painted plains !

And see ! the deserts cast a pleasing gloom,

And shrubby heaths rejoice in purple bloom : 40

Whilst fruitful crops rise by their barren side,

And bearded groves display their annual pride.

Happy the man, who strings his tuneful lyre,
Where woods, and brooks, and breathing fields inspire !

Thrice happy you ! and worthy best to dwell

Amidst the rural joys you sing so well.

I in a cold, and in a barren clime,

Cold as my thought, and barren as my rhyme,

Here on the Western beach attempt to chime.

O joyless flood ! O rough tempestuous main ! 50
Border'd with weeds, and solitudes obscene !
Snatch me, ye Gods ! from these Atlantic shores,
And shelter me in Windsor's fragrant bow'rs ;
Or to my much-lov'd Isis' walks convey,
And on her flow'ry banks for ever lay.
Thence let me view the venerable scene,
The awful dome, the groves eternal green :
Where sacred Hough long found his fam'd retreat,
And brought the Muses to the sylvan seat,
Reform'd the wits, unlock'd the Classic store, 60
And made that Music which was noise before.
There with illustrious Bards I spent my days,
Nor free from censure, nor unknown to praise,
Enjoy'd the blessings that his reign bestow'd,
Nor envy'd Windsor in the soft abode. 65
The golden minutes smoothly danc'd away,
And tuneful Bards beguil'd the tedious day :
They sung, nor sung in vain, with numbers fir'd
That Maro taught, or Addison inspir'd.
Ev'n I essay'd to touch the trembling string : 70
Who could hear them, and not attempt to sing ?
Rouz'd from these dreams by thy commanding strain,
I rise and wander through the field or plain ;

Led by thy Muse from sport to sport I run,
 Mark the stretch'd Line, or hear the thund'ring gun.
 Ah! how I melt with pity, when I spy 76
 On the cold earth the flutt'ring Pheasant lie;
 His gaudy robes in dazzling lines appear,
 And ev'ry feather shines and varies there.

Nor can I pass the generous courser by, 80
 But while the prancing steed allures my eye,
 He starts, he's gone! and now I see him fly }
 O'er hills and dales, and now I lose the course,
 Nor can the rapid fight pursue the flying horse.
 Oh could thy Virgil from his orb look down, 85
 He'd view a courser that might match his own!
 Fir'd with the sport, and eager for the chace,
Lodona's murmurs stop me in the race.
 Who can refuse Lodona's melting tale?
 The soft complaint shall over time prevail; 90
 The Tale be told, when shades forsake her shore,
 The Nymph be sung, when she can flow no more.

Nor shall thy song, old Thames! forbear to shine,
 At once the subject and the song divine.
 Peace, sung by thee, shall please ev'n Britons more
 Than all their shouts for Victory before. 96
 Oh! could Britannia imitate thy stream,
 The World should tremble at her awful name:

From various springs divided waters glide,
In different colours roll a different tide, 100
Murmur along their crooked banks a while,
At once they murmur and enrich the Isle ;
A while distinct thro' many channels run,
But meet at last, and sweetly flow in one ; 104
There joy to lose their long-distinguish'd names,
And make one glorious, and immortal Thames.

FR. KNAPP.

To Mr. P O P E.

In Imitation of a Greek Epigram on HOMER.

WHEN Phæbus, and the nine harmonious maids,
Of old assembled in the Theſpian shades ;
What theme, they cry'd, what high immortal air,
Befit these harps to sound, and thee to hear ?
Reply'd the God ; “ Your loftiest notes employ, §
“ To sing young Peleus, and the fall of Troy.”
The wond'rous song with rapture they rehearse ;
Then ask who wrought that miracle of verse ?
He answer'd with a frown ; “ I now reveal
“ A truth, that envy bids me not conceal : 10

“ Retiring frequent to this Laureat vale,
“ I warbled to the Lyre that fav’rite tale,
“ Which, unobserv’d, a wand’ring Greek and blind,
“ Heard me repeat, and treasur’d in his mind ;
“ And fir’d with thirst of more than mortal praise, 15
“ From me, the God of Wit, usurp’d the bays.
“ But let vain Greece indulge her growing fame,
“ Proud with celestial spoils to grace her name ;
“ Yet when my Arts shall triumph in the West,
“ And the white Isle with female pow’r is blest ; 20
“ Fame, I foresee, will make reprisals there,
“ And the Translator’s Palm to me transfer.
“ With less regret my claim I now decline,
“ The World will think his English Iliad mine.”

E. FENTON.

To Mr. P O P E.

TO praise, and still with just respect to praise
 A Bard triumphant in immortal bays,
The Learn’d to show, the Sensible commend,
Yet still preserve the province of the Friend ;
What life, what vigour must the lines require ? 5
What Music tune them, what Affection fire ?

O might thy Genius in my bosom shine ;
Thou should'st not fail of numbers worthy thine ;
The brightest Ancients might at once agree
To sing within my lays, and sing of thee. 10

Horace himself would own thou dost excell
In candid arts to play the Critic well.
Ovid himself might wish to sing the Dame
Whom Windsor Forest sees a gliding stream :
On silver feet, with annual Osier crown'd, 15
She runs for ever thro' Poetic ground.

How flame the glories of Belinda's Hair,
Made by thy Muse the envy of the Fair ?
Less shone the tresses Ægypt's princess wore,
Which sweet Callimachus so sung before. 20
Here courtly trifles set the world at odds ;
Belles war with Beaux, and Whims descend for Gods.

The new Machines, in names of ridicule,
Mock the grave phrenzy of the Chemic fool.
But know, ye Fair, a point conceal'd with art, 25
The Sylphs and Gnomes are but a Woman's heart.
The graces stand in fight ; a Satire-train
Peeps o'er their head, and laughs behind the scene.

In Fame's fair Temple, o'er the boldest wits
Inshrin'd on high the sacred Virgil sits ; 30

And fits in measures such as Virgil's Muse
To place thee near him might be fond to chuse.
How might he tune th' alternate reed with thee,
Perhaps a Strephon thou, a Daphnis he ;
While some old Damon, o'er the vulgar wife, 35
Thinks he deserves, and thou deserv'st the Prize ?
Rapt with the thought, my fancy seeks the plains,

And turns me shepherd while I hear the strains.
Indulgent nurse of ev'ry tender gale,
Parent of flowrets, old Arcadia, hail ! 40
Here in the cool my limbs at ease I spread,
Here let thy poplars whisper o'er my head :
Still slide thy waters, soft among the trees,
Thy aspens quiver in a breathing breeze !
Smile, all ye valleys, in eternal spring, 45
Be hush'd, ye winds, while Pope and Virgil sing.

 In English lays, and all sublimely great,
Thy Homer warms with all his ancient heat ;
He shines in Council, thunders in the Fight,
And flames with ev'ry sense of great delight. 50
Long has that Poet reign'd, and long unknown,
Like Monarchs sparkling on a distant throne ;
In all the Majesty of Greek retir'd,
Himself unknown, his mighty name admir'd ;

His language failing, wrapt him round with night;
Thine, rais'd by thee, recalls the work to light.
So wealthy Mines, that ages long before
Fed the large realms around with golden Ore,
When choak'd by sinking banks, no more appear,
And shepherds only say, The mines were here : 60
Should some rich youth (if nature warm his heart,
And all his projects stand inform'd with art)
Here clear the caves, there ope the leading vein ;
The mines detected flame with gold again.

How vast, how copious, are thy new designs ! 65
How ev'ry Music varies in thy lines !
Still, as I read, I feel my bosom beat,
And rise in raptures by another's heat.
Thus in the wood, when summer drefs'd the days,
While Windsor lent us tuneful hours of ease, 70
Our ears the lark, the thrush, the turtle blest,
And Philomela sweetest o'er the rest :
The shades resound with song---O softly tread,
While a whole season warbles round my head.

This to my Friend—and when a friend inspires,
My silent harp its master's hand requires ; 76
Shakes off the dust, and makes these rocks re-
found ;

For fortune plac'd me in unfertile ground ;

Far from the joys that with my soul agree,
From wit, from learning---very far from thee. 80
Here mofs-grown trees expand the smallest leaf;
Here half an acre's corn is half a sheaf;
Here hills with naked heads the tempest meet,
Rocks at their sides, and torrents at their feet;
Or lazy lakes unconscious of a flood, 85
Whose dull brown Naiads ever sleep in mud.
Yet here Content can dwell, and learned Ease,
A Friend delight me, and an Author please;
Ev'n here I sing, when POPE supplies the theme,
Shew my own love, tho' not increase his fame. 90

T. PARNELL.

To Mr. P O P E.

LET vulgar souls triumphal arches raise,
Or speaking marbles, to record their praise;
And picture (to the voice of Fame unknown)
The mimic Feature on the breathing stone;
Mere mortals; subject to death's total sway, 5
Reptiles of earth, and beings of a day!

'Tis thine, on ev'ry heart to grave thy praise,
A monument which Worth alone can raise:

Sure to survive, when time shall whelm in dust
The arch, the marble, and the mimic bust : 10
Nor 'till the volumes of th' expanded sky
Blaze in one flame, shalt thou and Homer die :
Then sink together in the world's last fires,
What heav'n created, and what heav'n inspires.

If aught on earth, when once this breath is fled, 15

With human transport touch the mighty dead,
Shakespear, rejoice ! his hand thy page refines ;
Now ev'ry scene with native brightness shines ;
Just to thy fame, he gives thy genuine thought ;
So Tully publish'd what Lucretius wrote ; 20
Prun'd by his care, thy laurels loftier grow,
And bloom afresh on thy immortal brow.

Thus when thy draughts, O Raphael ! time invades,

And the bold figure from the canvass fades,
A rival hand recalls from every part 25
Some latent grace, and equals art with art ;
Transported we survey the dubious strife,
While each fair image starts again to life.

How long, untun'd, had Homer's sacred lyre
Jarr'd grating discord, all extinct his fire ? 30

This you beheld ; and taught by heav'n to fing,
 Call'd the loud mufic from the founding ftring.
 Now wak'd from flumbers of three thousand years,
 Once more Achilles in dread pomp appears,
 Tow'rs o'er the field of death ; as fierce he turns, 35
 Keen flash his arms, and all the Hero burns ;
 With martial ftalk, and more than mortal might,
 He strides along, and meets the Gods in fight :
 Then the pale Titans, chain'd on burning floors,
 Start at the din that rends th' infernal fhores, 40
 Tremble the tow'rs of Heav'n, earth rocks her coafts,

And gloomy Pluto fhakes with all his ghofts,
 To ev'ry theme responds thy various lay ;
 Here rolls a torrent, there Meanders play ;
 Sonorous as the ftorm thy numbers rife, 45
 Tofs the wild waves, and thunder in the fkies ;
 Or fofter than a yielding virgin's figh,
 The gentle breezes breathe away and die.
 Thus, like the radiant God who fheds the day,
 You paint the vale, or gild the azure way ; 50
 And while with ev'ry theme the verfe complies,
 Sink without grov'ling, without rafhnefs rife.

Proceed, great Bard ! awake th'harmonious ftring,
 Be ours all Homer ! ftill Ulyffes fing.

How long ^a that Hero, by unskilful hands, 55
 Strip'd of his robes, a beggar trod our lands ?
 Such as he wander'd o'er his native coast,
 Shrunk by the wand, and all the warrior lost:
 O'er his smooth skin a bark of wrinkles spread;
 Old age disgrac'd the honours of his head; 60
 Nor longer in his heavy eye-ball shin'd
 The glance divine, forth-beaming from the mind.
 But you, like Pallas, ev'ry limb infold
 With royal robes, and bid him shine in gold; 64
 Touch'd by your hand his manly frame improves
 With grace divine, and like a God he moves.

Ev'n I, the meanest of the Muses' train,
 Inflam'd by thee, attempt a nobler strain;
 Advent'rous waken the Mæonian lyre,
 Tun'd by your hand, and sing as you inspire: 70
 So arm'd by great Achilles for the fight,
 Patroclus conquer'd in Achilles' right:
 Like theirs, our Friendship! and I boast my name
 To thine united—for thy Friendship's Fame.

This labour past, of heav'nly subjects sing, 75
 While hov'ring angels listen on the wing.

^a Odyfsey, lib. xvi.

(xlii)

To hear from earth such heart-felt raptures rise,
As, when they sing, suspended hold the Skies:
Or nobly rising in fair Virtue's cause,
From thy own life transcribe th' unerring laws: 80
Teach a bad world beneath her sway to bend:
To verse like thine fierce savages attend,
And men more fierce: when Orpheus tunes the lay
Ev'n fiends relenting hear their rage away.

W. B R O O M E.

To Mr. P O P E,

On the publishing his W O R K S.

HE comes, he comes! bid ev'ry Bard prepare
The song of triumph, and attend his Car.
Great Sheffield's Muse the long procession heads,
And throws a lustre o'er the pomp she leads,
First gives the Palm she fir'd him to obtain, 5
Crown his gay brow, and shews him how to reign.
Thus young Alcides, by old Chiron taught,
Was form'd for all the miracles he wrought:
Thus Chiron did the youth he taught applaud,
Pleas'd to behold the earnest of a God. 10

But hark, what shouts, what gath'ring crouds rejoice !

Unstain'd their praise by any venal Voice,
Such as th' Ambitious vainly think their due,
When Prostitutes, or needy Flatt'ers sue.
And see the Chief! before him laurels born ; 15
Trophies from undeserving temples torn ;
Here rage enchain'd reluctant raves, and there
Pale Envy dumb, and sick'ning with despair,
Prone to the earth she bends her loathing eye,
Weak to support the blaze of majesty. 20

But what are they that turn the sacred page?
Three lovely Virgins, and of equal age ;
Intent they read, and all enamour'd seem,
As he that met his likeness in the stream :
The GRACES these ; and see how they contend, 25
Whomost shall praise, who best shall recommend.

The Chariot now the painful steep ascends,
The Pæans cease ; thy glorious labour ends.
Here fix'd, the bright eternal Temple stands,
Its prospect an unbounded view commands : 30
Say, wond'rous youth, what Column wilt thou chuse,

What laurel'd Arch for thy triumphant Muse ?

(xliv)

Tho' each great Ancient court thee to his shrine,
Though ev'ry Laurel thro' the dome be thine,
(From the proud Epic, down to those that shade 35
The gentler brow of the soft Lesbian maid)
Go to the Good and Just, an awful train,
Thy soul's delight, and glory of the Fane :
While thro' the earth thy dear remembrance flies,
" Sweet to the World, and grateful to the skies." 40

S I M O N H A R C O U R T .

To Mr. P O P E .

From Rome, 1730.

IMmortal Bard! for whom each Muse has wove
The fairest garlands of th' Aonian grove ;
Preserv'd, our drooping Genius to restore,
When Addison and Congreve are no more ;
After so many stars extinct in night, 5
The darken'd age's last remaining light!
To thee from Latian realms this verse is writ,
Inspir'd by memory of ancient Wit :
For now no more these climes their influence boast,
Fall'n is their glory, and their virtue lost : 10

From Tyrants, and from Priests, the Muses fly,
Daughters of Reason and of Liberty.

Nor Baiaë now, nor Umbria's plain they love,
Nor on the banks of Nar, or Mincio rove;
To Thames's flow'ry borders they retire, 15
And kindle in thy breast the Roman fire.

So in the shades, where cheer'd with summer rays
Melodious linnets warbled sprightly lays,
Soon as the faded, falling leaves complain
Of gloomy winter's un auspicious reign, 20
No tuneful voice is heard of joy or love,
But mournful silence saddens all the grove.

Unhappy Italy! whose alter'd state
Has felt the worst severity of Fate:
Not that Barbarian hands her Fasces broke, 25
And bow'd her haughty neck beneath their yoke;
Nor that her palaces to earth are thrown,
Her Cities desert, and her fields unfown;
But that her ancient Spirit is decay'd,
That sacred Wisdom from her bounds is fled, 30
That there the source of Science flows no more, Whence its rich streams supply'd the world before.

Illustrious Names! that once in Latium shin'd,
Born to instruct, and to command Mankind;

Chiefs, by whose Virtue mighty Rome was rais'd, 35

And Poets, who those chiefs sublimely prais'd !

Oft I the traces you have left explore,

Your ashes visit, and your urns adore ;

Oft kiss, with lips devout, some mould'ring stone,

With ivy's venerable shade o'ergrown ; 40

Those hallow'd ruins better pleas'd to see

Than all the pomp of modern Luxury.

As late on Virgil's tomb fresh flow'rs I strow'd,

While with th' inspiring Muse my bosom glow'd,

Crown'd with eternal bays my ravish'd eyes 45

Beheld the Poet's awful Form arise :

Stranger, he said, whose pious hand has paid

These grateful rites to my attentive shade,

When thou shalt breathe thy happy native air,

To Pope this message from his Master bear : 50

“ Great Bard, whose numbers I myself inspire,

To whom I gave my own harmonious lyre,

If high exalted on the Throne of Wit,

Near Me and Homer thou aspire to fit,

No more let meaner Satire dim the rays 55

That flow majestic from thy nobler Bays ;

In all the flow'ry paths of Pindus stray,

But shun that thorny, that unpleasing way ;

(xlvii)

Nor, when each soft engaging Muse is thine,
Addrest the least attractive of the Nine. 60

Of thee more worthy were the task to raise
A lasting Column to thy Country's Praise,
To sing the Land, which yet alone can boast
That Liberty corrupted Rome has lost ;
Where Science in the arms of Peace is laid, 65
And plants her Palm beneath the Olive's shade.
Such was the Theme for which my lyre I strung,
Such was the People whose exploits I sung ;
Brave, yet refin'd, for Arms and Arts renown'd,
With diff'rent bays by Mars and Phœbus
crown'd, 70

Dauntless opposers of Tyrannic Sway,
But pleas'd, a mild AUGUSTUS to obey.

If these commands submissive thou receive,
Immortal and unblam'd thy name shall live ;
Envy to black Cocytus shall retire, 75
And howl with Furies in tormenting fire ;
Approving Time shall consecrate thy Lays,
And join the Patriot's to the Poet's Praise."

DISCOURSE

PASTORAL POETRY^a.

THERE are not, I believe, a greater number of any sort of verses than of those which are called Pastorals; nor a smaller, than of those which are truly so. It therefore seems necessary to give some account of this kind of Poem, and it is my design to comprize in this short paper the substance of those numerous dissertations the Critics have made on the subject, without omitting any of their rules in my own favour. You will also find some points reconciled, about which they seem to differ, and a few remarks, which, I think, have escaped their observation.

The original of Poetry is ascribed to that Age which succeeded the creation of the world: and as the keeping of flocks seems to have been the first employment of mankind, the most ancient sort of poetry was probably pastoral^b. It is natural to imagine, that the leisure of those antient shepherds admitting and inviting some diversion, none was so proper to that solitary and sedentary life as singing; and that in their songs they took occasion to celebrate their own felicity. From hence a Poem was invented, and afterwards improved to a perfect image of that happy time; which by giving us an esteem for the virtues of a former age, might recommend them to the present. And since the life of shepherds was attended with more tranquillity than any other rural employment, the Poets chose to introduce their Persons, from whom it received the name of Pastoral.

A Pastoral is an imitation of the action of a shepherd, or one considered under that Character. The form of this imitation is dramatic, or narrative, or mixed of both^c; the fable simple, the manners not too polite nor too rustic: the thoughts are plain, yet admit a little quickness and passion, but that short and flowing: the expression humble, yet as pure as the language will afford; neat, but not florid; easy, and yet lively. In short, the fable, manners, thoughts, and expressions are full of the greatest simplicity in nature.

The complete character of this poem consists in simplicity^d, brevity, and delicacy; the two first of which render an eclogue natural, and the last delightful.

ON PASTORAL POETRY. 53

If we would copy Nature, it may be useful to take this Idea along with us, that Pastoral is an image of what they call the golden age. So that we are not to describe our shepherds as shepherds at this day really are, but as they may be conceived then to have been; when the best of men followed the employment. To carry this resemblance yet further, it would not be amiss to give these shepherds some skill in astronomy, as far as it may be useful to that sort of life. And an air of piety to the Gods should shine through the poem, which so visibly appears in all the works of antiquity: and it ought to preserve some relish of the old way of writing; the connection should be loose, the narrations and descriptions short^e, and the periods concise. Yet it is not sufficient, that the sentences only be brief, the whole Eclogue should be so too. For we cannot suppose Poetry in those days to have been the business of men, but their recreation at vacant hours.

But with a respect to the present age, nothing more conduces to make these compositions natural, than when some Knowledge in rural affairs is discovered^f. This may be made to appear rather done by chance than on design, and sometimes is best shewn by inference; lest by too much study to seem natural, we destroy that easy simplicity from whence arises the delight. For what is inviting in this sort of poetry proceeds not so much from the Idea of that business, as of the tranquillity of a country life.

^f Pref. to Virg. Past. in Dryd. Virg. P.

We must therefore use some illusion to render a Pastoral delightful; and this consists in exposing the best side only of a shepherd's life, and in concealing its miseries^g. Nor is it enough to introduce shepherds discoursing together in a natural way; but a regard must be had to the subject; that it contain some particular beauty in itself, and that it be different in every Eclogue. Besides, in each of them a design'd scene or prospect is to be presented to our view, which should likewise have its variety^h. This variety is obtained in a great degree by frequent comparisons, drawn from the most agreeable objects of the country; by interrogations to things inanimate; by beautiful digressions, but those short; sometimes by insisting a little on circumstances; and lastly, by elegant turns on the words, which render the numbers extremely sweet and pleasing. As for the numbers themselves, though they are properly of the heroic measure, they should be the smoothest, the most easy and flowing imaginable.

It is by rules like these that we ought to judge of pastoral. And since the instructions given for any art are to be delivered as that art is in perfection, they must of necessity be derived from those in whom it is acknowledged so to be. It is therefore from the practice of Theocritus and Virgil (the only undisputed authors of Pastoral) that the Critics have drawn the foregoing notions concerning it.

^g Fontenelle's Disc. of Pastorals. P.

^h See the forementioned Preface. P.

Theocritus excels all others in nature and simplicity. The subjects of his Idyllia are purely pastoral; but he is not so exact in his persons, having introduced reapersⁱ and fishermen as well as shepherds. He is apt to be too long in his descriptions, of which that of the Cup in the first pastoral is a remarkable instance. In the manners he seems a little defective, for his swains are sometimes abusive and immodest, and perhaps too much inclining to rusticity; for instance, in his fourth and fifth Idyllia. But 'tis enough that all others learnt their excellencies from him, and that his Dialect alone has a secret charm in it, which no other could ever attain.

Virgil, who copies Theocritus, refines upon his original: and in all points, where judgment is principally concerned, he is much superior to his master. Though some of his subjects are not pastoral in themselves, but only seem to be such; they have a wonderful variety in them, which the Greek was a stranger to^k. He exceeds him in regularity and brevity, and falls short of him in nothing but simplicity and propriety of style; the first of which perhaps was the fault of his age, and the last of his language.

