

Bodleian Libraries

UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

This book is part of the collection held by the Bodleian Libraries and scanned by Google, Inc. for the Google Books Library Project.

For more information see:

<http://www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/dbooks>

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike 2.0 UK: England & Wales (CC BY-NC-SA 2.0) licence.

50

Betty Ann Garratt

Poetry

Made familiar and easy to

Young Gentlemen and Ladies,

A N D

Embellish'd with a great Variety of the most shining Epigrams,
Epitaphs, Songs, Odes, Pastorals,
&c. from the best Authors.

Being the FOURTH VOLUME

OF THE

Circle of the Sciences, &c.

Published by the KING's Authority.

The SECOND EDITION.

L O N D O N:

Printed for J. NEWBERRY, at the Bible and Sun, in St. Paul's Church-Yard.

MDCCLXVIII.

Faint, illegible text, possibly bleed-through from the reverse side of the page. The text is scattered across the page and is mostly illegible due to low contrast and blurriness.

By the KING's Royal Licence.

To Her Highness
Princess AUGUSTA,

T H I S

A R T of P O E T R Y

Is humbly Inscrib'd

B Y

Her Highness's

most obedient Servant,

JOHN NEWBERY.

T H E

P R E F A C E.

AS every Branch of Literature, of what Nature or Kind soever, should be rendered an agreeable Amusement to young Minds, rather than a serious Occupation, we shall make it our principal Aim, throughout our LITTLE CIRCLE, to strew (if we may be indulg'd the Expression) the Path to Knowledge, as it were, with Roses, and to render This and every FUTURE ATTEMPT as useful and entertaining as possible.

The DESIGN of the following Sheets is to give our British Youth a transient Idea of English Poesy ; and therefore, not to anticipate their
A Plea-

P R E F A C E.

Pleasure too much, we shall here only just touch upon the Antiquity, Nature and Beauty of that ART which we have endeavour'd to display in the most familiar Manner, and to recommend by a Variety of beautiful Quotations from our politest and most approved Poets.

Without any farther Apology, therefore, we shall now proceed to the Point in hand.

P O E T R Y, then, according to the Opinion of the late celebrated and justly admired Mons. Rollin, is an Art as antient as the World, and derives its Source from Nature herself. Its peculiar (if not its only) Task in the earliest Ages of the World, was to celebrate the Praises of the GREAT AUTHOR of the Universe.

P R E F A C E.

Universe. This was the noble Use that the Israelites of old made of it, who were GOD's peculiar People. The Nations, however, who forsook the Lord of Life, and ungratefully despis'd him, to pursue their own perverse and wicked Ways, soon transferred to the meanest Objects that Tribute of Adoration which was due only to the ALMIGHTY.

At length, through the most deplorable Blindness, it was still farther debas'd, and made Use of to paint, in the most lively and agreeable Colours, the then reigning Vices of the Age, and to render the most infamous Passions more amiable than Virtue itself.—Amazing Stupidity! most fatal Consequences of the shameful Depravity of Mankind!

P R E F A C E.

Notwithstanding the Greeks and the Romans after them, made much the same deplorable Use of this DIVINE ART, yet they preserved a clear and distinct Notion of its true Character ; for they requir'd of their Poets a Fertility of Invention, a Nobleness of Sentiment, and the most sublime Expression ; they required, in short, an Enthusiasm, which, in their exalted Idea of it, was next to a Divine Inspiration. But how seldom do we find so many great and valuable Qualifications meet in one Person ?

ART can by no means confer on us an elevated Genius, a sprightly Sense, or a quick Imagination. They derive their Source, as we have before observ'd, from Nature, or, in other

P R E F A C E.

other Terms, are the invaluable Blessings of Heaven itself.

We must, in a Word, be born Poets; for this divine Art is not to be attain'd by the most unwearied Industry and Application.

We shall now give our PUPILS a SHORT VIEW of the Nature of POESY, and so conclude, not doubting but, from their due Observance of the respective Rules and Precepts laid down, and the various Examples that are produced in the Body of the subsequent ESSAY, they'll soon entertain an adequate Idea of its real Beauties.

The whole Aim and Intention of POESY is to please and to instruct. In order to please, it borrows from Nature every Thing that is gay and delightful. It adorns its Diction with Number and Harmony ; and it never fails to employ the Marvellous and Pathetick in their proper Place.

P R E F A C E.

And in order that it may instruct as well as please (in an Age so polite as the present) it describes and exposes to View, in the strongest Point of Light, Virtue in all its Beauty and Perfection, and Vice in all its most abhorrent Shapes : And by a great Variety of Examples, artfully introduced, it steals upon our Affections, and induces us to embrace the One, and eschew the Other : And should any of our READERS be but One Virtue the better for these our honest Endeavours, we shall not think our Labour ill bestowed.

T H E

THE ART
OF POETRY.

CHAP. I.

Containing a Definition of POETRY, and the Qualifications of a true POET.

