Scottish Proverb's very scarce

THE INTRODUCTION.

I Suppose it to be a Thing common to all Nations, and Languages, to deliver their Minds, as Occasion offers, in Proverbs: Which are short, dogmatical, concise Sentences, accommodated to the Principal Concerns of Life; commonly used, and commonly known: And, for the most Part, conceived in figurative Expressions, where one Thing is said, and another Thing understood and applied.

AMONG others, the Scots are wonderfully given to this Way of speaking: And, as the Consequence of that, abound with Proverbs, many of whom are very expressive, quick, and home to the Purpose. And indeed this Humour prevails universally over the whole Nation, especially among the better Sort of the Commonalty, none of whom will discourse you any considerable time, but he will confirm every Assertion and Observation with a Scottish Proverb.

To that Nation I owe my Birth and Education; and to that manner of speaking I was us'd from my Infancy, and that to such a Degree, that I became, in some measure, remarkable for it.

ONCE, upon a very trifling Occasion, I would try, for Experiment, how many Scottish Proverbs I could readily remember: And, in a very short time, I wrote down above One Thousand Two Hundred, as they offered in Discourse, or occurred to my Memory. I then began to think that a longer Time would certainly produce a greater Number: And so resolved to divert myself that Way for some time; I do not know that there was ever any Collection of this Sort, save one, and that was made above One Hundred and Twenty Years ago, by one Mr. David Fergusson, Minister of Dumfermlin, who died in the Year 1598. I had made a considerable Progress in this Collection before I could possibly meet with that Book: And when I did, I found that they only amounted to Nine Hundred Forty Five, of which I had already anticipated the most and best. The rest were either obsolete, that I did not understand, or insignificant by Words,

The INTRODUCTION.

Words, and silly Comparisons that were not worth the transcribing.

WHEN I first began to think of publishing this my Collection, I propos'd to my self four Things :

I. TO write down none but those which I knew to be Native, Genuine, Scotish Proverbs; but as I proceeded, I found it impossible strictly to distinguish the Scotish from the English. For both Nations speak the same Language, have constant Intercourse the one with the other; and no doubt borrow their Proverbs the one from the other. Not only so, but I found upon further Inquiry, that many of these Proverbs, which I believed to be Genuine Scotish Proverbs, were not only English, but French, Italian, Spanish, Latin, and Greek Proverbs. For the Sense and Sentiments of Mankind, as to the main Concerns of Life, are much the same, and their Observations about them, being often repeated, become Proverbs, which though differing in Words, express the same Thoughts. Let a Man read over Phocilides, Theognis, and other Fragments of the Greek Gnomists, he shall find many of these Proverbs almost literally expressed; so hard a Thing it is to know what Proverbs are proper to any one Nation. So that I found my self oblig'd to set down all those for Scotish Proverbs, that are used in Scotland, and by Scotish Men, though many are common to the English, and not a few, perhaps, originally of that Nation.

The INTRODUCTION.

II. I resolv'd to collect none but those which had been the result of prudent Observation, or carried in them some moral Instruction, or; at least, were odd and comical in the Expression. For I did not think trifling By-Words, silly Phrases, or insignificant Comparisons worth my while. And in pursuance of this Resolution, I have left out more than I have taken in. As,

First, All superstitious Observations of Times, Persons, Places, or other Things which the Vulgar call Sonsie, or Unsonsie. As,

It is no Sonsie to meet a bare Foot in the Morning.

The first Swail going with you, and the first Lamb meeting you, bodes a good Year.

For these are apt to fill Mens Minds with panick Apprehensions, and debauches their Sense of, and dependance upon Almighty God.

Secondly, I have omitted all proverbial Imprecations with which the Scots abound. As, Dee'l ding a Divat off your Weime with a slaughter Spade.

Dee'l piss in your Arse, and make Twapenny Tape of it.

Dee'l raise you, and set you down with a Rattle.

The INTRODUCTION.

FOR these are abominable, and wholly inconsistent with the Christian Profession: Yet I have retained some proverbial ill Wishes, because they are comically expressed, and commonly used without Malice.

Thirdly, I have left out all those which are openly obscene, and these are very many, pat, and expressive. But since it does not become a Man of Manners to use them, it does not become a Man of my Age and Profession to write them.

Fourthly, I have left out all insignificant Comparisons, which are only Forms and Phrases, but can make no Man the wiser, or better for using, or knowing them. As,

As bare as the Birk at Yule Even.

As wanton as a wet Hare.

