

Bodleian Libraries

UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

This book is part of the collection held by the Bodleian Libraries and scanned by Google, Inc. for the Google Books Library Project.

For more information see:

<http://www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/dbooks>

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike 2.0 UK: England & Wales (CC BY-NC-SA 2.0) licence.

✓ 15630

Vertical line on the left side of the page.

Small black dot or mark in the center of the page.

Small black dot or mark in the lower-left quadrant.

Horizontal line at the bottom of the page.

English Reprints.

WILLIAM WEBBE, GRADUATE.

A DISCOURSE
OF
ENGLISH POETRIE.
1586.

CAREFULLY EDITED BY

EDWARD ARBER,
Associate, King's College, London, F.R.G.S., &c.

LONDON :

5 QUEEN SQUARE, BLOOMSBURY, W.C.

En. Stat. Hall.

1 December 1871.

[All rights reserved.]

15. 6. 30

CONTENTS.

NOTES of William Webbe, . . . . .	3
CONTEMPORARY ENGLISH AUTHORS referred to, . . . . .	5
INTRODUCTION, . . . . .	7
BIBLIOGRAPHY, . . . . .	10
A DISCOURSE OF ENGLISH POETRIE,
1. The Epistle to Edward Sulyard, Esquire, . . . . .	13
2. A Preface to the noble Poets of England, . . . . .	17
3. A DISCOURSE OF ENGLISH POETRIE, . . . . .	21
(a) What Poetry is? . . . . .	21
(b) The beginning of Poetry, and of what estimation it hath always been, . . . . .	21
(c) The use of Poetry, and wherein it rightly con- sisted, . . . . .	25
(d) The Author's judgement of English Poets, . . . . .	30-37
(e) The Matter of English Poetrie, . . . . .	38-56
Ex. Comparifon of Thomas Phaer's translation of the Aeneid with the original text of Virgil . . . . .	47-51
(f) The Manner or Form of English Poetrie, . . . . .	56-84
A. RHYMED VERSE.
There be three special notes necessary to be observed in the framing of our accustomed English Rhyme:—
(1) The metre or verse must be proportionate . . . . .	57
Ex. Criticifm of the different sorts of Verse in Spencer's Shepherds Calender . . . . .	59-61
(2) The natural Accent of the words must not             be wrested . . . . .	62
(3) The Rhyme or like ending of verses . . . . .	63
B. The Reformed kind of ENGLISH VERSE [ i.e. , in CLASSICAL FEET], . . . . .
Ex. The Author's translation of the first two Eglogues of Virgil into English Hexameters, . . . . .	73-79
Ex. His translation of Hobbinoll's Song in the Shepherds Calender into English Sapphics, . . . . .	81-84
(g) The Canons or general Cautions of Poetry, pre- scribed by Horace: collected by George Fabricius [ b. 23 April 1516 at Chemnitz,— d. 13 July 1571] . . . . .	85-95
4. EPILOGUE, . . . . .	96

NOTES
of
WILLIAM WEBBE.

▪ Probable or approximate dates.

Very little is known of the Author of this work. The suggestion that he was the Wilham Webbe, M.A., one of the joint Authors of a topographical book The Vale Royal, 1648, fol., is quite anachronistic.

Messrs. Cooper, in Athenæ Cantabrigienses, ii. 12. Ed. 1861, state that our Author "was a graduate of this University, but we have no means of determining his college. One of this name, who was of St. John's College, was B.A. 1572-3 [the same year as Spenser], as was another who was of Catharine Hall in 1581-2. His place of residence is unknown, although it may perhaps be inferred that it was in or near the county of Suffolk. We have no information as to his position in life, or the time or place of his death. He was evidently a man of superior intellect and no mean attainments." [Our Author apparently witnessed Tancred and Gismund in 1568, and being evidently acquainted with Gabriel Harvey and Spenser (who left Cambridge in 1578), must be the earlier graduate of the above two Webbes.]

1566. Tancred and Gismund, written by five members of the Inner Temple, the first letters of whose names are attached to the several acts, viz., Rod. Staff; Hen. No[well?]; G. All; Ch. Hat[ton?]; and R. W[ilmot]: is 'curiously acted in view of her Maiesty, by whom it was then princely accepted.'

Webbe appears to have been present at the representation: see 1591. Mr. J. P. Collier in his edition of 'Dodsley's Old Plays,' i. 153, prints from a MS. what is apparently a portion of this Tragedy as it was then acted, written in alternate rhymes. He also states in his Hist. of Dram. Poet. that it 'is the earliest English play extant, the plot of which is known to be derived from an Italian novel.' iii. 13. Ed. 1831.

*1572-3. Our Author takes his B.A. at Cambridge.
1582. Nov. 28. Gabriel Poyntz presented Robert Wilmott, clerk to the Rectory of North Okendon, Essex: 18 miles from London. Newcourt Repertorium, ii. 447. Ed. 1710.

Flemyngs is a large manor house in Essex in the parish of Runwell, in the hundred of Chelmsford; from which town it is ten miles distant, and about twenty-nine miles from London. 'This house commands extensive views of some parts of the county and of Kent, including more than thirty parish churches.'

Edward Sulyard succeeded, on the death of his father Eustace in 1546, to Flemyngs and other possessions. He had two sons, Edward and Thomas, and a daughter named Elizabeth. He was knighted on 23 July 1603 at Whitehall by James I, before his coronation: and died in June 1610. Of his two sons, Edward died without issue; Thomas, b. 1573, was knighted, and d. March 1634; leaving a son Edward, who d. 7 Nov. 1692 without issue, 'the last of the house and family.' See W. Berry, County Gen. Essex, 64. T. Wright, Hist. of Essex, i. 142, 143. Ed. 1831. J. P[hilipot] Knts. Batch. made by James I. 1660.

*1583 or 4. Webbe appears to have been at this time private tutor to Mr Sulyard's two sons, for he presented his MS. translation (now lost) of the Georgics to Mr. Sulyard: see pp. 55 and 16.

1585. DEC. 2. The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's appoint Robert Wilmott, M.A., to the Vicarage of Horndon on the Hill, twenty-four miles from London, and a few miles from Flemyngs, where his friend Webbe was a private tutor. Newcourt, idem. ii. 343.

- 1586. Of 'the pregnant ympes of right excellent hope,' Thomas Sulyard was about thirteen years old, and his brother Edward was older than him.
W. Webbe writes the present work in the summer evenings.
- SEPT. 4. It is thus registered for publication.
"Robt. Walley
John Charlewood, Rd. of them, for printinge A Discourse of englishe poetrye vjd."
J. P. Collier, Extr. of Stat. Co.'s Regrs. ii., 215. Ed. 1849.
- 1587. FEB. 5. Margaret, the mother of Mr. Sulyard died. She is buried at Runwell.
- 1588. Warton quotes "a small black-lettered tract entitled The Touch-stone of Wittes, chiefly compiled, with some slender additions, from William Webbe's Discourse of English Poetrie, written by Edward Hake, and printed at London by Edmund Bollifant." p. 804. Ed. 1870.
- Our Author—his pupils growing to manhood—then appears to have gone, possibly also in the same capacity of private tutor into the family of Henry Grey, Esquire [created Baron Grey of Groby, 21 July 1603: d. 1614] at Pirgo, in the parish of Havering atte Bower, Essex; fifteen miles from London. Dugdale states that the first husband of one of the daughters of this Henry Grey, Esquire, was a William Sulyard, Esquire. Baron. i. 722. Ed. 1675. From this old Palace of the Queens of England Webbe wrote the following letter to Wilmott, which is reprinted in the revised edition of Tancred and Gismund published in 1592: of which there are copies in the Bodleian, and at Bridgewater House, and an imperfect one in the British Museum (C. 34, e. 44).
- 1591. AUG. 8. To his friend R. W. Master R. VV. looke not now for the tearmes of an intreator, I wil beg no longer, and for your promises, I wil refuse them as bad paiement: neither can I be satisfied with any thing, but a peremptorie performance of an old intention of yours, the publishing I meane of those wast papers (as it pleaseth you to cal them, but as I esteem them, a most exquisite inuention) of Gismunds Tragedie. Thinke not to shift me off with longer delayes, nor alledge more excuses to get further respite, least I arrest you with my Actum est, and commence such a Sute of vrkindenesse against you, as when the case shall be scand before the Iudges of courtesie, the court will crie out of your immoderat modestie. And thus much I tel you before, you shal not be able to wage against me in the charges growing vpon this action, especially, if the worshipful company of the Inner temple gentlemen patronize my cause, as vndoubtedly they wil, yea, and rather plead partially for me then let my cause miscary, because themselves are parties. The tragedie was by them most pithely framed, and no lesse curiously acted in view of her Maiesty, by whom it was then as princely accepted, as of the whole honorable audience notably applauded: yea, and of al men generally desired, as a work, either in statelines of shew, depth of conceit, or true ornaments of poeticall arte, inferior to none of the best in that kinde: no, were the Roman Seneca the censurer. The braue youths that then (to their high praises) so feelingly performed the same in action, did shortly after lay vp the booke vnregarded, or perhaps let it run abroade (as many parentes doe their children once past dandling) not respecting so much what hard fortune might befall it being out of their fingers, as how their heroical wits might againe be quickly conceiued with new inuentions of like worthines, wherof they haue been euer since wonderfull fertill. But this orphan of theirs (for he wandreth as it were fatherlesse,) hath notwithstanding, by the rare and bewtiful perfections appearing in him, hetherto neuer wanted great fauourers, and louing preseruers. Among whom I cannot sufficiently commend your more then charitable zeale, and scholerly compassion towards him, that haue not only rescued and defended him from the deuouring iawes of obliuion, but vouchsafed also to apparrel him in a new sute at your own charges, wherein he may again more boldly come abroad, and by your permission returne to his olde parents, clothed perhaps not in richer or more costly furniture than it went from them, but in handsomnes and fashion more answerable to these times, wherein fashions are so often altered. Let one word suffice for your encouragement herein: namely, your commendable pains in disrobing him of his antike curiositie, and adorning him with the approoued guise of our stateliest Englishe termes (not diminishing, but augmenting his artificiall colours of absolute poesie, deriued from his first parents) cannot but bee grateful to most mens appetites, who vpon our experience we know highly to esteem such lofty measures of sententiously composed Tragedies.

How much you shal make me, and the rest of your priuate friends beholding vnto you, I list not to discourse: and therefore grounding vpon these alledged reasons, that the suppressing of this Tragedie, so worthy for ye presse, were no other thing then wilfully to defraud your selfe of an vniuersall thank, your friends of their expectations, and sweete G. of a famous eternitie. I will cease to doubt of any other pretence to cloake your bashfulnesse, hoping to read it in print (which lately lay neglected amongst your papers) at our next appointed meeting.

I bid you heartely farewell. From Pyrgo in Essex, August the eight, 1591. Tuus fide et facultate. GUIL. WEBBE.

It may also be noted that Wilmott dedicated this revised tragedy to two Essex ladies: one of whom was Lady Anne Grey, the daughter of Lord Windsor, and the wife of the above-mentioned Henry Grey, Esquire of Pirgo.

That the above R. Wilmott, Clergyman, is the same as the Reviser of the play appears from the following passage in his Preface.

"Hereupon I have indured some conflicts between reason and judgement, whether it were convenient for the commonwealth, and the indecorum of my calling (as some think it) that the memory of Tancred's Tragedy should be again by my means revised, which the oftner I read over, and the more I considered thereon, the sooner I was won to consent thereunto: calling to mind that neither the thrice reverend and learned father, M. Beza, was ashamed in his younger years to send abroad, in his own name, his Tragedy of Abraham, nor that rare Scot (the scholar of our age) Buchanan, his most pathetical Ieptha." Dodsley's Old Plays, ii. 165. Ed. by J. P. Collier, 1825.

If the identity may be considered as established, Wilmott the Poet lived on till 1619: when he was succeeded on his death by W. Jackson, in the Rectory of North Okendon. Newcourt, idem. ii. 447.

No later information concerning W. Webbe than the above letter, has yet been recovered.

CONTEMPORARY ENGLISH AUTHORS

REFERRED TO IN THE FOLLOWING Discourse.

R. ASCHAM.	The Scholemaster,	. . . . .	31, 57
G. B.	? The Shippe of Safeguarde, 1569	. . . . .	35
F. C.	?	. . . . .	35
T. CHURCHYARD.	Churchyard's 'Chippes,' 1575; Church-
	yard's 'Chance,' 1580; Churchyard's 'Charge,' 1580; &c.	. . . . .	33
M. D. [? Master Dyer, i.e., Sir Edward Dyer]		. . . . .	33
? DARRELL	?	. . . . .	35

R. EDWARDES. Par. of Dainty Devises , 1576; Comedies	33
Sir T. ELYOT. The Governor , 1538	42, 43
G. GASCOIGNE. Poſies , 1572; The Steele Glas , &c., 1576	33
B. GOOGE. Eglogs, Epytaphes, and Sonettes , 1563; translation of Palingenius' Zodiac of Life . 1560. 1565.	34
Sir J. GRANGE. The Golden Aphroditis , 1577	35
G. HARVEY.	35
HEIWOOD [either JOHN HEYWOOD or JASPER HEYWOOD]	33
W. HUNNIS. Paradiſe of Dainty Devises , 1576, 1578	33
? HYLL ?	33
E. K. [ i.e. EDWARD KIRKE]	33, 53
F. K. [? Fr. Kindlemarſh] Par. of Dainty Devises , 1576, 1578	35
J. LYLY. Euphues , 1579-80; Plays	46
A. MUNDAY. The Mirrour of Mutabilitie , 1579; The Paine of Pleaſure , 1580	35
T. NORTON. Joint Author of Ferrex and Porrex , 1561	33
C. OCKLANDE. Anglorum Prælia , 1580, 1582	30
[? DR. E.] SAND[YS]. Par. of Dainty Devises , 1576, &c.	33
E. SPENSER. Shepheards Calender , 1579, 1581, 1586	35, 52, 81
HENRY, EARL OF SURREY. Sonnets, &amp;c. , in Tottel's Misc. 1557	33
T. TUSSER. Five hundred points of Good Husbandrie , 1557-80	33
THOMAS, Lord VAUX. Sonnettes, &amp;c. , in Tottel's Misc. 1557; and Par. of Dainty Devises , 1576	33
E. VERE, EARL OF OXFORD. Unpublished Sonnets	33
G. WHETSTONE. The Roche of Regard , 1576	35
R. WILMOTT. Tancred and Giſmund , 1568	35
S. Y. [? M. YLOOP, i.e. M. POOLY in Par. of Dainty Devises ]	35

THE TRANSLATORS.

SENECA.

J. HEYWOOD. Troas , 1559; Thyeſtes , 1560; Hercules Furens , 1561	34
A. NEVILL. Ædipus , 1563	34
J. STUDLEY. Medea , 1566; Agamemnon , 1566	34

OVID.

G. TURBERVILLE. Heroical Epistles , 1567	34
A. GOLDING. Metamorphoſes , 1565	34, 51
T. CHURCHYARD. Triftia , 1578	34
T. DRANT. Satires , 1566; Art of Poetrie , 1567	34

VIRGIL.

HENRY, EARL OF SURREY. Two Books of the 'Æneid' , 1557	33
T. PHAER, M.D. 9th Books of the 'Æneid' , 1558-1562	33, 46-51
T. TWYNE. The remaining 2nd Books , 1573	34
A. FLEMING. Bucolicks , 1575, in rhyme. His Georgics referred to at p. 55 appeared in 1589	34, 55

A Discourse of English Poetrie

---

INTRODUCTION.

A Part from the excessive rarity of this work, two copies of it only being known ; it deserves permanent republication as a good example of the best form of Essay Writing of its time ; and as one of the series of Poetical Criticisms before the advent of Shakespeare as a writer, the study of which is so essential to a right understanding of our best Verse.

Although Poetry is the most ethereal part of Thought and Expression ; though Poets must be born and cannot be made : yet is there an art of Poesy ; set forth long ago by Horace but varying with differing languages and countries, and even with different ages in the life of the same country. In our tongue—Milton only excepted—there is nothing approaching, either in the average merit of the Journeymen or the superlative excellence of the few Master-Craftsmen, the Poesy of the Elizabethan age. Hence the value of these early Poetical Criticisms. Their discussion of principles is most helpful to all readers in the discernment of the subtle beauties of the numberless poems of that era : while for those who can, and who will ; they will be found singularly suggestive in the training of their own Power of Song, for the instruction and delight of this and future generations.

A Cambridge graduate ; the private tutor, for some two or three years past, to Edward and Thomas Sul-yard, the sone of Edward Sulyard Esquire, of Flemynge, situated in Essex, some thirty miles distant from London. our Author gave his leisure hours to the study of Latin and English poetry.

He had acquainted himself with our older Poets, and with the contemporary verse: and, thinking for himself, he endeavoured to see exactly what English poetry actually was, and what it might and should become. Doubtless in his walks in the large park surrounding the Old Manor House this subject often occupied his thoughts, and he sat down to commit his opinions to the press, in the presence and quietude of a large and fair landscape stretching far away southward beyond the Thames into Kent, diversified with the spires of many churches and the masts of many passing ships: and all illuminated with the glow and glory of the summer evenings of 1586.

Webbe was as much affected with the 'immoderate modesty' with which, five years later, he charged Wilmot, as any of the writers of that age. He dreads, at p. 55, the unauthorized publication of his version of the Georgics, and he must have been moved deeply by 'the rude multitude of rusticall Rymers, who will be called Poets' before he ventured to advocate in print 'the reformation of our English Verse,' i.e., the abandonment of Rhyme for Metre.

He calls his work 'a sleight somewhat compyled for recreation, in the intermyssions of my daylie businesse,' yet it is the most extensive piece of Poetical Criticism that had hitherto appeared. He had read, for he quotes at p. 64, G. Gascoigne's Certayne Notes, &c., 1575: also Three proper and wittie, familiar Letters, by Immerito [Edmund Spenser] and G[abriel H[arvey] 1580, to which he alludes at p. 36. He may have heard of Sir P. Sidney's Apologie for Poetrie [1582], then circulating in manuscript, or of the young Scotch King's Reulis and Cautelis of Scottish Poesie, then being published at Edinburgh. Yet none of these is so lengthy, nor deals with the same extent of subject, nor is illustrated by original examples, as is this Discourse.