Q. WHAT is Poetry?

A. It is the Art of composing Poems, or Pieces in Verse.

A 4

Q. And

Q. And is a Skill in making Verses all that is requisite to form a Poet?

A No; that is one of the least Qualifications of a good Poet: For a Person of an indifferent Genius may be taught to compose Verses that will flow smoothly, and sound well to the Ear, which yet may be of no Value for want of strong Sense, Propriety and Elevation of Thought, or Purity of Diction. A true Poet is distinguished by a Fruitfulness of Invention, a lively Imagination tempered by a solid Judgment, a Nobleness of Sentiments and Ideas, and a bold, lofty, and figurative Manner of Expression. He thoroughly understands the Nature of his Subject; and, let his Poem be never so short, he forms a Design or Plan, by which every Verse is directed to a certain End, and each has a just Dependance on the other; for it is this produces the Beauty of Order and Harmony, and gives Satisfaction faction to a rational Mind.—The Duke of Buckingham, in his Essay on Poetry, very justly observes :

Numbers, and Rhyme, and that harmonious Sound
Which never does the Ear with Harshness wound,
Are necessary, yet but vulgar Arts :
For all in vain these superficial Parts
Contribute to the Structure of the Whole,
Without a Genius too, for that's the Soul ;
A Spirit, which inspires the Work throughout,
As that of Nature moves the World about ;
A Heat which glows in ev'ry Word that's writ ;
'Tis something of divine, and more than Wit ;
Itself unseen, yet all Things by it shown ;
Describing all Men, but describ'd by none.

Q. How can this true Genius for Poetry be obtained ?

A. A Poetical Genius is the Gift of Nature, and cannot be acquired ; nor can the Want of it be supplied by Art or Industry : But where such a Genius is found, it may be assisted by proper Rules

Rules and Directions ; and such I shall endeavour to lay down.

C H A P. II.

Of the Structure of English VERSE ; and of RHYME.

2. WHich are the first Things to be learnt in order to make Verses ?

A. You must understand (what perhaps you know already) that Syllables are distinguished into long and short, and this Length or Shortness is called their Quantity. Of two, three, and sometimes more Syllables, the Antients form'd their Poetical Feet, giving each of them a different Name. Thus a Foot consisting of two long Syllables was called a Spondee ; of a short one follow'd by a long one, an Iambus ;
of

of a long one follow'd by two short ones, a Dactyl, &c. And of these Feet they compos'd various Kinds of Verses.

Q. Have we such Poetical Feet in the English Language?

A. There is very little Variety of Feet in the English Poetry, the Iambus being, as it were the sole Regent of our Verse, especially of our Heroics, which consist of five short and five long Syllables intermix'd alternately, tho' this Order is sometimes beautifully varied by our best Poets, as an excellent Writer observes :

Two Syllables our English Feet compose,
 But Quantities distinguish them from Prose.
 By Long and Short, in various Stations plac'd,
 Our English Verse harmoniously is grac'd :
 With Short and Long Heroic Feet we raise,
 But these to vary is the Poet's Praise ;
 For the same Sounds perpetually disgust.
Dryden to this Variety was just.

After all, the Quantity of the Syllables in ours, and other modern Languages, is is not well fix'd ; and little Regard is had to it in the Composition of Verses. The Number of Syllables, the Pause, and the Seat of the Accent, are the chief Things to be consider'd in the English Verification.

Q. What do you mean by Accent ?

A. It is a particular Stress or Force of the Voice, laid upon any Syllable in speaking, as upon fi in finite, upon in in infinite, &c.

Q. Is the Accent laid upon the same Syllables in Verse as in Prose ?

A. Yes ; and in English Verse it is the Accent that denominates a Syllable long, rather than the Nature of the Vowel, Diphthong, &c. tho' Accent and Quantity are, in reality, two different Things.

Q. Where then is the Difficulty of making Verses, if it be only to put together a certain Number of Syllables ?

A. It is not enough that Verses have their their

their just Number of Syllables, but the Words must be so disposed as that the Accents and the Pause may fall in such and such Places as to render them harmonious and pleasing to the Ear.

Q. What do you mean by the Pause?

A. It is a small Rest or Stop which is made in pronouncing the longer Sorts of Verses, dividing them into two Parts, each of which is call'd an Hemistich, or *Half-Vers*e: But this Division is not always equal, that is, one of the Hemistichs does not always contain the same Number of Syllables as the other. This Inequality proceeds from the Seat of the Accent, that is strongest in the first Hemistich; for the Pause is to be made at the End of the Word where such Accent happens, or at the End of the Word following; as will presently be shewn.

Q. Is nothing else to be observ'd in the English Verification?

A. Metre,

A. Metre, or Measure, which is such an harmonious Disposition of a certain Number of Syllables as above mention'd, is all that is absolutely necessary to constitute English Verse, but Rhyme is generally added to make it more delightful.

Q. What is Rhyme ?

*A. It is a Likeness of Sound between the last Syllable or Syllables of one Verse, and the last Syllable or Syllables of another.—When only one Syllable at the End of one Line rhymes to one Syllable at the End of another, it is called single Rhyme, as made, trade ; confess, distress : But when the two last Syllables are alike in Sound, as drinking, thinking ; able, table, it is called Double Rhyme. We have also some Instances of Treble Rhyme, where the three last Syllables chime together, as Charity, Parity, &c. But this is seldom or never admitted in serious Subjects, and in such*

such the Double Rhyme is to be used but sparingly.

