Generall Description

D O R S E T.

BEFORE I enter into the particular Description of this Countie of Dorset, commonlie called Dorsetshire, I thinke it not amisse to speake somewhat generallie of the Scituation, Name, Soyle, Commodities, and People of it, for accordeing often rehearfall of them, as occasion in this succedeing Discourse shall bee offered. And first for the Scite, it is farre West, Scituation.

B

but

The Generall Description of

but in a good healthfull Aire for the generallitie, inferiour to none within this Kingdome.

Bounds. For Bounds it hath on the East Hampshire; on the North Somerset, and Wiltshire; on the West Devonshire; on the South, which carrieth the greatest Length, is wholly washed with the British Ocean: The Length of the whole Countie, from East to West, is fortie foure Miles; the Breadth at broadest not above twentie foure; and the Circumference of the whole about one hundred and fiftie Miles.

The Name it took from the antient Inhabitants, whom the Britans called Dwr Gwyr, and the Latine Tranflatours of PTOLOMIE Durotriges; which Name is verie aptlie derived from the Scituation of the Place, for that Dwr or Dour, in the British Tongue, betokened Water, and Trig, to inhabite or dwell; what then is Durotriges more than the inhabiteing or bordering on the Sea Coasts: But when the Saxons became Lords of these Partes, they altered the Name into Dorsettan, but not the Signification of it; for Settan, beeing an Addition of their own Language, imports as much as to be seated, inhabited, or dwelt upon, all one with the former; and from this later Name Dorsettan, this Countie took the Name of Dorsettan-shire, which is now contracted into Dorsetshire.

Vaine therefore in my Conceit are their Opinions, who beleeve that it took Name from Dorchester, the now principall Towne; as that did from one King DORN, or DOR, whom they in their Fantasies have made to bee the first Founder of it: But Historians

Historians never mentioned any such Man; and if hee bee yet borne, which I much doubt, and not without just Cause, his Fortune was verie ill, that, haveing been the Builder of a Towne, soe antient and soe well known both to the Romans and Saxons, himselfe should bee wholly buried in Oblivion.

Though the Aire of this Territorie bee good and ^{Nature.} healthfull, yet is not the Soyle barren, but rich ^{Soyle.} and fruitfull; a Thing feldome incident to good and wholesome Aires. The more Northerne Part, divided from the South almost by a continuall Ridge of high Hills, is somewhat flat, and was in foregoeing Ages wholly Forrests; neither is it yet in this decaying Age of ours altogether destitute of Timber Trees, and Woods; abounding also with verie good Pastures, and Feedings for Cattell; watered with fine Streames, which take their Courfes through rich Meadowes; which Inducements have invited manie of the Gentlemen of these Partes to dwell there: Where neverthelesse in the Winter Season they reape more Profite than Pleasure, for that then this flat Countrie is verie subject to Durt and foule Wayes, from which Inconvenience the South Parte is free, for that consisteth altogether of Hills, (Downes we call them, from the Saxon Word Dun, which intimates as much as an Hill) all overspread with innumerable Flockes of Sheepe, for which it yeelds very good and sound Feeding, and from which the Countrie hath reaped an unknowen Gaine. Valleys it hath diverse, but not large, in the which, for the most parte, the Townes and Gentlemens Houses are seated, for a-voideing voideing those sharpe Blafts which this Southerne Parte is subject to; for it is somethinge wilde, and verie destitute of Woods; Cornefields they have plentie, which seldome deceive the Husbandmans Expectation; and adjoyneing to the Rivers good Meadowes, though not in soe great Plentie as the North Parte of the Shire; to which though it bee inferiour for Profite, yet it exceeds it much for Pleasure, beeing freed from those two generall Enimies of Sports, Durt and Inclosures, and well stored with such Game, as at their severall Seasones serve for Sports and Recreations.

Rivers.

It is generallie well watered with Rills, and swift runneing Brookes; which, passeing through the Plaines and Valleys, doe at the last in a most loving manner unite themselves, and of their manie Branches make two bigge bodied Streames, Frome and Stower, both passeing full of good Fish, which neverthelesse is not soe much respected there, because the adjoyneing Sea doeth furnish the Countrie with all Kindes of Fish.

Commodities.

Manie are the Commodities of this Countrie, according to the severall Places; soe that it shall bee needlesse to rekon up everie particular for necessarie Use; for that if there bee not a Competencie in everie Place, yet it is sufficientlie furnished from other Partes of the Countie by their Superabundance.

