FOR THE GOVERNMENT
HERTFORD COLLEGE,
IN THE
UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD.

WITH OBSERVATIONS on particular Parts of them, shewing the Reasonableness thereof.

THE Reasons for Publishing the following Rules and Statutes for the Government of Hertford-College are these.

*i. That, since the Principal hath Power, during his Life, with the Consent of the Visitor, and Approbation of the Crown, to alter any of the said
Statutes, he may the better collect the Thoughts of serious Men concerning*

a 2

them, and have Opportunity to make such Alterations therein, as he shall be well Advised are Proper to be made.

2. That the Parent and the Scholar may be Apprised of the Discipline of the College, before any Admission into it be desired by Either; and accordingly Apply for Admission or not, as Either shall Like or Dislike the Discipline, which, it will be expected, the Scholar should conform to.

3. That all Persons Interested in the Prosperity of the Scholar, and who shall think it for his Advantage to be governed by the said Statutes, may the better Inquire, from time to time, whether, on the Part of the Governor, the same be duly executed, as far as they can be, before the College shall be completely Indowed, or not; and, if they are not, may complain, as they will have Reason, of the Unfairness of setting forth Rules to Invite Applications to be Admitted, and, afterwards,

of Neglecting to put them in Use for the Benefit of those who have been so Invited.

4. That it may appear, how Little is wanting to the Complete Indowment of the College; and, that, if any One shall be kindly Disposed to give any thing to the Society for this Purpose, he may know how to do it in a Manner in which it can be received. A thing so material to be here suggested, from the want of this Knowledge in the late Lord Holford, or in the late Lord Harcourt her Adviser, the 1600l. she left, in Trust, to the Society, and of which, whilst, as yet, they were not Incorporated, they enjoyed the Benefit, when they came to be a Corporation subject to Rules and Statutes, that would have committed of the Benefaction, they were obliged to forego.

RULES and STATUTES

F O R T H E

GOVERNMENT of Hertford College in the Univerfity of Oxford.

S E C T. I.

THE Ancient House of Learning originally call'd Hertford-hall (<sup>a</sup>), and afterwards Hert-hall, and then Hart-hall, and now Hertford College, having received an Indowment in part, became, on the 8th of September 1740, by the Favour of his Majesty King George the Second, a Society Incorporate for the Education chiefly of young Scholars design'd for holy Orders, confifting

(<sup>a</sup>) So firft call'd in the Year 1284, after the Name of the Original Proprietor of the Tenement Elias Hertford, a Citizen of Oxford. Being Letten to Scholars, it was call'd a HALL, and, being Letten by Hertford, HERTFORD Hall; and is now, with the fame Simplicity, ftill'd Hertford College; but may be call'd by the Name of any Other Person who will compleat the Indowment of it, or become the Principal Benefactor to it.

of a Principal, Four Senior Fellows or Tutors, and Eight Junior Fellows or Assistants.

The Principal may continue in the Office of Principal for Life; the Senior Fellows in the Office of Tutors 'till they shall be of Eighteen Years Standing in the University from their Matriculation, and no longer; and the Junior Fellows in the Office of Assistants from the Time they shall have taken their Bachelors Degree in Arts to the Time of compleating their Degree of Master (a) in the same Faculty, or for Three entire Years, and no longer.

The Number of young Scholars or Pupils to be therein educated shall at no Time exceed Thirty-six; whereof Thirty-two shall have the Name of Students, and Four of Scholars.

The Four Tutors shall, in a certain Order by the Principal's Appointment (b,) annually succeed

(a) There is no Place in this College for a Master of Arts not a Tutor, but upon the Principal's Sufferance: For, having once taken That Degree, he hath no longer either Office, or Indowment; nor is capable of Either; nor, when the Limited Number of the Students shall be compleated, hath he any longer any proper Room in the College.

(b) The Principal is the Proper Tutor to the whole Undergraduate Part of the Society. Those who are call'd Tutors are Properly his Substitutes. All under Tuition come to Lecture to the Principal once a Week in full Term in One Class, that he may the better judge of their Proficiency under his Substitutes. He receives the Money for Tuition, and distributes it. The Substitute or Appointed Tutor may continue succeed one another in taking a Class of Pupils, consisting of Eight Students and One Scholar, and of no more; and shall every of them continue to be Tutors to their respective Classes, and to These only, for Four Years, or Sixteen Terms; the Term in which their Pupils are admitted, and That in which they will take their Batchelor's Degree in Arts, being included.

In the Fourth Year, the Fourth Tutor will have taken his Class of Pupils, and the Number of the Students and That of the Scholars be then compleat; and from thence forward, since the Pains and Care to be taken by each Tutor will be equal, the Revenue to each shall be so too; and when, at the End of the Fourth Year, the First Class of Pupils shall have taken their Batchelor's Degree, Another Class of the same Number and Quality may be admitted under the same Tutor.

The Tutor, whose Turn it is to take a Class of Pupils, shall begin to do so on the First Day of Hilary Term, and Scholars, as they offer themselves directly from the Schools where they have been bred, and not, at first tinue so, till he shall be of Eighteen Years standing in the Univerfity from his Matriculation, if he Like his Employment, and the Principal hath no reasonable Exception to his Behaviour. If he Die, or Remove, or be Removed, his Class of Pupils, which the Principal had Appointed him to take the care of, falls in course under the Care of the Principal, their Proper Tutor, till he provide Another Substitute.

hand, from any College or Hall in either University, shall, after they have been examined and approved of by the Principal and the said Tutor, be admitted: But if, at the End of the said Term, the Tutor's Class shall not be full, so many Students, as shall be wanting to compleat it, may be chosen out of such Scholars as were entered of any other College or Hall in either University, the same Term. And, in like manner, what Vacancies shall happen in the said Class after it shall have once been compleated, in any of the remaining Terms in which the Students are to be under Tuition, may, from time to time, be supplied by such Scholars of any other House in either University, as shall be of the same Standing in either, as those Students were of, who made the Vacancies, and fall in course under the Care of the same Tutor; to the end that All the Students of each Class, being of the same Standing in the University, may take their Batchelor's Degree in the same Term, and their Tutor be then at Liberty to take Another Class.

The Tutors shall all of them be Officers of the House, and annually succeed one another in the Offices of Vice-Principal, Catechist, Chaplain, and Moderator; unless the Principal, observing particular Abilities to be in any of them for particular Offices, shall think fit to continue them in those Posts which he finds they will best adorn.

The

The Revenue of the Principal shall arise from the Rent of the Chambers subject to Rent, of yearly Value, when the rest of the College shall be built, Two hundred and Thirty-two Pounds; from Five Shillings a Term to be paid him by each of the Thirty-two Students, and Two Shillings and Six-pence by each of the Four Scholars, in consideration of his being their Publick Lecturer, of yearly Value, when the College shall be full, Thirty-four Pounds; from One Shilling and Eight-pence a Quarter from each Master, Batchelor, and Undergraduate Student of the whole Society, and Ten-pence from each Scholar, (being the original Payment to the Principal for Gubernation, before the Incorporation of the Hall, and now continued to him as a proper Consideration for his Office of Perpetual Bursar of the College, and as the only Perquisite of such Office) of yearly Value Fifteen Pounds Six Shillings and Eight-pence a.

The Revenue of each Tutor, considered as a Person upon the Foundation, will be Thirteen Pounds Six Shillings and Eight-pence a Year; and Chamber-rent for himself, Scholar, and Servant, of Value Ten Pounds a Year more: Of each Tutor, considered as a Tutor, Forty Shillings a Quarter from each of Eight Students, and Ten Shillings from One Scholar: Of each Tutor, considered as an Officer of the House, Two Shillings and Six-pence from each Student of the whole Society, and One Shilling and Three-pence from each Scholar (a).

(b) The Revenue to each Student for the First Year, or Year of Probation, shall be Six Pounds Thirteen Shillings and Four-pence, or in proportion for so much of the Year as he shall continue a Probationer.

(c) The Revenue to each Actual Student shall be Thirteen Pounds Six Shillings and Eight-pence a Year for Three Years longer, or in proportion to the Time he shall continue an Actual Student.

(d) The Revenue to each Junior Fellow or Assistant shall be Twenty-six Pounds Thirteen Shillings and Four-pence a Year for Three Years longer, or in proportion to the Time he shall continue in that Office.

(a) The Principal, and Four Senior Fellows or Tutors are provided with Indowments as far as they can be, except with Commons for the several Terms of the Year, at 6 d. a Day, for 31 Weeks.

A Provision is wanting only,

(b) 1. For 8 Probationer Students, of 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. a Year Each, or 53 l. 6 s. 8 d. a Year.

(c) 2. For 24 Actual Students, of 13 l. 6 s. 8 d. a Year Each, or 320 l. a Year.

(d) 3. For 8 Junior Fellows or Assistants, of 26 l. 13 s. 4 d. a Year Each, or 213 l. 6 s. 8 d. a Year.

These

These Indowments, not to be augmented, unless with (a) Commons for the several Terms of the Year, shall subject those who receive them to Residence from the Beginning of every Term to the End of the same, under the Forfeiture of One Shilling per Diem, to be paid into the College Stock, for every Day of their Absence in Term-time; and shall entitle the Students of this College to the Privilege of wearing the same Gown that is usually worn by the Undergraduate Students of Christ Church, or by those who are called Scholars in Other Houses.

And whereas some few Persons of superior Condition may desire to have their Education in this House, and yet, possibly, may not be inclin'd to accept of the Indowment, nor even to wear the Habit of a Student without some Mark of Distinction, One of Each Class of Students, and no more, pursuing the Studies of his Class, and submitting to the Rules of the House equally as if he had condescended to accept of the said In-dowment, may, with the Consent, and Approbation of the Principal, appoint the same to the better Maintenance and Encouragement of any Other sober and regular Student or Students of the Society, who shall want and deserve it; and may also distinguish his superior Order, or better Quality, tho' not by a different Gown, yet by a Tuft upon his Cap, varying according to the different Rank in which he is Admitted; and may also Intitle himself to the Highest Seat at the Students Table, by standing to Double Commons; and to Precedence, and greater Care, and better Attendance in Every Other Place, by paying as much more as Other Students to the Tutor, and Officers, and Servants of the Society.

And whereas the Sum of Sixteen Pounds Thirteen Shillings and Four-pence hath, since the Dissolution of Monasteries, been paid yearly out of the Exchequer to the Principal of Hart-Hall, to be disposed of by Him to poor Scholars of the said Hall; this Sum, continuing to be paid every Year to the Principal of Hertford College, shall be equally divided by Him between the Four Scholars of the said College, to be enjoy'd by them till they shall be of Standing for their First Degree in Arts, being what will answer the Expence of Tuition, and Chamber-rent, and Burser's Stipends till that Time.

The

The College shall be built in the Form of a Quadrangle.

It shall consist of Four Angles, and Four Intermediate Buildings.

Each Angle shall consist of Three Staircases and Fifteen single Apartments.

Each Apartment shall contain an outward Room, a Bed-place, and a Study.

The Four Intermediate Buildings shall be the Chapel, and the Refectory, answering each other North and South: The Principal's Lodgings, and the Gatehouse (over which shall be the Library) answering each other East and West.

The Three remaining Parts shall be finished with Freestone, in the same Manner with the Chapel and One Angle, which are already built: Or, with no greater Variation than a Visitor shall think Convenient, and consistent with Simplicity,

Of the Four Tutors, One shall always lodge in the middle Room of the middle Staircase in each Angle, and shall preside in That Angle, as the Subordinate Governor thereof.

Of the Four Scholars, One shall attend each Tutor, and have his Lodgings in that Angle where the Tutor he attends shall preside, paying a yearly Rent of Forty Shillings for the same to the said Tutor.

Four Men, or elderly Women, Bed-makers, assisted each by a Son or Servant, shall have the Care of the Four Angles of Apartments, each of them of One, by the Appointment of the Principal; and shall be intrusted with the Keys of every Apartment therein, and keep the several Rooms thereof, together with the Staircases thereunto belonging, as neat as those of any private Dwelling. And the said Sons or Servants, out of the Hours of their common Service, (the Principal having no Occasion for their Attendance upon Him) shall be the proper Servants of the Four Tutors respectively, and lodge in their respective Master's Apartments.

S E C T. II.

Of PRAYERS, and other Religious Duties.

THE First Bell for Prayers shall ring a Quarter of an Hour before Prayers.

At the Tolling of the Second Bell, all the Members of the Society, clean (a) dressed, shall forthwith repair to the Chapel before (a) Prayers begin, and behave themselves decently (b) there

(a) To the Serious their Own Reflections are a sufficient Rule. They go to Bed at a seasonable Hour; and, Living always Temperately, find no Reluctance to Rise at the Ringing of the First Bell for Prayers; and, So rising, have Time to Wash and Dress themselves compleatly before the Tolling of the Second Bell; and are ready to repair to their respective Seats in the Chapel, before the Principal come in, or Prayers begin.

But, it having been Observ'd, That the Less Serious Then first begin to Rise when the Second Bell is Tolling; and, afterwards, are not asham'd, in a Slovenly Dress in every part Unfinish'd, to drop into the Chapel, one after another, during the whole Service, most Offensively to God and Man, a thing not to be endur'd in Societies Indowed for Promoting Piety, This Statute was made to put young Men in mind to be Serious in a Serious Matter; and to tell them their Governor is displeas'd to see them approach a Place set apart for the Worship of God in a manner which shows they are not Serious; and that their Appearance there in this manner will be as Penal to them, as their Absence from it; and that, to prevent Disturbances to those who are Desirous to perform their Duty acceptably, the Statute doth Intend none should Enter the Inner Chapel after the Service should be once begun.

(b) It is not intended that Every Visible Departure from this Rule should subject the Devotionist to the Forfeiture assigned to Indecent Behaviour in Divine Service. For, tho' whatever there during the Service, under the pecuniary Penalty to all Persons under the Degree of Master of Arts, of Two-pence (a), to be applied (b) to the better Maintenance of the Four Scholars of the College, whose Office it is to Note the Absences of the Students from the Hall and Chapel.

Morning Prayers, on Common Days, shall begin at half hour after Seven, from the First of October to the First of February; at half hour after Six from the First of February to the First of October. On Sundays and Holi- whatever shews Inattention be Indecent, yet Men the most desirous of attending strictly to the Matter of their Prayers, will often have Inadvertencies quas humana parum cavit Natura, and which, if they resume Attention when they perceive they wander, are not Criminal, and therefore not Punishable. These are fit however to be observ'd to young Men, in the Course of their Education, for their greater Watchfulness, and better Security against Departures from this Rule even thro' Inadvertence. But, Laughing, Talking, Sleeping, Lolling as if asleep, Sitting when they should Kneel, and whatever else may justly be esteemed a Departure thro' Irreverence, are to be consider'd in another Light.

(a) This was the Penalty assigned by the Aular Statutes for Absence from Prayers on Sundays, Holidays, and their Eves, as was a Penny for Absence in every Other Day. There not appearing any Reason for making the Penalty Greater at One time than Another, it is here made Equal. The Value of a Penny at the time when the Aular Statutes were compil'd being greater than is now the Value of Two-pence, the Penalty for Absence compar'd with what it was before is more moderate than it was before, notwithstanding this Alteration.

(b) This Application of the Penalties for Omissions of Religious Duties to some Charitable Use, seems to be the proper and natural Compensation for such Omissions; and, in a Place appointed for the Advancement of Learning, to This Charitable Use rather than any Other.

days, the First Service (a) shall begin at the same Hours throughout the Year, as on Common Days: The Second Service (a), with the Litany, on Litany Days, at Nine.

Evening Prayers throughout the Year at half hour after Six.

Immediately after the First Service on Sundays and Holidays in Term, shall follow a very short Explication of some Part of the Church Catechism, or Instruction in some Moral Duty, in a manner Useful to the Servants; and, at Eight of the Clock in the Evening on Sundays, in Winter, and Nine in Summer, a Catechetical or Theological Lecture, for the Improvement of the Undergraduates of the Society.

(a) These are distinct Services. In Each of them much of the same Matter is repeated. The Reading them at once, as One Service, is Unnecessary, and Inconvenient; and hath been One Cause, amongst Others, of the Decay of Piety in this Land. The Mind is Wearied, Attention Fails, Infirmity is impatient of Long Confinement: It requires a good deal of Zeal even to approach the Places of Divine Worship. The Services being made Distinct, it was originally Intended they should be read at Different Times. They are so read in some Cathedrals to this day; and ought to be so in All Parochial Churches, that Those, who cannot attend at One hour, may come at Another, and All have Opportunity to beg Pardon of God for their Sins, and to praise him for his Goodness every Sunday and Holy-day Morning in the Year. I do not find any Order of Convocation for the Jumbling these Services together. The Practice seems to have crept into the Church by the Negligence of Incumbents, and the Occasions of Pluralists. But, it is time, to let the Reason of things take Place, and to give Invitations, rather than to create Reluctances, to Religious Duties.

On

On Christmas Day, Easter Day, and Whit-sunday, and on the First Sunday in every Term (a), and on the Day of the Admission of a New Principal, the Holy Sacrament shall be administred, and every Member of the Society then resident shall receive it.

To the end that Persons trained up here for holy Orders may become well acquainted with the Scriptures early, and also learn to read them distinctly, and audibly, with true Stops, true Emphasis, true Quantity, without Hesitation, or affected Slowness, or Precipitancy, or ungraceful Repetition, or odd Tone, it shall be the Duty of the Undergraduates in their Turns, of Two every Week, to read the Lessons in the Chapel, on Sundays, Holidays, and their Eves; and on every Other Day, a Chapter out of the Gospels before Dinner in the Hall, and another out of the Epistles before Supper, both the Lessons for the Day. And that they may come duly prepared for the Performance of this important Exercise, they shall be subject to the public or private Examination of

(a) It is Intended, by this solemn Introduction of the Term, to put the Youth of this Society designed, as they generally are, for Holy Orders, in mind, That to fit themselves for the Ministerial Office is their Indispensible Duty; and, tho' Relaxations from Business may be not only Innocent but Useful, yet, that Idleness, to which Deficiencies in proper Learning, and Viciousness in Life may justly be imputed, is Immorality to be Repented of, and Resolved against.

the Principal or Vice-principal, or of any of the Tutors, concerning the Meaning of any Passage contained in the Chapters by them read.

The whole Society in Commons shall as well attend the Reading of the Chapters in the Hall, as of the Prayers in the Chapel, under the same Penalty, to be applied to the same Use.

When the Commons are set upon the upper Table, the Chaplain, or the Senior of the College in holy Orders then present, shall say Grace before Meat, and, when the upper Table rises, after Meat. Nor shall any one at either Meal rise from his Table, without Leave, till the Second Grace is said, under the same Penalty.

S E C T. III.

The OATHS to be taken upon Admission.

BY THE PRINCIPAL. I A. B. do swear, That I have made no Payment, Contract or Promise of Money, Service, or Benefit, directly or indirectly, by myself, or by any other to my Knowledge, or with my Consent, to any Person or Persons whatsoever, for or concerning the Procuring or Obtaining the Nomination to the Headship of this College; nor will at any time hereafter perform or satisfy any such kind of Payment, Contract or Promise made by any other without my Knowledge or Consent; nor will ever corruptly Resign or Exchange the said Headship, nor take for or in respect of Resigning or Exchanging the same directly or indirectly any Pension, Sum of Money, or Benefit whatsoever (a.)

BY EVERY STUDENT AND SCHOLAR. I A. B. do swear, That I will not voluntarily and on set purpose do any thing Injurious to this College, either by Defacing its Buildings, or by Impairing its Goods, or by putting less to my Account for what I eat or drink than what is due to it: Or that, when I shall recollect of myself, or be put in mind by any other Person, that I have done any Injury to this College, I will forthwith endeavour to make Satisfaction for the same.

S E C T. IV.

Of the Choice and Settlement of the
P R I N C I P A L.

THE Principal shall be chosen by the Chancellor of the University of Oxford for the time being, out of the Actual Students of Christ Church, who have had their Education in Westminster School; have come out from thence by Election to Christ Church; have continued at Christ Church with such Reputation as to have had Pupils committed to their Care by the Dean of that House; and who, before the time of the Vacancy of the said Headship, have proceeded regularly to the Degree of Master of Arts in the University aforesaid; are in Priest's Orders; and not above standing for the Degree of Doctor in Divinity; not possessed of any such Preferment as would vacate the Headship, if it were full; or who will resign it. This Rule may vary in the First Instance, if the Chancellor will be so good as to grant to the present Principal, in consideration of his Services to the Society, the Appointment of his Successor.

Upon the Vacancy of the Headship, the Vice-principal in Person, or One of the Tutors deputed by him, shall immediately wait upon the Chancellor Himself, if he be in
C England,

England, or upon his Delegacy, if he be not; and acquaint him or Them, that the Headship of Hertford College is vacant by the Death, Cession, or Amotion of the late Principal of the said College, and receive a Voucher of his Message in these Words: “ This pre“ sent — Day of — in the Year of our “ Lord — Mr. — of Hertford College
 “ certified to Me, (or to Us), that the Head-“ ship of the said College was vacant by the “ Death, Cession, or Amotion of — the “ late Principal of the said College”; and shall lodge a Copy of the said Voucher in the Hands of the Dean of Christ Church.

Within a Month after the Vacancy of the said Headship shall have been thus certified to the Chancellor Himself, if he be in England; or within Three Months after the said Vacancy shall have been thus certified to his Delegacy, if he shall be beyond the Seas; the said Chancellor or his Delegacy shall signify His or Their Nomination of a Principal so qualified as above-mentioned to the Dean of Christ Church, (to whom, in failure of such Nomination of a Person so qualified within such Time, the Right of Presenting to the said Headship, for that Turn, shall lapse) to be admitted by Him, or, in his Absence, by His Representative within a Week after such Nomination is signified, or such Right of Presentation is lapsed.

If, at the Time of the Vacancy, there shall be no Student of Christ Church so qualified as above-mentioned, the Principal, for that Turn, shall be nominated by the said Chancellor, or his Delegacy, out of the Four Senior Fellows or Tutors of Hertford College.

The Principal, at the Time of his Admission, shall make a Latin Speech to the Society in the Common Refectory; take the Oath prescribed by the Statutes; proceed from his Seat in the Common Refectory to his Seat in the Chapel; and having read the First Service in his Seat, and the Second at the Communion Table, receive the Sacrament himself, and give it to the whole Society then resident.

When the Sacrament is over, the Dean of Christ-Church, or his Representative, attended by the Tutors of the College, shall conduct him into the Lodgings of the former Principal, and give him Possession of those also.

Concerning EXERCISES.

BY Exercises are meant

Undergraduates shall not begin to dispute publickly in the College till Easter Term, in the Second Year of their Tuition.

All Persons subject to Disputations shall take their Turns of being Respondents and Prior Opponents, beginning with the Two Seniors, of whom the Senior shall be Respondent, the Junior Opponent.

At the End of every Term, All the Questions to be disputed upon, the Term following, shall be given out with the Names of the several Respondents and Prior Opponents affixed to their respective Questions; to the end that every Person being aware at what time he shall be required to Respond or Oppose, may attend to perform his Duty, or, being unavoidably hindered, may get some other Member of his Class to exchange that Turn with him.

Notwithstanding the Absence of Either or Both of those Persons who were regularly to have Responded or Opposed, the Disputations shall proceed, the Moderator substituting a Respondent, whom he shall think fit, for the present Occasion. And if but One Person of the Class appear, the Moderator shall order Him to Respond or Oppose, and Dispute with him.

And, that this Exercise may be performed with the greater Pleasure and Benefit, Enquiry shall be made at the End of each Term, What Public Exercises Any of the Society are to do in the Schools the Term following, that the Moderator may order those Questions to be first Disputed upon in the College, which are afterwards to be Disputed upon in the Schools. Bachelors of Arts, shall never Dispute upon Philosophical Questions in the College, except on These Occasions, but Theological.

The Respondent and Opponent shall each of them, by way of Introduction to the Disputations, premise something relating to them in certain Speeches commonly called Supposition and Opposition Speeches : Which shall shall not be bare Transcripts out of Philosophical or Theological Books; but the Former a short State of the Question, shewing in what respect the Question is true, in what false, with the Application of such Distinctions as are to be met with in those Books which treat of the Question to be Disputed upon; the Latter an Elusive Speech, treating plausibly of the Other Side of the Question, the known Part of a Declamitant who holds the Wrong Side of the Thesis; Unless the Question be such as may be well supported by good Arguments on both Sides.