Q. Have you any other Instructions to give me concerning Rhyme?

A. Yes; You are to observe, that the Consonants which precede the Vowels where the Rhyme begins, must be different in each Verse; so that Light and Delight, Vice and Advice, move and remove, must not be made to rhyme together; for tho' the Words are different enough, the rhyming Syllables are exactly the same, and Rhyme consists rather in a Likeness than a Sameness of Sound. From hence it follows, that a Word cannot rhyme to itself, nor even Words that differ both in Signification and Orthography, if they have the same Sound, as Heir, Air; Prey, pray; blew, blue, &c. Such Rhymes indeed, and others equally bad, as Nation and Affection, Villany and Gentry, follow and Willow, where the Likeness is not sufficient, cient, were allow'd of in the Days of Chaucer, Spencer, and the rest of our ancient Poets, but are by no means to be admitted in our modern Compositions. It may be farther observ'd, that the rhyming of Words depends upon their Likeness of Sound, not of Orthography; for laugh and quaff, tho' differently written, rhyme very well together; but Plough and Cough, tho' their Terminations are alike, rhyme not at all.

Q. What do you call that Sort of Verse which has no Rhyme?

A. It is call'd Blank Verse; of which I shall give you some Specimens hereafter.

Q. What Number of Syllables do our Verses consist of?

A. We have Verses of several Measures, containing seldom less than four, nor more than fourteen Syllables; in speaking of which I shall begin with those that are mostly in Use.

C H A P. III.

Of the several Sorts of English VERSES.

Q. WHat Sorts of Verses are chiefly used in our Poetry ?

A. Those of ten, eight, and seven Syllables ; especially the first Sort, which are used in Heroic Poems, Tragedies, Elegies, Pastorals, and many other Subjects, but generally those that are grave and serious.

Q. On what Syllables must the Accent fall in this Kind of Verse ?

A. In this Sort the Words are commonly so disposed, that the Accent may fall on every second, fourth, sixth, eighth, and tenth Syllable ; as in the two following Lines :

From vúlgar Bóunds with bráve Disórder párt,
And snáitch a Gráce beyónd the Reách of A'rt.

But (as has been intimated already) this Order may be frequently dispens'd with, without destroying the Harmony of the Verse ; nay, it adds a peculiar Beauty to the Poetry, to indulge such a Variety now and then, especially in the first and second Syllables of the Line, of which the following is an Instance, where the Accent is on the first Syllable, and not on the second :

Nów to the Maín the búrning Sún 'descénds.

Q. Where is the Pause to be in Verses of this Kind ?

A. This (as I have before observ'd) is determin'd by the Seat of the most prevailing Accent in the first Half-Versé, which ought to be either on the second, fourth, or sixth Syllable ; and the Pause must must immediately follow the Word where this Accent happens, or the Word after it.

Q. Can't you give me some Examples of this ?

A. Yes ; in the following Lines you have Instances of each of the Cases mention'd, where the ruling Accent only is mark'd, and the Pause denoted by a Dash —.

First Case.

As búsy — as intentive Emmets are.
Despíse it — and more noble Thoughts pursue.

Second Case.

Belínda smil'd — and all the World was gay.
So fresh the Wóund is — and the Grief so vast.

Third Case.

Some have at first for Wíts — then Poets pass'd.
And since he could not sáve her — with her dy'd.

Q. Is the Pause not to be allow'd of in any other Places of a Verse but where it is in these Examples ?

A. Yes, sometimes it is ; but then the Verses are not quite so agreeable to the Ear, as is evident from the following Instance :

Bright Hesper twinkles from afar — Away
My Kids — for you have had a Feast to-day.

Here is nothing disagreeable in the Structure of these Verses but the Pause, which in the first of them (you see) is after the eighth Syllable, and in the latter after the second ; whereas so unequal a Division cannot produce any true Harmony.

Q. How shall I know the Accent which determines the Pause ?

A. It must be confess'd, the prevailing Accent is sometimes not easily distinguish'd, as when two or three in the same same Verse seem equally strong; in which Case the Sense and Construction of the Words must be your Guide. And after all, a Person who has a tolerable Ear for Poetry, will have little Occasion for Rules concerning the Pause or the Accents, but will naturally so dispose his Words as to create a certain Harmony, without Labour to the Tongue, or Violence to the Sense.

Q. After the Verses of ten Syllables, what Sort is most frequent in our Poetry?

A. Those of eight, whereof we have many entire Poems.

Q. What is to be observ'd in the Structure of these Verses?

A. In these, as in the former, the Accents generally fall on every second Syllable, but not without Exception, as you will see in the following Example:

A shów'r of sóft and fleécy Rain
 Fálls, to new-clóath the Eárrh agáin :
 Behóld the Móúntains Tóps around,
 As íf with Fúr of E'rmin crówn'd.

Q. What Sort of Verses do you next take notice of ?

A. Those of seven Syllables, which are call'd Anacreontic, from Anacreon, a Greek Poet, who wrote in Verse of that Measure.

Q. Where should the Accents fall in this Kind of Verse ?

A. On the first, third, fifth, and seventh Syllables, as in the following Lines :

Glítt'ring Stónes and gólden Thíngs,
 Wéalth and Hónours thát have Wíngs,
 Ever flútt'ring tó be góne,
 Wé can néver cáll our ówn.

As for Verses of nine and eleven Syllables, they are not worth our Notice, being very very seldom used, except those which are of double Rhyme, and properly belong to the Verses of eight and ten Syllables.

There is a Kind of Verse of twelve Syllables, having the Accent on every third, which is only made use of in Subjects of Mirth and Pleasantry, as are those of eleven Syllables which run with much the same Cadence. But there is another Sort of twelve Syllables, which are now and then introduced amongst our Heroics, being sometimes the last of a Couplet, or two Verses, as in the following Instance :

The ling'ring Soul th'unwelcome Doom receives,
And, murm'ring with Disdain, — the beauteous
Body leaves.