As busy as a Bee in a Tar Barrel.

Fifthly, I have left out all trifling By-Words, and proverbial Phrases, I mean such as are equally silly and useless. As,

Good Day to you all and dealt among you.

Go fiddle my Dog a Dance.

Eat your fill and leave your Leavings.

AND indeed to have written down all the Scottish proverbial Phrases, had been to have transcribed a great Share of the Language used in that Country.

Sixthly,

The INTRODUCTION.

Sixthly, I have rejected all those Proverbs that seem to make too homely with the Almighty Being, for they are apt to wear off that awful Sense that every good Man ought to have of the Divine Majesty.

III. My third Resolution was to explain those of them whose Sense and Meaning was not so obvious; either by shewing the Original from whence they arose, the Occasion on which they are spoken, the Objects to which they are apply'd, or their Meaning is given in a short Paraphrase. This was wanting in the first Collection, and therefore the Meaning of some of them is not now so easily understood.

IV. My fourth Resolution was to make these Proverbs plain and intelligible to the English: And in order to this, I have written the English Words in the Margin that correspond to the Scottish in the Proverb. And I have spelled the Scottish Words that differ from the English only in Accent and Pronunciation as the English do: except where the Rhyme and Decorum of the Proverb necessarily require it to be otherwise: So instead of writing Stain, Bean, mair, fair, I have written Stone, Bone, more, sore, for so the Scots write these Words on other Occasions, and have done so ever since the Year 1613. I know my Countrymen will quarrel with me for this, as spoiling a great deal of the Briskness and Vigour of the Phrase; but I am not without Apprehensions that if I had spelled them as they pronounce pronounce them, they themselves would have found some difficulty in reading of them, whereas here they will find none. I have now and then interspersed some English Proverbs, and Latin Sentences, agreeable to the Sense of the preceding Proverb, but without any great Industry or Design, for the most Part, as they occurred to my Memory as I was writing.

It is not possible that so large a Collection should deserve any other Character than that which Martial gives to his Epigrams, viz. Part good, Part bad, and Part indifferent. Yet I believe I may venture to say, that there will be found among these as great a Number of good, significant and useful Proverbs, as in any Collection of that nature yet extant: Not excepting the Greek and Latin of Erasmus, or Mr. Ray's English. For though the first has collected three Chiliads and a half; yet if you take from among those, trifling Comparisons, and insignificant Phrases, the useful and instructive Proverbs will be far from making one Chiliad. The Design of that great Person being not so much to collect instructive Proverbs, as to explain the allusive and proverbial Phrases in the Greek and Latin Authors, that were then coming in Use upon the revival of Learning. The ingenious Mr. Ray was odds of ten Years in collecting the English Proverbs, had the Use of all the former Collections, and the Assistance of his Friends and Acquaintance in the several Parts of England; yet his whole Collection amounts only to Two Thousand Seven Hundred

The INTRODUCTION.

Hundred Sixty Five. And of these he rejects Six Hundred Fifty Five, which, so far as he knew, were not in use in England, but by former Collectors borrowed from other Languages, and he writes Two Hundred Five in Italick Character, as not being sure that they are English, and he has only Nine Hundred Eighty One Sentences, the rest being Phrases, Similes, and local Proverbs, of the Manners and remarkable Things in the several Shires of England. Whereas there are here above Three Thousand, all intire Sentences, all of them in present common Use among the Scots, over and above the interspersed English and Latin, which will outdo even Erasmus himself: And though this Number may seem very great to belong to one Nation, yet I doubt not but there are many hundreds more which either I have not heard, or has not occurred to me.

I am not unsensible that a great many of these Proverbs are variously pronounced in the different Parts of that Nation, and even in one and the same Place, as they are spoken on different Occasions, and apply'd to various Objects: I have wrote them down here either as I have heard them ofteneft, or as I think they will do best.

IT was my Misfortune not to have met with Mr. Ray before this Collection was arrived to too great a height to be unravelled, otherways I had certainly imitated him in his rational Alphabetical Method; but I have endeavoured to supply that Defect

Defect by an Index, not of the initial Words which (as he well observes) are variable without the least diminution to the Sense of the Proverb; but of the principal Word in it; so that a Man remembering the principal Word of any Proverb, it is but looking for that Word in the Index, and that will Point to him the Letter and Number where it is to be found. If there be more principal Words than one, I have either taken them all, or that Word that seems to be the Hinge upon which the Proverb turns.