But the more generall Commodities of Dorsetshire are Cattell, Corne, and Sheepe; the first of which the Grafiers or Feeders drive fat to London; for they feede more than the Countrie is able to

to utter; the second, the Marchant (furnishing his Shippes to the New Found Land, of which this Countie have set out above fiftie Saile out of Poole, Waymouth, and Lime) and Farmer agreeing together, in time of Store is transported into foreine Countries; the third much enricheth the Owners, by selling their Fleeces and Lambes; the Clothiers, by converting the Wooll into Kirfeys; and the Marchants, by transporting those Cloths into France, a near Cut from these Partes: For the better performeing of which, there are feat- ed on the South Shore three good Haven Townes, Lime, Waymouth, and Poole, besides some lesser Bayes.

Forrests, Chases, and Parkes (which I cannot Forrests. well rekon but as private Commodities; for that the first of them, I meane Forrests, are thought a publicke Discommoditie) it had manie, wherof some stored with Deere remaine still; those of Gillingham, Holt, Purbecke, beeing a free Warren, and Cranburne Chase; disafforrested are Blackmore, or the Vale of Whitehart, and Mexsbwood; the Parkes ⁱⁿ of the particular Description shall mention, as also the Market Townes for Trade and Trafficke, and Castells for Defence.

The last thinge, which I am to speake of, are the People which inhabite this Countrie; the more People. antient wherof were those which you have already heard PTOLOMIE called Durotriges, who lived under the Governement of the Romans. Afterwards, when the Saxons had made themselves Lords of this Kingdome, it fell under the Jurisdi-
C tion

tion of the West Saxons, whose Kings often resided at Corfe, a Castell in the Isle of Purbecke. But the Normans driving them out possessed their Places, who, as in all other Countries, consisted chiefelie of Gentry, and commonlie the Gentlemen for the most parte are of antient Descent, and their Houses, either by Succession or Match, have a long time continued in their Name, or Blood: Soe that I cannot generallie complaine, as one doeth of another Shire, that the Gentry were of noe antient Stockes; besides, to their Blood they adde manie good Graces and Qualities, as Learning and Humanitie, which, though somethinge remote, they bring from the Univerfities. Moreover they are endowed with much Friendship one towards another, which hath been the Cause of their frequent matching amongst themselves; soe as they are for the most parte in some Degrees of Consanguinitie allied: Yet are not the Bonds of Affinitie and Neighbourhoode soe strong, as to tie them onlie to themselves; but their Humanitie extendeth even unto Strangers, unto whom they are generallie noted to bee verie kinde, and to shew them according to their Degrees both Respects and Curtesies.

From the Gentells I will come to the Marchant, who with Fishermen inhabite the Maritime Townes: The Inlande Townes are inhabited by Tradesmen, who soe abound therein, that they furnish themselves, and their neighbouring Counties, with what France, Spaine and East Lands afforde; by reason of the great Quantities of Cloth made in the chiefe
Towne

the Countie of DORSET.

7

Towne of Dorchester, Wareham, and other Places of this Countie.

From the Marchant I will descend to the Commons, which are commonlie Copieholders, and by their Customes are tied to doe manie Services unto their Lords: Some of them are Freeholders, which wee, from the Saxons Yemen, call Yeoman; but these and the rich Farmers, which are those that take Demesnes of Gentlemen at a rakt Rent, (for that is the Manner of this Countrie) doe now beginne much to encroch upon the Gentry; and from them diverse times issue Families of note.

This I hope may suffice for the generall Description of this Shire; and if you are desirous to knowe more of it, the next Lease will lead you to a particular View, to which I referre you.

FOR the Order of this my View or Survey of Dorset, I shall neede noe better, or more warrantable President, than the learned and judicious Camden, and therefore with him I will beginne at the surest and certaineft Bound, the Sea; which from the first Westerne Limite I will follow Eastward, untill it forsaketh this Countie; and by the way observe what Rivers runne into it, whose Streames shall bee my Guides, even from their Springs and Fountaines, untill they take up their Lodging in the Ocean; for on these Rivers and their Branches are generallie seated those Places of note, which I shall have occasion to mention, and what I shall in this my Journey observe, I willingly imparte unto you.

that either by reason of some Notable Ac-

Moderne Lords, deserve to be remembred.*

THE first Place that offereth itselſe on the Sea Coaſt, and fartheſt Weſt, is Lime, a well known Haven Lime.
Towne, named from Lime, a little River, which, diſcloſeing itselſe not of this Towne into the Sea lying under it. The D first

first Mention that is made of it by antient Writers is, that KINWALFE, King of the West Saxons, granted unto the Church of Shirebourne in this Countie, the Land of one Mansion, hard by the Westerne Bankes of the River Lime, not farre from the Place where hee hideth the Course of the Streame in the Sea, To the ende that Salt might be boiled for the said Church, for the sustaineing^{of} manifold Necessities: As the Words of the Charter are, which beare Date *Anno Dom. But Lime arrived not ^{at} anie Height, either of Name or Estate, untill King EDWARD the First, sithence the Conquest, enfranchised it, granting unto it both the Liberties of an Haven and Bourrough; after which the Towne encreased much, in buildeing on the East Side the River, with a Bridge beeing conjoined unto the other, they became one Bodie. That it was of good Accompt and Abilitie in the Time of King EDWARD the Third, it is verie pregnant, for that it was able to furnish the King with foure Shippes and fixtie two Mariners, towards his Siege of Callis in France, as appeareth in the Roll still reserved of them.