Sometimes a Verse of this Kind concludes a Triplet, or three Lines that rhyme together, where the Sense is full and complete ; as for Example :

B 4

Millions

Millions of op'ning Mouths to Fame belong,
 And ev'ry Mouth is furnish'd with a Tongue,
 And round with list'ning Ears — the flying
 Plague is hung. }

Here let us observe by the Way, that the Sense ought always to be closed at the End of a Triplet, and not continued to the next Line; tho' Instances of this Fault (if it be one) are to be found in some of our best Poets.

This Verse of twelve Syllables (which is call'd Alexandrine or Alexandrian, from a Poem on the Life of Alexander, written or translated into such Verse by some French Poets) is also frequently used at the Conclusion of a Stanza in Lyric or Pindaric Odes, of which we shall speak hereafter. The Pause, in these Verses, ought to be at the sixth Syllable, as you see in the foregoing Examples.

In this Place it cannot be amiss to observe, that tho' the Alexandrine Verse, when rightly employ'd, has an agreeable Effect in our Poetry, it must be used sparingly and with Judgment. Mr. Pope has censured the improper Use of it, and at the same Time given us a beautiful Verse of this Kind, in his excellent Essay on Criticism, where, speaking of those who regard Verification only, he says :

A needless Alexandrine ends the Song,
That, like a wounded Snake, drags its flow
Length along.

Q. When are Verses of fourteen Syllables made use of?

A. Not so often as those of twelve ; but they are likewise inserted in Heroic Poems, and are agreeable enough when they conclude a Triplet where the Sense is finish'd, especially if the preceding
Verse

Verse be of twelve Syllables ; as in this of Mr. Dryden :

For thee the Land in fragrant Flow'rs is drest ;
For thee the Ocean smiles, and smooths her wavy Breast,
And Heav'n itself with more serene and purer
 Light is blest.

If these Verses follow one of ten Syllables, the Inequality of the Measure renders them less pleasing ; but this is only in Heroics ; for in Odes they are gracefully placed after Verses of any Number of Syllables whatsoever.

Q. What have you to observe relating to the shorter Sorts of Verses ?

A. They are chiefly used in Operas, Odes, and our common Songs ; but they having nothing in them worth Notice. We meet with them of three, four, five, and six Syllables ; but those of four and six are most common, of which let the following Specimen suffice :

The

The Battle near
 When Cowards fear,
 The Drum and Trumpet sounds;
 Their Courage warms,
 They rush to Arms,
 And brave a Thousand Wounds.

Q. Have you no other Rules or Observations to make concerning our Verification?

A. Yes; it is proper to say something of the Elisions or Contractions that are admitted in our Poetry, according as the Measure requires.

C H A P.

 C H A P. IV.

Of the ELISIONS allowed of in English Poetry ; and some miscellaneous Remarks.

Q. WHat do you mean by Elision ?
 A. I mean the cutting off one or more Letters, either from the Beginning, Ending, or Middle of a Word, whereby two Syllables are contracted into one, and are so pronounced.

Q. In what Cases are such Contractions allowable ?

A. In Words of three or more Syllables, which are accented on the last save two, when the Liquid r comes between two Vowels, that which precedes the r is frequently cut off ; as in Temperance, Difference, Flatterer, Victo- ry, amorous, and others; which, tho' three Syllables, and often used as such in Verse, may be contracted into two when the Measure requires it; and this Contraction is denoted by a little Mark call'd an Apostrophe, the Words being written or printed, Temp'rance, Diff'rence, Flatt'rer, Vict'ry am'rous, and pronounced accordingly. An Elision is made of both Vowels before the r in lab'ring, endeav'ring, neighb'ring, and such like Words.

Q. Does this Rule hold good of no other Letter but r?

A. Sometimes a Vowel is cut off before the other Liquids, l, m, n, when found between two Vowels in Words accented like the former, as in fab'lous, En'my, Mar'ner, instead of fabulous, Enemy, Mariner: But this ought rather to be avoided, the Sound being harsh and ungrateful.

Q. In

Q. In what other Cases are Contractions made ?

A. Contractions are agreeable enough in some Words of three Syllables, where the Letter s happens between two Vowels, the latter of which is cut off; as in Reas'ning, Pris'ner, Bus'ness, &c.

The Letter o between ll and w, in Words of three Syllables, suffers an Elision; as in Foll'wer, bell'wing, &c.

When the Vowel e falls between v and n, and the Accent lies upon the foregoing Syllable, it is frequently cut off; as in Heav'n, sev'n, giv'n, driev'n, &c. The same Vowel is also cut off in the Words Pow'r, Flow'r, and others of the like Termination.

The Words never, ever, over, may lose the Consonant v, and be thus contracted, ne'er, e'er, o'er.

Most Words ending in ed, which we contract in our common Discourse, must also also be contracted in Poetry; as lov'd, threaten'd, express'd, ador'd, abandon'd, &c.

Some Words admit of an Elision of their first Syllable; as 'mong, 'mongst, 'tween, 'twixt, 'gainst, 'bove, &c. are used instead of among, amongst, between, betwixt, against, above, &c.