Though the book is an honest one, faithfully representing the author's robust mind; it was written under the strong influence of three works: Ascham's Schoolmaster, 1570; Edwardes' Paradise of Dainty Devises, 1576; and Spenser's Shepherd's Calender, anonymously published, without the author's consent, by E. K. [i.e., Edward Kirke, as is generally believed] in 1579. He follows Ascham as to the origin of Rhyme; and also in his error as to Simmias Rhodias at p. 57, &c. He quotes W. Hunnis' poem at p. 66, from the collection of Edwardes. It is also Webbe's great merit as a lover and judge of poetry, that he instinctively fixes upon the Shepherd's Calender (never openly acknowledged by Spenser in his lifetime) as the revelation of a great poet, as great an English Poet indeed, as had yet appeared. That Pastoral Poem gave Webbe a higher reverence for Spenser than his great Allegory breeds respect for him in many, now-a-days.

The facility of Rhyme, at a time when there were many wonderfully facile Rhymers, induced Ascham, Webbe, and many others to seek after a more difficult form of English verse. Classical feet Webbe himself experienced to be a 'troublesome and vnpleasant peece of labour,' so he sought after something more adapted to the nature of the language, 'some perfect platforme or Profodia of versifying.' Blank verse would have fatigued him, but he did not recognise its merits in Surrey's translation of the Æneid. He is, however, warm in his praise of Phaer's version of that work in hexameters: and gives us three pieces of reformed verse of his own coinage; two in hexameters, and one in sapphics.

Finally, Webbe wrote 'these fewe leaues' 'to stirre vppe some other of meete abilitie, to bestowe trauell in this matter.' His wish had been anticipated. Already a Master Critic was at work—we know not for certainty whether it was George Puttenham, or who else—who, beginning to write in 1585, published in 1589 The Arte of English Poesie: which is the largest and ablest criticism of English Poesy that appeared in print, during the reign of Elizabeth.

---

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

Issues in the Author's lifetime.

I.—As a separate publication.

1. 1586. London. 1 vol. 4to. See title on opposite page.
Of the two copies known, the one here reprinted is among the Malone books in the Bodleian. The other passed from hand to hand at the following sales: always increasing in price.
1773. APR. 8. Mr. West's sale, No. 1856, 10s. 6d., to Mr. Pearson.
1778. APR. 22. Mr. Pearson's sale, No. 1888, £3, 5s., to Mr. Stevens.
1800. MAY 19. Mr. Stevens' sale, No. 1128, £8, 8s., to the Duke of Roxburghe.
1812. JUNE 2. The Roxburghe sale, No. 3168, £64, to the Marquis of Blandford.

Issues since the Author's death.

I.—As a separate publication.

3. 1870. DEC. 1. London. English Reprints: see title at 1 vol. 8vo. p. 1.

II.—With other works.

2. 1815. London. Ancient Critical Essays. Ed. by J. Haslewood. 2 vols. 4to. A Discourse of English Poetrie occupies Vol. ii., pp. 13-95.

A Discourse of Eng*lish Poetrie.*

Together, with the Authors iudgment, touching the reformation of our English Verse.

By VWilliam VVebbe
Graduate.

Imprinted at London,
by Iohn Charlewood for
Robert VValley
1 5 8 6.

To the right vvorship= full, learned, and most gentle Gentle*man, my verie good Master, Ma.*

Edward Suliard, Esquire. VV. VV.
wyfheth his harts defire.

(··)

Ay it please you Syr, thys once more to beare with my rudenes, in presenting vnto your viewe, an other slender conceite, of my simple capacity: wherin although I am not able to bring you anie thing, which is meete to detaine you from your more serious matters: yet vppon my knowledge of your former courtesy and your fauourable countenaunce towardes all enterprifes of Learning, I dare make bold to craue your accustomed patience, in turning ouer some of these fewe leaues, which I shall account a greater recompence, then the wryting thereof may deserue.

The Epistle.

The firme hope of your wonted gentlenes, not any good lyking of myne owne labour, made me thus presumptuously to craue your worships patronage for my poore booke. A pretty aunswere is reported by some to be made by Appelles to King Alexander, who (in disport) taking vp one of his pensilles to drawe a line, and asking the Paynters iudgment of his draught, It is doone (quoth Apelles) like a King: meaning indeede it was drawen as he pleased, but was nothing lesse then good workmanshippe. My selfe in like sort, taking vppon me, to make a draught of English Poetry, and requesting your worshypts censure of the fame, you wyll perhaps gyue me thys verdict, It was doone like a Scholler, meaning, as I could, but indeede more like to a learner, then one through grounded in Poeticall workmanship.

Alexander in drawing his lyne, leaned sometime too hard, otherwhyle too soft, as neuer hauing beene apprentice to the Arte: I in drawing this Poeticall discourse, make it some where to straight (leauing out the cheefe coloures and ornaments of Poetry) in an other place to wyde (stuffing in peeces little pertinent to true Poetry) as one neuer acquainted wyth the learned Muses. What then? as he being a king, myght meddle in what Scyence him listed, though therein hee had no skyll: so I beeing a learner, wyll trye my cunning in some parts of Learning, though neuer so simple.

Nowe, as for my saucie pressing vppon your expected fauor in crauing your iudgment, I beseech you let me

The Epistle.

15

make thys excuse: that whereas true Gentilitie did neuer withdrawe her louing affection from Lady Learning, so I am perswaded, that your worshyppe cannot chuse, but continue your wonted fauourable benignitie towards all the indeuourers to learning, of which corporation I doo indeede professe my selfe one sillie member.

For sith the wryters of all ages, haue fought as an vndoubted Bulwarke and stedfast sauegarde the patronage of Nobilitye, (a shilde as sure as can be to learning) wherein to shrowde and safelye place their feuerall inuentions: why should not I seeke some harbour for my poore trauell to reste and staye vppon, beeing of it selfe vnable to shyft the carping cauilles and byting scornes of lewde controllers?

And in trueth, where myght I rather choose a sure defence and readye refuge for the same, then where I see perfecte Gentilitye, and noblenesse of minde, to be faste lyncked with excellencie of learning and affable courtesye? Moreouer, adde thys to the ende of myne excuse: that I sende it into your sight, not as anie wyttie peece of worke that may delight you: but being a sleight somewhat compyled for recreation, in the intermyssions of my daylie busynesse, (euen thys Summer Eueninges) as a token of that earnest and vnquenchable desyre I haue to shewe my selfe duetifull and welwylling towards you. VVherevnto I am continually enflamed more and more, when I consider eyther your fauourable freendshyppe vsed towards my selfe, or your gentle countenaunce shewed to my simple trauelles. The one I haue tryed in that homely translation I presented vnto you: the other I finde true in your curteous putting to my trust, and dooing me so great honesty and credite, with the charge of these toward young Gentlemen your sonnes.

To which pregnant ympes of right excellent hope, I would I were able, or you myght haue occasion to make triall of my louing minde: who shoulde well perceyue my selfe to remayne vnto them a faythfull and trusty Achates, euen so farre as my wealth my woe, my power or perrill, my penne or witte, my health or lyfe may serue to ferche myne ability.

Huge heapes of wordes I myght pyle together to trouble you withall: eyther of my selfe or of my dooinges, (as some doo) or of your worshyppes commendable vertues (as the moste doo) But I purposely chuse rather to let passe the spreading of that worthy fame which you haue euer deserued, then to runne in suspicion of fawning flattery which I euer abhorred.

Therefore once againe crauing your gentle pardon, and patience in your ouerlooking thys rude Epistle: and wysching more happineffe then my penne can expresse to you and your whole retinewe, I rest.

(.·.)

Your worshippes faithfull

Seruant. VV. VV.

20 A Preface to the noble
Poets of Englande.

Mong the innumerable fortes of Englyshe Bookes, and infinite fardles of printed pamphlets, wherewith thys Countrey is pestered, all shoppes stuffed, and euery study furnished: the greatest part I thinke in any one kinde, are such as are either meere Poeticall, or which tende in some respecte (as either in matter or forme) to Poetry. Of such Bookes therefore, sith I haue beene one, that haue had a desire to reade not the fewest, and because it is an argument, which men of great learning haue no leysure to handle, or at least hauing to doo with more serious matters doo least regarde: If I write something, concerning what I thinke of our English Poets, or aduenture to sette downe my simple iudgement of English Poetrie, I trust the learned Poets will giue me leaue, and vouchsafe my Booke passage, as beeing for the rudenesse thereof no preiudice to their noble studies, but euen (as my intent is) an instar cotis to stirre vppe some other of meete abilitie, to bestowe trauell in this matter: whereby I thinke wee may not onelie get the meanes which wee yet want, to discerne betweene good writers and badde, but perhappes also challenge from the rude multitude of rusticall Rymers, who will be called Poets, the right practife and orderly course of true Poetry.

It is to be wondred at of all, and is lamented of manie, that where as all kinde of good learning, haue aspyred to royall dignitie and statelie grace in our English tongue, being not onelie founded, defended, maintained, and enlarged, but also purged from faultes, weeded of errours, and polished from barbarousnes, by men of great authoritie and iudgement: onelie Poetrie hath founde fewest frends to amende it, those that can, referuing theyr skylle to themselues, those that cannot, running headlong vpon it, thinking to garnish it with their deuises, but more corrupting it with fantastick errours. VVhat shoulde be the cause, that our English speeche in some of the wyfest mens iudgements, hath neuer attained to anie sufficient ripenes, nay not ful auoided the reproch of barbarousnes in Poetry? the rudenes of the Countrey, or basenesse of wytt: or the course Dialect of the speeche? experience vtterlie disproueth it to be anie of these: what then? surelie the canckred enmitie of curious custome: which as it neuer was great freend to any good learning, so in this hath it grounded in the most, such a negligent perswasion of an impossibilitie in matching the best, that the finest witts and most diuine heades, haue contented themselues with a base kinde of fingering: rather debasing theyr faculties, in setting forth theyr skylle in the courtest manner, then for breaking custome, they would labour to adorne their Countrey and aduaunce their style with the highest and most learnedst toppe of true Poetry. The rudenes or vnaptnesse of our Countrey to be either none or no hinderaunce, if reformation were made accordinglie, the exquisite excellency in all kindes of good learning nowe flourishing among vs, inferiour to none other nation, may sufficiently declare.

B

The Preface.

19

That there be as sharpe and quicke wittes in England as euer were among the peerelesse Grecians, or renowned Romaines, it were a note of no witte at all in me to deny. And is our speeche so course, or our phraze so harsh, that Poetry cannot therein finde a wayne whereby it may appeare like it selfe? why should we think so basely of this? rather then of her sister, I meane Rhetoricall Eloquution, which as they were by byrth Twyns, by kinde the same, by originall of one descent: so no doubt, as Eloquence hath founde such fauoures, in the English tongue, as she frequenteth not any more gladly: so would Poetrye if there were the like welcome and entertainment gyuen her by our English Poets, without question aspyre to wonderfull perfection, and appeare farre more gorgeous and delectable among vs. Thus much I am bolde to say in behalfe of Poetrie, not that I meane to call in question the reuerend and learned workes of Poetrie, written in our tongue by men of rare iudgement, and most excellent Poets: but euen as it were by way of supplication to the famous and learned Lawreat Masters of Englande, that they would but consult one halfe howre with their heauenly Muse, what credite they might winne to theyr natiue speeche, what enormities they might wipe out of English Poetry, what a fitte vaine they might frequent, wherein to shewe forth their worthie faculties: if English Poetrie were truely reformed, and some perfect platforme or Profodia of versifying were by them ratified and sette downe: eyther in immitation of Greekes and Latines, or where it would skant abyde the touch of theyr Rules, the like obseruations selected and established by the naturall affectation of the speeche. Thus much I say, not to perswade you that are the fauourers of Englishe Poetry but to mooue it to you: beeing not the firste that haue thought vpon this matter, but one that by consent of others, haue taken vpon me to lay it once again in your wayes, if perhaps you may stumble vpon it, and chance to looke so lowe from your diuine cogitations, when your Muse mounteth to the starres, and ranfacketh the Spheres of heauen: whereby perhaps you may take compassion of noble Poetry, pittifullie mangled and defaced, by rude smatterers and barbarous immitatours of your worthy studies. If the motion bee worthy your regard it is enough to mooue it, if not, my wordes woulde simply preuaile in perswading you, and therefore I rest vpon thys onely request, that of your courtesies, you wyll graunt passage, vnder your fauourable corrections, for this my simple censure of English Poetry, wherein if you please to runne it ouer, you shall knowe breiefely myne opinion of the most part of your accustomed Poets and particularly, in his place, the lyttle somewhat which I haue sifted out of my weake brayne concerning thys reformed versifying.

The Preface.

VV: VV:

A Discourse of Eng- lish Poetrie.

Intending to write some discourse of English Poetrie, I thinke it not amyffe if I speake something generally of Poetrie, as, what it is, whence it had the beginning, and of what estimation it hath alwayes bene and ought to be among al sorts of people. Poetrie called in Greeke ποιησια, beeing deriued from the Verbe ποιέω, which signifieth in Latine facere, in English, to make, may properly be defined, the arte of making: which word as it hath alwaies bene especially vsed of the best of our English Poets, to expresse ye very faculty of speaking or wryting Poetically, so doth it in deede containe most fitly the whole grace and property of the same, ye more fullye and effectually then any other English Verbe. That Poetry is an Arte, (or rather a more excellent thing then can be containd wythin the compasse of Arte) though I neede not stande long to prooue, both the witnes of Horace, who wrote de arte Poetica, and of Terence, who calleth it Artem Musicam, and the very naturall property thereof may sufficiently declare: The beginning of it as appeareth by Plato, was of a vertuous and most deuout purpose,

A Discourse of

who witnesseth, that by occasion of meeting of a great company of young men, to solemnize ye feasts which were called Panegyryca, and were wont to be celebrated euery fift yeere, there, they that were most pregnant in wytt, and indued with great gyfts of wysedome and knowledge in Musicke aboute the rest did vse commonly to make goodly verses, measured according to the sweetest notes of Musicke, containing the prayse of some noble vertue, or of immortalitie, or of some such thing of greatest estimation: which vnto them seemed, so heauenly and ioyous a thing, that, thinking such men to be inspyrde with some diuine instinct from heauen, they called them Vates. So when other among them of the finest wits and aptest capacities beganne in imitation of these to frame ditties of lighter matters, and tuning them to the stroake of some of the pleafantest kind of Musicke, then began there to grow a distinction and great diuersity betweene makers and makers. Whereby (I take it) beganne thys difference: that they which handled in the audience of the people, graue and necessary matters, were called wise men or eloquent men, which they meant by Vates: and the rest which sange of loue matters, or other lighter deuises alluring vnto pleasure and delight, were called Poetae or makers. Thus it appeareth, both Eloquence and Poetrie to haue had their beginning and originall from these exercises, beeing framed in such sweete measure of sentences and pleasant harmonie called Pithmos, which is an apt composition of wordes or claufes, drawing as it were by force ye hearers eares euen whether soeuer it lysteth: that Plato affirmeth therein to be contained λοητεία an inchauntment, as it were to perfwade them anie thing whether they would or no. And heerehence is sayde, that men were first withdrawne from a wylde and sauadge kinde of life, to ciuillity and gentlenes, and ye right knowledge of humanity by the force of this meafurable or tunable speaking.

This opinion shall you finde confirmed throughout the whole workes of Plato and Aristotle. And that such was the estimation of this Poetry at those times, that they supposed all wisdom and knowledge to be included mystically in that diuine instinction, wherewith they thought their Vates to be inspyred. Wherevpon, throughout the noble workes of those most excellent Philosophers before named, are the authorities of Poets very often alledged. And Cicero in his Tusculane questions is of that minde, that a Poet cannot expresse verses abundantly, sufficiently, and fully, neither his eloquence can flowe pleasauntly, or his wordes founde well and plenteously, without celestiallyl instinction: which Poets themselues doo very often and gladlie witnes of themselues, as namely Ouid in. 6. Fasto: Est deus in nobis Agitante callefcimus illo. etc. Wherevnto I doubt not equally to adioyne the authoritye of our late famous English Poet, who wrote the Sheepheards Calender, where lamenting the decay of Poetry, at these dayes, saith most sweetely to the same.

Then make thee winges of thine aspyring wytt,
And whence thou camest flye back to heauen apace. etc.

Whose fine poeticallyl witt, and most exquisite learning, as he shewed abundantly in that peece of worke, in my iudgment inferiour to the workes neither of Theocritus in Greeke, nor Virgill in Latine, whom hee narrowly immitateth: so I nothing doubt, but if his other workes were common abroad, which are as I thinke in ye close custodie of certaine his freends, we should haue of our owne Poets, whom wee might matche in all respects with the best. And among all other his workes whatsoever, I would wysh to haue the sight of hys English Poet, which his freend E. K. did once promise to publishe, which whether he performed or not, I knowe not, if he did, my happe hath not beene so good as yet to see it.

But to returne to the estimation of Poetry. Besides ye great and profitable fruites contained in Poetry, for the instruction of manners and precepts of good life (for that was chiefly respected in the first age of Poetry) this is also added to the eternall commendations of that noble faculty: that Kinges and Princes, great and famous men, did euer encourage, mayntaine, and reward Poets in al ages: because they were thought onely to haue the whole power in their handes, of making men either immortally famous for their valiaunt exploytes and vertuous exercifes, or perpetually infamous for their vicious liues. Wherevpon it is said of Achilles, that this onely vantage he had of Heclor, that it was his fortune to be extolled and renowned by the heauenly verse of Homer. And as Tully recordeth to be written of Alexander, that with natural teares he wept ouer Achilles Tombe, in ioy that he conceiued at the confideration, howe it was his happe to be honoured wyth so diuine a worke, as Homers was. Aristotle, a most prudent and learned Philosopher, beeing appointed Schoolemafter to the young Prince Alexander, thought no worke so meete to be reade vnto a King, as the worke of Homer: wherein the young Prince being by him instructed throughly, found such wonderfull delight in the same when hee came to maturity, that hee would not onely haue it with him in all his iourneyes, but in his bedde also vnder his pyllowe, to delight him and teache him both nights and dayes. The same is reported of noble Scipio, who finding the two Bookes of Homer in the spoyle of Kyng Darius, esteemed them as wonderfull precious Iewelless, making one of them his companion for the night, the other for the day. And not onely was he thus affected to yat one peece or parte of Poetry, but so generally he loued the professors thereof, that in his most serious affayres, and hottest warres against Numantia and Carthage he could no whitte be without that olde Poet Ennius in his company. But to speake of all those noble and wyfe Princes, who bare speciall fauour and countenance to Poets, were tedious, and would require a rehearfall of all such, in whose time there grewe any to credite and estimation in that faculty. Thus farre therefore may suffice for the estimation of Poets. Nowe I thinke most meete, to speake somewhat, concerning what hath bene the vse of Poetry, and wherein it rightly consisted, and whereof consequently it obteyned such estimation.

