In an ANNIVERSARY

S E R M O N

Preached before the University of OXFORD,

ON THE

Last SUNDAY in June, 1740.

U P O N

One of the Texts appointed by the late Reverend WILLIAM MASTER, A. M.

By RICHARD NEWTON, D. D. Principal of Hart-Hall, now by Royal Charter erected into HERTFORD-COLLEGE.

Published at the Request of the VICE-CHANCELLOR and HEADS of HOUSES.

The THIRD EDITION.

L O N D O N :

Printed for G. STRAHAN, in Cornhill; J. OSBORN, in Pater-noster Row;
J. and J. RIVINGTON, in St. Paul's Church-yard; and R. CLEMENTS, and J. FLETCHER, in Oxford. M.DCC.XLVI.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions and activities. It emphasizes that this is crucial for ensuring transparency and accountability in the organization's operations.

2. The second part of the document outlines the various methods and tools used to collect and analyze data. It highlights the need for consistent and reliable data collection processes to support informed decision-making.

3. The third part of the document focuses on the role of technology in modern data management. It discusses how advanced software solutions can streamline data collection, storage, and analysis, leading to more efficient and accurate results.

4. The fourth part of the document addresses the challenges associated with data management, such as data quality, security, and privacy. It provides strategies to mitigate these risks and ensure the integrity and confidentiality of the organization's data.

5. The fifth part of the document concludes by summarizing the key findings and recommendations. It stresses the importance of ongoing monitoring and evaluation to ensure that the data management processes remain effective and aligned with the organization's goals.

GENTLEMEN,

THE following Sermon setting forth the Ministerial Duty, is Printed at the Instance of the Vice-Chancellor and Heads of Houses. They have done me the Honour to be Importunate with me, beyond the Merit of the Discourse, to make it Publick, supposing it might be of Service to the University in general, whither so many resort to Qualify themselves for the Sacred Function. It is hard to say What will be of Service in an Age wherein wherein so little Countenance is shewn to Religion or Religious Men. However, I have submitted to the Authority of their Opinion, and the rather, for that, if any Good ensue, Hertford-College, (on this Day become a Society incorporate within the said University for the Education chiefly of Persons designed for Holy Orders) may participate of it: For your Use the Sermon, though Preach'd before the University, was written, and to You, and to your Successors, I now inscribe it, as an Instruction from a Preceptor

Ever studious of your Improvement,

And wishing your Perpetuity,

Hertford-College,
8. Sept. 1740.

Richard Newton.

2 Tim. ii. and Part of the 24th Verse.

The Servant of the LORD must not strive, but be Gentle unto all Men, Apt to Teach.

IN treating of these Words I shall consider,

I. Who is here said to be the Servant of the Lord, and What is meant by the Prohibition, “ must not strive.”

II. I shall endeavour to shew, that, in the Disputes he may have, in the Course of his Ministration, with serious Men differing from him in Opinion about Religious Matters, he must be Gentle. And,

III. That, with respect to those who shall at any time be committed to his Care, he must be Apt to Teach.

By the Servant of the Lord, in a large Sense, may be understood every Person who hath Embrac'd the Gospel, Believes in Jesus Christ, Purposes to Obey his Will, and Follow his Example. And it is true, indeed, it will not become such an One to strive, or be contentious. The several Precepts concerning Humility, Meekness, and Charity, given him by Christ in the Gospel, would be violated by such a Behaviour; and very little would he be thought to have learnt of Him, who, in so eminent a degree, was meek and lowly.

But this Epistle having been written to One who had not only Embrac'd the Gospel, but was appointed also to be a Preacher of it, makes it evident, that this Term is to be taken in a more limited Signification, and that, by the Servant of the Lord, we must here understand a Preacher of the Gospel, of what Order, Degree, or Rank soever he may be. And very ill, indeed, would it become Him to strive, or be contentious, whose amiable Character it is, that he is the Messenger of Peace; of that Peace whereby God is reconcil'd to Man; of that Peace, which all Christians are commanded (a) to have one with another.

What the particular Meaning of the Prohibition, "Must not strive," is, we need go no farther than the Context to learn. In the Context, ver. 23. we read, "But foolish and unlearned Questions avoid, knowing that they do gender (b) Strifes." And then it follows in the Text, ver. 24. "The Servant of the Lord must not (c) strive." When, therefore, the Servant of the Lord is forbidden to strive, ver. 24. he is then also forbidden to engage in foolish and unlearned Questions, or Disputes, which are said, ver. 23. to gender Strifes; and to be the Occasion of Enmity between those whom the Apostle would have to Agree.

(a) Mark ix. 50. (b) μάχας. (c) μάχεσθαι.

What is here meant by (a) foolish and unlearned Questions or Disputes, Disputes mov'd by Persons ignorant, and uninstructed in the Christian Faith, may be learnt by comparing This Advice to Timothy, with That before given to Him and Other Teachers, (1 Tim. i. 4.) and here repeated.