IF there be any other Objection against this my Performance, I have one Apology for all, and that is, that I made this Collection without any Regard either to Honour or Profit, but only to give my self a Harmless, Innocent, Scholar-like Divertisement in my declining Years. Yet if what I have done, be any way grateful, either to the English, whom I honour and esteem; or to the Scots, whom I love and affect, I shall be well pleased.

The INTRODUCTION

T H E

Scottish Proverbs

Collected, Explain'd, and made Intelligible to the ENGLISH.

^a Tell Sow was never good to
^b Grices.

Spoken to those, who having no Children of their own, deal harshly by other peoples.

2. A ^c bony Bride is soon ^d busked.

3. A short Horse is soon ^e whisked.

These two Proverbs are often repeated together for the Rhyme's Sake: The first signifies, that what is of it self beautiful, needs but little adorning: And the other, that a little Task

^a barren
^e cur-ried.

^b Pigs; the Scots spell it Gryses. ^c pretty. ^d dress'd.

B

is soon ended; and answers to the English,
A thin Meadow is soon mow'd.

4. After Word comes ^a Weird; ^b fair fall
them. that call me Madam.

A facetious answer to them who call you by a higher Title than your present Station deserves; as calling a young Clergyman Doctor, or a young Merchant Alderman, as if you would say, all in good time.

Lat. Non raro parva sunt magnarum rerum
indicia. initia

5. All Overs is Vice, but over the Water.

This shews the Folly of all Extremes, translated from the Latin, Omne nimium vertitur in vitium.

Eng. There is a difference between staring and stark mad.

Lat. Dam vitant hunc nubes & mania captant.

6. A Head full of Hair, a ^c Kirkle full of Hips, and a Brist full of Papes, are three sure Marks of a ^d Daw.

These physiognomical Proverbs have little Truth or Certainty in them, and miss as oft as they hit.

7. A willful Man wanted never woe.

Because he often miscarries in his Attempts,
by sticking too close to his own Opinion.

Eng. Will will have wilt, though it wo win.

8. A willful Man should be very wise.

Because he will not take the Assistance of other Mens Wisdom.

^a good Fortune. ^b well may they be. ^c Petticoat. ^d Slut.

9. A poor Man gets a poor Marriage, and that's no meet for him.

Spoken when People of mean Condition are meanly treated. The literal Sense is well express'd by Juvenal;

*Quis gener hic placuit censu minor, atque puellæ
Sarcinulis impar.*

10. A^a sooth board is no^b board.

Spoken when People reflect too satyrically upon the real Vices, Follies, and Miscarriages of their Neighbours.

Eng. The truest Jest sounds worst in guilty Ears.

11. All new Things^c sturts; quoth the good Wife, when she^d gae'd ly to the^e Hireman.

People are generally much affected with Noveltyes.

Lat. Est natura hominum novitatis avida.

12. A hungry Man sees Meat far.

Necessity sharpens Industry and Invention.

13. A Pound of Care will not pay an Ounce of Debt.

Care here is taken for Trouble, Vexation, and Concern, by which no Business will be effected; but rather by Patience and Industry.

Eng. Sorrow quits no Scores.

14. A begun turn is half ended; quoth the good Wife when she stuck the^f Grape in the^g Middling.

Eng. Well begun half ended.

Answerable to the Latin.

^a true. ^b Jest. ^c affects. ^d went to Bed. ^e Servantman.
^f Dungfork. ^g Dunghil.

4 SCOTTISH PROVERBS

Dimidium facti qui bene cepit habet.

15. Ay, as you thrive your Feet falls from you.

Spoken when People meet with unexpected Interruptions in their Business. The English say, The further you go, the further behind.

16. All is not Gold that glisters, nor Maidens that wear their Hair.

It was the Fashion some Years ago for Virgins to go bare headed; the Proverb means, that every thing is not so good as it appears.

Lat. Fronti nulla fides

Item Non omne quod splendet aurum est.

17. All Corn is not shorn by ^a Kempers.

Things may be done well enough by Men of ordinary Strength, Power, or Skill, though not excelling in any of these; and it is offer'd in excuse for a Man who may be useful in his Art or Profession, though there are many better.

Eng. The greatest Strokes make not the finest Musick.

18. All the winning is in the first buying.

For if you buy dear at first, you can hardly propose to gain by retailing.

19. As good a Merchant tines as wins by a time.

For a good Merchant may meet with Misfortunes.