Neverthelesse succedeing Ages were not soe favourable to the Inhabitants, for neither were they free from the Outrages of the French, who, dureing the Warres with that Nation, much infested this Southerne Coast, nor from diverse other Casualties; but, dureing these Times of Peace, their owne Industrie hath well repaired these Losses, soe that now the Towne flourisheth, well built, and enriched by the Conveniencie of the Cobb, which is an Harbour that the Inhabitants, with much Industrie and Charge, have built in the Sea, by piling together great Rocks, which at lowe Water with empty Caskes they weigh up, and by this Meanes have made the Harbour safe for Barkes of good Burthen to ride in: For the better repairing and enlarging of which, they choose yearly two Overseers, whom they call Cobwardens, whose Office is to see the Cobb well repaired of those Breaches, which manie times the Sea makes in it.

This Towne undergoeth the Governement of a Maior, who is also dureing his Yeare of later times a Justice of Peace, who hath Brethren his Assistants, and sendeth two Burgessees to the High Court of Parliament.

Scarfe two Miles Eastward ^{from is} this, Charmouth, a Charmouths. little obscure Village seated on the Mouth of Carr, a Riveret, which, ending his short Course there, leaveth its Name unto the Place, which, though now of noe note, twice served the Danes for a landing Place, what time they fought to wrest the English Sceptre out of the true Owners Hands. S. Dunelm.

Their first Arrivall was in the Yeare of our Salvation 831, and the thirtie third of the Reigne of EGBERT, King of the West Saxons, who encountering them, on the adjoineing Hills, received foe great an Overthrowe, that he was forced to ^{H. Hunting-} trie for himselfe by Flight, beeing much assisted by ^{don.} the approaching Night: In this Battell hee lost diverse of his chiefest, ^{men} and manie of his Soldiers, amongst whom our Writers have remembred two Bishops, Readmond, or, as some write him, Headmond, mond,

mond, Bishop of Shirebourne in this Tracke; whom our last Chronicle, John Speed, miscalleth by the Name of Vigfred; and Herefrede, Bishop of Winchester.

The Danes, growen proude with this their good Successe, desisted not to infest this Kingdome in diverse other Places; neither did their twice beeing vanquished by this King EGBERT anie thinge better them, for but eight Yeares after; viz. Anno 838, beeing the seconde Yeare of King ATHELWOLFE, Sonne and Successour to EGBERT, they once more arrived at this Charmouth, which Place Simon Dunelm and Hen. Huntingdon call Carrum, and not farre offe encountred King ATHELWOLFE with as fortunate Successe as before, for they gave him the Overthrowe.

The Village itfelfe is now small and of noe note: All that I can say of it is, that WILLIAM the First gave it to his Halfe Brother, the Earle of Moriton.

Not farre from Charmouth, though the Place I cannot preciselie set downe, stands Tederleighe, which heretofore gave Name, and still gives Habitation, to the Familie of Tederleighe, of noe meane Antiquitie.

What time Bertport began to be an Harbour of anie note surelie I could never have any notice, neither is it at all mentioned in that Roll, in which were recorded both the Men and Shipping sent by most Havens in England, to assist their then King EDWARD the Third, when neither Lime before mentioned mentioned, nor Weymouth, the Neighbours on either hande, were free.

But concerning the Haven I will conclude with Mr. Cambdens Wordes, who, speakeing of this Towne, sayeth, It is not able to maintaine an Harbour, albeit in the Mouth of the River, beeing on both sides enclosed with little Hills, Nature seems as it were of purpose to have begun an Haven, and in some sort requireth Art and Mans Help to accomplish the same. Camd. with the Armes on the Margent affixed on it. Arms seen in MS.
The want of the rest of this Inscription makes it imperfect who this Will should bee, but its most likelie, likelie, that it was her Sonne by her second Husband, who was second Sonne to Eustace Lorde Damprecourt in Henault; for that her first Husband John Plantagenit, Earle of Kent, Grandchilde to King EDWARD the Firft, as our Historians write, died issueless the twentieth sixth of King EDWARD the Third.