Among the moderns, their success has been greatest who have most endeavoured to make these ancients their pattern. The most considerable Genius appears in the famous Tasso, and our Spenser. Tasso in his Aminta has as far excelled all the Pastoral writers, as in his Gierusalemme he has out-done the Epic poets of his country. But as this piece seems to have been the original of a new sort of poem, the Pastoral Comedy, in Italy, it cannot so well be considered as a copy of the ancients. Spenser's Calendar, in Mr. Dryden's opinion, is the most complete work of this kind which any nation has produced ever since the time of Virgil¹. Not but that he may be thought imperfect in some few points. His Eclogues are somewhat too long, if we compare them with the ancients. He is sometimes too allegorical, and treats of matters of religion in a pastoral style, as Mantuan had done before him. He has employed the Lyric measure, which is contrary to the practice of the old Poets. His stanza is not still the same, nor always well chosen. This last may be the reason his expression is sometimes not concise enough: for the Tetra-stich has obliged him to extend his sense to the length of four lines, which would have been more closely confined in the Couplet.

ON PASTORAL POETRY. 57

In the manners, thoughts, and characters, he comes near to Theocritus himself; tho', notwithstanding all the care he has taken, he is certainly inferior in his Dialect: For the Doric had its beauty and propriety in the time of Theocritus; it was used in part of Greece, and frequent in the mouths of many of the greatest persons: whereas the old English and country phrases of Spenser were either entirely obsolete, or spoken only by people of the lowest condition. As there is a difference betwixt simplicity and rusticity, so the expression of simple thoughts should be plain, but not clownish. The addition he has made of a Calendar to his Eclogues, is very beautiful; since by this, besides the general moral of innocence and simplicity, which is common to other authors of Pastoral, he has one peculiar to himself; he compares human Life to the several Seasons, and at once exposes to his readers a view of the great and little worlds, in their various changes and aspects. Yet the scrupulous division of his Pastorals into Months, has obliged him either to repeat the same description, in other words, for three months together; or, when it was exhausted before, entirely to omit it: whence it comes to pass that some of his Eclogues (as the sixth, eighth, and tenth for example) have nothing but their Titles to distinguish them. The reason is evident, because the year has not that variety in it to furnish every month with a particular description, as it may every season.

Of the following Eclogues I shall only say, that these four comprehend all the subjects which the Critics upon Theocritus and Virgil will allow to be fit for pastoral: That they have as much variety of description, in respect of the several seasons, as Spenser's: that in order to add to this variety, the several times of the day are observ'd, the rural employments in each season or time of day, and the rural scenes or places proper to such employments; not without some regard to the several ages of man, and the different passions proper to each age.

But after all, if they have any merit, it is to be attributed to some good old Authors, whose works as I had leisure to study, so I hope I have not wanted care to imitate.

FIRST in these fields I try the sylvan strains,

Fair Thames, flow gently from thy sacred spring,
While on thy banks Sicilian Muses sing;

These Pastorals were written at the age of sixteen, and then past thro' the hands of Mr. Walsh, Mr. Wycherley, G. Granville afterwards Lord Lansdown, Sir William Trumbal, Dr. Garth, Lord Hallifax, Lord Somers, Mr. Mainwaring, and others. All these gave our Author the greatest encouragement, and particularly Mr. Walsh, whom Mr. Dryden, in his Postscript to Virgil, calls the best Critic of his age. "The " -Author (says he) seems to have a particular genius for this " kind of Poetry, and a judgment that much exceeds his " years. He has taken very freely from the Ancients. But

“ what he has mixed of his own with theirs is no way inferior to what he has taken from them. It is not flattery at all to ſay that Virgil had written nothing ſo good at his Age. His Preface is very judicious and learned.” Letter to Mr. Wycherley, Ap. 1705. The Lord Lanſdown about the ſame time, mentioning the youth of our Poet, ſays (in a printed Letter of the Character of Mr. Wycherley) “ that if he goes on as he hath begun in the Paſtoral way, as Virgil firſt tried his ſtrength, we may hope to ſee Engliſh Poetry vie with the Roman,” &c. Notwithſtanding the early time of their production, the Author eſteemed theſe as the moſt correſt in the verſification, and muſical in the numbers, of all his works. The reaſon for his labouring them into ſo much ſoftneſs, was, doubtleſs, that this ſort of poetry derives almoſt its whole beauty from a natural eaſe of thought and ſmoothneſs of verſe ; whereas that of moſt other kinds conſiſts in the ſtrength and fulneſs of both. In a letter of his to Mr. Walſh about this time we find an enumeration of ſeveral niceties in Verſification, which perhaps have never been ſtrictly obſerved in any Engliſh poem, except in theſe Paſtorals. They were not printed till 1709. P.

author of Comedies; of which the most celebrated were the Plain-Dealer and Country-Wife. He was a writer of infinite spirit, satire, and wit. The only objection made to him was that he had too much. However, he was followed in the same way by Mr. Congreve; tho' with a little more correctness. P.

VER. 8. The art of Terence, and Menander's fire;] This line alludes to that famous character given of Terence, by Cæsar:

Tu quoque, tu in summis, ô dimidiate Menander,
Poneris, et merito, puri sermonis amator:
Lenibus atque utinam scriptis adjuncta foret vis Comica.

So that the judicious critic sees he should have said—with Menander's fire. For what the Poet meant, was, that his friend had join'd to Terence's art, what Cæsar thought wanting in Terence, namely, the vis comica of Menander. Besides,—and Menander's fire, is making that the Characteristic of Menander which was not. He was distinguished for having art and comic spirit in conjunction, and Terence having only the first part, is called the half of Menander.

VER. 9. Whose sense instructs us,] He was always very careful in his encomiums not to fall into ridicule, the trap which weak and prostitute flatterers rarely escape. For sense, he would willingly have said, moral; propriety required it. But this dramatic poet's moral was remarkably faulty. His plays are all shamefully profligate both in the Dialogue and Action.

When tuneful Hylas with melodious moan, 15

Thus, far from Delia, to the winds I mourn,
 Alike unheard, unpity'd, and forlorn.

Go, gentle gales, and bear my sighs along!
 For her, the feather'd quires neglect their song:
 For her, the limes their pleasing shades deny; 25
 For her the lilies hang their heads and die.

 Ye birds that, left by summer, cease to sing,
 Ye trees that fade when autumn-heats remove,
 Say, is not absence death to those who love? 30

Go, gentle gales, and bear my sighs away!
 Curs'd be the fields that cause my Delia's stay;
 Fade ev'ry blossom, wither ev'ry tree,
 Die ev'ry flow'r, and perish all, but she.
 What have I said? where'er my Delia flies, 35
 Let spring attend, and sudden flow'rs arise;
 Let op'ning roses knotted oaks adorn,
 And liquid amber drop from ev'ry thorn.

Go, gentle gales, and bear my sighs along!
 The birds shall cease to tune their ev'ning song, 40
 The winds to breathe, the waving woods to move,
 And streams to murmur, ere I cease to love.

 Not balmy sleep to lab'ers faint with pain,
 Not show'rs to larks, or sun-shine to the bee, 45

Go, gentle gales, and bear my sighs away!
 Come, Delia, come; ah, why this long delay?
 Thro' rocks and caves the name of Delia sounds,
 Delia, each cave and echoing rock rebounds. 50
 Ye pow'rs, what pleasing phrenzy sooths my mind!
 Do lovers dream, or is my Delia kind?
 She comes, my Delia comes!—Now cease my lay,
 And cease, ye gales, to bear my sighs away!

Sacred Eclogue,

In Imitation of

VIRGIL'S POLLIO.

Advertisement.

IN reading several passages of the Prophet Isaiah, which foretell the coming of Christ and the felicities attending it, I could not but observe a remarkable parity between many of the thoughts, and those in the Pollio of Virgil. This will not seem surprising, when we reflect, that the Eclogue was taken from a Sibylline prophecy on the same subject. One may judge that Virgil did not copy it line by line, but selected such ideas as best agreed with the nature of pastoral poetry, and disposed them in that manner which served most to beautify his piece. I have endeavoured the same in this imitation of him, though without admitting any thing of my own; since it was written with this particular view, that the reader, by comparing the several thoughts, might see how far the images and descriptions of the Prophet are superior to those of the Poet. But as I fear I have prejudiced them by my management, I shall subjoin the passages of Isaiah, and those of Virgil, under the same disadvantage of a literal translation. P.

VER 13. Ye Heav'ns! from high the dewy nectar pour, And in soft silence shed the kindly show'r!] His Original says, "Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness: let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness spring up together."—This is a very noble description of divine grace shed abroad in the hearts of the faithful under the Gospel dispensation. And the poet understood all its force, as appears from the two lines preceding these,—Th' Æthereal Spirit, etc. The prophet describes this under the image of rain, which chiefly fits the first age of the Gospel: The poet, under the idea of dew, which extends it to every age. And it was his purpose it should be so understood, as appears from his expression of soft silence, which agrees with the common, not the extraordinary effusions of the Holy Spirit. The figurative term is wonderfully happy. He who would moralize the ancient Mythology in the manner of Bacon, would say, that by the poetical nectar, is meant the grace of the Theologians.

 Like them in beauty, should be like in fame. 10
 Here hills and vales, the woodland and the plain,
 Here earth and water seem to strive again ;
 Not Chaos-like together crush'd and bruis'd,
 But, as the world, harmoniously confus'd :
 Where order in variety we see, 15
 And where, tho' all things differ, all agree.
 Here waving groves a chequer'd scene display,
 And part admit, and part exclude the day ;
 As some coy nymph her lover's warm address
 Nor quite indulges, nor can quite repress. 20
 There, interspers'd in lawns and op'ning glades,
 Thin trees arise that shun each other's shades.
 Here in full light the ruffet plains extend :
 There wrapt in clouds the blueish hills ascend.
 Ev'n the wild heath displays her purple dyes, 25
 And 'midst the desert fruitful fields arise,

VARIATIONS.

VER. 25. Originally thus ;

Why should I sing our better suns or air,
 Whose vital draughts prevent the leach's care,
 While thro' fresh fields th' enliv'ning odours breathe,
 Or spread with vernal blooms the purple heath ? P.

That crown'd with tufted trees and springing corn,
 Like verdant isles the fable waste adorn.
 Let India boast her plants, nor envy we
 The weeping amber or the balmy tree, 30
 While by our oaks the precious loads are born,
 And realms commanded which those trees adorn.
 Not proud Olympus yields a nobler fight,
 Tho' gods assembled grace his tow'ring height,
 Than what more humble mountains offer here, 35
 Where, in their blessings, all those Gods appear.
 See Pan with flocks, with fruits Pomona crown'd,
 Here blushing Flora paints th' enamel'd ground,
 Here Ceres' gifts in waving prospect stand,
 And nodding tempt the joyful reaper's hand; 40
 Rich Industry sits smiling on the plains,
 And peace and plenty tell, a STUART reigns.

Not thus the land appear'd in ages past,
 A dreary desert, and a gloomy waste,

NOTES.

VER. 33. Not proud Olympus, etc.] Sir J. Denham, in his Cooper's Hill, had said,

Than which a nobler weight no mountain bears,
 But Atlas only, which supports the spheres.

The comparison is childish, as the taking it from fabulous history destroys the compliment. Our Poet has shewn more judgment: he has made a manly use of as fabulous a circumstance by the artful application of the mythology.

To savage beasts and savage laws a prey, 45
 And kings more furious and severe than they ;
 Who claim'd the skies, dispeopled air and floods,
 The lonely lords of empty wilds and woods :
 Cities laid waste, they storm'd the dens and caves,
 (For wiser brutes were backward to be slaves,) 50
 What could be free, when lawless beasts obey'd,
 And ev'n the elements a Tyrant sway'd ?
 In vain kind seasons swell'd the teeming grain,
 Soft show'rs distill'd, and suns grew warm in vain ;
 The swain with tears his frustrate labour yields, 55
 And famish'd dies amidst his ripen'd fields.
 What wonder then, a beast or subject slain
 Were equal crimes in a despotic reign ?

VARIATIONS.

VER. 49. Originally thus in the MS.

From towns laid waste, to dens and caves they ran
 (For who first stoop'd to be a slave was man.)

VER. 57, etc.

No wonder savages or subjects slain—
 But subjects starv'd, while savages were fed.

It was originally thus, but the word savages is not properly applied to beasts but to men ; which occasioned the alteration. P.

VER. 45. savage laws.] The Forest Laws.

Both doom'd alike, for sportive Tyrants bled,
 But while the subject starv'd, the beast was fed. 60
 Proud Nimrod first the bloody chace began,
 A mighty hunter, and his prey was man :
 Our haughty Norman boasts that barb'rous name,
 And makes his trembling slaves the royal game.
 The fields are ravish'd from th' industrious swains,
 From men their cities, and from Gods their fanes :
 The levell'd towns with weeds lie cover'd o'er ;
 The hollow winds thro' naked temples roar ;
 Round broken columns clasping ivy twin'd ;
 O'er heaps of ruin stalk'd the stately hind ; 70
 The fox obscene to gaping tombs retires,
 And savage howlings fill the sacred quires.
 Aw'd by his Nobles, by his Commons curst,
 Th' Oppressor rul'd tyrannic where he durst,

 The author thought this an error, wolves not being common in England at the time of the Conqueror. P.

Stretch'd o'er the Poor and Church his iron rod, 75
 And serv'd alike his Vassals and his God.
 Whom ev'n the Saxon spar'd, and bloody Dane,
 The wanton victims of his sport remain.
 But see, the man, whose spacious regions gave
 A waste for beasts, himself deny'd a grave! 80
 Stretch'd on the lawn his second hope survey,
 At once the chaser, and at once the prey:
 Lo Rufus, tugging at the deadly dart,
 Bleeds in the forest like a wounded hart.
 Succeeding monarchs heard the subjects cries, 85
 Nor saw displeas'd the peaceful cottage rise:
 Then gath'ring flocks on unknown mountains fed,
 O'er fandy wilds were yellow harvests spread,
 The forest wonder'd at th' unusual grain,
 And secret transports touch'd the conscious swain.
 Fair Liberty, Britannia's Goddess, rears 91
 Her chearful head, and leads the golden years.

NOTES.

VER. 80. himself deny'd a grave!] The place of his interment at Caen in Normandy was claimed by a Gentleman as his inheritance, the moment his servants were going to put him in his tomb: so that they were obliged to compound with the owner before they could perform the King's obsequies.

Ye vig'rous fwains! while youth ferments your blood,
And purer spirits swell the sprightly flood,
Now range the hills, the gameful woods beset, 95
Wind the shrill horn, or spread the waving net.
When milder autumn summer's heat succeeds,
And in the new-shorn field the partridge feeds,
Before his lord the ready spaniel bounds,
Panting with hope, he tries the furrow'd grounds;
But when the tainted gales the game betray, 101
Couch'd close he lies, and meditates the prey;
Secure they trust th' unfaithful field beset,
'Till hov'ring o'er 'em sweeps the swelling net.
Thus (if small things we may with great compare)
When Albion sends her eager sons to war, 106

And into wine the purple harvest bleeds^a,
The partridge feeding in the new-shorn fields,
Both morning sports and ev'ning pleasures yields.

 Sudden they seize th' amaz'd, defenceless prize,
 And high in air Britannia's standard flies. 110

See! from the brake the whirring pheasant springs,
 And mounts exulting on triumphant wings :
 Short is his joy ; he feels the fiery wound,
 Flutters in blood, and panting beats the ground.
 Ah ! what avail his glossy, varying dyes, 115
 His purple crest, and scarlet-circled eyes,
 The vivid green his shining plumes unfold,
 His painted wings, and breast that flames with gold ?

Nor yet, when moist Arcturus clouds the sky,
 The woods and fields their pleasing toils deny. 120

 With flaught'ring guns th' unweari'd fowler roves,
 When frosts have whiten'd all the naked groves ;
 Where doves in flocks the leafless trees o'er shade,
 And lonely woodcocks haunt the wat'ry glade.
 He lifts the tube, and levels with his eye ;
 Strait a short thunder breaks the frozen sky : 130
 Oft, as in airy rings they skim the heath,
 The clam'rous lapwings feel the leaden death :
 Oft, as the mounting larks their notes prepare,
 They fall, and leave their little lives in air.

 Swift trouts, diversify'd with crimson stains, 145

Now Cancer glows with Phœbus' fiery car :
 The youth rush eager to the sylvan war,
 Swarm o'er the lawns, the forest walks surround,
 Rouze the fleet hart, and chear the opening hound.
 Th' impatient courser pants in ev'ry vein, 151
 And pawing, seems to beat the distant plain :
 Hills, vales, and floods appear already cross'd,
 And ere he starts, a thousand steps are lost. 154
 See the bold youth strain up the threat'ning steep,
 Rush thro' the thickets, down the valleys sweep,
 Hang o'er their courser's heads with eager speed,
 And earth rolls back beneath the flying steed.

IMITATIONS.

VER. 151. Th' impatient courser, etc.] Translated from Statius,

Stare adeo miserum est, pereunt vestigia mille
 Ante fugam, absentemque ferit gravis ungula campum.

These lines Mr. Dryden, in his preface to his translation of Fresnoy's Art of painting, calls wonderfully fine, and says, "they would cost him an hour, if he had the leisure, to translate them, there is so much of beauty in the original;" which was the reason, I suppose, why Mr. P. tried his strength with them.

VER. 158. and earth rolls back] He has improved his original, terraque urbesque recedunt. Virg.

Let old Arcadia boast her ample plain,
 Th' immortal huntress, and her virgin-train ; 160
 Nor envy, Windsor ! since thy shades have seen
 As bright a Goddess, and as chaste a Queen ;
 Whose care, like hers, protects the sylvan reign,
 The Earth's fair light, and Empress of the Main.

Here too, 'tis sung, of old Diana stray'd, 165
 And Cynthus' top forsook for Windsor shade ;
 Here was she seen o'er airy wastes to rove,
 Seek the clear spring, or haunt the pathless grove ;
 Here arm'd with silver bows, in early dawn,
 Her buskin'd Virgins trac'd the dewy lawn. 170

Above the rest a rural nymph was fam'd,
 Thy offspring, Thames ! the fair Lodona nam'd ;

 The Muse shall sing, and what she sings shall last.)

 Nor could Diana help her injur'd maid.
 Faint, breathless, thus she pray'd, nor pray'd in vain;
 " Ah Cynthia! ah—tho' banish'd from thy train,
 " Let me, O let me, to the shades repair,
 " My native shades—there weep, and murmur
 " there." 200

She said, and melting as in tears she lay,
 In a soft, silver stream dissolv'd away.
 The silver stream her virgin coldness keeps,
 For ever murmurs, and for ever weeps;
 Still bears the name the hapless virgin bore, 205
 And bathes the forest where she rang'd before.
 In her chaste current oft the Goddess laves,
 And with celestial tears augments the waves.
 Oft in her glass the musing shepherd spies
 The headlong mountains and the downward skies.
 The wat'ry landscape of the pendant woods, 211
 And absent trees that tremble in the floods;
 In the clear azure gleam the flocks are seen,
 And floating forests paint the waves with green,

118 WINDSOR-FOREST.

Thro' the fair scene roll flow the ling'ring streams,
Then foaming pour along, and rush into the Thames.

Thou, too, great father of the British floods !
With joyful pride survey'ft our lofty woods ;
Where tow'ring oaks their growing honours rear,
And future navies on thy shores appear. 220

Not Neptune's self from all her streams receives
A wealthier tribute, than to thine he gives.

No seas so rich, so gay no banks appear,
No lake so gentle, and no spring so clear.

Nor Po so swells the fabling Poet's lays, 225

While led along the skies his current strays,

As thine, which visits Windsor's fam'd abodes,

To grace the mansion of our earthly Gods :

Nor all his stars above a lustre show,

Like the bright beauties on thy banks below ; 230

Happy next him, who to these shades retires, 235
 Whom Nature charms, and whom the Muse inspires :

Whom humbler joys of home-felt quiet please,
 Successive study, exercise, and ease.

He gathers health from herbs the forest yields,
 And of their fragrant physic spoils the fields : 240

With chemic art exalts the min'ral pow'rs,

And draws the aromatic souls of flow'rs :

Now marks the course of rolling orbs on high ;

O'er figur'd worlds now travels with his eye ;

Of antient writ unlocks the learned store, 245

Consults the dead, and lives past ages o'er :

Or wand'ring thoughtful in the silent wood,

Attends the duties of the wife and good,

T' observe a mean, be to himself a friend,

To follow nature, and regard his end ; 250

 When the sad pomp along his banks was led ?
 His drooping swans on ev'ry note expire,
 And on his willows hung each Muse's lyre.

Since fate relentless stop'd their heav'nly voice,
 No more the forests ring, or groves rejoice ; 276
 Who now shall charm the shades, where COWLEY

 But hark ! the groves rejoice, the forest rings !
 Are these reviv'd ? or is it GRANVILLE sings ! 280
 'Tis yours, my Lord, to bless our soft retreats,

Matchless his pen, victorious was his lance,
Bold in the lists, and graceful in the dance :
In the same shades the Cupids tun'd his lyre,
To the same notes, of love, and soft desire :
Fair Geraldine, bright object of his vow, 295
Then fill'd the groves, as heav'nly Mira now.

 Her sacred domes involv'd in rolling fire,
 A dreadful series of intestine wars,
 Inglorious triumphs and dishonest scars. 324
 At length great ANNA said--"Let discord cease!"
 She said, the world obey'd, and all was Peace!

In that blest moment from his oozy bed
 Old father Thames advanc'd his rev'rend head;
 His tresses drop'd with dews, and o'er the stream
 His shining horns diffus'd a golden gleam; 330
 Grav'd on his urn appear'd the moon, that guides
 His swelling waters, and alternate tides;
 The figur'd streams in waves of silver roll'd,
 And on her banks Augusta rose in gold.

VARIATIONS.

VER. 325. Thus in the MS.

Till Anna rose and bade the Furies cease;
Let there be peace—she said, and all was Peace.

Between Verse 328 and 329, originally stood these lines,

From shore to shore exulting shouts he heard,
 O'er all his banks a lambent light appear'd,
 With sparkling flames heav'ns glowing concave shone,
 Fictitious stars, and glories not her own.
 He saw, and gently rose above the stream;
 His shining horns diffuse a golden gleam:
 With pearl and gold his tow'ry front was dress'd,
 The tributes of the distant East and West. P.

Around his throne the sea-born brothers stood,
 Who swell with tributary urns his flood : 336
 First the fam'd authors of his ancient name,
 The winding Isis and the fruitful Tame :
 The Kennet swift, for silver eels renown'd ;
 The Loddon slow, with verdant alders crown'd ; 340
 Cole, whose dark streams his flow'ry islands lave ;
 And chalky Wey, that rolls a milky wave :
 The blue, transparent Vandalis appears ;
 The gulphy Lee his sedgey tresses rears ;
 And fullen Mole, that hides his diving flood ; 345
 And silent Darent, stain'd with Danish blood.