The Advice there given is, “That they should teach no other Doctrine,” [than what he had deliver'd] “neither give heed to Fables, and endless Genealogies, which minister (b) Questions, rather than godly Edifying, which is in Faith.” Meaning by Fables, such Traditions of the Jewish Doctors as, clashing with the Precepts of Christianity, and making the Word of God of none effect, could have no Truth in them, nor were any more to be heeded than the pure Inventions of Men; and about which, therefore, the rightly instructed in the Faith must needs think any Questions or Disputes foolish and unlearned: And meaning by Genealogies, the Privileges so many valued themselves upon, (and upon which, if upon Any of this kind, they might have Reason to do so) either of a regular Descent from David, and, consequently, of their Affinity to the Messiah; or, from Abraham, and so, of being the only Visible Church on Earth. But that any Questions or Disputes even about These, were also foolish and unlearned, is evident: For that, in the first Case, the spiritual Relation to Christ is infinitely preferable to the natural; and whosoever doth the Will of his Father, which is in Heaven, the same, he declares (a) to be his Brother, and Sister, and Mother: And, in the Second, Of what use was it to any of them, either to say within themselves, or to boast to others, that they had Abraham to their Father, unless they had also walked in the Steps of the (b) Faith of their Father Abraham? Abraham saw the Day of the Christian Institution afar off, and was glad; and if his Children could not see it, when it shone directly upon them, and be glad of it too, of what Advantage was their Descent from Him? Or what Occasion had they to value themselves upon it? And what, naturally, could be the Consequence of giving themselves the Preference, where there was no Inequality, but Disputes? The Partition Wall was now broken down. The Gospel first propos'd to the Jew, was now also offer'd to the Gentile. And, the Belief and Practice of it being Equal, equally entitled the One and the Other to the Favour of God. Superiority claim'd, upon Prerensions that could not be made out, would never be submitted to ; and, therefore, if the Genealogies were not Endless, the Disputes would be. And so long as These should continue, mutual Love, the Badge of Christians, would be destroy'd, and a Stop put to Edification, or building up the Church of Christ, which then only may be said to be finish'd, when Men shall generally receive the Gospel; and, with all Lowliness, and Meekness, and Forbearing One Another in Love, endeavour to keep the Unity of the Spirit, or an Agreement in Christian Sentiments, in the Bond of Peace.

If the Servant of the Lord, then, must not strive, it is plain, He must avoid foolish and unlearned Questions, which gender Strifes.

It is a sufficient Reason, indeed, for the Servant of the Lord, not to enter seriously into the Discussion of foolish and unlearned Questions, that the doing it is altogether unworthy of his Character, even tho' no Strife or Contention should ensue. How much more unworthy of it, then, must it be, to labour the Proof or Disproof of Matters of No Consequence to Religion, with a Strife and Contention, which Questions of the Greatest cannot warrant?

Disputes which Men occasionally engage in, not in a Polemical, but a Friendly manner, for Trial of their Skill, or Exercise of their Parts, or Indulgence of their Wit, at a proper Time, and in a proper Place, and with Indifference to the Issue, are Innocent enough, how-however Frivolous, so long as Strifes are not thereby Gender'd: But since, in Disputes utterly Insignificant, if there be a Sollicitude for the Event, (whether That arise from Fear of being thought Inferior in the Contest, or Mistake about the Moment of it) as great Heats and Animosities in the Contenders, as flaring a Contempt of each others Judgment, as manifest a Dislike of each others Person, is seen to arise, as in Disputes, the Issue of which is of the last Importance, the Advice given to prevent all unnecessary Occasion of Strifes, the moving foolish and unlearned Questions, with the same Earnestness, as if they were Wise and Learned, is very Good. For, let what will be the Determination, Religion can from thence receive no Benefit, and, if Strife attend, much Hurt.

But, tho' the Servant of the Lord be forbidden to engage in foolish and unlearned Questions, the Denying or Admitting of which is a thing indifferent with respect to the Interest of Religion, yet He is not Forbidden, nay, He is Commanded, to defend Important Truths, even though it should sometimes happen, through the Infirmary of the Disputant, that Strife should attend his Disputation. For, though this should happen, as it often Hath, and often Will again, if Men will not see the greater Dignity there is in that which is Rational and Decent, than in that which is Contumelious and Ridiculous; and the Clerical Character of particular Disputants putants be thereby lessen'd ; and Christian Religion defended by Men who are too proud of their Abilities, and have no Command of their Passions, be, so far, for the present, Disserv'd; yet the Importance of the Disputes, if momentous Truth be thereby establish'd, will, in point of Service to Religion, be an Over-balance : Since the Important Truth once establish'd will remain, when the Contenders shall be no more.

But, since Religion is capable of being thought less well of in any degree, for any indiscreet, or intemperate Zeal in its Defenders, the Servant of the Lord, even in the Defence of Important Truths, is still forbidden to strive, or to be contentious, in the same Sense, in which Strife and Contention are suppos'd to attend Disputes of no Consequence to Religion.

Not Disputes, then, but the Vices incident to Disputes, are forbidden. Now Contention is a Vice incident to Disputation. The Contender, whilst he pretends to be searching after Truth, is seeking Victory, and, by Victory, Glory : Whence the Greeks call Contention φιλονικείαν, or the Love of Victory in the Dispute, the Concomitants of which are the Conceit of Parts, the Pride of Learning, Impatience of Contradiction, a tumultuous and disorderly Process in the Argumentation, Asperity, Insult, Triumph, Reproaches, Abuses, Contumelies, which proceed from a vicious Earnestness to get the better ; and are all nothing thing to the Purpose, forasmuch as Truth, pretended to be sought after, must stand or fall by the Evidence that appears for or against it, which by the Dust the Contenders have rais'd about it is obscur'd, and can never be clearly seen till that is settled.

Supposing, then, the Servant of the Lord to be engag'd in Disputes with serious Men, differing from him in Opinion about Religious Matters, He must not, in his Defending what he thinks to be Important Truth, be Contentious, but Gentle; which is the

II^d Thing I propos'd to consider.

Very Learned and very Good Men have been often disappointed of the Proper and Desireable Fruit of their Labours, when, through Prejudice or Passion, they have departed from the Gentleness recommended in the Text, whether in their Conversation, or Writings. The Service they have Intended, and have been Able to do their Master, hath not been done. It is well if the Cause of their Master, under their Conduct and Management, hath not been Hurt. If therefore this Gentleness be not in the Temper, it must be in the Discretion of the Servant. The Appearance and Opinion of it is necessary to the Purpose of doing Service. It is an Art that must be learnt. It is a Character that must be assum'd. Where-ever there is such a Behaviour, as that, for the Good that may be done by it, Gentleness shall be thought really to be, where naturally it is not, there is a most virtuous Dissimulation.