verie Infancie of Christianitie amongst the Britains, a Church to St. Peter, by Bertufus an holie Priest, unto whom the same Saint had often appeared, and amongst other things gave him a Charter written with his owne Hande, which will bee needleffe for mee to exemplifie; onlie in it St. Peter professeth, to have consecrated the Church himself, and to have given it to Name, Abodesbyry. But to leave this, Abotsbury after, as it seemes, became a retiring Place for the West Saxons Kings, who beeing afterwards vanquished by the Danes, King CANUTE gave to Sir Ore his Houscarle this Abotsbury, as alsoe Portsham and Helton: All which the said Ore and Dame Thole his Wife, haveing noe Issue, gave unto the Church of St. Pe- cayed and forsaken, by reason the Rovers from the Sea often infested it. Here afterward the said Ore, with the Consent of St. EDWARD the King (whose Steward hee was) in the Yeare of our Salvation 1044, built a faire Monasterie, and stored it with Benedictine Monks from, Cermill Abbie, which Gift of his was confirmed by the Charter of St. EDWARD, WILLIAM the Firrst, WILLIAM the likewise granted them manie Immunities, as Free-neither were the Gentry of those Times anie

But I will returne to the Abbie, which though it were stronge, yet was it not able to beare that fatal Blow, which HENRY the Eighth gave to all Religious Houses, at which time was utterlie subverted the Church; whence, as the Opinion is, the Bones of the Founder Ore, inclosed in a daintie Marbill Coffin, which I have often seene, were removed to the adjoineing Parish Church: As for the rest, who soe dearelie bought their Sepulchres, they have not nowe soe much Priveledge as those that bee in open Church Yards. After the Dissolution Abotsbury was purchased by Sir Giles Strangwayes,^{Sir G. Not farre from which stands, almost environed with the Sea, Weeke, haveing the Name verie agreeable to the Scituation, if wee beleeve those who who understand Weeke as well to signifie the Carving or Reach of the Sea, as a Towne or Burrough. Both theſe Townes have certainenlie riſen from the Conveniencie of the Harbour, and from ſmall Beginnings, for neither of them till of late time had a Pariſh Church. Weymouth without all queſtion is much the antienter, which may appeare both in that it had the Precedencie given in the Name, when by the foreſaide Acte of Uniteing it was decreed, That it ſhould bee called the Towne of Weymouth and Melcombe Reges; and alſoe that you ſhall finde mention of it in ſome antient Recordes: And that it was heretofore of verie ſufficient Abilitie well appeares, in that they were able to aſſiſt their then King EDWARD the Third with 15 Shippes and 263 Mariners, what time he prepared to beſiege siége Callis in France, which Rate I assure you noe Haven in these Partes came neare unto; but they were not to bee blamed, to make what strength they could against the French, who, both then and manie times sithence, have assayed to burne their Towne and destroy the Inhabitants.

Weymouth as nowe it is is but little, consisting chieflie of one Streete, which for a good space lieth open to the Sea; and on the back of it riseth an Hill of such steepnesse, that they are forced to climbe up to their Chappell by 60 Steppes of Stone, from whence you have a faire Prospect of the Towne and Haven lieing under: And from the other side you may see Weeke, the Mother Church of Weymouth. Melcombe,^{tho} on the other side, though of the River much surpasseth the other for Conveniencie of Scite; for this standing on a Flatte affordeth roome for Buildings, with a Market Place and convenient Streetes, and alsoe Yards for their Wares, by meanes wherof most of the Marchants have chosen this for their Habitation, which of late Yeares is fairelie newe built. There antientlie was placed the Woolle Staple, but King HENRY the Sixth took it from them, and gave it to Poole, when hee granted to it the Priviledges of an Haven.

These Townes nowe united gaine well by Traffique into Newfoundland, where they have had 80 Saile of Shippes and Barkes; as alsoe by a nearer Cut into France opposite unto them, when they returne laden with Wines, Cloth and diverse other usefull usefull Commodities, with which they furnish the Countrie.

Overagainst this Haven lieth the Isle of Portland, and by the Sea a League distant from it; but in one place, as I have already noted, passeable on drie Land. Concerning the Name Controversie hath risen, some thinkeing it took Name by reason of the Scite opposite to the Port of Weymouth; which Opinion I cannot but reject, for that I beleeve it had to Name Portland before the other had anie Being: And therefore I will content my selfe with the Opinion of the judicious Cambden, who voucheth for it the Historie of Winchester Church, which is, That it took Name from one Port, a noble Saxon, who, in the Yeare of our Salvation 703, arriveing there, much infested and annoyed these Coasts. After, in the declineing Age of the Saxons Empire, Portland felt often the violent and furious Rage of the Danes, who when they came as Scoutes, Anno 783, to discover the Goodnesse of the Land, and good Places for landing, as alsoe what Resistance the Inhabitants could make, haveing then but onlie 3 Shippes in their Companie, touched first of all at this Island, whence (either for want of good Landing, which is most likelie, for there is none, or being driven away by the Inhabitants) they retired to Tingmouth in Devon, where they set the first Foot on Englands Ground, with soe good standing, that albeit they were diverse times overthrowne, and chased away, they never desisted untill their King CANUTUS, Anno 1017, got the Crowne upon his head. Afterwards King EDWARD the Confessour gave Portland unto the Church of Winchester, upon this Occasion ;
Head