Instead of it is, it was, it were, it will, it would, we sometimes use 'tis, 'twas, 'twere, 'twill, 'twould. So likewise by't, for by it; do't, for do it; was't, for was it, &c. But these last Contractions are scarce allowable, especially in Heroic Poetry.

Am may lose its Vowel after I; as I'm, for I am: And so may are after we, you, they; as we're, you're, they're; for we are, you are, they are. We also sometimes use the Contraction let's, for let us.

The Word have suffers an Elision of its two first Letters, after I, you, we, they;

they ; as I've, you've, we've, they've, for I have, you have, we have, they have. So will and would are often contracted after the Personal Pronouns, as I'll for I will, he'd for he would, &c. or after who, as who'd, for who would, who'll for who will, &c.

The Particle to sometimes loses its o when it comes before a Verb that begins with a Vowel, as t'avoid, t'increase, t'undo, &c. but this Elision is not so allowable before Nouns, and seldom used by correct Writers.

When the Particle the comes before a Word that begins with a Vowel or an h not aspirated, it generally loses its e ; as, th'immortal, th'expressive, th'Amazing, th'honest, &c. And sometimes before an aspirated h when an e follows it ; as th'heroic, &c. but Elisions of this last Kind are not to be commended.

Sometimes the o in who, and the y in by, is cut off before Words beginning ning with a Vowel ; as wh' expose, for who expose ; b' Oppression, for by Oppression : And other Contractions of this Kind are to be met with in some of our Poets ; but such a Liberty is by no means to be indulg'd.

The Pronoun his sometimes loses its first Letters after Words ending with a Vowel, as to's, by's, for to his, by his ; and after several Words that end with a Consonant, as in's, for's, for in his, for his, &c. But this is rather to be observ'd than imitated.

These are the Elisions and Contractions most usually made in our Versification ; the rest may be learnt by reading our best modern Poets ; for the Liberties taken by some of our ancient ones are not to be encouraged.

Q. Have you any thing farther to add relating to Versification ?

A. Yes ; there are a few more Particulars relating to this Subject that are worth observing. In the first Place, it may be laid down as a general Rule, that whenever one Syllable of a Word ends with a Vowel, and the next begins with another, these two Syllables in Verse are to be consider'd, as one only, except when either of the Syllables is the Seat of the Accent. Thus Region, valiant, beauteous, mutual, and such-like Words, are to be reckon'd only as two Syllables in Poetry; and so Ambition, familiar, perpetual, presumptuous, superior, and other Words of the same Nature, tho' consisting of four Syllables, are to be used in Verse as three.
C worth

Q. Are there no Exceptions to this Rule?

A. The Words Diamond, Diadem, Violet, and a few others may be excepted, which, tho' accented on the first Vowel, are sometimes used but as two Syllables.

Q. What

Q. What is next to be observed ?

A. In general, consult your Ear ; consider how Words are pronounced in reading Prose, and observe how they are used by the best Poets, and you will seldom fail either with respect to Justness of Measure or Propriety of Contractions. It will very much add to the Beauty of your Verse to avoid, as much as possible, a Concourse of clashing Vowels, that is, when one Word ends with a Vowel and the next begins with another, which occasions what is call'd an Hiatus, or Gaping, and is very disagreeable to the Ear. Mr. Pope has censured this Fault, and given us an Instance of it in the following Line :

Tho' oft the Ear the open Vowels tire.

For this Reason the e of the Particle the is generally cut off (as has been observed) before Words that begin with a Vowel.

Q. What other Faults are to be avoided ?

A. It is not well to make use of several Words in a Verse that begin with the same Letter, unless it be to suit the Sound to the Subject. And observe, that tho' Verses consisting wholly of Monosyllables are not always to be condemned (nay possibly may be very good) yet they ought to be seldom used, a Series of little low Words having generally an ill Effect in our Poetry. Be careful also not to make use of Expletives, that is, such Words as contribute nothing to the Sense, but are brought into the Verse merely to fill up the Measure. These two last Faults Mr. Pope has taken notice of, and exemplified in the following Verses :

While Expletives their feeble Aid do join,
And ten low Words oft creep in one dull Line.

Take

Take care likewise not to end a Verse with an Adjective, whose Substantive begins the next Verse; and the same is to be observed with respect to a Preposition and the Words it governs. In short, avoid every thing that tends to destroy that agreeable Cadence and Harmony which is required in Poetry, and of which (after all the Rules that can be laid down concerning it) the Ear is the most proper Judge. Remember, however, that easy and flowing Numbers are not all that is requisite in Versification; for, as the last-cited excellent Poet observes,

'Tis not enough no Harshness gives Offence;
 The Sound must seem an Echo to the Sense.
 Soft is the Strain when Zephyr gently blows,
 And the smooth Stream in smoother Numbers flows;
 But when loud Surges lash the sounding Shore,
 The hoarse rough Verse should like the Torrent roar.

When Ajax strives some Rock's vast Weight to throw,
 The Line too labours, and the Words move slow ;
 Not so when swift Camilla scours the Plain,
 Flies o'er th'unbending Corn, and skims along the Main,

I now proceed to treat of the Laws and Rules of the several Kinds of Poetry, as laid down by the best Critics, and to give Specimens of such as will come within the Compass of our Design ; in doing which I shall begin with the lowest, and ascend, by Degrees, to the highest Performances in the Poetic Art. And first of the Epigram.

C H A P.

C H A P. V.