I deny not, but that there may, occasionally, be some Difficulty in it, arising either from the Temper of the Servant, or the Waywardness of Those, with whom, in the Course of his Ministration, he must converse: but, so there may in the Exercise of any Other Virtue, till the Consideration of the Reason of the Thing, Habitual Practice, and certain Conquests, reviewed with Pleasure, have assur'd us, that it is not only a Superable Task, but an Agreeable and Useful Exercise.

But, were the Difficulty found to be Insurperable by the Servant, after He should have taken true Pains with Himself to Conquer it, yet this would still be the Consequence, that, though, according to the Pains he had taken, he would be the Better Man, yet, in the same degree, in which he should have fail'd of Success, he would be a Deficient Servant. For, towards those who Differ from him in Opinion, is Gentleness especially requir'd; there being no Other way by which they will submit to be Approach'd. There is no Room for him to exercise this Virtue towards those with whom he Agrees. For, towards those All Men are Gentle, even such as are not of a Gentle Nature.

I need not say, that the less Prepar'd we are to engage in Disputes with Others, who seem to differ from us, the more Gentle we should be. For, if we have not well consider'd the Subject of Difference, we may not, for the present, be Certain, Whether they Do differ from us or no. And very precipitate, absurd, and unseemly would it be indeed, to shew any Dislike, much more any Contempt of Persons for Varying from us in their Opinions, when they do not Vary; or, if they do, whilst we are Unprepared to shew them wherein they Err.

But, if the Servant of the Lord be never so well prepar'd to Explain and Establish the Precepts and Doctrines of the Gospel, and to Convince Men of their Departures from the Truth, as it is in Christ Jesus, and doth Intend this earnestly, as a Matter of the greatest Importance to them, yet, in Prudence, he will not do it in a Way likely to defeat his Own Design.

He will only say, what he hath to say, in Terms plain and explicit; and with a View fully to Inform, and as Often as there shall seem to be Occasion; and at a Season most likely to have Effect; and in a Manner least likely to Offend.

Whether what he shall instruct them in, or persuade them to, will be duly Regarded, depends no further on the Servant, than that he be careful there be nothing in His Conduct towards them, that may incline them to Disregard it.

This Point being secur'd, the Servant of the Lord hath done all that a Servant can do.

The Master can do more, indeed, and will do more, if Men are in good earnest Desirous to Know the Truth, and to Believe and Live according to it. He will Enlighten their Understandings. He will Incline their Wills. His Grace will be sufficient for them. But the Servant of the Lord must not strive in a manner unbecoming a Servant. He is intrusted with a Message. All that is requir'd of Him is, that He be found Faithful in Delivering it. If there be any Doubt about the Meaning of it, He can only relate how He himself understands it, and Argue how reasonable it is, that Others should so understand it too.

If they do not immediately comprehend him, if they are slow in collecting the Force of his Arguments, He is not to be Impatient; He is not to upbraid them with Stupidity in not seeing this Force, or with Disingenuity in not Owning it; Imputations, whilst what is imputed is uncertain, at once unmannerly and uncharitable, and, if True, unnecessary. They will look upon such a Procedure as a Degree of Violence intended to Awe them into a Resignation of their present Persuasions, to Compel them to an implicit Submission to His Opinion, and to extort from them the Liberty they have to Judge for themselves, which implies Incompetency to do it.

But, hardly is there a Man, who, in point of Sense, views himself in so disadvantageous a Light, as to consider himself of no kind of

Value, nor worthy of any the least Regard. Self-love, universally implanted in human Nature, will not suffer him to do this. If he could do it, he would be, in a good degree, Unhappy. He would be as often out of Humour with himself, as He should think of it; and we may therefore conclude, He will be as often out of Humour with others, as they shall appear to think this of him. That which distinguishes Men from Brutes being their Reason, and that which distinguishes Men from Men being their Superior Reason, a Good Understanding is of so high a Price, that last of all will Any be brought to yield that they have it not, at least, in Matters that have lain in their Way to Consider, in Matters that are Propos'd to their Consideration; which very Proposal being an Appeal to their Understanding, supposes them to have it. And He who shall undervalue it in Others, will be thought Himself not to have it, and, accordingly, be disregarded in what he hath to offer as the Result of it.

Hence it is that so many Exhortations are given in Scripture to behave in such a manner as not to give Offence by the Diminution of it in Any, since, naturally, Men will have the better Opinion of any One, the better He shall seem to have of their Understanding.

Hence arises the Sin, and the Danger, in our Saviour's Estimate, to Him who shall say to his Brother, Thou Fool: Forasmuch as this cannot be said without betraying so much Dis-

Displeasure against him, and so much Ill-Will to him, and so much Contempt of him, as will naturally be follow'd by reciprocal Disinclination and Disaffection, and an utter Refusal to be Guided or Directed by Him, let his Talents for Conviction or Reformation be what they will.

But, in how slender a degree soever any Man hath Understanding, yet, if He think it sufficient to Guide him, he must be at Liberty to make Use of it, and, if He pleases, to Rely upon it. If, thinking it Incompetent for the Purpose, He will follow the Judgment of Another, He will still think he hath Understanding enough to choose Whose Judgment he shall follow. He will not follow His, to be sure, who, he thinks, doth not use him well: Nor will he ever believe he is so deficient in Understanding, as not to know when he is well used.