The King, takeing Dislike against his Mother Emma, by the Instigation of his great Favourites, Robert Archbishop of Canterbury, and Godwin Earle of Kent, amongst diverse other Objections alledged, That shee, under the Colour of private Devotion, used over familiarlie the Companie of Aldwin Bishop of Winchester, to the Kings and her owne great Dishonour ; upon these Surmises was alsoe her Substance seized to the Kings Use, and her Bodie committed to safe Custodie in the Abbie of Wherwell. But shee, knoweing her Innocencie in all, especiallie in the Accusation of Incontinencie, refused not to undergoe that harde Lawe, or Tryall by Fire, called Ordalium, which was thus ;

Shee (in the Prefence of the King her Sonne, and diverse other Nobles) beeing blindfolded, was to passe over nine Plowshares red hotte ; which shee, in the Church of Winchester, with whose Prelate shee was suspected, performed without anie the least Harme: Wherby shee not onlie cleared herselfe of that Imputation, but made her Chastitie more famous to Posteritie. And, in Remembrance of this her Deliverance, shee gave to the same Church nine Manours, equall in number to those Irons shee passed over ; alsoe her Sonne King EDWARD, much repenting of the Wrongs hee had done his Mother by false Suspicion, gave, for Expiation of his Fault, unto the same Church this Island,

Haveing given you what I have founde in antient Histories of this Island, I think it not amiffe to shewe you it, as at this present it is.

Sandfoote Castell.

First at the verie Landing you shall see a stronge Castell, built by King HENRY the Eighth, opposite almost unto another on the Landfide, called Sandfoote Castell; these two command all the Shippes, which passe into this Roade, for between them they must passe, who, if upon Summons vayne not, they presentlie sinke; for, by reason of their lowe Scituation, they take them between Winde and Water, and soe spoile them.

From Portland Castell you have but one easie Passage to the toppe of the Island amongst Rocks, with which it is wholelie environed, and all Places unaccessable but this onlie; and it is soe ill, that you can with noe great safetie ride either up or downe. On the toppe you may see the whole Island lieing verie flatte, in compasse about seven Miles; the Grounde verie good for Corne, and indifferent Pasture; but soe destitute of Woode and Fuell, that the Inhabitants are glad to burne their Cowe Dung, beeing first dried against Stone Walls, with which their Groundes are enclosed alltogether.

On the South Point stands the onlie Church, soe near the Sea, that for Safetie of it they have beene forced forced to wall the Church Yarde Bankes almost of an incredible Height, soe that it even afrighte one to look downe. From thence you maye see the Race of Portland, as it is called, which is the Meeting of the two Tydes, with soe great Striveing and Beateing of the Waves, that it is most dangerous for anie Barke to passe over it, though in the calmest Season. Neare the Church, but at least fiftie Steppes of Stone above it, stands the Walls of the olde Castell, for Scite, before the Invention of Ordnance, in Mans Judgment impregnable; yet was it both forced and wonne by Robert Earle of Gloucester, base Brother to Maude the Empreffe; and in her behalfe, what time shee waged Warre with King STEPHEN for her Right. Portland Race. Anno 1143.

At this Place, in the Yeare 1588, the Spaniards with their supposed invincible Armie strived to land; but beeing prevented by the English, between them there begun, in the fight of all the Coast, such a Fight that they were forced to acknowledge their Armie vincible, and to shift for themselves, though manie Hundreds of them came short home, and two of their great Shippes brought into Weymouth. Armada. ms. Armada

To conclude, Portland is not destitute of fresh Water, hath plentie of Corne, Sheepe and Cattell; alsoe such excellent Quarries of Stone, that, for the solidnesse and durablenesse, it is transported unto London, and that in great plentie, sithence it pleased the King Anno 1610, by the Advice of his Architectours, to make choice of Portland Stone, for the Reedifying of his Banquetting House at White- Architects ms.