High in the midst, upon his urn reclin'd,
 (His sea-green mantle waving with the wind)
 The God appear'd : he turn'd his azure eyes 349
 Where Windsor-domes and pompous turrets rise ;
 Then bow'd and spoke ; the winds forget to roar,
 And the hush'd waves glide softly to the shore.

Hail, sacred Peace ! hail long-expected days,
 That Thames's glory to the stars shall raise !
 Tho' Tyber's streams immortal Rome behold, 355
 Tho' foaming Hermus swells with tides of gold,
 From heav'n itself tho' sev'n-fold Nilus flows,
 And harvests on a hundred realms bestows ;

These now no more shall be the Muse's themes,
 Loft in my fame, as in the sea their streams. 360
 Let Volga's banks with iron squadrons shine,
 And groves of lances glitter on the Rhine,
 Let barb'rous Ganges arm a fervile train;
 Be mine the blessings of a peaceful reign.
 No more my sons shall die with British blood 365
 Red Iber's sands, or Ister's foaming flood:
 Safe on my shore each unmolested swain
 Shall tend the flocks, or reap the bearded grain;
 The shady empire shall retain no trace
 Of war or blood, but in the sylvan chace; 370
 The trumpet sleep, while chearful horns are blown,
 And arms employ'd on birds and beasts alone.
 Behold! th' ascending Villa's on my side,
 Project long shadows o'er the crystal tide;
 Behold! Augusta's glitt'ring spires increase, 375
 And Temples rise, the beauteous works of Peace.

 Once more to bend before a BRITISH QUEEN.

Thy trees, fair Windsor! now shall leave their woods,
 And half thy forests rush into thy floods,

 But in the Dunciad, where the mischief of Dulness is described,
 they are painted in all their inclemencies,
 See round the Poles, where keener spangles shine,
 Where spices smoke beneath the burning line.

Or under southern skies exalt their sails,
 Led by new stars, and borne by spicy gales ! 390
 For me the balm shall bleed, and amber flow,
 The coral redden, and the ruby glow,
 The pearly shell its lucid globe infold,
 And Phœbus warm the rip'ning ore to gold. 394
 The time shall come, when free as seas or wind
 Unbounded Thames shall flow for all mankind,
 Whole nations enter with each swelling tide,
 And seas but join the regions they divide ;
 Earth's distant ends our glory shall behold,
 And the new world launch forth to seek the old. 400
 Then ships of uncouth form shall stem the tide,
 And feather'd people croud my wealthy side,
 And naked youths and painted chiefs admire
 Our speech, our colour, and our strange attire !
 Oh stretch thy reign, fair Peace! from shore to shore,
 'Till Conquest cease, and Slav'ry be no more; 406
 'Till the freed Indians in their native groves
 Reap their own fruits, and woo their sable loves,

Where Peace descending bids her olive spring,
And scatters blessings from her dove-like wing.
Ev'n I more sweetly pass my careless days,
Pleas'd in the silent shade with empty praise; 430
Enough for me, that to the list'ning swains
First in these fields I sung the sylvan strains.

ODE for MUSIC

O N

ST. CECILIA'S DAY.

I.

DEscend, ye Nine! descend and sing;
The breathing instruments inspire,
Wake into voice each silent string,
And sweep the sounding lyre!

In a sadly-pleasing strain

Let the warbling lute complain:

Let the loud trumpet sound,

'Till the roofs all around

The shrill echos rebound:

NOTES.

Ode for Music,] This is one of the most artful as well as sublime of our Poet's smaller compositions. The first stanza expresses the various tones and measures in music. The second describes their power over the several passions in general. The third explains their use in inspiring the Heroic passions in particular. The fourth, fifth, and sixth, their power over all nature in the fable of Orpheus's expedition to hell; which subject of illustration arose naturally out of the preceding men-

While in more lengthen'd notes and slow, 10
 The deep, majestic, solemn organs blow.
 Hark! the numbers soft and clear
 Gently steal upon the ear;
 Now louder, and yet louder rise,
 And fill with spreading sounds the skies; 15
 Exulting in triumph now swell the bold notes,
 In broken air, trembling, the wild music floats;
 'Till, by degrees, remote and small,
 The strains decay,
 And melt away, 20
 In a dying, dying fall.

II.

By Music, minds an equal temper know,
 Nor swell too high, nor sink too low.
 If in the breast tumultuous joys arise,
 Music her soft, assuasive voice applies; 25

NOTES.

tion of the Argonautic expedition, where Orpheus gives the example of the use of Music to inspire the heroic passions. The seventh and last conclude in praise of Music, and the advantages of the sacred above the prophane.

VER. 7. Let the loud trumpet sound, etc.] Our Author, in his rules for good writing, had said, that the sound should be an echo to the sense. The graces it adds to the harmony are obvious. But we should never have seen all the advantages arising from this rule, had this ode not been written. In which, one may venture to say, is found all the harmony that poetic sound, when it comes in aid of sense, is capable of producing.

Or, when the soul is press'd with cares,
Exalts her in enliv'ning airs.

Warriors she fires with animated sounds ;
Pours balm into the bleeding lover's wounds :

Melancholy lifts her head, 30

Morpheus rouses from his bed,

Sloth unfolds her arms and wakes,

Lift'ning Envy drops her snakes ;

Intestine war no more our Passions wage,

And giddy Factions hear away their rage. 35

III.

But when our Country's cause provokes to Arms,
How martial music ev'ry bosom warms !

So when the first bold vessel dar'd the seas,

High on the stern the Thracian rais'd his strain,

While Argo saw her kindred trees 40

Descend from Pelion to the main.

Transported demi-gods stood round,

And men grew heroes at the sound,

Enflam'd with glory's charms :

Each chief his sev'nfold shield display'd, 45

And half unsheath'd the shining blade :

And seas, and rocks, and skies rebound

To arms, to arms, to arms !

IV.

But when thro' all th' infernal bounds,
 Which flaming Phlegeton furrounds, 50
 Love, strong as Death, the Poet led
 To the pale nations of the dead,
 What sounds were heard,
 What scenes appear'd,
 O'er all the dreary coasts! 55
 Dreadful gleams,
 Dismal screams,
 Fires that glow,
 Shrieks of woe,
 Sullen moans, 60
 Hollow groans,
 And cries of tortur'd ghosts!
 But hark! he strikes the golden lyre;
 And see! the tortur'd ghosts respire,
 See, shady forms advance! 65
 Thy stone, O Sisyphus, stands still,
 Ixion rests upon his wheel,
 And the pale spectres dance!
 The Furies sink upon their iron beds,
 And snakes uncurl'd hang list'ning round their heads.

V.

By the streams that ever flow, 71
 By the fragrant winds that blow
 O'er the Elyfian flow'rs ;
 By thofe happy fouls who dwell
 In yellow meads of Afphodel, 75
 Or Amaranthine bow'rs ;
 By the hero's armed fhades,
 Glitt'ring thro' the gloomy glades ;
 By the youths that dy'd for love,
 Wand'ring in the myrtle grove, 80
 Reftore, reftore Eurydice to life :
 Oh take the husband, or return the wife !

He fung, and hell confented
 To hear the Poet's prayer :
 Stern Proferpine relented, 85
 And gave him back the fair.
 Thus fong could prevail
 O'er death, and o'er hell,
 A conquest how hard and how glorious !
 Tho' fate had faft bound her 90
 With Styx nine times round her,
 Yet mufic and love were victorious.

VI.

But soon, too soon, the lover turns his eyes :
 Again she falls, again she dies, she dies !
 How wilt thou now the fatal sisters move ? 95
 No crime was thine, if 'tis no crime to love.

Now under hanging mountains,
 Beside the falls of fountains,
 Or where Hebrus wanders,
 Rolling in Mæanders, 100

All alone,
 Unheard, unknown,
 He makes his moan ;
 And calls her ghost,
 For ever, ever, ever lost ! 105

Now with Furies surrounded,
 Despairing, confounded,
 He trembles, he glows,
 Amidst Rhodope's snows :
 See, wild as the winds, o'er the desert he flies ; 110
 Hark ! Hæmus resounds with the Bacchanals cries--
 Ah see, he dies !

Yet ev'n in death Eurydice he sung,
 Eurydice still trembled on his tongue,
 Eurydice the woods, 115
 Eurydice the floods,
 Eurydice the rocks, and hollow mountains rung.

VII.

Music the fiercest grief can charm,
And fate's severest rage disarm :
Music can soften pain to ease, 120
And make despair and madness please :
Our joys below it can improve,
And antedate the bliss above.

This the divine Cecilia found,
And to her Maker's praise confin'd the sound.
When the full organ joins the tuneful quire, 126
Th' immortal pow'rs incline their ear ;
Borne on the swelling notes our souls aspire,
While solemn airs improve the sacred fire ;
And Angels lean from heav'n to hear. 130
Of Orpheus now no more let Poets tell,
To bright Cecilia greater pow'r is giv'n ;
His numbers rais'd a shade from hell,
Her's lift the soul to heav'n.

Tragedy of BRUTUS.

CHORUS OF ATHENIANS.

STROPHE I.

YE shades, where sacred truth is fought;
Groves, where immortal Sages taught:
Where heav'nly visions Plato fir'd,
And Epicurus lay inspir'd!
In vain your guiltless laurels stood 5
Unspotted long with human blood.
War, horrid war, your thoughtful Walks invades,
And steel now glitters in the Muses shades.

NOTES.

THESE two Chorus's were composed to enrich a very poor Play; but they had the usual effect of ill-adjusted Ornaments, only to make the meanness of the subject the more conspicuous.

* Altered from Skakespear by the Duke of Buckingham, at whose desire these two Chorus's were composed to supply as many, wanting in his play. They were set many years afterwards by the famous Bononcini, and performed at Buckingham-house. P.

VER. 3. Where heav'nly Visions Plato fir'd, And Epicurus lay inspir'd!] The propriety of these lines arises from hence, that Brutus, one of the Heroes of this play, was of the Old Academy; and Cassius, the other, was an Epicurean: but this had not been enough to justify the Poet's choice, had not Plato's system of Divinity, and Epicurus's system of Morals, been the most rational amongst the various sects of Greek Philosophy.

ANTISTROPHE I.

Oh heav'n-born sifters! source of art!
 Who charm the sense, or mend the heart; 10
 Who lead fair Virtue's train along,
 Moral Truth, and mystic Song!
 To what new clime, what distant sky,
 Forfaken, friendless, shall ye fly?
 Say, will ye bless the bleak Atlantic shore? 15
 Or bid the furious Gaul be rude no more?

STROPHE II.

When Athens sinks by fates unjust,
 When wild Barbarians spurn her dust;
 Perhaps ev'n Britain's utmost shore
 Shall cease to blush with stranger's gore, 20
 See Arts her savage sons controul,
 And Athens rising near the pole!
 Till some new Tyrant lifts his purple hand,
 And civil madness tears them from the land.

NOTES.

VER. 12. Moral truth AND mystic song!] He had expressed himself better had he said,

“Moral truth IN mystic song!”

In the Antistrophe he turns from Philosophy to Mythology; and Mythology is nothing but moral truth in mystic song.

A N T I S T R O P H E II.

Ye Gods! what justice rules the ball! 25
Freedom and Arts together fall;
Fools grant whate'er Ambition craves,
And men, once ignorant, are slaves.
Oh curs'd effects of civil hate,
In ev'ry age, in ev'ry state! 30
Still, when the lust of tyrant pow'r succeeds,
Some Athens perishes, some Tully bleeds.

CHORUS of Youths and Virgins.

SEMICHORUS.

OH Tyrant Love! hast thou possess't
 The prudent, learn'd, and virtuous breast?
 Wisdom and wit in vain reclaim,
 And Arts but soften us to feel thy flame.
 Love, soft intruder, enters here, 5
 But entering learns to be sincere.
 Marcus with blushes owns he loves,
 And Brutus tenderly reproves.
 Why, Virtue, dost thou blame desire,
 Which Nature has impress't? 10
 Why, Nature, dost thou soonest fire
 The mild and gen'rous breast?

CHORUS.

Love's purer flames the Gods approve;
 The Gods and Brutus bend to love:
 Brutus for absent Portia sighs, 15
 And sterner Cassius melts at Junia's eyes.

NOTES.

VER. 9. Why, Virtue, etc.] In allusion to that famous conceit of Guarini,

"Se il peccare è sì dolce," etc.

What is loose love ? a tranſient guſt,
 Spent in a ſudden ſtorm of luſt,
 A vapour fed from wild deſire,
 A wand'ring, ſelf-conſuming fire. 20

But Hymen's kinder flames unite ;
 And burn for ever one ;
 Chafte as cold Cynthia's virgin light,
 Productive as the Sun.

SEMICHORUS.

Oh ſource of ev'ry ſocial tye, 25
 United wiſh, and mutual joy !
 What various joys on one attend,
 As ſon, as father, brother, huſband, friend ?
 Whether his hoary fire he ſpies,
 While thouſand grateful thoughts ariſe ; 30
 Or meets his ſpouſe's fonder eye ;
 Or views his ſmiling progeny ;
 What tender paſſions take their turns,
 What home-felt raptures move ?
 His heart now melts, now leaps, now burns,
 With rev'rence, hope, and love. 36

CHORUS.

Hence guilty joys, diſtaſtes, ſurmifes,
 Hence falſe tears, deceits, diſguiſes,
 Dangers, doubts, delays, ſurprizes ;

Fires that scorch, yet dare not shine : 40
 Purest love's unwasting treasure,
 Constant faith, fair hope, long leifure,
 Days of ease, and nights of pleasure ;
 Sacred Hymen ! these are thine ^a.

N O T E S.

^a These two Chorus's are enough to shew us his great talents for this species of Poetry, and to make us lament he did not prosecute his purpose in executing some plans he had chalked out ; but the Character of the Managers of Playhouses at that time, was what (he said) soon determined him to lay aside all thoughts of that nature.

O D E on SOLITUDE*.

HAPPY the man, whose wish and care
A few paternal acres bound,
Content to breathe his native air,
In his own ground.

Whose herds with milk, whose fields with bread,
Whose flocks supply him with attire,
Whose trees in summer yield him shade,
In winter fire.

Blest, who can unconcern'dly find
Hours, days, and years slide soft away,
In health of body, peace of mind,
Quiet by day,

Sound sleep by night ; study and ease,
Together mixt ; sweet recreation :
And innocence, which most does please
With meditation.

Thus let me live, unseen, unknown,
Thus unlamented let me die,
Steal from the world, and not a stone
Tell where I lie.

CRITICISM.

TIS hard to say, if greater want of skill
Appear in writing or in judging ill ;
But, of the two, less dang'rous is th' offence
To tire our patience, than mislead our sense.

COMMENTARY.

An Essay.] The poem is in one book, but divided into three principal parts or members. The first [to ver. 201.] gives rules for the Study of the Art of Criticism: the second [from thence to ver. 560.] exposes the Causes of wrong Judgment; and the third [from thence to the end] marks out the Morals of the Critic.

In order to a right conception of this poem, it will be necessary to observe, that tho' it be intitled simply An Essay on Criticism, yet several of the precepts relate equally to the good writing as well as to the true judging of a poem. This is so far from violating the Unity of the subject, that it preserves and completes it: or from disordering the regularity of the Form, that it adds beauty to it, as will appear by the following considerations: 1. It was impossible to give a full and exact idea of the Art of Poetical Criticism, without considering at the same time the Art of Poetry; so far as Poetry is an Art. These therefore being closely connected in nature, the author has, with much judgment, interwoven the pre-

Some few in that, but numbers err in this, 5
 Ten censure wrong for one who writes amiss;
 A fool might once himself alone expose,
 Now one in verse makes many more in prose.

'Tis with our judgments as our watches, none
 Go just alike, yet each believes his own. 10

cepts of each reciprocally thro' his whole poem. 2. As the rules of the ancient Critics were taken from Poets who copied nature, this is another reason why every Poet should be a Critic: Therefore, as the subject is poetical Criticism, it is frequently addressed to the critical Poet. And 3dly, the Art of Criticism is as properly, and much more usefully exercised in writing than in judging.

But readers have been misled by the modesty of the Title, which only promises an Art of Criticism, to expect little, where they will find a great deal; a treatise, and that no incomplete one, of the Art both of Criticism and Poetry. This, and the not attending to the considerations offered above, was what, perhaps, misled a very candid writer, after having given the ESSAY ON CRITICISM all the praises on the side of genius and poetry which his true taste could not refuse it, to say, that the observations follow one another like those in Horace's Art of Poetry, without that methodical regularity which would have been requisite in a prose writer. Spec. N^o 235. I do not see how method can hurt any one grace of Poetry; or what prerogative there is in Verse to dispense with regularity. The remark is false in every part of it. Mr. Pope's Essay on Criticism, the Reader will soon see, is a regular piece: And a very learned Critic has lately shewn, that Horace had the same attention to method in his Art of Poetry. See Mr. Hurd's Comment on the Epistle to the Pisos.

VER. 1. 'Tis hard to say, etc.] The Poem opens [from ver. 1 to 9.] with shewing the use and seasonableness of the subject. Its use, from the greater mischief in wrong Criticism than in ill Poetry; this only tiring, that misleading the reader: Its seasonableness, from the growing number of bad Critics, which now vastly exceeds that of bad Poets.

VER. 9.] 'Tis with our judgments, etc.] The author having

In Poets as true genius is but rare,
 True Taste as seldom is the Critic's share ;
 Both must alike from Heav'n derive their light,
 These born to judge, as well as those to write.

COMMENTARY.

shewn us the expediency of his subject, the Art of Criticism, inquires next [from ver. 8 to 15] into the proper Qualities of a true Critic: and observes first, that JUDGMENT alone, is not sufficient to constitute this character, because Judgment, like the artificial measures of Time, goes different, and yet each relies upon his own. The reasoning is conclusive; and the similitude extremely just. For Judgment, when it goes alone, is generally regulated, or at least much influenced, by custom, fashion, and habit; and never certain and constant but when founded upon TASTE: which is the same in the Critic, as GENIUS in the Poet: both are derived from Heaven, and like the Sun, the natural measure of Time, always constant and equable.

Nor need we wonder that Judgment alone, will not make a Critic in poetry, when we see that it will not make a Poet. And on examination we shall find, that Genius and Taste are but one and the same faculty, differently exerting itself under different names, in the two professions of Poetry and Criticism. For the Art of Poetry consists in selecting, out of all those images which present themselves to the fancy, such of them as are truly beautiful. And the Art of Criticism in discerning, and fully relishing what it finds so selected. 'Tis an exertion of the same faculty of the mind in both cases, and by almost the same operation. The main difference is, that in the POET, this faculty is eminently joined to a bright imagination, and extensive comprehension, which provide stores for the selection, and can form that selection, by proportioned parts, into a regular whole: In the CRITIC, to a solid judgment and accurate discernment, which penetrate into the causes of an excellence, and so, can display that excellence in all its variety of lights. Longinus had taste in an eminent degree; therefore, this quality, which all true Critics have in common, our Author makes his distinguishing character,

Thee, bold Longinus! all the Nine inspire,
 And bless their Critic with a Poet's fire.

i. e. with taste or genius.

154 ESSAY ON CRITICISM.

Let such teach others who themselves excel, 15

And censure freely who have written well.

Authors are partial to their wit, 'tis true,

But are not Critics to their judgment too?

Yet if we look more closely, we shall find
Most have the seeds of judgment in their mind: 20

COMMENTARY.

VER. 15. Let such teach others, etc.] But it is not enough that the Critic hath these natural endowments of judgment and taste, to entitle him to exercise his Art; he ought, as our author shews us [from ver. 14 to 19] to give a further test of his qualification, by some acquired talents: And this, on two accounts: 1. Because the office of a Critic is an exercise of Authority. 2. Because he being naturally as partial to his Judgment as the Poet is to his Wit, his partiality would have nothing to correct it, as that of the person judged hath, by the very terms. Therefore some test is necessary; and the best, and most unexceptionable, is his having written well himself; an approved remedy against Critical partiality; and the surest means of maturing the Judgment, as to reap with glory what Longinus calls “the last and most perfect fruits of much study and experience.” Η ΓΑΡ ΤΩΝ ΛΟΓΩΝ ΚΡΙΣΙΣ ΠΟΛΛΗΣ ΕΣΤΙ ΠΕΙΡΑΣ ΤΕΛΕΥΤΑΙΟΝ ΕΠΙΓΕΝΝΗΜΑ.

VER. 19. Yet if we look, etc.] But the Author having been so free with this fundamental quality of Criticism, Judgment, as to charge it with inconstancy and partiality, and to be often warped by custom and affection; that he may not be misunderstood, he next explains [from ver. 18 to 36.] the nature

 The lines, tho' touch'd but faintly, are drawn right.
 But as the slightest sketch, if justly trac'd,
 Is by ill-colouring but the more disgrac'd,
 So by false learning is good sense defac'd : 25 }
 Some are bewilder'd in the maze of schools,
 And some made coxcombs Nature meant but fools.

VARIATIONS.

Between ver. 25 and 26 were these lines, since omitted by the author :

Many are spoil'd by that pedantic throng,
 Who with great pains teach youth to reason wrong.

COMMENTARY.

of Judgment, and the accidents occasioning those miscarriages before objected to it. He owns, that the seeds of Judgment are indeed sown in the minds of most men, but by ill culture, as it springs up, it generally runs wild : either on the one hand, by FALSE LEARNING, which pedants call Philology ; or by FALSE REASONING, which Philosophers call School learning : Or, on the other, by FALSE WIT, which is not regulated by sense ; or by FALSE POLITENESS, which is solely regulated by the fashion. Both these sorts, who have each their Judgment thus doubly depraved, the poet observes, are naturally turned to censure and abuse ; only with this difference, that the

156 ESSAY ON CRITICISM.

In search of wit these lose their common sense,
 And then turn Critics in their own defence :
 Each burns alike, who can, or cannot write, 30
 Or with a Rival's, or an Eunuch's spite,
 All fools have still an itching to deride,
 And fain would be upon the laughing side.
 If Mævius scribble in Apollo's spight,
 There are, who judge still worse than he can write.

Some have at first for Wits, then Poets past, 36
 Turn'd Critics next, and prov'd plain fools at last.

COMMENTARY.

Dunce always affects to be on the reasoning, and the Fool on the laughing side.—And thus, at the same time, our author proves the truth of his introductory observation, that the number of bad Critics is vastly superior to that of bad Poets.

VER. 36. Some have at first for Wits, etc.] The poet having enumerated, in this account of the nature of Judgment and its

NOTES.

VER. 28. In search of wit these lose their common sense,] This observation is extremely just. Search of Wit is not only the occasion, but the efficient cause of the loss of common sense. For Wit consisting in chusing out, and setting together such Ideas from whose assemblage pleasant pictures may be drawn on the Fancy; the Judgment thro' an habitual search of Wit, loses, by degrees, its faculty of seeing the true relation of things; in which consists the exercise of common sense.