Any kind of Force, which the Servant of the Lord shall attempt to use in order to bring Men over to his different Opinion, besides that of the Reason of the thing, (which to Rational Creatures is Cogency sufficient, at least for the Acknowledgment of the Truth, if not for the Practice of it) will always meet with Opposition where Men can be safe, and Compliance in Appearance only where they cannot. Nor can it possibly be otherwise. For though Men may be forc'd to Do as he would have them do, yet they cannot be forc'd to Think as he would have them think.

think. They cannot, often, Think as they would themselves. The easiest and most natural way of inducing them to Think as he would have them, is, to Behave, in the general, towards All Mankind, and towards Those, in particular, whose Notions he would rectify, in such a manner, as that they may, in the first place, Think well of Him. For, in the Errors, from which he proposes to Reform them, they follow Leaders whom they do think well of, and therefore follow them.

If the Reason of the thing be at any time insufficient, it is either because the Weight of it is not discern'd; or that Men are prejudic'd in favour of Earlier Institutions; or in Disfavour to the Reasoner, who would induce other Sentiments. In all which Cases it is evident how necessary it is that Those, whom we would Convince, should have a good Opinion of us. For, where the Reason of the thing is not discern'd, a good Opinion of the Reasoner is in the room of Reason, and is That alone which Persuades. Where there is a Prejudice in favour of earlier Institutions, the Reasoner must take his Chance. But he will have a better Chance, if there be not also a Prejudice in Disfavour of Him; and a better still, if his Amiable Qualities have conciliated Favour to him. For, where there is ill Opinion, or Disaffection, it extinguishes the Desire, if not to Learn, yet to Learn of Him. They will not so much as Approach to the Place of Hearing what he hath to say. Or, if they do, it is, probably, with Hopes of finding something *Amis*s in what he says. Or, if they are so far convinc'd, that they cannot themselves Refute what is said, yet they will suspect that still it may be Refuted. Non Persuadebis, etiam Persuaseris.

Were the Minds of Persons to be taught in æquilibrio; were they indifferent to these or other Tenets in Religion; and wanted only to receive Inclination from Conviction; yet still the Argument made use of for this Purpose would abate of its Force, if there was Disaffection to the Proposer of it.

But, Multitudes are found to be already in a Way of Worshipping and Serving God agreeable to early Institutions, and the Examples of their Ancestors. Be this a wrong Way, yet still they have been led into it from their Infancy, and have therein continu'd, through the Esteem and Affection they have had for those who have preceded and guided them in it. Here is then a Prejudice to be gotten over; a Difficulty which the Servant of the Lord, preserving Mens good Opinion of him, and intreating the Assistance of his Master, may hope to surmount; but neglecting his proper Character, and thereby creating another Prejudice, must for ever despair of doing.

Whoever, then, shall offer to shew these Men a better Path, must, besides his Reasoning clearly upon it, free them from all kind of

of Apprehension, as to the manner of Spirit he is of. He must create in them an Opinion of Gentleness, Goodness, Meekness in Himself; and of his good Will towards Them; that he would not for any Consideration Misguide them; that he walks uprightly in this Path himself, without any Deviation from it; that he hath no other View in pointing it out to them, but the Discharge of his Commission to shew it, and the Safety, he is persuaded they will find in it; that, however, be it never so safe in the Judgment He forms of it, yet, he doth not take upon him to Compel Men to go into it; that he only Invites, and Exhorts, and earnestly Intreats, that they would do so; but that whether they will or no, he will Acquiesce in having deliver'd his Message to them; and that whether they shall or no, he will live in Amity with them, and do good Offices to them, and receive good Offices from them, just as he would do, if They believ'd in all things just as He did.

It is not sufficient, then, for the Conviction or Reformation of others, that the Preacher hath Learning and Eloquence, Qualities which Men Admire, if he have not Those also which Men Love. Where these unite with the proper Powers to Teach and to Persuade, there is great Opinion, great Affection, and the certain Consequence of these, Great Authority.

Whom we thus Gently approach, we shall find more Teachable as well as more Tractable.

They

They will not only more easily submit to be Convers'd with, but they will listen to us also with a closer Attention; what we say will be allow'd fuller Consideration, gain readier Admission, make a deeper Impression. They will the sooner be inclin'd to Think in Religious Matters as we do, when they find this Fruit of Our Religion. Nor shall we have advanc'd a little way towards Convincing those who Differ from us, when once we shall have gain'd their Inclination to Agree with us.

Whereas Ungentleness will have the Appearance of Enmity. After which, all Applications to them, under Pretence of having in View their Temporal and Eternal Good, (great Motive to Attention, where it is believ'd) will be in vain. For, they will say to us, You are Not believ'd. It is not usual for an Enemy to Intend Good. You are suspected of Design, and of Impatience to accomplish it. We are apprehensive you want only to Increase your Party. And we are already appris'd, that even False Teachers will compass Sea and Land, in order to gain even One Profelyte. In your Manner of Convincing us, you seem to intend to Reproach us, and to Shame us, to Insult and Triumph over us, and to Expose us to Derision and Abuse. You are Angry with us for what we cannot Help. And, often, having Mistaken us, you Misrepresent us. And though, in Inquiries after Truth, there is no more room for Wit, than there is for Resentment, yet you are Witty upon us, or Aim to be so at least, (shrewd Sign of Contempt!) and exasperate us by the Delight you seem to take in being so. How justly, therefore, may we Answer you in the Words of holy Job, to his indiscreet Friends, “How forcible are RIGHT Words! but what doth YOUR Arguing Reprove?”

I come now, in the Third and Last Place, to shew, That the Servant of the Lord, with respect to those who are committed to his Care, must be Apt to Teach.

Aptness to Teach implies, first, a Disposition, or Readiness in the Person to Teach, who is here advis'd to be Apt; And, Secondly, his Fitness to do it, or his Qualifications for the Office in Other respects.