 Bodie beeing founde by diverse Miracles, which hee sets downe at large in his Historie, it was with much Solemnitie removed to the Abbie of Glaston

The Places are too farre distant for mee to reconcile; wherefore I must crave Pardon of Pollidore to leave his Opinion, for that both the Towne and Abbie of Shafton were from him named, the one,
The Monasterie of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary and St. Edward the Martyr; the other, Burgus St. EDWARD; for by his untimelie Death hee gained the Name of Martyr.

But

But I have digressed, and nowe will returne to Corfe Castell, which, in the Yeare of our Salvation 1321, for a short space became a Prifon, to that most unfortunate Prince King EDWARD the Seconde; who, by the Queene and her Mortimer, (not content with his Deposeing) was delivered by Indenture to two mercyleffe Knights, Sir Thomas Gourney and Sir John Matravers, who suffered him not longe to rest there; but removed him first to Bristol, then to Barkley Castell, where in strange Manner they murdered him.

This Castell and the Lordes of it, untill of late, did enjoye manie Priviledges, as free Warren Chase usurped over all the Island, Wreck of the Sea, Freedom from the Lorde Admirall of England; soe that the Owner of it hath his peculiar Admirall Leets and Lawe Dayes; and in a word, in some Cafes, did exercise Jura Regalia.

It hath beene diverse times granted from the Crowne to the Kings nearest Allies, from whom, by Descent or Attainder, it as often reverted: But Queene ELIZABETH gave the Castell, Lordshippe, Manour and Towne of Corfe to Sir Christopher Stowborough. Whence returneing wee meete with Stowborough, the

the laſt Place of this Iſland, ſcarce worth a Remembring; for it conſiſts of a verie few ^{meen} Houſes, ſeated on the Cauſewaye leading towards Warham, Warham. and not much diſtant from it: But the Inhabitants beleeve, that ab initio non fuit ſic; for they are not aſhamed to affirme, the Village to bee much more antient than Warham, and will tell you manie faire Traditions for it: Neither doe I doubt, but that it hath beene in greater note in former Ages, though I finde noe Mention of it in our Hiſtories. As for the Government by a Mayor, noe meane Priviledge, though the Men in this Place bee commonlie meane; and the verie Name, Stowborough, intimates as much as the Place of the Towne or Burrough; and well maye it bee called ſoe, for onlie the Place remaines, the Burrough beeing gone to Warham.

Not farre from Stowborough the River Frome, joineing with Piddell, falles into the Sea, leaveing on the Brink Warham finelie ſeated, a Towne of good note in former Times, which taketh Name certainlie from the Scituation; for Warham ſigniſieth as much as Dwelling by or upon the Meeting or Stopping of Waters.

In this Towne King ETHESTANE, the West Saxon, what time of eſpeciall Favour hee enriched ſome Cities with the Mintage of his Money, placed two Mint Maſters, which remained untill the Conqueſt Time. In what State it was, in EDWARD the Confessors Dayes, you ſhall heare out of Domſd. Booke.

In Warham temp' regis Edward' erant Cxliij. dom' in domini' regis hec villa ad omne serbit' regis se defend' et geldab' pro x. hid' scilicet, i. marc' argenti husscarl' regis, except' consuetudinibus que pertinent ad firmam i. noctis. Tbi erant ii. Monetarii, quisque reddit i. marc' argenti et xx s. quando moneta vertebatur.

But Warham soone fell from his Estate; for King WILLIAM the First could reckon in it but seven Houses and one Mint Master: Neverthelesse to keepe them in Awe, or for their Defence, hee built a most stronge Castell upon parte of the Manour of Kingstone, in lieu of which hee gave to the Abbess of Shafton, the Ladie of it, as you maye see in the fore remembred Booke in these Wordes:

Rex habet i. hid' de manerio de Kingstone, in qua sit castella de Warham, pro qua dedit abbati ecclesiam de Gillingham.

Then once againe Warham beganne exceedingly to flourish, beeing environed with a stronge Wall, and inhabited by rich Burghers, who repaired both the Houses and Churches almost ruined; and got much by the Conveniencie of the Harbour then lying neare unto them, in the Meeting of the Rivers Frome and Piddell, but nowe altogether choaked up.

But beeing come to the Height, it suddainlie tooke a Fall; for during the Warres, between King STEPHEN and Maud the Empreffe, right Heire to the Crowne, Robert Earle of Gloucester her base Brother, coming out of Normandy with Prince Prince Henry her Sonne, to claime the Crowne, arrived at Warham, Anno Dom. 1142, whose Castell after a short Siege was delivered unto him, though STEPHEN had placed in it Robert de Lacy with Soldiers to keepe it ; but Earle Robert, having wonne the Castell, placed in it, in his Sisters Behalfe Robert de Lincoln, a Man of mightie Possessions in these Partes, proceeded^{ing} unto Portland, whose Castell likewise hee tooke, and manie others: For hee was a principall Agent to place HENRY the Seconde in his Throne. R. de Lincoln.