THEMES, DECLAMATIONS, TRANSLATIONS, NARRATIONS.

The Undergraduates shall every Week in Full Term make a Theme, or a Declamation, or a Translation.

The Theme shall always be an English Composition, that the Youth of the Society may learn to write and speak their own Language readily and properly; the English Language being that wherein they will chiefly have Occasion to Converse, to Correspond, and to Preach.

Undergraduates shall not Declaim the First Year. They shall Declaim in English the Second and Third Years, and in Latin the Fourth.

The Translation shall be either from English into Latin, or from Latin into English.

The Portion of English assigned them to turn into Latin shall be in some English Book that is well written both for Matter and Stile.

The Portion of Latin assigned them to turn into English shall be some Speech, Story, or Description in some Classic Author; or an Epistle in Cicero or Pliny, or whatever else the Vice-principal shall think proper.

At the End of every Term, these Exercises shall be set for the Term following. And Every Saturday in Term shall be Appropriated to the Making, publickly Reading, or Speaking; and to the Hearing, critically Examining, and Correcting the Weekly Compositions.

The Undergraduates shall make these first in certain Paper Books, which they shall provide and set apart for this Use only; that therein the Principal or Tutors may, at any time, see the Pains of the Composers, their Way and Method of Working, and with what Judgment any Thoughts or Expressions are by them Chosen or Rejected.

At

At Four in the Afternoon of Every Saturday in Full Term, Each Undergraduate shall attend his Tutor with his Weekly Exercise, (whether it be a Composition or Translation) written fair from the Composition Book wherein it was first made ; when his Tutor, if he wholly approve of it, shall return it to him to be Read or Spoken before the Society on the Saturday Morning following ; or, finding Faults in it, shall, after he hath shewn those Faults to his Pupil, keep the said Exercise by him till the Saturday Morning following, when it is to be publickly Read or Spoken, in order to see whether the Faults before found in it are then corrected or not.

And as More and Juster Thoughts than at the Beginning of the Week occurred, may, by the latter End of it, by intermediate Conversation and Reflection be suggested to the Composer, after he shall have once considered and written upon his Subject, to the great Improvement of his Composition ; so likewise more Proper, Elegant, and Beautiful Expressions, than many of those which the Translator had at first made use of, may afterwards be furnished out to him by the English or Latin Author he is always supposed to be perusing, to the great Embellishment of his Style.

When

When any Undergraduate shall write Latin correctly and with Purity, he may be directed to translate a Portion of English or Latin into Greek, or any Other useful Language.

Each Undergraduate's First Exercise of each Kind shall be laid up, in order to be compared with the Last he shall make at the End of the Year, that his Year's Improvement may appear.

The Absent shall be obliged to the Performance of these Exercises as well as the Resident; and, having the Subjects transmitted to them, shall publicly Declaim, and Read their Themes and Translations on the First Saturday after their Arrival.

If any Undergraduate, having a Genius to Poetry, shall choose to make Verses, instead of the Theme or Translation required of him, he may be indulged this Liberty, if the Principal shall think fit, and it shall not be found to draw off his Mind from serious Studies.

Bachelors of Arts, for the First Six Terms which they aim to keep towards their Master's Degree, shall read in the College, as an Exercise of the House, the Six Solemn Lectures, (One every Term) which are afterwards to be read by them in the Schools as an

an Exercise of the University for the said Degree; and, in every of the Other Terms to be kept for the said Degree, they shall make, and publickly Speak or Read a short Sermon upon a Text of Scripture assigned them by the Principal. Without the Performance of this Exercise they shall neither keep the Term, nor receive a Testimonium for Orders, nor have an Instrument of Leave to go to Another House.

Narrations, or Recitals of celebrated Speeches or other beautiful Portions of Classic Authors shall be the proper Exercise of Two Undergraduates every Week in their Turns, instead of the Theme or Translation otherwise required of them.

COLLECTIONS.

On the First Day of Hilary Term, Each Class of Undergraduates shall give in to the Principal the Names of Four Classic Authors which their respective Tutors have appointed them to Read, and to make Collections out of for the current Year.

These Collections, consisting of such beautiful Expressions or Reflections as the Reader Admires; or of such difficult and obscure Passages as he Explains; or of such Characters of Persons, or Descriptions of Actions as he thinks worthy of Imitation; or of such Geogra-

Geographical or Chronological Remarks as appear to him Material; or of whatever else he conceives either useful for himself to Remember, or to Impart to others, shall on every Thursday be shewn to his Tutor, and at the End of the Year to the Principal, that thereby his Industry, and Accuracy, and Penetration, and Learning may be seen.

And whereas Two Undergraduates are every Week, in their Turns, obliged to read certain Chapters of the Holy Scriptures in the Hall or Chapel, and to subject themselves afterwards to be Examined therein by the Principal, or any of the Tutors, they shall every Day before Dinner and Supper, lay upon the Tutor's Table fairly written Explanations of all such Difficulties in the Chapters by them respectively read, as in their Opinion wanted to be Explained, and were well accounted for by such Commentators as their respective Tutors had on this Occasion recommended to their Perusal. And this Exercise well performed shall be accepted instead of the Weekly Exercise otherwise required of them.

Of the Power and Duty of the
P R I N C I P A L.

TH E Principal, as often as any of the Tutors shall go off, shall have the sole Nomination of Others to succeed them.

The Principal shall choose his Tutors, from time to time, out of such Persons as have had their Education under his Own Eye, in his Own House; whom he hath long observed to have behaved themselves with remarkable Diligence, Sobriety, and Temper; to have good Parts, and to have made Improvements suitable to those Parts, and to their Standing in the University.

And, that the Principal may be the more at Liberty to choose the Tutor whom he shall in his Conscience best approve; He shall not concern nor interest himself in the Election of any Candidate for a Fellowship, or Scholarship, or Preferment, or Office of any kind in any Other House; nor any other way invite or encourage any Application to be made to Him for any Fellowship, or Studentship, or Preferment, or Office, with the Disposal of which he is intrusted; nor shall he solicit <sup>(a)</sup> the Vote or Interest of any Member of Convocation in Elections to be made, or Degrees given, or Favours bestowed by that Body; nor Promise (b) his Own Vote or Interest to or for any Person on any of these Occasions.

If there shall be None of This House, or who have formerly been of This House, who shall by Him be thought worthy of being Tutors (which God forbid); or if those whom he shall think Worthy, shall, by reason of other Views more advantageous to them, refuse to be so, the Principal shall be at Liberty to choose his Tutors out of Any House, or out of those who have been of Any House, in either University.

If the Time limited for a Tutor's going off will expire, or he shall quit, resign, or make void his Office of Tutor within less than Half a Year after the Choice of a New Principal, the said Principal may, for some time not exceeding Half a Year after such Voidance, perform the Duties of Tutor and Officer of the House, as well as That of Principal, and receive the Revenues of the same for so long a Time as he performs the said Duties; to the end that, in the mean while, he may acquaint himself with the Persons and Characters of the Members of his Society, and be better enabled to make choice of a Proper

(b) Appendix, N<sup>o</sup>. III.

Tutor to succeed in the Vacancy, after such time not exceeding Half a Year shall be expired.

And if Two Tutors shall, after the same manner, go off, as is above described, the Vice-principal (or the Senior Tutor, if the Vice-principal be One of those Two) shall perform the Duties of the Second, as the Principal does of the First, and receive the same Consideration for so doing.

The Relations of the Principal, or of his Wife, if he be married, even to the Fourth Remove inclusive, shall not be capable of being promoted to be Tutors, let their Abilities be what they will, without the Consent and Recommendation of the Visitor well knowing or sufficiently certified, that the Relation applying to him for his Consent, hath Proper Abilities for this Purpose.

The Principal shall have the Nomination of the Assistants, as well as of the Tutors; and guide himself in the Choice of them by the same Rules; and shall appoint Two of them to the Assistance of Each Tutor, and direct in what Particulars they shall assist him.

The Principal shall also have the sole Power of Choosing, Admitting, and Displacing all the Servants of the College, of what Kind

Kind or Denomination soever, and may employ them as his Proper Servants, whenever their Attendance on the Common Duties of the House, as College Servants, is not Required by the Statutes, or may reasonably be Dispensed with.

It is the Natural, and shall be the Indispensable Duty of the Principal to see, that All the Members of his Society do their Duty faithfully and effectually in their respective Stations.

To this end, he shall Send for, as he sees Occasion, or Visit in their Chambers All the Members of the Society, particularly the Students of the House; shall give Notice to those who have the Care of them, of any Idleness, Irregularity, or Ill-manners which he may then, or at any other Time, have observed; shall privately and affectionately Admonish the Tutors themselves upon any Neglect of their Duty, as Tutors, or Officers of the House; and if any Tutor, after such Admonition, shall continue Remiss in his Duty, He shall Admonish him a Second Time before the Rest of the Tutors; and if this Admonition have not the good Effect intended, He shall Remove him not only from his Offices, but from the Society also.

To the same End He shall occasionally be Present at the Performance of any of the Exercises

Exercises of the House, as often as He shall think fit, as well to Commend what is well performed, as to express his Dislike of what is done negligently and perfunctorily.

And to the same End also shall he Once a Fortnight in Full Term, or oftener, if he find it convenient, call a Meeting of the Tutors at his own Lodgings; and there, with the utmost Freedom, Affection, and Friendship, confer and consult with them about Matters relating to the Honour and Interest of the Society; debate what is Prudently to be done in all Emergencies; and concert, as there is Reason, what Penalties to inflict, what Excuses to accept, what Allowances to make, what Favours to grant in all Cases not provided for by these Statutes; to the end that what shall be thought fit to be observed by the Principal and Tutors may be then Agreed to be observed Equally by the Principal and All the Tutors; that the Conscience of Duty may not expose One to unjust Censure, nor the Affectation of Popularity recommend Another to undue Applause; but that what is done by One may be esteemed to have been done agreeably to the Opinion of All; and that every One of them thus united to each Other in the Support of the same Uniform Discipline, may equally share the Affection of those they Govern, and equally bear the Blame of any Errors in Government.

And tho' a General Care, that every Member of a Society do his Duty in his respective Station, may be thought to be a sufficient Employment of itself, for the Governor of such Society ; yet, that He, who is to be the Exaëtor of Duty from Others, may always be induced to put the justest Constructions upon what Others do in the way of their respective Duties, by the constant Experience of the Weight of some particular Duty of his Own ; that He, by accurately discharging this his Own particular Duty, may excite Others to the Discharge of Theirs with the same Exaëtness ; that Others may with greater Cbearfulness perform the several Tasks allotted to them, when they shall find their Governor mixing with them as their Fellow-labourer, and concerned to lessen Their Toil, by taking a Part of it upon Himself ; and lastly, that there may be a Necessity both of his being a Scholar Himself, and of his having frequent Opportunities of discovering what Improvements in Scholarship are made by those under his Care ; it shall be the Proper Duty of the Principal on Thursday in each Week of Full Term, to be the Lecturer of a Public Lecture to the whole Undergraduate Part of the Society in some Greek or Latin Author.

Moreover, the Principal, if he Delight in the Education of Youth, and it shall be made Worth his while to read to One Pupil only, as his Proper Tutor, shall have the Liberty, notwithstanding the Limitation of the Number of Undergraduate Students to be Educated in this College at one time to Thirty-two, to take upon him the Care and Education of One Pupil only, and of no more. And such Pupil, at any time so taken Care of, and educated by the Principal, shall not be considered as One of that Number, tho' he shall, in all respects, be subject to the same Rules.

The Principal shall be the perpetual Burser of the College; and, assisted by a Clerk or Secretary, shall make up his Accounts Twice in Each Year: The Account for the Half-year ending at Michaelmas, in the First Week of Michaelmas Term: The Account for the Half-year ending at Lady-day, in the First Week of Easter Term. At these times he shall have all the Tutors Hands to the said Accounts, attesting the Justice and Punctuality of the same: And shall moreover cause a Transcript of the said Accounts to be made half-yearly, as a Duplicate thereof, to be kept in the Archives of the College.

The Principal, as Burser, shall not pay any Money on the College Account, without receiving a Voucher for the same. He shall fairly transcribe, or cause to be fairly transcribed all Bills, (after he shall have Examined mined and Adjusted them), and take Receipts at the Bottom of the said Bills, in a Book set apart for that Use, and to be referred to from the General Account of Receipts and Disbursements. And all Creditors, in their Receipts, shall mention, in Words at Length, the particular Sum paid to them, which shall always be the Whole of the Bill, when adjusted, without any Deduction for Poundage to the Burser, who is considered for his Trouble another way, and without any other Abatement, than that of the Fractions of a Penny.

On what Accounts the Principal shall be removed from his Headship.

IF the Principal shall be Instituted, Colated, or Elected to, or enter upon, or possess himself of, Accept, Have or Injoy any Cure of Souls, or Sine-cure; any Lecture-ship, or Professorship of any kind, either within the University or out of it; any Deanry, or Bishoprick; any Second Dignity in any Church or Churches; or any One Dignity, Preferment, or Employment either Spiritual or Temporal, which doth Require or Suppose his Residence as Necessary in any Other Place than in his Own Society, in any Part of the Time of Full Term, when, by the Statutes, he is obliged to be Resident in the said Society, his Headship shall be, ipso facto, Void.

If

If the Principal shall receive any Previous or Subsequent Consideration in Money, or any thing valued by him equally with Money, for the Promoting, or for the having Promoted any Person to be a Tutor in his Society ; or to the Office of Clerk, or Secretary to the Principal ; or of Butler, Cook, Brewer or Baker ; or to any other Office relating to the said Society ; his Headship shall be, ipso facto, Void.

If the Principal shall Neglect to Reform what the Visitor shall at any time have Admonished him of as Irregular, either in his Government of the Society, or in his Private Life ; or shall have been guilty of any thing so Heinous in either respect as to Deserve to be removed without any Admonition preceding ; and the Visitor shall be from thence induced to pronounce his Headship void ; his Headship from that Moment shall be Void.

*Of the Duty, Power, and Privileges of

TH E Tutor shall instruct his Pupils for an Hour at a time in One Class. For the First Year, he shall instruct them in Classical and Theological Learning ; and Exercise them every Day, (for a greater or less Portion of the Day, as their Deficiencies in School Learning shall be found greater or less) either in Translating Latin into English, or English into Latin, two different Ways ; or English Translations from the pure Latin Writers into Latin again, without the Sight of the Originals ; and in afterwards Comparing the same with, and Correcting the same by the Originals ; and likewise in Translating Greek into Latin, without the Help of Latin Versions : For the Three next Years, in University Learning, not Exclusive of Other : For the Three several Weeks immediately preceding Christmas-day, Easter-day, and Whitsunday, in Divinity Proper to those Seasons : For the several Vacations of the Year, in Whatsoever the Tutor shall think useful to them,

In consideration however, that Few Students will Reside here during the several Vacations of the Year, and that the Tutors,

who have been upon strict Duty all the rest of the Year, will, at those times, want, and ought to have a Relaxation from Business, Two Tutors may have Leave to be Absent One half of the several Vacations, and Two more, the Other. And it shall always be sufficient, that One of the Residing Tutors do, Once a Day, in the several Vacations, and in those Weeks immediately preceding Christmas-day, Easter-day, and Whitsunday, instruct All the Undergraduates that shall at those Times Reside, in One Class.

The Tutor, before his Pupils are summoned to Lecture, and consequently, before it be known Who, or whether Any of them will be Absent from it, shall always Order in Writing such an Exercise to be made by those who shall miss Lecture, as he shall think a Proper Penalty for this Neglect. If None shall be Absent, the Order shall remain with him till another time; if Any, their Names shall be written under it, and carried to the Principal, who will thereby be informed of the Neglect, and exact the Penalty incurred, The same Rule shall be observed by the Catechist, Evening Lecturer, and Moderator, with regard to Persons absenting themselves from Catechetical or Evening Lectures, or Disputations.

The Tutor, before he enter upon an Explication of the Present Lecture, shall always examine his Pupils as to what they Remember and Understand of the Former. He shall then direct his Pupils to Read, and to Explain, as well as they can, what they read of their next Lecture to Him; and He, as they go along, and as there is Occasion, shall make his Remarks, and Descant upon what is read, and clear the Difficulties that occur.

And, whereas Declamations, or Themes, or Translations, are required every Week in Full Term, of Persons under Tuition, it shall be the constant Duty of the Tutor to Read the said Exercises to his Pupils, and to Criticize upon them.

And forasmuch as young Men, left to themselves, may be apt too long to defer making the said Exercises thus required of them, and then finding themselves straitened in Time, may be forced to make them in a Hurry, and with less Accuracy than will be expected of them, or can tend to their Improvement, it shall also be the Duty of the Tutor, on Every Saturday, to Peruse their Composition Books, and the fair Transcripts from them, and accurately reading their Translations of English into Latin, or of Latin into English, shall observe to them with respect to the Former, what Expressions are not Grammatical, what Words not Classical, where the Latin is not Full, and where not Clear: And, with respect to the Latter,

where they have mistaken the Sense, or not approached the Spirit, or not expressed the Image of the Author they translate from ; as also, where the Language they translate into, is either stiff, affected, and obscure ; or low, mean, and vulgar ; or not well supported by the Authority of the best Writers of the English Language.

Or, if the Exercise be a Theme or a Declamation, the Tutor shall observe to them, as he sees Occasion, what Thought is not Just ; what may be Improved, and How ; what may be so managed as directly to Prove the Thesis, what only to Illustrate it ; what will Shine, if it be well laboured ; what no Labour will Polish ; and, in what Order One Thought will best follow Another, so as to make the Discourse Easy, Natural, and Connected. And so many of these Exercises, when they are collected on Saturday Morning following, as the Principal shall not think fit to peruse, shall again be read by the Tutor that Day ; that he may see what Improvements have been made, upon the Instructions before given ; and that what Faults do still remain may be shewn to the Composers before they Finish any new Composition.

And, whereas all Persons under Tuition are, in their Turns, obliged to read the Lessons for the Day, it shall always be the Duty

Duty of the Tutor to the Pupil reading, to remind him afterwards of his Mistakes; and, according to the Degree of his Deficiency, to take more or less Pains with him in Private Exercitations of this Kind.

The Tutor also shall frequently Visit his Pupils in their Chambers; shall Inspect their Studies; shall direct them in proper Methods of Studying, that they may not give in to a desultory, wandering, fruitless Application; shall discourage them from reading light, vain, trifling, prophane, and unprofitable Books, to the Loss of their Time, and of their Innocence; and particularly, on every Thursday of Full Term, after the Public Lecture is over, shall see and note the Progress they have made in their Collections out of those Authors which he had directed them to read for the Present Year; and shall Punish any Idleness, or Intemperance, or improper Conversation, he shall in these Visits, or at any other time, observe.

Each Tutor shall have the same Authority over All Persons subject to him, whether as Tutor, or Officer of the House, or Subordinate Governor of the Angle in which he presides, as the Principal himself hath; and the same Deference shall be required by, and paid to him.

Each

Each Tutor (with the Consent of the Principal) shall appoint to his Pupils, as they come to the University, what Traders they shall deal with for Necessaries; and tho' they may be allowed to purchase, with Ready Money, what, from time to time, they shall have Occasion for, of whomsoever they please, lest any particular Trader, conceiving them under a Necessity of Dealing with Him only, should be induced to impose upon them; yet shall they not contract any Debts with any other Persons than those who shall be thus appointed by their Tutor; nor yet with Those, without their Tutor's Knowledge and Consent (<sup>a</sup>); under the certain Penalty Of not being able to keep any Portion of any Academical Term towards their intended Degree, from the Time of the Discovery of such Debts, till such Debts shall be truly and fully paid; and Of Dismission from the Society, if any Debt above the Value of Five Shillings, shall be found to have been contracted by them with any Person keeping a Coffee-House, or Cook's-Shop, or any Other Public House whatsoever. And if any Trader appointed by the Tutor, and allowed by the Principal to be dealt with for Necessaries as above, shall be found to have given Credit to any Student or Scholar under Tuition, without the Knowledge and Consent of the Tutor or the Principal as above, the Tutor shall recall his Appointment, and the Principal prohibit the Society from dealing with him for the future, as an Enemy to the College, and to the University, and as an Invader of the Interest that Parents have in the Statute of this Realm, forbidding Credit to be given to Minors.

The Tutor also shall insist upon it, that no Pupil under his Care do contract any Intimacies with Tradesmen, or their Families; nor accept of Invitations to their Houses, nor introduce them to Entertainments at his Chamber; but that he content himself (whilst he is under Tuition at least) with this Degree of Friendship towards them, To continue to make use of them whilst they deal Honestly with him, and to pay them Duly what he owes them.

The Quarterly Allowance to Scholars under Tuition shall always be returned into the Hands of their Tutor, who having first discharged their Debts to the House, and afterwards Those contracted agreeably to his Appointment, and with his Approbation, shall give the Remainder <sup>(b)</sup>, or a Portion of it, to his said Pupils, accordingly as he shall be satisfied of their Discretion to manage the Whole of the Remainder, or a Part of it only.

Since the Tutors are made subject to the Admonition of the Principal, as He himself is to that of the Visitor, and may be Removed by the Principal, as He himself also may by the Visitor, they shall not in the mean time be subject to any Pecuniary Mulcts, or Other Penalties or Forfeitures whatsoever, except such as they must bona fide inflict upon themselves for Absence in Term-time; both because Persons intrusted with their Important Care, ought never to be supposed to be wanting in any Part of their Duty, without a sufficient Reason; and because Penalties upon Tutors, bearing Resemblance to Those inflicted upon Others, may tend to depreciate them in the Eyes of their Pupils, who ought to have the greatest Veneration for them.

And, whereas the Senior Fellows or Tutors of this Society must retire from it when they shall be of Eighteen Years Standing in the University from their Matriculation, and may possibly, at such time, be unprovided of a Proper Subsistence in the Way of their Education, there may be Given to the Society, or Purchased by it, Six Rectories or Vicarages, of the Value of One hundred Pounds a Year Each at the least, to Any of which, as any of them shall become Vacant, the Senior Tutor not already provided with a Living, or not provided with a Living of equal Value with that which is become Vacant, shall be Presented by the Principal, the sole Patron thereof, on condition he first Vacate the Living he already hath, and Promise to Relinquish This also upon his Acceptance of any Other Preferment. For these Livings being Given or Purchased with this Intent only, that those Persons, who have been Diligent and Faithful Tutors and Officers of the Society, might not be wholly destitute of a Maintenance when they should be obliged to leave it, it is not proper they should be tenable with any Other Preferment, lest they should not so often become Vacant as there might be Occasion for them. By the Senior Tutor is always to be understood, not the Senior in Office, as the Vice-Principal, at the time of the Vacancy, may be ; nor yet the Senior in Age, or Standing in the University ; but the Person who earlier became a Tutor in the Society than Any of the Rest. And such Senior Tutor, having continued in this Office till he was of Eighteen Years Standing in the University, from his Matriculation, and faithfully and conscientiously discharged the Duties of it, shall be entitled to the Principal's next Presentation, even after he shall have left the Society, until he shall be provided with a Benefice, or some other Spiritual Preferment of equal Value to what he enjoyed in it. If a Senior Fellow or Tutor shall refuse the Vacant Living, a Junior Fellow or Assistant shall be Presented to it.

On what Accounts a TUTOR shall be Removed before the Time limited for his going off shall expire.

A Tutor shall be removed on the Account,

1. Of Neglect in the Execution of his Duty, according to the Statutes, after he shall have been Twice Admonished of the said Neglect by the Principal.

2. Of Marriage; a Twelvemonth after such Marriage, if the Day of Marriage be certified to the Principal within a Week after the Solemnization thereof; otherwise, the Day on which it can be Proved.

3. Of Institution to a Cure of Souls; a Twelvemonth after such Institution, if the Day thereof be certified to the Principal within a Week after it is received; otherwise, the Day on which it can be Proved.

4. Of Promotion to any Dignity, Preference, Office, or Employment in the Church, or Elsewhere, requiring or supposing such Residence, or such Care in Another Place as shall be inconsistent with the Residence or Care required and supposed in This; a Twelvemonth after such Promotion, if the Day

Day thereof be Certified to the Principal within a Week after it is accepted; otherwise, the Day on which it can be Proved.