VER. 32.

*All fools have still an itching to deride,
 And fain would be upon the laughing side.*]

The sentiment is just. And if Hobbes's account of Laughter be true, that it arises from a silly pride, we see the reason of it. The expression too is fine; it alludes to the condition of Idiots and natural fools, who are observed to be ever on the grin.

Some neither can for Wits nor Critics pass,
 As heavy mules are neither horse nor ass.
 Those half-learn'd witlings, num'rous in our isle,
 As half-form'd insects on the banks of Nile; 41
 Unfinish'd things, one knows not what to call,
 Their generation's so equivocal :

COMMENTARY.

various depravations, the several sorts of bad critics, and ranked them into two general Classes ; as the first sort, namely the men spoiled by false learning, are but few in comparison of the other, and likewise come less within his main view (which is poetical Criticism) but keep groveling at the bottom amongst words and syllables, he thought it enough for his purpose here, just to have mentioned them, proposing to do them right hereafter. But the men spoiled by false taste are innumerable ; and These are his proper concern : He therefore, [from ver. 35 to 46.] sub-divides them again into the two classes of the volatile and heavy : He describes, in few words, the quick progress of the One thro' Criticism, from false wit, to plain folly, where they end ; and the fixed station of the Other between the confines of both ; who under the name of Witlings, have neither end nor measure. A kind of half-formed creature from the equivocal generation of vivacity and dulness, like those on the banks of Nile, from heat and mud.

NOTES.

VER: 43. Their generation's so equivocal:] It is sufficient that a principle of philosophy has been generally received, whether it be true or false, to justify a poet's use of it to set off his wit. But, to recommend his argument he should be cautious how he uses any but the true. For falsehood, when it is set too near the truth, will tarnish what it should brighten up. Besides, the analogy between natural and moral truth makes the principles of true Philosophy the fittest for this use. Our Poet has been pretty careful in observing this rule.

158 ESSAY ON CRITICISM.

To tell 'em, would a hundred tongues require,
Or one vain wit's, that might a hundred tire. 45

But you who seek to give and merit fame,
And justly bear a Critic's noble name,
Be sure yourself and your own reach to know,
How far your genius, taste, and learning go ;
Launch not beyond your depth, but be discreet, 50
And mark that point where sense and dulness meet.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 46. But you who seek, etc.] Our Author having thus far, by way of INTRODUCTION, explained the nature, use, and abuse of Criticism, in a figurative description of the qualities and characters of Critics, proceeds now to deliver the precepts of the art. The first of which, from ver. 45 to 68. is, that he who sets up for a Critic should previously examine his own strength, and see how far he is qualified for the exercise of his profession. He puts him in a way to make this discovery, in that admirable direction given ver. 51.

AND MARK THAT POINT WHERE SENSE AND DULNESS MEET.

He had shewn above, that Judgment, without Taste or Genius, is equally incapable of making a Critic or a Poet: In whatsoever subject then the Critic's Taste no longer accompanies his Judgment, there he may be assured he is going out of his depth. This our Author finely calls, that point where sense and dulness meet.

And immediately adds the REASON of his precept; the Author of Nature having so constituted the mental faculties, that one of them can never greatly excel, but at the expence of another. From this state of coordination in the mental faculties, and the influence and effects they have upon one another, the Poet draws this CONSEQUENCE, that no one Genius can excell in more than one Art or Science. The consequence shews the necessity of the precept, just as the premisses, from which the consequence is drawn, shew the reasonableness of it.

Nature to all things fix'd the limits fit,
 And wisely curb'd proud man's pretending wit.
 As on the land while here the ocean gains,
 In other parts it leaves wide sandy plains ; 55
 Thus in the soul while memory prevails,
 The solid pow'r of understanding fails ;
 Where beams of warm imagination play,
 The memory's soft figures melt away.
 One science only will one genius fit ; 60
 So vast is art, so narrow human wit :

NOTES.

VER. 51. And mark that point where sense and dulness meet.] Besides the peculiar sense explained above in the comment, the words have still a more general meaning, and caution us against going on, when our Ideas begin to grow obscure : as we are then most apt to do ; tho' that obscurity is an admonition that we should leave off ; for it arises either from our small acquaintance with the subject, or the incomprehensibility of its nature. In which circumstances a Genius will always write as sadly as a Dunce. An observation well worth the attention of all profound writers.

VER. 56. *Thus in the soul while memory prevails,
 The solid pow'r of understanding fails ;
 Where beams of warm imagination play,
 The memory's soft figures melt away.*]

These observations are collected from an intimate knowledge of human nature. The cause of that languor and heaviness in the understanding, which is almost inseparable from a very strong and tenacious memory, seems to be a want of the proper exercise of that faculty ; the understanding being, in a great measure, unactive, while the memory is cultivating. As to the other appearance, the decay of memory by the vigorous ex-

First follow Nature, and your judgment frame
 By her just standard, which is still the same :

COMMENTARY.

VER. 68. First follow Nature, etc.] The Critic observing the directions before given, and now finding himself qualified for his office, is shewn next, how to exercise it. And as he was to attend to Nature for a Call, so he is first and principally to follow her when called. And here again in this, as in the foregoing precept, our Poet [from ver. 67 to 88.] shews both the fitness and necessity of it. 1. It's fitness, 1. Because Nature is the source of Poetic art ; this art being only a representation of Nature, who is its great exemplar and original. 2. Because Nature is the end of Art ; the design of poetry being to convey the knowledge of ercise of Fancy, the Poet himself seems to have intimated the cause of it in the epithet he has given to the Imagination. For, if, according to the Atomic Philosophy, the memory of things be preserved in a chain of ideas, produced by the animal spirits moving in continued trains ; the force and rapidity of the Imagination, perpetually breaking and dissipating the links of this chain by forming new associations, must necessarily weaken and disorder the recollective faculty.

NOTES.

VER. 67. Would all but stoop to what they understand. The expression is delicate, and implies what is very true, that most men think it a degradation of their genius to use it in cultivating what lies level to their comprehension, but had rather employ their talents in the ambitious attempt of subduing what is placed above it.

Unerring NATURE, still divinely bright, 70
 One clear, unchang'd, and universal light,
 Life, force, and beauty, must to all impart,
 At once the source, and end, and test of Art.
 Art from that fund each just supply provides ;
 Works without show, and without pomp presides :

COMMENTARY.

Nature in the most agreeable manner. 3. Because Nature is the test of Art, as she is unerring, constant, and still the same. Hence the poet observes, that as Nature is the source, she conveys life to art : As she is the end, she conveys force to it, for the force of any thing arises from its being directed to its end : And as she is the test, she conveys beauty to it, for every thing acquires beauty by its being reduced to its true standard. Such is the sense of those two important lines,

Life, force, and beauty must to all impart,
 At once the source, and end, and test of Art.

II. The necessity of the precept is seen from hence. The two constituent qualities of a Composition, as such, are Art and Wit : But neither of these attains perfection, 'till the first be hid, and the other judiciously restrained ; this only happens when Nature is exactly followed ; for then Art never makes a parade ; nor can Wit commit an extravagance. Art, while it adheres to Nature, and has so large a fund in the resources which Nature supplies, disposes every thing with so much ease and simplicity, that we see nothing but those natural images it works with, while itself stands unobserv'd, behind : But when Art leaves Nature, misled either by the bold fallies of Fancy, or the quaint oddnesses of Fashion, she is then obliged at every step to come forward, in a painful or pompous ostentation, in order to cover, to soften, or to regulate the shocking disproportion of unnatural images. In the first case, our Poet compares Art to the Soul within, informing a beauteous body ; but in the last, we are bid to consider it but as a mere outward garb, fitted only to hide the defects of a mis-shapen one.—As to Wit, it might perhaps be imagined that this needed only Judgment to govern it : But, as he well observes,

Wit and Judgment often are at strife,
 Tho' meant each other's aid, like Man and Wife.

They want therefore some friendly Mediator ; and this Mediator is Nature : And in attending to Nature, Judgment will learn where he should comply with the charms of Wit ; and Wit how she ought to obey the sage directions of Judgment.

VER. 88. Those Rules of old, etc.] Having thus, in his first precept, to follow Nature, settled Criticism on its true foundation ; he proceeds to shew, what assistance may be had from

Nature, like Liberty, is but restrain'd 90
By the same Laws which first herself ordain'd.

Art. But, lest this should be thought to draw the Critic from the ground where our Poet had before fixed him, he previously observes [from ver. 87 to 92.] that these Rules of Art, which he is now about to recommend to the Critic's observance, were not invented by the Fancy, but discovered in the book of Nature; and that therefore, tho' they may seem to restrain Nature by Laws, yet as they are Laws of her own making, the Critic is still properly in the very liberty of Nature. These Rules the antient Critics borrowed from the Poets, who received them immediately from Nature.

“ Just Precepts thus from great Examples giv'n,
“ These drew from them what they deriv'd from Heav'n :”
so that both are to be well studied.

VER. 92. Hear how learn'd Greece, etc.] He speaks of the ancient Critics first, and with great judgment, as the previous knowledge of them is necessary for reading the Poets, with that fruit which the end here proposed, requires. But having, in the previous observation, sufficiently explained the nature of ancient Criticism, he enters on the subject [treated of, from ver. 91 to 118.] with a sublime description of its end;

NOTES.

VER. 88. Those Rules of old, etc.] Cicero has, best of any one I know, explained what that thing is which reduces the wild and scattered parts of human knowledge into arts.—

which was to illustrate the beauties of the best Writers, in order to excite others to an emulation of their excellence. From the rapture, which these Ideas inspire, the poet is brought back, by the follies of modern Criticism, now before his eyes, to reflect on its base degeneracy. And as the restoring the Art to its original purity and splendor is the great purpose of his poem, he first takes notice of those, who seem not to understand that Nature is exhaustless; that new models of good writing may be produced in every age; and consequently, that new rules may be formed from these models, in the same manner as the old Critics formed theirs, which was, from the writings of the ancient Poets: But men wanting art and ability to form these new rules, were content to receive, and file up for use, the old ones of Aristotle, Quintilian, Longinus, Horace, etc. with the same vanity and boldness that Apothecaries practise, with their Doctor's bills: And then rashly applying them to new Originals (cases which they did not hit) it was no more in their power than in their inclination to imitate the candid practice of the Ancients, when

See an example (for want of a better) in a late ridiculous and now forgotten thing, called the Life of Socrates: where the Head of the author (as a man of wit observed, on reading the book) has just made a shift to do the office of a Camera obscura, and represent things in an inverted order; himself above, and Sprat, Rollin, Voltaire, and every other writer of reputation, below.

safely through every considerable work we undertake to examine; and, without which, we may cavil indeed, as the Poet truly observes, but can never criticize. We might as well suppose that Vitruvius's book alone would make a perfect Judge of Architecture, without the knowledge of some great master-piece of science, such as the Rotonda at Rome, or the Temple of Minerva at Athens; as that Aristotle's should make a perfect Judge of wit, without the study of Homer and Virgil. These therefore he principally recommends to complete the Critic in his Art. But as the latter of these Poets has, by superficial judges been considered rather as a copier of Homer, than an original from Nature, our Author obviates that common error, and shews it to have arisen (as often error does) from a truth, viz. that Homer and Nature were the same; and how that the ambitious young Poet, though he scorned to stoop at any thing short of Nature, when he came to understand this great truth, had the prudence to contemplate Nature in the place where she was seen to most advantage, collected in all her charms in the clear mirror of Homer. Hence it would

COMMENTARY.

VER. 141. Some beauties yet no Precepts can declare, etc.] Our author, in these two general directions for studying Nature and her Commentators, having considered Poetry as it is, or may be reduced to Rule; lest this should be mistaken as sufficient to attain PERFECTION either in writing or judging, he proceeds [from ver. 140 to 201.] to point up to those sublimier beauties which Rules will never reach, nor enable us either to execute or taste: beauties, which rise so high above all precept as not even to be described by it; but being entirely the gift of Heaven, Art, and Reason have no further share in them than just to regulate their operations. These Sublimities of Poetry, like the Mysteries of Religion (some of which are above Reason, and some contrary to it) may be divided into two sorts, such as are above Rules, and such as are contrary to them.

describes [from ver. 145 to 159.] and shews, that where a great beauty is in the Poet's view, which no stated Rules will direct him how to reach, there, as the purpose of rules is only to attain an end like this, a lucky Licence will supply the want of them : nor can the Critic fairly object to it, since this Licence, for the reason given above, has the proper force and authority of a Rule.

VER. 150. Thus Pegafus, etc.] We have observed how the precepts for writing and judging are interwoven throughout the whole Poem. The sublime flight of a Poet is first described, soaring above all vulgar bounds, to snatch a Grace directly which lies beyond the reach of a common adventurer. And afterwards, the effect of that Grace upon the true Critic : whom it penetrates with an equal rapidity ; going the nearest way to his heart, without passing through his Judgment. By which is not meant that it could not stand the test of Judgment ; but that, as it was a beauty uncommon, and above rule, and the Judgment habituated to determine only by rule, it makes its direct appeal to the heart ; which, when once gained, soon brings over the Judgment, whose concurrence (it being now enlarged and set above forms) is easily procured. That this is the Poet's sublime conception appears from the concluding words :

“ and all its end at once attains.”

For Poetry doth not attain all its end, till it hath gained the Judgment as well as Heart.

From vulgar bounds with brave disorder part,
 And snatch a grace beyond the reach of art,
 Which without passing thro' the judgment, gains
 The heart, and all its end at once attains. 155

 Let it be seldom, and compell'd by need; 165
 And have, at least, their precedent to plead.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 159. Great Wits sometimes may gloriously offend, etc.] He describes next the second sort, the beauties against rule. And even here, as he observes [from ver. 158 to 169.] the offence is so glorious, and the fault so sublime, that the true Critic will not dare either to censure or reform them. Yet still the Poet is never to abandon himself to his imagination: The rules laid down for his conduct in this respect, are these; 1. That though he transgress the letter of some one particular Precept, yet that he be still careful to adhere to the end or spirit of them all; which end is the creation of one uniform perfect Whole. And 2. That he have, in each instance, the authority of the dispensing power of the Ancients to plead for him. These rules observed, this licence will be seldom used, and only when he is compelled by need: which will disarm the Critic, and screen the offender from his laws.

The Critic else proceeds without remorse,
Seizes your fame, and puts his laws in force.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 169. I know there are, etc.] But as some modern Critics have had the presumption to say, that this last reason is only justifying one fault by another, our author goes on [from ver. 168 to 181.] to vindicate the Ancients; and to shew that this severity of opinion proceeds from mere Ignorance. As where their partiality will not let them see that this licence is sometimes necessary for the symmetry and proportion of a perfect Whole, from the point, and in the light, wherein it must be view'd: or where their haste will not give them time to observe, that a deviation from rule is for the sake of attaining some great and admirable purpose.—These observations are further useful, as they tend to give modern Critics an humbler opinion of their own abilities, and an higher of the Authors they undertake to criticize. On which account he concludes with a fine reproof of that common proverb perpetually in the mouths of the Critics. quandoque bonus dormitat Homerus; misunderstanding the sense of Horace, and taking quandoque for aliquando:

Then with the humility of a Suppliant at the shrine of Immortals, and the sublimity of a Poet participating of their fire, he turns again to these ancient worthies, and apostrophises their Manes; sense; which, if it will not of itself dispose Moderns to a diffidence of their own (one of the great uses, as well as natural fruits of that study) our author, to help forward their modesty, in his second part shews them (in a regular deduction of the causes and effects of wrong Judgment) their own bright image and amiable turn of mind.

VER. 201. Of all the causes, etc.] Having, in the first part, delivered Rules for perfecting the Art of Criticism, the second is employed in explaining the Impediments to it. The order of the two parts was well adjusted. For the causes of wrong Judgment being Pride; superficial Learning, a bounded Capacity, and Partiality; They to whom this part is principally addressed, would not readily be brought either to see the malignity of the causes, or to own themselves concerned in the effects, had not the author previously both enlightened and convinced them, by the foregoing observations, on the vastness of Art, and narrowness of Wit; the extensive study of human Nature and Antiquity; and the Characters of ancient Poetry and Criticism; the natural remedies to the four epidemic disorders he is now endeavouring to redress.

Ibid. Of all the causes, etc.] The first cause of wrong Judgment is PRIDE. He judiciously begins with this, [from ver. 200 to 215.] as on other accounts, so on this, that it is the very thing which gives modern Criticism its character; whose complexion is abuse and censure. He calls it the vice of Fools, by which is not meant, those to whom Nature has given no Judgment (for he is here speaking of what misleads the Judgment) but those on whom education and study has made no improvement; as appears from the happy similitude of an ill-nourished body; where the same words which express the cause, express likewise the nature of PRIDE:

“ For as in bodies, thus in souls, we find
“ What wants in blood and spirits, swell'd with wind.”

Whatever Nature has in worth deny'd, 205
 She gives in large recruits of needful Pride ;
 For as in bodies, thus in souls, we find
 What wants in blood and spirits, swell'd with wind :
 Pride, where Wit fails, steps in to our defence,
 And fills up all the mighty Void of sense. 210
 If once right reason drives that cloud away,
 Truth breaks upon us with resistless day.

 Make use of ev'ry friend----and ev'ry foe.

COMMENTARY.

'Tis the business of Reason, he tells us, to dispell the cloud in which pride involves the mind : But the mischief is that the rays of reason, diverted by self-love, sometimes gild this cloud, instead of dispelling it. So that the Judgment, by false lights reflected back upon itself, is still apt to be a little dazzled, and to mistake its object. He therefore advises to call in still more helps :

“ Trust not yourself ; but your defects to know,
 “ Make use of ev'ry Friend—and ev'ry Foe.

Both the beginning and conclusion of this precept, are remarkable. The question is, of the means to subdue Pride : He directs the Critic to begin with a distrust of himself ; and this is Modesty, the first mortification of Pride : And then to seek the assistance of others, and make use even of an Enemy ; and this is Humility, the last mortification of Pride : For when a man can once bring himself to submit to profit by an enemy, he has either already quite subdued his Vanity, or is in a fair way of so doing.

And fills up all the mighty Void of sense.]

A very sensible French writer makes the following remark on this species of pride. “ Un homme qui scait plusieurs

 There shallow draughts intoxicate the brain,
 And drinking largely sobers us again.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 215. A little learning, etc.] We must here remark the Poet's skill in his disposition of the causes obstructing true Judgment. Each general cause which is laid down first, has its own particular cause in that which follows. Thus, the second cause of wrong Judgment, SUPERFICIAL LEARNING, is what occasions that critical Pride, which he places first.

VER. 216. Drink deep, etc.] Nature and Learning are the pole stars of all true Criticism : But Pride obstructs the view of Nature ; and a smattering of letters makes us insensible of our ignorance. To avoid this ridiculous situation, the Poet [from ver. 214 to 233.] advises, either to drink deep, or not to drink at all ; for the least taste at this fountain is enough to make a bad Critic, while even a moderate draught can never make a good one. And yet the labours and difficulties of drinking deep are so great that a young author, " Fir'd with " ideas of fair Italy," and ambitious to snatch a palm from Rome, engages in an undertaking like that of Hannibal : Finely illustrated by the similitude of an unexperienced traveller penetrating thro' the Alps.

manner of the work criticised: Of the matter, in judging by parts, or in having one favourite part to a neglect of all the rest: Of the manner, in confining the regard only to conceit, or language, or numbers. This is our Poet's order: and we shall follow him as it leads us; only just observing one general beauty which runs thro' this part of the poem; it is that under each of these heads of wrong Judgment, he has intermixed excellent precepts for the right. We shall take notice of them as they occur.

He exposes the folly of judging by parts very artfully, not by a direct description of that sort of Critic, but of his opposite, a perfect Judge, etc. It is observable that our Author makes it almost the necessary consequence of judging by parts, TO FIND FAULT: And this not without much discernment: For the several parts of a compleat Whole, when seen only singly, and known only independently, must always have the appearance of irregularity; often of deformity: because the Poet's design being to create a resultive beauty from the artful assemblage of several various parts into one natural whole; those

NOTES.

VER. 235. *Survey the Whole, nor seek slight faults to find
 Where nature moves, and rapture warms the mind;*]
 The second line, in apologizing for those faults which the first says should be overlooked, gives the reason of the precept. For when a great writer's attention is fixed on a general view of Nature, and his imagination warm'd with the contemplation of great ideas, it can hardly be but that there must be small irregularities in the disposition both of matter and style, because the avoiding these requires a coolness of recollection, which a writer so qualified and so busied is not master of.

But in such lays as neither ebb nor flow,
 Correctly cold, and regularly low, 240
 That shunning faults, one quiet tenour keep;
 We cannot blame indeed---but we may sleep.
 In Wit, as Nature, what affects our hearts
 Is not th' exactness of peculiar parts;
 'Tis not a lip, or eye, we beauty call, 245
 But the joint force and full result of all.
 Thus when we view some well-proportion'd dome, parts must be fashioned with regard to their mutual relations, in the stations they occupy in that whole, from whence, the beauty required is to arise: But that regard will occasion so un-reducible a form in each part, when considered singly, as to present a very mis-shapen appearance.

 Rome!)

NOTES.

VER. 248. The world's just wonder, and ev'n thine, O Rome!] The Pantheon. There is something very Gothic in the taste and judgment of a learned man, who despises this masterpiece of Art, for those very qualities which deserve our admiration.—“ Nous esmerveillons comme l'on fait si grand cas de ce Pantheon, veu que son edifice n'est de si grande industrie comme l'on crie: car chaque petit Masson peut bien concevoir la maniere de se façon tout en un instant: car estant la base si massive, et les murailles si espaisées, ne nous a semblé difficile d'y adjouster la voute à claire voye.” Pierre Belon's Observations, etc. The nature of the Gothic

Since none can compass more than they intend;

COMMENTARY.

VER. 253. Whoever thinks a faultless piece to see,] He shews next [from ver. 252 to 264.] that to fix our censure on single parts, tho' they happen to want an exactness consistent enough with their relation to the rest, is even then very unjust: And for these reasons, 1. Because it implies an expectation of a faultless piece, which is a vain imagination: 2. Because no more is to be expected of any work than that it fairly attains its end: But the end may be attained, and yet these trivial faults committed: Therefore, in spite of such faults, the work will merit that praise that is due to every thing which attains its end. 3. Because sometimes a great beauty is not to be procured, nor a notorious blemish to be avoided, but by suffering one of these minute and trivial errors. 4. And lastly, because the general neglect of them is a praise; as it is the indication of a Genius, attentive to greater matters.

NOTES.

structures apparently led him into this mistake of the Architectonic art in general; that the excellency of it consisted in raising the greatest weight on the least assignable support, so that the edifice should have strength without the appearance of it, in order to excite admiration. But to a judicious eye it would have a contrary effect, the Appearance (as our poet expresses it) of a monstrous height, or breadth, or length. Indeed did the just proportions in regular Architecture take off from the grandeur of a building, by all the single parts coming united to the eye, as this learned traveller seems to insinuate, it would be a reasonable objection to those rules on which this Master-piece of Art was constructed. But it is not so. The Poet tells us truly,

“ The Whole at once is BOLD and regular.”