Dureing these Warres Warham was much defaced, and after, by little and little losing the Benefit of the Haven, grewe to great Decaye ; neither hath it beene free from suddaine and casuall Fires : Soe that onlie the Shadowe remaines nowe of the pristine Glorie ; for the Castell is whollie ruined, the Haven choaked up, manie of the Churches demolished, and amongst them the Priorie of Black Monks of antient Foundation, and much used for Burialls by the Gentic of these Partes ; where alsoe, as some write, was interred BRITHRICUS, King of the West Saxons.

The Towne still enjoys the antient Priviledge of sending Burgeses to the Parliament, governed by a Mayor, ^{heer} Weeklie Marketts ; ^{there} are yet standing three Churches, and faire Houses inhabited as much by Gentlemen almost as Tradesmen.

and upon this Occasion, as Will. of Malmesbury writeth, this King ATHELSTAN, being reputed little better than a Bastarde, though some Writers holde hee was legitimate; and having after his Fathers Decease gotten the Crowne upon his Head, cast a jealous Eye upon his Halfe Brother Edwine, who was taken for the lawfull Son and Successour of King EDWARD the Elder. This Suspicion, by the Instigation of some of his Followers, increased soe much, that, forgetting all Justice and Humanitie, hee caused the Prince, accompanied with one onlie Page, to bee put into a smalle Boate, without either Tackleing or Furniture therto, that hee might impute his Death to the Waves; but the younge Prince, being overcome with Passion, cast himselfe headlonge into the Sea.

William of Malmesbury.

This was certainelie a most faire and rich Monasterie, endowed with great Revenues and Priviledges, much resorted to in these Times, by reason of the Bodie of King EDWARD (murthered, as I have allreadie set downe, at Corfe) was there interred, who beeing esteemed a Martyr, and canonized a Saint, had his Shrine soe visited, that the verie Towne for a time was from him named Burgas Sti Edward.

From Mapowder the Brooke passeth through deepe and dirtie Soyle under Kings Stagge Bridge, which got that Name upon this Occasion: King HENRY the Third, haveing disported himselfe in the Forrest of Blackmore, hee spared one beautiful and goodlie white Harte, which afterwards T. De la Linde, a neighbour Gentleman of antient Descent and especiall Note, with his Companions pursuing, killed at this Place; but hee soone founde howe dangerous it was, to bee twitching a Lion by the Eares: For the King tooke soe great Indignation against him, that hee not onlie punished them with Imprisonment and a grievous Fine of Money, but for this Fact hee taxed their Lands; the Owners of which ever sithence yearlie untill this Hermitage, desolatelie seated, the fitter for an Hermit, for whom long sithence a Cell was there built, by an unknowne Founder; but it was patronized by the Earles of Cornwall, even from EDWARD the Firfts time.

Somewhat neare to the West, that I maye take the other Places in a Rowe as they lie, stands

Lillington, a Moitie of which William de Lillington gave (as the Wordes of the Charter are, for his Soul, and the Soul of Sir Godfrey de St. Martin his Lorde) to the Priorie of Bradnestocke in Wiltshire: A Witnesse to which Charter amongst others was JOHN King of England. The other Moitie descended to Walter le Child, and John de Knuton, who married his two Daughters and Heires; from whom, in that zealous Age, it came in short time whollie to the Monasterie: But sithence the Dissolution it gave Habitation to the Kelways, earst while of great Note in Hampshire.  in theſe Partes; and that it was of great Eſteeme in the Saxons time its moſt likelie. IN A their King, in the Yeare of our Salvation 704, erected at Sherborne a Biſhops See, under whoſe Jurisdiction hee appointed the Counties of Dorſet, Somerſet, Devon, Cornwall and Wilts,^{h^{ic}} and conſecrated for the firſt Biſhop Aldelme, his Brother Keuton's Sonne, after whom in a Series fatte 14 Biſhops, of whom whom you maye reade in the Catalogue of Bishops, written by Francis Godwin nowe Bishop of Worcester ^{Hereford}, a great Lover of Antiquities; wherefore it shall bee needlesse for mee to make particular mention of them: Neverthelesse, those, who by well deservering of the Commonwealth and this Place, have gained to themselves a perpetuall Memorie, I shall not overpasse with Silence. Such were Elthstanus the seventh Bishop, consecrated Anno 817, who greatlie encreased and enriched this Church, and for the farther Honour of it procured the Bodies of the Kings ETHELBALD and ETHELBERT Brethren, Sonnes of King ETHELWOLFE, to bee buried there, whose Sepulchres, as Leland noteth, were behinde the high Altar; but often reedifying the Church hath demollished them. This Man late Bishop of Sherborne full 50 Yeares, in which time himselfe fought manie Battells against the Danes with goode Successe; by whom his Successour Edmond was in a pitched Field flaine Anno 872, and was worthie of Memorie: And Affer the 11th Bishop, a great Writer, of whose Workes some are extant at this Daye, and by whose Means King ALFRED, who much favoured him, began the Univerfitie of Oxford. But that I maye not bee too tedious in these Relations, I will passe to Hermanus, who in the Conquerors time removed his Seate to Salisbury, reserving Sherborne for a retireing Place; whose Successour Roger, in HENRY the Firsts time, built a stronge Castell in the East Parte of the Towne, fenced for the most parte with a large Mire, which, not longe ^{Moat} fithence drained, is converted into a rich Meadowe.