The Disposition he hath to enter into the Clerical Office, founded in his Liking the Profession, and his Preferring it to any Other; and in a Consciousness that He hath the proper Powers to be Useful in it; and in a Perjuasion that he shall apply himself to the Discharge of the several Duties of it with Pleasure; is the True Disposition to Teach, or the True Genius to the Profession; and what, as I apprehend, the Church, in the Ordination Office, terms, “A being INWARDLY MOV'D by the HOLY GHOST to take upon him this Office and Ministrations;” and again, “A being CALL'D to the Ministry of the Church, according to the Will of our Lord Jesus Christ.” For this Disposition so founded, this Genius to the Profession, is not only the Gift of the Holy Ghost, but a secret Intimation also, or Monition, or Direction from the Holy Ghost, that, being thus Dispos'd, Prepar'd, and Fitted to promote the Glory of God, and the Edifying of his People by Teaching, he should take upon him That Employment.

But a bare Disposition to Teach, is not a Motion from the Holy Ghost ; a bare Inclination to it, is not a Call to the Ministry, without proper Powers, or Aptnesses, or Fitnesses, or Qualifications for it, in Other Respects, any more than the Plebeian's Inclination to become a Philosopher, upon his having heard Socrates speak divinely, is a Genius to Philosophy.

These Fitnesses, or Qualifications to Teach, are,

Knowledge of Letters.

Sanctity of Life.

Diligence in Duty.

Prudence in Conduct.

1. Knowledge of Letters. The State of the Church upon Earth is Militant, always in Danger, often in Distress. Whether the Enemy She is afraid of be either Spiritual or Carnal, it is fit She should be upon her Guard, in a Posture of Defence, in a Readiness to contend for the Faith once deliver'd unto the Saints, and, though Preferring Peace, yet Prepar'd for War.

30 A SERMON preached before

Learning, with Skill to make use of it, in those who wait at her Altars, is the Armour in which She Trusts, though not the Whole Armour necessary for the Christian Warfare. By these Weapons, however, she is to be Supported in the Belief of the Doctrines, and in the Practice of the Duties of the Religion she hath espous'd. And the Church can no more be said to be in a prosperous Condition without this Aid, than a Kingdom liable to be Divided within itself, or Invaded by a foreign Enemy, without Military Force directed by Wise Counsel,

But unless These so necessary Endowments be accompanied with Others, as necessary to her Safety, these Alone will not be sufficient to protect her. For if what Service Men Do her by their Parts and Learning, they Undo by Failures in their Moral Character, the Merit is over-balanc'd by the Demerit. The Cause that was Defended is Betray'd. The Argument that cannot be Disprov'd, is, however, Suspected. Here is the Repute of Learning to the Men, but not the Benefit of it to the Church. Therefore,

2. Sanctity of Life is Another Qualification fitting and enabling the Servant of the Lord to Teach.

This includes, in the Notion of it, All that Religion and Virtue, which the Clerical Order is instituted to promote.

Tha.

That Men of this Order have separated themselves from all Other Employments, and Devoted themselves wholly to the Promoting of Religion and Virtue amongst Men, is Sanctity of Character. If Sanctity of Life answer this Character, they are, in this Respect, excellently Qualified for the Promoting of Religion and Virtue amongst Men. For, so far, they will be Belov'd, Respected, Rever'd; so far will they restrain many from the Commission of Sin, at least, in their Sight, or that may come to their Knowledge; so far will they Countenance many in the Practice of Virtue, and Invite many to an Imitation of those Virtues which in them appear so lovely; so far will they be prepar'd occasionally to Reprove, Rebuke, and Exhort with greater Authority, and without any Misgiving of Heart that it will be said to any of them, "Thou, that teachest Another, Teachest thou not Thyself?"

But even This Fitness to Teach, is not, Alone, sufficient, without the Former Qualification, especially in an Age so Inquisitive, so Penetrating, and so Contending, that what is said to be True, should be False. So that, if there be a Want of Proper Learning; if what they would induce a Belief and Practice of, they cannot set in such a Light, as that the same shall appear Credible and Reasonable; they may be in Danger of having it imputed to them, that Ignorance is indeed the Mother of THEIR Devotion. Alterius sic Altera poscit opem Res.

3. If, with these Preparations to Teach in the best manner, there be yet a Want of Diligence in the Performance of this Duty; If the Parts, and Learning, and Eloquence of the Clergy, are Unemploy'd, or Otherwise Employ'd, than in Promoting Religion and Virtue; If Sanctity of Life be Recluse; If so chearing a Light shine not before Men, that they may behold it, and be Led and Guided by it into every good Path; If there be not a Watchfulness to give Notice of the Approach of Danger to those committed to their Care; a Concern lest they should Incur it; a Solicitude to Redeem them from it, if haply they shall have fallen into it; and seasonable Instruction how to avoid it for the future; there will not be in the Servant of the Lord that Aptness to Teach, which his Master doth Intend and Require there should.

Those who enter into Holy Orders accept a Trust; and, without Diligence in Duty, do not Answer the Confidence repos'd in them, are not Faithful, are not Just, are not Honest. There is a Work, and there are Wages; and the Wages are for the Work. If it be true, that the Labourer is worthy of his Hire, it is not less true, that the Hire is worthy of a Labourer. And if, in the Opinion of the Labourer, the Hire, at any time, be but Small, yet the Duty is not therefore to be done Negligently. The Duty is such, as that the Present and Future Happiness of Multitudes depends on its being Well perform'd. The Hire, though small, is Accepted. Diligence was Pre-

Presum'd. Otherwise Another would have been employ'd. He hath no Other Employment, and cannot therefore want Leisure to do the Duties of This in the best manner.