And if the means be just, the conduct true,
 Applause, in spite of trivial faults, is due.
 As men of breeding, sometimes men of wit,
 T' avoid great errors, must the less commit : 260
 Neglect the rules each verbal Critic lays,
 For not to know some trifles, is a praise.
 Most Critics, fond of some subservient art,
 Still make the Whole depend upon a Part :
 They talk of principles, but notions prize, 265
 And all to one lov'd Folly sacrifice.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 263. Most Critics, fond of some subservient art, etc.]
 II. The second way in which a narrow capacity, as it relates to the matter, shews itself, is judging by a favorite Part. The author has placed this [from ver. 262 to 285.] after the other of judging by parts, with great propriety, it being indeed a natural consequence of it. For when men have once left the whole to turn their attention to the separate parts, that regard and reverence due only to a whole is fondly transferred to one or other of its parts. And thus we see that Heroes themselves as well as Hero-makers, even Kings as well as Poets and Critics, when they chance never to have had, or long to have lost the idea of that which is the only legitimate object of their office, the care and conservation of the whole, are wont to devote themselves to the service of some favourite part, whether it be love of money, military glory, despotic power, etc. And all, as our Author says on this occasion,

“ to one lov'd Folly sacrifice.”

This general misconduct much recommends that maxim in good Poetry and Politics, to give a principal attention to the whole; a maxim which our author has elsewhere shewn to be equally true likewise in Morals and Religion; as being founded in the order of things: For if we examine, we shall find the misconduct here complained of, to arise from this imbecility of our nature, that the mind must always have something to rest upon, to which the passions and affections may be interestingly directed. Nature prompts us to seek it in the most worthy object; and common sense points out to a Whole or System: But Ignorance, and the false lights of the Passions, confound and dazzle us; we stop short, and before we get to a Whole, take up with some Part; which from thence becomes our Favourite.

NOTES.

VER. 267. Once on a time, etc.] This tale is so very apposite, that one would naturally take it to be of the Poet's own invention; and so much in the spirit of Cervantes, that we might easily mistake it for one of the chief beauties of that incomparable Satire. Yet, in truth, it is neither; but a story taken by our Author from the spurious Don Quixote; which shews how proper an use may be made of general reading, when if there be but one good thing in a book (as in that wretched performance there scarce was more) it may be picked out, and employ'd to an excellent purpose.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 285. *Thus Critics of less judgment than caprice,
Curious not knowing, not exact but nice,
Form short ideas, etc.]*

2. He concludes his observations on those two sorts of Judges by parts, with this general reflection—The curious not knowing are the first sort, who judge by parts, and with a microscopic sight (as he says elsewhere) examine bit by bit: The not exact but nice, are the second, who judge by a favourite part, and talk of a whole to cover their fondness for a part; as Philosophers do of principles, in order to obtrude notions and opinions in their stead,

NOTES.

VER. 285. *Thus Critics of less judgment than caprice,
Curious not knowing, not exact but nice.]* In these two lines the poet finely describes the way in which bad writers are wont to imitate the qualities of good ones. As true Judgment

Form short Ideas ; and offend in arts
(As most in manners) by a love to parts.

Some to Conceit alone their taste confine,
And glitt'ring thoughts struck out at ev'ry line; 290
Pleas'd with a work where nothing's just or fit ;
One glaring Chaos and wild heap of wit.

COMMENTARY.

But the fate common to both is, to be governed by caprice and not by Judgment, and consequently to form short ideas, or to have ideas short of truth : Tho' the latter sort, thro' a fondness to their favourite part, imagine that it comprehends the whole in epitome : As the famous Hero of La Mancha, mentioned just before, used to maintain, that Knight Errantry comprised within itself the quintessence of all Science, civil, military, and religious.

VER. 289. Some to conceit alone, etc.] We come now to that second sort of bounded capacity, which betrays itself in its judgment on the manner of the work criticised. And this our Author prosecutes from ver. 288 to 384. These are again subdivided into divers classes.

Ibid. Some to conceit alone, etc.] The first, [from ver. 288 to 305.] are those who confine their attention solely to Conceit or Wit. And here again the Critic by parts, offends doubly in the manner, just as he did in the matter : For he not only confines generally draws men out of popular opinions, so he who cannot get from the croud by the assistance of this guide, willingly follows Caprice, which will be sure to lead him into singularities. Again, true Knowledge is the art of treasuring up only that which, from its use in life, is worthy of being lodged in the memory. But Curiosity consists in a vain attention to every thing out of the way, and which, for its inutility, the world least regards. Lastly, Exactness is the just proportion of parts to one another, and their harmony in a whole : But he who has not extent of capacity for the exercise of this quality, contents himself with Nicety, which is a busying one's self about points and syllables.

Poets, like painters, thus, unskill'd to trace his attention to a part, when it should be extended to the whole ; but he likewise judges falsely of that part. And this, as the other, is unavoidable ; the parts in the manner bearing the same close relation to the whole, that the parts in the matter do ; to which whole, the ideas of this Critic have never yet extended. Hence it is, that our Author speaking here of those who confine their attention solely to Conceit or Wit, describes the true species of true and false Wit : because they not only mistake a wrong disposition of true Wit for a right, but likewise false Wit for true : He describes false Wit first, [from ver. 288 to 297.]

“ Some to Conceit alone,” etc.

Where the reader may observe our Author's skill in representing, in a description of false Wit, the false disposition of the true ; as the Critic by parts is apt to fall into both these errors.

He next describes true Wit, [from 296 to 305.]

“ True Wit is Nature to advantage drefs'd,” etc.

And here again the reader may observe the same beauty ; not only an explanation of true Wit, but likewise of the right disposition of it, which the poet illustrates, as he did the wrong, by ideas taken from the art of Painting.

NOTES.

VER. 297. True Wit is Nature to advantage drefs'd, etc.] This definition is very exact. Mr. Locke had defined Wit to consist “ in the assemblage of ideas, and putting those together, “ with quickness and variety, wherein can be found any resemblance or congruity, whereby to make up pleasant pictures and agreeable visions in the fancy.” But that great

Others for Language all their care express, 305
 And value books, as women men, for dress :

COMMENTARY.

VER. 305. Others for Language, etc.] He proceeds secondly to those narrow-minded Critics, whose whole concern turns upon Language, and shews [from ver. 304 to 337.] that this quality, where it holds the principal place, deserves no commendation; 1. Because it excludes qualities more essential. And when the abounding Verbiage has excluded the sense, the writer has nothing to do but to gild over the defect, by giving his words all the false colouring in his power.

2. He shews, that the Critic who busies himself with this quality alone, is altogether unable to make a right Judgment of it; because true Expression is only the dress of Thought; and so must be perpetually varied according to the subject and man-

NOTES.

Philosopher, in separating Wit from Judgment, as he does in this place, has given us (and he could therefore give us no other) only an account of Wit in general: In which false Wit, tho' not every species of it, is included. A striking Image therefore of Nature is, as Mr. Locke observes, certainly Wit: But this image may strike on several other accounts, as well as for its truth and beauty; and the Philosopher has explained the manner how. But it never becomes that Wit which is the ornament of true Poesy, whose end is to represent Nature, but when it dresses that Nature to advantage, and presents her to us in the brightest and most amiable light. And to know when the Fancy has done its office truly, the Poet subjoins this ad-

Now as these Critics are ignorant of this correspondence, their whole judgment in Language is reduced to the examination of single words, and generally those which are most to his taste, are (for an obvious reason) such as smack most of Antiquity : On which account our author has bestowed a little raillery upon it ; concluding with a short and proper direction concerning the use of words, so far as regards their novelty and ancientry.

NOTES.

mirable Test, viz. When we perceive that it gives us back the image of our mind. When it does that, we may be sure it plays no tricks with us : For this image is the creature of the Judgment, and whenever Wit corresponds with Judgment, we may safely pronounce it to be true. “ Naturam intueamur, hanc sequamur : id facillime accipiunt animi quod agnoscunt.” Quint. lib. viii. c. 3.

VER. 311. False eloquence, like the prismatic glass, etc.] This simile is beautiful. “Smooth or rough, with them, is right or wrong.”
 He then describes the true. 1. As it is in itself, constant; with a happy mixture of strength and sweetness, in contradiction to the roughness and flatness of false Harmony: And 2. as it is

 And bid alternate passions fall and rise! 375
 While at each change, the son of Libyan Jove
 Now burns with glory, and then melts with love;
 Now his fierce eyes with sparkling fury glow,
 Now sighs steal out, and tears begin to flow:
 Persians and Greeks like turns of nature found, 380
 And the World's victor stood subdu'd by Sound!
 The pow'r of Music all our hearts allow,
 And what Timotheus was, is DRYDEN now.
 Avoid Extremes; and shun the fault of such,
 Who still are pleas'd too little or too much. 385

COMMENTARY.

VER. 384. Avoid Extremes, etc.] Our Author is now come to the last cause of wrong Judgment, PARTIALITY; the parent of the immediately preceding cause, a bounded capacity: nothing so much narrowing and contracting the mind as prejudices entertained for or against things or persons. This therefore, as the main root of all the foregoing, he prosecutes at large [from ver. 383 to 474.] First, to ver. 394. he previously exposes that capricious turn of Mind, which, by running men into Extremes, either of praise or dispraise, lays the foundation of an habitual partiality. He cautions therefore both against one and the other; and with reason; for excess of Praise is the mark of a bad taste; and excess of Censure, of a bad digestion.

NOTES.

VER. 374. Hear how Timotheus, etc.] See Alexander's Feast, or the Power of Music; an Ode by Mr. Dryden. P.

At ev'ry trifle scorn to take offence,
 That always shews great pride, or little sense :

 Which nauseate all, and nothing can digest.
 Yet let not each gay Turn thy rapture move ; 390
 For fools admire, but men of sense approve :
 As things seem large which we thro' mists descry,
 Dulness is ever apt to magnify.

Some foreign writers, some our own despise ;
 The Ancients only, or the Moderns prize. 395

COMMENTARY.

VER. 394. Some foreign writers, etc.] Having explained the disposition of mind which produces an habitual partiality, he proceeds to expose this partiality in all the shapes in which it appears both amongst the unlearned and the learned.

I In the unlearned, it is seen, first, In an unreasonable fondness for, or aversion to, our own or foreign, to ancient or modern writers. And as it is the mob of unlearned readers he is here speaking of, he exposes their folly in a very apposite similitude :

“ Thus Wit, like Faith, by each Man is apply'd
 “ To one small sect, and all are damn'd beside.”

But he shews [from ver. 396 to 408.] that these Critics have as wrong notions of Reason as those Bigots have of God : for that Genius is not confined to times or climates ; but, as the common gift of Nature, is extended throughout all ages and countries : that indeed this intellectual light, like the material light of the Sun, may not shine at all times, and in every place, with equal splendor ; but be sometimes clouded with popular ignorance ; and sometimes again eclipsed by the discountenance of the Great ; yet it shall still recover itself ; and, by breaking thro' the strongest of these impediments, manifest the eternity of its nature.

Thus Wit, like Faith, by each man is apply'd
 To one small sect, and all are damn'd beside.
 Meanly they seek the blessing to confine,
 And force that sun but on a part to shine,
 Which not alone the southern wit sublimes, 400
 But ripens spirits in cold northern climes ;
 Which from the first has shone on ages past,
 Enlights the present, and shall warm the last ;
 Tho' each may feel encreases and decays,
 And see now clearer and now darker days. 405
 Regard not then if Wit be old or new,
 But blame the false, and value still the true.

Some ne'er advance a Judgment of their own,
 But catch the spreading notion of the Town ;

COMMENTARY.

VER. 408. Some ne'er advance a judgment of their own.] A second instance of unlearned partiality, is, (as he shews from ver. 407 to 424.) men's going always along with the cry, as having no fixed nor well grounded principles whereon to raise any judgment of their own. A third is reverence for names ; of which sort, as he well observes, the worst and vilest are the idolizers of names of quality ; whom therefore he stigmatizes as they deserve. Our Author's temper as well as judgment is here seen, in throwing this species of partiality amongst the

NOTES.

VER. 402. Which from the first, etc.] Genius is the same in all ages ; but its fruits are various ; and more or less excellent as they are checked or matured by the influence of Government or Religion upon them. Hence in some parts of Literature the Ancients excell ; in others, the Moderns ; just as those accidental circumstances occurred.

They reason and conclude by precedent, 410
 And own stale nonsense which they ne'er invent.

COMMENTARY.

unlearned Critics: His affection for letters would not suffer him to conceive, that any learned Critic could ever fall into so low a prostitution.

VER. 424. The Vulgar thus—As oft the Learn'd—] II. He comes in the second place [from ver. 423 to 452.] to consider the Instances of partiality in the learned. I. The first is Singularity. For, as want of principles, in the unlearned, necessitates them to rest on the common judgment, as always right: so adherence to false principles (that is, to notions of their own) mislead the learned into the other extreme of supposing the common judgment always wrong. And as, before, our Author compared those to Bigots, who made true faith to consist in believing after others; so he compares these to Schismatics, who make it to consist in believing as no one ever believed before. Which folly he marks with a lively stroke of humour in the turn of the thought :

And are but damn'd for having too much wit.

COMMENTARY.

“ So Schismatics the plain believers quit,
“ And are but damn'd for having too much wit.”

2. The second is Novelty. And as this proceeds sometimes from fondness, sometimes from vanity ; he compares the one to the passion for a mistress ; and the other, to the pride of being in fashion : But the excuse common to both is, the daily improvement of their Judgment :

“ Ask them the cause, they're wiser still, they say ;
“ And still to-morrow's wiser than to-day ”

Now as this is a plausible pretence for their inconstancy ; and our Author has himself afterwards approved of it, as a remedy against obstinacy and pride, where he says, ver. 573.

“ But you with pleasure own your errors past,
“ And make each day a Critique on the last,

he has been careful, by the turn of the expression in this place to shew the difference between the pretence and the remedy. For Time, considered only as duration, vitiates as frequently as it improves : Therefore to expect wisdom as the necessary attendant of length of days, unrelated to long experience, is vain and delusive. This he illustrates by a remarkable example ; where we see Time, instead of becoming wiser, destroying good letters, to substitute school divinity in their place—The genius of which kind of learning ; the character of its professors ; and the fate, which, sooner or later, always attends whatsoever is wrong or false, the poet sums up in those four lines ;

“ Faith, Gospel, all, seem'd made to be disputed,” etc.

Some praise at morning what they blame at night;
 But always think the last opinion right. 431
 A Muse by these is like a mistress us'd,
 This hour she's idoliz'd, the next abus'd;
 While their weak heads like towns unfortify'd,
 'Twixt sense and nonsense daily change their side.
 Ask them the cause; they're wiser still, they say; 436
 And still to-morrow's wiser than to-day.
 We think our fathers fools, so wise we grow;
 Our wiser sons, no doubt, will think us so. 439
 Once School-divines this zealous isle o'er-spread;
 Who knew most Sentences, was deepest read;
 Faith, Gospel, all, seem'd made to be disputed,
 And none had sense enough to be confuted:
 Scotists and Thomists, now, in peace remain,
 Amidst their kindred cobwebs in Duck-lane. 445

COMMENTARY.

And in conclusion, he observes, that perhaps this mischief from love of novelty, might not be so great, did it not, along with the Critic, infect the Writer likewise; who, when he finds his readers disposed to take ready Wit on the standard of current Folly, never troubles himself to think of better payment.

That grave Antiquary, Mr. Antony Wood (in the Vindication of himself and his writings from the reproaches of the Bishop of Salisbury) sadly laments the deformation, as he calls it, of that University by the King's Commissioners; and even records the blasphemous speeches of one of them, in his own words—"We have set

And that the nailing up this Proteus of the Schools was done by the Commissioners in honour of the most famous Duns : There being no other way of catching the sense of so slippery and dodging an Author, who had eluded the pursuit of three of their most renowned Doctors in full cry after him, for eight and twenty years together. This is an admirable satire on those called Authors in fashion ; the men who get the laugh on their side. He shews, on how pitiful a basis their reputation stands, the changling disposition of fools, to laugh, who are always carried away with the last joke, when they load a writer of their own side with commendation. They fancy they are paying tribute to merit, when they are only sacrificing to self-love. But this is not the worst. He further shews, that this party-spirit has often very ill effects on Science itself ; while, in support of Faction, it labours to depress some rising Genius, that was, perhaps, raised by Nature, to enlighten his age and country. By which he would insinuate, that all the baser and viler passions seek refuge, and find support, in party madness.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 474. Be thou the first, etc.] The poet having now gone thro' the last cause of wrong Judgment, and root of all the rest, PARTIALITY; and ended his remarks upon it with a detection of the two rankest kinds, those which arise out of PARTY-RAGE and ENVY; takes the occasion, which this affords him, of closing his second division in the most graceful manner, [from ver. 473 to 560.] by concluding from the premises, and calling upon the TRUE CRITIC to be careful of his charge, which is the protection and support of Wit. For, the defence of it from malevolent censure is its true protection; and the illustration of its beauties, is its true support.

He first shews, the Critic ought to do this service without delay: And on these motives. 1. Out of regard to himself: For there is some merit in giving the world notice of an excellence; but little or none, in pointing, like an Index, to the beaten road of admiration. 2. Out of regard to the Poem: For the short duration of modern works requires, that they

VER. 468. For envy'd Wit, like Sol eclips'd, etc.] This similitude implies a fact too often verified; and of which we need not seek abroad for examples. It is this, that frequently those very Authors, who have at first done all they could to obscure and depress a rising Genius, have at length been reduced to borrow from him, imitate his manner, and reflect should begin to live betimes. He compares the life of modern Wit, (which, in a changeable dialect, must soon pass away) and that of the ancient, (which survives in an universal language) to the difference between the Patriarchal age and our own : And observes, that while the ancient writings live for ever as it were, in brass and marble, the modern are but like Paintings, which, of how masterly a hand soever, have no sooner gained their requisite perfection by the softening, and ripening of their tints, which they do in a very few years, but they begin to fade and die away. 3 Lastly, our Author shews, that the Critic ought to do this service out of regard to the Poet, when he considers the slender dowry the Muse brings along with her : In youth 'tis only a short-lived vanity ; and in maturer years an accession of care and labour, in proportion to the weight of Reputation to be sustained, and of the increase of Envy to be opposed : And therefore, concludes his reasoning on this head, with that pathetic and insinuating address to the Critic, from 508 to 524.

“ Ah ! let not learning, etc.”

NOTES.

what they could of his splendor ; merely to keep themselves in some little credit. Nor hath the Poet been less artful, to insinuate also what is sometimes the cause. A youthful Genius, like the Sun rising towards the Meridian, displays too strong and powerful beams for the dirty temper of inferior writers, which occasions their gathering, condensing, and blackening. But as he descends from the Meridian (the time when the Sun gives its gilding to the surrounding clouds) his rays grow milder, his heat more benign, and then

Our sons their fathers' failing language see,
 And such as Chaucer is, shall Dryden be.
 So when the faithful pencil has design'd
 Some bright Idea of the master's mind, 485
 Where a new world leaps out at his command,
 And ready Nature waits upon his hand :
 When the ripe colours soften and unite,
 And sweetly melt into just shade and light ;
 When mellowing years their full perfection give,
 And each bold figure just begins to live, 491
 The treach'rous colours the fair art betray,
 And all the bright creation fades away !

Unhappy Wit, like most mistaken things,
 Atones not for that envy which it brings. 495

NOTES.

VER. 484. So when the faithful pencil, etc.] This similitude from painting, in which our Author discovers (as he always does on that subject) real Science, has still a more peculiar beauty, as at the same time that it confesses the just superiority of ancient writings, it insinuates one advantage the modern have above them ; which is this, that in these latter, our more intimate acquaintance with the occasion of writing, and with the manners described, lets us into those living and striking graces which may be well compared to that perfection of imitation only given by the pencil. While the ravages of Time, amongst the monuments of former ages, have left us but the gross substance of ancient wit ; so much only of the form and matter of body as may be expressed in brass or marble.

In youth alone its empty praise we boast,
 But soon the short-liv'd vanity is lost :
 Like some fair flow'r the early spring supplies,
 That gayly blooms, but ev'n in blooming dies.
 What is this Wit, which must our cares employ?
 The owner's wife, that other men enjoy ; 501
 Then most our trouble still when most admir'd,
 And still the more we give, the more requir'd ;
 Whose fame with pains we guard, but lose with ease,
 Sure some to vex, but never all to please ; 505
 'Tis what the vicious fear, the virtuous shun,
 By fools 'tis hated, and by knaves undone !

If Wit so much from Ign'rance undergo,
 Ah let not learning too commence its foe !
 Of old, those met rewards who could excell, 510
 And such were prais'd who but endeavour'd well :
 Tho' triumphs were to gen'als only due,
 Crowns were reserv'd to grace the soldiers too.
 Now, they who reach Parnassus' lofty crown, 514
 Employ their pains to spurn some others down ;

And while self-love each jealous writer rules,
 Contending wits become the sport of fools :
 But still the worst with most regret commend,
 For each ill Author is as bad a Friend.
 To what base ends, and by what abject ways, 520
 Are mortals urg'd thro' sacred lust of praise !
 Ah ne'er so dire a thirst of glory boast,
 Nor in the Critic let the Man be lost.
 Good-nature and good sense must ever join ;
 To err is human, to forgive, divine. 525
 But if in noble minds some dregs remain
 Not yet purg'd off, of spleen and sour disdain ;

COMMENTARY.