5. Of Institution to a Second Cure of Souls, ipso facto.

6. Of Promotion to a Second Dignity, Preferment, Office, or Employment, ipso facto.

S E C T. VIII.

The Office of VICE-PRINCIPAL.

THE Vice-Principal shall Preside, with the Authority of Principal, in every Place where the Principal doth not appear (except in those Places where any Other Officer is executing his Proper Office); as shall the Senior Tutor that is present, where the Vice-principal doth not appear.

Upon the Death, Cession, or Removal of the Principal; He shall notify the same to the Chancellor, or to his Delegacy, in Person or by a Deputy; and shall exercise the Authority of Principal in the same Manner as he was used to do in the ordinary Absence of the Principal, till a Successor be Chosen and Admitted.

At the End of every Term he shall give out the Roll of Exercises to be composed by the Undergraduates the Ensuing Term; and shall every Saturday Morning, immediately after Prayers, Collect the same as they become due, and Distribute them to the several Tutors, to be Critically read by them the same Day to their respective Pupils.

He

He shall also Propose Graces, and (without Fee) Present to Degrees in Arts, and do all Other Business in the Public Schools, with respect to This Society, that is usually done by the Deans of Other Houses with respect to Their Societies.

And, forasmuch as it is incumbent on the Vice-principal, as the Dean of the House, to Present the respective Members of it to their Degrees in Arts, he shall take care that they all perform their Public Exercises in such a Manner as the Statutes of the University do require, and as may most tend to their Own Credit, and That of the Society.

The Office of CHAPLAIN.

THE Chaplain shall begin Prayers at the Time appointed by the Statute, without staying for the Principal, or any Other Person whatsoever.

After he shall have read the First Service, on Sunday and Holiday Mornings, he shall, for a Quarter of an Hour, explain to the Servants of the Society, some Part of the Church Catechism, or instruct them in some Moral Duty.

He shall Assist the Principal in administering the Sacrament; shall Visit the Sick; shall shall publickly Pray for every Person who is so Ill as to be Confined to his Bed, although no danger of his Dying of that Illness be apprehended; shall Confer with the Scrupulous, and Satisfy his Doubts; shall Bury the Dead; and do All the Offices of a Parish Priest to the Society.

No Person shall ever be Buried in the Chapel, nor shall any Monument be ever set up in it. But whoever Dies in the College, and is not removed to the Burying-place of his Family, nor Desires to be Buried elsewhere, shall be Interred in the Ground adjoining to the Chapel, and Consecrated together with it. Where no Stone shall cover the Deceased, a Register shall be kept by the Chaplain, and transmitted to his Successor, of the Situation of the Last Grave.

The Office of CATECHIST.

THE Catechist on every Sunday in Lent Term, at Eight of the Clock in the Evening, shall Instruct the Undergraduates of the Society in the Principles of the Christian Religion; and, on every Sunday in the Other Three Terms of the Year, shall imploy himself, either in Explaining the Articles of the Church of England; or, in Interpreting Difficult Places of Scripture; or, in Settling and Adjusting Controverted Points; or, in Resolving Cases of Conscience; or, in any

Other Exercise in a Catechetical Way, which the Catechist shall Choose, and the Principal Approve of.

The Catechist, at the End of every Term, shall notify to his Auditors what he intends to instruct them in the Term following, and advise them what Books to read in the mean time, that they may, in some measure, be prepared to Answer such Questions as he shall put to them.

All Persons subject to this Lecture, shall, before the next Lecture Day, at a Time appointed by the Catechist, deliver to him, in Writing, such Explications and Remarks, as they remember to have been given, or made by him, in the former Lecture; who shall Reward or Punish any Careful or Perfunctory Collection of such Explications or Remarks.

The Office of MODERATOR.

THE Moderator shall Preside at Disputations Three times in each Week of Full Term; that is to say, at the Undergraduates Disputations on Mondays and Wednesdays, and at the Bachelors Disputations on Fridays, from Four of the Clock in the Afternoon till Five; and shall Reward or Punish any Excellent or Defective Performance of this Sort of Exercise.

At

At the End of every Term, the Moderator shall give out the Set of Questions to be Disputed upon throughout the Term following, having first enquired whether any Bachelors or Undergraduates are to Dispute in the Schools that Term, that, as far as it may be done with Convenience, he may order their Questions to be first Disputed on in the College.

The Office of SUBORDINATE GOVERNOUR.

THE Subordinate Governour of the Angle over which he Presides, shall Enquire into and Punish all Disorders that shall be Committed in it; and shall Visit all the Apartments thereof, with the Conveniences and Appurtenances thereto, as well to Observe whether they are well taken care of by the Servants, as to Secure that they be not Applied to any Improper Use by the Students of the College.

S E C T. IX.

Concerning R E S I D E N C E.

AS the Undergraduate Students of the Society are, by this Scheme of Education, obliged to strict Residence in Term-time, under the Penalty of Twelve-pence a Day, for every Day they shall be Absent in Any Term, that they may not lose the Benefit of the Public and Private Lectures; so shall the Principal, and Tutors, and Assistants themselves be obliged to the same Residence, under the same Penalty, that they may be always ready to bestow upon them That Benefit; And, that a Reasonable Occasion of Absence may not, either by the Principal, or Tutors, or Assistants, be at any time Pretended, the most Necessary shall not exempt them from this Penalty: But, as the Principal and Tutors have the Power, and it is their Duty to execute the said Penalty upon Others, so shall they bona fide inflict it upon Themselves; and the same shall be put into the College Stock, and accounted for with other Public Money.

And, that the Quantity of their respective Penalties may the more easily be computed, and many other Ends of Discipline the better served, the several Members of the Society, as well Principal, and Tutors, and Assistants, as Others, shall, in a Register kept for that purpose, Certify the Days of their Going from the Society, and of their Returning to it. Nor shall any Undergraduate or Batchelor of Arts be in Commons, or keep any Part of any Academical Term, till he shall have thus Certified the Day of his Return. Nor shall any Person, of what Degree or Quality soever, at any time go out of Town without the Leave of the Principal or of the Vice-principal; and of his Tutor also, if he be under Tuition (in which Case the Leave of the Tutor is to be first ask'd); without incurring the Penalty of Twelve-pence a Day, for every Day he shall be Absent without Leave, or of Double that Penalty in Term-time, if he be an Undergraduate.

S E C T. X.

Of B E H A V I O U R.

IT is Injoined, That no Person be continued a Member of this House, whose Irregular, Immoral, or Irreligious Behaviour in it shall render the Methods of Education described in these Statutes Fruitless to Himself, and his Conversation Dangerous to the Rest of the Society: And that the Principal and Tutors be watchful to observe the First Steps which young Men take to any Evil Habits, and endeavour, by proper Reprehensions and Penalties, to prevent their Ruin.

That the Principal and Tutors be very careful to Avoid all those Irregularities Themselves, which it will be their Duty to Reprove or Punish in Others under their Care, lest a Consciousness of their Own Defects should make them slow to Reform the same in Others; or lest Reprehension or Punishment given by Them to Others, for Irregularities to which they were first Invited by the Example of their Governours, should be received with Contempt, and produce no real Amendment.

That no Person adorned with the Degree of Master of Arts, and thereby exempted from

from the Ordinary Penalties to which Others of inferior Standing are still subject, upon a Presumption that he hath now attained to that Manly Wisdom, and that Habit of Goodness, as no longer to Need the Restraint of any other Law besides That of his own well-instructed and well-disposed Mind, be suffered (a), in the Sight of young Men, to produce so lamentable Fruit of Seven Years Education in this School of Piety and Virtue, as, in all Appearance, to be less Religious, less Sober, and less Observant of the Rules of the House than he was before, because he now thinks he may be so with Impunity.

That every Person desigining to Enter into Holy Orders do signify such his Design to the Principal and Tutors of the Society at least Three Years before he apply to them for

(a) Tho', as hath been said, there be no Place in this College for a Master of Arts, not a Tutor, but by the Principal's Sufferance; yet, since a Master, not a Tutor, may desire to continue in the University after he shall have taken that Degree (whether for the Opportunity of Study and Improvement, or for any Other reasonable Cause) he may, if his past Behaviour hath been acceptable to the Principal and Tutors, be continued a Member of the College, for so long a Time as his future Conduct, now he Is a Master, and especially if he be in Holy Orders, shall be as agreeable to them as it was before. For, otherwise, a Master of Arts, and especially if he hath obtained of them a Testimonium for Holy Orders, and hath thereupon been Ordained, and hath no Dependence upon the College, and now nothing to Fear, is the most dangerous and offensive Member of Society that can well be imagin'd.

a Testimonial of his Diligence, and of his Religious and Virtuous Conversation for Three Years past; and that he do then also receive Directions from the Principal, or from That Tutor who now is, or heretofore was his Proper Tutor, what Course of Theological Studies to pursue; to the End that such regular Notice being given to them, and entered in a Register to be kept for that Purpose, each Candidate for the Ministerial Office may be Aware that his Behaviour will be Inspected; may consequently be the more Careful of it; may also consider the Importance of his Profession, and Qualify himself duly for it; and that the Principal and Tutors having observed his Industry and Improvements, been watchful over his Moral Conduct, reminded him of what hath appeared in it unsuitable to the sacred Character, and perceived the good Effect of their kind Admonitions and Advice, may give their Testimony with Innocence and Satisfaction <sup>(a)</sup>, Or, in case any Person, who hath not given such previous Notice as this Statute doth require, shall, at any less distant time, determine to enter into Holy Orders, upon any just Motive which he had not before, such Person having lived a religious, sober, regular, and studious Life for the Time he hath been a Member of the Society, and especially for the Three Years preceding his Ordination, may receive a Testimonial thereof under the Hands of the Principal and Tutors (the Day on which he first made known his Intentions to them being therein expressed) notwithstanding this Statute,

That the same Respect be shewn to the Principal and Tutors of This House by the rest of the Society that is paid to the Head and Fellows of any other House in the University by its other Members,

That the Tutors of this House have Superiority and Precedence, in every respect, to all Other Members of the Society, however otherwise superior to them in Degree or Standing in the University.

That no Person of a superior Degree Admit into his Company those of an Inferior, unless with a View of Countenance and Improvement to them; and, in this case, that he be Responsible <sup>(a)</sup> for the good Behaviour of those younger Persons, to whom he shall vouchsafe this Honour and Advantage; and submit to the same Penalties which shall be due to Them for the Irregularities they shall be guilty of in His Company.

That no Person keep Company with others, tho' of the same Degree, at a Time when, to his Knowledge, their Attendance on some Duty of the House is Required of them ; or submit to the same Penalty that shall be due to Them for the Neglect of such Duty.

That no Person betray the Confidence reposed in him by the Principal or any of the Tutors, when, at any time, from a Sense of their Duty, and a Concern for his Welfare, they shall adventure to make him Aware of the Mischiefs that may accrue to him by keeping Company with such Members of the House, or of the University, as they think will mislead him by wrong Notions or bad Examples ; under the Penalty of being obliged to Acknowledge, in a public Manner, before the Society, that he hath Betrayed his Friend.

That young Men be taught not to be Ashamed to Own to their Relations or Acquaintance Visiting them in the Uiversity, that they are, at certain Hours, required to be at Prayers, or Lecture, or Disputations, or within the College Gates by Ten at Night ; and that no Avocations of this sort be Admitted in Excuse for the Neglect of any of these Duties ; there being no Doubt, but that, when the Necessity they are under of submitting to the Rules of the Society shall be made known, those who have the greatest Concern for them will be better Pleased, and the House have greater Reputation.

That

That no Member of the Society make any Entertainment either at his Chamber, or any Public House, or Elsewhere, on account of his having done any Exercise in the Schools for a Degree, or on Account of any Degree taken by him in the University; or Treat any Examining Master, or Collector, or Other Officer of the University; or Present any of them with any thing more than their precise Fees prescribed by the Statutes of the said University; or Accept of any Entertainment from any Proctor, or Collector, or Other Officer of the University as such.

That whenever any Member of the Society, not a Master of Arts, shall apply to the Principal for any Favour, or Redress of Grievance, or on any Other Occasion, he do it by an Epistle in English, to the end that, when he shall have taken pains to express the Matter of his Request, or Complaint, in Writing, and reviewed it, he may the better Judge, whether it be Proper to be laid before the Principal or not; and that the Principal also taking Time to consider of what is in this manner laid before him, having such a Remembrancer by him, may not forget it; and withal, that the Person thus applying, being accustomed to this sort of Exercise in These Cases, may perform it upon Other Occasions with the greater Facility and Exactness.

That

That no Person interrupt the Studies, or disturb the Repose of any Other Member of the Society by any kind of Noise in Studying or in Sleeping Hours. That those be esteemed Studying Hours which are between Morning Prayers and Twelve at Noon, and between Two in the Afternoon and Six in the Evening; and those Sleeping Hours, which are between Nine at Night, and the First Bell for Prayers in the Morning.

That every Member of the Society observe a Neatness and Simplicity of Dress; avoiding all sordid Negligence on the one hand, as offensive to Others with whom he shall mix in Conversation, and as too common a Sign of Want of Sobriety, and Diligence, and due Care of himself in other respects; and all Foppishness and Affectation of Finery on the other hand, either unsuitable to his Quality, or Circumstances, or Present Condition in the College, or Intended Station in the World.

That every Member of the Society observe the same Neatness in his Apartment that is required in his Person; and the same Simplicity in his Furniture, as in his Dress. And that no one keep a Dog within the Limits of the College; a Humour ever attended with Defilement of the Rooms, and Damage to the Goods, and Disturbance of the the Society, and with many Other Inconveniencies.

Lastly, to the end that the Statutes of the University, particularly those contained under the Titles De Vestitu & Habitu Scholastico, and De Moribus conformandis, may be the better Observed in the University, by the Members of this House, that the Principal and Tutors of this House have Power to restrain their Own Members from the Violation of any of the said Statutes, by Penalties not exceeding Those prescribed in the said Statutes.

And if hereafter there shall be a Doubt in any Member of the Society, whether what is Injoined or Required by the Principal or any of the Tutors, be Expressed, or Implied in any Statute of this House, or any Statute of the University, such Member shall however for the present Comply with it, till he shall have been Heard by the Principal, if the Injunction came from any of the Tutors; or, by the Visitor, if it came from the Principal; or, coming from any of the Tutors, had not been Considered or rightly Determined by the Principal; and he shall have proper Recompence for so Exemplary a Compliance. But, if, instead of this, any Member shall not Comply with such Injunction, or shall Combine with Others to Oppose it, the obstinate Refuser, if he be Alone, or the Senior of the Faction, if there be a Conspiracy, shall be forthwith Expelled.

S E C T. XI.

EVERY Student at his Admission shall Deposite in the Hands of the Burser Eight Pounds, and every Scholar Four Pounds, both as a Fund, out of which the Provisions, and other Wants of the Society are Weekly to be Supplied, and as a Caution or Security for the Quarterly Payment of their Commons, Battels, Decrements, Chamber-rent, Tuition, Officers Stipends, Servants Wages, Univerfity and Houfe Dues, Pecuniary Penalties, or Forfeitures; and shall discharge all these Articles of Expence within a Month after the Quarter shall expire <sup>(a)</sup>, under the Penalty of not being continued in Commons, and confequently of not keeping any Part of the Academical Term, till they are paid.

The Principal himfelf fhall ftand to Commons during the feveral Terms of the Year, to the Intent that he may the oftener be induced to Dine and Sup with the Society, and have frequent Opportunities to obferve, what Attempts to depart from Any of the fettled Rules of the Houfe fhall at any Time be made, and either Prevent a Difuse of any Statute, or Restore it to its Use before the Irregularity hath become Habitual. And His Commons shall of course be sent up to the Tutors Table, in the same Undivided Joint that contains Their Commons, to the end that, when they shall observe the Principal to Content himself with as Plain a Diet, in as Moderate a Proportion, as any Other Member of the Society, They may find no Difficulty to do so too; and thus avoiding Themselves a Nicety and Expence which are not allowed to Others, Others may be Ashamed to Affect an Elegance or Excess for which they have no Example.

No Student accepting the Indowment, shall exceed the Sum of Six Shillings a Week for Commons and Battels; nor any Scholar Four Shillings and Six-pence.

A Note of the Exceeders shall be laid upon the Tutors Table by the Butler every Saturday before Supper, with the Quantity of the Excess; when the Principal or Vice-Principal shall stop the Name, or limit the Battels of Each Exceeder, for so long a time as shall by Him be thought Necessary, in order to bring the Exceedings of the Last Week into the Stated Allowance of the Next.

Christmas-day, Easter-day, Whitsunday, and the Day of Incorporation of the Society, shall be kept as Festivals, at the Expence of the Members of the College as well Absent as Present; which Expence shall not be greater than of One Shilling and Six-pence to each Member, above the Commons of the Resident Members for the Noon of each Day.

Nothing shall be Dressed in the Publick Kitchen for any Member of the Society, except the Principal <sup>(b)</sup>, but Commons. Nor any More Commons be provided than for the Number Resident.

Saturday and Wednesday Mornings being the Times appointed for the buying in of the Week's Provisions, Whoever shall not have signified to the Steward, before he goes to Market, that he desires to be out of Commons in the Afternoon of either Day, shall be considered as in Commons till Wednesday or Saturday in the Afternoon following. And a List of the Members in Commons at Each Table shall be hung up in the Kitchen on Saturday in the Afternoon, and renewed on Wednesday in the Afternoon.

The Meat to be provided for Commons shall be, in the general, of the Ordinary Kind; the Best of the Kind; in Quantity within a Pound to a Man; in Value not exceeding Three-pence, or the House to be charged with the Excess; of the Same Sort for the same Meal; of Different Sorts for the Two Meals of the same Day. This shall be Dressed in the plainest and most wholesome Manner, and, as far as conveniently it may, be sent up to the several Tables in Joints Undivided.

If any Senior help himself to a Larger Portion of the Joint than is Reasonable, or in an Unhandsome Manner, any Junior at the Table may demand to have the Commons sent up in Messes; when the Senior of the Table, choosing which Mess he will be at, shall determine his Three immediate Juniors to the same; and when also the Junior of each Mess may Divide the Mess, if he pleases (a).

No Commons shall be sent to a Private Chamber, but in case of Sickness intimated to the Principal or Vice-principal, or of Absence from Dinner or Supper with Leave, and for the Absent Person's Own Use. And on these Occasions, the Commons shall be sent from the Table to which the Sick or Absent Person belongs, if the same be sent up in a whole Joint, and from the Kitchen, if sent up in a Joint Divided.

No Commons shall at any Time be sent up into the Hall, without these Two Officers being Present; the Vice-principal, or some Person expressly Deputed by Him, to Preside in the Hall, at the Reading of the Chapters, and during the Times of Dinner and Supper; and the Steward, or some Person expressly Deputed by Him, to Preside in the Kitchen till the Commons are distributed.

Any Member of the Society, being Visited by Strangers not living in the University, may, with Leave from the Principal or Vice-principal, and with Notice given to the Cook, Entertain them with a Commons in the Public Refectory; i. e. not with a Costly Dish of Meat, with sufficient Folly and Affectation called a Commons, but with a Commons of the same Kind and Value with his Own. If Strangers may not have the Curiosity to see with what Simplicity young Students live in this Society, or, Eating always in a more delicate and sumptuous Manner, cannot find it agreeable to them to Accept of so plain and slender a Repast, as the frugal Institutions of this Place have here permitted, any Member so Visited may have Leave not to Refuse to Dine or Sup with them in a Manner they like better, in any other Proper Place, at any Convenient Time; but He shall in no wise Entertain them at his Private Chamber (b).

The Steward attended by the Cook, having first carried a Bill of Fare for the Week to the Principal for his Approbation, shall go to Market with Ready Money; shall buy of whomsoever he pleases at the Market Price; shall see the Meat weighed in single Joints, and distinctly Valued; shall distribute the Commons, for the First Meal of the Week, on Saturday Night; and, for the last, on Saturday Noon following; and shall observe a due Proportion in the Distribution.

The Principal, who hath the Appointment of the Steward, shall, at the End of the Week, read to him the Statutes relating to his Office, and enquire of him whether he hath carefully observed the same. And, receiving an Answer to his Satisfaction, shall sign him a Debentur of One Penny from each Member of the Society (not including the Scholars), whether Present or Absent, to be paid him at the End of the Quarter. Or, not receiving a satisfactory Answer, shall Divert the said Allowance for That Week into the Publick Stock.

(b) See the Folly, and Vanity; and Expence, and Loss of Time in Making Entertainments, and the Thoughtlessness of Persons Accepting them, at Scholars Chambers, set forth in a Pamphlet called, The Expence of University Education reduced, p. 6. &c. Edit. 4.

The Hour of Dinner shall be One, of Supper Seven.

The College Gate shall be shut during the Times of Dinner and Supper.

S E C T. XII.

The Four Middle Rooms in the Middle Staircases of the Four Angles, Value Six Pounds a Year each, together with the Double Garrets over them, Value Four Pounds a Year each, shall be given to the Four Tutors Rent-free.

One Half of Each of these Four Double Garrets shall be the Proper Chamber of Each of the Four Scholars respectively; and the Other Half, the Proper Chamber of Each Servant attending each Tutor respectively.

The Rent of all the Other Chambers shall be for the Maintenance of the Principal.

Every Member of the Society, from the Day of his Admission to the Day of his Leaving the College, shall pay Rent for a Room, whether he Reside or not.

The Rent of the Rooms shall be in proportion to their Largeness and Convenience :

Of

Of the Four Corner Rooms under the Tutors Apartments, not exceeding Six Pounds a Year; Of the Thirty-two of the First and Second Floors, not exceeding Five Pounds a Year; Of the Sixteen Single Garrets, not exceeding Three Pounds a Year.

Every Member of the Society shall have a Chamber to Himself; Lying out of his Own Bed, or Admitting Another to lie with him in his Own Bed, He shall incur the same Penalty as if he had lain out of the College. One Member of the Society shall not permit Another to make use of his Chamber in his Absence, since the Successor is Interested that the Furniture thereof should descend to him in the best Condition.

The Tenant's Expence in New-furnishing an Apartment shall be regulated by the Principal, that no Man's Humour or Vanity may become burdensome to his Successor.

The Tenant, who shall furnish his Apartment anew, shall give in to the Principal's Clerk or Secretary an Inventory of the Goods thereof, with an Account of their Prime Cost. And the Successor in that Apartment, who shall repay him Two Thirds, or, after Six Years Use, One Half of the Prime Cost of such Furniture, shall also give in a Fresh Inventory thereof, that the the Loss or Exchange of any Part of the said Furniture may appear, and his Demand upon the next Tenant be rightly Valued and Adjusted. Or, the Principal having paid the Value of the Thirds, or of One Half, to a Predecessor, and not been repaid the same by a Successor within a Year, may have the said Furniture Appraised, and Dispose of it according to the Appraisement.

When the Value of the Furniture of a Room, at Thirds, or One Half, shall amount to no more than Twenty Shillings, the Principal, paying this Sum to the Tenant quitting the said Room, may dispose of the said Furniture,

The Tenant of an Apartment shall make no Alteration in the Walls, Windows, Doors, Chimneys, Partitions, Ceilings, or Floors thereof (though at his Own Charge), without the Consent of the Principal; who, assisted by experienced Workmen, may Judge whether any Alteration Proposed will take away from the Strength, or Convenience, or Beauty, or Uniformity of the Building.

The Tenant, before he quit his Apartment, shall bring the Key of it to the Principal, and desire to have it surveyed, that what Damage hath been done to any Part of the Building or Furniture, more than might reasonably be expected from the Common Use and Wear thereof, may be Estimated, and Satisfaction made to the House for any Detriment to the Fa-brick, and to the Successor for any Abuse of the Goods.
that

S E C T. XIII.

Of the the Duties of the SCHOLARS.

THE Four Scholars, in their turns, shall summon the Society to Prayers, to Meals, to Disputations, to Public and Private Lectures; and shall bring a Note to the Principal of the Absent Students from every Place of Duty.

They shall also, in their turns, be Officers of the Gate.

So long as the University Statute requiring its Members to repair to their respective Colleges at Nine of the Clock at Night, shall be in force, the Officer upon Duty shall lock up the College Gate every Night at Nine, or as soon as the Great Bell of Christ Church hath done Tolling, and forthwith return the Names of the Absent Members of the Society to the Principal.