Of the EPIGRAM.

Q. WHat is an Epigram ?

A. It is a little Poem, or Composition in Verse, treating of one Thing only, and whose distinguishing Characters are Brevity, Beauty, and Point.

Q. What is the Meaning of the Word ?

A. The Word Epigram signifies Inscription ; for Epigrams derive their Origin from those Inscriptions placed by the Ancients on their Tombs, Statues, Temples, Pillars, Triumphal Arches, and the like ; which, at first were very short, being sometimes no more than a single Word, but afterwards, wards, increasing their Length, they made them in Verse, to be the better retained by the Memory. This short Way of Writing came at last to be used upon any Occasion or Subject; and hence the Name of Epigram has been given to any little Copy of Verses, without regard to the original Application of such Poems.

Q. To what Length is the Epigram confined?

A. Its usual Limits are from two to twenty Verses, tho' sometimes it extends to fifty; but the shorter the better it is, and the more perfect, as it partakes more of the Nature and Character of this Kind of Poem: Besides, the Epigram being only a single Thought, it ought to be expressed in a little Compass, or else it loses its Force and Strength.

Q. What is the Beauty requir'd in an Epigram?

A. A

A. A Harmony and apt Agreement of all its Parts, a sweet Simplicity, and polite Language.

Q. What do you mean by the Point in an Epigram?

A. A sharp, lively, unexpected Turn of Wit, with which an Epigram ought to be concluded. There are some Critics, indeed, who will not admit of the Point in an Epigram, but require the Thought to be equally diffused through the whole Poem, which is usually the Practice of Catullus, as the former is that of Martial. It is allow'd there is more Delicacy in the Manner of Catullus, but the Point is most agreeable to the general Taste, and seems to be the chief Characteristic of the Epigram.

Q. What Subjects does the Epigram admit of?

A. It admits of all manner of Subjects, provided that Brevity, Beauty, and Point are preserved; but it is generally rally employ'd either in Praise or Satire.—That you may the more easily remember the Rules to be observed in this Kind of Poem, take them in English Verse, with some small Alteration, as they are given us by very good Writers on the Art of Poetry.

The Epigram, with little Art compos'd,
Is one good Sentence in a Distich clos'd :
And tho' some stretch to twenty Lines or more,
The best are those confin'd to two or four.
Of various Subjects Epigrams admit,
But each of one, and one alone must treat.
Two Parts this little Whole must still compose,
Recital of the Subject, and the Close.
To make this Poem perfect, be your Care,
That Beauty, Point, and Brevity appear.
Your single Subject in few Words explain,
But Words which Force and Energy contain.
A Symmetry of Parts we Beauty name,
Which should be seen throughout the finish'd Frame ;
With elegant Simplicity and Truth,
And still the Diction polish'd, not uncouth.
This Beauty Sweetness always must comprize,
Which from the Subject well express'd will rise.

The

The Point in the Conclusion takes its Place,
 And is the Epigram's peculiar Grace ;
 Some unexpected and some biting Thought,
 With poignant Wit and sharp Expression fraught.

N. B. Tho' the best Epigrams are here said to be such as are comprized in two or four Verses, we are not to understand it as if none can be perfect which exceed those Limits. Neither the Ancients nor Moderns have been so scrupulous with respect to the Length of their Epigrams ; but however, Brevity in general is always to be studied in these Compositions.

Q. Can't you give me a few Examples of good Epigrams in the English Language ?

A. Yes ; I shall make choice of several in the different Tastes I have mention'd ; some remarkable for their delicate Turn and Simplicity of Expression, and others for their Salt and Sharpness, their equivocating Pun, or pleasant fant Allusion. In the first place, take that of Mr. Pope, said to be written on a Glass with the Earl of Chesterfield's Diamond Pencil :

Accept a Miracle, instead of Wit ;
See two dull Lines by Stanbope's Pencil writ.

The Beauty of this Epigram is more easily seen than described. For my part, I am at a Loss to determine whether it does more Honour to the Poet who wrote it, or to the Nobleman for whom the Compliment is designed. — The following Epigram of Mr. Prior is written in the same Taste, being a fine Encomium on the Performance of an excellent Painter.

On a Flower, painted by VARELST.

When fam'd Varelst this little Wonder drew,
Flora vouchsaf'd the growing Work to view :
Finding the Painter's Science at a Stand,
The Goddess snatch'd the Pencil from his Hand,
And,

And, finishing the Piece, she smiling said,
Behold one Work of mine which ne'er shall fade.

The Epigram written on the Leaves of a Fan by Dr. Atterbury, late Bishop of Rocheſter, contains a pretty Thought, expreſs'd with Eaſe and Concifeneſs, and cloſed in a beautiful Manner.

On a FAN.

Flavia the leaſt and ſlighteſt Toy
 Can with reſiſtleſs Art employ.
 This Fan in meaner Hands would prove
 An Engine of ſmall Force in Love;
 Yet ſhe, with graceful Air and Mien,
 Not to be told or ſafely ſeen,
 Direſts its wanton Motion ſo,
 That it wounds more than Cupid's Bow,
 Gives Coolneſs to the matchleſs Dame,
 To ev'ry other Breaſt a Flame.

I ſhall now ſelect ſome Epigrams of the biting and ſatyricall Kind, and ſuch as turn upon the Pun or Equivoque, as the French call it; in which Sort the Point

Point is more conspicuous than in those of the former Character.