To begin therefore with the first that was first worthe-lye memorable in the excellent gyft of Poetrye, the best wryters agree that it was Orpheus, who by the sweete gyft of his heauenly Poetry, withdrew men from raungyng vncertainly, and wandring brutishly about, and made them gather together, and keepe company, made houses, and kept fellowshippe together, who therefore is reported (as Horace sayth) to asswage the fiercenesse of Tygers, and mooue the harde Flynts. After him was Amphion, who was the first that caused Citties to bee builded, and men therein to liue decently and orderly according to lawe and right. Next, was Tyrtaeus, who began to practife warlike defences, to keepe back enemies, and saue themselues from inuasion of foes. In thys place I thinke were most conuenient to rehearse that auncient Poet Pyndarus: but of the certaine time wherein he flourished, I am not very certaine: but of the place where he continued moste, it shoulde seeme to be the City of Thebes, by Plinie who reporteth, that Alexander in sacking the same Cittie, woulde not suffer the house wherein he dwelt to be spoyled as all the rest were. After these was Homer, who as it were in one summe comprehended all knowledge, wisedome, learning, and pollicie, that was incident to the capacity of man. And who so liste to take viewe of hys two Bookes, one of his Iliades, the other his Odifsea, shall throughly perceiue what the right vse of Poetry is: which indeede is to mingle profite with pleasure, and so to delight the Reader with pleasantnes of hys Arte, as in ye meane time, his mind may be well instructed with knowledge and wisedome. For so did that worthy Poet frame those his two workes, that in reading the first, that is his Iliads, by declaring and setting forth so liuely the Grecians assembly against Troy, together with their prowesse and fortitude against their foes, a Prince shall learne not onely courage, and valiantnesse, but discretion also and pollicie to encounter with his enemies, yea a perfect forme of wyse consultations, with his Captaines, and exhortations to the people, with other infinite commodities.

Agayne, in the other part, wherein are described the manifold and daungerous adventures of Ulysses, may a man learne many noble vertues: and also learne to escape and auoyde the subtyll practises, and perrilous entrappinges of naughty persons: and not onely this, but in what sort also he may deale to knowe and perceiue the affections of those which be neere vnto him, and most familiar with him, the better to put them in trust with his matters of waight and importaunce. Therefore I may boldly sette downe thys to be the truest, auncientest and best kinde of Poetry, to direct ones endeuour alwayes to that marke, that with delight they may euermore adioyne commoditie to theyr Readers: which because I grounde vpon Homer the Prince of all Poets, therefore haue I alledged the order of his worke, as an authority sufficiently proouing this assertion.

Nowe what other Poets which followed him, and beene of greatest fame, haue doone for the moste parte in their seuerall workes I wyll briefly, and as my slender ability wyll serue me declare. But by my leaue, I must content my selfe to speake not of all, but of such as my selfe haue seene, and beene best acquainted withall, and those not all nor the moste part of the auncient Grecians, of whom I know not how many there were, but these of the Latinists, which are of greatest fame and most obuious among vs.

Thus much I can say, that Aristotle reporteth none to haue greatly flourished in Greece, at least wyse not left behynd them any notable memoriall, before the time of Homer. And Tully sayth as much, that there were none wrytt woorth the reading twyce in the Romaine tongue, before ye Poet Ennius. And surely as the very summe or cheefest essence of Poetry, dyd alwayes for the most part consist in delighting the readers or hearers wyth pleasure, so as the number of Poets increased, they styll inclyned thys way rather then the other, so that most of them had speciall regarde, to the pleasantnesse of theyr fine conceytes, whereby they might drawe mens mindes into admiration of theyr inuentions, more then they had to the profite or commoditye that the Readers shoulde reape by their works. And thus as I suppose came it to passe among them, that for the most part of them, they would not write one worke contayning some serious matter: but for the same they wold likewise powre foorth as much of some wanton or laciuous inuention. Yet some of the auncientest sort of Grecians, as it seemeth were not so much disposed to vayne delectation: as Aristotle sayth of Empedocles, that in hys iudgment he was onely a naturall Philosopher, no Poet at all, nor that he was like vnto Homer in any thing but hys meeter, or number of feete, that is, that hee wrote in verse. After the time of Homer, there began the firste Comedy wryters, who compyled theyr workes in a better stile which continued not long, before it was expelled by penalty, for scoffing too broade at mens manners, and the priuie reuengements which the Poets vsed against their ill wyllers. Among these was Eupolis, Cratinus, and Aristophenes, but afterward the order of thys wryting Comedies was reformed and made more plausibile: then wrytte Plato, Comicus, Menander, and I knowe not who more.

There be many most profitable workes, of like antiquity, or rather before them, of the Tragedy writers: as of Euripides, and Sophocles, then was there Phocitides and Theagines, with many other: which Tragedies had their inuention by one Thespis, and were polished and amended by Æschilus. The profite or discomoditie which aryseth by the vse of these Comedies and Tragedies, which is most, hath beene long in controersie, and is fore vrged among vs at these dayes: what I thinke of the fame, perhaps I shall breiefely declare anon.

Nowe concerning the Poets which wrote in homely manner, as they pretended, but indeede, with great pythe and learned iudgment, such as were the wryters of Sheepeheards talke and of husbandly precepts, who were among the Grecians that excelled, besides Theocritus and Hesiodus I know not, of whom the first, what profitable workes he left to posterity, besides hys Idillia or contentions of Goteheards, tending most to delight, and pretty inuentions, I can not tell. The other, no doubt for his Argument he tooke in hande, dealt very learnedly and profitably, that is, in precepts of Husbandry, but yet so as he myxed much wanton stuffe among the rest.

The first wryters of Poetry among the Latines, shoulde seeme to be those, which excelled in the framing of Commedies, and that they continued a long time without any notable memory of other Poets. Among whom, the cheefest that we may see or heare tell of, were these. Ennius, Cæcilius, Næuius, Licinius, Attilius, Turpitius, Trabea, Luscus, Plautus, and Terens. Of whom these two last named, haue beene euer since theyr time most famous, and to these dayes are esteemed, as greate helpes and furtheraunces to the obtayning of good Letters. But heere cannot I staye to speake of the most famous, renowned and excellent, that euer writte among the Latine Poets, P. Virgill, who performed the very fame in that tongue, which Homer had doone in Greeke: or rather better if better might as Sex. Propert. in his Elegies gallantly recordeth in his praife, Nescio quid magis nascitur Iliade. Vnder the person of Aeneas he expresseth the valoure of a worthy Captaine and valiaunt Gouvernour, together with the perrilous aduentures of warre, and polliticke deuises at all assayes. And as he immitateth Homer in that worke, so dooth he likewyse followe the very steps of Theocritus, in his most pythy inuentions of his Æglogues: and likewyse Hesiodus in his Georgicks or bookes of Husbandry, but yet more grauely, and in a more decent style. But notwithstanding hys sage grauity and wonderfull wisdome, dyd he not altogether restrayne his wayne, but that he would haue a cast at some wanton and skant comely an Argument, if indeede such trifles as be fathered vppon him were his owne. There followed after him, very many rare and excellent Poets, whereof the most part writt light matters, as Epigrammes and Elegies, with much pleasant dalliance, among whom may be accounted Propertius, Tibullus, Catullus, with diuers whom Ouid speaketh of in diuers places of his workes. Then are there two Hystoricall Poets, no lesse profitable then delightfome to bee read: Silius and Lucanus: the one declaring the valiant prowesse of two noble Captaines, one enemie to the other, that is, Scipio and Haniball: the other likewise, the fortitude of two expert warriours (yet more lamentably then the other because these warres were ciuill) Pompey and Cæsar. The next in tyme (but as most men doo account, and so did he himselfe) the second in dignity, we will adioyne Ouid, a most learned, and exquisite Poet. The worke of greatest profite which he wrote, was his Booke of Metamorphosis, which though it consisted of fayned Fables for the most part, and poeticall inuentions, yet beeing moralized according to his meaning, and the trueth of euery tale beeing discouered, it is a worke of exceeding wysdome and sounde iudgment. If one lyst in like manner, to haue knowledge and perfect intelligence of those rytes and ceremonies which were obserued after the Religion of the Heathen, no more profitable worke for that purpose, then his bookes De fastis. The rest of his dooinges, though they tende to the wayne delights of loue and dalliaunce (except his Tristibus wherein he bewayleth hys exile) yet surely are mixed with much good counsayle and profitable lessons if they be wisely and narrowly read. After his time I know no worke of any great fame, till the time of Horace, a Poet not of the smoothest style, but in sharpnesse of wytt inferiour to none, and one to whom all the rest both before his time and since, are very much beholding. About the same time Iuuenall and Perfius, then Martial, Seneca a most excellent wryter of Tragedies, Boetius, Lucretius, Statius, Val: Flaccus, Manilius, Aufonius, Claudian, and many other, whose iust times and feuerall woorkes to speake of in this place, were neither much needefull, nor altogether tollerable, because I purposed an other argument. Onely I will adde two of later times, yet not farre inferiour to the most of them aforefayde, Pallengenius, and Bap. Mantuanus, and for a singuler gyft in a sweete Heroicall verse, match with them Chr. Oclan. the Authour of our Anglorum Prælia. But nowe least I stray too farre from my purpose, I wyl come to our English Poets, to whom I would I were able to yeelde theyr deserued commendations: and affoorde them that censure, which I know many woulde, which can better, if they were nowe to write in my fleede.

I know no memorable worke written by any Poet in our English speeche, vntill twenty yeeres past: where although Learning was not generally decayde at any time, especially since the Conquest of King William Duke of Normandy, as it may appeare by many famous works and learned bookes (though not of this kinde) wrytten by Byshoppes and others: yet surelye that Poetry was in small price among them, it is very manifest, and no great maruayle, for euen that light of Greeke and Latine Poets which they had, they much contemned, as appeareth by theyr rude versifying, which of long time was vsed (a barbarous vse it was) wherin they conuerted the naturall property of the sweete Latine verse, to be a balde kinde of ryming, thinking nothing to be learnedly written in verse, which fell not out in ryme, that is, in wordes whereof the middle worde of eche verse should found a like with the last, or of two verses, the ende of both should fall in the like letters as thus.

O malè viuentes, versus audite sequentes.

And thus likewyse.

Propter hæc et alia dogmata doctorum

Reor esse melius et magis decorum:

Quisque suam habeat, et non proximorum.

This brutish Poetrie, though it had not the beginning in this Countrey, yet so hath it beene affected heere, that the infection thereof would neuer (nor I thinke euer will) be rooted vpp e againe: I meane this tynkerly verse which we call ryme: Master Afcham sayth, that it first began to be followed and maintained among the Hunnes and Gothians, and other barbarous Nations, who with the decay of all good learning, brought it into Italy: from thence it came into Fraunce, and so to Germany, at last conueyed into England, by men indeede of great wisedome and learning, but not considerate nor circumspect in that behalfe. But of this I must intreate more heereafter.

Henry the first King of that name in England, is wonderfully extolled, in all auncient Recordes of memory, for hys singuler good learning, in all kinde of noble studies, in so much as he was named by his surname Beauclerk, as much to say, as Fayreclerke (whereof perhappes came ye name of Fayreclowe) what knowledge hee attained in the skylle of Poetry, I am not able to say, I report his name for prooffe; that learning in this Countrey was not little esteemed of at that rude time, and that like it is, among other studies, a King would not neglect the faculty of Poetry. The first of our English Poets that I haue heard of, was John Gower, about the time of king Rychard the seconde, as it should seeme by certayne coniectures bothe a Knight, and questionlesse a singuler well learned man: whose workes I could wysh they were all whole and perfect among vs, for no doubt they contained very much deepe knowledge and delight: which may be gathered by his freend Chawcer, who speaketh of him oftentimes, in diuer[s] places of hys workes. Chawcer, who for that excellent fame which hee obtayned in his Poetry, was alwayes accounted the God of English Poets (such a tytle for honours sake hath beene giuen him) was next after, if not equall in time to Gower, and hath left many workes, both for delight and profitable knowledge, farre exceeding any other that as yet euer since hys time directed theyr studies that way. Though the manner of hys stile may seeme blunte and course to many fine English eares at these dayes, yet in trueth, if it be equally pondered, and with good iudgment aduised, and confirmed with the time wherein he wrote, a man shall perceiue thereby euen a true picture or perfect shape of a right Poet. He by his delightfome vayne, so gulled the eares of men with his deuises, that, although corruption bare such sway in most matters, that learning and truth might skant bee admitted to shewe it selfe, yet without controllment, myght hee gyrd at the vices and abuses of all states, and gawle with very sharpe and eger inuentions, which he did so learnedly and pleasantly, that none therefore would call him into question. For such was his bolde spyrit, that what enormities he saw in any, he would not spare to pay them home, eyther in playne words, or els in some prety and pleasant couert, that the simplest might espy him.

Neere in time vnto him was Lydgate a Poet, surely for good proportion of his verse, and meetely currant stile, as the time affoorded comparable with Chawcer, yet more occupied in superstitious and odde matters, then was requesite in so good a wytte: which, though he handled them commendably, yet the matters themselves beeing not so commendable, hys estimation hath beene the lesse. The next of our auncient Poets, that I can tell of, I suppose to be Pierce Ploughman, who in hys dooinges is somewhat harsh and obscure, but indeede a very pithy wryter, and (to hys commendation I speake it) was the first that I haue seene, that obserued ye quantity of our verse without the curiosity of Ryme.

Since these I knowe none other tyll the time of

Skelton, who writ in the time of Kyng Henry the eyght, who as indeede he obtayned the Lawrell Garland, so may I wyth good ryght yeelde him the title of a Poet: hee was doubtles a pleafant conceyted fellowe, and of a very sharpe wytte, exceeding bolde, and would nyppe to the very quicke where he once fette holde. Next hym I thynke I may place master George Gaskoyne, as painefull a Souldier in the affayres of hys Prince and Country, as he was a wytty Poet in his wryting: whose commendations, because I found in one of better iudgment then my selfe, I wyl fette downe hys wordes, and suppressse myne owne, of hym thus wryteth E. K. vppon the ninth Æglogue of the new Poet.

Master George Gaskoyne a wytty Gentleman and the very cheefe of our late rymers, who and if some partes of learning wanted not (albeit is well knowne he altogether wanted not learning) no doubt would haue attayned to the excellencye of those famous Poets. For gyfts of wytt, and naturall promptnes appeare in him abundantly. I might next speake of the dyuers workes of the olde Earle of Surrey: of the L. Vaus, of Norton, of Bristow, Edwardes, Tuffer, Churchyard. VVyl: Hunnis: Haiwood: Sand: Hyll: S. Y. M. D. and many others, but to speake of their feuerall gyfts, and abundant skyl shewed forth by them in many pretty and learned workes, would make my discourse much more tedious.

I may not omitte the deserued commendations of many honourable and noble Lordes, and Gentlemen, in her Maiesties Courte, which in the rare deuises of Poetry, haue beene and yet are most excellent skylfull, among whom, the right honourable Earle of Oxford may challenge to him selfe the tytle of ye most excellent among the rest. I can no longer forget those learned Gentlemen which tooke such profitable paynes in translating the Latine Poets into our English tongue, whose desertes in that behalfe are more then I can vtter. Among these, I euer esteemed, and while I lyue, in my conceyt I shall account Master D. Phaer: without doubt the best: who as indeede hee had the best peece of Poetry whereon to sette a most gallant verfe, so performed he it accordingly, and in such fort, as in my conscience I thinke would scarcely be doone againe, if it were to doo again. Notwithstanding, I speake it but as myne own fancy, not preiudiciall to those that list to thinke otherwyfe. Hys worke whereof I speake, is the englising of Aeneidos of Virgill, so farre foorth as it pleased God to spare him life, which was to the halfe parte of the tenth Booke, the rest beeing since wyth no lesse commendations finished, by that worthy scholler and famous Phisition Master Thomas Twyne.

Equally with him may I well adioyne Master Arthur Golding, for hys labour in englising Ouids Metamorphosis, for which Gentleman, surely our Country hath for many respects greatly to gyue God thanks: as for him which hath taken infinite paynes without ceasing, trauelleth as yet indefatigably, and is addicted without society, by his continuall laboure, to profit this nation and speeche in all kind of good learning. The next, very well deserueth Master Barnabe Googe to be placed, as a painefull furtherer of learning: hys helpe to Poetry besides hys owne deuises, as the translating of Pallagenius. Lodiac. Abraham Flemming as in many prety Poefis of hys owne, so in translating hath doone to hys commendations. To whom I would heere adioyne one of hys name, whom I know to haue excelled, as well in all kinde of learning as in Poetry most especially, and would appeare so, if the dainty morfelles, and fine poeticall inuentions of hys, were as common abroade as I knowe they be among some of hys freendes. I wyl craue leaue of the laudable Authors of Seneca in English, of the other partes of Ouid, of Horace, of Mantuan, and diuers other, because I would hasten to ende thys rehearfall, perhappes offensyue to some, whom eyther by forgetfulnes, or want of knowledge, I must needes ouer passe.

And once againe, I am humbly to desire pardon of the learned company of Gentlemen Schollers, and students of the Vniuersities, and Innes of Courte, yf I omitte theyr feuerall commendations in this place, which I knowe a great number of them haue worthely deserued, in many rare deuises, and singuler inuentions of Poetrie: for neither hath it beene my good happe, to haue seene all which I haue hearde of, neyther is my abyding in such place, where I can with facility get knowledge of their workes.

One Gentleman notwithstanding among them may I not ouerflyppe, so farre reacheth his fame, and so worthy is he, if hee haue not already, to weare the Lawrell wreathe, Master George VVhetstone, a man singularly well skyld in this faculty of Poetrie: To him I wyl ioyne Anthony Munday, an earnest traoueller in this arte, and in whose name I haue seene very excellent workes, among which surely, the most exquisite vaine of a witty poeticall heade is shewed in the sweete fobs of Sheepehardes and Nymphes: a worke well worthy to be viewed, and to bee esteemed as very rare Poetrie. With these I may place John Graunge, Knyght, VVylmott, Darrell, F. C. F. K. G. B. and many other, whose names come not nowe to my remembrance.

This place haue I purposely referued for one, who if not only, yet in my iudgement principally deserueth the tyle of the rightest English Poet, that euer I read: that is, the Author of the Sheepehardes Kalender, intituled to the woorthy Gentleman Master Phillip Sydney, whether it was Master Sp. or what rare Scholler in Pembroke Hall foeuer, because himself and his freendes, for what respect I knowe not, would not reueale it, I force not greatly to fette downe: forry I am that I can not find none other with whom I might couple him in this Catalogue, in his rare gyft of Poetry: although one there is, though nowe long since, feriously occupied in grauer studies, (Master Gabriell Haruey) yet, as he was once his most special freende and fellow Poet, so because he hath taken such paynes, not onely in his Latin Poetry (for which he enioyed great commendations of the best both in iudgment and dignity in thys Realme) but also to reforme our English verfe, and to beautify the fame with braue deuifes, of which I thinke the cheefe lye hidde in hatefull obfcurity: therefore wyll I aduenture to fette them together, as two of the rareft witts, and learnedft mafters of Poetrie in England. Whofe worthy and notable skyl in this faculty, I would wyfh if their high dignities and ferious bufineffes would permit, they would styll graunt to bee a furtheraunce to that reformed kinde of Poetry, which Mafter Haruey did once beginne to ratify: and furely in mine opinion, if hee had chofen fome grauer matter, and handled but with halfe that skyl, which I knowe he could haue doone, and not powred it fourth at a venture, as a thinge betweene ieft and earneft, it had taken greater effect then it did.