20. As broken a Ship has come to Land.

A thing has been in as great Danger, and escap'd: Or, as unlikely a thing has come to pass.

21. A Nod of an honest Man is enough.

^a great Reapers that strive for the Mastery.

Because

Because an honest Man will make good all his Promises, though they were only given in Signs.

22. A good ^aGrieve is better than an ill Worker.

Because he will oversee the Work with Discretion, and keep the Labourers to their Work.

23. A dumb Man never got Land.

24. Spare to speak, and spare to speed.

These two signify, that unless a Man make Interest, and importune, he will not readily come to Profit, Honour, or Advancement.

Eng. A close Mouth catcheth no Flies.

25. An Ass may speer mo Questions than a Doctor can answer.

Apply'd to them that ask impertinent Questions.

Eng. A Fool may ask more questions in an Hour, than a wise Man can answer in seven Years.

Lat. Plus rogabit asinus, quam respondeat Aristoteles.

26. All Cracks may not be. ^btrow'd.

An Encouragement not to fear when Ice, or any thing else we stand upon cracks. The Jest is in the double Signification of the Word CRACK, which sometimes signifies the Noise of a thing in breaking, and sometimes a merry Story.

27. A Man of many Trades begs his Bread on Sunday.

^a Overseer. ^b believ'd.

6 SCOTTISH PROVERBS

It is observ'd, that a Man of many Trades seldom thrives so well, as he that sticks closely to one. The English have a Proverb near akin to this, viz.

The better the Tradesman, the worse the Husband.

28. A wie Hause has a wide Throat.

Spoken to deter People from Marriage, because a Family, tho' never so small, will require something to support it.

29. As good never a Bit, as never the better.

Unless you make a thing the better for you, you had as good let it alone.

30. A Man is a Lion in his own Cause.

No Man so zealous for, or assiduous in, a Man's Business, as himself.

Lat. Proque sua causâ quisque disertus erit.

31. A borrow'd Loan should come laughing home.

What a Man borrows he should return with Thankfulness, rather better than worse.

32. A wight Man never wanted a Weapon.

A Man of Sense, and good presence of Mind, will never want Means to carry on his Business, but will make a Tool of the first thing that comes to his Hands.

33. All that you'll get will be a ^a Kist, and a ^b Sheet after all.

Spoken to them that are too eager on the World, intimating that they can take nothing to the Grave, save a Coffin, and a Winding-sheet.

Lat. Haud ullas portabis opes Acherontis ad undas,

^a A Coffin. ^b A Winding-sheet.

Nudus ad infernas, stulte, vehere rates.

34. A gentle Horse should be † single spur'd.
A Man of a free Spirit should not be too much importun'd.

Lat. Non opus admisso fodere calcar equo.

35. An ill Cow may have a good Calf.

Bad People may have good Children, and good, bad.

Natura a parentibus, gratia a Deo.

36. As soon goes the Lambskin to the Market as the old Sheeps. The English say,

Of Young die many,

Of old Men 'scape not any.

Lat. Mista senum ac juvenum densantur funera, nullum

Sæva caput proserpina fugit.

37. A Ounce of Mother Wit is worth a Pound of Clergy.

The English have two special Proverbs to this Purpose.

The greatest Clerks are not always the wisest Men.

A handful of good Life is better than a Bushel of Learning.

I have observed that a Man of mean Parts, and slow understanding, though he may have a Memory to make him a sort of a Scholar, makes the vilest Figure in the World.

Lat. Merus Scholasticus, merus asinus.

38. A good Pawn never sham'd its Master.

It is no Shame for a Man to borrow on a good Pawn; though I think it would be more for his Honour, to be trusted without one.

† Seldom.

8 SCOTTISH PROVERBS

39. A^a skittish Mare should be well girded.
A cunning tricky Fellow should not be trusted without great caution.

40. A Cock is^b crouse on his own^c Midding.
A Man is stout when he is at home, and has his Friends and Relations about him.

Lat. Gallus, in suo sterquilinio, plurimum potest.

41. As one flits, another sits, and that makes the^d Mealings dear.

The reason why Farms give a good Price, is, because when one Man gives them up, another is ready to take them; but apply'd only, when one sits down in the Seat that another rose out of.

42. A Penny more buys the Whistle.

Spoken when one gets a Bargain for a little more than was offer'd for it; or at Cards, when a Card is taken by a Card just bigger by one.

43. A good Tongue is a good Weapon.

Because it will give no Provocation, and so supersede all use of any other Weapon.