4. Prudence in Conduct may well be reckon'd a Qualification to Teach, since This is the great Security that any Other shall be of Use.

Diligence, if not under the Direction of Prudence, may Intrude, be Officious, Unseasonable, Offensive. The Diligent hath an End in View. Such Steps only are to be taken as Conduce to it. Intempestivity is Diligence to Prevent what he aims to Accomplish. If he would reclaim the Sinner, and think Admonition proper for this Purpose, he will consider also what Opportunity is proper; and what Manner of Address is proper. His Intention is to Gain his Brother. If his Brother will hear him, he will have gain'd his Brother. That his Brother may hear him, he will consider his Temper, his Condition in the World, his Age, the Time, the Place. As These differ, the Application, in Prudence, will be different.

In like manner, Parts, and Learning, and Eloquence applied to Reform from Vice, no less than to Convince of Error, will fail of the Regard Men should have for these excellent Endowments, and, consequently, of their proper Influence, if the Argument we use for this Purpose be accompanied with personal Reflections on occasion of personal Misunderstandings, standings, or with Expressions of Asperity towards any Sect or Party differing from us in Notions whether Religious or Political. For, in these Cases, the Audience will only be instructed with whom the Preacher is Displeas'd. The Duty that was to have been inforc'd is left to shift for itself. Here is a Weakness crept into the Argument which is taken special Notice of, and the Strength of it is Overlook'd. All that the Preacher shall say of Duty, intermix'd as it is with foreign, and especially with offensive Matter, will go for nothing. The Affair of Duty, What Men ought to Believe and Do, was the Preacher's Only Concern. If He appear, not to be concern'd about This, or not sufficiently, (as he will, if he be concern'd about any thing else) neither probably will the Hearer. The Hearer may suppose the Preacher to be the best Judge, what is of the greatest Importance. Nor ought any One to be surpris'd if his Attention should be chiefly to That which was chiefly design'd for his Entertainment; or, if This should be All that he will Remember; or, if this should not Improve him in Christian Knowledge, but be Matter of Amusement only, if he was Untouch'd, or, of Resentment, if Hurt. Through his Imprudence He is the Occasion that his Valuable Talents shall be of no Use towards the Attainment of the very End he pretends to be in Pursuit of: whereas Reasoning upon the proper Subject of Discourse with Dignity, with Solidity, with Perspicuity, with Ingenuity and Candor, Candor, might have had Force insuperable, and not have created in any One any Prejudice against the Truth, any Disinclination to acknowledge it. But Religion and Virtue are not likely to be promoted by a Conduct in the Writer or Preacher, that is Itself a Departure from Religion and Virtue.

In like manner Sanctity of Life, however founded in Conviction of the absolute Necessity of it in Clerical Men, to the saving their Own Souls, and the Souls of those that Hear them, may yet, by Failures in Prudence, fail Itself of Respect, and consequently of Influence.

To Be Good, and to be Satisfied of one's Own Sincerity, is not sufficient. There will be a Failure in Prudence, if this do not Appear also, and be not Believ'd to be what it appears. To be Really good, is primarily necessary to preserve the Appearance of Goodness. For, otherwise, This cannot be long maintained. For Simulation will sometimes forget that She is acting a Part. This Foundation being once laid, that, in Prudence, is to be done, which will make it Credible, and that, in Prudence, forborn, which may render it Suspected.

Where True Goodness is, no Pains are necessary to make it Appear, or be Believ'd. The uniform Tenor of Life and Conversation will shew it. The Care which, in Prudence, Men are to take, is, that Affectations, Ostentations, Austerities, Levities, Want of Temper, do not intermix with Sanctity of Life, and contribute to its Disappearing, or occasion it to be Dis-
E believ'd,

believ'd, and, consequently, to fail of the desir'd Influence in Teaching.

By AFFECTATION it will fail. For Affectation, being a Departure from what is Simple and Natural, is always mistrusted. Accordingly, Examples have been set by Men of Affected, or Constitutional Piety, (which will always appear to be Affected) which Sober, Wise, and Virtuous Men have not thought it Necessary to Imitate; which many, despairing to Reach, have given over the Pursuit of, and fallen short even of that Degree of Goodness they might have attain'd; which, after having astonish'd the Ignorant, and Assembled the Curious in Multitudes for a while, have, in the end, serv'd only to Distress scrupulous and tender Minds with a Doubtfulness of their State, and to Reproach Good Men with Deficiencies they cannot supply; and which Human Frailty in themselves hath often shewn to be Examples far from being Perfect and Exact.

What was gain'd to the Credit and Interest of True Religion by the Affectations of Purity, a Century ago, beyond what any One in his Senses could think Needful, or Practicable, or believe to be founded in Real Goodness, of which he perceiv'd not the least Fruit?

The Dissolute, who saw through the Hypocrisy of those Times, comforted themselves with supposing, that all Pretences to Piety and Goodness were no better founded than in Views of private Ends; whilst Others of a better Mind, resolving to keep as far from all Affectation tation as was possible, were shy of Appearing Openly to be so Good as they really were; whereby Religion lost its Proper Countenance.

And again, What is gain'd to the Credit and Interest of True Religion, in the present Age, by Affectations of extraordinary Sanctity, the Result, as is pretended, of Instantaneous Regeneration? Men are taught to attend to a sudden Impulse of the Spirit, by which the New Birth is wrought; which, however, is not so describ'd, as that any Man Living can discern, whether he Feel it or no; and yet it is made of such Importance to Salvation, that, be it at the Peril of his Soul, if He Feel it not.