As any Member of the Society, now Absent, shall apply to be Admitted between This and Ten, the Time of his coming in shall be Certified in the same Note in which his Name was returned.

At

At Ten the Gate shall be shut up finally (a) for that Night; and the Key be brought to the Principal, to be by him carried up into his Chamber, there to remain till Six in the Morning in Summer, and Seven in Winter, unless any Member of the Society being Sick, shall desire to have the Gate opened at any Intermediate time.

Whoever, being abroad in the Evening, shall not have Applied to be Admitted, or, having Company in his Own Chamber from abroad, shall not have Dismissed the said Company, before the Key be carried in to the Principal, shall be Amerced One Shilling; and for Every One of the said Company not dismissed One Shilling More; and every Other Member of the Society, who shall Receive into his Apartment, Lodge, or Sit up with, or Associate himself to any of the said Company after the Delivery of the Key, shall undergo the same Forfeiture, with such further Penalty of Another Kind, as the Principal shall think this Fault repeated doth deserve.

Any Member of the Society, being within the College, and Refusing or Neglecting to appear Personally to the Officer of the Gate, when he shall apply to his Room to be informed whether he be at Home, or Abroad, shall incur the same Penalty as if he had lain abroad.

The Officer of the Gate shall not suffer any Thing to be brought into the College after the Gate is once locked, nor let in any Person not a Member of the Society, nor let out any Member of the Society, for that Night, without the Principal's Knowledge and Permission.

For These Offices they shall Each of them be Intitled to a Peny a Week from every Member of the Society, whether Present or Absent; and also, to One Half of the Pecuniary Penalties for Absences from the Hall and Chapel; and also, to One Half of the Pecuniary Penalties assigned to the Breach of these Statutes.

S E C T. XIV.

*Of the SERVANTS of the College,
and their several Duties.*

LEST any Member of this House should be so Inconsiderate, as to think it reasonable for him to employ at all Times, and upon all Occasions, the Servants of the Community, as if they were in his Private Service; or that the Condition of Servants is so bad, that they must know no End of their Toil, nor share any Comfort of Life, nor have any Leisure even for the Service of God; or that the Condition of Masters is so happy, or rather so helpless and listless, that they need neither be Willing nor Able to do the least Matter for themselves; the Chief Duties of the Servants of the Community are hereafter enumerated, whilst the more Minute, which it would be too tedious in this place to insert, shall be particularly specified to them by the Principal and Tutors of the Society, at the Time of Entering on their respective Offices, that, if nothing Less than their Duty will be Expected, nothing More may be Demanded of them.

The Principal's CLERK or SECRETARY shall, at the End of Each Quarter, set forth the Demands of the House upon the several Members of it, in certain Notes containing the several following Articles of Expence, for Commons and Battels, Decrements, Chamber-rent, Tuition and Officers Stipends, Servants Wages, University and House Dues, Pecuniary Mulcts. And, upon any Delay of Payment thereof beyond the Time Limited by the Statutes, shall, as the Principal's Attorney, Sollicite and Prosecute for the Recovery of the same. He shall likewise, by the Order of the Principal, lay in the Necessary Stores of Coal, Wood, and Candle, for the Use of the Society at the most convenient Seasons of the Year; and furnish all the Offices with proper Utensils as there may be Occasion; and Supervise the Repairing the Buildings with all needful Reparations; and keep the Inventories of the Furniture of the several Apartments; and settle the Consideration to be allowed for the Use thereof as often as any Members of the Society shall Resign or Exchange their Rooms. He shall also collect of the several Traders and Dealers with the College, and of the several Artists and Labourers employed in the Service of it, their respective Demands upon the Principal, the Perpetual Bursar; and Assist him in making up his Half-yearly Accounts, and in Transcribing the several Bills to be referred to from the Book of Receipts and Disbursements, after the same shall have been carefully Examined and Allowed; and in every Other Matter wherein the Principal shall need his Assistance as an Amanuensis.

The

The BUTLER shall attend in his Office from Eight in the Morning till Nine; from Twelve till Two; from Six till Eight.

He shall Order into his Keeping from time to time such Quantities of Small Beer, Bread, Butter, and Cheese, as shall answer the Occasions of the Society, upon such Agreements, and at such Rates as the Principal and Steward of the Week shall approve of; and shall Issue out the Same, as near as may be, in Equal Measures and Proportions to All.

He shall not deliver out any thing for any Member of the Society without a Note under his Hand, unless to the Servant waiting at his Table, or to the Bedmaker belonging to his Apartment. Nor shall he permit any one to Exceed the Weekly Allowance prescribed by the Statutes, without acquainting the Principal or Vice-principal therewith; nor place any thing to the Account of any Student in the Book of his Office, either for By-Services (a), or Charities (a), or Liberalities of any kind.

The Cook shall go along with the Steward to the Market, and Assist him in buying in the Provisions for the Society; take effectual Loss of which he can give No Account. And, on the Day of such Annual Review, what is Wanting in the Inventory shall be supplied. And Each Member of the Society, whether Present or Absent, (except the Scholars) shall pay a Penny a Week towards supplying Each Office with Proper Utensils.

The BUTLER shall keep the Dining Hall, Buttery and Cellar, and the COOK the Kitchen, Pantry, and Larder, and BOTH the Vessels and Utensils belonging to their respective Offices, neat and clean; and shall Each of them for these Purposes have an Under Servant or Assistant, in their respective Offices, at an Allowance of 4 Pounds a Year Each, to Issue out of their respective Salaries.

The Principal's CLERK or SECRETARY, BUTLER and COOK, shall all of them be considered as the Principal's Domestick Servants; and shall Each of them, for their respective Services to the Society, be Intitled to 4*d.* a Week from every Member of it, whether Present or Absent, (except the Scholars) and be Allowed no Other kind of Fee, Perquisite, or Profit whatsoever.

The BEDMAKERS shall come into the College at Half an Hour after Five in the Morning in Summer, and Half an Hour after Six in Winter, and immediately repair to the Apart-

Apartments of their respective Masters, according to their Seniority, to Light their Fires, and call them up to Prayers; and, after Prayers, proceed, in the same Order, to the Other Parts of their Proper Duty as Bedmakers, till Nine; when they shall be at Liberty to retire to their respective Homes for an Hour. At Ten they shall pursue their Proper Business in the College till Two. At Two they shall be Dismissed from their further Attendance in the College till Six in the Afternoon, when they shall return to finish what remained Undone of their Proper Employment. They shall not continue in the College after Nine at Night.

A Particular of the several Parts of their Duty as Bedmakers, shall be given them when they Enter on this Service; and for the Performance thereof they shall Each of them be Intitled to 7*d.* a Week from every Master, and Bachelor of Arts, and Undergraduate Student, whether Present or Absent, whose Apartments they respectively take care of, and to 4*d.* a Week from every Scholar.

For all Other Services not properly belonging to them as Bedmakers, but permitted however to be done by them as Messengers, when they are at leisure, and their Other Business is done, they shall be Intitled to an Additional Consideration in proportion to the Service they do.

The BEDMAKERS shall not be sent on any Messages or Errands out of the University, nor out of the College in a Morning, unless by the Principal or Tutors; nor spend so much Time with Some of their Masters as to Neglect the Rest; nor be employed in the Affairs of Other Students to the Neglect of their Own Masters; nor, being employed in the Service of the Community, be called off to any Private Service; nor be engaged in any kind of Service which is Illegal, Unstatutable, Immoral, or Otherwise Disapproved by the Principal.

The BEDMAKERS, being discharged from the Private Service of their Masters between the Hours of Two and Six, shall Each of them in this Interval of Time, Weekly and Alternately, be employed in These Services for the Community.

They shall attend at the Public Entrance into the College, or somewhere within the Limits of the College, and within Call, to keep out all Beggars, Fruiterers, Pamphlet Sellers, and other Idle and Vagrant Persons; to Conduct Strangers to the Chambers of the Resident Members of the Society; to receive Messages, Letters, or Parcels for the Absent Members, and to deliver the same to their respective Friends who are Resident, and are known to Correspond with them in their their Absence. They shall busy themselves as they have Leisure, in keeping the Chapel with the Utensils thereof, and the Area of the Quadrangle with the Greens and Borders of Flowers thereto belonging, and all the Vacant Spaces round the Buildings, in a neat and decent Condition. Nor shall the Officer on Duty absent himself from the College without substituting another in his room with Leave from the Principal; nor be sent out of the College on any Errand, unless by the Principal or Tutors, between Two and Six in the Afternoon. The same Officer shall attend at the Gate during the Times of Dinner and Supper. And for these Public Services shall receive 4 d. a Day to be paid out of the Public Stock.

S E C T. XV.

Of the College STOCK, and of the DISPOSAL thereof.

TH E Revenues of the College, from whence the Stock is to arise, shall in no wise be applied to the Increase of the Settled Income and Endowments of the Principal or Tutors; nor be converted to the Private Use of Them or Any of them, in any respect whatsoever; nor at any time be employed to Augment the Endowments of the Students, or Number of the Studentships; or any way to Enlarge either the Income of the Society, or the Society Itself; but shall, from time to time, by the Unanimous Concurrence and Consent of the Principal and Tutors, be applied to the following Purposes, and to No Other.

To the Payment of the College Debts, whether contracted Before the Incorporation thereof, or After.

To the Repairing of the Buildings in a decent, frugal, and effectual manner; but not to the Rebuilding of them in any Other Form, or with Greater Magnificence.

To

To the Incouragement of Sobriety, and Industry, and habitual Regularity in the young Students of the Society.

To the respectful Acknowledgment of Merit in Persons formerly of the College, who shall have written any thing to the Advancement of Religion or Learning, or done any thing of Use to the Publick, or Credit to the Place of their Education.

To the Purchasing the Patronage of Six Rectories or Vicarages of the moderate yearly Value mentioned in the Statute thereto relating, if, in Three Years time after the Society shall be Incorporated, Such Rectories or Vicarages shall not be Given to it.

To the Relieving the Necessity of Persons who behaved themselves well in the Society, whilst they were Members of it, and who, afterwards, having lived a Frugal and a Virtuous Life, are yet reduced to Want thro' Misfortunes. And to this End, a Register shall be kept of every Person going from the Society; and, as far as it may be done with Convenience, of the several Settlements he shall have in the World; that frequent Inquiries may be made How he Fares; What he is Doing; and How he hath maintained his Character since he left the College.

To the more Comfortable Subsistence, from time to time, of Four such Poor House-keepers of the Parish wherein the College is situate, as are known to have lived soberly, and honestly, and peaceably; and to have kept themselves by their Industry from becoming chargeable to the said Parish.

The Principal and Tutors, in disposing of the College Stock, shall observe these Rules,

That All these Occasions of Beneficence be esteemed so far Equal, that That, which first offers itself, be preferred, if there be not a certain Occasion in View, and near at hand, of much greater Consequence.

That, whenever a Proper Occasion offer itself, it be Complied with, if there be Money in the Stock to Answer it.

That, whenever there is a Hundred Pound in the Stock, They Seek out for a Proper Occasion of Employing it, if none shall have Offered itself to them.

That, upon any Extraordinary Occasion, requiring Immediate Compliance, they have Liberty to Borrow such a Sum, as shall not exceed the usual Income to the Stock in one Year,

That,

That, from time to time, they studiously pursue the Good that is before them, without the least Apprehension of any Demand upon them from the Future Necessities of the Society; nothing doubting, but that if, at any time, the College should be consumed by Fire, or destroyed by any Other Accident, which will require a greater Sum to rebuild it than they shall be provided with, a Society, which, upon so many Occasions, shall have been ready to Distribute to Others, will, in a Case so deplorable, find sufficient Assistance from Others.

S E C T. XVI.

Of PENALTIES.

IT is enjoined, That the Violation of these, or of any of these Statutes, be attended with Constant Penalties; a Method, which will take away all Hope of Impunity from the Person Offending; all Imputation of Partiality from the Person Punishing; and effectually procure the greatest Share of Punishment to the Person most Deserving it.

That these Penalties be either Pecuniary Mulcts (a), or Exercises commonly called Impositions, or Confinement within the College, or Removal from the Society.

That Penalties particularly specified be not Exceeded. That the Violation of such Statutes as have no Special Penalties annexed to them, and the Neglect of such Rules of Behaviour, or of such Directions in Study, as are not particularly prescribed by these Statutes, but which from time to time will be found Necessary to be given by the Principal or Tutors in the Course of Education, be attended with such Penalties as the Principal and Tutors shall, in their Discretion, think proper: Provided always, that the

Penalties for Neglect of Exercises be Exercises, or Impositions, as what may best make amends for such Neglect.

That Pecuniary Mulcts despised, or too often Incurred; and Impositions not performed, or not with Care; be changed into Other Penalties which may be more regarded.

That Pecuniary Penalties be put into the College Stock, and accounted for with other Public Money.

SECT.

S E C T. XVII.

Of the S T A T U T E S.

THAT the Statutes of this College may be the better Known and Observed, they shall be Read on the First Day of every Term before the whole Society then Resident, until they shall be made Public.

The Present Principal shall have Power, during his Life, with the Consent and Approbation of the Visitor, and of the Crown, to make such Alterations therein as his Experience shall convince him are Proper to be made.

In the mean time, there shall be taken Three fair Copies of the said Statutes; whereof One shall be laid up with the Charter of Incorporation, and other Writings relating to the Estates of the Society; Another be put into the Hands of the Visitor for the Use of Himself and his Successors; and the Third remain with the Principal.

After the Death of the Present Principal, if not Before, the said Statutes shall be Printed with the Amendments, and made Public; and a Copy of them shall be delivered to each Member of the Society, on the Day of his Admission, to be the Guide of his future Conduct.

Of the VISITOR.

AS the Principal is bound by the Nature of his Trust and Duty, to Observe the Statutes Himself, and to see that every Member of the Society, of what Degree, Age, or Quality soever, do the same; and cannot be hindered, or retarded in the Execution of his Office by waiting the Concurrence of Others to any regular Act of Discipline; so, if He either break the said Statutes Himself; or neglect to inflict on Others the Penalties thereby enjoined; or inflict Greater or Other Penalties than are therein Expressed or Intended; or exercise the Power given him with Partiality or Connivance; or lead an Irreligious or Immoral Life; he shall be subject to the Animadversion and Censure of the Visitor, in Whom, ordinarily, the Right of Interpreting the Statutes of this College, and of Inspecting the Behaviour of the Principal, and of Admonishing, Punishing, or Amoving him from his Office, as he shall find Cause, shall be lodged; and from whose Sentence there shall be no Other Appeal than to the Crown.

And, because Injuries of a Lesser Nature may not seem of that Importance as to Need, or to Warrant the Solemnity of a set Visitation, and even Greater Injuries may oftentimes be too long endured, rather than the Sufferer will put himself to the Trouble, or incur the Odium of making a formal Complaint against his Governour; and few or none will be apt to complain of the Indolence and Inactivity of a Governour, tho' the greatest Injury that can affect a Society is most likely to arise from thence; the Visitor shall be under no Obligation to stay till he is called upon to Regulate what is Amiss, but rather, to prevent all Occasion of Complaint, shall have Power, once every Year, or oftener if need be, in full Term, upon a Day prefixed, in Person or by his Commissary, Professedly to Visit the Society. At what time, He, or the Person Deputed by Him to this Office, having assembled the Society together, shall privately, in a separate Room, enquire of each Member of it, Whether he know of any Statute that is Neglected, or partially Executed by the Principal? And (as the Visitor may have received private Information concerning the Breach of any Particular Statute) He shall ask Particularly, Whether Such a Statute hath been duly Observed? Or, Whether Such a Penalty hath attended the Violation of it? And, according to the Answers he shall receive, Commend or Censure the Principal in the manner he shall think Proper.

And, Whereas the Chancellors of the University of Oxford for the time being have, for above these Four Hundred Years, been successively the Visitors of Hart Hall within the said University, I do here, upon Erecting the same into a College, Invite, Intreat, and Supplicate, first, the right honourable Charles Earl of Arran our present very Worthy, and much Honour'd Lord and Chancellor, and, afterwards, his Successors in that Office for ever, to continue to Protect the Society, and to be the Perpetual Visitors thereof. And I here most earnestly beseech both Him and Them severally and successively, in the Name of God, and as they Value the Peace and Prosperity of this College, and the Public Good, so far as Scholars here Educated in strict Sobriety and Diligence, and from hence transplanted into many Parts of the Kingdom, may contribute to it, Annually to exercise the Power with which they are for these great Ends intrusted by this Statute.

In all Appeals to the Visitor, the Case Stated in Writing, and Agreed by the Parties concerned to be the True State of the Case, shall be laid before him. And, if he shall not be willing to Determine the Matter refer'd to his Arbitration without Advice, he may have the Assistance of any One Eminent Counsel, and charge the said Parties with a reasonable Fee to be given to him for his Opinion.

If the Visitor condescend to Visit the Society in Person, he is to be received in the Manner he shall signify, beforehand, will be most agreeable to him. If he Depute a Commissary to Visit for him, Five Guineas are to be tender'd to such Commissary every Year he shall be Deputed to Visit, and shall Actually Visit, the Society.

A P P E N D I X.

(<sup>a</sup>) IT seems not at all Necessary, that either the Principal, or Tutors, or Students, or Scholars, at their respective Admissions, should take any Oath to observe the Statutes.

The PRINCIPAL, accepting the Headship, and receiving the Revenue of it, knows he is Obliged in Honour and Conscience to do what appears in the Statutes to be his Duty. The Statutes are in English, and now made Publick, and every one that pleases may be certain, Whether he do it or no. He lies open to the Animadversion of the Visitor, whom Malice in Some, or Scruple in Others, may inform, if he do it not. He is Interested in doing it in the best manner; for, otherwise, all the Sources of his Revenue may decay. He may soon have fewer Rents from his Rooms, and fewer Stipends from his Public Lecture, and fewer Payments to his Office of Perpetual Burser. If these Considerations will not keep him steady to his Duty, I am of Opinion, if he had taken an Oath to do it, he would have been Forsworn.

As little Need is there to give an Oath to a TUTOR for this Purpose. He hath the same Obligations upon him to do His Duty, as the Principal himself hath. He hath the same Reproach to fear if he doth it not. The Principal is His Visitor, and upon the Spot to remind him of it, if he neglect it. In the faithful Discharge of the Trust reposed in him as a Tutor, and Officer of the House, his Own Interest is greatly concerned. For, if he be not Faithful in the Discharge of it, the Class of Pupils he is gathering, in his turn, may not be Full, or may Decrease. In either Case, there will be fewer Payments due to him as a Tutor, and fewer as an Officer. The Principal's Interest is not less concerned in this Accident than his Own; for, in proportion as the Tutor's Class shall not be Complete, the Principal's Rooms will not be Filled, and there will be a Failure in the other Sources of his Income. Nor is the Interest of the Rest of the Tutors less concern'd than the Principal's: For, since the Whole Revenue for Tuition and Office is to be equally Divided between All the Tutors, for any Deficiency there shall be in Any Class, there will be the Less to be divided.

And for a STUDENT or SCHOLAR to take an Oath at his Entrance, that He will observe the Statutes, there can be no manner of Occasion, if the Imposing an Oath upon him for this Purpose were Innocent. He cannot have Considered them sufficiently. They are too Numerous to be always in Memory. Even what is Expressed is often overlook'd, and much oftener what is Implied; and Young Men will often break them without Adverting that they do so. To them an Oath to observe the Statutes will be a Snare. Is it not sufficient that there are Penalties thereto annexed, to which, the Student knows, if he breaks them, he must submit? Let the Governour, and Tutor, and Officers, and their Affistants remind him of his Departures from them, as there is Reason, and they have Opportunity. Let him be told, that to be Regular is a thing Serious and Manly, and Exemplary, and Acceptable to his Governour, and Useful to the Society of which he is a Member; and if, after this, he will break the Statutes, let him do it at his Peril.

(<sup>a</sup>) TO Sollicite supposes Men at liberty to do what is desired, which Persons obliged by an Oath to regard the Qualifications of Those who are ambitious of Academical Favours, cannot always be. Again, Sollicitations Comply'd with Intitle Others, in their turn, to Sollicite, when Compliances with Them may be Inconvenient, even to a Degree to make Serious Men very Uneasy: For, in This, as in many Other Cases, Gratitude, in the Struggle with Conscience, hath often been Superior. Besides, in an Age, wherein Electors run into Parties, and Interested Combinations, a College, which hath, with Certainty, no more than Five Votes, can never, by Compliances with Others Sollicitations, become Significant enough to obtain Reciprocal Kindnesses to any of its Own Members: So that a Governour of so small a College can be under no Temptation to Sollicite Others, unless occasionally, thro' pure Zeal for the Advancement of greatly Superior Excellence; which yet, if it will be a Reflexion upon Any Elector, to suppose He cannot Discern, and upon the Univerfity in general, to imagine They will not always Prefer, he will the more easily content himself with Promoting it by his Own Vote.

----- nor Promise his own Vote (b), p. 30.

(b) TO Personal Applications Some Answer is expected to be given. Naturally, one is disposed to say Civil things. Civil things are often Interpreted more favourably than they were Intended; and many Instances there have been of Candidates deceived to their Disappointment, and of Electors charged with having Said more than they ought, if they Meant nothing more than they performed. If, then, Civility, which hath not answered Expectation, hath occasionally deriv'd unworthy Imputations upon Electors never Intending, but rather Abhorring, to do any thing unworthily, what would Failures in real Promises do? And again, if it be considered, how many Ways an Elector, having made a hasty Promise, may be distressed, if he be not Released from it, common Prudence, one should think, would sufficiently secure him from entering into any Such Obligation. But, lest, in some Circumstances, and at some Joyous Moments, he should not have common Prudence, it is safer for him to be under an Obligation not to Promise. For, afterwards it may appear, there are not the Qualifications that were presumed. Or, if there are, they are found to be obscured, or even extinguished by most sad Blemishes in private Life, before unknown. Or, if the Qualifications, such as they are, are still Acknowledged, and the Lustre of them unfullied by any Immorality, or even Suspicion of it, yet, Another presently may appear, whom I may in my Conscience think greatly more Deserving; and more Wanting that his Desert should now be considered; and by Me in particular. Or, if in all Other Respects there be Equality; yet, why should any One by an early Promise preclude himself the Opportunity of doing a thing agreeable to a Father, or a Patron, or a most intimate Friend, by Preferring One to Another, since, there being no Inequality between them, he may do it with Honour?

It hath been Objected, that, if Electors should always keep themselves Undetermined, or never Signify beforehand for whom they did intend to Vote, How should any Candidate for a Vacant Office be able to Compute, Whether he be favour'd with Voices enough to carry, or to be likely to carry, what he contends for, or not? that, if he be not, he may desist in Time, release his Friends from their Attachments, and avoid the Shame of a Defeat.

In Answer to This, let us see, What the Statute concerning Elections doth injoin, and, Whether Computations be within the Intention of the Statute, or Consistent with it.

By the Statute, the Elector swears, that he will Name no one to the Vacant Office, whom he doth not, either certainly know, or firmly believe to be Fit for the same.

Fitness, then, for the Office is required, as Necessary. And no Elector, without certain Knowledge, or firm Belief of Fitness, can, without Perjury, Vote for any One.

The Person known, or believed to be Fit, and recommended as such by his Friends, becomes a Candidate for the Office. But, since the Person, whom Some Electors think fit, Others may not think fit, or may think Another more fit, or equally fit, and be inclined to favour him, this Person becomes Another Candidate, or a Competitor for the Same Office.

It having been observed, that, in Competitions, the Elector, who prefers One to the Other, if this be Known, is in danger of offending that Other, and of deriving upon himself the Ill Will, not only of the Candidate he doth not Vote for, but of Others also who do Vote for him; and is under some Uneasiness, lest, whilst he Votes according to his Conscience, he should create himself Enemies.

For this Reason, the Statute appoints such a Manner of Election, as will prevent its being Known, for, or against Whom Any Elector Votes, and consequently leave the Elector free to Vote according to his Conscience, and without Apprehension that he shall Offend any Body.

The Manner of Election is by a Scrutiny, or Covert Way of taking the Electors Votes. The two Proctors are the Scrutators. Each Scrutator sits at a Table, with a Sheet of Paper lying before him, whereon the Electors, as they approach (as near as may be according to their Seniority), Write, for Whom they Vote. As each Elector hath written, the Scrutator with a Sliding Sheet Covers what he hath written. The Scrutators having collected all the Votes, and imparted to each Other the Number in each Paper for each Candidate, the Senior Proctor pronounces Him Elected who was found to have the Majority, and the Papers are directly burnt. And from this Provision for Secrecy, it is understood that they are not at liberty to say afterwards, for whom Any Elector Voted.