Eng. He that would live in peace and rest, Must hear, and see, and say the best.

44. All your Geese are Swans.

Spoken to those who are highly conceited of what is their own.

45. A dry Summer never made a dear Peck.

I do not know any Observation of Weather, or Seasons, that holds so true as this in these Nations; for though the Straw in such Years be short, yet the Grain is good and hearty.

^a Skittish. ^b stout, courageous. ^c Dughil. ^d Farms.

I remember no remarkable dry Summers but Three, 1676, 1690, 1713, and all of them very plentiful.

Eng. Drought never bred Dearth.

46. A that is said should not be seal'd.

Spoken when People tell us that such a thing is said, which we are not willing to have believed.

Eng. They say so, is half a Lie.

Lat. Credere fallaci, gravis est dementia fama.

47. All that is said in the Kitchen, should not be heard in the ^a Hall.

Every thing that a Man may say of his Neighbour, perhaps with no ill Intention, should not be whisper'd to him, for he may take that ill, that was not ill design'd; and indeed such Usage can do him little Service, and may do him much Harm.

48. A guilty Conscience self accuses.

A Man that has done ill, by his Slight, Fear, F or Diffidence, shews his Guilt.

Lat. Se iudice nemo nocens absolvitur.

49. All Cats are alike grey in the Night.

Eng. Joan's as good as my Lady, in the dark.

Lat. Sublatâ lucernâ, nihil interest inter mulieres. Item,

*Nocte latent mendæ, vitioque ignoscitur omni,
Horaque formosam quamlibet ista facit.*

50. A hungry Louse bites sore.

Spoken when needy People are importunate in their craving or exacting.

^a Parlour.

10 SCOTTISH PROVERBS

51. A Word to a wise Man.

Spoken when you give a Man a small Hint of a thing, intimating that, if he has Sense, he'll understand you.

Eng. Send a wise Man of an Errand, and say nothing to him.

Lat. Verbum sapienti sat est.

52. *A Tinklar was never a Town-taker,
A Taylor was never a hardy Man,
Nor yet a Webster a leal of his Trade,
Nor ever was since the World began.*

A Rhyme upon the vagrant Life of the First, the sedentary unactive Life of the Second, and the thievish Disposition of the Third: But this Rule admits large Exceptions.

53. A Man of Five, may be a Fool of Fifteen.

A pregnant, pert, witty Child, may prove but a heavy worthless Man, of which I have known many Instances.

Lat. Odi puerulas precoci sapientia.

54. All Ibs are good untry'd.

Spoken to dissuade People from dangerous Exploits, of whose Consequence they have no Experience.

Lat. Dulce bellum in expertis.

55. A Hen that lays without, has need of a white Nest-egg.

A Man given to extravagant Amours in his single Life, has need to marry a handsome Wife to keep him at home.

56. A ^bsilverless Man goes fast through the Market.

^a Honest. ^b a Man that has no Money.

Because

Because he does not stay to cheapen or buy.

57. A halfpenny Cat may look at a King.

An Answer to them that ask you, why you look at them, or what you look at.

58. A scald Head is ^a eith to bleed.

A thing that was but tender before, will easily be put out of Order: The English is much the same.

A scald Head is soon broken.

59. A ^b full Man, and a hungry Horse, make good Speed home.

The drunken Man, not being able to sit strait upon his Horse, sticks the Spurs in his Sides: And the hungry Horse would be gladly at the Manger.

60. A going Foot is ay getting, if it were but a Thorn.

A Man of Industry will certainly get a Living: Though this Proverb is often apply'd to those who went abroad, and got a Mischief, when they might have staid safely at home.

61. An ill^c willy Cow should have short Horns.

It were a pity that a Man of ill Nature should have much Authority; for he'll be sure to abuse it.

Eng. A curst Cur should be short ty'd.

Lat. Dat deus immiti cornua curta bovi.

62. All the Keys of the World kings nat at your Belt.

Spoken to those who refuse us their Help, Support, or Assistance; intimating, that others may afford what they deny us.

^a Easy. ^b drunk. ^c ill natur'd.

12 SCOTTISH PROVERBS

63. All is not ^a bint that's in peril.

Signifying, that our Affairs may come to a better Effect, than is now expected.

Eng. It is not lost that comes at last.

64. A green Wound is half Game

Because it commonly smarts more afterwards.

65. All things have an End, and a Pudding has two.

Spoken fullenly; signifying that the Power of those who now oppose us, will soon come to an end.