The following Distich, in my Opinion, is an admirable Epigram, having all the necessary Qualities of one, especially Point and Brevity.

On a Company of bad Dancers to good Musick.

How ill the Motion with the Music suits !
So Orpheus fiddled, and so danc'd the Brutes.

This puts me in mind of another Epigram upon a bad Fiddler, which I shall venture to insert merely for the Humour of it, and not for any real Excellence it contains.

To a bad Fiddler.

Old Orpheus play'd so well, he mov'd Old Nick ;
But thou mov'st nothing but thy Fiddle-stick.

One of Martial's Epigrams, wherein he agreeably rallies the foolish Vanity
of

of a Man who hired People to make Verses for him, and published them as his own, has been thus translated into English :

Paul so fond of the Name of a Poet is grown,
 With Gold he buys Verses, and calls them his own.
 Go on, Master Paul, nor mind what the World says,
 They are surely his own for which a Man pays.

Another Epigram of the same Latin Poet is very prettily imitated in the following Tetraſtich :

On an ugly Woman.

Whilst in the Dark on thy soft Hand I hung,
 And heard the tempting Syren in thy Tongue ;
 What Flames, what Darts, what Anguish I endur'd !
 But when the Candle enter'd, I was cur'd.

We have a good Epigram by Mr. Cowley on Prometheus ill painted ; to understand which we must remember his 2 Story.

Story. Prometheus is feign'd by the ancient Poets to have form'd Men of Clay, and to have put Life into them by Fire stolen from Heaven; for which Crime Jupiter caus'd him to be chain'd to a Rock, where a Vulture was set to gnaw his Liver, which grew again as fast as it was devoured. On this Fiction the Epigram is founded.

PROMETHEUS drawn by a bad Painter.

How wretched does Prometheus' state appear,
 Whilst he his second Mis'ry suffers here!
 Draw him no more, lest, as he tortur'd stands,
 He blame great Jove's less than the Painter's Hands.

It would the Vulture's Cruelty out-go,
 If once again his Liver thus should grow.
 Pity him, Jove, and his bold Theft allow;
 The Flames he once stole from thee, grant him now.

Some bad Writer having taken the Liberty to censure Mr. Prior, the Poet has has very wittily lash'd his Impertinence in the following Epigram :

While faster than his costive Brain indites
Pbilo's quick Hand in flowing Letters writes,
His Case appears to me like honest Teague's,
When he was run away with by his Legs.
Pbaebus, give Pbilo o'er himself Command ;
Quicken his Senses, or restrain his Hand :
Let him be kept from Paper, Pen, and Ink ;
So he may cease to write, and learn to think.

Mr. Wesley has given us a pretty Epigram, alluding to a well known Text of Scripture, on the setting up a Monument in Westminster Abbey, to the Memory of the ingenious Mr. Butler, Author of Hudibras.

While Butler, needy Wretch, was yet alive,
No gen'rous Patron would a Dinner give.
See him, when starv'd to Death and turn'd to Dust,
Presented with a Monumental Bust!
The Poet's Fate is here in Emblem shown ;
He ask'd for Bread, and he receiv'd a Stone.

D

The

The EPITAPH being a Poem of the epigrammatic Kind, and frequently found in Collections of Epigrams, I shall here insert a few of the best I have met with. These Compositions generally contain some Eulogium of the Virtues and good Qualities of the Deceased, and have a Turn of Seriousness and Gravity adapted to the Nature of the Subject; others are jocosè and ludicrous, as you will see amongst the following Examples.

In the Spectator we find several old Greek Epitaphs very beautifully translated into English Verse, one of which I shall take the Liberty of transcribing. It is written on Orpheus, a celebrated ancient Poet and Musician, whose Story is well known. He is said to have been the Son of Apollo and Calliope, one of the Nine Muses, the Goddess meant in the last Line of the Epigram.

On ORPHEUS.

No longer, Orpheus, shall thy sacred Strains Lead Stones, and Trees, and Beasts along the Plains ;

No longer sooth the boist'rous Wind to sleep,
Or still the Billows of the raging Deep :

For thou art gone ; the Muses mourn'd thy Fall
In solemn Strains, thy Mother most of all.

Ye Mortals, idly for your Sons ye moan,
If thus a Goddess could not save her own.

The ingenious Translator observes, that if we take the Fable for granted, as it was believed to be in that Age when the Epigram was written, the Turn appears to have Piety to the Gods, and a resigning Spirit in the Application : But, if we consider the Point with respect to our present Knowledge, it will be less esteem'd ; tho' the Author himself, because he believed it, may still be more valued than any one who should now write with a Point of the same Nature.

The following Epitaph on Sir Philip Sidney's Sister, the Countess of Pembroke, said to be written by the famous Ben. Johnson, is remarkable for the noble Thought with which it concludes.

On MARY, Countess Dowager of PEM-BROKE.

Underneath this Marble Hearse,
Lies the Subject of all Verse,
Sidney's Sister, Pembroke's Mother :
Death, ere thou hast kill'd another
Fair, and learn'd, and good as she,
Time shall throw a Dart at thee.

Take another Epitaph of Ben. Johnson's, on a beautiful and virtuous Lady, which has been deservedly admired by very good Judges.

Underneath this Stone doth lie
As much Virtue as could die ;
Which when alive did Vigour give
To as much Beauty as could live.

Mr.