As for the other Gentleman, if it would please him or hys freendes to let thofe excellent Poemes, whereof I know he hath plenty, come abroad, as his Dreames, his Legends, his Court of Cupid, his English Poet with other: he fhoulde not onely flay the rude pens of my felfe and others, but also fatiffye the thirfty defires of many which defire nothing more, then to fee more of hys rare inuentions. If I ioyne to Mafter Haruey hys two Brethren, I am affured, though they be both bufied with great and waighty callinges (the one a godly and learned Diuine, the other a famous and skylfull Phifition) yet if they lysted to fette to their helping handes to Poetry, they would as much beautify and adorne it as any others.

If I let paffe the vncountable rabble of ryming Ballet makers and compylers of fenceleffe fonets, who be moft bufy, to ftuffe euery ftall full of groffe deuifes and vnlearned Pamphlets: I trust I fhall with the beft fort be held excufed. Nor though many fuch can frame an Alehoufe fong of foue of fixe fcore verfes, hobbling vppon fome tune of a Northen Iygge, or Robyn hoode, or La lubber etc. And perhappes obserue iuft number of fillables, eyght in one line, fixe in an other, and there withall an A to make a iercke in the ende: yet if thefe might be accounted Poets (as it is fayde some of them make meanes to be promoted to ye Lawrell) furely we shall shortly haue whole swarmes of Poets: and euery one that can frame a Booke in Ryme, though for want of matter, it be but in commendations of Copper noses or Bottle Ale, wyll catch at the Garlande due to Poets: whose potticall poeticall (I should fay) heades, I would wyshe, at their worshipfull comencements might in steede of Lawrell, be gorgeously garnished with fayre greene Barley, in token of their good affection to our Englishe Malt. One speaketh thus homely of them, with whose words I wyll content my selfe for thys time, because I woulde not bee too broade wyth them in myne owne speeche.

In regarde (he meaneth of the learned framing the newe Poets workes which writt the Sheephardes Calender.) I scorne and spue out the rakehelly rout of our ragged Rymers, (for so themfelues vse to hunt the Letter) which without learning boaste; without iudgment iangle, without reason rage and fume, as if some instinct of poeticall spyrite had newlie rauished them, aboue the meaneffe of common capacity. And beeing in the midst of all their brauery, suddainly for want of matter or of Ryme, or hauing forgotten their former conceyt, they feeme to be so payned and trauelled in theyr remembraunce, as it were a woman in Chyldbyrth, or as that fame Pythia when the traunce came vpon her. Os rabidum fera corda domans etc.

Thus farre forth haue I aduentured to fette downe parte of my simple iudgement concerning those Poets, with whom for the most part I haue beene acquainted through myne owne reading: which though it may seeme something impertinent to the tyle of my Booke, yet I trust the courteous Readers wyll pardon me, considering that poetry is not of that grounde and antiquity in our English tongue, but that speaking thereof only as it is English, would seeme like vnto the drawing of ones pycure without a heade.

Nowe therefore by your gentle patience, wyll I wyth like breuity make tryall, what I can say concerning our Englishe Poetry, first in the matter thereof, then in the forme, that is, the manner of our verfe: yet so as I must euermore haue recourse to those times and wryters, whereon the English poetry taketh as it were the difcent and proprietye.

English Poetry therefore beeing considered according to common custome and auncient vse, is, where any worke is learnedly compiled in measurable speeche, and framed in wordes contayning number or proportion of iust syllables, delighting the readers or hearers as well by the apt and decent framing of wordes in equall resemblance of quantity, commonly called verfe, as by the skylfull handling of the matter whereof it is intreated. I spake somewhat of the beginning of thys measuring of wordes in iust number, taken out of Plato: and indeede the regarde of true quantity in Letters and syllables, seemeth not to haue been much vrged before the time of Homer in Greece, as Aristotle witnesseth.

The matters whereof verses were first made, were eyther exhortations to vertue, dehortations from vice, or the prayfes of some laudable thing. From thence they beganne to vse them in exercifes of immitating some vertuous and wise man at their feastes: where as some one shoulde be appointed to represent an other mans person of high estimation, and he sang fine ditties and wittie sentences, tunably to their Musick notes. Of thys sprang the first kinde of Comedyes, when they beganne to bring into these exercifes, more persons then one, whose speeches were deuised Dyalogue wise, in aunswering one another. And of such like exer-

cifes, or as some wyll needes haue it, long before the other, began the first Tragedies, and were so called of τραγος, because the Actor when he began to play his part, slewe and offered a Goate to their Goddesse: but Commedies tooke their name of κομάζειν και ἄδειν comesatum ire, to goe a feasting, because they vsed to goe in proceffion with their sport about the Citties and Villages, mingling much pleasaunt myrth wyth theyr graue Religion, and feasting cheerefully together wyth as great ioy as might be deuised. But not long after (as one delight draweth another) they began to inuent new persons and newe matters for their Comedies, such as the deuifers thought meetest to please the peoples vaine: And from these, they beganne to present in shapen of men, the natures of vertues and vices, and affections and qualities incident to men, as Iustice, Temperance, Pouerty, Wrathe, Vengeance, Sloth, Valiantnes, and such like, as may appeare by the auncient workes of Aristophanes. There grewe at last to be a greater diuersitye betweene Tragedy wryters and Comedy wryters, the one expressing onely sorrowfull and lamentable Hystories, bringing in the persons of Gods and Goddeses, Kynges and Queenes, and great states, whose parts were cheefely to expresse most miserable calamities and dreadfull chaunces, which increased worse and worse, tyll they came to the most wofull plight that might be deuised.

The Comedies on the other side, were directed to a contrary ende, which beginning doubtfully, drewe to some trouble or turmoyle, and by some lucky chaunce alwayes ended to the ioy and appeasement of all parties. Thys distinction grewe as some holde opinion, by immitation of the workes of Homer: for out of his Iliads, the Tragedy wryters founde dreadfull euent, whereon to frame their matters, and the other out of hys Odyffea tooke arguments of delight, and pleasant ending after dangerous and troublesome doubt. So that, though there be many fortes of poeticall wrytings, and Poetry is not debarred from any matter, which may be expressed by penne or speeche, yet for the better vnderstanding, and breefer method of thys discourse, I may comprehend the same in three fortes, which are Comickall, Tragicall, Histori[c]all. Vnder the first, may be contained all such Epigrammes, Elegies and delectable ditties, which Poets haue deuised respecting onely the delight thereof: in the seconde, all dolefull complaynts, lamentable chaunces, and what foeuer is poetically expressed in sorrow and heuines. In the third, we may comprise, the reste of all such matters, which is indifferent betweene the other two, doo commonly occupy the pennes of Poets: such, are the poetickall compyling of Chronicles, the freendly greetings betweene freendes, and very many fortes besides, which for the better distinction may be referred to one of these three kindes of Poetry. But once againe, least my discourse runne too farre awry, wyll I buckle my selfe more neerer to English Poetry: the vse wherof, because it is nothing different from any other, I thinke best to confirme by the testimony of Horace, a man worthy to beare authority in this matter: whose very opinion is this, that the perfect perfection of poetrie is this, to mingle delight with profitt in such wyse, that a Reader might by his reading be pertaker of bothe, which though I touched in the beginning, yet I thought good to alledge in this place for more confirmation thereof some of hys owne wordes. In his treatise de arte Poetica, thus hee sayth.

Aut prodesse volunt aut delectare poetae,

Aut simul et iucunda et idonea dicere vitae.

As much to saie: All Poets desire either by their works to profitt or delight men, or els to ioyne both profitable and pleasant lessons together for the instruction of life.

And again

Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit utile dulci, Lectorum delectando pariterque mouendo.

That is, He misseth nothing of his marke which ioyneth profitt with delight, as well delighting his Readers, as profiting them with counsell. And that whole Epistle which hee wryt of his Arte of Poetrie, among all the parts thereof, runneth cheefelie vpon this, that whether the argument which the Poet handleth, be of thinges doone, or fained inuentions, yet that they should beare such an Image of trueth, that as they delight they may likewise profitt. For these are his wordes. Ficta voluptatis causa sint proxima veris. Let thinges that are fained for pleasures sake, haue a neere resemblance of ye truth. This precept may you perceiue to bee most duellie obserued of Chawcer: for who could with more delight, prescribe such wholsome counsaile and sage aduise, where he seemeth onelie to respect the profite of his lessons and instructions? or who coulde with greater wisedome, or more pithie skill, vnfold such pleasant and delightful matters of mirth, as though they respected nothing, but the telling of a merry tale? so that this is the very grounde of right poetrie, to giue profitable counsaile, yet so as it must be mingled with delight. For among all the auncient works of poetrie, though the most of them incline much to that part of delighting men with pleasant matters of small importaunce, yet euen in the vaineft trifles among them, there is not forgotten some profitable counsaile, which a man may learne, either by flatte precepts which therein are prescribed, or by loathing such vile vices, the enormities whereof they largelie discouer. For surelie, I am of this opinion, that the wantonest Poets of all, in their most laciuious workes wherein they busied themselues, sought rather by that meanes to withdraw mens mindes (especiallie the best natures) from such foule vices, then to allure them to imbrace such beastly follies as they detected.

A Discourse of

Horace speaking of the generall dueties of Poets, fayth, Os tenerum pueri balbumque poeta fugitat, and manie more wordes concerning the profite to be hadde out of Poets, which because I haue some of them comprised into an English translation of that learned and famous knight, Sir Thomas Elyot, I wyll set downe his wordes.

The Poet fashioneth by some pleasant meane,
 The speche of children stable and vnfore:
 Gulling their eares from wordes and thinges vnclene,
 Giuing to them precepts that are pure:
 Rebuking enuy and wrath if it dure:
 Thinges well donne he can by example commend,
 To needy and sicke he doth also his cure
 To recomfort if ought he can amende.

And manie other like wordes are in that place of Horace to like effect. Therefore poetrie, as it is of it selfe, without abuse is not onely vnprofitable to the liues and studies of menne, but wonderfull commendable and of great excellencie. For nothing can be more acceptable to men, or rather to be wished, then sweete allurements to vertues, and commodious caueates from vices? of which Poetrie is exceeding plentifull, powring into gentle witts, not roughly and tirannicallie, but it is were with a louing authoritie. Nowe if the ill and vndecent prouocations, whereof some vnbridled witts take occasion by the reading of laciuous Poemes, bee obiected: such as are Ouids loue Bookes, and Elegies, Tibullus, Catullus, and Martials workes, with the Comedies for the most part of Plautus and Terence: I thinke it easily aunswered. For though it may not iustlie be denied, that these workes are indeede very Poetrie, yet that Poetrie in them is not the essentiall or formall matter or cause of the hurt therein might be affirmed, and although that reason should come short, yet this might be sufficient, that the workes themselues doo not corrupt, but the abuse of the vsers, who vndamaging their owne dispositions, by reading the discoueries of vices, resemble foolish folke, who comming into a Garden without anie choise or circumspection tread downe the fairest flowers, and wilfullie thrust their fingers among the nettles.

And surelie to speake what I verelie thinke, this is mine opinion: that one hauing sufficient skyll, to reade and vnderstand those workes, and yet no staie of him selfeto auoyde inconueniences, which the remembraunce of vnlawfull things may stirre vppe in his minde, he, in my iudgement, is wholly to bee reputed a laciuious disposed personne, whom the recitall of sins whether it be in a good worke or a badde, or vppon what occasion soeuer, wyll not staie him but prouoke him further vnto them. Contrariwise, what good lessons the warie and skylful Readers shall picke out of the very worst of them, if they list to take anie heede, and reade them not of an intent to bee made the worfe by them, you may see by these fewe sentences, which the foresayd Sir Thomas Elyott gathered as he sayth at all aduentures, intreating of the like argument. First Plautus in commendations of vertue, hath such like wordes.

Verely vertue doth all thinges excell,
For if liberty, health liuing or substaunce,
Our Country our parents, and children doo well,
It hapneth by vertue: she doth all aduaunce,
Vertue hath all thinges vnder gouernaunce:
And in whom of vertue is founde great plenty,
Any thing that is good may neuer be dainty.

Terence, in Eunucho hath a profitable speche, in blasfing fourth the fashions of harlots, before the eyes of young men. Thus sayth Parmeno.

In thys thing I tryumphe in myne owne conceite,
That I haue found for all young men the way,
Howe they of Harlots shall know the deceite,
Their witts and manners: that thereby they may Them perpetuallie hate, for so much as they

A Discourse of

Out of their owne houfes be fresh and delicate,
Feeding curiously: at home all day
Lyuing béggerlie in moſt wretched eſtate.

And many more wordes of the ſame matter, but which may be gathered by theſe fewe.

Ouid, in his moſt wanton Bookes of loue, and the remedies thereof, hath very many pithie and wiſe ſentences, which a heedfull Reader may marke, and choſe out from ye other ſtuffe. This is one.

Tyme is a medicine of it ſhall proſitt,
VVine gyuen out of tyme may be annoyaunce.
And man ſhall irritat vice if he prohibitt,
VVhen time is not meete vnto his vtteraunce.
Therefore if thou yet by counſaile art recuperable,
Fly thou from idlenes and euer be ſtable.

Martiall, a moſt diſſolute wryter among all other, yet not without many graue and prudent ſpeeches, as this is one worthy to be marked of theſe fond youthes which intangle their wyttſ in raging loue, who ſtepping once ouer ſhoes in their fancyes, neuer reſt plunging till they be ouer head and eares in their follie.

If thou wylt eſchewe bitter aduenture,
And auoyde the annoyance of a penſifull hart,
Set in no one perſon all wholly thy pleaſure,
The leſſe maiſt thou ioy, but the leſſe ſhalt thou ſmart.

Theſe are but fewe gathered out by happe, yet ſufficient to ſhewe that the wiſe and circumſpect Readers may finde very many profitable leſſons, diſperſed in theſe workes, neither take any harme by reading ſuch Poemes, but good, if they wil themſelues. Neuertheles, I would not be thought to hold opinion, that the reading of them is ſo tollerable, as that there neede no reſpect to be had in making choiſe of readers or hearers: for if they be prohibited from the tender and vnconſtant wits of children and young mindes, I thinke

it not without great reason: neyther am I of that deuillish opinion, of which some there are, and haue beene in England, who hauing charge of youth to instruct them in learning, haue especially made choyse of such vnchildish stufte, to reade vnto young Schollers, as it shoulde seeme of some filthy purpose, wylfully to corrupt theyr tender mindes, and prepare them the more ready for theyr loathsome dyetts.

For as it is sayd of that impudent worke of Luciane, a man were better to reade none of it then all of it, so thinke I that these workes are rather to be kept altogether from children, then they should haue free liberty to reade them, before they be meete either of their owne discretion or by heedefull instruction, to make choyse of the good from the badde. As for our English Poetrie, I know no such perilous peeces (except a fewe balde ditties made ouer the Beere potts, which are nothing lesse then Poetry) which anie man may vse and reade without damage or daunger: which indeede is lesse to be meruailed at among vs, then among the olde Latines and Greekes, considering that Christianity may be a staie to such illecibrous workes and inuentions, as among them (for their Arte sake) myght obtaine passage.

Nowe will I speake somewhat, of that princelie part of Poetrie, wherein are displaied the noble actes and valiant exploits of puiffaunt Captaines, expert souldiers, wise men, with the famous reportes of auncient times, such as are the Heroycall workes of Homer in Greeke, and the heauenly verse of Virgils Æneidos in Latine: which workes, comprehending as it were the summe and ground of all Poetrie, are verelie and incomparably the best of all other. To these, though wee haue no English worke aunswerable, in respect of the glorious ornaments of gallant handling: yet our auncient Chroniclers and reporters of our Countrey affayres, come most neere them: and no doubt, if such regarde of our English speeche, and curious handling of our verse, had beene long since thought vpon, and from time to time been polished and bettered by men of learning, iudgement, and authority, it would ere this, haue matched them in all respects. A manifest example thereof, may bee the great good grace and sweete wayne, which Eloquence hath attained in our speeche, because it hath had the helpe of such rare and singuler wits, as from time to time myght still adde some amendment to the same. Among whom I thinke there is none that will gainsay, but Master John Lilly hath deserued moste high commendations, as he which hath stept one steppe further therein then any either before or since he first began the wyttie discourse of his Euphues. Whose workes, surely in respecte of his singuler eloquence and braue composition of apt words and sentences, let the learned examine and make tryall thereof thorough all the partes of Rethoricke, in fitte phrascs, in pithy sentences, in gallant tropes, in flowing speeche, in plaine fence, and surely in my iudgment, I thinke he wyll yeelde him that verdict, which Quintilian giueth of bothe the best Orators Demosthenes and Tully, that from the one, nothing may be taken away, to the other, nothing may be added. But a more neerer example to prooue my former assertion true (I meane ye meetnesse of our speeche to receiue the best forme of Poetry) may bee taken by conference of that famous translation of Master D. Phaer with the coppie it selfe, who soeuer please with courteous iudgement but a little to compare and marke them both together: and weigh with himselfe, whether the English tongue might by little and little be brought to the verry maiesty of a ryght Heroicall verse. First you may marke, how Virgill alwayes fitteth his matter in hande with wordes agreeable vnto the same affection, which he expreffeth, as in hys Tragicall exclamations, what pathe[ticall] speeches he frameth? in his comfortable consolations, howe smoothly hys verse runnes? in his dreadfull battayles, and dreery byckerments of warres, howe bygge and boystrous his wordes sound? and the like notes in all partes of his worke may be obserued. Which excellent grace and comely kind of choyse, if the tranflatour hath not hitte very neere in our course English phrase iudge vprightly: wee wyll conferre some of the places, not picked out for the purpose, but such as I tooke turning ouer the Booke at randon. When the Troyans were so tost about in tempestious wether, caused by Æolus at Iunoës request, and driuen vpon the coaste of Affrick with a very neere scape of their liues: Æneas after hee had gone a land and kylled plenty of victuals for his company of Souldiours, hee deuided the same among them, and thus louinglie and sweetely he comforted them. Æn. Lib. i.

et dictis mærentia pectora mulcet
O focii (neque ignari fumus ante malorum)
O pafsi grauiora: dabit deus his quoque finem
Vos et scyllæam rabiem, penitusque sonantes,
Accestis scopulos: vos et cyclopea saxa
Experti, reuocate animos, mœstumque timorem
Mittite, forsan et hæc olim meminisse iuuabit.
Per varios casus, per tot discrimina rerum
Tendimus in Latium: sedes vbi fata quietas
Ostendunt, illic fas regna resurgere troiæ.
Durate, et vosmet rebus seruate secundis.
Talia voce refert, curisque ingentibus æger
Spem vultu simulat, premit altum corde dolorem.