66. A Friend in Court is worth a Penny in the Purse.

A Purse seems to be the only Friend at Court, for, without that, there is nothing there but Neglect, and empty Promises. But perhaps this Proverb came in use, before the Fashion of buying Commissions, and placing of Money.

67. A Friend's Dinner is soon ^b dight.

Because a Friend will be content with any thing.

Lat. Vilis amicorum annona est.

68. As sore crys the Bairn that is ^c dung at Night, as he that was dung in the Morning.

He that is now in Prosperity, when I am in Adversity, may find as severe a Change of Fortune afterwards.

Eng. Better the last Smile, than the first Laughter.

69. An ill ^d Shearer never got a good ^e Hook.

Spoken to those who complain of the Tool

^a Lost. ^b made ready. ^c beaten. ^d Reaper. ^e Sickle.

that they are working with, alledging that they may rather blame their own unskilfulness.

Eng. A bad Workman quarrels with his Tools.

Lat. Proba est materia, si probam adhibeas artificem.

70. As the old Cock crows, the young Cock^a learns.

Eng. When old Age is evil, Youth can learn no good.

Lat. ——— Ne crimina nostra sequantur.

A nobis geniti.

71. All is Fish that comes in the Net.

Spoken of them that make Gain of every thing.

72. A Handful of Trade is worth a Handful of Gold.

A Handful of Gold is soon spent, whereas a Trade will be a continual Support.

73. A^b tarrowing Bairn was never fat.

That is, A Person always complaining of, and unsatisfied with his Condition, cannot be happy.

74. All things helps, quoth the Wren, when she piss'd in the Sea.

Spoken when we make a little Addition to a great Heap.

Eng. Something has some Saviour.

Lat. Ex granis fit acervus.

75. As mickle Water goes by the Miller when he sleeps.

Spoken to those who make their Excuse for not doing what you desired them, because they are otherways employ'd, and cannot neglect their

^a Learns. ^b Complaining of their Food.

14 SCOTTISH PROVERBS

Master's Business; intimating, that at another time they will loiter much longer. They say also,

76. Mickle Water goes by the Miller when he sleeps.

But this has a quite different Signification, viz. That a Man may have a great deal of his Goods spoil'd, wasted, or purloin'd that he knows nothing of; which Horace well expresses:

*Exigua est domus ubi non & multa supersunt,
Et dominum fallunt, & prosunt furibus.*

77. A Morning-Sleep is worth a Foldful of Sheep, to a ^a hunderon, dunderon Daw.

A Reflection upon lazy, sleepy Drabs, who prefer nothing to soaking in their Bed in the Morning, and willingly consents to that of Erasmus, Nunquam dulcior somnus, quam post exortum solem.

78. A safe Conscience makes a sound Sleep.

And doubtless a bad Conscience will have the contrary Effect. ——— Quos diri conscia facti

Mens habet attonitos, & surdo verbere cædit.

79. All Stewarts are not ^b sub to the King.

Mens Pretences to great things are not always well grounded; spoken when People boast of some great Man of their Name.

80. An ill Fish gets an ill Bait.

Spoken when bad People fall into Misfortunes. Translated literally from the Latin.

Malus piscis malus hamus,

Item. Malis mala proveniunt.

81. As ill a Guesser has gotten a Drink.

^a A dirty, lazy Drab. ^b akin.

A senseless, but common Saying, when one guesses aright.

82. A falling Master makes a standing Servant.

Men fall behind in the World by Negligence and Carelessness in looking after their Concerns, which knavish Servants will be sure to take their Advantage of: It is no new thing to see a Receiver buy his Master's Estate.

83. A pretty Man I^a man say, take a Peat and sit down.

An ironical Expression to a mean Boy, who would gladly be esteem'd.

Eng. You're a Man among the Geese when the Gander is away.

84. As you love me look in my Dish.

That is, if you pretend kindness to me, shew it by your Deeds.

85. A new Besom sweeps clean.

Spoken of new Servants, who are commonly very diligent; and new Officers who are commonly very severe.

86. A Receiver is worse than a Thief.

True! for if there were none to receive stol'n Goods, Thieves would be discouraged,

Eng. As good eat the Devil, as the Broth he is boild in.

87. A Man that would thrive, must ask his Wife's Leave.

If a Man have an extravagant Wife, he cannot thrive, unless his Funds were inexhaustible.

16 SCOTTISH PROVERBS

Lat. Prodiga non sentit pereuntem femina censum.