The Electer, then, hath, or ought to have no Other Concern, than to Vote for the Candidate whom he Knows to be Fit, or Believes to be so. Nor hath the Candidate recommended to the University any thing farther to do, than to wait the Issue of the Scrutiny.

The Statute Intending it should not be known, for, or against whom Any One Votes, an Electer, if he will regard the Statute, must not assist towards making any Computation, but is obliged, so far as Himself is concerned, to hinder any Computation from being Possible. And a Candidate is so far from being Warranted by This Statute to make Personal Applications to Heads of Houses, or Fellows of Colleges for their Favour in the approaching Election, that he is thereby Virtually Forbidden to do it.

Such Applications, it is pretended, are Civil Addresses only; and, it is certain, there have been Electors, who, wanting an Excuse for not Voting for such as had Reason

Reason to expect their Votes, have been ingenious enough to resent the Omission. But, since Electors are upon their Oath to regard Fitness, these are not Civil Addresses, but Immodest, and Offensive Obtrusions; Intrenchments, more or less, upon the Elector's Liberty, and Design'd to be so, in a Matter where Conscience is concerned.

If the University be disposed to Prefer no Other than the Person Fit for the Vacant Office, They will of themselves Promote One to it, whom They shall think Worthy to fill it. He needs not go about to tell them how Worthy of it he thinks Himself. It is of more Honour to Him, if they confer it upon him as a Mark of their Esteem, rather than as an Effect of his Sollicitation; and of more Honour to Themselves, if, in their Choice, they are determined by their certain Knowledge, or firm Belief of his Fitness: And they will the more easily be supposed to have been thus determined, if they are not Sollicited. And, in Competitions of Men allow'd to be Fit, if One Succeed, the Other is not Disgraced. The University is concerned, having but One Vacant Office to dispose of, that they have not room to acknowledge the Fitness of Both Competitors. And, from Attachments to Fitness, let not any Elector want to be Released. For, if the Candidate he favoured should miscarry, his Vote will not be thrown away. For, it not being known for Whom he Voted, he would not have been Intitled to any Reward, or any Thanks, if he had Voted otherwise. He had sworn that he would Nominate One whom he certainly knew, or firmly believed to be Fit, and such an One he hath Nominated. The Quiet of his Conscience is Secured. And, if he had Voted otherwise, his Vote would have been more than thrown away.

This being the Case, Computations are no more Necessary that a Fit Man should be chosen, than it is necessary to this End, that a Great College, divided in their Opinions of the Fitness of Competitors, should make it a Rule to Vote all One Way; the Minority, contrary to their Opinion, going over to the Majority: Or, that the Greater Colleges should agree amongst themselves to Lend each Other Mutual Assistance towards carrying All Elections for One or Other of their respective Members. For, the Minority in a Large Society do not Vote with the Majority, that a Fit Man may be chosen, but that the College may seem Considerable, and to have great Weight in Elections, and to be worthy to be Courted as a Body of Men, who can Serve, or Disserve greatly, those whom they have the Caprice to Favour or Disfavour. And I have Lived to see the Same great College, retaining, if not All, yet several of the Same Members, for and against the Same Thing, in the Same Circumstances, with Marvelous Unanimity, or at least Uniformity.

But, after all, a Great College of Scholars Liberally Educated must not proceed to Elections, in the same Manner, and with the same Motives, that Plebeians do. A College of Philosophers and Divines can then only appear Considerable, when they do Things agreeable to That Character. And, if any of them differ in their Opinion of Fitness, they must Vote accordingly, or must be contented to be thought Dishonest Men. To have Weight in Elections is then only of Value, when that Weight is Rightly apply'd. And to be able to Favour or Disfavour is a Power they are unfit to be Trusted with, if they do not favour Fitness, and disfavour Unfitness: and tho' Fitness, without doubt, is to be found in the Great Colleges, yet it is not confined to them.

Computations are necessary only to Men of Art, who pique themselves upon carrying Elections for Those they favour, whether Fit or Unfit. It is the Language of Computers, that every Man is Fit for what he can Get. Nor, without Solliciting, gaining Promises, and Computing, would an Unfit Person be ever likely to Succeed.

(<sup>a</sup>) OECONOMY is an Art as necessary to be Learnt, as any the University can Teach. With Difficulty will a Man be Just, or Temperate, or Liberal, or Charitable without it. It consists in admitting those Expences that are convenient to his Condition, and within his Ability; and, in foregoing such as are unnecessary, tho' within his Ability. If the Scholar hath not learnt this Art before he comes to the University, he should then begin. He will there best begin with an Allowance for his Private Expences; which having been rightly managed, he may, afterwards, be the better intrusted with an Allowance for his Intire Maintenance. In Oeconomy great Prudence is requisite. Prudence is gotten, and improved, by Experience; by Noting and Reviewing what One's Self, and Others do, and with what Consequences attended; and by the Freedoms of Friendship. Young Men can rarely have had Experience enough for that Degree of Prudence that is necessary; and, for want of Thought or Advice, are liable to great Anticipations of their Revenue. What is wanting in Themselves, their Tutor's Knowledge of the World, and Concern for their Welfare, will supply. To be Watchful, what Company a Young Scholar keeps; what Expences he inclines to; what Debts he contracts; is as much the Tutor's Duty as to read Lectures; and will turn as much to his Pupil's Profit, as the best Lectures he can read. But, it so happens, that, in the very Place where Oeconomy should begin to be learnt, there are such Temptations to Profuseness, that, without a Concurrence in the several Bodies of the University to One uniform Rule of Discipline, or, in failure of that, without some Assistance from the Legislature, there will always be such surprising Departures from Frugality of Living, and Simplicity of Manners, as will make this Place, in other respects the Fittest, the most Unsafe for the Education cation of Youth. The Luxury of young Men of Fortune permitted to Dine and Sup, out of the common Refectories of their respective Colleges, in Public Houses, at an Expence, at once amazing and ridiculous; and to ramble over the Universe in Parties of Pleasure, without the Leave, or Knowledge of their Governours or Tutors; and an Impatience hereby created in Others to do the like, tho' their Fortunes are very different; and the Immense Credit that will easily be given to Scholars of the University, let their Fortunes be what they will, not only without the Tutor's Consent, but against his express Prohibition, make it necessary that Societies undertaking the Education of Youth should come to a Resolution, not to Continue any Scholars, of what Quality soever, within their Walls, who will not conform to their Rules. But, if this should not happen to be the Case, yet, I hope, the Promoter of a Discipline to secure Oeconomy in young Scholars of his Own College, without waiting for, or depending upon the Concurrence or Assistance of Others, will not be censured; since, there is not a private School in the Kingdom, where the Master of it, who undertakes the Education of Youth, may not do it upon what Terms he pleases; and where Parents, or their Sons, if they do not Like the Terms, are under no Obligation to Comply with them.

----- Remainder (a), p. 44.

(a) Innumerable are the Instances of Young Scholars of the Univerfity, who, having had their Allowances remitted to Themselves, have moft shamefully abufed the Confidence which Parents have had in their Prudence. The Difference between the School-Allowance for what iffues out of the Fruiterer's Basket, and the Univerfity-Allowance for Intire Maintenance, is very great; and the immediate Transition from the Enjoyment of the One, to the Management of the Other, very hazardous. Fifteen Pounds a Quarter, paid, at once, into the Hands of a Youth but juft come from receiving 5*s.* a Month, is too great a Temptation to fundry Misapplications. He will have the Vanity to Shew it; the Eafinefs to Lend it; the Affectation of Generofity to Treat with it; till he will have disabled himfelf from having the Juftice to pay the neceffary Expences incurred in the Progreff of his Education. This Indifcretion in Parents, attended as it often is, with an Indolence in demanding the Neceffary Bills acquitted to be transmitted to them, within Three Days after the Allowance is paid, as well to affure them, that a proper Portion of it is thus duly applied, as to acquaint them with the feveral Articles of Expence, to be approved, or difapproved, as there is Reason, hath been the Occafion that many young Scholars, fo Intrufed, and fo Neglected, have fpent their whole Income in Intemperance, ever attended with Idleneff and Folly, without paying a Laundrefs, or a Barber, or a Shoemaker, or a Mercer, one Farthing, from the time they became Members of the Univerfity, to the time they have run away for Debt, or been push'd away for Misbehaviour. Upon this Experience this Statute is founded. Nor hath any young Gentleman, who Intends not to be Extravagant, any Reason to except againft it. For, it is no more an Impeachment of his Sobriety, or Prudence, or Worthinefs of Truft, or Confidence, that a Tutor receives his Allowance, allowance, and, having paid his just Debts with a Part of it, gives him the Remainder, than it is an Impeachment of the Sobriety, or Prudence, or Worthiness of Trust and Confidence in his Father, that his Steward receives his Rents, and, having discounted the Charge of Repairs, and Other necessary Appointments, pays the Remainder to Himself. Besides, by This Statute, the young Gentleman will have one great Motive to Frugality. He will naturally be led to Consider, Whether, and in what Degree, any thing he Seems to want, be really Necessary ; or, even whether it be not better to be without it, or, at least, better for the present ; since he easily foresees, the less he runs in Debt to Traders, who are to be paid out of his Allowance at the End of the Quarter, the more he will have then to Receive.

(<sup>a</sup>) TH E R E is so much Liberty taken by many Scholars of the University intended for Holy Orders, and so much Compassion usually shewn to them when they apply for Testimonials of their Good Life and Conversation, that a Governour of a Society, whose Testimony is Necessary, or, at least, said to be so, is often in Distress, Whether he shall Certify the Bad Life to have been Good, and Impose upon the Bishop who relies upon his Integrity, and become Instrumental to the Admission of an Unworthy Person into the Ministerial Office; Or, Whether, by Refusing thus to Certify, he shall submit to be Oppressed with a Load of Obloquy and Misrepresentation from the Unworthy Candidate, who is never Angry with Himself; and to be Teized with the Griefs and Expostulations of Parents and Friends Lamenting the Expence of Education, (which in these Cases is always twice as much as was Necessary), and Imputing the Loss of all the Advantages proposed by it, to the Obstinacy and Ill Will of the Governour; and (if he still hold out), to be Assaulted at Last, with Infinite Applications from Great Persons to help this naughty Man out of his Difficulties.

I could Wish, That All young Men intending to be of the Clerical Profession would be so considerate as to think themselves Obliged in Honour and Conscience to Answer the End for which the Revenues, they hope to Possess, were given. I could Wish also, That those who are Desirous to make Provision for their Relations in Ecclesiastical Revenues, would Interest themselves more than generally they do, that these Persons should be Worthy of the Preferments destin'd for them, by Inquiring frequently into their Behaviour; by Insisting upon true Informations from their Governours and Tutors; by Lending them timely Aid and Authority to correct those irregular Steps which have a natural Tendency to defeat their Own Views; and by strictly Demanding of the young Men themselves the Preservation of a good Character, that, whilst an important Service is kindly intended them, they would not make it Difficult or Disreputable to do it for them. I could Wish also, That Great Men would believe, that Governours of Societies are reasonable Creatures ; that they think properly upon these Occasions ; that, with respect to signing Testimonials, what they could honestly do, they would do without Application ; that they never do, nor ever did Oppose the Just Expectations of any Candidate for Holy Orders out of Prejudice ; and have reason to think they should do it in vain, if they should attempt it ; since even the most conscientious Refusals of their Testimony have rarely been found sufficient to stop Ordinations. These Things, I say, I could Wish.

But since my Experience assures me, that whatever I may Wish, there are, and always will be, if greater Care be not taken, Young Men in the University designed for Holy Orders, who will go on to Live in a manner not only not to Fit themselves for the Ministerial Office in point of Learning, but even to Disable themselves from being Useful in it in point of Conduet ; and Patrons and Parents so Indolent, as rather to venture their being Surprized with the Bad Characters of those they are determined to Prefer, than take any Pains to Secure their Good Behaviour ; and Great Men not so Just as to believe what I say of the Equitable and Prudent Procedure of Governours of Societies, or not so Kind as to regard it ; but will All take it amiss, if what is Wanted, and Desired, be not Complied with ; a Governour of a College in the University, seems to me to be in a more Inconvenient Situation than he ought to be, or, I suppose, will continue to be, if he can help it.

I shall not pretend to prescribe Rules to Other Heads of Houses, by the Observance of which their Condition in this respect may be mended : The following are Such as I shall Observe Myself.

1. Since the Candidate for the Ministerial Office cannot regularly be Admitted into the Order of Deacon, till he is Twenty-three Years of Age, I shall not Register

the Intimation of his Design, till he is near Twenty, nor Sign any Testimonial of his Behaviour till he is Twenty-three, or will be, by the Day of Ordination.

2. I shall, for this Reason, expect, that, at the time he intimates his Design, he bring along with him a proper Certificate of his Age, whereby it may appear, Whether, in point of Age, he will be capable of being Ordained within Three Years; and that, in such Certificate, the Dates of the Day and Year of his Birth, or Baptism, be written in Words at Length, and not in Figures, which may easily be altered, as they have been, to the Deception of the College first, and of the Bishop afterwards.

3. If, after this, the Studies recommended to him, or Studies equivalent chosen by him, be not pursued; or, the Admonitions given him of what is disliked in his Behaviour, be not regarded; I shall advise him, before the Time of his applying for a Testimonial shall approach, to retire from the College, or, not retiring, dismiss him, in the only Way I shall Choose to dismiss any Body (<sup>a</sup>), by leaving his Name out of the College-Book; and, thus, avoid the Difficulties, I foresee, he will otherwise bring upon me.

4. I shall expect, that he apply for a Testimonial of his good Life (however unexceptionable it may hitherto have appeared) a Month, at least, before he will have occasion to tender the same to the Bishop; that the Principal and Tutors, who are to Sign it, may have Room to Inquire into the Truth of any thing suggested to his Disadvantage (if so it should happen), and not be Surprized into any Grant of a Testimonial, of which they may have Reason afterwards most sadly to Repent.

(<sup>a</sup>) Severer Ways, without previous Admonition, or Room for Repentance, and tending to Expose only, and not to Reform, have appeared to me to have been founded in Resentment, and not in Zeal; and to have been ever executed with notable Partiality.

APPENDIX, No VII.

---- Responsible (<sup>a</sup>), p. 59.

(<sup>a</sup>) THIS Statute is intended to prevent in young Men many Improprieties in Conduct hurtful to Themselves, and disreputable to the Society. But, if, at any time, it should not have this Effect, and Irregular Things will sometimes be attempted, against the Opinion, Advice, Intreaty, or Remonstrance of a Companion Superior in Degree; yet, if the Superior, in this case, Retire, and no longer continue in the Company of Inferiors, over whom, he hath no Influence, he is no further Responsible for their Behaviour. He cannot have a better Reason for Leaving this Company, than that they have no Scruple to Involve him, Innocent as he is, and desires to be, in Penalties, which Themselves are going to Deserve. And if he leave them not, so great is the Countenance a Superior may be supposed to give to Inferiors in their Irregularities, whilst he Continues with them, that he will then begin Himself to Deserve the same Penalties they incur, if not greater.

For this Reason, whenever a Magistrate of the University Visits the Public-Houses after Nine, and finds a Master of Arts in Company with Others of No Degree, or of a Degree Inferior, and immediately Leaves the Room without any Reprehension of those, who are either Undergraduates, or Batchelors of Arts only, for their being abroad after Nine, because there is a Master with them, who, he presumes, will see that nothing shall afterwards be done that is Irregular; there seems to me to be towards such Master a most unaccountable Complaisance. For, if Departures from the Statutes of the University may be called Irregularities, here is Already nothing done but what is Irregular. The Mixing of Persons of a Superior Degree with those of an Inferior is Irregular. The Going at all to a Public-House is Irregular. And their being out of their respective Colleges after Nine is Irregular. In the two Last respects pects the Master is altogether as faulty as the Undergraduate; and, in the former, more; since an Undergraduate rarely associates himself to a Master without Invitation. And if a Master of Arts be found in all these Irregularities with those of a Lower Class, how can the Complaisance that is paid to him in this case be Due? A Master of Arts being Himself Irregular, seems not to have Merit enough to redeem the Irregularities of Others. He seems rather to be more blameable, and consequently more reprehensible, than any of his Inferior Companions. For, of the longer Standing he is, the more Knowledge he may be presumed to have of what is Proper, and of the greater Authority is likely to be his Example, inasmuch that, very probably, his Inferiors would not have been Irregular, but for the Countenance of his Company; and, if the Magistrates Complaisance be continued, will have no doubt to be so, under his Protection. And it is well, if his Company be not sometimes Borrowed for this Purpose, which, otherwise, would have been Despised. For none but very Trifling Men of this Degree would ever willingly be found in this Situation. And, it may be, the Magistrate Himself becomes Irregular, whatever he may think. For the End of Visiting Public-Houses is to Dismiss the Scholars, of what Degree or Quality soever, And the Magistrate who doth it not, either doth not know his Duty, or will forego it for private Considerations. Either he is Acquainted; or would be Popular; or wants the Master's Vote in Convocation; or hath not the Courage to do his Duty; or not the Address to do it in a Manner that ought not to Offend.

----- if he pleases (a), p. 76.

(*) THAT the Senior in a Society should have Choice and Preference, is founded upon a Supposition, that the longer Men live in a College, the more deserving they are, and upon the Difficulty there would be in settling the Pretensions of Others, if that Matter should come to be Disputed. Therefore, for the Peace of Societies, in which Men, if they should Disagree, must yet live together, and in which, very likely, they will Study the more, the more quietly they live, This is become an established Rule.

But Seniority, for all this, is often very Insolent, and especially in Young Men ; and this Insolence is seen in nothing more, than in the Participation of Commons ; even to the Ruin of that Peace, which the Privilege given to Seniors, to help themselves first, was designed to Preserve.

I have seen, where Twenty have sat at the same Table, that the Upper Ten, out of what hath been set before them, have provided for themselves so Plentifully and so Curiously, that to the Lower Ten either Nothing, or nothing Acceptable, hath descended. Whether the Upper Ten, in the very Place where good Learning and good Manners are professed to be taught, had not yet learnt what is Reasonable or Decent ; or, whether the Governour had not the Diligence or Courage to compell them to Regard it, I cannot tell : But the Consequence hath been, that the Ten Juniors have dined abroad in Public-Houses, at four times the Expence, attended with Other Inconveniences.

And what, I pray, is the Senior's Pretence for appropriating to himself a Junior's Commons with his Own ? Why, he can Eat them Both. Why, he may have the Capacity, but he Pays for no more than One, and should content himself with That only for which he Pays. And if he doth not, will have to learn again, now he is a Man, what he was taught when he was a Child, to keep his Hands from Picking and Stealing.

But the Commons, it may be said, being of so small a Value as Three Halfpence in the Market, and afterwards much lessen'd by a Defalcation of the Cooks Fees from every Joint, the Junior is presumed to be Consenting, that the Senior should have his Commons, whilst he is a Junior, since, if it should have come down to Himself, it would not have been sufficient for him.

In the First Place, It is not Natural for a Man to Consent to his Own Sufferings, or to be Willing to Pay for what he doth not Injoy. To shew that he doth not consent to it, he Complains of it. And if he did not complain, it would be a Vicious Acquiescence under an Oppressive Act, which, not Opposed, might perpetuate the like Oppression to his Successors at the same Table.

In the Second Place, If the Commons released by the Senior would not be Sufficient for the Junior, and the Senior would, now, not have Commons sufficient for Himself, I inquire, What is the natural and reasonable Way of supplying the Deficiency? The natural and reasonable Way, surely, would be to Petition the Governour of the Society, that the Commons, which was too Little for Any One, might be increased to a Sufficiency for Every One; and that, instead of Three-halfpenny Commons, which they have at present, they might have Three-penny for the future.

If the Governour will not consider that Men's Appetites are the same now, that they were 200 Years ago; and that, 200 Years ago, more Meat might have been bought for Three-halfpence, than can now for Three-pence; and will not allow any Variation from the ancient Usage, tho' the Reason of the Thing be Varied; and the young Scholars will rather submit to the Insufficiency of the Provision made for them in This College, than forfeit the Advantages they reap, or hope from it, by going to Another; still, let righteous Things be done, especially in a Place set apart for Instructing Men in what Is right ; and let Each Scholar be contented with what of right belongs to him at his Table in the College ; and, afterwards, let All those, who find that Portion not Sufficient, resort Equally to the Eating-Houses in the Town, to supply the Deficiency.

But the Junior, it seems, to keep him quiet, is taught to propose to make himself amends for all his Losses in Commons, when He comes to be a Senior, by doing the very same thing to His Juniors, which, when He was a Junior, he complained his Seniors did Unjustly to Him. Special Instruction in the School of Virtue ! What, is Justice, then, so mutable a thing, as that, what was Unjust To-day, may, in all the same Circumstances, be Just To-morrow ? Or, is the University the only Place where Equity cannot be discerned, or will not be regarded ? His Juniors are not the Men who deprived Him of his Commons. Equity will not allow that the Innocent shall be called upon to repair the Wrongs done by Others. If the Junior will have Any Reparation, the Wrong-doers Themselves are the Persons he must pursue, and tell them, they are indebted to him 500 Commons, the want of which was the Cause that he went 500 times to Public-Houses, where, for every Three-halfpence he had by them been deprived of, he spent Sixpence ; where also, he often staid longer, and drank more, than was necessary or convenient ; and often fell into Company, that, being Idle themselves, made Him idle ; and that, if They do not make him amends for the Hurt he hath received by Their Means, he is a Sufferer without Redress. Any Application to Other Persons for Satisfaction is that of Robbers, and not of Scholars aiming at Proficiency in Knowledge and Virtue.

To obviate the Insolence and Ill Manners of Seniors to Juniors, which I had formerly noted in Other Colleges, as well as in my Own, in Participating their Commons, this Statute was made, and is to be the Rule of the College, whilst the College shall continue in its present State.

But,

But, when once there shall be Indowments for the Four Classes of Students; and One Class of Students will, every Year, take their Batchelor's Degree in the last Week of Michaelmas Term, and Another Class will, every Year, be chosen into their Rooms in the first Week of Lent Term following; and when, being chosen all at the same time, no one of the Class can pretend to be Senior to another, or to have any Advantage at the Table above another, but will all, one with another, be strictly intitled to Commons of equal Value, and in equally good Condition; Then, no Student shall sit higher than another, nor help himself before another, at any of the Students Tables, for any longer time together than for a Day only. But, they shall all Succeed one another Daily, in Superiority of sitting and helping themselves, by a perpetual Rotation: Excepting, that the Person of Distinction admitted a Student in any Class, shall, on account, not of his Quality, but of his standing to Double Commons, whereof the rest participate, be the Perpetual Superior at the Table.

(<sup>a</sup>) *T*HIS having been objected to, as a Rule that may be attended with worse Consequences than even the Permitting the Gate to be Openable every Hour of the Night, I shall offer to the Consideration of the Objectors, in support of the Rule,

1. What, in this Case, is the University Statute, with respect to Scholars of Colleges and Halls in general.

2. What is the University Statute, with respect to Scholars of Halls in particular.

3. What appears to have been the Intention of Founders of Colleges within the University.

4. What is the Practice of Hertford College.

5. What are the Reasons for that Practice.

The University Statute (Tit. 15. § 6.) is, “ That “ All Scholars, of what Condition soever, [i. e. of what “ Degree or Quality soever] who shall happen, up“ on any Occasion whatsoever, to be out of their “ Colleges or Halls in the Evening, do betake them“ selves to their Own Colleges or Halls before the “ Hour Nine, which is wont to be signified by the “ Tolling of the great Bell of Christ-Church College ;
 “ and that, immediately after the Tolling of the said “ great Bell, the Gates of every College and Hall be “ shut up and locked: Which being shut up, the Go“ vernours of Houses, according to an Order of King
 “ James, shall go sometimes into the several Scholars
 “ Rooms, and see whether Any of their Own Members
 “ lie out of their College or Hall, or rove up and down
 “ the Streets, all Night.” The Penalty to every Scholar found abroad after Nine, and not shewing Cause to be approved

approved by the Vice-Chancellor and Proctors, is Forty Shillings. These Penalties the Proctors are obliged to exact of all the Scholars they take, and to bring One Half thereof into the University Chest, fide suâ datâ Universitati. The Proctor cannot indeed Imprison a Master of Arts, or Batchelor of Law, for Contumacy, Suspicion of Escape, or other Cause that may seem to deserve it; the Vice-Chancellor only can do this.