Translated thus.

And then to cheere their heauy harts with these words he him bent.
 O Mates (quoth he) that many a woe haue bidden and borne ere thys,
 Worfe haue we seene, and this also shall end when Gods
 wyll is.
 Through Sylla rage (ye wott) and through the roaring rocks we past,
 Though Cyclops shore was full of feare, yet came we through at last.

Plucke vppe your harts, and driue from thence both feare and care away.
 To thinke on this may pleasure be perhappes another day.
 By paynes and many a daunger fore, by fundry chaunce
 we wend,
 To come to Italy, where we trust to find our resting ende:
 And where the destnyes haue decreed Troyes Kingdome
 eft to ryse
 Be bold and harden now your harts, take ease while ease applies
 Thus spake he tho, but in his hart huge cares had him
 opprest,
 Dissembling hope with outward eyes full heauy was his brest.

Againe, marke the wounding of Dido in loue with Aeneas, with howe choyse wordes it is pithily described, both by the Poet and the translator in the beginning of the fourth booke.

At Regina graui iam dudum faucia cura
Uolnus alii venis, et caeco carpitur igni, etc.

By this time perced fatte the Queene so fore with loues defire,
 Her wound in euery vayne she feedes, she fryes in secrete fire.
 The manhood of the man full oft, full oft his famous lyne
 She doth reuolue, and from her thought his face cannot vntwyne.
 His countnaunce deepe she drawes and fixed fast she beares in brest,
 His words also, nor to her carefull hart can come no rest.

And in many places of the fourth booke is the same matter so gallantly profecuted in sweete wordes, as in mine opinion the copy it selfe goeth no whit beyond it.

Compare them likewise in the woefull and lamentable cryes of the Queene for the departure of Aeneas, towards the ende of that Booke.

*Terque quaterque manu pectus percussa decorum
Fiauentisque abscissa comas, proh Iupiter, ibit ?
Hic ait, et nostris inluserit aduena Regnis ? etc.*

Three times her hands she bet, and three times strake her comely brest,
Her golden hayre she tare and frantiklike with moode
opprest,
She cryde, O Iupiter, O God, quoth she, and shall a goe?
Indeede? and shall a flowte me thus within my kingdome so?
Shall not mine Armies out, and all my people them pursue?
Shall they not spoyle their shyps and burne them vp with vengance due?
Out people, out vppon them, follow fast with fires and flames,
Set sayles aloft, make out with oares, in ships, in boates,
in frames.
What speake I? or where am I? what furies me doo thus inchaunt?
O Dydo, wofull wretch, now destnyes fell thy head dooth haunt.

And a little after preparing to kyll her owne selfe.

But Dydo quaking fierce with frantike moode and grieffly hewe.
With trembling spotted cheekes, her huge attempting to pursue.
Besides her selfe for rage, and towards death with visage wanne,
Her eyes about she rolde, as redde as blood they looked than.

A Discourse of

At last ready to fall vpon Aeneas sworde.

O happy (welaway) and ouer happy had I beene,
If neuer Troian shyps (ahlas) my Country shore had feene.
Thus sayd she wryde her head, and vnreuedged must we die?

But let vs boldly die (quoth shee) thus, thus to death
I ply.

Nowe likewise for the braue warlike phraze and bygge founding kynd of thundring speeche, in the hotte skyr-mythes of battels, you may confer them in any of the last fve Bookes: for examples sake, thys is one about the ninth Booke.

*Et clamor totis per propugnacula muris,
Intendunt acries arcus, amentaque torquent.
Sternitur omne solum telis, tum scutæ caucæque Dant sonitum flictu galeæ: pugna asper surgit? etc.*

A clamarous noyse vpmounts on fortresse tops and bulwarks towres,
They strike, they bend their bowes, they whirle from strings sharp shoting showres.
All strectes with tooles are strowed, than helmets, skulles, with battrings marrd.
And shieldes dishyuring cracke, vpriseth roughnesse byckring hard
Looke how the tempest storme when wind out wraft-ling blowes at south,
Raine ratling beates the grownde, or clowdes of haile
from Winters mouth,
Downe dashyng headlong driues, when God from skyes
with griesly steuen,
His watry showres outwings, and whirlwind clowdes
downe breakes from heauen.

And so fourth much more of the like effect.

Onely one comparifon more will I defire you to marke at your leyfures, which may ferue for all the reft, that is, the defcription of Fame, as it is in the 4. booke, towards the end, of which it followeth thus.

*Monstrum horrendum ingens cui quot sunt corpore plumæ
Tot vigilos oculi etc.*

Monfter gaffly great, for euery plume her carkaffe beares,
Like number clearing eyes ſhe hath, like number harkning eares,
Like number tongues, and mouthes ſhe waggēs, a wondrous thing to ſpeake,
At midnight fourth ſhee flyes, and vnder ſhade her found dooth ſqueake.
All night ſhe wakes, nor flumber ſweete doth take nor neuer ſleepes.
By dayes on houſes tops ſhee fits or gates of Townes
ſhe keepes.
On watching Towres ſhe clymbes, and Citties great
ſhe makes agaſt,
Both trueth and falſhood forth ſhe telles, and lyes abroade doth caſt.

But what neede I to repeate any more places? there is not one Booke among the twelue, which wyll not yeelde you moſt excellent pleaſure in conferring the tranſlation with the Coppie, and marking the gallant grace which our Engliſhe ſpeeche affoordeth. And in trueth the like comparifons, may you chooſe out through the whole tranſlations of the Metamorphoſis by Maſter Golding who (conſidering both their Coppyes) hath equally deſerued commendations for the beautifying of the Engliſh ſpeeche. It would be tedious to ſtay to rehearſe any places out of him nowe: let the other ſuffice to prooue, that the Engliſh tongue lacketh neyther variety nor currantneſſe of phraſe for any matter.

Wyll nowe speake a little of an other kinde of poetical writing, which might notwithstanding for the variablenesse of the argument therein vsually handled, bee comprehended in those kindes before declared: that is, the compyling Eglogues, as much to say as Goteheardes tales, because they bee commonly Dialogues or speeches framed or supposed betweene Sheepeheardes, Neteheardes, Goteheardes, or such like simple men: in which kind of writing, many haue obtained as immortall prayse and commendation, as in any other.

The cheefest of these is Theocritus in Greeke, next him, and almost the very same, is Virgill in Latin. After Virgyl in like sort writ Titus Calphurnius and Baptista Mantuan, wyth many other both in Latine and other languages very learnedlye. Although the matter they take in hand seemeth commonlie in appearance rude and homely, as the vsuall talke of simple clownes: yet doo they indeede vtter in the same much pleasaunt and profitable delight. For vnder these personnes, as it were in a cloake of simplicitie, they would eyther sette foorth the prayses of theyr freendes, without the note of flattery, or enueigh grieuously against abuses, without any token of byternesse.

Somwhat like vnto these works, are many peeces of Chawcer, but yet not altogether so poetically. But nowe yet at ye last hath England hatched vppe one Poet of this forte, in my conscience comparable with the best in any respect: euen Master Sp: Author of the Sheepeheardes Calender, whose trauell in that peece of English Poetrie, I thinke verely is so commendable, as none of equall iudgment can yelde him lesse prayse for hys excellent skyl, and skylfull excellency shewed forth in the same, then they would to eyther Theocritus or Virgill, whom in mine opinion, if the courtesnes of our speeche (I meane the course of custome which he woulde not infringe) had beene no more let vnto him, then theyr pure natiue tongues were vnto them, he would haue (if it might be) furpassed them. What one thing is there in them so worthy admiration, whereunto we may not adioyne some thing of his, of equall desert? Take Virgil and make some little comparison betweene them, and iudge as ye shall see cause.

Virgill hath a gallant report of Augustus couertly comprysed in the first Æglogue: the like is in him, of her Maiestie, vnder the name of Eliza. Virgill maketh a braue coloured complaint of vnstedfast freendshyppe in the person of Corydon: the lyke is him in his 5 Æglogue. Agayne behold the pretty Pastorall contentions of Virgill in the third Æglogue: of him in ye eight Eglogue. Finally, either in comparison with them, or respect of hys owne great learning, he may well were the Garlande, and steppe before ye best of all English Poets that I haue seene or hearde: for I thinke no lesse deserueth (thus sayth E, K in hys commendations) hys wittinesse in deuising, his pithinesse in vttering, his complaintes of loue so louely, his discourses of pleasure so pleasantly, his Pastrall rudenes, his Morrall wyfenesse, his due obseruing of decorum euery where, in personages, in season, in matter, in speeche, and generally in all seemely simplicitie, of handling hys matter and framing hys wordes. The occasion of his worke is a warning to other young men, who being intangled in loue and youthful vanities, may learne to looke to themselues in time, and to auoyde inconueniences which may breede if they be not in time preuented. Many good Morrall lessons are therein contained, as the reuerence which young men owe to the aged in the second Eglogue: the caueate or warning to beware a subtile professor of freendshippe in the fift Eglogue: the commendation of good Pastors, and shame and dispraye of idle and ambitious Goteheardes in the seauenth, the loofe and retchleffe lyuing of Popish Prelates in the ninth. The learned and sweete complaynt of the contempt of learning vnder the name of Poetry in the tenth. There is also much matter vttered somewhat couertly, especially ye abuses of some whom he would not be too playne withall: in which, though it be not apparant to euery one, what hys speciall meaning was, yet so skilfully is it handled, as any man may take much delight at hys learned conueyance, and picke out much good fence in the most obscurest of it. Hys notable prayse deferued in euery parcell of that worke, because I cannot expresse as I woulde and as it should: I wyll cease to speake any more of, the rather because I neuer hearde as yet any that hath reade it, which hath not with much admiration commended it. One only thing therein haue I hearde some curious heades call in question: viz: the motion of some vnfauey loue, such as in the sixt Eglogue he seemeth to deale withall (which say they) is skant allowable to English eares, and might well haue beene left for the Italian defenders of loathsome beastlines, of whom perhappes he learned it: to thys obiection I haue often aunswered and (I thinke truely) that theyr nyce opinion ouer shooteth the Poets meaning, who though hee in that as in other thinges, immitateth the auncient Poets, yet doth not meane, no more did they before hym, any disordered loue, or the filthy lust of the deuillish Pederastice taken in the worfe fence, but rather to shewe howe the dissolute life of young men intangled in loue of women, doo neglect the freendshyp and league with their olde freendes and familiers. Why (say they) yet he shold gyue no occasion of suspition, nor offer to the viewe of Christians, any token of such filthinesse, howe good foeuer hys meaning were: wherevnto I oppose the simple conceyte they haue of matters which concerne learning or wytt, wylling them to gyue

Poets leaue to vse theyr vayne as they see good: it is their foolyſh construction, not hys wryting that is blameable. Wee muſt preſcrybe to no wryters, (much leſſe to Poets) in what forte they ſhould vtter their conceyts. But thys wyll be better diſcuſſed by ſome I hope of better abillity.

One other forte of Poeticall wryters remaineth yet to bee remembred, that is, The precepts of Huſbandry, learnedly compiled in Heroycall verſe. Such were the workes of Hefiodus in Greeke, and Virgils Georgickes in Latine. What memorable worke hath beene handled in imitation of theſe by any Engliſh Poet, I know not, (ſaue onely one worke of M. Tuſſer, a peece ſurely of great wytt and experience, and wythal very prettilye handled) And I thinke the cauſe why our Poets haue not trauayled in that behalfe, is eſpecially, for that there haue beene alwayes plenty of other wryters that haue handled the ſame argument very largely. Among whom Maſter Barnabe Googe, in tranſlating and enlarging the moſt profitable worke of Heresbachius, hath deſerued much commendation, as well for hys faythfull compyling and learned increaſing the noble worke, as for hys wytty tranſlation of a good part of the Georgickes of Virgill into Engliſh verſe.

Among all the tranſlations, which hath beene my fortune to ſee, I could neuer yet finde that worke of the Georgicks wholly performed. I remember once Abraham Flemming in his conuerſion of the Eglogues, promiſed to tranſlate and publiſhe it: whether he dyd or not I knowe not, but as yet I heard not of it. I my ſelfe wott well I beſtowed ſome time in it two or three yeeres ſince, turning it to that ſame Engliſh verſe, which other ſuch workes were in, though it were rudely: howe beit, I did it onely for mine owne vse, and vpon certayne reſpectes towards a Gentleman mine eſpeciall freende, to whom I was deſirous to ſhewe ſome token of duetifull good wyll, and not minding it ſhould goe farre abroad, conſidering howe ſlenderly I ranne it ouer, yet since then, hath one gott it in keeping, who as it is told me, eyther hath or wyll vnaduisedly publishe it: which iniury though he meanes to doo me in myrth, yet I hope he wyll make me some suffycient recompence, or els I shall goe neere to watch hym the like or a worfe turne.

But concerning the matter of our Englysh wryters, lett thys suffice: nowe shall ye heare my simple skyl in what I am able to say concerning the forme and manner of our Englyshe verfe.

The most vsuall and frequented kind of our English Poetry hath alwayes runne vpon, and to this day is obserued in such equall number of syllables, and likenes of wordes, that in all places one verfe either immediatly, or by mutuall interposition, may be aunswerable to an other both in proportion of length, and ending of lynes in the same Letters. Which rude kinde of verfe, though (as I touched before) it rather discrediteth our speeche, as borrowed from the Barbarians, then furnisheth the same with any comely ornament: yet beeing so ingrafted by custome, and frequented by the most parte, I may not vtterly disallowe it, least I should seeme to call in question the iudgement of all our famous wryters, which haue wonne eternall prayse by theyr memorable workes compyled in that verfe.

For my part therefore, I can be content to esteeme it as a thing, the perfection whereof is very commendable, yet so as wyth others I could wyth it were by men of learning and ability bettered, and made more artificiall, according to the woorthines of our speeche.

The falling out of verses together in one like sounde, is commonly called in English, Ryme, taken from the Greeke worde Ρυθμος, which surely in my iudgment is veyre abusuelye applyed to such a fence: and by thys, the vnworthineffe of the thing may well appeare, in that wanting a proper name, wherby to be called, it borroweth a word farre exceeding the dignytye of it, and not appropriate to so rude or base a thing. For Ryme is properly, the iust proportion of a clause or sentence, whether it be in prose or meeter, aptly comprised together: wherof there is both an naturall and an artificiall composition, in any manner or kynde of speeche, eyther French, Italian, Spanish or English: and is proper not onely to Poets, but also to Readers, Oratours, Pleaders, or any which are to pronounce or speake any thing in publike audience.

The first begynning of Ryme (as we nowe terme it) though it be somewhat auncient, yet nothing famous. In Greece (they say) one Symias Rhodias, because he would be singuler in somthing, wryt poetically of the Fable, contayning howe Iupiter beeing in shape of a Swanne, begatte the Egge on Leda, wherof came Castor, Pollux, and Helena, whereof euery verse ended in thys Ryme, and was called therefore ῶον but thys foolyshe attempt was so contemned and dyspysed, that the people would neither admitte the Author nor Booke any place in memory of learning. Since that it was not hearde of, till ye time ye Hunnes and Gothians renued it agayne, and brought it into Italie. But howsoeuer or wheresoeuer it beganne, certayne it is, that in our English tongue it beareth as good grace, or rather better, then in any other: and is a faculty whereby many may and doo deserue great prayse and commendation, though our speeche be capable of a farre more learned manner of verififying, as I wyl partly declare heereafter.

There be three speciall notes necessary to be obserued in the framing of our accustomed English Ryme: the first is, that one meeter or verse be aunswerable to an other, in equall number of feete or syllables, or proportionable to the tune whereby it is to be reade or measured. The seconde, to place the words in such sorte, as none of them be wrested contrary to the naturall inclination or affectation of the same, or more truly ye true quantity thereof. The thyrde, to make them fall together mutually in Ryme, that is, in wordes of like founde, but so as the wordes be not disordered for the Rymes sake, nor the sence hindered. These be the most pryncipall obseruations, which I thinke requisite in an English verse: for as for the other ornaments which belong thereto, they be more properly belonging to the seuerall gyfts of skylfull Poets, then common notes to be prescribed by me: but somewhat perhaps I shall haue occasion to speake heereafter.

Of the kyndes of English verses which differ in number of syllables, there are almost infinite: which euery way alter according to hys fancy, or to the measure of that meeter, wherein it pleaseth hym to frame hys ditty. Of the best and most frequented I wyll rehearse some. The longest verse in length, which I haue seene vsed in English consisteth of sixteene syllables, eache two verses ryming together, thus.

Wher vertue wants and vice abounds, there wealth is but a bayted hooke,
To make men swallow down their bane, before on danger deepe they looke.

This kynde is not very much vsed at length thus, but is commonly deuided, eche verse into two, whereof eche shal containe eyght syllables, and ryme crosse wyse, the first to the thyrd, and the second to the fourth, in this manner.

Great wealth is but a bayted hooke.
VWhere vertue wants, and vice aboundes:
VWhich men deuoure before they looke,
So them in daungers deepe it drownes.

An other kynd next in length to this, is, where eche verse hath fourteene syllables, which is the most accustomed of all other, and especially vsed of all the tranflatours of the Latine Poets for the most part thus.

My mind with furye fierce inflamde of late I know not howe,
Doth burne Parnassus hyll to see, adordnd wyth Lawrell bowe.

Which may likewyse and so it often is deuyded, eche verse into two, to [the?] first hauing eyght fillables, the second fixe, wherof the two fixes shall alwayes ryme, and sometymes the eyghtes, sometymes not, according to the wyll of the maker.

My minde with furye fierce inflamde,
Of late I knowe not howe :
Doth burne Pernassus hyll to see,
Adornd wyth Lawrell bowe.

There are nowe wythin this compasse, as many fortes of verses as may be deuised differences of numbers: wherof some consist of equall proportions, some of long and short together, some of many rymes in one staffe (as they call it) some of crosse ryme, some of counter ryme, some ryming wyth one worde farre distant from another, some ryming euery thyrd or fourth word, and so likewyse all manner of dytties applyable to euery tune that may be sung or sayd, distinct from prose or continued speche. To auoyde therefore tediousnesse and confusion, I wyll repeate onely the different fortes of verses out of the Sheepehardes Calender, which may well serue to beare authoritie in thys matter.