88. A Man will see his Friend in Need, that will not see his Head bleed.

Spoken to them that quarrel with a hole in your Coat or Shoe; often apply'd otherways.

246. A short nebbed Sparrow might have pick'd Dirt at his Arse.

Signifying that such an one was in a terrible Fright. Or, as they say, Dirt flay'd.

247. A taking Man will never want.

Let the World be never so scant.

A Reproof to Boys, or Children when they take their Meat, before it be given them.

248. A kindly ^r Aver was never a good Nag.

Those who are naturally of a low, mean Mind, will make but a sorry Figure in a higher Station.

Eng. A carrion Kite will never make a good Hawk.

Item. Jack will never be a Gentleman.

Lat. Qui semel Scurra nunquam Pater familias.

249. A ^r fow Heart lied never.

A Man in his Cups will tell his Mind.

Lat. In vino veritas.

250. A Fool when he has spoken has done all.

That is, has made a full Discovery of his Weakness, which his Silence would have conceal'd.

251. A good Yeoman makes a good Woman.

^a without a Portion. ^r whole. ^r Work horse. ^r full, drunk.

As if a good Husband would make a good Wife; but I never saw this effected; many a good Woman have I known to have reclaimed a bad Man, but never a good Man to have reclaim'd a bad Woman: Either they must have more enticing Charms, or more perverse Humours.

252. A beltless Bairn cannot lie.

I have not heard this used, but it is in the old Scotch Collection: I suppose it means a Child before it be so old as to wear belted Truse, will not have the Cunning to invent a Lie.

253. A hired Horse " tired never.

Because the Rider will so ply the Spurs that he must go on. The English have a saying much like this.

Never spare a Livery, a Hackney, nor a Whore; for you will get no Thanks for it.

254. A full Sack will take a Clout on the side.

A Man may make a shift to eat a little after he has din'd; I have heard it other ways apply'd.

255. All Cracks, all Bears.

Spoken against Bullies who keep a great hectoring and blustering; yet, when put to it, tamely pocket an Affront.

256. A bawdy Father makes a begging " Bairn-time.

Because he will squander, what should support and provide for them, among his Whores.

Eng. Whoring and Bawdry end in Beggary.

257. As mickle Thanks as if you (I) did.

" Jaded.

" Posterity.

42 SCOTTISH PROVERBS

Spoken when we excuse our selves from receiving what is proffered, or when we slight it.

258. All you run you win.

Taken from playing at Bowls; apply'd to Endeavours about a Project that seems not feasible, where what you can make is clear Gain.

259. A Dog will not howl, if you strike him with a Bone.

Spoken when we are upbraided with some bad Kinsman.

265. A † crooked Man should sow Beans, and a ‡ woad Man Pease.

* Howl. † Yell is properly what gives no Milk, here it signifies boil'd without Meat, or having no Butter. ‡ Pig, † Lamé.
‡ Mad,

The one agrees to be thick sown, and the other thin.

266. All Gou'd, or all Dirt.

Spoken to them who are excessive both in their Fondness and Aversion.

Eng. All Honey, or all Turd.

267. As long as the Bird sings before Candle-mass, so long she greets after.

Intimating that a good January betokens a bad Spring.

268. An ill Turn is soon done.

Lat. Compendiaria res improbitas.

Item. Nullus enim magni Sceleris labor.

269. A seven years Maiden is ay at the flight.

An Answer to a Maiden who says she will not marry these seven Years, upon supposition that a fair Offer would soon make her break that Resolution.

270. A long Tongue has a short Hand.

They who are lavish in their Promises, are often short in their Performance.

271. A peck of March Dust and a Shower in May,

Makes the Corn green, and the Fields gay.

Eng. A Peck of March Dust is worth a King's Ransom.

272. A Shower in July when the Corn begins to fill,

Is worth a Plough of Oxen, and all belongs theretill.

These Observations upon Weather and Seasons are very silly.

They who cannot procure better Spoons are not worth poisoning.

Lat. Nulla aconita bibuntur fictilibus.

274. An honest Man is soon bound ; and you cannot bind a Knave.

Because he will have Tricks and Fetches, that will soon elude all your Securities.

Lat. ——— Adde mille catenas

Effugiet tamen sceleratus hæc vincula proteus.

275. An Egg is a mouthful of Meat and a Townful of Shame.

That is if it be stoln, intimating that a little Thing pick'd will procure a great Disgrace.