Here is nothing said of Opening the College Gates after these shall have been once shut up and locked; but the Scholar, not having come into his College before the Shutting up and Locking of the Gates, is supposed to lie abroad at some Public or Private House all Night; or, if his Humour be of that sort, to rove up and down the Streets all Night. Neither doth it appear, that the University Magistrate hath any Power to bring the Scholar he hath found, after Nine, in a Public or Private House, or in the Streets, home to his College, and Order the Gate to be Opened for his Admittance. But it doth appear, that, if he Dislike the Scholar's Behaviour when he hath taken him, he may send him to the University Prison for that Night: And, I conclude, if he doth not dislike his Behaviour when taken, he may Order him (whither he would have Chosen, a little later perhaps, to have gone himself) to some Inn, as less Ignominious than a Round-house, and with somewhat better Accommodations.

Having seen what is the University Statute with respect to Colleges and Halls in General; let us now see what is the University Statute with respect to Scholars of Halls in Particular, of which the Chief Magistrate of the University is Visitor.

The Statutes of the University, with respect to Scholars of Colleges and Halls in general, and those made for the Government of Halls in particular, called Aular Statutes, were confirmed by the same Authority, and at the same Time.

The Aular Statute (Sec̄. 7. § 10.) is, “ That the “ Porter diligently observe the Times of Opening and “ Shutting

“ Shutting the Gate; and especially that he Lock it up “ every Night after Nine, and bring the Key to the “ Principal, or his Substitute, to be kept till Morning, “ under the Penalty of Five Shillings for every time he “ shall fail. Let the Principal in like manner, or, in “ his Absence, his Substitute, if he do not demand the “ Key detained by the Porter, and keep it with him till “ Morning, be punished at the Pleasure of the Vice-“ Chancellor.”

It is not here supposed that any Scholar, out of the Hall after Nine, doth so much as Knock at the Gate for Admittance; much less, that the Porter, at the Application of every irregular Scholar, shall go into the Principal's Chamber, and awake him, and obtain his Leave to take the Key, and to Admit such Scholar. No. If there was any Doubt, Whether the Gates, ordered to be shut up and locked at Nine by the General Statute of the University, were, in the Intention of the said Statute, Openable or Not, before Morning, This Statute, given by the University to Halls in Particular, and requiring the Key to be kept by the Principals of Halls till Morning, would sufficiently remove that Doubt.

I proceed, 3dly, to Inquire, what probably was the Intention of Founders of Colleges in this Case. In this Inquiry I have Two things to observe:

1st, That in Founding a College within the University, to become a Part of its Body, and intitled to its Privileges, it must be presumed to have been the Founder's Intention, that his Scholars should submit to the Rules of the University in every thing from which he hath not obtained an Exemption by their Consent. And therefore, if there be no Special Rule of the Founder's to the contrary, Allowed by the University, he will be supposed to have Intended the Gates of His College should be shut up and lock'd at Nine, and Finally too, if the University Statute intend so much, unless by a Special Rule he hath made them Openable to a later Hour, which he might do, without interfering with the Letter of the University Statute; or, by the Consent of the Univerfity, tho' interfering with the Meaning of it.

I have to obferve, 2dly, that Colleges were originally Halls, and that, in converting a Hall into a College, the Founder had the Opportunity of knowing by what Rules Halls were governed, and might adopt fo many of Thefe, as he fhould like, into his Own System.

How far Founders of Colleges have regarded this Aular Statute (which, tho' Confirmed together with the Univerfity Statutes after the Revisal and Amendment thereof, at no greater a Distance of Time than 22 June, 1636, I fuppofe much ancients, becaufe the Univerfity Statute in this refpect is fo, and becaufe the Chancellor, in his Letters recommendatory of them to the Convocation, calls the Whole of the Univerfity and Aular Statutes Antiquis confona) I fay, how far they have regarded this Aular Statute in their feveral Inftitutions, may be feen by thofe in whole Cuftody Thefe are. I have been a Reader of feveral College Statutes in Both Univerfities. It feems to me to have been the Intention of Founders in general, whether in the Univerfity of Oxford, or That of Cambridge, that the Gates of their refpective Colleges fhould be fhut up finally at fome certain time of Night. They do not all direct the fhutting up of the Gates at the Same Hour, but ftill at a Certain Hour. Some at Nine, others at Ten; fome at Eight in the Winter, and Nine in the Summer; others at Nine in the Winter, and Ten in the Summer; but none, that I have feen, at a Later Hour than Ten, whether in Winter or Summer. In thefe, to the beft of my Remembrance, it is directed, exprefly or by implication, that the Gate being Shut, fhall not be Open'd again till Morning: Only, with this Difference, that, in fome Colleges, there is added to the Rule this Exception, Unlefs it be upon a very extraordinary Occafion, whilft, to the Rule, in other Colleges, there is No fuch Exception. The Exception in Any was wholly Unneceffary; fince a very extraordinary Occafion would have Warranted the Opening of the Gate again before Morning, againft the Letter of the Statute, if there had been No Exception. But in This, as in many Other Cafes, Cases, the Words of the Exception coming to be canvass'd, and it being left to private Interpretation, What Occasion was extraordinary, the Exception hath destroyed the Rule, and given Rise to the Opening of the Gate at Any time of the Night, and upon Any occasion. And Colleges, to whose Statute, appointing the Shutting up of the Gate at a Certain Hour, there is No Such Exception added, have followed their Example, presuming, that if there be None Expressed, the Like is Implied.

That it was the Intention of Founders in general to have the Scholars of their several Colleges within their Own Walls by Ten at Night, no-body, I think, can doubt, who considers their Other Rules made for the Security of the said Scholars Sobriety, Frugality, Industry, and Early Rising in the Morning, with which Late Hours at Night, and the common Consequences thereof, are-inconsistent.

4thly, With regard to the Practice of Hertford-College in particular, It is invariably this. The Gate is shut up at Nine, according to the Statute of the University; and is Openable till Ten, according to a Statute of the College. Ten, by the Latest Clock within the Hearing of the Officer, is understood and allowed to be no More than Ten. The Key is then carried in to the Principal. If any One apply to be Admitted after the Delivery of the Key, if the Principal be not gone to Bed, he may still be admitted, but must then submit to the same Penalty as if he had been excluded. The Four Scholars are alternately, and weekly, the Keepers of the Gate; And for these Reasons. They are generally better to be Confided in than ordinary Servants usually appointed to this Office, as they have been better Instructed. They are all under Obligation to the Principal for their Scholarships, which, together with his Favour, they may Forfeit, if they should be Unfaithful. It is next to Impossible they should be so without being Discovered; since the Gate is not Open'd till after Morning Prayers, nor, till the Principal is informed, whether those, who were absent from Prayers, Lay at home. And, lastly, they are Themselves Interested

ested in One Half of the Pecuniary Forfeitures incurred by any of the Members who shall have lain abroad.

5thly, The Reasons for this Practice, or the Good Ends proposed by shutting up the Gate finally at Ten, are the Sobriety, Frugality, Health, Quiet, and Improvement of the Students of the Society.

Scholars who spend their Evenings abroad, do it usually either in the Public-Houses in the Town, or at the Chambers of their Private Acquaintance in Colleges.

The University Statute (Tit. 15. § 5.) forbids Scholars of what Condition soever to go to a Public-House, except for a Reason to be approved by the Vice-Chancellor or Proctors (such, I suppose, as the being sent for to an Inn upon the Arrival of Parents or Friends) under great Penalties to the Scholar Going to a Public-House, and to the Keeper of it for Receiving him.

There are Reasons for this Institution. The Public-Houses are, generally, Mean Places of Reception, and often Naughty. The Lowest People, and the most Vicious have a Right to resort to them equally with Persons of the best Condition and Character. A serious Man cannot long continue there, without hearing or seeing something said or done offensively. It would be disreputable for Men aiming at a Liberal Education, or having received it, to mix in Conversation with promiscuous People greatly below them; which, in these Places, they are often tempted to do; and if, possibly, they do it not, yet will it be a Lessening of them to be supposed to do it. The Generality of Scholars coming to the University are designed for Holy Orders. It will become them, from the Moment they arrive, to be careful not to hazard the Credit of that Character which they intend to assume. In Travelling, it is true, Persons of the greatest Repute take up with such Accommodations as the Public-Houses in their Way have to offer them, because they cannot with Safety, or Convenience, reach home without it. But they prefer Home. But the University Scholar is not upon the Road. He hath hath a Home in his Own College; an Apartment neatly fitted up for his Use; the Companion he likes to associate with resorts to him whenever he pleases, and He to his Companion with Delight reciprocal. And, if any thing better or other is fancied, than what the College ordinarily provides for his Entertainment, and he can Allow himself to Injoy, it may easily be sent for from abroad. In Public-Houses, tho' a select Company go thither with an Intention to be private, yet they cannot always be so. It is known whither they are gone. They are followed by others who want Company. There are Those, who think themselves acceptable to All. They are Introduced, or they Intrude. By this means Acquaintance are multiplied, and without Choice, mischievous in the Number, as they will occasion great Avocations, and often more so in their bad Qualities. The Warning given by the University to repair to their Colleges or Halls at Nine, is little regarded. An Inclination in Any to stay longer, very easily conciliates the Consent of More; and many, fearing they shall seem to Dislike the Company they are in, if they retire sooner than the Rest, have rarely the Courage to do it; and the Person who finds himself Agreeable by his Wit and Humour, knows not when to leave off to be so; and the long Silent is scarce willing to go, before he hath said something that is Tolerable; and, as is usual in Compotations, the longer Men stay, the more they are disposed to stay longer. And in Proportion to the Intemperance of the late Hour, will be the Expence, and the Loss of Time, and the Hazard of Health, and the Disinclination to Study, and the Incapacity of Improvement. And now, is it Necessary, or at all Convenient, that the Gates of Colleges and Halls should be Openable at all Hours of the Night, to let in Irregular Scholars issuing out of these Houses, into which they ought not to have Entered without Punishment, and in which, if the University Statute were observed, they could not stay an Hour?

The Case is the same, if the Scholar spend his Evenings at the Chamber of his Private Acquaintance. He is aware of the Liberty he hath to stay as long as he pleases. And where he finds himself easy, there he will desire to continue. And the Entertainer, if not fond of Liquor himself, may yet think himself obliged in Civility to press the longer Stay of his Friend. And what is there to hinder the Indulgence of the Inclination in One Case, or Compliance with the Importunity in the Other? The Chamber, it may be, is not often Visited by the Governour of the College, according to the Royal Injunction. No Proctor, unsent for, Enters here, or Dismisses Company from hence. And the Gates of This, and of his Own College, will open to him at his Own time of Night. And when the Visit is Returned, the same Heartiness will be expressed, and a Stay to the same late Hour be *demande*d, and the like Intemperance ensue, with the former Train of mischievous Effects.

But, when it shall be known for certain, that the Scholar Entertained must be within his own College by Ten, if he will get in at all that Night; that he will naturally desire to lie in his Own Bed; that lying abroad will inevitably be attended with the Penalty of the Statute; the Charge at the Inn that shall Receive him; the Displeasure of his Governour, who will know it; and the Inquiries that will be made the next Morning, Where he spent his Evening, and with Whom, and to what Hour, and how he came to Stay so late, and Where he Lay; Who will press his Friend to subject himself to all these Inconveniencies, for which a longer Stay will make him no Amends? Or, what Friend will be willing to stay with his Companion of Another College till One or Two in the Morning, Whom, in the Return of the Visit, he must be forced to Dismiss by Ten at Night?

Some have thought the Matter might well be Compromised, by making the Hour of shutting up the Gate to be Certain, and that certain Hour to be Eleven instead of Ten. How properly this is contended for, I now Inquire.

In Societies there are commonly two Sorts of Men, the One Indifferent, or Disinclined to Drinking, the Other Liking it. The Numbers of Each have been different at different Times, and will always be uncertain, tain, since the Accidents that contribute to it will be so. However, I will venture to say, that, in Societies in general, where a proper Care is taken of the Youth, there will, one time with another, be Two Thirds, at least, of the former Sort, to One of the Latter.

The General Hour of Supper, throughout the University, is Six. This Meal, if it be at all regarded, (for it is much grown into Disuse) is over in less than Half an Hour. The Members of Societies then dispose of themselves for the Remainder of the Evening. I would hope, by far the greatest Part of them would spend their Evenings chiefly with One Another of the same Society; the Summer Evenings, if the Weather invite, in walking abroad; the Winter in Each Other's Rooms, as they should choose to sort themselves together. This sort of Men will never find any Difficulty to be at home by Ten. I have the Experience of above Six and Thirty Years in this Place, that not One of at least Two Thirds of the Society, within that time, ever lay out of the College in his Life.

The Proposal, then, is only in favour of those who love a Bottle. But are not the three Hours and a half between Supper and Ten, a sufficient time for young Scholars to consume at an Alehouse, or a Tavern, or a Private Chamber of Another College? I am so convinced it is more than sufficient, that I have changed the Hour of Supper from Six to Seven. The Security they will have, if this Proposal be agreed to, that they may be Admitted into their College at an Hour Later, is a greater Temptation to them to stay that Hour, than they ought to be tried with, for they will almost constantly submit to it. For, during the Time I was myself of Another College, I observed, that when, for one while, the Scholar might come in at Any Hour of the Night, he took the Liberty he had to do so very freely; and a Shilling to the Porter secured him from all further Harm: And, when, for another while, the Gate of the Same College was shut up finally at Eleven, the very Same People who used to come in before at Twelve, or One, or sometimes later, would now, infallibly, be time enough at the Gate to be Admitted by Eleven. In like manner, when, in

This College, the Gate was shut up finally at Eleven, as once it was, the Bottlemen would apply to be let in just before Eleven: And, when that Hour was chang'd, and the Gate began to be shut up finally at Ten, the same sort of Men would constantly knock to be Admitted just before Ten. For, in all the Variety of Company I have occasionally mix'd with, from the Time I became a Member of the University to this Day, I never yet met with a Man, who did not shew a Reluctance to the Lying out of his Own Bed. And, from this Experience, I conclude, that Colleges, by allowing a later Hour to come in at than Ten, are only increasing the Expence of Living in the University, contributing to Habits of Intemperance in the Youth under their Care, and assisting them to be Useless and Insignificant when they shall go abroad into the World.

To this it may be said, It will be right to Oblige young Men, under the Care of Tutors, to be within their Colleges by Ten at Night, by such Penalties, or Impositions, as they will fear to incur, and be careful to avoid: But there are in the University Fellows of Colleges of long Standing; Many, if not Most of them, in Holy Orders, or desigining to be so; Masters of Arts, or Batchelors of Law; not Children, but Men, if ever they will be Men; and Grave and Serious Men too. Are These never to have the Liberty, which they know how not to abuse, of a Later Hour? May not these Men enjoy the Company of their Friends till half an Hour after Ten, or till Eleven, or past, since, it is certain, they may do it with Sobriety? I really think they might in Another Place. But, if they insist upon it, that they may do it Here, Men will generally be of Opinion, that however Grave they may appear, they are not Serious. In Places of Education, and before Young People resorting hither for this Purpose, Serious Men will abridge themselves of those Liberties, though Innocent, which are likely to be misinterpreted, and abused by raw, unexperienced, inconsiderate Youth, who have not Discretion, but come hither to Learn it, and who, in the mean time, will patiently submit to the Restraints which their Seniors comply with, and think them right. What, therefore, simply consider'd, may be Innocent, and reasonable, in certain Circumstances will not be so.

But there are Other Considerations which will be always uppermost in the Minds of Serious Men, and duly regarded by them.

Fellows of Colleges are greatly Obliged to their several Founders for their present honourable Maintenance, and future Expectation of Preferment. Serious Men will ever be ready to shew their Gratitude to their Benefactors, by complying with their lawful Desires, even if they are at Liberty to do otherwise. But they are not so at Liberty. For, Founders of Colleges have given the Societies they have respectively Indowed, certain Rules of Conduct, and made the Observance of these the Condition on which their Intended Benefits may be Enjoyed. Serious Men, if they do not perform the Condition of the Indowment, do not think they have a Title to a Shilling of it. Founders of Colleges, not relying wholly upon the Regard, which, in Gratitude, will be paid to their Memories in distant Ages, nor not even upon Commemoration Days, nor yet upon the Honour and Ingenuity of Men bred in the Schools of Piety and Virtue, and improved in Learning Human and Divine, as a sufficient Guard against any future Violation of their Statutes, have laid them under the Obligation of an Oath to Observe them. Serious Men will always make a Conscience of their Oaths. And if, amongst these Statutes, there be One that finally shuts the Founder's Gate at the Hour Ten, it is, by all the strictest Ties by which Man can be bound, as Unopenable after that Hour, as if it was fastened by a thousand Bars and Bolts. And if there be Perseverance in avowed Departures from this Rule, let them give up all Pretensions to Seriousness. The Indulgence of the Appetite is the only thing they are determined to regard. If, in this Rule of their Founders, there was any thing hurtful to Religion, or to the State, the Legislature might do well to Over-rule it. But, if it manifestly have, or can have, no Other Tendency than to secure the Temperance, and, consequently, the Health of the Scholar, and to preserve his Innocence, and Inclination

to Study; and to Improve him in useful Literature, and to save him Expence during his Stay in the University for this Purpose; all Agreements in Members of Colleges amongst themselves, to Vary from it, ought rather to be Over-ruled by the same Authority.

Let not any one say, The Times will not bear Conformity to Pious Founders Institutions. Who are to make the Times, but the Universities? There never can be a time, when a Man may not be a regular, sober, virtuous, and religious Man, if he Pleases.

But, besides the Inconveniencies that would occasionally attend Particular Members, if the Gate might be Open'd at Any Hour of the Night, there is Another which would affect the Whole Society, and that is, the Perpetual Disturbance that would thereby be given to it.

The Quiet of Societies requires, that the Gate should be shut up finally at Ten. Ten is as late an Hour, as, generally speaking, it is proper for Those to sit up to, who are obliged to rise early to their Studies. To study, with Effect, due Refreshment in Sleep is Necessary. And the Statutes of This, and of Other Houses of Learning, prohibit all kinds of Noise in Sleeping, as well as in Studying Hours. Sleeping Hours are, from Nine at Night till an Hour before Morning Prayers. Nobody is obliged, by any Statute, to go to Bed at Nine or Ten. Some require more Sleep, to Others less is sufficient. In this Particular, let the Scholar, who, by Statute, is obliged to rise early, use his Own Discretion. But if, in the Use of his Discretion, he choose to go to Bed at Eleven or Twelve, he, yet, can have no Right to make any such Noise, as may awaken, or hinder the Sleep of those, who, in the Use of Their Discretion, have gone to Bed at Nine or Ten. The Sober and Studious Part of Societies, which, I hope, in most of them is by far the greatest, choose to go to Bed by Ten, or very soon after. And the Statute of the College, and the Reason of the Thing, are to Protect them from Disturbance. But what Protection can they have from Either, if, by any Other Statute or Usage, the less Sober, and less Studious, and in Number Fewer, are permitted to Rap at the Gate for Admission at every Hour of the Night?

Night? And with Degrees of Violence, in proportion as the Keeper of it is, by Watchfulness, become more fast asleep? And what Security is there, that young Scholars, who shall be let in at a Late Hour, and, probably, in a Condition regardless of Decency, or Duty, and prompt to Enterprize, shall repair directly to their Own Rooms, and give no Other Disturbance? And so the Sober and Studios Many are to have the Refreshment of Sleep taken from them by the Idle and Sottish Few, made Idle and Sottish by this very Indulgence!

In Societies there will be some of so tender a Frame, that an Injury of this Kind will be long repairing. Others are often seized with Illnesses of doubtful Issue, Small-Pox or Fevers, in which Sleep is Medicine: And if This become Precarious, so is Life, of whatever Value to the helpless Sufferer, and his anxious Friends.

And what is to become of the poor Governour of the College, who may be Aged and Infirm, and yet think it his Duty to meet his Society at the early Prayers, whilst Health and Strength permit? Is he, every Night, by Midnight Knockings at the Gate, to be waked out of his Sleep, who, perhaps, once waked and ruffled with the unnecessary Disturbance given at home, and with the Apprehension of Disorders committed abroad by his Own Intemperate and Irregular Scholars, can Sleep no more? Or, lest he should, may the Officer intrude into his Chamber first at one late Hour, and then at another, to fetch the Key from his Bedside for their Admission? If this be so, a Governour of a College is in a much worse Condition than any Other Master of a Family.

A Lodger, if He keeps late Hours, is immediately warned to provide himself with Another Lodging; and, being gone, He gives no further Trouble. But, here, Accounts are to be written to the Parent of the Scholar's Misbehaviour, and Intreaties arrive for a Little Longer Trial; and Applications to the same Purpose are procured from Persons, whom the Governour is known to have a Regard for; and, in failure of Success, the Scholar is removed to another House, from whence he is at hand to give as much Uneasiness to his Former Governour as he did before.

An Inn-keeper, whose Profession and Livelihood it is to receive Guests, hath yet a Certain Hour of shutting up his Gates, and a fair Hope of natural Rest to Himself and Servants for the Remainder of the Night; and if, by Chance, he be once in a Quarter of a Year disturbed by the Arrival of an unexpected Stranger, He hath the Reward he Asks to alleviate any Trouble that is given him; and his Servants have little else to do, but to pay themselves what Arrears of Sleep are due to them, for a great Part of the Day after. But what Recompence hath the Governour of a College for what He endures, except the Enmity and Obloquy of Those, who, by their Intemperance, have been the Plague of his Life, for not giving them Testimonials of their Sobriety, when they want to take Holy Orders?

And lastly, What becomes of the College Porter? Or rather, as it should seem, Who cares a Farthing what becomes of him? But still, in a Christian Country, and especially in Colleges erected for Promoting Religion and Moral Virtue, a Regard is to be had to the Happiness of the poorest Creature upon Earth; and tho' All can not be made equally Happy in their Situations, yet every Condition of Life that can be made Easier, ought to be so. But, if this poor coughing Wretch must be raised out of his Bed, at every Hour of the Night, to answer to the unseasonable Knockings at the Gate of dissolute Men, who consider only what is agreeable to Themselves, and not what Others suffer, there is not a greater Slave in Turkey than a College Porter; and I pronounce that He, or his Deputy, shall die a Death immature.

But an Usage like this, not fit to be continued another Night in Any College, is much less to be endured in Hertford than any Other. For, here, not Common Servants, but Scholars, are the Keepers of the Gate; of as good Families as are, generally, Those whom they wait from Nine to Ten to Admit. It is not reasonable they should watch any longer than Ten, or be disturbed at Midnight. Their Health is as precious to them, as That of other Scholars; their Parts and Learning are as good; their Improvement as necessary, for their Use to the Public is as great.

Since it cannot be pretended any Good accrues to the Scholar, by the Indulgence of a Later Hour than Ten, let us see what Hazard may attend him arriving After Ten, and finding himself excluded. It is said, chiefly, That of falling into the Company of Lewd Women.

To this I answer, If the Scholar Intended to apply for Admission within the Statutable Hour, and finds himself too late, it must have happen'd thro' a Mistake of the Time. Where the Statutable Hour is Ten, the Mistake of the Time cannot probably be great. I will suppose he finds himself too late by a Quarter, or, it may be, Half an Hour. At Half an Hour after Ten he may find a Refuge at any Reputable Inn in the University. There will be the Expence indeed, in this Refuge, of a Shilling or Eighteen-pence extraordinary. But this Unnecessary Charge he will do well to be more careful to avoid for the future.

But, if the Scholar Intended Not to have come in at all that Night, and there be Hazard, in lying out, of falling into the Company of Lewd Women, it is what he Chose to Adventure, or, it may be, the very thing he Designed. It is nothing to this Scholar, whether the Gate be shut at Ten, or not at all.