VER. 526. But if in noble minds some dregs remain, etc.] So far as to what ought to be the true Critic's principal study and employment. But if the sour critical humour must needs have vent, he points to its right object ; and shews [from ver 525 to 556.] how it may be innocently and usefully diverted. This is very observable ; our author had made spleen and disdain the characteristic of the false Critic, and yet here supposes them inherent in the true. But it is done with judgment, and a knowledge of Nature. For as bitterness and astringency in unripe fruits of the best kind are the foundation and capacity of that high spirit, race, and flavour which we find in them when perfectly concocted by the warmth and influence of the sun, and which, without those qualities, would gain no more by that influence than only a mellow insipidity : so spleen and disdain in the true Critic, when improved by long study and experience, ripen into an exactness of Judgment and an elegance of Taste : But, in the false Critic, lying remote from the influence of good letters, continue in all their first offensive harshness and acerbity. The Poet therefore shews how,

Discharge that rage on more provoking crimes,
 Nor fear a dearth in these flagitious times.
 No pardon vile obscenity should find, 530
 Tho' wit and art conspire to move your mind;
 But Dulness with Obscenity must prove
 As shameful sure as Impotence in love.
 In the fat age of pleasure, wealth, and ease,
 Sprung the rank weed, and thriv'd with large increase : 535

COMMENTARY.

after the exaltation of these qualities into their state of perfection, the very Dregs (which, tho' precipitated, may possibly, on some occasions, rise and ferment even in a noble mind) may be usefully employed in branding OBSCENITY and IMPIETY: Of these he explains the rise and progress, in a beautiful picture of the different genius's of the two reigns of Charles II. and William III. The former of which gave course to the most profligate luxury; the latter to a licentious impiety. These are the criminals our Author assigns over to the caustic hand of the Critic, but concludes however, [from ver. 555 to 560.] with this necessary admonition, to take care not to be misled into unjust censure; either on the one hand, by a pharisaical niceness, or on the other by a consciousness of guilt. And thus the second division of his Essay ends: The judicious conduct of which is worthy our observation. The subject of it are the causes of wrong judgment: These he derives upwards from cause to cause, till he brings them to their source, an immoral partiality: For as he had, in the first part,

“trac'd the MUSES upward to their spring,” and shewn them to be derived from Heaven, and the Offspring of Virtue; so hath he here pursued this enemy of the Muses, the BAD CRITIC, to his low original, in the arms of his nursing mother Immorality. This order naturally introduces, and at the same time shews the necessity of, the subject of the third and last division, which is, on the Morals of the Critics

When love was all an easy Monarch's care ;
 Seldom at council, never in a war :
 Jilts rul'd the state, and statesmen farces writ :
 Nay wits had pensions, and young Lords had wit :
 The Fair fate panting at a Courtier's play, 540
 And not a Mask went unimprov'd away :
 The modest fan was lifted up no more,
 And Virgins smil'd at what they blush'd before.
 The following licence of a Foreign reign
 Did all the dregs of bold Socinus drain ; 545
 Then unbelieving Priests reform'd the nation,
 And taught more pleasant methods of salvation ;

NOTES.

VER. 545. Did all the dregs of bold Socinus drain ;] The seeds of this religious evil, as well as of the political good from whence it sprung (for good and evil are incessantly arising from one another) were sown in the preceding fat age of pleasure. The mischiefs done during Cromwell's usurpation, by fanaticism, inflamed by erroneous and absurd notions of the doctrine of grace and satisfaction, made the loyal Latitudinarian divines (as they were called) at the Restoration, go so far into the other extreme of resolving all Christianity into Morality, as to afford an easy introduction to Socinianism : Which in that reign (founded on the principles of Liberty) men had full opportunity of propagating.

VER. 547. The author has omitted two lines which stood here, as containing a National Reflection, which in his stricter judgment he could not but disapprove on any People whatever. P.

Where Heav'n's free subjects might their rights

Left God himself should seem too absolute :
Pulpits their sacred satire learn'd to spare, 550
And Vice admir'd to find a flatt'rer there !
Encourag'd thus, Wit's Titans brav'd the skies,
And the prefs groan'd with licens'd blasphemies.
These monsters, Critics ! with your darts engage,
Here point your thunder, and exhaust your rage !
Yet shun their fault, who, scandalously nice, 556
Will needs mistake an author into vice ;
All seems infected that th' infected spy,
As all looks yellow to the jaundic'd eye.

III.

LEARN then what MORALS Critics ought to show, 560
For 'tis but half a Judge's task, to know.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 560. Learn then, etc.] We enter now on the third part, the MORALS of the Critic ; included in CANDOUR, MODESTY, and GOOD-BREEDING. This third and last part is in two divisions. In the first of which [from ver. 559 to 631] our author inculcates these morals by precept : In the second [from ver. 630 to the end] by example. His first precept [from ver. 561 to 566] recommends CANDOUR, for its use to the Critic, and to the writer criticised.

NOTES.

VER. 561. For 'tis but half a Judge's task, to know.] The Critic acts in two capacities, of Assessor and of Judge : in the first, science alone is sufficient ; but the other requires morals likewise.

ESSAY ON CRITICISM. 211

'Tis not enough, taste, judgment, learning, join;
In all you speak, let truth and candour shine:
That not alone what to your sense is due
All may allow; but seek your friendship too. 565
Be silent always, when you doubt your sense;
And speak, tho' sure, with seeming diffidence:
Some positive, persisting fops we know,
Who, if once wrong, will needs be always so;

COMMENTARY.

2. The second [from ver. 565 to 572.] recommends MODESTY, which manifests itself in these four signs; 1. Silence where it doubts,

Be silent always, when you doubt your sense;

2. A seeming diffidence where it knows,

And speak, tho' sure, with seeming diffidence;

3. A free confession of error where wrong,

But you with pleasure own your errors past;

4. And a constant review and scrutiny even of those opinions which it still thinks right,

And make each day a Critique on the last.

3. The third [from ver. 571 to 584.] recommends GOOD-BREEDING, which will not force truth dogmatically upon men, as ignorant of it, but gently insinuates it to them, as not sufficiently attentive to it. But as men of breeding are apt to fall into two extremes, he prudently cautions against them. The one is a backwardness in communicating their knowledge out of a false delicacy, and for fear of being thought Pedants: The other, and much more common extreme, is a mean complaisance which those who are worthy of your advice do not want to make it acceptable; for such can best bear reproof in particular points, who best deserve commendation in general.

But you, with pleasure own your errors past, 570
And make each day a Critique on the last.

'Tis not enough your counsel still be true ;
Blunt truths more mischief than nice falsehoods do ;
Men must be taught as if you taught them not,
And things unknown propos'd as things forgot. 575
Without Good-Breeding, truth is disapprov'd ;
That only makes superior sense below'd.

Be niggards of advice on no pretence :
For the worst avarice is that of sense.
With mean complacence ne'er betray your trust,
Nor be so civil as to prove unjust. 581

COMMENTARY.

VER. 584. ['Twere well might Critics, etc.] The Poet having thus recommended, in these general rules of Conduct for the JUDGMENT, the three critical Virtues to the HEART ; shews next [from ver. 583 to 631.] upon what three sorts of Writers, these virtues, together with the advice conveyed under them, would be thrown away ; and which is worse be repaid with obloquy and slander. These are the false Critic, the dull Man of Quality, and the bad Poet ; each of which species of incorrigible writers he hath very exactly painted.

But having drawn the last of them at large, and being always attentive to his main subject, which is, of writing and judging well, he re-assumes the character of the bad Critic (whom he had touched upon before) to contrast him with the other ; and makes the Characteristic common to both, to be a never ceasing Repetition of their own impertinence.

The Poet—still runs on in a raging vein, etc. ver. 606, etc.

The Critic—with his own tongue still edifies his ears, 614, etc.

Fear not the anger of the wise to raise ;
 Those best can bear reproof, who merit praise.
 'Twere well might Critics still this freedom take,
 But Appius reddens at each word you speak, 585
 And stares, tremendous, with a threat'ning eye,
 Like some fierce tyrant in old tapestry.
 Fear most to tax an Honourable fool,
 Whose right it is, uncensur'd, to be dull ; 589
 Such, without wit, are Poets when they please,
 As without learning they can take Degrees.
 Leave dang'rous truths to unsuccessful Satires,
 And flattery to fulsome Dedicators,
 Whom, when they praise, the world believes no more, 594
 Than when they promise to give scribbling o'er.
 'Tis best sometimes your censure to restrain,
 And charitably let the dull be vain :
 Your silence there is better than your spite,
 For who can rail so long as they can write ?

NOTES.

VER. 586. And stares, tremendous, etc.] This picture was taken to himself by John Dennis, a furious old Critic by profession, who, upon no other provocation, wrote against this Essay and its author, in a manner perfectly lunatic : For, as to the mention made of him in ver. 270, he took it as a Compliment, and said it was treacherously meant to cause him to overlook this Abuse of his Person. 214 ESSAY ON CRITICISM.

Still humming on, their drouzy course they keep,
 And lash'd so long, like tops, are lash'd asleep. 601
 False steps but help them to renew the race,
 As, after stumbling, Jades will mend their pace,
 What crouds of these, impenitently bold,
 In founds and jingling syllables grown old, 605
 Still run on Poets in a raging vein,
 Ev'n to the dregs and squeezing of the brain,
 Strain out the last dull droppings of their sense,
 And rhyme with all the rage of Impotence.

Such shameless Bards we have; and yet 'tis true,
 There are as mad, abandon'd Critics too. 611
 The bookful blockhead ignorantly read,
 With loads of learned lumber in his head,
 With his own tongue still edifies his ears,
 And always list'ning to himself appears. 615
 All books he reads, and all he reads affails,
 From Dryden's Fables down to Durfey's Tales.
 With him most authors steal their works, or buy;
 Garth did not write his own Dispensary. 619

NOTES.

VER. 619. Garth did not write, etc.] A common slander at that time in prejudice of that deserving author. Our Poet did him this justice, when that slander most prevail'd; and it is now (perhaps the sooner for this very verse) dead and forgotten. P.

For, having in the first, drawn a picture of the false Critic, at large, he breaks out into an apostrophe, containing an exact and finished character of the true, which, at the same time, serves for an easy and proper introduction to this second division. Whose Characters he has not only justly drawn, but has contrasted them with a peculiar elegance ; the profound science and logical method of Aristotle being opposed to the plain common sense of Horace, conveyed in a natural and familiar negligence : the study and refinement of Dionysius, to the gay and courtly ease of Petronius : and the gravity and minuteness of Quintilian to the vivacity and general topics of Longinus. Nor has the Poet been less careful, in these examples, to point out their eminence in the several critical Virtues he so carefully inculcated in his precepts. Thus in Horace he particularizes his Candour ; in Petronius his Good-Breeding ; in Quintilian his free and copious Instruction ; and in Longinus his great and noble Spirit.

NOTES.

VER. 631. But where's the man, etc.] The Poet, by his manner of asking after this Character, and telling us, when he had described it, that such once were Critics, does not encourage us to search for it amongst modern writers. And indeed the discovery of him if it could be made, would be but an invidious affair. However I will venture to name the piece of Criticism in which all these marks may be found. It is intitled, Q. Hor. Fl. Ars Poetica, et ejusd. Ep. ad Aug. with an English Commentary and Notes.

Gen'rous converse ; a soul exempt from pride ;
And love to praise, with reason on his side ?

Such once were Critics ; such the happy few,
Athens and Rome in better ages knew.

The mighty Stagirite first left the shore, 645
Spread all his sails, and durst the deeps explore ;
He steer'd securely, and discover'd far,
Led by the light of the Mæonian star.

VARIATIONS.

Between ver. 646 and 647. I have found the following lines, since suppressed by the author :

That bold Columbus of the realms of wit,
Whose first discovery's not exceeded yet,
Led by the Light of the Mæonian Star,
He steer'd securely, and discover'd far.
He, when all Nature was subdu'd before,
Like his great Pupil, sigh'd and long'd for more :
Fancy's wild regions yet unvanquish'd lay,
A boundless empire, and that own'd no sway.
Poets, etc.

NOTES.

VER. 642. With REASON on his side, etc.] Not only on his side, but in actual Employment. The Critic makes but a mean figure, who when he has found out the beauties of his author, contents himself with shewing them to the world in only empty exclamations. His office is to explain their nature, shew from whence they arise, and what effects they produce ; or in the better and fuller expression of the Poet,

“ To teach the world with REASON to admire.”

Poets, a race long unconfin'd, and free,
 Still fond and proud of savage liberty, 650
 Receiv'd his laws; and stood convinc'd 'twas fit,
 Who conquer'd Nature, should preside o'er wit.

Horace still charms with graceful negligence,
 And without method talks us into sense,
 Will, like a friend, familiarly convey 655
 The truest notions in the easiest way.
 He, who supreme in judgment, as in wit,
 Might boldly censure, as he boldly writ,
 Yet judg'd with coolness, tho' he sung with fire;
 His Precepts teach but what his works inspire. 660
 Our Critics take a contrary extreme,
 They judge with fury, but they write with flegm:

NOTES.

VER. 652. Who conquer'd Nature, should preside o'er Wit.] By this we must not understand physical Nature, but moral. The force of the observation consists in giving it this sense. The Poet not only uses the word Nature for human Nature, throughout this poem; but also, where, in the beginning of it, he lays down the principles of the arts he treats of, he makes the knowledge of human nature the foundation of all Criticism and Poetry. Nor is the observation less true than apposite. For, Aristotle's natural enquiries were superficial, and ill-made, tho' extensive: But his logical and moral works are supremely excellent. In these he has unfolded the human mind, he has laid open all the recesses of the heart and understanding; and by these he has not only conquered Nature, but, by his Categories, has kept her in tenfold Chains: Not as Dulness kept the Muses, in the Dunciad, to silence them; but as Aristæus held Proteus in Virgil, to deliver Oracles.

Nor suffers Horace more in wrong Translations

“ A second deluge learning thus o'er-run,
“ And the Monk finish'd what the Goth begun.”

When things had been long in this condition, and all recovery now seem'd desperate, it was a CRITIC, our Author shews us, for the honour of the Art he here teaches, who at length broke the charm of Dulness, dissipated the enchantment, and, like another Hercules, drove those cowl'd and hooded serpents from the Hesperian tree of knowledge, which they had so long guarded from human approach.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 697.] But see! each Muse, in Leo's golden days.] This presents us with the second period in which the true Critic appeared; of whom he has given us a perfect idea in the single example of Marcus Hieronymus Vida: For his subject being poetical Criticism, for the use principally of a critical Poet; his example is an eminent poetical Critic, who had written of the art of Poetry in verse.

NOTES.

VER. 693. At length Erasmus, etc.] Nothing can be more artful than the application of this example: or more happy than the turn of the compliment. To throw glory quite round the Character of this admirable Person, he makes it to be (as in fact it really was) by his assistance chiefly, that Leo was enabled to restore letters and the fine arts in his Pontificate.

VER. 694. The glory of the Priesthood, and the shame!] Our author elsewhere lets us know what he esteems to be the glory of the Priesthood as well as of a Christian in general, where, comparing himself to Erasmus, he says, and consequently what he esteems to be the shame of it. The whole of this character belong'd eminently and almost solely to Erasmus: For the other Reformers, such as Luther, Calvin, and their followers, understood so little in what true Christian Liberty consisted, that they carried with them, into the reformed Churches, that very spirit of persecution, which had driven them from the church of Rome.

“ In MODERATION placing all my glory,”

ceeded so well, as to bring good Letters into fashion : to which he gave new splendor, by preparing for the press correct editions of many of the best ancient writers, both ecclesiastical and prophane. But having laughed and shamed his age out of one folly, he had the mortification of seeing it run headlong into another. The VIRTUOSI of Italy, in a superstitious dread of that monkish barbarity which he had so severely handled, would now use no term (for now almost every man was become a Latin writer) not even when they treated of the highest mysteries of Religion, which had not been consecrated in the Capitol, and dispensed unto them from the sacred hand of CICERO. Erasmus observed the growth of this classical folly with the greater concern, as he discovered under all their attention to the language of old Rome, a certain fondness for its religion, in a growing impiety which disposed them to think irreverently of the Christian Faith. And he no sooner discovered it than he set upon reforming it ; which he did so effectually in the Dialogue, intitled CICERONIANUS, that he brought the age back to that just temper, which he had been, all his life, endeavouring to mark out to it : Purity, but not Pedantry, in LETTERS ; and Zeal, but not Bigotry, in RELIGION. In a word, by employing his great talents of genius and literature on subjects of general importance ; and by opposing the extremes of all parties in their turns ; he completed the rare character of a TRUE CRITIC and an HONEST MAN.

It is true, the last instance is of one who was no eminent poet, the late Mr. Walsh. This small deviation might be well overlooked, were it only for its being a pious office to the memory of his friend: But it may be farther justified, as it was an homage paid in particular to the MORALS of the Critic, nothing being more amiable than the character here drawn of this excellent person. He being our Author's Judge and Censor as well as Friend, it gives him a graceful opportunity to add him-

I have here given a short and plain account of the Essay on Criticism ; concerning which, I have but one thing more to acquaint the reader : That when he considers the Regularity of the plan, the masterly Conduct of each part, the penetration into Nature, and the compass of Learning throughout, he should at the same time know, it was the work of an Author who had not attained the twentieth year of his age.

NOTES.

VER. 723. Such was the Muse—] Essay on Poetry by the Duke of Buckingham. Our Poet is not the only one of his time who complimented this Essay, and its noble Author. Mr. Dryden had done it very largely in the Dedication to his translation of the Æneid ; and Dr. Garth in the first Edition of his Dispensary says,

“ The Tyber now no courtly Gallus fees,
 “ But smiling Thames enjoys his Normanbys ;”

On which account, after having strongly patronized Mr. Dryden, a coolness succeeded between them on that poet's

AN
P O E M.

Written in the Year MDCCXII.

T O

Mrs. ARABELLA FERMOR;

MADAM,

IT will be in vain to deny that I have some regard for this piece, since I dedicate it to You. Yet you may bear me witness, it was intended only to divert a few young Ladies, who have good sense and good humour enough to laugh not only at their sex's little unguarded follies, but at their own. But as it was communicated with the air of a Secret, it soon found its way into the world. An imperfect copy having been offer'd to a Bookseller, you had the good-nature for my sake to consent to the publication of one more correct: This I was forc'd to, before I had executed half my design, for the Machinery was entirely wanting to compleat it.

The Machinery, Madam, is a term invented by the Critics, to signify that part which the Deities, Angels, or Dæmons are made to act in a Poem: For the ancient Poets are in one respect like many modern Ladies: let an action be never so trivial in itself, they always make it appear of the utmost importance. These Machines I determin'd to raise on a very new and odd foundation, the Rosicrucian doctrine of Spirits.

I know how disagreeable it is to make use of hard words before a Lady; but 'tis so much the concern of a Poet to have his works understood, and particularly by your Sex, that you must give me leave to explain two or three difficult terms.

The Rosicrucians are a people I must bring you acquainted with. The best account I know of them is in a French book call'd Le Comte de Gabalis, which both in its title and size is so like a Novel, that many of the Fair Sex have read it for one by mistake. According to these Gentlemen the four Elements are inhabited by Spirits, which they call Sylphs, Gnomes, Nymphs, and Salamanders. The Gnomes or Dæmons of Earth delight in mischief; but the Sylphs, whose habitation is in the Air, are the best condition'd Creatures imaginable. For they say, any mortals may enjoy the most intimate familiarities with these gentle Spirits, upon a condition very easy to all true Adepts, an inviolate preservation of Chastity.

As to the following Canto's, all the passages of them are as fabulous, as the Vision at the beginning, or the Transformation at the end; (except the loss of your Hair, which I always mention with reverence.) The Human persons are as fictitious as the Airy ones; and the Character of Belinda, as it is now manag'd, resembles you in nothing but in Beauty.

If this Poem had as many Graces as there are in your Person, or in your Mind, yet I could never hope it should pass thro' the world half so Uncensured as You have done. But let its fortune be what it will, mine is happy enough, to have given me this occasion of assuring you that I am, with the truest esteem,

M A D A M,

Your most obedient, humble Servant,

A. POPE.

* It appears by this Motto, that the following Poem was written or published at the Lady's request. But there are some further circumstances not unworthy relating. Mr. Caryl (a Gentleman who was Secretary to Queen Mary, wife of James II. whose fortunes he followed into France, Author of the Comedy of Sir Solomon Single, and of several translations in Dryden's Miscellanies) originally proposed the subject to him, in a view of putting an end by this piece of ridicule, to a quarrel that was risen between two noble Families, those of Lord Petre and of Mrs. Fermor, on the trifling occasion of his having cut off a lock of her hair. The Author sent it to the Lady, with whom he was acquainted ; and she took it so well as to give about copies of it. That first sketch (we learn from one of his Letters) was written in less than a fortnight, in 1711, in two Cantos only, and it was so printed ; first, in a Miscellany of Bern. VER. 20. Her Guardian Sylph] When Mr. Pope had projected to give The Rape of the Lock its present form of a mock-heroic poem, he was obliged to find it with its Machinery. For as the subject of the Epic consists of two parts, the metaphysical and the civil; so this mock epic, which is of the satyric kind, and receives its grace from a ludicrous mimicry of the other's pomp and solemnity, was to have the like composition. And, as the civil part is intentionally debas'd by the choice of a trifling action: so should the metaphysical, by the application of some very extravagant system. A rule, which tho' neither Boileau nor Garth had been careful enough to attend to, our Author's good sense would not suffer him to overlook. And that sort of Machinery which his judgment taught him was only fit for his use, his admirable INVENTION soon supplied. There was but one System in all nature which was to his purpose, the ROSICRUCIAN PHILOSOPHY; and this by the effort of a well-directed imagination, he presently seized upon. The fanatic Alchemists in their search after the great secret, had invented a means altogether suitable to their end. It was a kind of Theological Philosophy, made up in a mixture of almost equal parts of Pagan Platonism, Christian Quietism, and the Jewish Cabbala; a mixture monstrous enough to fright Reason from human commerce. This system, he tells us, he took as he found it in a little French tract called, Le Comte de Gabalis. The book is written in Dialogue, and is a delicate and very ingenious piece of raillery by the Abbé Villiers, on that invisible sect, of which, the stories that went about at that time, made a great deal of noise at Paris. But, as in this satirical Dialogue, Mr. P. found several whimsies of a very high mysterious nature, told of these elementary Beings, which were very unfit to come into the machinery of such a sort of poem, he has, in their stead, with great judgment introduced the Legendary stories of Guardian Angels, and the Nursery Tales of the Fairies; and artfully accommodated them, to the rest of the Rosicrucian System. And to this artful address (unless we will be so uncharitable to think he intended to give a needless scandal) we must suppose he referred, in these two lines,

NOTES.

“ If e'er one Vision touch'd thy infant thought,

“ Of all the nurse, and all the priest have taught.”

Thus, by the most beautiful invention imaginable, he has contrived, that, as in the serious Epic, the popular belief supports the Machinery; so, in his mock epic, the Machinery, taken from a circumstance the most humbling to reason, in all philosophic fanaticism, should be employed to dismount learned pride and arrogance.

THE RAPE OF THE LOCK. 235

Hear and believe ! thy own importance know, 35
Nor bound thy narrow views to things below.
Some secret truths, from learned pride conceal'd,
To Maids alone and Children are reveal'd :
What tho' no credit doubting Wits may give ?
The Fair and Innocent shall still believe. 40
Know then, unnumber'd Spirits round thee fly,
The light Militia of the lower sky :
These, tho' unseen, are ever on the wing,
Hang o'er the Box, and hover round the Ring.
Think what an equipage thou hast in Air, 45
And view with scorn two Pages and a Chair.
As now your own, our beings were of old,
And once inclos'd in Woman's beauteous mould ;
Thence, by a soft transition, we repair
From earthly Vehicles to these of air. 50
Think not, when Woman's transient breath is fled,
That all her vanities at once are dead ;

NOTES.