There are in that worke twelue or thirteene fundry forts of verses, which differ eyther in length, or ryme, of distinction of the staues: but of them which differ in length or number of fillables not past fixe or seauen. The first of them is of tenne fillables, or rather fwe feete in one verse, thus,

A Sheepeards boy no better doo him call,
When Winters wastfull spight was almost spent.

This verse he vseth commonly in hys sweete complayntes, and mornefull ditties, as very agreeable to such affections.

The second fort hath naturally but nyne syllables, and is a more rough or clownish manner of verse, vsed most commonly of him if you mark him in hys

A Discourse of

fatyricall reprehensions, and his Sheepehardes homelyest talke, such as the second Æglogue is.

Ah for pittie wyll rancke Winters rage,
These bytter blafts neuer gynne to asswage.

The number of nine fillables in thys verse is very often altered, and so it may without any disgrace to the fame, especially where the speeche should be most clownish and simple, which is much obserued of hym.

The third kynd is a pretty rounde verse, running currantly together, commonly feauen fillables or sometime eyght in one verse, as many in the next, both ryming together: euery two hauing one the like verse after them, but of rounder wordes, and two of them likewyse ryming mutually. That verse expresseth notably, light and youthfull talke, such as is the thyrde Æglogue betweene two Sheepehardes boys concerning loue.

Thomalin why sitten we so
As weren ouerwent with woe
Vpon so fayre a morrowe?
The ioyous time now nigheth fast
That wyll allay this bitter blast
And flake the Winter forrow.

The fourth sort containeth in eche staffe manie vnequall verses, but most sweetelie falling together: which the Poet calleth the tune of the waters fall. Therein is his song In prayse of Eliza.

Ye daintie Nymphes which in this blessed brooke doo bathe your brest,
ForfAKE your watrie bowres and hether looke,
at my request.
And eke yee Virgins that on Parnafs dwell,
Whence floweth Helicon the learned Well, helpe me to blaze
her woorthy praife
That in her sex doth all excell. etc.

The fift, is a deuided verfe of twelue fillables into two verfes, whereof I fpake before, and feemeth moft meete for ye handling of a Morrall matter, fuch as is the praife of good Paftors, and the difpraife of ill in the feauenth Æglogue.

The fixt kinde, is called a round, beeing mutuallie fung betweene two: one fingeth one verfe, the other the next, eche rymeth with himfelfe.

Per. It fell vppon a holie eue
Apl. Hey ho holliday
Per. When holie fathers went to fhriue,
Apl. Thus ginneth our Rondelay. etc.

The feauenth forte is a verie tragicall mournfull meafure, wherein he bewayleth the death of fome freend vnder the perfon of Dydo.

Vp then Melpomene the mournfullft Mufe of nyne, fuch caufe of mourning neuer hadft afore:
 Vp grieſly ghoſtes, and vp my mournfull ryme:
 matter of myrth now ſhalt thou haue no more.
Dydo my deere alas is dead,
 Dead and lyeth wrapt in leade:
 O heauie hearſe
 Let ſtreaming teares be powred out in ſtore
 O carefull yearſe.

Theſe fortes of verfes for breuities ſake haue I choſen forth of him, whereby I ſhall auoide the tedious rehearfall of all the kindes which are vſed: which I thinke would haue beene vnpoſſible, ſeeing they may be altered to as manie formes as the Poets pleaſe: neither is there anie tune or ſtroke which may be fung or plaide on inſtruments, which hath not ſome poetical ditties framed according to the numbers thereof: ſome to Rogero, ſome to Trenchmore, to downe right Squire, to Galliardes, to Pauines, to Iygges, to Brawles, to all manner of tunes which euerie Fidler knowes better then my ſelfe, and therefore I will let them paſſe.

Againe, the diuerſities of the ſtaues (which are the number of verſes contained with the diuiſions or partitions of a ditty) doo often times make great differences in theſe verſes. As when one ſtaffe containeth but two verſes, or (if they bee deuided) foure: the firſt or the firſt couple hauing twelue fillables, the other fourteene, which verſifiers call Powlters meafure, becauſe ſo they tall[i]e their wares by dozens. Alſo, when one ſtaffe hath manie verſes, whereof eche one rimeth to the next, or mutuallie croſſe, or diſtant by three, or by foure, or ended contrarye to the beginning, and a hundred fortes, whereof to ſhewe ſeueral examples, would bee too troubleſome: nowe for the ſecond point.

The naturall courſe of moſt Engliſh verſes ſeemeth to run vpon the olde Iambicke ſtroake, and I may well thinke by all likelihoode, it had the beginning thereof. For if you marke the right quantitie of our vſuall verſes, ye ſhall perceiue them to containe in found ye very propertie of Iambick feete, as thus.

o — o — o — o — o — o — o — o —
I that my ſlender oaten pipe in verſe was wont to founde:

For tranſpoſe anie of thoſe feete in pronouncing, and make ſhort either the two, foure, fixe, eight, tenne, twelue fillable, and it will (doo what you can) fall out very abſurdly.

Againe, though our wordes can not well bee forced to abyde the touch of Position and other rules of Proſodia, yet is there ſuch a naturall force or quantity in eche worde, that it will not abide anie place but one, without ſome foule diſgrace: as for example try anie verſe, as thys,

o — o — o — o — o — o — o — o —
Of ſhapes transformde to bodies ſtrange I purpoſe to intreate.

Make the firſt fillable long, or the third, or the fift and ſo ſoorth: or contrariwiſe make the other fillables to admitte the ſhortneſſe of one of them places, and ſee what a wonderfull defacing it wil be to the wordes, as thus.

— u — u — u — u — u — u — u
Of strange bodies transformd to shapes purpose I to intreat.

So that this is one especiall thing to be taken heede of in making a good English verse, that by displacing no worde bee wrested against his naturall propriety, wherevnto you shal perceyue eche worde to be affected, and may easilie discern it in wordes of two fillables or aboue, though some there be of indifferencie, that wyll stand in any place. Againe, in chouching the whole sentence, the like regarde is to be had, that wee exceede not too boldly in placing the verbe out of his order, and too farre behinde the nowne: which the necessitie of Ryme may oftentimes vrge. For though it be tollerable in a verse to sette wordes so extraordinarily as other speeche will not admitt, yet heede is to be taken, leaft by too much affecting that manner, we make both the verse vnpleasent and the sence obscure. And sure it is a wonder to see the folly of manie in this respect, that vse not onely too much of thys ouerthwart placing, or rather displacing of wordes, in theyr Poemes and verses, but also in theyr prose or continued writings: where they thinke to rolle most smoothlie, and flow most eloquently, there by this means, come foorth theyr sentences dragging at one Authors tayle as they were tyde together with poynts, where often you shal tarrie (scratching your heade) a good space before you shall heare hys principall verbe or speciall word, leaste hys singing grace, which in his sentence is contained should be lesse, and his speeche seeme nothing poeticall.

The thyrd obseruation is, the Ryme or like ending of verses: which though it is of least importance, yet hath won such credite among vs, that of all other it is most regarded of the greatest part of Readers. And surely as I am perswaded, the regarde of wryters to this, hath bene the greatest decay of that good order of verifying, which might ere this haue bene established in our speeche. In my iudgment, if there be any ornament in the same, it is rather to be attributed to the plentifull fulnesse of our speeche, which can affoorde ryming words sufficient for the handling of any matter, then to the thing it selfe for any beautifying it bringeth to a worke: which might bee adorned with farre more excellent collours then ryming is. Notwithstanding I cannot but yeelde vnto it (as custome requireth) the deferued prayfes, especially where it is with good iudgement ordered. And I thinke them right worthy of admiration, for their readines and plenty of wytt and capacity, who can with facility intreate at large, and as we call it extempore, in good and sencible ryme, vpon some vnacquainted matter.

The ready skylle of framing anie thing in verse, besides the naturall promptnesse which many haue therevnto, is much helped by Arte, and exercise of the memory: for as I remember, I reade once among Gaskoynes workes, a little instruction to verififying, where is prescribed as I thinke thys course of learning to verifysye in Ryme.

When ye haue one verse well fetled, and decently ordered which you may dispose at your pleasure, to ende it with what word you wyll: then what soeuer the word is, you may speedilie runne ouer the other wordes which are aunswerable therevnto, (for more readines through all the letters Alphabetically) whereof you may choose that which wyll best fitte the sence of your matter in that place: as for example: if your last worde ende in Booke, you may straightwayes in your minde runne them ouer thus. Brooke, Cooke, crooke, hooke, looke, nooke, pooke, rooke, forooke, tooke, awooke etc. Nowe it is twenty to one, but alwayes one of these shall iumpe with your former worde and matter in good sence. If not, then alter the first.

And indeede I thinke, that next to the Arte of memory, thys is the readiest way to attaine to the faculty of ryming well Extempore, especially if it be helped with thus much paynes. Gather together all manner of wordes especially Monasillables, and place them Alphabetically in some note, and either haue them meetely perfectly by hart (which is no verye labourfome matter) or but looke them dilligently ouer at some time, practising to ryme indifferent often, whereby I am perswaded it wil soone be learned, so as the party haue withall any reasonabie gyft of knowledge and learning, whereby hee want not bothe matter and wordes altogether.

What the other circumstaunces of Ryming are, as what wordes may tollerably be placed in Ryme, and what not: what words doo best become a Ryme, and what not, how many fortes of Ryme there is: and such like I wyll not stay nowe to intreate. There be many more obseruations and notes to be prescribed, to the exacte knowledge of verififying, which I trust wilbe better and larger laide forth by others, to whom I deferre manie considerations in this treatise: hoping that some of greater skill will shortlie handle this matter in better forte.

Nowe the sundry kindes of rare deuises, and pretty inuentions which come from ye fine poetically vaine of manie in strange and vnacustomed manner, if I could report them, it were worthie my trauell: such are the turning of verses: the infolding of wordes: the fine repetitions: the clarklie conueying of contraries, and manie such like. Whereof though I coulde sette downe manie: yet because I want bothe manie and the best kindes of them, I will ouerpasse: onelie pointing you to one or two which may suffice for example.

Looke vpon the rufull song of Colin sung by Cuddie in the Sheephardes Calender, where you shall see a singuler rare deuise of a dittie framed vpon these fixe wordes VVoe, founde, cryes, part, sleep, augment, which are most prettilie turned and wounde vpe mutually together, expressing wonderfully the dolefulnesse of the song. A deuise not much vnlike vnto the same, is vsed by some, who taking the last wordes of a certaine number of verses, as it were by the rebound of an Echo, shall make them fall out in some prettie fence.

Of this sorte there are some deuised by John Graunge, which because they be not long I wyll rehearse one.

If feare oppresse howe then may hope me shielde?
 Denyall sayes, vayne hope hath pleased well,
 But as such hope thou wouldest not be thine,
 So would I not the like to rule my hart.
 For if thou louest it bids thee graunt forthwith
 Which is the ioy whereof I liue in hope.

Here if you take the last worde of euerie verse, and place them orderlie together, you shall haue this sentence: Shielde well thyne hart with hope. But of these Echoes I knowe indeede verie daintie peeces of worke, among some of the finest Poets this day in London: who for the rarenesse of them keepe them priuелиe to themselues, and wil not let them come abroad.

A like inuention to the last rehearsed, or rather a better, haue I seene often practised in framing a whole dittie to the Letters of ones name, or to the wordes of some two or three verses which is very witty, as for example this is one of W. Hunnis, which for the shortnes I rather chuse then some yare better.

If thou desire to liue in quiet rest,
 Gyue eare and see, but say the best.

These two verses are nowe as it were resolued into dyuers other, euery two wordes or sillables being the beginning of an other like verse, in this fort.

If thou	}	delight in quietnes of life,
Desire		to shunne from brawles, debate and strife:
To liue		in loue with G O D, with freend and foe,
In rest		shalt sleepe when other cannot so.
Gyue eare	}	to all, yet doo not all beleuee,
And see		the end and then thy sentence gyue:
But say		For trueth of happy liues assignde
The best		hath he that quiet is in minde.

Thus are there infinite fortes of fine conueiances (as they may be termed) to be vsed, and are much frequented by versifyers, as well in composition of their verse, as the wittines of their matter: which all I will referre to the consideration of euerie pleasant headed Poet in their proper gifts: onelie I sett downe these fewe fortes of their formes of versifying, which may stand in steede to declare what manie others may be deuised in like forte.

But nowe to proceede to the reformed kind of English verse which manie haue before this, attempted to put in practife, and to establish for an accustomed right among English Poets, you shall heare in like manner my simple iudgment concerning the same.

I am fully and certainlie perfwaded, that if the true kind of versifying in imitation of Greekes and Latines, had beene practifed in the English tongue, and put in vre from time to tyme by our Poets, who might haue continually beene mending and pollyshing the same, euery one according to their feuerall giftes: it would long ere this haue aspyred to as full perfection, as in anie other tongue whatfoeuer. For why may I not thinke so of our English, seeing that among the Romaines a long time, yea euen till the dayes of Tully, they esteemed not the Latine Poetrie almost worth any thing, in respecte of the Greeke, as appeareth in the Oration pro Archia Poeta: yet afterwarde it increased in credite more and more, and that in short space: so that in Virgilles time, wherein were they not comparable with the Greekes? So likewise, now it seemeth not currant for an English verse to runne vpon true quantity, and those feete which the Latines vse, because it is straunge, and the other barbarous custome, beeing within compasse of euery bafe witt, hath worne it out of credite or estimation. But if our wryters, beeing of learning and iudgment, would rather infringe thys curious custome, then omitte the occasion of inlarging the credite of their natiue speeche, and theyr owne prayfes, by practifing that commendable kind of wryting in true verfe: then no doubt, as in other partes of learning, fo in Poetry, shoulde not floupe to the best of them all in all maner of ornament and comlineffe. But some obiect that our wordes are nothing refemblaunt in nature to theirs, and therefore not poffible to bee framed with any good grace after their vfe: but cannot we then as well as the Latines did, alter the cannon of the rule according to the quality of our worde, and where our wordes and theyrs wyll agree, there to iumpe with them, where they will not agree, there to eſtabliſh a rule of our owne to be directed by? Likewise, for ye tenor of the verfe might we not (as Horace dyd in the Latine) alter their proportions to what fortes we liſted, and to what we ſawe wold beſt become the nature of the thing handled, or the quallity of the words? Surely it is to be thought that if any one, of ſound iudgment and learning, ſhoulde putt forth ſome famous worke, contayning dyuers formes of true verſes, fitting the meaſures, according to the matter: it would of it ſelfe be a ſufficient authority without any preſcription of rules, to the moſt part of Poets, for them to follow and by cuſtome to ratify. For ſure it is, that the rules and principles of Poetry, were not preciſely followed and obſerued of the firſt beginners and wryters of Poetry, but were ſelected and gathered ſeuerally out of their workes, for the direction and behoofe of their followers. And indeede, he that ſhall with heedfull iudgment make tryall of the Engliſh wordes, ſhall not finde them ſo groſſe or vnapt, but that they wyll become any one of ye moſt accuſtomed fortes of Latine or Greeke verſes meetely, and run thereon ſomewhat currantly.

I my ſelfe, with ſimple ſkyll I confeſſe, and farre vnable iudgment, haue ventured on a fewe, which notwithstanding the rudenes of them may ſerue to ſhewe what better might bee brought into our ſpeeche, if thoſe which are of meete abilitye woulde beſtowe ſome trauell and endeuour thereuppon. But before I ſette them downe, I wyll ſpeake ſomewhat of ſuch obſeruations as

I could gather necessary to the knowledge of these kinde of verses, least I should seeme to runne vpon them rashly, without regarde either of example or authority.

The speciall poyntes of a true verse, are the due obseruations of the feete, and place of the feete.

The foote of a verse, is a measure of two fillables, or of three, distinguished by time which is eyther long or short. A foote of two fillables, is eyther simple or mixt, that is, of like time or of diuers. A simple foote of two fillables is likewise twofolde, eyther of two long fillables called Spondæus, as -- goodnesse, or of two short called Pyrrichius as o o hyther. A myxt foote of 2. fillables, is eyther of one short and one long called Iambus as o - dying: or of one long and one short, called Choreus as - o gladly. A foote of 3. fillables in like sorte is either simple or myxt. The simple is eyther Moloffus, that is of three long, as - - - forgiuenes: or Trochæus, that is of 3. short, as o o o merylie. The mixt is of 6. diuers fortes, 1. Dactylus, of one long, and two short, as - o o happily. 2. Anapætus, of two shorte, and one long, as o o - t[r]auclers. 3. Bacchius, of one short, and two long, as o - - rememberers. 4. Palimbachus, of two long and one short, as - - o accorded. 5. Creticus of a long, a short, and a long, - o - daungerous. 6. Amphibrachus, of a short, a long, and a short, as o - o reioyced.

Many more deuisions of feete are vsed by some, but these doo more artificially comprehend all quantities necessary to the skanning of any verse, according to Tallæus in hys Rethorique. The place of the feete is the disposing of them in theyr propper roomes, whereby may be discerned the difference of eche verse which is the right numbring of the same. Now as for the quantity of our wordes, therein lyeth great difficultye, and the cheefest matter in this faculty. For in truth there being such diuersity betwixt our words and the Latine, it cannot stande indeede with great reason that they shoulde frame, wee being onelie directed by such rules as serue for onely Latine words, yet notwithstanding one may well perceiue by these fewe, that these kinde of verses would well become the speeche, if so bee there were such Rules prescribed, as woulde admitt the placing of your aptest and fullest wordes together. For indeede excepting a fewe, of our Monasyllables, which naturally shoulde most of them be long, we haue almost none, that wyll stande fitlie in a short foote: and therefore if some exception were made against the precise obseruation of Position, and certaine other of the rules, then might we haue as great plenty and choyse of good wordes to furnish and sette forth a verse, as in any other tongue.