If it be said, He is driven to a Resolution to lie abroad all Night, because he cannot be Admitted at Eleven, or Twelve, till which time he chooses to stay; I answer, he will run greater Hazard of Disasters with Lewd Women, by the Privilege he wants of coming into his College at Eleven or Twelve, than by the Obligation he is under to come in at Ten. For, in the Nature of the thing, Men's Passions become more Inflamed, by longer sitting at the Wine; and Religious, and Virtuous, and Prudential Considerations abate of their Strength, and grow a less sufficient Restraint of heighten'd Appetites. And then, as to the Fact, Whether More Disasters in This, as well as in many Other Respects, do not happen to those who have the Privilege of a Later Hour, than to those who have it not, if any one is pleased to affect to doubt, I am able to give him full Satisfaction.

APPENDIX, N<sup>o</sup> X.----- Pecuniary Mulcts (a), p. 90.

(*) IT hath been, said, the Statutes of This College have too many and too large Pecuniary Penalties annexed to them; that these are Punishments of the Father, and not of the Son; and that Exercises set, instead of these, would not only be a Punishment of the Son, but an Improvement of him also.

To the first I reply, That the Statutes are Published, and it may be easily seen whether it be so or no. If the Reader will give himself the Trouble to peruse the Statutes of Other Colleges, whether in Oxford, or Cambridge, he will find the Pecuniary Penalties, in every College in Either, more and greater than in Hertford. Putting out of Commons is a Penalty in All Colleges, and, in Many, for almost All Faults, and is a Pecuniary Penalty, whatever it may seem, and Itself greater than all the Pecuniary Penalties in Hertford put together. The Common Pecuniary Penalties here, are, for Absences from Prayers and Meals, for lying Abroad, and for giving Disturbance to the Society in Studying or in Sleeping Hours, or to the Officers in their respective Offices. The Reader will soon be convinced that These are Few and Moderate. And since One Part of them goes to the Scholars for their Services to the Society, and Another to the Support of the Evening Lecture, and the Remainder, if any, is put into the College Stock, for Uses in which the Society are Interested, he will see, that those who incur These Forfeitures have their Money again in one Shape or other; in which Light, instead of being Many and Great, they may rather be considered as None at all. There is One Pecuniary Penalty, indeed, which may seem to be a Large One, and that is, One Shilling a Day, for every Day of Non-residence in Term-Time, affecting as well the Governour and Tutor as the Student. But this, not having yet been Executed, cannot have been Complained of. The Execution is deferred 'till Indowments shall be given to the Students, to Oblige them to Such Residence under Such Penalty.

But Pecuniary Penalties are said to be a Punishment to the Father. They may, or they may not. If the Son be upon an Allowance for his Maintenance, these are a Punishment to the Son, and not to the Father. But, if the Son exceed his Allowance, and the Father at last pay the Excess, may not this be esteemed a Punishment to the Father? It may, or it may not. If the Father submit to the Payment of the Expence incurred in this, or any other careless Way, without Inconvenience to the Son, the Father is Punished. But, if he tell his Son, the more he Dissipates of the Paternal Substance, in this, or any other Way unnecessarily, the Less of it he will have hereafter to receive, and keep his Word, which it is but reasonable he should, the Son will be Punishing Himself, whilst he seems to be Punishing his Father.

But it seems, Exercises set, instead of these, will not only be a Punishment of the Son, but an Improvement of him also. It may be so in the Imaginations of fanciful Men without Experience. But, in Reality, it is a Remedy rather worse than the Disease complained of, if not the very Disease itself in another Form greatly Increased. For, if the Student be required, not only to prepare himself to attend his Tutor's Lectures according to the Statute, but to pursue also a Course of private Studies, leading to such Knowledge in the Profession he aims to be of, as will make him an Able Man in it, Impositions, that do not directly tend to retrieve the Loss he sustains by having mis'd the Lecture he should have attended, or by having neglected the Stated Exercise he was to have performed, are Impertinent Avocations from his Proper Business; and are generally done in so slight and perfunctory a Manner, as can tend to no kind of Improvement of the Composer (allowing he should make the Imposition Himself) but will rather hinder his Improvement in other more material respects. And, if he gets Another to make it, he must Reward him for it, and then it becomes the Pecuniary Penalty that was intended to be avoided, or, as is generally the Case, a much greater.
Besides,

Besides, in Setting Impositions, little Equality hath been, or perhaps can be Observed. If Favoured Persons are found in the same Fault with Others, the Imposition may not be given out for that time. Or, if the Censor morum be Indifferent, and many have failed of the same Duty at the same time, and an Imposition be given out to be made by All, since All at this time are found in the same Fault; if it happen, that One or Two of them had never failed before in their Lives, whilst the Rest have frequently been delinquent; in involving Those in the same Punishment with These, there will be no Equality, nor yet any avoiding the Imputation of Partiality, if Those are wholly excused. Whereas, if One missing Prayers or Meals, once in a Month, incur the Penalty of Two-pence, and Another missing twenty times within the Month, be punished twenty Two-pences, here will be Equality, and no room left for Favouring One, or Disfavouring Another. No Reluctance on the One Side, to Inflict the Punishment; nor any Complaint of Hardship on the Other, in Suffering it.

THE Principal and Tutors of Hertford College having a Power (as mentioned Seēt. X. p. 63.) to restrain their Own Members from the Violation of the Statutes of the University, particularly of those contained under the Titles, De Vestitu & Habitu Scholastico, and De Moribus Conformandis, by Penalties not exceeding those prescribed in the said Statutes, it may not be amiss to Recite the Substance of what is therein Prohibited, that is material, and to make both the present and future Members of the College aware, that the Violation of These will be equally Penal to them, as the Violation of their Own Statutes.

Under Title 14. De Vestitu & Habitu Scholastico,

§.1. IT is Injoined, that “ All Heads, Fellows,
 “ and Scholars of Colleges, and all admitted “ into Holy Orders, be Cloathed as becometh Cler- “ gymen, and observe what is Directed by the Ca-
 “ non, or Ecclesiastical Constitutions.”

By this Statute, it should seem, as if the University Intended, that Heads, Fellows, and Scholars of Colleges, whether they were in Holy Orders or not, should be Cloathed as becometh Clergymen; to the end that, if they were not, they might, by the Simplicity of the Dress of Clergymen, so agreeable to their present Condition in their College, and their future Station in the Church, be led to put on the Simplicity of Manners of Clergymen.

If it be asked, What is the Cloathing that becometh Clergymen? some Light may be had from the Canon enjoined by this Statute to be observed. The Canon prescribes, in general, “ such Decent and Comely Appa- “ rel, as that, by It, Clergymen might be known to the “ People to be Clergymen, and thereby receive Honour
 “ and Estimation due to the special Messengers and Mi- “ nisters”

“ nisters of Almighty God.” By this it should seem, as if the Canon Intended, that, besides the Habit of their Degree occasionally worn, the Cloathing should be Uniform in the Colour of it. Otherwise, a Clergyman would not thereby be known to be a Clergyman; and that this Colour should be a Grave one; otherwise, it would not be Decent or Comely. For, as one Part of the Clerical Character will always be that of Gravity, so the Clerical Dress, in order to be Decent or Comely, must be Grave likewise. What the Canon, in general, Intends, may be pretty well known by that against which it particularly Objects. It Objects particularly, “ to the Wearing of Light-coloured Stockings:” From which, it should seem, as if it Intended, that neither should any Other Part of the Cloathing of a Clergyman be of a Light Colour; and, probably, if any Other Part of it had been observed to be so, when the Canon was made, the same would have been forbidden by it equally. Again, the Canon doth Object “ to their going in Public in their Doublet and Hose, without Coats or Cassocks;” by which, it should seem, as if the Canon Intended, that, if they went in a Coat, it should be of a Black Colour, since, probably, if they had chosen to go in a Cassock, that would have been so. Again, the Canon Objects “ to Newfangledness of Apparel;” by which, it should seem, as if the Canon Intended, that no New or Unwonted Light or Gay Colour in the Clerical Dress should, thro’ the Levity or Conceitedness of any Clergyman whatsoever, be introduced, or imitated; since, That Graver Colour would be most Decent or Comely, which had been long worn by the most valuable Men of the Order, and long approved in the Opinion of their Superiors, and by the Use of which, “ Clergymen would best be known to be Clergymen by the People, in order to their receiving Honour and Estimation from them.” And from hence, it should seem, that the Canon did not Intend, that Clergymen should ever wear BLUE; this being not of a Grave, but of a very Light, or rather Gay Colour, and consequently not a Decent or Comely, but an Affected and Newfangled Dress of Clergymen, there being hardly One of the Order who cannot remember the Introduction of it. Neither is it a Cloathing by which “ a Clergyman may be known to be a Clergyman,” whilst the Graver Men of that Order still wear Black, and whilst a Blue Coat, Waistcoat, Breeches, and Stockings, often worn by Others of the Clergy, is a Dress so near a Common Livery, that it doth not distinguish them from Footmen.

2. It is Injoined, “That all Others” [i. e. not upon any Foundation, nor admitted into Holy Orders] “(except the Sons of Barons having a Right of Suffrage in the Upper House of Parliament) “do wear Cloaths of a Black or Dark Colour, “and not imitate in their Dress what hath a shew of Pride or Profuseness.”

It is not, I think, to be inferr'd from this Exception, that, because the Sons of the Nobility are at liberty to Vary in their Cloaths from the Black or Dark Colours injoined to Others, that they are, therefore, at liberty to Expose themselves in a Green Gold-lac'd Waistcoat, and Red Breeches, and in a Black Wig one Day, and a White One another. A Coat, Waistcoat, Breeches, and Stockings of the Same, tho' of a Lighter Colour than is permitted to Others, made of very good Materials, and attended with good Linen, constitute the Genteelest Dress, especially under a Gown, that young Men of Fortune can appear in; and nothing Other than Such a Dress, I am persuaded, was ever Intended by the Exception in this Statute.

The Wearing a Gown supposes the Pursuit or Attainment of useful and manly Knowledge, the very End of coming to the University. All Gaiety of Dress, whether in the Colours of the Cloth, or the Lacings or Imbroideries of the Suit, shews the Mind of the Wearer to be greatly pleased with the Pomp and Splendor of his External Appearance, even to a Degree, to make him choose to forego the Advantage of the good Opinion of sensible well-bred Men, and to Venture, even in the Company of Men skill'd in Propriety, to do a thing that is Absurd. There is not the same Exception to Fine Cloaths upon particular Occasions in Other Places, as there is in This. In Other Places, and upon Occasions of important
Joy,

Joy, when it will be but Civil to let it appear one is somewhat out of one's Senses with the Excess of it, Fine Cloaths are Praised; for the Intention is to shew Respect, which is usually estimated by Expence. In This Place, and during the Time of Education, the Intention is to form the Mind to think rightly of every thing it observes, to prevent its being depress'd or elevated unreasonably by Appearances, and to teach it to put a Value upon that only which is really valuable.

Besides the Absurdity there is in rich and gay Apparel in Students of the University, there is, in many respects, great Inconvenience in it. The Wearer cannot always Afford it: If he could, the Money might have been more reputably applied. If Some can bear the Expence of it, Others will be Invited to imitate them in it who can not. It leads the Student into a great deal of Company; for none delight in Finery, who do not delight to shew it. And a great Deal of Company will lead into many Other Expences, and Extravagancies, as well as Loss of Time, in a Season of Life fittest for Improvement, to be review'd hereafter with great Disapprobation. Finery is what the less valuable Women are usually most pleased with; and it is not an unnatural thing for young Men, who want to be Admired, to wait, oftener than is Prudent, upon those who will be most apt to admire them. It gives Vain Young Men greater Significancy in their Own Opinion, than there is Reason for, and makes them more Assuming, and more Refractory. Tutors, of little Experience of the World, are aw'd and intimidated by it; and forbear to Admonish them seasonably, as there is Occasion, or do it feebly, and ineffectually. And Inferior Students, struck with the Glare of it, more easily submit to be Idle and Irregular, Adventurous and Enterprising, with Them, who, they hope, will Treat them at present, and Prefer them hereafter.

Under Title 15. De Moribus Conformandis,

§. 1. IT is Injoined, that “ Due Respect be shewn
 “ by Juniors to Seniors: i. e. by Under- “ graduates to Batchelors; by Batchelors of Arts “ to Masters; by Masters to Doctors, as well in “ private as in publick; by Going out of the Way,
 “ by Uncovering the Head at a reasonable Di- “ stance, and by respectfully Saluting them when “ they Meet them, and by giving them the more “ Honourable Place wherever they shall be toge- “ ther. The Statute doth likewise oblige all Scho- “ lars, of what Condition soever, (the Sons of “ Noblemen excepted) that have not yet taken the “ Degree of Master in Arts, of Batchelor in “ Divinity, Civil-Law, or Physick, to stand “ bare headed, and to behave themselves with “ Humility and Modesty, during the Perform- “ ance of all Scholastick Acts in the Publick “ Schools, especially before the Publick Officers of “ the University, Doctors, Masters, or Batchelors in “ the aforesaid Faculties, (excepting that Batchelors
 “ of Arts, in the Habit of their Degree, may “ wear their Caps in the Schools of Arts and Phi- “ losophy, in the Presence of Masters or any “ Others) under such Penalty to the Juniors, if “ they do not Pay Respect, and to the Masters, if “ they do not Exact it, as the Vice-chancellor and “ Proctors shall think fit.”

The Primary Intention of the Statute is, that, since Learning is of so great Use to the Publick, Respect should be paid to Learned Men for the Incouragement of Learning; and that Those should be considered as Learned Men, on whom the University had conferred Degrees, according to the Time they had spent there in Pursuit of Learning, and to their Proficiency in Learning.
 The

The Secondary Intention is, that Inferiors, having been accustomed to shew Respect to their Superiors in Degrees given by the University, should be the better prepared to shew it to their Superiors in general; whether the Superiority be in Station, Age, or Quality, or any other Excellence, Within the University, or Out of it.

Since, then, Degrees are given by the University, with Design that Scholars, when admitted to them, should be viewed in a Light of Superiority and Distinction, it is but Just that Seniors should look for Respect, and Juniors pay it, as their Due. And, lest Ignorant or Conceited young Men should not easily perceive the Reasonableness of the Duty, or not readily comply with it, it was fit they should be Instructed, and Injoined to do it, by a Statute. Nor will the Penalty assigned to the Breach of this Statute, if it be intended the same shall be at all regarded, be thought Unreasonable; Inadvertencies and Oversights, either acknowledged, or believed, being admitted in excuse for Omissions in this Part of Conduct: For, otherwise, the unfavourable Interpreter will fail in Civility, on His Part; since it may sometimes happen even to the Polite Courtier, as well as to the Profound Scholar, that he may be thinking intently of Another thing.

It is true, Personal Merit only, and that understood, and allowed, is the Natural Motive to Respect. But yet, as Men rightly pay Respect to Persons in Superior Stations, presuming these are fill'd with Ability; and to Superior Age, presuming It to abound in Knowledge founded in long Experience; and to Superior Quality, presuming it to be a Pure Stream from Honour's Fountain, and that the Crown had discerned somewhat worthy of so much Grace and Favour; tho' in every of these Cases there be great Uncertainty, whether what is presumed Be so or no; so Degrees given by the University, and known by the Habits which the Graduates wear, may very well suppose Personal Merit, tho' a Junior should Know nothing of it. And again, as Superior Quality is rightly Respected, in Honour to the Prince from whom it is derived; so very fitly may Re-respect be shewn to Degrees given by the University, in Honour to the Learned Body which conferred them, tho' what is supposed of Personal Merit should happen, in either Case, to be a Mistake.

I would therefore Advise young Scholars to shew that Respect to their Seniors, which the University Statute intends they should, if there were no Penalty thereto annexed; since it is no more than what they must do for their Own Sakes, if they would be thought to be Modest, Serious, Well-bred Men; a Consideration of greater Weight to ingenuous Minds than the Fear of Any Penalty; and which, to secure that Character, will induce them rather to Exceed, than to be Deficient in Civility; and to give That, in Complaisance, of which the Omission would not have been a Failure in Duty.

But, whilst the Statute requires not only the Junior, under a Penalty, to Pay Respect, but the Senior also, under a Penalty, to Exact it, I am apprehensive there will often be a Difficulty in the Execution of this Statute; since a Failure of Respect in the Junior must, generally, be Complained of before it can be Punished, and a Senior will think he shall appear too much Pleased with Respect, if he should complain it is Withheld from him. There will be such Diffidences in Modest Men, however deserving of it, that they cannot Demand it; and, it may be, sometimes, such humorous or ludicrous Compliances with the Demands of Men more Forward to require it, as will not be thought Respectful.

Philosophers, in order to come to some Resolution, wherein the Chief Happiness of Man Doth consist, do usually endeavour to shew, in the first Place, wherein it doth Not consist. And, in this Inquiry, they say, amongst other things, it doth not consist in Honour. This being too precarious a Good, and too much in the Power of Another, for the Chief Happiness of Man to consist in: For, if another will not give us Honour, we cannot receive it; and if, having been in Possession of it, it be taken from us, we must go without it. Envy and Malice will try to disgrace us, and Avarice and Ambition to supplant us ; and every Way the less any One shall think it our Due, the less, naturally, he will be disposed to give it us. And hence they conclude, that the Chief Happiness of Man must consist in the Improvements of his Mind, in Learned Acquisitions, and Moral Attainments ; or, in a Word, in Virtue ; That only being in our Own Power ; a Good which we may acquire, and preserve ; which the Envy and Malice of Others may improve, and illustrate in us, but cannot deprive us of, nor diminish,

This being the Case, tho' the Respect required by the Statute be due to Seniors, as Seniors ; and tho' it be right in the University to make any Disregard to so reasonable a Statute Penal ; yet will Respect be more surely paid to Seniors, who are known to be adorned with Personal Merit.

What Respect the Statute doth require is External only, and will be shewn to Seniors by well-bred Men, because it is Decent, and by good Men also, because it tends to Good ; since young Men will hereby be taught to think honourably of the Degrees to which they shew Respect, and be excited to Industry, and Improvements in Literature, that they may themselves attain these Degrees, and be equally regarded by Others hereafter, as they now regard Others. But, where there is known to be in Seniors Personal Merit, there will be Respect Internal ; a better Security that External will be shewn, than any Statute, tho' attended with a Penalty.

If this be so, tho' I approve of the Statute requiring Respect under a Penalty, yet I advise the Chief Reliance for Respect to be on Personal Merit, in Aid of the Statute. These will each of them help one another ; for the Statute cannot be disputed, if the Merit should.

Two Things are necessary, in the present Case, to Procure Internal Respect. Learning, which Men Admire ; and Goodness, which they Love ; the Sum of Academical Institution ! And One thing more is as necessary

necessary to Preserve Respect, and that is Prudence. Familiarities, Levities, Intemperances, Irregularities, and Other Imprudences of Seniors, with, or in the Presence of Juniors, will destroy it. To do what will occasion Contempt, and to hope for Respect, is a Vain Hope.

Some few things more I would observe, before I dismiss the Consideration of the Primary Intention of this Statute.

The Statute injoining Respect to be paid to a Bachelor in Juris-prudence or Civil Law, doth suppose the Graduate to have studied the Civil Law, to have become such a Proficient in it as to deserve the Degree, and that he designs to be of some Use, or to be Capable, at least, of being of some Use to the World in this Faculty. This being so, a Degree taken in the Civil Law, without any Study of it, or Skill in it, or Capacity to serve any Man living by it, or any Design or Desire to Know any thing of the Matter, but as a Qualification only for a Dispensation to hold two Benefices with Cure of Souls, or to evade the Exercises for the two Degrees in Arts, doth not Intitle the Graduate to the Respect due to the Regular Proceeder in that Faculty with Intention to Profess it; nor, indeed, to Any Respect whatsoever, either in the University, or out of it, on account of the Degree so taken. For there is not so much as Room left to presume he hath any kind of Desert of the Degree, but is known to be pursuing an Indefensible Scheme by an arrant Fraud. Nor will the Consideration that the Degree is given him by the University help him at all. For the University concurring in the Fraud, will not be able to procure Respect to Another, by an Act which is a Dishonour to Themselves <sup>(a)</sup>.

Again, a Master of Arts, tho', for Learning, very worthy of the Degree, is not, I think, Intitled to the Respect intended him by the Statute, unless he be in his proper Habit. If the Gown, a Part of the Habit belonging to the Degree of Master, be not worn, He may not be Known to be a Master. But, if the Gown be worn, if the Cap be not also worn, he is an Irregular Master in a Place that requires Regularity in Habits as a Part of its Discipline ; and, in such Circumstances, seems to Forfeit, for the present, the Respect which otherwise would have been due to him. There is a Provision in this very Statute, that Batchelors of Arts shall have the Privilege of wearing their Caps in the Schools of Arts and Philosophy, in the Presence of Masters or any Others ; but it is on Condition they have on, at the same time, the Habit belonging to their Degree ; for, otherwise, they are not Intituled to this Privilege.

Again, if it be the Intention of the University, that Respect shall be shewn, according to the Statute, to the Person wearing a Master's Gown (which, continuing to be worn by Batchelors and Doctors in Divinity as their Ordinary Habit, is of great Dignity), they should not suffer it to be worn by Batchelors of Arts, or even Undergraduates, in their Country Cures, if they know it, and can remedy it. For, when it ceases to Distinguish, it will fail of Regard.

But, whilst Respect is required, by a Statute of the University, to be paid by and to Members of their Own Body, that the Degrees there given may be the more esteemed ; let it not be thought by any Scholars of that Place, that they are to pay Respect to none but Themselves. For, the Secondary Intention of the Statute is, that they pay it to Superiors in general, and, occasionally, to their Equals, or even their Inferiors, whom, in certain Places, at certain Times, and in Other certain Circumstances, it will become them to Esteem their Superiors. The Statute intends they should consider the Relation they stand in to every-body, and Behave accordingly.

Instruction in Civility, or in the Knowledge and Practice of Decencies, is a Part of the Liberal Education proposed to be given in the University. And great Variety of Ethical Systems, or Books containing the Doctrine of Manners, in the particular of Respect, as well as in Others, are there read and explained to young Men ; infomuch that, if a Scholar be there found to be in any Degree Uncivil, he may very fairly be deem'd to be in the same Proportion Illiterate. And it is upon the Supposition of Improvement in Civility, that a Learned Education attributes Gentility to those who had it not before.

The Sum of the Respect required of the Junior by the Statute, is described to be no more, than to Uncover the Head to the Senior he meets, and to give him the more Honourable Place. And is not the same, in Civility, due to every well-dress'd Stranger ?

I would not Advise a young Man, in order to shew his Breeding, to pull off his Hat to every well-dress'd Person he meets in the Streets of London. This is not done by Others. It is not expected by Any. There is a general tacit Agreement amongst Men not to do it. And the Reason of the thing is with them. All that he meets are upon Business, and in a Hurry to dispatch it. The unseasonable Respect would interrupt them in their Thoughts about it, and retard them in the Pursuit of it, by causing them to look back upon Him, to see whether they Know him. Besides, there is a Crowd to be gotten through, and the Calls of Chairmen to be attended to, and Room to be made for them, and the Porters Burdens to be evaded. The Difficulty of passing safely makes it necessary for him to look wholly to his Own Way.

But I would Advise the same young Man to pull off his Cap, and give the honourable Place, to all well-dress'd Persons he meets in the Colleges or Streets of Oxford, tho' he be certain he never saw any of them in his Life. For tho' He know them not, yet, it is likely, they are known and valued also by Others of the University ; and if he pay Respect to the Friends of Others of the same Body, he will oblige Them, and his Own Acquaintance will be well Intitled to Respect reciprocal.

That he doth not know them, is rather a Reason why he should shew them Respect, than why he should not.

For, for ought he knows, they may be Persons of high Rank, or in considerable Posts, or have done great Service to their Country whereof he participates, or whose Ancestors have been Founders of Colleges, or otherwise Benefactors to the Place, the Fruits of whose Goodness are tasted every Day by Himself, or his Relations, or his worthy Acquaintance. And, if he would have been sorry to have overlook'd any such Persons when he should come to know it, he will do well to guard against the Error, by a general Civility to all that have a Gentleman-like Appearance.