VER. 47. As now your own, etc.] The Poet here forsakes the Rosicrucian system ; which, in this part, is too extravagant even for ludicrous Poetry ; and gives a beautiful fiction of his own, on the Platonic Theology, of the continuance of the passions in another state, when the mind, before its leaving this, has not been well purged and purified by philosophy ; which furnishes an occasion for much useful satire.

236 THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

Succeeding vanities she still regards,
 And tho' she plays no more, o'erlooks the cards.
 Her joy in gilded Chariots, when alive, 55
 And love of Ombre, after death survive.
 For when the Fair in all their pride expire,
 To their first elements their Souls retire :
 The Sprites of fiery Termagants in Flame
 Mount up, and take a Salamander's name. 60
 Soft yielding minds to Water glide away,
 And sip, with Nymphs, their elemental Tea.
 The graver Prude sinks downward to a Gnome,
 In search of mischief still on Earth to roam.
 The light Coquettes in Sylphs aloft repair, 65
 And sport and flutter in the fields of Air.
 Know farther yet ; whoever fair and chaste
 Rejects mankind, is by some Sylph embrac'd :
 For Spirits, freed from mortal laws, with ease
 Assume what sexes and what shapes they please. 70

NOTES.

VER. 68. is by some Sylph embrac'd :] Here again the Author resumes the Rosicrucian system. But this tenet, peculiar to that wild philosophy, was founded on a principle very unfit to be employed in such a sort of poem, and therefore suppressed, tho' a less judicious writer would have been tempted to expatiate upon it.

THE RAPE OF THE LOCK. 237

What guards the purity of melting Maids,
In courtly balls, and midnight masquerades,
Safe from the treach'rous friend, the daring spark,
The glance by day, the whisper in the dark,
When kind occasion prompts their warm desires, 75
When music softens, and when dancing fires?
'Tis but their Sylph, the wise Celestials know,
Tho' Honour is the word with Men below.

Some nymphs there are, too conscious of their face,

For life predestin'd to the Gnomes embrace. 80

These swell their prospects and exalt their pride,
When offers are disdain'd, and love deny'd :

Then gay Ideas croud the vacant brain,

While Peers, and Dukes, and all their sweeping train,

And Garters, Stars, and Coronets appear, 85

And in soft sounds, YOUR GRACE salutes their ear.

'Tis these that early taint the female soul,

Instruct the eyes of young Coquettes to roll,

Teach Infant-cheeks a bidden blush to know,

And little hearts to flutter at a Beau. 90

NOTES.

VER. 78. Tho' Honour is the word with Men below.] Parody

238 THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

Oft, when the world imagine women stray,
 The Sylphs thro' mystic mazes guide their way,
 Thro' all the giddy circle they pursue,
 And old impertinence expell by new.
 What tender maid but must a victim fall 95
 To one man's treat, but for another's ball?
 When Florio speaks, what virgin could withstand,
 If gentle Damon did not squeeze her hand?
 With varying vanities, from ev'ry part,
 They shift the moving Toyshop of their heart; 100
 Where wigs with wigs, with sword-knots swordknots strive,
 Beaux banish beaux, and coaches coaches drive.
 This erring mortals Levity may call,
 Oh blind to truth! the Sylphs contrive it all.
 Of these am I, who thy protection claim, 105
 A watchful sprite, and Ariel is my name.
 Late, as I rang'd the crystal wilds of air,
 In the clear mirror of thy ruling Star

I saw, alas ! some dread event impend,
 Ere to the main this morning fun descend, 110
 But heav'n reveals not what, or how, or where :
 Warn'd by the Sylph, oh pious maid, beware !
 This to disclose is all thy guardian can :
 Beware of all, but most beware of Man ?

He said ; when Shock, who thought she slept too long, 115
 Leap'd up, and wak'd his mistress with his tongue.
 'Twas then, Belinda, if report say true,
 Thy eyes first open'd on a Billet-doux ;
 Wounds, Charms, and Ardours, were no sooner
 read,

But all the Vision vanish'd from thy head. 120
 And now, unveil'd, the Toilet stands display'd,
 Each silver Vase in mystic order laid.

NOTES.

VER. 113. This to disclose, etc.] There is much pleasantry in the conduct of this scene. The Rosicrucian Doctrine was delivered only to Adepts, with the utmost caution, and under the most solemn injunctions of secrecy. It is here communicated to a Woman, and in that way of conveyance, which a Woman most delights to make the subject of her conversation ; that is to say, her Dreams.

VER. 121. And now, unveil'd, etc.] The translation of these verses, containing the description of the toilette, by our Author's friend Dr. Parnell, deserve, for their humour, to be here inserted. P.

246 THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

First, rob'd in white, the Nymph intent adores,
 With head uncover'd, the Cosmetic pow'rs.
 A heav'nly Image in the glass appears, 125
 To that she bends, to that her eyes she rears;
 Th' inferior Priestess, at her altar's side,
 Trembling begins the sacred rites of Pride.

NOTES.

Tum primum lympha se purgat candida Nympha,
 Jamque sine menda, cœlestis imago videnda,
 Nuda caput, bellos retinet, regit, implet ocellos.
 Hæc stupet implorans, ceu cultus numen adorans.
 Inferior claram Pythonissa apparet ad aram,
 Fertque tibi caute, dicatque Superbia! lætæ,
 Dona venusta; oris, quæ cunctis, plena laboris,
 Excerpta explorat, dominamque deamque decorat.
 Pyxide devota, se pandit hic India tota,
 Et tota ex ista transpirat Arabia cista;
 Testudo hic flectit dum se mea Lesbica pectit;
 Atque elephas lente, te pectit Lesbia dente;
 Hunc maculis noris, nivei jacet ille coloris.
 Hic jacet et munde, mundus muliebris abunde;
 Spinula resplendens æris longo ordine pendens,
 Pulvis suavis odore, et epistola suavis amore,
 Induit arma ergo Veneris pulcherrima virgo;
 Pulchrior in præsens tempus de tempore crescens,

 Et geminans bellis splendet mage fulgor ocellis.
 Stant Lemures muti, Nymphæ intentique saluti,

THE RAPE OF THE LOCK. 241

Unnumber'd treasures ope at once, and here
 The various off'rings of the world appear; 130
 From each she nicely culls with curious toil,
 And decks the Goddess with the glitt'ring spoil.
 This casket India's glowing gems unlocks,
 And all Arabia breathes from yonder box.
 The tortoise here and elephant unite, 135
 Transform'd to combs, the speckled, and the white.
 Here files of pins extend their shining rows,
 Puffs, Powders, Patches, Bibles, Billet-doux.
 Now awful beauty puts on all its arms;
 The fair each moment rises in her charms, 140
 Repairs her smiles, awakens ev'ry grace,
 And calls forth all the wonders of her face;
 Sees by degrees a purer blush arise,
 And keener lightnings quicken in her eyes.
 The busy Sylphs surround their darling care, 145
 These set the head, and those divide the hair,
 Some fold the sleeve, whilst others plait the gown;
 And Betty's prais'd for labours not her own.

NOTES.

VER. 145. The busy Sylphs, etc.] Ancient Traditions of the Rabbi's relate, that several of the fallen Angels became amorous of Women, and particularize some; among the rest Afael, who lay with Naamah, the wife of Noah, or of Ham; and who continuing impenitent, still presides over the Women's Toilets. RAPE of the LOCK.

C A N T O II.

NOT with more glories, in th' etherial plain,
 The Sun first rises o'er the purpled main
 Than, issuing forth, the rival of his beams
 Launch'd on the bosom of the silver Thames.
 Fair Nymphs, and well-drest Youths around her shone, 5

But ev'ry eye was fix'd on her alone.
 On her white breast a sparkling Cross she wore,
 Which Jews might kiss, and Infidels adore.
 Her lively looks a sprightly mind disclose,
 Quick as her eyes, and as unfix'd as those: 10
 Favours to none, to all she smiles extends;
 Oft she rejects, but never once offends.
 Bright as the sun, her eyes the gazers strike,
 And, like the sun, they shine on all alike.

V A R I A T I O N S.

VER. 4. Launch'd on the bosom, etc.] From hence the poem continues, in the first Edition, to ver. 46.

“ The rest the winds dispers'd in empty air;”
 all after, to the end of this Canto, being additional. P.

THE RAPE OF THE LOCK. 243

Yet graceful ease, and sweetness void of pride, 15
Might hide her faults, if Belles had faults to hide:
If to her share some female errors fall,
Look on her face, and you'll forget 'em all.

This Nymph, to the destruction of mankind,
Nourish'd two Locks, which graceful hung behind
In equal curls, and well conspir'd to deck 21
With shining ringlets the smooth iv'ry neck.
Love in these labyrinths his slaves detains,
And mighty hearts are held in slender chains.
With hairy springes we the birds betray, 25
Slight lines of hair surprize the finny prey,
Fair tresses man's imperial race insnare,
And beauty draws us with a single hair.

Th'advent'rous Baron the bright locks admir'd;
He saw, he wish'd, and to the prize aspir'd. 30
Resolv'd to win, he meditates the way,
By force to ravish, or by fraud betray;

NOTES.

VER. 25. With hairy springes.] In allusion to Anacreon's manner.

VER. 28. with a single hair.] In allusion to those lines of Hudibras, applied to the same purpose,

“ And tho' it be a two foot Trout,
“ 'Tis with a single hair pull'd out.”

244 THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

For when success a Lover's toil attends,
Few ask, if fraud or force attain'd his ends.

For this, ere Phœbus rose, he had implor'd 35
Propitious heav'n, and ev'ry pow'r ador'd,
But chiefly Love—to Love an Altar built,
Of twelve vast French Romances, neatly gilt.
There lay three garters, half a pair of gloves ;
And all the trophies of his former loves ; 40
With tender billet-doux he lights the pyre,
And breathes three am'rous sighs to raise the fire.
Then prostrate falls, and begs with ardent eyes
Soon to obtain, and long possess the prize :
The pow'rs gave ear, and granted half his pray'r,
The rest, the winds dispers'd in empty air. 46

But now secure the painted vessel glides,
The sun-beams trembling on the floating tides :
While melting music steals upon the sky,
And soften'd sounds along the waters die ; 50
Smooth flow the waves, the zephyrs gently play,
Belinda smil'd, and all the world was gay.
All but the Sylph—with careful thoughts oppress'd,
Th' impending woe sat heavy on his breast.

THE RAPE OF THE LOCK. 245

He summons strait his Denizens of air; 55
The lucid squadrons round the sails repair :
Soft o'er the shrouds aërial whispers breathe,
That seem'd but Zephyrs to the train beneath.
Some to the sun their insect-wings unfold,
Waft on the breeze, or sink in clouds of gold; 60
Transparent forms, too fine for mortal fight,
Their fluid bodies half dissolv'd in light.
Loose to the wind their airy garments flew,
Thin glitt'ring textures of the filmy dew,
Dipt in the richest tincture of the skies, 65
Where light disports in ever-mingling dyes ;
While ev'ry beam new transient colours flings,
Colours that change whene'er they wave their wings.

Amid the circle, on the gilded mast,
Superior by the head, was Ariel plac'd; 70
His purple pinions op'ning to the sun,
He rais'd his azure wand, and thus begun.

Ye Sylphs and Sylphids, to your chief give ear,
Fays, Fairies, Genii, Elves, and Dæmons hear !
Ye know the spheres, and various tasks assign'd 75
By laws eternal to th' aërial kind.
Some in the fields of purest Æther play,
And bask and whiten in the blaze of day.

246 THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

Some guide the course of wand'ring orbs on high,
 Or roll the planets thro' the boundless sky. 80
 Some less refin'd, beneath the moon's pale light
 Pursue the stars that shoot athwart the night,
 Or suck the mists in grosser air below,
 Or dip their pinions in the painted bow,
 Or brew fierce tempests on the wintry main, 85
 Or o'er the glebe distil the kindly rain.
 Others on earth o'er human race preside,
 Watch all their ways, and all their actions guide:
 Of these the chief the care of Nations own,
 And guard with Arms divine the British Throne,
 Our humbler province is to tend the Fair, 91
 Not a less pleasing, tho' less glorious care;
 To save the powder from too rude a gale,
 Nor let th' imprison'd essences exhale;
 To draw fresh colours from the vernal flow'rs; 95
 To steal from Rainbows ere they drop in show'rs

NOTES.

VER. 90. And guard with Arms] The Poet was too judicious to desire this should be understood as a compliment. He intended it for a meer piece of raillery; such as he more openly pursues on another occasion; when he says,

- “ Where's now the Star which lighted Charles to rise?
 “ With that which follow'd Julius to the skies.
 “ Angels, that watch'd the Royal Oak so well,
 “ How chanc'd you slept when luckless Sorrel fell?”

A brighter wash ; to curl their waving hairs,
 Assist their blushes, and inspire their airs ;
 Nay oft, in dreams, invention we bestow,
 To change a Flounce, or add a Furbelow. 100

This day, black Omens threat the brightest Fair
 That e'er deserv'd a watchful spirit's care ;
 Some dire disaster, or by force, or slight ;
 But what, or where, the fates have wrapt in night.
 Whether the nymph shall break Diana's law, 105
 Or some frail China jar receive a flaw ;
 Or stain her honour, or her new brocade ;
 Forget her pray'rs, or miss a masquerade ;
 Or lose her heart, or necklace, at a ball ;
 Or whether Heav'n has doom'd that Shock must fall. 110

Haste then, ye spirits ! to your charge repair :
 The flutt'ring fan be Zephyretta's care ;
 The drops to thee, Brillante, we consign ;
 And, Momentilla, let the watch be thine ;
 Do thou, Crispissa, tend her fav'rite Lock ; 115
 Ariel himself shall be the guard of Shock.

NOTES.

VER. 105. Whether the nymph, etc.] The disaster, which makes the subject of this poem, being a trifle, taken seriously ; it naturally led the Poet into this fine satire on the female estimate of human mischances.

248 THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

To fifty chosen Sylphs, of special note,
 We trust th' important charge, the Petticoat :
 Oft have we known that seven-fold fence to fail,
 Tho' stiff with hoops and arm'd with ribs of whale;
 Form a strong line about the silver bound, 121
 And guard the wide circumference around.

Whatever spirit, careless of his charge,
 His post neglects, or leaves the fair at large,
 Shall feel sharp vengeance soon o'ertake his sins,
 Be stop'd in vials, or transfix'd with pins; 126
 Or plung'd in lakes of bitter washes lie,
 Or wedg'd whole ages in a bodkin's eye :
 Gums and Pomatums shall his flight restrain,
 While clog'd he beats his silken wings in vain; 130
 Or Alum styptics with contracting pow'r
 Shrink his thin essence like a rivet'd flow'r :
 Or, as Ixion fix'd, the wretch shall feel
 The giddy motion of the whirling Mill,
 In fumes of burning Chocolate shall glow, 135
 And tremble at the sea that froths below !

Some, orb in orb, around the nymph extend;

With beating hearts the dire event they wait,
Anxious, and trembling for the birth of Fate.

Where Thames with pride surveys his rising tow'rs,
There stands a structure of majestic frame,

Here Britain's statesmen oft the fall foredoom 5
Of foreign Tyrants, and of Nymphs at home ;
Here thou, great ANNA ! whom three realms obey,

One speaks the glory of the British Queen,
And one describes a charming Indian screen ;
A third interprets motions, looks, and eyes ; 15
At ev'ry word a reputation dies.

Snuff, or the fan, supply each pause of chat,
With finging, laughing, ogling, and all that.

Mean while, declining from the noon of day,
The sun obliquely shoots his burning ray ; 20
The hungry Judges soon the sentence sign,
And wretches hang that Jury-men may dine ;
The merchant from th'Exchange returns in peace,
And the long labours of the Toilet cease.

Belinda now, whom thirst of fame invites, 25
Burns to encounter two advent'rous Knights,
At Ombre singly to decide their doom ;
And swells her breast with conquests yet to come.
Strait the three bands prepare in arms to join,
Each band the number of the sacred nine. 30

252 THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

First Ariel perch'd upon a Matadore,
 Then each according to the rank they bore ;
 For Sylphs, yet mindful of their ancient race, 35
 Are, as when women, wond'rous fond of place.

Behold, four Kings in majesty rever'd,
 With hoary whiskers and a forky beard ;
 And four fair Queens whose hands sustain a flow'r,
 Th'expressive emblem of their softer pow'r ; 40
 Four Knaves in garbs succinct, a trusty band ;
 Caps on their heads, and halberts in their hand ;
 And parti-colour'd troops, a shining train,
 Draw forth to combat on the velvet plain.

The skilful Nymph reviews her force with care :
 Let Spades be trumps ! she said, and trumps they were. 46

Now move to war her fable Matadores,
 In show like leaders of the swarthy Moors.
 Spadillio first, unconquerable Lord !
 Led off two captive trumps, and swept the board.
 As many more Manillio forc'd to yield, 51
 And march'd a victor from the verdant field.

NOTES.

VER. 47. Now move to war, etc.] The whole idea of this description of a game at Ombre, is taken from Vida's description of a game at Chess, in his poem intit. Scacchia Ludus.

THE RAPE OF THE LOCK. 253

Him Baſto follow'd, but his fate more hard
Gain'd but one trump and one Plebeian card.
With his broad ſabre next, a chief in years, 55
The hoary Maſteſs of Spades appears,
Puts forth one manly leg, to fight reveal'd,
The reſt, his many-colour'd robe conceal'd.
The rebel Knave, who dares his prince engage,
Proves the juſt victim of his royal rage. 60
Ev'n mighty Pam, that Kings and Queens o'er-threw,

And mow'd down armies in the fights of Lu,
Sad chance of war! now deſtitute of aid,
Falls undiſtinguiſh'd by the victor Spade!

Thus far both armies to Belinda yield; 65
Now to the Baron fate inclines the field.
His warlike Amazon her hoſt invades,
Th' imperial confort of the crown of Spades.
The Club's black Tyrant firſt her victim dy'd,
Spite of his haughty mien, and barb'rous pride:
What boots the regal circle on his head, 71
His giant limbs, in ſtate unwieldy ſpread;
That long behind he trails his pompous robe,
And, of all monarchs, only graſps the globe?

The Baron now his Diamonds pours apace; 75
Th' embroider'd King who ſhews but half his face,

254 THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

And his refulgent Queen, with pow'rs combin'd
Of broken troops an easy conquest find.

Clubs, Diamonds, Hearts, in wild disorder seen,
With throngs promiscuous strow the level green.

Thus when dispers'd a routed army runs, 81

Of Asia's troops, and Afric's fable sons,

With like confusion different nations fly,

Of various habit, and of various dye ;

The pierc'd battalions disunited fall, 85

In heaps on heaps ; one fate o'erwhelms them all.

The Knave of Diamonds tries his wily arts,
And wins (oh shameful chance !) the Queen of Hearts.

At this, the blood the virgin's cheek forfook,
A livid paleness spreads o'er all her look ; 90

She sees, and trembles at th' approaching ill,
Just in the jaws of ruin, and Codille.

And now (as oft in some distemper'd State)

On one nice Trick depends the gen'ral fate :

An Ace of Hearts steps forth : The King unseen 95

Lurk'd in her hand, and mourn'd his captive

Queen :

He springs to vengeance with an eager pace,

And falls like thunder on the prostrate Ace.

THE RAPE OF THE LOCK. 255

The nymph exulting fills with shouts the sky ;
The walls, the woods, and long canals reply. 100

Oh thoughtless mortals ! ever blind to fate,
Too soon dejected, and too soon elate.

Sudden, these honours shall be snatch'd away,
And curs'd for ever this victorious day.

For lo ! the board with cups and spoons is
crown'd, 105

The berries crackle, and the mill turns round ;

On shining altars of Japan they raise

The silver lamp ; the fiery spirits blaze :

From silver spouts the grateful liquors glide,

While China's earth receives the smoking tide : 110

At once they gratify their scent and taste,

And frequent cups prolong the rich repast.

Strait hover round the Fair her airy band ;

Some, as she sipp'd, the fuming liquor fann'd,

 Coffee (which makes the politician wife,
 And see thro' all things with his half-shut eyes)
 Sent up in vapours to the Baron's brain
 New stratagems, the radiant Lock to gain. 120
 Ah cease, rash youth! desist ere 'tis too late,
 Fear the just Gods, and think of Scylla's Fate!
 Chang'd to a bird, and sent to flit in air,
 She dearly pays for Nisus' injur'd hair!

But when to Mischief mortals bend their will,
 How soon they find fit instruments of ill? 126
 Just then, Clarissa drew with tempting grace
 A two-edg'd weapon from her shining case:
 So Ladies in Romance assist their Knight,
 Present the spear, and arm him for the fight. 130
 He takes the gift with rev'rence, and extends
 The little engine on his fingers' ends;
 This just behind Belinda's neck he spread,
 As o'er the fragrant steams she bends her head.

THE RAPE OF THE LOCK. 257

And thrice they twitch'd the diamond in her ear ;
Thrice she look'd back, and thrice the foe drew near.

Just in that instant, anxious Ariel fought
The close recesses of the Virgin's thought : 140
As on the nosegay in her breast reclin'd,
He watch'd th' ideas rising in her mind,
Sudden he view'd, in spite of all her art,
An earthly Lover lurking at her heart.
Amaz'd, confus'd, he found his pow'r expir'd, 145
Resign'd to fate, and with a sigh retir'd.

The Peer now spreads the glitt'ring Forfex wide,
T' inclose the Lock ; now joins it, to divide.
Ev'n then, before the fatal engine clos'd,

The meeting points the sacred hair dis sever
From the fair head, for ever, and for ever! 154

Then flash'd the living light'ning from her eyes,
And screams of horror rend th' affrighted skies.
Not louder shrieks to pitying heav'n are cast,
When husbands, or when lap-dogs breathe their last;

Or when rich China vessels fall'n from high,
In glitt'ring dust, and painted fragments lie! 160

Let wreaths of triumph now my temples twine,
(The Victor cry'd) the glorious prize is mine!
While fish in streams, or birds delight in air,
Or in a coach and fix the British Fair,
As long as Atalantis shall be read, 165
Or the small pillow grace a Lady's bed,
While visits shall be paid on solemn days,
When num'rous wax-lights in bright order blaze,
While nymphs take treats, or assignations give,
So long my honour, name, and praise shall live! 170

NOTES.

VER. 165. Atalantis] A famous book written about that time by a woman; full of Court and Party-scandal; and in a loose effeminacy of style and sentiment, which well suited the debauched taste of the better vulgar.

What Time would spare, from Steel receives its

And monuments, like men, submit to fate!
Steel could the labour of the Gods destroy,
And strike to dust th' imperial tow'rs of Troy;
Steel could the works of mortal pride confound,

CANTO IV.

BUT anxious cares the pensive nymph oppress'd,
And secret passions labour'd in her breast.
Not youthful kings in battle seiz'd alive,
Not scornful virgins who their charms survive,
Not ardent lovers robb'd of all their bliss, 5
Not ancient ladies when refus'd a kiss,
Not tyrants fierce that unrepenting die,
Not Cynthia when her manteau's pinn'd awry,
E'er felt such rage, resentment, and despair,
As thou, sad Virgin! for thy ravish'd Hair. 10

VARIATIONS.