Likewise if there were some derrection in such wordes, as fall not within the compasse of Greeke or Latine rules, it were a great helpe, and therefore I had great misse in these few which I made. Such as is the last sillable in these wordes, able, noble, or possible and such like: againe for the nature and force of our W. of our th, of our oo, and ee, of our wordes which admytte an e in the ende after one or two Consonantes, and many other. I for my part, though (I must needs confesse) many faultes escaped me in these fewe, yet tooke I as good heede as I coulde, and in trueth did rather alwaies omitt the best wordes and such as would naturally become the speech best, then I wolde committe any thing, which shoulde notoriously impugne the Latine rules, which herein I had onely for my direction. Indeeede most of our Monasyllables I am forced to make short, to supply the want of many short wordes requisite in these verses. The Participle A, being but the English article adioyned to Nownes, I alwayes make short, both alone and in composition, and likewise the wordes of one sillable ending in E, as the, when it is an article, he, she, ye, etc. we I thinke should needes be alwayes long because we pronounce continually VVe. I, being alone standing for the Pronowne Ego, in my iudgment might well be vsed common: but because I neuer sawe it vsed but short I so obserued it. Words ending in y

I make short without doubt, sauing that I haue marked in others one difference which they vse in the same, that is to make it short in the ende  $\circ$  of an Aduerb, as gladly, and long in the ende  $-$  of an Adiectiue as goodly: but the reason is as I take it, because the Adiectiue is or should be most commonly written thus goodlie.  $\circ$ , beeing an Aduerbe is naturally long: in the ende of wordes both Monasyllables and other I thinke it may be vsed common. The first of Pollisyllables I directed according to the nature of the worde, as I thought most auniwerable to Latine examples, sauing that somewhere I am constrayned to straine curtesy with the preposition of a worde compounded or such like, which breaketh no great square: as in defence or depart, etc. The myddle fillables which are not very many, come for the most part vnder the precinct of Position, whereof some of them will not possibly abide the touch, and therefore must needs be a little wrested: such are commonly ye Aduerbs of three fillables, as mournfully, spyghtfully and such like words, deriued of this Adiectiue, full: and therefore if there be great occasion to vse them, they must be reformed by detracting onely ( $l$ ) and then they stand meetely current, as mournfully. The last fillables I wholly directed so neere as I could to the touch of common rules.

The most famous verse of all the rest, is called Hexametrum Epicum, which consisteth of sixe feete, wherof the first foure are indifferently either Spondæi or Dactyli, the fift is euermore a dactyl, and the sixt a Spondæ, as thus.

—  $\circ$  — —  $\circ\circ$  — — — — —  $\circ\circ$  — —
Tyterus happily thou liest tumbling vnder a beetchtree.

Thys kinde of verse I haue onely seene to be practised in our English speeche: and indeede wyll stand somewhat more orderlye therein then any of the other kindes, vntill we haue some tolleration of wordes made by speciall rule. The first that attempted to practise thys verse in English, should seeme to be the Earle of Surry, who translated some part of Virgill into verse indeede, but without regard of true quantity of fillables. There is one famous Distichon, which is common in the mouthes of all men, that was made by one Master VWatson, fellowe of S. Johns Colledge in Cambrydge about 40. yeeres past, which for the sweetnes and gallantnes therof in all respects doth mat[c]h and surpasse the Latine copy of Horace, which he made out of Homers wordes, qui mores hominum etc.

— u u — — — u u — — — u u — —
All traouellers doo gladlie report great praise to Uliſſes

— u u — u u — — — — — u u — —
For that he knewe manie mens manners, and sawv many citties.

Which two verſes if they be examined throughout all the rules and obseruations of the best verifying, shall bee founde to attaine the very perfection of them all. There be two other not much inferiour to these, which I found in ye Glosse of E. K. vppon the fift Æglogue of the newe Poet: which Tully translated out of Greeke into Latine, Hæc habui quæ edi etc.

All that I eate did I ioy and all that I greedilie gorged.

— — — u u — — — — — u u — —
*As for those manie goodlie matters left ℱ for others.*

Which though they wyll not abide the touch of Synalæpha in one or two places, yet perhappes some English rule which might wyth good reason be established, would make them currant enough, and auoyde that inconuenience which is very obuious in our wordes. The great company of famous verſes of thys sort, which Master Haruey made, is not vnknowne to any and are to be viewed at all times. I for my part, so farre as those examples would leade me, and mine owne small skylle affoorde me, haue blundered vppon these fewe, whereinto I haue translated the two first Æglogues of Virgill: because I thought no matter of mine owne inuention, nor any other of antiquitye more fitte for tryal of thys thyng, before there were some more speciall direction, which might leade to a lesse troublesome manner of wryting.

The Argument of the first Æglogue.

Vnder the perfonne of Tityrus Vyrigill being figured himfelfe, declareth to Melibæus an nother Neateheard, the great benefittes he receyued at Augustus hand, who in the fpoyle of Mantua gaue him hys goods and fubftaunce againe.

Melibæus.            Tityrus.

Tityrus, happilie thou lyste tumbling vnder a beech tree,
All in a fine oate pipe thefe fweete fongs luftilie chaunting:
VVe, poore foules goe to wracke, and from thefe coastes beremooued,
And fro our pastures fweete: thou Tityr, at eafe in a shade plott
Makst thicke groues to refound vwith fonges of braue Amarillis.*

Tityrus.

*O Melibæus, he vvas no man but a God vwho releeude me:
Euer he shalbe my God: from this fame Sheepecot his alters Neuer, u tender Lambe shall vwant, with blood to bedevv them.
This good gift did he giue, to my steerces thus freelie to vvander,
And to my felfe (thou feest) on pipe to refound vwhat I listed.*

Melibæus.

*Grutch thee sure I doo not, but this thing makes me to vvonder, VVhence comes all this adoo: vvith grieuous paine not a little
 Can I remooue my Goates: here, Tityre skant get I forward
 Poore olde crone, two twyns at a clappe ith boysterous hassles
 Left she behind, best hope i' my flock laid hard on a bare stone.
 Had not a lucklesse lotte possesst our mindes, I remember
 VVarnings oft fro the blast burnt oake vve savv to be sent vs.
 Oft did a left hand crowv foretell these things in her hull tree,
 But this God let vs heare what he vvvas, good Tityre tell me.*

Titrus.

*That same Cittie so braue vvhich Rome vvvas vvont to be called,
 Foole did I thinke, to be like this of ours, vvhere vve to the pastures
 VVonted were to remooue from dammes our young prettie Cattell.
 Thus did I thinke young vvhelpes, and Kids to be like to the mothers,
 Thus did I vvont compare manie great thinges vvith many little.
 But this aboue all tovvnnes as loftily mounteth her high head,
 As by the lovve base shrubbes tall Cypresse shooteth aboue them.*

Melibæus.

And vvhat did thee mooue that needes thou must goe to see Rome?

Titrus.

*Fredome: vvhich though late, yet once lookt backe to my pore slate,
 After time vvhen haires from my beard did ginne to be vvhitish:
 Yet lookt back at last and found me out after a long time.
 VVhen Amarill vvvas once obtainde, Galatea departed:
 For (for I vvill confesse) vvhilst as Galatea did hold mee,
 Hope did I not for fredome, and care had I none to my cattell.
 Though manie faire young beastes our folde for the aulters asforded*

*And manie cheefes good fro my presse vvere sent to the Cittie:
Seldome times did I bring anie store of pence fro the markt.*

Melibæus.

*O Amarill, vwherefore, to thy Gods (very much did I meruaile) Heauilie thou didst praie: ripe fruites vngathered all still:
Tityrus is not at home: these Pyne trees Tityre mist thee.
Fountaines longd for thee: these hedgrooues wisht thy return home*

Tityrus.

*VWhat vvas then to be doone? from bondage could not I vwind out:
Neither I could haue found such gentle Gods any vwhere els.
There did I see (Melibæe) that youth vvhose hestes I by course still.
Fortnights whole to obserue on the Alters fure will I not faile.
Thus did he gentlie graunt to my sute when first I demaunded.
Keepe your heardes poore slaues as erst, let bulles to the makes still.*

Melibæus.

*Happy olde man, then thou shalt haue thy farme to remaine still,
Large and large to thy selfe, others nought but stonie grauell:
And foule stymie rush wherewith their lees be besprinkled.
Here no vnwoonted foode shall grieue young theaues who be laded,
Nor the infections foule of neighbours flocke shall annoie them.
Happie olde man. In shaddowy bankes and coole prettie places,
Heere by the quainted floodes and springs most holie remaining.
Here, these quicksets fresh which lands feuer out fro thy neighbors
And greene willow rowes which Hiblæ bees doo reioice in,
Oft fine whistring noise, shall bring sweete sleepe to thy fences.
Vnder a Rock side here will proyners chaunt merrie ditties.
Neither on highe Elme trees, thy beloude Doues loftilie sitting,
Nor prettie Turtles trim, vwill cease to crooke with a good cheere.*

Tityrus.

*First, therefore swift buckes shall flie for foode to the skies ward,
And from fish with drawn broade seas themselues shal auoid
hence:*

*First, (both borders broke) Araris shal run to the Parthanes,
And likewise Tygris shall againe runne backe to the Germanes:
Ere his countnaunce sweete shall slippe once out from my hartroote.*

Melibæus.

*Ue poore soules, must some to the land cold Affrica packe hence.
Some to the farre Scythia, and some must to the swift flood Oaxis.
Some to Britannia coastes quite parted farre fro the whole world.
Oh these pastures pure shall I nere more chance to behold yee?
And our cottage poore with warme turues couerd about trim.
Oh these trim tilde landes, shall a recheffe souldier haue them?
And shall a Barbarian haue this crophe? see what a mischiefe
Discord vile hath araisde? for whom was our labour all tooke?
Now Melibæe ingraft pearie stocks, sette vines in an order.
Now goe (my braue flocke once that were) O now goe my kiddings.*

*Neuer againe shall I now in a greene bowre sweetelie reposed
See ye in queachie briers farre a loofe clambring on a high hill.
Now shall I sing no Iygges, nor whilst I doo fall to my iunkets.
Shall ye my Goates, cropping sweete flowres and leaues sit about me.*

Tityrus.

*Yet thou maist tarrie heere, and keepe me companie this night,
All on a leauie couch: good Aples ripe I doo not lacke, Chestnutts sweete good store, and plentie of curddes will I fet thee.
Marke i the Towne how chimnie tops doo beginne to be smoaking,
And fro the Mountaines high how shaddowes grow to be larger.*

The seconde Æglogue called Alexis.

The Argument.

Virgill in the personne of Corydon as some thinke, complayneth that he is not so gracious with Augustus as he would bee : or els it is to be referred to a youth Alexander, which was giuen him of Afinius Pollio, whom he blameth for the vnstedfastnes of his witt and wandering appetite, in refusing the freendly counsayle which he vsed to giue him.

THat Sheeheard Corydon did burne in loue with Alexis,
All his masters deare : and nought had he whereby to hope Onely in beechen groues, and dolesome shaddowy places. [for.
Dailie reforted he : there these rude disorderd outcryes,
Hylles and desert woodes throughout thus mournfully tuned.
O hard harted Alex, hast thou no regard to my sweete song?
Pyttiest me not a whitt : yea makst me now that I shall dye.
Yet doo the beastes find out fine shades and trim pretty coole plottes,
And fro the sun beames safe lie lyzardes vnder a bushtufte :
And for workmen toughe with boyling heate so beparched,
Garlick fauery sweete and coole hearbes plenty be dressed.
But, by the scorcht banke sydes i' thy foote steppes stil I goe plodding.

Hedgerowes hott doorefound with Grasshops mournfully squeak-
 O had I not ben better abyd Amarillis her anger? [ing,
 And her proude disdaine? yea better abyde my Menalcas?
 What though brown did he seeme? yea what though thou be so gallant

O thou fine chery cheekt child trust not t' much to thy beauty.
 Black violets are tooke when dayfes white be refused.
 Me thou dost despise vnkowne to thy selfe yet Alexis:
 What be my riches greate in neate, in milke what abundance.
 In Sicill hylles be my Lambes of which there wander a thousand.
 All times, colde and hote yet fresh milke neuer I wanted.
 Such be my Musicke notes, as (when his flockes he recalling) Amphion of Dirce did vse on shore Aracynthus.
 Much mishapt I am not, for late in a bancke I behelde me, VVhen still feas were calme, to thy Daphnis neede not I giue place

No, though thou be the iudge, if pictures haue any credite.
 O were thou content to remaine with me by the downes heere,
 In these lodgings small, and helpe me proppes to put vnder,
 And trym kydling flocke with me to driue to the greene fieldes:
 Pan in singing sweete with me shouldst brauely refemble:
 Pan, was first the inuenter, pypes to adioyne in an order:
 Pan, poore flockes and Sheepeardees to most duly regardeth.
 Those fine lips thou needst not feare to bruse with a sweete pype:
 VVhat dyd Amynt forsake i'this excercise to be cunning?
 One pype with seauene fundry stops matcht sweetly together.
 Haue I my selfe, Damætas which ats death he bequeathd me,
 And sayd, heere, thou art now the second which euer hath ought
 So sayd Damætas: but Amyntas spightfully scornde it. [it.
 Also, two pretty small wyld kyddes, most goodlie bespotted Haue I, that heere i' the dales doo runne skant safe I doo feare me.

Twyce in a day two teates they suck: for thee will I keepe them:
 Wondrous faine to haue had them both was Thestylis of late.
 And so she shall: for I see thou scornst whatso-euer I giue thee.
 Come hyther O thou sweete face boy: see see, to thy selfe heere
 How fayre Nymphes in baskets full doo bring manie Lillies:
 White violets sweete Nais plucks and bloomes fro the Poppies, Narcys, and dyll flowres most sweete that faouureth also.

Casia, broade mary Goldes, with pancyes, and Hyacinthus.
 And I my felfe rype peaches soft as filke will I gather.
 And such Chefnutts as Amarill was wont to reioyce at.
 Ploms wyll I bring likewise: that fruite shall be honored also.
 And ye O Lawrell twygges that I croppe, and myrte thy felfe next.

For ye be wont, (bound both in a bunch) most sweetely to fauour.

Thou art but a Clowne Corydon: these gifts esteemes not Alexis:
 Nor by thy gifts to obtaine art meete to incounter Iolas.

VVretch (ahlas) whats this that I wish? south blasts to the yong flowers

Or cleere crystall streames with loathsome fwyne to be trouble<sup>d</sup>
 Ah mad boy from whom doost runne? why Gods ithe woods dwelt:

And Paris erst of Troy: Pallas most gladly reioyseth,
 In these bowres: and in trym groues we all chiefly delight vs.

Grym Lyoneffe doth course curst woolues, so wolues doo the kydlinges.

And these wanton Kyddes likewise these faire Cytifus flowers.

Thee Corydon (O Alex) some pleasure eury wight pulles.
 See these yoked steeres fro the plough nowe seeme to be lett loofe.

And these shadowes large doo declare thys fun to depart
 hence

Styll I doo burne in loue. What meane in loue to be lookt for?

Ah Corydon Corydon, what raging fury dooth haunt thee, Halfe cropt downe be thy vynes and broade brauncht elmes ouerhang them.

Rather about some needefull worke now busy thy felfe well,
 Either on Ofyers tuffe or bulrush weaue pretty basketts.
 And if Alexis scorne thee still, mayst hope for another.

F I N I S.

I durst not enterpryse to goe any further with this rude translation: beeing for the respects aforesayd a troublesome and vnpleasant peece of labour: And therefore these shall suffice till further occasion shall serue to imploy some profitable paynes in this behalfe.

The next verse in dignity to the Hexameters, is ye Carmen Elegiacum which consisteth of foure feete and two od fillables: viz: the two first feete, eyther Dactyli or Spondæi indifferent, the one long fillable: next two Dactyli and an other long fillable — — — o o — — o o — o o — some doo measure it in this forte (and more truly yet not so readily to all) accounting first two indifferently either Dactyli or Spondæi, then one Spondæi, and two Anapæsti. But it commeth all to one reckoning. Thys verse is alwayes vnseperably adioyned vnto the Hexameter, and serueth especially to the handling of loue and dalliances, whereof it taketh the name. It will not frame altogether so currantlye in our English as the other, because the shortnesse of the seconde Penthimimer will hardly be framed to fall together in good sence, after the Latine rules. I haue not seene very many of them made by any, and therefore one or two for example sake shall be sufficient.

This Distichon out of Ouid.

*Ingenium quondam fuerat pretiosius auro,
At nunc barbaries grandis habere nihil.*

May thus be translated.

Learning once was thought to be better then any gold was,
Now he that hath not wealth is but a barbarian.

And thys

*Omnia sunt hominum tenui pendentia filo:
Et subito casu quæ valere ruunt.*

Tis but a slender thread, which all mens states do depend on:

And most goodly thinges quickly doo fall to decay.

Phæbus once peept foorth with a goodly guilt hewe,
 For to gaze : but when he fawe the bright beames
 Spread abroade fro' her face with a glorious grace, it did amaze him.

When another funne he behelde belowe heere,
 Blusht he red for shame, nor againe he durst looke:
 Would he durst bright beames of his owne with hers match,
 for to be vanquisht.

Shew thy felfe now Cynthia with thy cleere rayes,
 And behold her: neuer abasht be thou fo: [beauty, how
 When she spreades those beames of her heauenly thou art in a dump dasht?

But I will take heede that I match not her grace,
 With the Laton feede, Niobe that once did,
 Nowe she doth therefore in a stone repent: to all other a warning.

Pan he may well boaste that he did begit her
 Such a noble wight, to Syrinx is it ioy,
 That she found such lott with a bellibone trym
 for to be loaden.

When my younglinges first to the dammes doo bleat out,
 Shall a milke white Lambe to my Lady be offred: [grome.
 For my Goddesse shee is yea I my felfe her Heard-though but a rude Clowne.

Vnto that place Caliope dooth high her,
 Where my Goddesse shines: to the fame the Muser
 After her with sweete Violines about them cheerefully tracing

Is not it Bay braunche that aloft in handes they haue, Eune to giue them fure to my Lady Eliza:
 O fo sweete they play—and to the same doo sing too
 heaunly to heare ifl.

See, the Graces trym to the stroake doo foote it,
 Deftly dauncing, and meriment doo make them,
 Sing to the instruments to reioyce the more, but wants not a fourth grace?

A Discourse of

Then the daunce wyll be eune, to my Lady therefore Shalbe geune that place, for a grace she shall be
 For to fill that place that among them in heaune, she may be receiued.

Thys beuy of bright Nymphes, whether ist goe they now?
 Raunged all thus fine in a rowe together?
 They be Ladies all i' the Lake behight foe?
 they thether all goe.

One that is there chiefe that among the rest goes,
 Called is Chores of Olyues she beares a Goodly Crownett, meete for a Prince that in peace euer abideth.

All ye Sheephardes maides that about the greenedwell,
 Speede ye there to her grace, but among ye take heede
 All be Virgins pure that aproche to deck her, duetie requireth.

When ye shall present ye before her in place,
 See ye not your felues doo demeane too rudely:
 Bynd the fillets: and to be fine the waste gyrt
 fast with a tawdryne

Bring the Pinckes therewith many Gelliflowres sweete,
 And the Cullambynes: let vs haue the Wynesops,
 With the Cornation that among the loue laddes wontes to be worne much.