The Natural Consequence of which is, That many will Believe, or Hope, or Fancy, or Flatter themselves, that they Do feel this Impulse, in order to get rid of the Terror of Damnation (for there is a sort of Elasticity, if I may so call it, in Human Nature, which, upon every Pressure, endeavours to recover itself into the former State of Ease and Tranquillity); whilst Others, who feel nothing of it, (not having Spring enough for this Purpose) are overwhelm'd with the Perplexity and Horror consequent upon their Belief, that inevitable Ruin is their Doom.

Much more Apt to Teach is He, who calls not upon Men already born of Water and of the Holy Ghost, according to the Institution of our Blessed Saviour, to be born again by an Impulse, or Inward Feeling, or what shall be interpreted by themselves to be so; but Diligently to Read the Scriptures; and to Observe what is therein Comanded or Forbidden; and to be Careful to Do the One, and to Forbear the Other; and if, through Ignorance, or Inadvertence, or Surprize, or Strength of Passion, there be Departures from this sure Rule of Life, to lament them, and to be more Watchful over their Conduct for the future, and to beg of God to assist them to do his Will. But if any think they have found a nearer way to Salvation, I cannot say they are not Persuaded of it. To their Own Master they must stand, or fall.

But not only Affectation of greater Sanctity than can consist with the Frailties of Human Nature, but OSTENTATION of that Degree of it which in this Life is Attainable, and Matter of Duty, is such a Failure in Prudence in the Teacher, that he shall have less Influence, and, consequently, be less Apt to Teach.

For, Ostentation is a kind of Force us'd towards Men to Oblige them to see Our Virtues, which, otherwise, they would readily enough have seen, but which, when Obtruded upon them to be taken notice of, make them sharp-sighted and inquisitive into Our Defects. They begin to apprehend, that a Diminution of every thing Good in Themselves is Intended, and that their Own Virtues are to be extinguish'd by this superior Glare; and from hence grow Peevish, and Disinclin'd to allow that Goodness in us, which, if it had been more Modest and Reserv'd, would not have been less Seen, and much more Admir'd, and have affected the Hearts of Men with greater Desire of attaining like Excellence: and indeed with Reason; for where there is a Vanity, and a fond Conceit of Goodness, there IS less Goodness. For there are such Abatements to be made in the Estimate of the Goodness of the best Men, that a Man cannot be Conceited of his Goodness, and Be Good; nor, consequently, Appear to be Conceited, and Appear to be Good.

Again, AUSTERITY in the Teacher, whether this appear in Unnecessary Severities towards Himself, or Heavy Impositions on Others Grievous to be born, is a Failure in Prudence, if his Design be to Profelyte Men to Christianity. My Yoke, saith our Saviour, is Easy, and My Burthen is Light. My Ways, saith Wisdom, are Ways of Pleasantness, and My Paths are Peace. The Service of God is not a Whimsical, but a Reasonable Service. It is a Service that is perfect Freedom, when uncumbred with Strictnesses that are not founded in Religion, but in Mistakes about Religion. Even Self-denial, the great Characteristick of the Christian, is Abstinence from that only which will Hurt. Not Suffering, but the Effects of Suffering, constitute the Christian; and therefore Sufferings are no longer Good, than they Produce Good.

However, therefore, Men may have been scar'd by Misrepresentations, there is nothing frightful in Religion. A dark, gloomy, severe, dejected Countenance may be the Countenance of Men Low-spirited, Ignorant, or Affected; fected; but is not That of Religion, Religion, Viewed at a proper Point of Sight, hath a very Beautiful Face. It is Innocent, and very Careful not to Hurt any body; or, doing it inadvertently, is Uneasy till it hath made him Amends. It always Means well, and Does as well as ever it can. If it Offends, it wants to be Reconci'd; Confesses its Fault; Prays to be Forgiven; is desirous to be Inform'd; is less Adventurous; more Circumspect; Sensible of its Own Frailty; Forgives every body; Abounds in Good-will; Delights in Good-offices; keeps itself clean; Is Pleas'd with itself; Looks Chearful; Is chearful. Why then will any One be so Indiscreet, as to dress this Lovely Form in such a Frightful Manner, as to Terrify the Beholder, instead of Inviting him to embrace it?

But if Austerities are Imprudent, as they discourage Men from entering upon a Religious Course of Life, LEVITIES are not less so, as they tempt Men to think there is no Need to be Serious, even in Serious Matters.

For, since to Promote Religion is what Clerical Men professedly undertake; and since they cannot more Effectually promote it, than by Securing an Opinion in Those, whom they would have to be Religious, that they have nothing so much at heart, What can be more Aliene to their Design, than to give Men Opportunities to observe, that their Attention is, in a manner, wholly taken off from this One Thing Needful, and set upon Levities of various rious Kinds, which, if Innocent in themselves, yet, hurting the Clerical Character, and weakening their Credit and Influence, are not So in Them?

It is not Impossible indeed, but that a Clergyman in a fanciful affected Dress, manifestly shewing with what Reluctance he departs from the Lay Habit, and accedes to the Clerical, as if he hoped to be still Undistinguish'd; and pursuing Sports and Pastimes with a keener Appetite than could become even That Part of the Laity that would be thought to be Men of any Business; and so far receding from the Dignity of his Office, as to be Delighted, or at least not to be Displeas'd, with Conversation that must offend every one Intending, and especially Professing to intend, the Promotion of Piety and Virtue; and Associating Himself to Inferior Persons of no Education, whether as Assistants in Ordinary Diversions, or as Partisans in Private Schemes, and especially if they are Men of Irreligious or Immoral Lives, which must here be Overlook'd, or dispens'd with Unreprov'd: I say, it is not Impossible but that such a Clergyman may be Able to satisfy the Doubts of the Scrupulous Christian, and set his poor, trembling Heart at Rest: But, for all this, he will not generally be Thought to be so; or, if he Should, yet Few will Adventure to Open themselves to him with any Confidence that he is Fit to be Trusted with what they have to say.