VER. II. For, that sad moment, etc.] All the lines from hence to the 94th verse, that describe the house of Spleen, are not in the first Edition; instead of them followed only these,

THE RAPE OF THE LOCK. 261

For, that sad moment, when the Sylphs withdrew,

And Ariel weeping from Belinda flew,
Umbriel, a dusky, melancholy sprite,
As ever fully'd the fair face of light,
Down to the central earth, his proper scene, 15
Repair'd to search the gloomy Cave of Spleen.

Swift on his sooty pinions flits the Gnome,
And in a vapour reach'd the dismal dome.
No cheerful breeze this fullen region knows,
The dreaded East is all the wind that blows. 20
Here in a grotto, shelter'd close from air,
And screen'd in shades from day's detested glare,
She sighs for ever on her pensive bed,
Pain at her side, and Megrim at her head. 24

Two handmaids wait the throne: alike in place,
But diff'ring far in figure and in face.
Here stood Ill-nature like an ancient maid,
Her wrinkled form in black and white array'd!
With store of pray'rs, for mornings, nights, and noons,
Her hand is fill'd; her bosom with lampoons. 30

There Affectation with a fickle mien,
Shows in her cheek the roses of eighteen,
Practis'd to lisp, and hang the head aside,
Faints into airs, and languishes with pride,

262 THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

On the rich quilt sinks with becoming woe, 35

Wrapt in a gown, for sickness, and for show.

The fair-ones feel such maladies as these,

When each new night-dress gives a new disease.

A constant Vapour o'er the palace flies ;

Strange phantoms rising as the mists arise ; 40

Dreadful, as hermits dreams in haunted shades,

Or bright, as visions of expiring maids.

Now glaring fiends, and snakes on rolling spires,

Pale spectres, gaping tombs, and purple fires :

Now lakes of liquid gold, Elysian scenes, 45

And crystal domes, and Angels in machines.

Unnumber'd throngs, on ev'ry side are seen,

Of bodies chang'd to various forms by Spleen.

Here living Tea-pots stand, one arm held out,

One bent; the handle this, and that the spout: 50

Who give th' hyfteric, or poetic fit, 60
On various tempers act by various ways,
Make some take phyfic, others scribble plays ;
Who cause the proud their visits to delay,
And send the godly in a pet to pray.
A nymph there is, that all thy pow'r disdains, 65
And thousand more in equal mirth maintains.
But oh ! if e'er thy Gnome could spoil a grace,
Or raise a pimple on a beauteous face,
Like Citron-waters matrons cheeks inflame,
Or change complexions at a losing game ; 70
If e'er with airy horns I planted heads,
Or rump'd petticoats, or tumbled beds,

tations of the mortified Recluses in the Church of Rome, and the extatic visions of their female Saints, were as much the effects of hypochondriac disorders, the Spleen, or, what was then the fashionable word, the Vapours, as any of the imaginary transformations he speaks of afterwards.

264 THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

Or caus'd fuspicion when no foul was rude,
 Or difcompos'd the head-drefs of a Prude,
 Or e'er to coftive lap-dog gave difeafe, 75
 Which not the tears of brighteft eyes could eafe :
 Hear me, and touch Belinda with chagrin,
 That fingle act gives half the world the spleen.

The Goddefs with a difcontented air
 Seems to reject him, tho' fhe grants his pray'r. 80
 A wond'rous Bag with both her hands fhe binds,
 Like that where once Ulyffes held the winds ;
 There fhe collects the force of female lungs,
 Sighs, fobs, and paffions, and the war of tongues.
 A Vial next fhe fills with fainting fears, 85
 Soft sorrows, melting griefs, and flowing tears.
 The Gnome rejoicing bears her gifts away,
 Spreads his black wings, and flowly mounts to day.

Sunk in Thaleftris' arms the nymph he found,
 Her eyes dejected, and her hair unbound. 90
 Full o'er their heads the fwelling bag he rent,
 And all the Furies iffu'd at the vent.

Belinda burns with more than mortal ire,
 And fierce Thaleftris fans the rifing fire. 94
 O wretched maid! fhe fpread her hands, and cry'd,

 ply'd)

Was it for this you took such constant care
The bodkin, comb, and essence to prepare?
For this your Locks in paper durance bound, 99
For this with tort'ring irons wreath'd around?
For this with fillets strain'd your tender head?
And bravely bore the double loads of lead?
Gods! shall the ravisher display your hair,
While the Fops envy, and the Ladies stare!
Honour forbid! at whose unrival'd shrine 105
Ease, pleasure, virtue, all our sex resign.
Methinks already I your tears survey,
Already hear the horrid things they say,
Already see you a degraded toast,
And all your honour in a whisper lost! 110
How shall I, then, your helpless fame defend?
'Twill then be infamy to seem your friend!
And shall this prize, th' inestimable prize,
Expos'd thro' crystal to the gazing eyes,
And heighten'd by the diamond's circling rays, 115
On that rapacious hand for ever blaze?
Sooner shall grass in Hyde-park Circus grow,
And wits take lodgings in the sound of Bow;
Sooner let earth, air, sea, to Chaos fall, 119
Men, monkeys, lap-dogs, parrots, perish all!

266 THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

She said ; then raging to Sir Plume repairs,
 And bids her Beau demand the precious hairs :
 (Sir Plume of amber snuff-box justly vain,
 And the nice conduct of a clouded cane)
 With earnest eyes, and round unthinking face, 125
 He first the snuff-box open'd, then the case,
 And thus broke out---“ My Lord, why, what
 “ the devil !
 “ Z--ds ! damn the Lock ! 'fore Gad, you must “ be civil !
 “ Plague on't ! 'tis past a Jest--nay prithee, pox !
 “ Give her the hair”--he spoke, and rapp'd his box.
 It grieves me much (reply'd the Peer again) 131
 Who speaks so well should ever speak in vain.
 But by this Lock, this sacred Lock I swear,
 (Which never more shall join its parted hair ;
 Which never more its honours shall renew, 135
 Clip'd from the lovely head where late it grew)

He spoke, and speaking, in proud triumph spread
The long-contended honours of her head. 140

But Umbriel, hateful Gnome! forbears not so;
He breaks the Vial whence the sorrows flow.

Then see! the nymph in beauteous grief appears,
Her eyes half-languishing, half-drown'd in tears;
On her heav'd bosom hung her drooping head, 145
Which, with a sigh, she rais'd; and thus she said.

For ever curs'd be this detested day,
Which snatch'd my best, my fav'rite curl away!
Happy! ah ten times happy had I been,
If Hampton-Court these eyes had never seen! 150
Yet am not I the first mistaken maid,
By love of Courts to num'rous ills betray'd.
Oh had I rather un-admir'd, remain'd
In some lone isle, or distant Northern land;
Where the gilt Chariot never marks the way, 155
Where none learn Ombre, none e'er taste Bohea!

There kept my charms conceal'd from mortal eye,
Like roses, that in deserts bloom and die.

What mov'd my mind with youthful Lords to roam?

O had I stay'd, and said my pray'rs at home! 160

'Twas this, the morning omens seem'd to tell,

Thrice from my trembling hand the patch-box fell;

The tott'ring China shook without a wind,

Nay Poll sat mute, and Shock was most unkind!

A Sylph too warn'd me of the threats of fate, 165

In mystic visions, now believ'd too late!

See the poor remnants of these slighted hairs!

My hands shall rend what ev'n thy rapine spares:

These in two fable ringlets taught to break,

Once gave new beauties to the snowy neck; 170

The sister-lock now sits uncouth, alone,

And in its fellow's fate foresees its own;

Uncurl'd it hangs, the fatal sheers demands,

And tempts, once more, thy sacrilegious hands.

Oh hadst thou, cruel! been content to seize 175

Hairs less in fight, or any hairs but these!

SHE said: the pitying audience melt in tears,
But Fate and Jove had stopp'd the Baron's ears.
In vain Thalestris with reproach affails,
For who can move when fair Belinda fails?
Not half so fix'd the Trojan could remain, 5
While Anna begg'd and Dido rag'd in vain.
Then grave Clarissa graceful wav'd her fan;
Silence ensu'd, and thus the Nymph began.

Say, why are Beauties prais'd and honour'd most,
The wise man's passion, and the vain man's toast?

“ And hills where vines their purple harvest yield;

Why deck'd with all that land and sea afford, 11
 Why Angels call'd, and Angel-like ador'd?
 Why round our coaches croud the white-glov'd
 Beaux,
 Why bows the side-box from its inmost rows?
 How vain are all these glories, all our pains, 15
 Unless good sense preserve what beauty gains:
 That men may say, when we the front-box grace,
 Behold the first in virtue as in face!

IMITATIONS.

“ Our foaming bowls with purer nectar crown'd,
 “ Our feasts enhanc'd with music's sprightly sound;
 “ Why on those shores are we with joy survey'd,
 “ Admir'd as heroes, and as Gods obey'd;
 “ Unless great acts superior merit prove,
 “ And vindicate the bounteous pow'rs above?
 “ 'Tis ours, the dignity they give, to grace;
 “ The first in valour, as the first in place:
 “ That when with wond'ring eyes our martial bands
 “ Behold our deeds transcending our commands,
 “ Such, they may cry, deserve the sov'reign state,
 “ Whom those that envy, dare not imitate.
 “ Could all our care elude the gloomy grave,
 “ Which claims no less the fearful than the brave,
 “ For lust of fame I should not vainly dare
 “ In fighting fields, nor urge thy soul to war.
 “ But since, alas! ignoble age must come,
 “ Disease, and death's inexorable doom;
 “ The life which others pay, let us bestow,
 “ And give to fame what we to nature owe;
 “ Brave tho' we fall, and honour'd if we live,
 “ Or let us glory gain, or glory give.”

THE RAPE OF THE LOCK. 271

Oh! if to dance all night, and dress all day,
Charm'd the small-pox, or chas'd old-age away; 20
Who would not scorn what housewife's cares produce,

Or who would learn one earthly thing of use?
To patch, nay ogle, might become a Saint,
Nor could it sure be such a sin to paint.

But since, alas! frail beauty must decay, 25
Curl'd or uncurl'd, since Locks will turn to grey;
Since painted, or not painted, all shall fade,
And she who scorns a man, must die a maid;
What then remains but well our pow'r to use,
And keep good-humour still whate'er we lose? 30
And trust me, dear! good-humour can prevail,
When airs, and flights, and screams, and scolding fail.

Beauties in vain their pretty eyes may roll;
Charms strike the sight, but merit wins the soul.

So spoke the Dame, but no applause ensu'd; 35
Belinda frown'd, Thalestris call'd her Prude.

272 THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

To arms, to arms! the fierce Virago cries,
 And swift as lightning to the combat flies,
 All side in parties, and begin th' attack;
 Fans clap, silks ruffle, and tough whalebones crack;
 Heroes' and Heroines' shouts confus'dly rise, 41
 And base and treble voices strike the skies.

No common weapons in their hands are found,
 Like Gods they fight, nor dread a mortal wound.

So when bold Homer makes the Gods engage, 45
 And heav'nly breasts with human passions rage;
 'Gainst Pallas, Mars; Latona, Hermes arms;
 And all Olympus rings with loud alarms:
 Jove's thunder roars, heav'n trembles all around,
 Blue Neptune storms, the bellowing deeps re-
 found: 50

Earth shakes her nodding tow'rs, the ground gives way,

And the pale ghosts start at the flash of day!

The growing combat, or assist the fray. 56

While thro' the press enrag'd Thalestris flies,
And scatters death around from both her eyes,
A Beau and Witling perish'd in the throng,
One dy'd in metaphor, and one in song. 60

“ O cruel nymph ! a living death I bear,”
Cry'd Dapperwit, and sunk beside his chair.
A mournful glance Sir Fopling upwards cast,
“ Those eyes are made so killing”—was his last.

Now Jove suspends his golden scales in air,
 Weighs the Men's wits against the Lady's hair;
 The doubtful beam long nods from side to side;
 At length the wits mount up, the hairs subside.

See fierce Belinda on the Baron flies, 75
 With more than usual lightning in her eyes:
 Nor fear'd the Chief th' unequal fight to try,
 Who fought no more than on his foe to die.

But this bold Lord with manly strength endu'd,
 She with one finger and a thumb subdu'd: 80
 Just where the breath of life his nostrils drew,
 A charge of snuff the wily virgin threw;
 The Gnomes direct, to ev'ry atom just,
 The pungent grains of titillating dust.
 Sudden, with starting tears each eye o'erflows, 85
 And the high dome re-echoes to his nose.

Now meet thy fate, incens'd Belinda cry'd,

Then in a bodkin grac'd her mother's hairs, 95
Which long she wore, and now Belinda wears.)

Boast not my fall (he cry'd) insulting foe !
Thou by some other shalt be laid as low.
Nor think, to die dejects my lofty mind ;
All that I dread is leaving you behind ! 100
Rather than so, ah let me still survive,
And burn in Cupid's flames---but burn alive.

Restore the Lock ! she cries ; and all around
Restore the Lock ! the vaulted roofs rebound.
Not fierce Othello in so loud a strain 105
Roar'd for the handkerchief that caus'd his pain.
But see how oft ambitious aims are cross'd,
And chiefs contend till all the prize is lost !
The Lock, obtain'd with guilt, and kept with pain,
In ev'ry place is fought, but fought in vain : 110
With such a prize no mortal must be blest,
So heav'n decrees ! with heav'n who can contest ?

276 THE RAPE OF THE LOCK.

Some thought it mounted to the Lunar sphere,
 Since all things lost on earth are treasur'd there.
 There Heros' wits are kept in pond'rous vases, 115
 And Beaux in snuff-boxes and tweezer-cases.
 There broken vows, and death-bed alms are found,

And lovers hearts with ends of ribband bound,
 The courtier's promises, and sick men's pray'rs,
 The smiles of harlots, and the tears of heirs, 120
 Cages for gnats, and chains to yoke a flea,
 Dry'd butterflies, and tomes of casuistry.

But trust the Muse---she saw it upward rise,
 Tho' mark'd by none but quick, poetic eyes :
 (So Rome's great founder to the heav'ns withdrew,
 To Proculus alone confess'd in view) 126
 A sudden Star, it shot thro' liquid air,
 And drew behind a radiant trail of hair.
 Not Berenice's Locks first rose so bright,

Oh ever beauteous, ever friendly ! tell, 5

Is it, in heav'n, a crime to love too well ?

To bear too tender, or too firm a heart,

To act a Lover's or a Roman's part ?

NOTES.

* See the Duke of Buckingham's verses to a Lady designing to retire into a Monastery, compared with Mr. Pope's Letters to several Ladies, p. 206. quarto Edition. She seems to be the same person whose unfortunate death is the subject of this poem. P.

Ambition first sprung from your blest abodes ;
 The glorious fault of Angels and of Gods :
 Thence to their images on earth it flows, 15
 And in the breasts of Kings and Heroes glows.
 Most souls, 'tis true, but peep out once an age,
 Dull fullen pris'ners in the body's cage :
 Dim lights of life, that burn a length of years
 Useless, unseen, as lamps in sepulchres ; 20
 Like Eastern Kings a lazy state they keep,
 And, close confin'd to their own palace, sleep.

From these perhaps (ere nature bade her die)
 Fate snatch'd her early to the pitying sky.
 As into air the purer spirits flow, 25
 And sep'rate from their kindred dregs below ;
 So flew the soul to its congenial place,
 Nor left one virtue to redeem her Race.

But thou, false guardian of a charge too good,
 Thou, mean deserter of thy brother's blood ! 30
 See on these ruby lips the trembling breath,
 These cheeks now fading at the blast of death ;
 Cold is that breast which warm'd the world before,
 And those love-darting eyes must roll no more.
 Thus, if eternal justice rules the ball, 35
 Thus shall your wives, and thus your children fall :
 On all the line a sudden vengeance waits,
 And frequent heres shall besiege your gates ;

There passengers shall stand, and pointing say,
 (While the long fun'ral blacken all the way) 40
 Lo! these were they, whose souls the Furies steel'd,
 And curs'd with hearts unknowing how to yield.
 Thus unlamented pass the proud away,
 The gaze of fools, and pageant of a day!
 So perish all, whose breast ne'er learn'd to glow 45
 For others good, or melt at others woe.

What can atone (oh ever-injur'd shade!)
 Thy fate un pity'd, and thy rites unpaid?
 No friend's complaint, no kind domestic tear
 Pleas'd thy pale ghost, or grac'd thy mournful bier.
 By foreign hands thy dying eyes were clos'd, 51
 By foreign hands thy decent limbs compos'd,
 By foreign hands thy humble grave adorn'd,
 By strangers honour'd, and by strangers mourn'd!
 What tho' no friends in sable weeds appear, 55
 Grieve for an hour, perhaps, then mourn a year,
 And bear about the mockery of woe
 To midnight dances, and the public show?
 What tho' no weeping Loves thy ashes grace,
 Nor polish'd marble emulate thy face? 60
 What tho' no sacred earth allow thee room,
 Nor hallow'd dirge be mutter'd o'er thy tomb?
 Yet shall thy grave with rising flow'rs be dress'd,
 And the green turf lie lightly on thy breast:

There shall the morn her earliest tears bestow, 65
There the first roses of the year shall blow ;
While Angels with their silver wings o'er shade
The ground, now sacred by thy reliques made.

So peaceful rests, without a stone, a name,
What once had beauty, titles, wealth, and fame. 70
How lov'd, how honour'd once, avails thee not,
To whom related, or by whom begot ;
A heap of dust alone remains of thee,
'Tis all thou art, and all the proud shall be ! 74

Poets themselves must fall like those they sung,
Deaf the prais'd ear, and mute the tuneful tongue.
Ev'n he, whose soul now melts in mournful lays,
Shall shortly want the gen'rous tear he pays ;
Then from his closing eyes thy form shall part,
And the last pang shall tear thee from his heart, 80
Life's idle business at one gasp be o'er,
The Muse forgot, and thou belov'd no more !

C A T O.

TO wake the soul by tender strokes of art,
To raise the genius, and to mend the heart,
To make mankind, in conscious virtue bold,
Live o'er each scene, and be what they behold :
For this the Tragic Muse first trod the stage, 5
Commanding tears to stream thro' ev'ry age ;
Tyrants no more their savage nature kept,
And foes to virtue wonder'd how they wept.
Our author shuns by vulgar springs to move
The hero's glory, or the virgin's love ; 10
In pitying love, we but our weakness show,
And wild Ambition well deserves its woe.

† This Prologue, and the Epilogue which follows, are the most perfect models of this species of writing, both in the serious and the ludicrous way.

284 PROLOGUE TO CATO.

Here tears shall flow from a more gen'rous cause,
 Such tears as Patriots shed for dying Laws :
 He bids your breasts with ancient ardour rise, 15
 And calls forth Roman drops from British eyes.
 Virtue confess'd in human shape he draws,
 What Plato thought, and godlike Cato was :
 No common object to your sight displays,
 But what with pleasure Heav'n itself surveys, 20
 A brave man struggling in the storms of fate,
 And greatly falling with a falling state.
 While Cato gives his little Senate laws,
 What bosom beats not in his Country's cause ?
 Who sees him act, but envies ev'ry deed ? 25
 Who hears him groan, and does not wish to bleed ?
 Ev'n when proud Cæsar 'midst triumphal cars,
 The spoils of nations, and the pomp of wars,
 Ignobly vain, and impotently great,
 Show'd Rome her Cato's figure drawn in state; 30
 As her dead Father's rev'rend image past,
 The pomp was darken'd, and the day o'ercast ;
 The Triumph ceas'd, tears gush'd from ev'ry eye ;
 The world's great Victor pass'd unheeded by ;
 Her last good man dejected Rome ador'd, 35
 And honour'd Cæsar's less than Cato's sword.

NOTES.

VER. 20. But what with pleasure] This alludes to a famous passage of Seneca, which Mr. Addison afterwards used as a motto to his play, when it was printed.

PROLOGUE TO CATO. 285

Britons, attend : be worth like this approv'd,
And show, you have the virtue to be mov'd.
With honest scorn the first fam'd Cato view'd
Rome learning arts from Greece, whom she sub-du'd ; 40

Your scene precariously subsists too long
On French translation, and Italian song.
Dare to have sense yourselves ; assert the stage,
Be justly warm'd with your own native rage :
Such Plays alone should win a British ear, 45
As Cato's self had not disdain'd to hear.

NOTES.

VER. 46. As Cato's self, etc.] This alludes to that famous story of his coming into the Theatre, and going out again.

Mr. ROWE'S JANE SHORE.

Designed for Mrs. OLDFIELD.

Prodigious this! the Frail-one of our Play
From her own Sex should mercy find to-day!
You might have held the pretty head aside,
Peep'd in your fans, been serious, thus, and cry'd,
The Play may pass----but that strange creature,
Shore, 5

I can't---indeed now---I so hate a whore---
Just as a blockhead rubs his thoughtless skull,
And thanks his stars he was not born a fool;
So from a sifter sinner you shall hear,
“ How strangely you expose yourself, my dear ?”
But let me die, all raillery apart, 11
Our sex are still forgiving at their heart;
And, did not wicked custom so contrive,
We'd be the best, good-natur'd things alive.

EPILOGUE TO JANE SHORE. 287

There are, 'tis true, who tell another tale, 15
That virtuous ladies envy while they rail ;
Such rage without betrays the fire within ;
In some close corner of the soul, they fin ;
Still hoarding up, most scandalously nice,
Amidst their virtues a reserve of vice. 20
The godly dame, who fleshly failings damns,
Scolds with her maid, or with her chaplain crams.
Would you enjoy soft nights and solid dinners ?
Faith, gallants, board with faints, and bed with finners.

Well, if our Author in the Wife offends, 25
He has a Husband that will make amends :
He draws him gentle, tender, and forgiving,
And sure such kind good creatures may be living.
In days of old, they pardon'd breach of vows,
Stern Cato's self was no relentless spouse : 30
Plu---Plutarch, what's his name, that writes his life ?

Tells us, that Cato dearly lov'd his Wife :
Yet if a friend, a night or so, should need her,
He'd recommend her as a special breeder.
To lend a wife, few here would scruple make, 35
But, pray, which of you all would take her back ?
Tho' with the Stoic Chief our stage may ring,
The Stoic Husband was the glorious thing.

288 EPILOGUE TO JANE SHORE.

The man had courage, was a sage, 'tis true, 39
And lov'd his country,---but what's that to you?
Those strange examples ne'er were made to fit ye,
But the kind cuckold might instruct the City:
There, many an honest man may copy Cato,
Who ne'er saw naked sword, or look'd in Plato.

If, after all, you think it a disgrace, 45
That Edward's Miss thus perks it in your face;
To see a piece of failing flesh and blood,
In all the rest so impudently good;
Faith, let the modest Matrons of the town 49
Come here in crouds, and stare the strumpet down.