Daffadowndillies all a long the ground strowe,
 And the Cowflyppe with a prety paunce let heere lye.
 Kyngcuppe and Lillies so beloude of all men
 And the deluce flowre.

One verfe there remaineth vntranslated as yet, with some other of this forte, which I meant to haue finished, but by reason of some let which I had, I am constrained to defer to some other time, when I hope to gratify the Readers with more and better verfes of this fort: for in trueth I am perswaded a little paine taking might furnish our speche with as much pleasaunt delight in this kinde of verfe, as any other whatfoeuer.

Heere followe the Cannons or general cautions of Poetry, prescribed by Horace, first gathered by Georgius Fabricius Cremnicensis: which I thought good to annex to thys Treatise, as very necessary obseruations to be marked of all Poets.

In his Epistle ad Pisones

de arte Poetica.

First let the inuention be meete for the matter, not differing, or straunge, or monstrous. For a womans head, a horse necke, the bodie of a dyuers coloured Byrd, and many members of fundry creatures compact together, whose legges ending like a Fyshes tayle: this in a picture is a wonderful deformitie: but if there be such diuersitye in the frame of a speche, what can be more vncomely or ilfauoured?

2. The ornaments or colours must not bee too many, nor rashly aduentured on, neither must they be vsed euery where and thrust into euery place.

3. The proprietie of speche must bee duely obserued that wayghty and great matters be not spoken slenderly, or matters of length too briefly: for it belongeth much both to the comlinessse and nature of a matter: that in big matters there be lykewise vsed boysterous wordes.

4. In Poeticall descriptions, the speeche must not exceede all credite, nor any thing fainedlie brought in, against all course of nature.

5. The disposing of the worke must be such, that there be no offence committed, as it were by too exquisite dilligence: for many thinges may be oft committed, and some thing by too curious handling be made offenciue. Neyther is it in one part to be well furnished, and in another to be neglected. Which is prooued by example of a Caruer, who expressed very artificially the heade and vpper part of a body, but the rest hee could not make an ende of. Againe, it is prooued thus, that a body should not be in other partes beautifull, and yet bee deformed in the crooked nose: for all the members in a well shapen bodie must be aunswerable, found, and well proportioned.

6. He that taketh in hande to write any thing must first take heede that he be sufficient for the fame: for often vnwary fooles through their rashnes are ouertooke with great want of ability

7. The ornament of a worke consisteth in wordes, and in the manner of the wordes, are either simple or mixt, newe or olde, propper or translated. In them all good iudgment must be vsed and ready wytt. The chiefeft grace is in the most frequented wordes, for the same reason holdeth in wordes, as doth in coynes, that the most vsed and tried are best esteemed.

8. The kinde of verse is to be considered and aptly applied to the argument, in what measure is most meete for euery fort. The most vsuall kindes are foure, the Heroic, Elegiac, Iambick, and Lyric.

9. One must vse one kynde of speeche alike in all wrytings. Sometime the Lyric ryfeth aloft, fometime the comicall. To the Tragicall wryters belong properly the bygge and boysterous wordes. Examples must be interplaced according fitly to the time and place.

10. Regarde is to be had of affections: one thing

becommeth pleafant perfons, an other fadde, an other wrathfull, an other gentle, which muft all be heedefully refpected, Three things therefore are requifite in verfes, beauty, fweetnes, and the affection. Theophrastus fayth that this beauty or delectablenesse is a deceyt, and Aristotle calleth it τυραννία ολιγοκρονίον, a momentany tyranny. Sweetneffe retayneth a Reader, affection moueth him.

11. Euery perfon muft be fitted accordingly, and the fpeeche well ordered: wherein are to be confidered the dignity, age, fex, fortune, condition, place, Country, etc. of eche perfon.

12. The perfonnes are eyther to be fayned by the Poets them felues, or borrowed of others, if he borrow them, then muft hee obferue το ὅμοιον, that is, that he folow that Author exactly whom he purpofeth to immitate, and whereout he bringeth his examples. But if he fayne newe perfonnes, then muft he keepe his το ὁμαλόν, that is equallie: fo bringing them in eche place, that it be alwayes agreeable, and the laft like vnto the firft, and not make one perfon nowe a bolde boafter, and the fame straightwaies a wife warie man, for that is paffing abfurd. Againe, euery one muft obferue το ἀρμοστον, which is interpreted conuenientiam, fitneffe: as it is meete and agreeable euery where, a man to be ftoute, a woman fearefull, a feruant crafty, a young man gentle.

13. Matters which are common may be handled by a Poet as they may be thought propper to himfelfe alone. All matters of themfelues are open to be intrated of by any man: but if a thing be handled of fome one in fuch fort, as he thereby obtaine great prayfe, he maketh it his owne or propper to himfelfe, as many did write of the Troiane war, but yet Homer made matter which was common to all, propper to himfelfe.

14. Where many thinges are to be taken out of auncienter tongues, as the Latines tooke much out of the Greekes, the wordes are not fo precifelie to be followed, but that they bee altered according to the iudgment and will of the Immitator, which precept is borrowed of Tully, Non verbum verbo necesse est reddere.

15. The beginning must not be foolishly handled, that is, straungly or too long.

16. The proposition or narration let it not be far fetched or vnlikely, and in the same forget not the differences of ages and persons.

17. In a Comedie it is needfull to exhibite all the actions openlie, as such as are cruell, vnhonest, or ougly, but such thinges may better bee declared by some meete and handsome wordes, after what forte they are supposed to bee doone.

18. If a Commedye haue more Actes then fiue, it is tedious, if fewer, it is not sufficient.

It fyteth not to bring in the personnes of Gods, but in verie great matters. Cicero sayth, when the Tragedy wryters cannot bring theyr matters to good passe, they runne to God. Let not more personnes speake together then foure for auoyding confusion.

The Chori must be well garnished and sette foorth: wherein eyther menne are admonished, or reprehended, or counfayled vnto vertue. Such matter must bee chofen for the Chorus, as may bee meete and agreeable to that which is in hand. As for instruments and singing, they are Reliques of olde simplicitie. For the Musicke commonlye vsed at Theaters and the licentiousnesse of theyr songes, which together wyth theyr wealth increased among the Romaines, is hurtfull to discipline and good manners.

19. In a Satyr the clownish company and rurall Gods, are brought in to temperate the Heauinesse of Tragedies, wyth some myrth and pastyme. In iesting it must be obserued that it bee not lacyuious or Rybaldlike, or flanderous, which precept holdeth generallie in all fortes of wrytynges.

In a Satyr greate heede is to be taken, of the place, of the day, and of the personnes: as of Bacchus, Silenus, or the Satyres. Againe of the vnmeetnesse or inconuenience of the matter, and of the wordes that they be fitted according to the persons: of Decorum, that he which represented some noble personage in the Tragedie, bee not some busy foole in the Satyr: finallie of the hearers, least they bee offended by myxing filthy matters with iestes, wanton toyes wyth vnhoneſt, or noysome with merry thinges.

20. The feete are to be applied propper to euery kinde of verſe, and therin a Poet muſt not vſe too much licence or boldnes. The auncient writers in Iambick verſes vſed at firſt pure Iambicks: Afterwards Spondæus was admitted into Locos impares, but at laſt ſuch was the licentious cuſtome, that they woulde both Spondæus where they liſted, and other feete without regarde.

21. In compyling of verſes great care and circumſpection muſt be vſed.

Thoſe verſes which be made Extempore, are of no great eſtimation: thoſe which are vnartificiall, are vtterly repelled as too fooliſh. Though many doo lightlie regard our verſes, yet ought the Careleſneſſe of the hearers to bee no cauſe in vs of errour and negligence. Who deſireth to make any thing worthy to be heard of learned eares, let hym reade Greeke Authors heedefullie and continually.

22. Artes haue their increaſinges euen as other things, beeing naturall, ſo haue Tragedies which were firſt rudely inuented by Theſpis, at laſt were much adorned by Æſchylus: at the firſt they were practiſed in Villages of the Countrey, afterwardeſ brought to ſtages in great Citties.

23. Some Artes doo increaſe, ſome doo decay by a certayne naturall courſe. The olde manner of Comedies decayde, by reaſon of flaundering which therein they vſed againſt many, for which there was a penaltie appointed, leaſt their bitterneſſe ſhould proceede too farre: In place of which among the Latines came the Satyres.

The auncient Authors of Comedies, were Eupolis, Cratinus, and Ariſtophanes, of the middle forte Plato

Comicus, of the last kinde Menander, which continued and was accounted the most famous.

24. A Poet should not content himselfe onely with others inuentions, but himselfe also by ye example of old wryters sholde bring something of his owne industry, which may bee laudable. So did they which writte among the Latines the Comedies called Togatæ, whose arguments were taken from ye Greekes, and the other which wrytt the Pretextatæ, whereof the arguments were Latine.

25. Heedefulnesse and good composition maketh a perfecte verse, and that which is not so may be reprehended. The faculty of a goode witte exceedeth Arte.

26. A Poet that he may be perfect, hath neede to haue knowledge of that part of Philosophie which informeth ye life to good manners. The other which pertaineth to naturall thinges, is lesse plausible, hath fewer ornaments, and is not so profitable.

27. A Poet to the knowledge of Philosophie shoulde also adde greater experience, that he may know the fashions of men and dispositions of people. Thys profit is gott by traouelling, that whatsoever he wryteth he may so expresse and order it, that hys narration may be formable.

28. The ende of Poetry is to wryte pleasant thinges, and profitable. Pleasant it is which delighteth by beeing not too long, or vneasy to be kept in memory, and which is somewhat likelie, and not altogether forged. Profitable it is, which styrreth vpp the mindes to learning and wisedome.

29. Certaine escapes are to be pardoned in some Poets, specially in great workes. A faulte may bee committed either in respect of hys propper Arte, or in some other Arte: that a Poet shoulde erre in precepts of hys owne arte, is a shamefull thing, to committe a faulte in another Arte is to be borne withal: as in Virgil, who fayneth that Aeneas comming into Affrica flew with hys darte certaine Stagges, whereas indeede Affrica hath in it none of those beastes. Such errors doo happen eyther by vnheedefulnes, when one escapeth them by negligence: or by the common fragility of man, because none there is which can know all thinges. Therefore this last kinde of error is not to be stucke vppon.

30. A good Poet should haue respect to thys, how to retaine hys Reader or hearer. In a picture some thing delighteth beeing sette farre of, something nearer, but a Poet should delight in all places as well in sunne as shaddowe.

31. In a Poet is no meane to be admitted, which if hee bee not he of all is the worst of all.

32. A Poeme if it runne not sweetely and smoothly is odious: which is proued by a simile of the two senses, hearing and tasting, as in sweete and pleasaunt meates. And the Poem must bee of that sorte, that for the sweetenesse of it may bee acceptable and continue like it selfe vnto the ende, least it wearye or driue away a Reader.

33. He that would wryte any thing worthy the posteritye, let him not enterprise any thing wherevnto his nature is not agreeable. Mercury is not made of wood (as they say) neyther doth Minerua fauour all studies in euery one. In all Artes nature is the best helpe, and learned men vse commonly to say that A Poet is as well borne as made a Poet.

34. Let no man esteeme himselfe so learned, but that he may submytte hys wrytinges to the iudgments of others, and correct and throughly amend the same himselfe.

35. The profite of Poetry sprang thus, for that the auncient wyse men set downe the best things that pertained to mans life, manners, or felicity, and examining and proouing the same by long experience of time, when they are aged they published them in wrytinges. The vse of Poetry what it was at the first, is manifest by the examples of the moste learned men: as of Orpheus who first builded houses: of Amphion who made Citties, of Tyrtæus who first made warre: of Homer, who wryt most wyfely.

36. In an artificiall Poet three thinges are requisite, nature, Arte, and dilligence.

37. A wryter must learne of the learned, and he must not slicke to confesse when he erreth: that the worfe he may learne to auoyde, and knowe howe to follow the better.

The confession of an error betoken a noble and a gentle minde. Celsus and Quintillian doo report of Hippocrates, that least he should deceiue his posterity, he confessed certayne errors, as it well became an excellent minded man, and one of great credite. For (as fayth Celsus) light witts because they haue nothing, wyll haue nothing taken from them.

38. In making choise of such freendes as should tell vs the trueth, and correct our wrytinges, heedfull iudgment must bee vsed: least eyther we choose vn-skyllfull folke, or flatterers, or diffemblers. The vn-skillfull know not how to iudge, flatterers feare to offende, diffemblers in not praying doo feeme to commend.

39. Let no man deceiue himselfe, or suffer himselfe to be deceiued, but take some graue learned man to be iudge of his dooing, and let him according to hys counsaile change and put out what hee thinketh good.

40. He which will not flatter and is of ability to iudge, let him endeuour to nothing so much, as to the correction of that which is wrytten, and that let be doone with earnest and exquisite iudgment. He which dooth not thus, but offendeth wilfully in breaking his credite too rashly, may be counted for a madde, furious, and franticke foole.

41. The faultes commonly in verses are seauen, as either they be destitute of Arte, of facility, or ornament: or els, they be superfluous, obscure, ambitious, or needeleffe.

Out of the Epistles ad Mecænatem, Augustum, et Florum.

42. An immitation should not be too seruile or superstitious, as though one durst not varry one iotte from the example: neyther should it be so fenceleffe or vn-skilfull, as to immitate thinges which are absurde, and not to be followed.

43. One should not altogether treade in the steppes of others, but sometime he may enter into such wayes as haue not beene haunted or vsed of others. Horace borrowed ye Iambick verse of Archilocus, expressing fully his numbers and elegant[ly], but his vnseemely wordes and pratling tauntes hee moste wyfhlye shunned.

44. In our verses we should not gape after the phrascs of the simpler forte, but striue to haue our writings allowable in the iudgments of learned menne.

45. The common peoples iudgments of Poets is feldome true, and therefore not to be fought after. The vulgar fort in Rome iudged Pacuiuious to be very learned, Accius to bee a graue wryter, that Affranius followed Menander, Plautus, Epicharmus: that Terence excelled in Arte Cæcilius in grauity: but the learned forte were not of this opinion. There is extant in Macrobius (I knowe not whether Angellius) the like verdite concerning them which wryt Epigrammes. That Catullus and Caluus wrytt fewe thinges that were good, Næuius obscure, Hortensius vncomely, Cynna vnpleasant, and Memmius rough.

46. The olde wryters are so farre to be commended, as nothing be taken from the newe: neyther may we thinke but that the way lyeth open styll to others to attaine to as great matters. Full well fayd Sidonius to Eucherius, I reuerence the olde wryters, yet not so as though I lesse esteemed the vertues and desertes of the wryters in this age.

47. Newnes is gratefull if it be learned: for certaine it is, Artes are not bothe begunne and perfected at once, but are increased by time and studie. which notwithstanding when they are at the full perfection, doo debate and decrease againe.

Cic. de orat. There is nothing in the world which bursteth out all at once, and commeth to light all wholly together.

48. No man should dare to practise an Arte that is daungerous, especially before he haue learned the same perfectly: so doo guyders of Shyppes: so doo Phisitions: but so did not manie Romaine Poets (yea so doo not too many English wryters) who in a certaine corragious heate gaped after glory by wryting verfes, but fewe of them obtayned it.

49. A Poet should be no lesse skylfull in dealing with the affectes of the mynde, then a tumbler or a Iuggler shoulde bee ready in his Arte. And with such pyth shoulde he sette fourth hys matters, that a Reader shoulde seeme not onely to heare the thing, but to see and be present at the dooing thereof. Which faculty Fabius calleth ὑποτασις and Aristotle προ ομματων θεσιν ἢ ποιησιμ.

50. Poets are either such as desire to be liked of on stages, as Commedie and Tragedie wryters: or such as woulde bee registred in Libraries. Those on stages haue speciall respect to the motions of the minde, that they may stirre bothe the eyes and eares of their beholders. But the other which seeke to please priuately with[in] the walles, take good aduifement in their workes, that they may fatiffy the exact iudgments of learned men in their studies.

51. A Poet shoulde not bee too importunate, as to offende in vnseasonable speeches: or vngentle, as to contemne the admonitions of others: or ambitious, as to thinke too well of his owne dooinges: or too wayward, as to thinke, reward enough cannot be gyuen him for his deserte, or finally too proude, as to desyre to be honoured aboue meafure.

52. The emendations of Poemes be very necessary, that in the obscure poyntes many thinges may be enlightned, in the baser partes many thinges may be throughly garnished. Hee may take away and put out all vnpropper and vnseemely words, he may with discretion immitate the auncient wryters, he may abridge thinges that are too lofty, mittigate thynges that are too rough, and may vse all remedies of speche throughout the whole worke. The thinges which are scarce seemely, he may amende by Arte and methode.

53. Let a Poet first take vpon him, as though he were to play but an Actors part, as he may bee esteemed like one which wryteth without regarde, neyther let him so pollish his works, but that euery one for the basenesse thereof, may think to make as good. Hee may likewyse exercise the part of gesturer, as though he seemed to meddle in rude and common matters, and yet not so deale in them, as it were for variety sake, nor as though he had laboured them thoroughly but tryfled with them, nor as though he had sweat for them, but practised a little. For so to hyde ones cunning, that nothing should seeme to bee laborfome or exquisite, when notwithstanding, euery part is polished with care and studie, is a speciall gyft which Aristotle calleth κρηψυ.

54. It is onely a poynt of wysedome, to vse many and choyse elegant words, but to vnderstand also and to set foorth thinges which pertaine to the happy ende of mans life. Wherevpon the Poet Horace, calleth the Arte poetically, without the knowledge of learning and philosophy, a prating vanity. Therefore a good and allowable Poet, must be adorned with wordes, plentious in sentences, and if not equall to an Orator, yet very neere him, and a special louer of learned men.

F I N I S.

Epilogus.

His small trauell (courteous Reader)
 I desire thee take in good worth:
 which I haue compyled, not as an exquisite censure concerning this matter, but (as thou mayst well per-ceiue, and) in trueth to that onely ende that it might be an occasion, to haue the same throughly and with greater discretion, taken in hande and laboured by some other of greater abilitie: of whom I knowe there be manie among the famous Poets in London, who bothe for learning and leysure, may handle this Argument far more pythilie then my selfe. Which if any of them wyll vouchsafe to doo, I trust wee shall haue Englishe Poetry at a higher price in short space: and the rabble of balde Rymes shall be turned to famous workes, comparable (I suppose) with the best workes of Poetry in other tongues. In the meane time, if my poore skill, can sette the same any thing forward, I wyll not cease to practise the same towards the framing of some apt English Profodia:
 styll hoping, and hartelie wishing to enioy first the benefitte of some others iudgment, whose authority may beare greater credite, and whose learning can better per-forme it.

(.:)