As

As for the Cathedrall Church and Bishops House, upon the Translation of the Seate they were left to the Monks, (with which all the Cathedrall Churches of this Kingdome were then stored) and immediatelie, by the Assistance of the Bishops and Benevolence of well affected People, it grew to bee an Abbie of goode Note and Wealth; for the which they were much beholden to Jociline, the fourth Bishop of Sarum, who, besides his owne Gifts, procured a Confirmation from King HENRY the Seconde; ~~affoe to~~ ^{and Pope} Alexander, and afterwards to Bishop Nevile, who for his Liberalitie was accounted one of their Founders.

But whilst the Abbie thus encreased, the Bishopricke got the worst; for amongst other things the Castell of Sherborne was taken from them by King STEPHEN, which after King EDWARD the Third conferred on William Mountacute, whom he created Earle of Salisbury; but Robert Wynell soone after regained it to his Seate, whose Successours are at this Daye Lordes of Sherborne; but the Feofarme of it, Queene ELIZABETH granted to Sir Walter Rawleighe, who beganne verie fairelie to builde the Castell, but altering his Purpose hee built, in a Parke adjoineing to it, out of the Grounde a most fine House, which hee beautified with Orchardes, Gardens and Groves of much Varietie and great Delight: Soe that, whether that you consider the Pleasantnesse of the Seate, the Goodnesse of the Soyle, or the other Delicacies belonging unto it, it rests unparalleled by anie in these these Partes, and is nowe, by the especiall Favour of King JAMES, the principall Seate of the Right Honourable Lorde Digby, Earle of Bristol, which with his Honours his Service to his Majestie hath worthilie deserved.

As for the Abbie, it came to an Ende in HENRY the Eighth; and the Church, beeing newe built not longe before, was purchased by the Townesmen, for effecting of which they pulled downe two other Churches; and truelie this, for faire and elegant Building, surpasseth anie thereabout. At the East Ende of it stands a verie faire Free Schoole, first built and endowed by King EDWARD the Sixth; and not farre from it Richard Beachampe, Bishop of Salum, in HENRY the Sixths time, built a fine Almshouse for Sustainment of poore People.

Sherborne is divided into two Partes, that lying neare the Castell beeing called Castell Towne; either of them have their severall Marketts, but are both governed by two Constables yearlie chosen. Underneath the Castell the River Ivell taketh his Course, by the East Side of the Towne, to

AND nowe, goode Reader, am I come to the Ende of my JOURNEY, in which what I have observed you see it cost mee some Paine; and if it give you anie Content, I shall think it the better bestowed. I have omitted to sett downe anie Pedigrees, especiallie of moderne Families, because in my Opinion it is not fitt they should bee divulged; for that they might breed Emulation amongst Gentlemen, and ill Will towards mee: But their Coates of Armes, as manie as I could anie way finde out, I have ^{in Judging} onlie blazoned, to the Intent that none but my Friends the Heralds, Heraulds, whom I would not willingly injurie, and such as have Insight in that Facultie should knowe. The Monuments I have for the most parte voluntarilie omitted, because the more antient generallie are soe defaced, that neither Inscription nor Coate is left, to tell whose they are, and some of the newer ~~ones~~ are hardlie free from Errours. If in my SURVEY I have overpassed anie Place or Familie of Note, I shall willingly acknowledge my Errour; for although I knowe the Countie well, it were a difficult Matter to bee soe exact, as that noe Place should escape. It would I think bee needlesse too for mee, according to the Custome of these Times, to pester the next Page with a Catalogue of such Writers as I have beene beholden to, seeing Recordes have beene my greatest Helpers, and those you see vouched on the Margin. As concerneing this Worke, I assure my selfe the Poet Virgils Sayeing will bee verified, Non omnis arbusta juvant, &c. I am not soe ambitious to desire, that all should accept it, if anie doe I have my Desire, and you shall have mee.

And they shall have my Thanks.