But if Persons unknown are not respectable upon any of These Accounts, yet, as Strangers, who come to see the University, they are to be received with general Respect, as private Strangers are with particular. They Both come to pay their Respects, and are therefore Both to be Respected. All Strangers to Us, whether Foreign or Domestick, are as Travellers in a strange Country; they are come abroad to see Cities and Men; they want to see what is Curious, and to learn what is Useful; and, at all Events, would be Safe, and not Offend. The Civility advised is a Sort of Beginning to be Acquainted, an Earnest of a Disposition to do all Other Civil things, an Invitation to be Inquisitive, an Assurance of Protection, and favourable Interpretation of every thing they do. It pleases and cheers the Mind, and gives them a good Opinion of the Man who can discern something in them worthy of his Regard; and Room, from their Own Experience, to say, the Scholars of the University have Civility, if, possibly thro' Malevolence, there should at any time have been a different Report.

But, if the well-dress'd Stranger should happen to be a Pickpocket, and the young Scholar, if he had known it, would have been far from paying him the Respect due to Gentlemen; yet, since he did not know it, let him not be over-much concerned. The Respect he hath been so liberal of cost him nothing, and hath moreover been of this Use to him: It hath contributed, as much as a single Act can do, to confirm him in a Habit which became him.

 “ Year, and Loss of Privilege, if Privileged.”

This is the best Statute we have. The Importance of it, in the Opinion of the University, to the Sobriety, and Temperance, and Chastity, and Frugality, and Studiousness of the Scholar, may be seen by the Largeness of the Penalties assigned to the Breach of it; and, in the Opinion of Founders, by the Care they have taken that their Scholars should have no Occasion to go to any Publick-House, as Such.

The Statute, indeed, supposes there may be an Occasion which the Vice-chancellor or Proctors may think Necessary, and may not Disapprove of. A significant Stranger may be inclined to thank the Scholar at his Inn for his Civility in shewing him any thing Curious in the University. Parents, Relations, or other Valuable Friends, may desire he should eat with them, where, where, as Travellers, they must eat themselves. And these, it may be, will the rather be thought Necessary Occasions, as the Scholar cannot Entertain them, nor they Accept of an Entertainment, with any Propriety, at his private Chamber. But his Compliance with such Occasions as these, if his Stay at a Publick-House be not such as will make him Irregular in Other Places, is not against the Intention of the Statute; and any Other Occasion I am not aware of.

For, with respect to Eating, Scholars, by their Founder's Institutions, have always Commons of a certain Value regularly provided for them in their respective Colleges, sufficient in the Quantity, and acceptable in the Dressing; or, if there be a Failure in Either, it admits of Remedy. And, with regard to Drinking, they have Ale for their due Refreshment within their own Walls, and all proper Opportunities of Access to it. There can, then, be no Occasion for them to go abroad into Publick-Houses, for what they may with greater Convenience, and, generally, in better Condition, have at home. And if any Eatable or Potable, differing from what is usually provided in Colleges for the Entertainment of Scholars, be now and then desired in a moderate Degree, and the Scholar can afford it, it will be but a reasonable Indulgence, and may easily be sent for to his Room.

The Founder's Scholars are not at liberty to depart from their Founder's Institutions. Commons of a certain Value are to be provided for them, at stated Hours, twice a Day; and carried up to their several Tables, whether they shall be there to sit down to them or not. They are to come as Orderly, and as Constantly to their Meals, as to their Prayers. And Tutors are to Note the Absences of their Pupils from the publick Refectory, as well as from the Chapel, and to inquire into the Cause, and to approve or disapprove of it. And if Scholars, not upon any Foundation, are allowed (for in some Colleges they are not) to live together with the Founder's Scholars, for their greater Improvements in Education, because the Founder's Scholars are supposed to be chosen into Societies for their singular Parts and Learning, they are Admitted under the Title of Commoners; and must stand to Commons of a certain Value at their Own Expence, as the Scholars upon Foundations do, at the Expence of their Founders; and in This, as well as in every Other Respect, must conform to the Rules to which the Founder's Scholars are subject, under the same Penalties. It hath already been observed, that Putting out of Commons is a Penalty in All Colleges, and, in Many, for almost all Faults. But, of this Sort of Penalty they could not be capable, if they were not to stand to Commons during their Residence. Neither the Founder's Scholars, then, nor Those they permit to live amongst them for University Education, have it in their Choice, whether they will stand to Commons at all, or no; or will stand to Commons at Noon only, and not at Night; for a Custom either Way would be to push young Scholars into the Publick-houses, with which Founders of Colleges Intended Their Scholars should never have Commerce; and with which, if Other Scholars permitted to live with them will have Commerce, it will not be Agreeable to the Intention of Founders of Colleges, that these Men should be continued in their Colleges.

If it be said, that Founders of Colleges have been Indiscreet, in making the Putting out of Commons a Penalty for most Faults, since, by this means, they have Themselves directed their Own Scholars into the Publick-Houses, with which they Intended they should not have Commerce; I answer, That Founders of Colleges did not Imagine the Prohibition of Commons, of Value Three Halfpence, would send the Scholar for Commons to the Publick-Houses, whither he was forbidden to go under the Penalty of Six Shillings and Eight-pence; but would oblige him to pay for what he should send for from abroad, of equal Value with his Commons, out of the Allowance for his private Expences; whereby that Fund for other Gratifications would be so far sunk, as to make the Prohibition of Commons in his College a Punishment he would sensibly feel, and consequently make more haste to redeem; especially when he considered, that whilst he was out of Commons with respect to Himself, he yet stood to Commons for the Castle

Castle Prisoners, or Other poor People, to whom these were daily sent.

This, I believe, was the Founder's Intention. But whatever was his Intention, I allow the Punishment was Indiscreet; and, in the Nature of it, too great a Temptation to the Scholar to go to Publick-Houses, let what would be the Penalty, if the Occasion should not be allowed to be Urgent, and to Eat and Drink there at a Great Expence, when Any was Unnecessary.

But neither is the going thither a Matter only of Unnecessary Expence; but leading to Habits of Idleness, and Luxury, and Ebriety, and Other Immoralities, there being Masters of Publick-Houses in Oxford, who, as it is well known, in their Inquiries after Maid-Servants, have insisted that they should be somewhat Pretty.

In the History of the Chancellorship of Archbishop Laud, upon a Representation that there were at that time Three Hundred Alehouses in Oxford, He is said to have reduced them to One Hundred at first, and afterwards to Fewer. And it were to be wished, that, since there are near as many now as there were then, they might once more be reduced to a Number more easily Visitable by the Magistrates of the University, to the great Security of the Scholar's Sobriety and Virtue, and better Payment of his Debts to the Trading Part of the City.

If the Publick-Houses within the University and Precincts of it were ascertained; and no more than a reasonable Number for the Use of the Markets and Travellers were allowed; and the Licensing thereof were Restored to the University, to whom this Privilege seems in Equity to belong; and the Motive to the University Justices to grant Licences were always the Sober Characters and Sufficient Substance of the Persons desiring to take them, and not the Necessities of broken Tradesmen, or Gentlemens Servants turn'd away for Misbehaviour; and the Fees for granting them were no other than what Other Justices receive in any other Parts of the Kingdom ; there would be an End of the Complaint of the Expence of living in the University, or, at least, of the just Cause of it. The Grantée would, then, be upon his Good Behaviour ; and might dread the Displeasure of the Magistrate for Receiving Scholars into his House, contrary to the Covenants of his Lease or Licence ; and the Magistrate would have no Reluctance to demand the Penalty of the Statute of the Man who should Offend, and to whom he was under no Obligation.

And amongst these, it would be well, if the Number of Coffee-Houses, in particular, were limited ; and the Keepers of these had Licence to sell only the proper Coffee-House Liquors specified in their Licences to be made forfeitable if they exceeded. These, being under no Restraint in this respect, are become the most exceptionable Publick-Houses in the whole University. For thither all the irregular and extravagant Youth resort, as it should seem, to read the News, after which an Inquiry is natural, and may be useful ; and to drink a Dish of Coffee or Tea, Liquors neither Intoxicating nor Expensive ; but, in Deed and in Truth, to Dine, at much Later than the College Hours, upon costly Varieties before bespoken, and ordered to be sent thither from the Cooks-Shops ; and to regale themselves, afterwards, with Punch or Wine, till they find themselves in a Humour for childish, mischievous, or cruel Enterprizes.

SECT. 7.

“ IT is Injoined, 1. That Scholars, of what “ Condition soever, do abstain from all Kinds “ of Game or Play, in which Money is contended
 “ for; as from playing at Dice, at Cards, or at “ Bowls in the private Yards or Gardens of “ Townsmen; and that they be not Present at any “ publick Games of the like Sort prohibited by
 “ the Statutes of the Realm: And that no One
 “ within the University Receive Scholars exercising “ themselves in Games of the like Sort. Penalty
 “ to the Scholar, 6s. 8d. besides the Restitution
 “ of what he hath gained by the Unlawful Game.
 “ Penalty to the Townsman for Receiving him,
 “ 20s. and Imprisonment till he shall have given “ Security not to receive any Scholar practising such “ Games for the future.”

With regard to this Part of the Statute, I would Observe, that, if the Games of Billiards and of Tennis should be said not to be therein expressed, yet the same must be allowed to be implied; because, not so much the Species of the Game is intended to be forbidden, as the Playing at it for Money, and as there will be a Loss of Time to the Scholar engaged whether in Playing, or in Looking on. Now the Statute could never Intend to forbid the Playing at Cards for Money, and to allow the Playing at Billiards for Money; to forbid the Loss of Time that would attend the Playing at Cards, and not to forbid the Loss of Time that would attend the Playing at Billiards. The University being professedly a Place of Study, must for ever be supposed to forbid, as far as it can, what will Occasion the Loss of Time.
 Nor will any thing, naturally, occasion the Loss of
More Time, than the Playing for Money, let the Game

be what it will: For, naturally, the Winner cannot be more desirous to pursue his Good Fortune, than the Loser will be impatient to retrieve his Bad; so that the Intermissions in Gaming, even for the common Refreshments of Nature, are likely to be very short, and, for Improvements in Study, none at all.

But, here is not only a Loss of Time to the Scholar, in a Season of Life, and amidst Opportunities, the fittest for Improvement, but an Obstruction to Improvement. All those fine Notions, with which, in the course of Education, the Mind is to be richly stored, can never gain Admittance, or make Impression. The Scholar is Gaming for Money, in a Place where he is taught to Despise it, or at least not to Covet it; and taking a Pleasure in getting from Another, what it will be a Grief to him to part with; and making it a thing Uncertain, Whether he shall ever be able to be Just to those, who, in several Ways, have Legal or Equitable Demands upon him, and who have not Consented that he shall have Liberty to Play away, or Hazard the Loss of, what is Due to them. Besides, Gaming for Money, especially for any Great Matter (and, in young Mens Allowances during their Stay here for Education, a Little Matter is great, or ought to be so) being founded in Avarice, will easily lead Men to take Advantage of inferior Skill, and to Play Unfairly; and, in Proportion to the Appetite to Win, or Necessity not to Lose, will transport them, if they Lose, into very indecent Passions and Expressions, shameful in Common Men, and much more so in Students in Philosophy, or Intended, or Supposed to be so; and destructive of that Tranquillity, which is requisite to the Thinking rightly, and Acting wisely.

One thing more I would Observe, which is, That whatever Games are forbidden by the Statutes of the Realm, the University Magistrate will always have it in his Power, to suppress.

2. “ *It is Injoined, That Scholars of what Con“ dition soever do abstain from all Kinds of Sport “ or Exercise, from whence Danger, Injury, or “ Inconvenience may arise to Others; as from “ Hunting wild Creatures, Deer, Hare, Cony,
 “ with Dogs, Ferrets, Nets or Toils of any Kind “ whatsoever; and from Shooting and carrying “ Guns. Penalty to the Scholar offending 6s. 8d.
 “ besides the Hanging of the Dogs, and Forfeiture “ of the Nets and Guns, to be sold for the Use of “ the University.”*”

What I have to say, with regard to this Part of the Statute, is this :

There are several Vacations in the Year, when young Scholars usually retire to their respective Homes, where, tho’ it be Intended they should still pursue their Studies, yet is it not Expected they should do it with so close an Application, but that frequent Intermissions for Recreation and Exercise may be Permitted, if not Advised. At these Times, and in these Places, and with proper Company, one must be Morose to forbid the Use of Diversions innocent and healthful, as Opportunity offers, or the Weather invites.

But, since young Men are admitted Members of Colleges for their Improvement in Literature, what was an healthful Exercise, and an agreeable Diversion, in their Father’s Manors, is horrid Idleness at the University. Nor is there a more pitious Creature any-where to be found, than a young Scholar, who, having been Hunting and Shooting for four or five Months in the Country, can think of nothing but Hunting and Shooting from the Moment he returns to his College.

With respect to Shooting in particular, from whence most Mischiefs are likely to arise : When a young Scholar retires to his Father’s Seat in the Country, Care is taken that he shall proceed to this Diversion with a considerate moderate and skilful Attendant, who, knowing how to carry a Gun himself, in such a Manner, as to be sure it shall hurt nobody, may instruct a young Beginner to do so to ; when he will have the Pleasure of the Exercise, without the Hazard of it.

But, young Scholars of the University, mixing in this Sport with young Scholars only, who are almost All Beginners, are not equally Safe. Inexperience, want of Caution, and Excess of Frolick expose them to infinite Mischiefs, as well from Themselves as from their Companions. Witness the sad Accidents that happen every Year from the careless, fearless, inadvertent, indiscreet, unskilful Use of Guns by Scholars of the University. And yet, by their going out thus Armed, in such Troops, as they are still permitted to do, every Morning of the two long Winter Terms, one would imagine that Shooting was a Science to be learned at the University at Any Hazard.

But, What shall we say, with respect to those Gentlemen of high Character and great Estates, living in the Neighbourhood of the University ; who are so kind as to Speak well of it ; and so good as to Wish well to it ; and who never do any thing to Offend any of the Body ; and who do many things to Oblige many of its Members ? Will not These Gentlemen, for whom the University Professes to have great Esteem, have reason to take it amiss, that young Scholars are suffered to go every Day into their Liberties with Guns and Dogs, to disturb and destroy their Game, and to break in upon them, and interrupt them in the Places of their proper Disport, and to rob their Tables of the Fruits of their Diversion ?

It is certain these Trespases cannot be committed by young Scholars, without great Disregard to Propriety, to Decency, to Civility, to Justice. And why then will the University suffer their young Men to behave in so Rude and so Offensive a Manner, and to Disoblige their kind Neighbours who honour them with their Friendship, when they might so easily be restrained ?

Young Scholars, it is true, do often pretend they have Leave given them by one Neighbouring Gentleman or another, to come and Shoot in their Woods and Manors whenever they please. If this be so, and these Gentlemen are aware, that what they Permit, the Univerſity have Forbidden, the Univerſity have reaſon to take it very unkindly of them. For Such Leave is an Invitation to their Scholars to neglect their Studies, to diſregard the Statutes of the Univerſity, and to grieve their Governours and Tutors by Abſences from every Place of Duty.

But, I am inclined to believe, there is not a Gentleman in the Neighbourhood of the Univerſity, who is thus unkind to it. Nor will I ever ſuppoſe it. I will ſuppoſe rather, that, if he hath a mind to give any young Scholar, whoſe Family he hath a Regard for, the Opportunity of any Pleaſure of this Sort, he will Invite him, at a proper Time, to his Houſe, and lend him his Game-keeper to attend him, or perhaps accompany him Himſelf in the Diverſion; and not give him Leave to come at pleaſure into his Liberties, with ſuch ordinary Company as he can pick up, with an Appetite more to the Quantity of Proviſion, than a Gentleman-like Reliſh for the Sport. Or, I will ſuppoſe rather, that Scholars do only Pretend to have ſuch Leave, when, in truth, they have it not, that a Governour may be the more inclined to give them Leave likewise. But the Governour of a College hath no Power to diſpenſe with the Statutes of the Univerſity; nor hath the Magiſtrate of the Univerſity any ſuch Power. He is the Guardian of the Statutes, and is Obliged to inflict the Penalty of 6 s. 8 d. upon every Scholar Treaſpaſſing, and to hang his Dogs, and to ſell his Gun for the Uſe of the Univerſity, tho' all the Gentlemen of the County ſhould have given him Leave to Shoot upon their Eſtates.

But, however, if any of the Neighbouring Gentlemen have really given Scholars Leave to Shoot in their Manors as often as they Pleaſe, and the Univerſity, taking it Unkindly, have grown Careleſs to prevent what themſelves have ſeemed to Encourage; I could wiſh, methinks,

methinks, they might be, in this Particular, upon this Foot of Friendship with each other for the future.

Let the Univerſity levy the Penalty, as it is their Duty, upon every Scholar ſeen to carry a Gun, left he ſhould trespaſs with it into the Liberties of their good Neighbours; and let their good Neighbours forbear to give young Scholars Leave to Shoot upon their Eſtates, left they ſhould diſoblige the Univerſity; but rather Order their Servants to take away the Guns of Scholars ſo trespaſſing, and to Send them to the Univerſity Magiſtrate to be Sold, as forfeited by the Statute, for the Uſe of the Univerſity.

3. “ It is Injoined, That neither Rope-dancers, nor Stage-players, nor Gladiators exhibit their reſpective Shews within the Univerſity, or Precincts of it, without the ſpecial Leave of the Vice-chancellor; nor Scholars be preſent at them. Penalty to the Rope-dancer, &c. Imprisonment; to the Scholar, if he be an Undergraduate, what the Vice-chancellor or Proctors ſhall think fit; if a Graduate, 6s. 8d. for the Uſe of the Univerſity.”

The Gladiators Entertainments, not to be encouraged, or even endured, in a Chriſtian Country, and much leſs in a Univerſity profeſſing to form the Minds of young Men to Sentiments of Humanity and Tenderneſs, have long been diſcontinued in this Place. Nor are Stage-players permitted to approach it, unleſs at an Act. And, at ſuch a Time, there are ſo many Lewd Women, and Sharpers, and Pickpockets, that come along with the Players, and ſuch a Concourse of Strangers to ſee their Interludes, who expect to be entertained by the Scholars of their Acquaintance, that, I think, it would be well, if they were not permitted to be here even at an Act; for the Players are not eſſential to an Act, or the Performance of Scholaſtick Exerciſes; nor by any Statute relating to the Keeping of an Act, are they encouraged to aſk the Vice-chancellor’s Leave to erect their Stage here. It is by This Statute alone that that He hath Power to give any such Leave. Nor when they have adventured to Ask it, hath he Always Given it. Nor, indeed, hath he Ever given it (tho', perhaps he might not be aware of the Consequence) without exposing the Scholars to infinite Hazard and Expence: To avoid which, the wiser Parents have, at such a Time, withdrawn their Sons from the University, where, otherwise, they might have staid with Safety and Improvement. It is enough, that our Young Gentlemen do at that Time speak fine Verses, upon well-chosen Subjects, in a handsome Manner; and that the Proceeders to their Degrees in the several Faculties do perform their Exercises to the Satisfaction of Learned Men, who shall come to hear them; and that those who shall then complete their Degrees in Musick, do agreeably Entertain the Ladies of the worthy Families in the Neighbourhood of the Place, who shall then honour us with their Presence, with Harmony Vocal and Instrumental. To Rope-dancers, it seems, there is not the same Exception as to Players: These are still said to give Innocent, and not Expensive Entertainment. This they will be the more likely to do, if, as they must have the Vice-chancellor's special Leave, he put them also under due Regulation. The Good Order of the Place, the Chief Magistrate's chief Care, must be preserved. This it will not be, if the Time of their Coming, and the Length of their Stay, and at what Hours they shall Astonish the University with their notable Activity, be not appointed and made the Condition of his Leave. It will not be consistent with Good Order to permit them to be here in Term Time, even for a Day; since it would be Inconvenient, and Unseemly, in a Season of professed Business, to introduce Diversions; nor in any Vacation for more than a Week; that being a Length of Time sufficient wherein to satisfy every Scholar's Curiosity, who may be desirous to see every thing once that is reported to be surprising; and the Hours in which they are allowed to Shew, must not interfere with the stated Hours of Prayers or Meals, in regular Societies, or of the Scholar's repairing to his College in the Evening, as the Statutes do direct; nor subject him to any other Expence whatsoever, besides that of seeing what he is Invited to see, for a certain and moderate Consideration.

THUS

THUS much I have thought Proper to Observe, with regard to the Statutes of the College, and to What hath seemed material in the Statutes of the University contained under the Titles de Vestitu & Habitu Scholastico, and de Moribus conformandis, which are now become the Statutes of the College. I hope there is nothing in Either but what the Sober Part of the Youth resorting hither for Education, and Those who are chiefly concerned they should continue Sober, will think Reasonable. And, that they will find no Difficulty in living under these Rules of Discipline, I have the Satisfaction to be assured Myself by long Experience; and what, I think, will satisfy Others who may doubt, is, That none of this Character have at any time gone away from the Society, thro' Reluctance to Observe the Rules, tho' some few, having no Dependence on Parents, nor upon the College whilst Unendowed, and lying open to the Influence of Men of private Resentments, very skilfully, and very industriously applied, and not despairing even of the Assistance of the Magistrate to get the better of their Governour, Have removed. But, their having, afterwards, Repented of it, and expressed their Concern for it to their Friends, to be imparted to their Governour, is an Argument, that, if Art had not been used to mislead them, they could have been Patient of the Discipline of the College into which they had at first been Admitted.

But were it otherwise, still These are the Statutes of the College, and invariably so, unless there shall appear a sufficient Reason for a Variation, and those who dislike them are not Obliged to live under them. Only this, I hope, will not be too much for Me to expect, that, if they desire to be Admitted into the Society Governed by these Rules, they would not, afterwards, have the Disingenuity to Disincline Others to submit to them, but would rather think Themselves obliged to conform to them, whilst they should continue Members of it, and not make it Difficult to a Governour to help them them to remove from it in a Reputable Manner (a), even for a Justifiable Cause.

On the other hand, the Governor and Tutor are to be made Easy, as well as the Scholar. They suppose the Scholar Entering under their Care, comes resolved to live regularly, soberly, virtuously, and religiously; nor would he have been Admitted but upon this Supposition. They may be Deceived. His Entrance here, may have been the Parent's Choice, and not his Own. Or, if his Own, yet there is so much of the Vitium Seculi in the University, that his New Acquaintance, enjoying greater Liberties in Other Places, may have changed his early Resolutions, and made him impatient of Restraint in This. So much Difficulty do the Houses of Learning that relax their Discipline, create to those who have a conscientious Regard to Founders Institutions! A Governor and Tutor will be Sorry to find this the Case. But they cannot Help what they Lament. All the Governors and Tutors in the Universe can no more hinder an Irregular Scholar from taking the Liberties he likes, than all the Statutes of the Realm against Treason can prevent his being engaged in a Rebellion, if this should be his Choice. A Governor and Tutor can only hinder him, a Member of their Body as he is for the present, from taking the Liberties He likes, and They dislike, in the Place where they Preside. And, to do this, will be a Duty they Owe to the Society, which cannot be Safe, whilst he continues to be a Member of it; and a Duty which they Owe to their Country also, since the Transition is very easy and natural, from a Contempt of the Rules by which Lesser Bodies of Men are kept in Order, and become useful to Themselves and Others, to a Disregard to the Laws of the Land. I here repeat, what I have already said, that notwithstanding the Looseness of the Times, (which, it is suggested, will not bear Conformity to pious Founders Institutions) there never can be a Time when a Man may not be a regular, sober, virtuous, and religious Man, if he Pleases. And, therefore, if

(a) The Manner of the Scholar's Removing from One House of Learning to Another is settled by the Statute of the University thereto relating, as described in University Education, 2d Edit. from p. 25. to p. 61. nor can a Vice-chancellor give him Leave to Remove in any Other.

a Scholar, having been Debauched at School, is rather pleas'd to carry on his Follies, and Luxuries, and Lewdnesses, at the University, he must be Advised by his Tutor, let his Quality be what it will, to be so Good, as to be Pleas'd not to do it; for that no Other Behaviour will be endured in the Society, but what is agreeable to the Rules of it. If he is still Pleas'd to Disregard his Tutor's Manly and Gentleman-like Remonstrances to his Irregular Conduct, his Tutor must tell him he will no longer be his Tutor. And his Governor must write to those who placed him in the Society, to remove him from it, for that his longer Stay will Hurt Others, and not Benefit Himself. There is no need to be of a College in order to live Dissolutely. Nor can it be for the Honour or Interest of a Governor or Tutor, to suffer any Offensive, Uncorrected Misbehaviour in any Scholar under their Care, since they will afterwards infallibly be Represented not to have taken a Due Care of him, and will not be Misrepresented.