276. A House with a ^b Reek, and a Wife with a ^c Reerd, will soon make a Man run to the Door.

No Man will willingly bear with a smoky House or a scolding Wife, but escape them as soon as he can.

277. A ^d fow Heart is ay kind.

Spoken when a Man in his Cups shews impertinent Fondness.

278. A Turn well done is twice done.

Because done to purpose ; for when it is slightly done it will soon require to be done anew.

279. A greedy Eye had never a full ^e Weime.
That is, such are never satisfied.

280. After a Sort, as Costlet serv'd the King.

One Captain Costlet boasting much of his Loyalty, was asked how he serv'd the King, when he was a Captain in Cromwell's Army ; answered,

^b Smoke.

^c A Scolding Noise.

^d Drunk.

^e Belly.

AFTER

AFTER a SORT. Spoken when a Thing is done slightly.

281. Arse give me leave.

Spoken to lazy People who are loth to rise, as if they should first ask leave of their weighty Backside.

287. A Duck cannot dable ay in ^f yee Hole.

An Argument for variety, often ill apply'd.

288. A nice Wife, and a back Door, will soon make a rich Man poor.

46 SCOTTISH PROVERBS

The Wife will spend, and the Servants purloyn.

289. A Man of Straw is worth a Woman of Gold.

It seems that the Men contrived these Proverbs, they run so much in their Favours.

290. A black Hen lays a white Egg.

And so may a black Woman have a fair Child.

291. Alike every Day makes a Clout on Sunday.

A Reprimand to them who wear their best Suit every Day, which will soon make them improper to be worn on Sunday.

292. As good be hang'd for an old Sheep as a young Lamb.

This Proverb seems to have an ill Aspect; but it is for the most part used at a Game at Tables, when I venture high in order to recover my Game which otherwise would be lost, and exactly answers to the English, Over Shoes, over Boots.

293. As true as Biglam's Cat crew, and the Cock rocked the Cradle.

Spoken when we hear one call that true that we know to be a Lye,

294. A Friend in Need is a Friend indeed.

Lat. Amicus certus in re incerta cernitur.

308. All is well that ends well.

Spoken with Diffidence, that what is now in hand will not end well.

Lat. Finis coronat opus.

309. A Man is not so soon heal'd as hurt.

Misfortunes

Misfortunes come suddenly, but their Remedies by more slow degrees.

Eng. One may sooner fall than rise.

Lat. Labitur exiguo quod partum est tempore longo.

310. A groaning Wife and a grunting Horse never feal'd their Master.

It is observ'd that tender and sickly Wives commonly live long, and a Horse that grunts under a Man proves often very durable.

311. A tumbling Stone never gathers i Fog.

From the Latin, Saxum volutum non obducitur musco. A Man that often removes seldom grows rich.

312. Any thing for a quiet Life.

That is, we will take any thing rather than make a Bustle.

313. All Comparisons are odious.

Because they can hardly be made without some Disparagement to one of the Parties.

314. A Spur in the Head is worth two in the Heel.

A Man when drunk rides hard; because, not being able to sit streight, his Heels stick in his Horse's side.

Lat. Male imperat qui parere nescit.

327. A light Purse makes a heavy Heart.

328. A Man has no worse Friends than those he brings with him.

For

For if they disparage him they are believed, as being supposed to know him. Spoken also when they whom we thought to have been our Friends, in such a Case, were against our Interest.

Eng. You are good to help a lame Dog o'er a Stile.

329. A Whore, in a fine Dress, is like a dirty House with a clean Door.

A Whore may be handsome outwardly; but vile and ugly in the inside. As Oldham well describes her,

*Within a gawdy Case, a nesty Soul,
Like Turd of Quality in gild Close-stool.*

330. After Dinner sit a while:

After Supper walk a Mile.

The first I approve of, the other is ridiculous.

331. A Wet May and a windy, makes a full Barn Yerd and a ^k Findy.

Like the rest of the Proverbs about Season and Weather.

332. A Horse broken and a Wife to break.

I do not know what reason there may be for the Choice. The breaking of a Horse may break a Man's Neck; true! but may not the breaking of a Wife break his Heart? One thing I am sure of, that a skittish, furious young Horse may be much sooner, and with greater ease, made tractable, and useful, than a foolish, froward, saucy Wife, made good, vertuous, and peaceable.

332. A House made and a Wife to make.

^k Solid, full, substantial.

52 SCOTTISH PROVERBS

That is even as she proves, for some Women are so perverse and foolish, that you may build Versailes before you can make them good.