But, were it true, that Illiterate Men Misjudg'd of these Matters, yet if Their good Opinion

32 A SERMON preached before

Opinion of him be necessary to his having Sufficient Authority with them to direct and guide them in the Paths of Holiness and Virtue, he must abridge himself of these Liberties, however Innocent, since they are Unnecessary, rather than give such Offence, as will make his Ministry amongst them of no Use. But let him be assured, there can, here, be no Mistake. The Learned and Illiterate are both of the same Opinion.

The Last Thing I shall mention as Lessening Opinion of Sanctity, and Influence in Teaching, and, consequently, as Imprudent, is WANT OF TEMPER.

That Impatience or Want of Temper in the Management of Religious Disputes is a Failure in Prudence, hath already appeared, and Experience sufficiently shews, that it is not less so in General Conduct.

I do not say, that, To be Angry, simply consider'd, is a Diminution of the Clerical Character: For Anger, like all Other Passions, is implanted in Human Nature by the Creator for Wise and Good Purposes. Be ye Angry, and Sin not, supposes that a Man may be Angry, and yet Innocent. Nay, whenever Displeasure, shewn in a proper Degree, and proper Manner, would Prevent the Mischief, or the Sin, from being repeated, Not to be Angry, would Not be Innocent. Anger, properly exerted, is a very Fine Passion, and is often rightly counterfeited for the Service that may be done by the Apprehension of it, whilst it is thought to be Real. Anger is the very Passion which chiefly keeps the World in Awe, so far as it is kept in Awe. What are the best Laws that have ever been made, but the Effects of the Anger of the Legislature? And what is it that hinders the Execution of the best Laws, but the Indolence, and Insensibility, and Semperlenity, and Dead Calmness of Temper, or Want of Anger in the Subject?

Let only the Cause be sufficient to Warrant it, and the Degree of it be Proportionable, and the Manner not Offensive, and the Duration no longer than the Occasion, Whosoever is Angry within these Bounds cannot be said to Want Temper, but to be in Due Temper; and his Anger not to be Culpable, but Virtuous and Laudable.

But Anger shewn upon Trifling Occasions will Lessen Opinion, because it manifests a Weakness in Judgment, which apprehended That to be Great which was Little; and, if in a great Degree, a greater Weakness, forasmuch as the Judgment is still more mistaken. If express'd in Language contumelious, virulent, abusive, it will Lessen Opinion, because this is Want of Temper, Temper Unbridled, Unrestrain'd by due Reflection, a great Failure in Prudence, a Disgrace to Liberal Education, wholly Unnecessary to any Virtuous Purpose, inducing a Belief of Ill Will to the Person, which no Man should bear to Any, rarely procuring Amendment, hardly admitting Reconciliation, which yet every Man must want to have brought about, who is either a Prudent Man, or a Christian.

If it be inquir'd, What is a Cause of Anger, which in the Servant of the Lord will be allow'd to be Just; I Answer, That Conduct in the Scoffer, or the Vicious, which Opposes, Retards, or Hinders Good; or, in other Words, the Success of his Ministration.

The Servant of the Lord, if he be a Good and Faithful Servant, cannot but have the Credit and Interest of That Religion at Heart, which his Master came to Establish; cannot but use his utmost Diligence to bring it into Repute, and to Propagate it in the World; cannot but exceedingly Rejoice, if he hath but a rational and well-grounded Hope, that He is become an Instrument in the Hand of God for the Promoting of Piety and Virtue amongst Men; and be exceedingly Griev'd, as often as he finds himself Disappointed and Defeated in This View; and will therefore be Justified in the Offence he rightly takes, and in the Resentment he properly expresses against those, who, by their Irreligious and Immoral Conversation and Behaviour, by their Neglect or Contempt of Things Sacred or Serious, aim to render his Endeavours fruitless, and his Labours in the Service of his Lord Insignificant.

To Conclude, The Servant of the Lord must not Strive, or enter into the Discussion of foolish and unlearned Questions, such as have no Relation to his Master's Service, below his Dignity, as well as beside his Purpose. Nor yet, in the Disputes he may have with Conscientious Men differing from him in Opinion, must he defend the most Important Truths, in a Contentious Manner; for the Wrath of Man worketh not the Righteousness of God. Neither must he Intrude into the Sacred Office without being Call'd thereto by a True Inclination to the Office itself, founded in a Consciousness of the Powers proper to the due Discharge of it, let the Temporal Emolument thereto annex'd be, as it shall happen, Great or Small. Neither let him Flatter himself, that nothing more is requisite to Convince and Reform Men, than to Know, and to be Able to Prove to them, in a clear manner, what is to be Believ'd and Practis'd. This is Necessary, but it is not All that is so. Such a Regard to his Own Character, and such a Behaviour towards Them, is also Requir'd, as shall not fail to procure him their Esteem, and their Affection.

I do not pretend, that the Ignorant, or the Obstinate, or the Immoral, will always be Reform'd by the strongest Arguments, laid before them in the best Order, and press'd upon them in the most affectionate Manner, by the most unexceptionable Person. It is very well, if we have Convinc'd them of Error, and have not Prejudic'd them against the Truth. If the Understanding be once Enlightened, the Will, in time, may be Obedient. Having been Careful not to Offend Any, it is very likely we may Gain Some. Events are in the Hands of God, Duty in Ours. If at last, our Labour of Love should be lost to any of our unhappy Flock, it will not be lost to Us. And though we may not be Able to lead Others through the Paths of Virtue to Eternal Rest, yet shall we be sure to find the Way thither Ourselves; and each of us be receiv'd with This Commendation from our Heavenly Master; Well done, thou good and faithful Servant! Enter thou into the Joy of thy Lord.