Mr. Pope has drawn the Character of Mr. Gay, in an Epitaph now to be seen on his Monument in Westminster Abbey, which he has closed with such a beautiful Turn, that I cannot help looking upon it as a Master-piece in its Kind, as indeed are all the Productions of that surprizing Genius.

On Mr. GAY.

Of Manners gentle, of Affections mild ;
 In Wit, a Man ; Simplicity, a Child :
 With native Humour temp'ring virtuous Rage,
 Form'd to delight at once and lash the Age :
 Above Temptation in a low Estate,
 And uncorrupted, ev'n among the Great :
 A safe Companion, and an easy Friend,
 Unblam'd thro' Life, lamented in thy End.
 These are thy Honours ! not that here thy Bust
 Is mix'd with Heroes, or with Kings thy Dust ;
 But that the Worthy and the Good shall say,
 Striking their pensive Bosoms—Here lies GAY.

Amongst the Epitaphs of a punning and ludicrous Cast, I know of none
 D 3 prettier

prettier than that which is said to have been written by Mr. Prior on himself, wherein he is pleasantly satyrical upon the Folly of those who value themselves on account of the long Series of Ancestors through which they can trace their Pedigree.

*Nobles, and Heralds, by your Leave,
Here lie the Bones of Matthew Prior,
The Son of Adam and of Eve :
Let Bourbon or Nassau go higher.*

The following Epitaph on a Miser contains a good Caution, and an agreeable Raillery.

Reader, beware immod'rate Love of Pelf :
Here lies the worst of Thieves, who robb'd himself.

I shall give but one Example more of this Sort of Poem, which is a merry Epitaph on an old Fiddler, who was remarkable (we may suppose) for beating Time to his Music.

On STEPHEN the Fiddler.

*Stephen and Time are now both even:
Stephen beat Time, now Time's beat Stephen.*

Having dwelt long enough (perhaps too long) upon this low Species of Poetry, I now proceed to the Pastoral.

CHAP. VI.

Of the PASTORAL.

Q. WHat is a Pastoral?

A. It is a Kind of Poem which takes its Name from the Latin Word Pastor, a Shepherd; the Subject of it being always something in the pastoral or rural Life, and the Persons introduced in it either Shepherds or other Rusticks.

Q. Have these Poems no other Name than that of Pastorals ?

A. Yes ; they are frequently call'd Eclogues, which signifies select or choice Pieces ; tho' some account for this Name after a different Manner. They are also called Bucolics, from a Greek Word signifying a Herdsmen.

Q. Is the Pastoral an ancient Kind of Poetry ?

A. Yes, perhaps the oldest of any ; for as the keeping of Flocks seems to have been the first Employment of Mankind, it is natural to imagine, that the Leisure of those ancient Shepherds requiring some Diversion, they could think of none so proper to that solitary Life as singing, and that in their Songs they took Occasion to celebrate their own Felicity. From hence a Poem was invented, and afterwards improved to a perfect Image of that happy Time ; which, by giving us an Esteem for the Virtues

Virtues of a former Age, might recommend them to the present.

Q. What is the Character of the Pastoral?

A. Its complete Character consists in Simplicity, Brevity, and Delicacy; the two first of which render an Eclogue natural, and the last delightful. With respect to Nature indeed, we are to consider, that as Pastoral is an Image of the ancient Times of Innocence and undesigning Plainness, we are not to describe Shepherds as they really are at this Day, but as they may be conceiv'd then to have been, when the best of Men followed the Employment. For this Reason, an Air of Piety should run through the whole Poem, which is visible in the Writings of Antiquity.

Q. What is farther to be observed in this Sort of Poetry?

A. To make it natural with respect to the present Age, some Knowledge in

in rural Affairs must be discovered, and that in such a Manner as if it was done by Chance rather than Design, lest by too much Study to seem natural we destroy the Delight ; for what is inviting in this Kind of Poesy proceeds not so much from the Idea of a Country Life itself, as from that of its Tranquillity. Some Illusion must therefore be used to render a Pastoral delightful, which consists in exposing the best Side only of a Shepherd's Life, and in concealing its Miseries. Besides, the Subject must contain some particular Beauty in itself, and in each Eclogue, a designed Scene or Prospect is to be presented to our View, which should likewise have its Variety. This Variety is obtained, in a great Degree by frequent Comparisons, drawn from the most agreeable Objects of the Country ; by Interrogations to Things inanimate, by beautiful but short Digressions ; and by elegant Turns

Turns on the Words, which render the Numbers very sweet and pleasing. Add to this, that the Connections must be negligent, the Narrations and Descriptions short, and the Periods concise.

Q. What Sort of Style does the Pastoral require?

A. It ought to be humble, yet pure; neat, but not florid; easy, and yet lively: And the Verse should be the smoothest and most flowing imaginable.

Q. To what Length may this Poem extend?

A. In general, it ought to be short, and should never much exceed a hundred Lines.

Q. Can you give me these Rules in Verse, as you did those relating to the Epigram?

A. Yes; the Substance of them I find express'd in the following Manner:

The

The PASTORAL, which sings of happy Swains
 And harmless Nymphs that haunt the Woods and Plains,

Should through the Whole discover ev'ry where Their old Simplicity and pious Air ;

And in the Characters of Maids and Youth,
 Unpractis'd Plainness, Innocence, and Truth.

Each Pastoral a little Plot must own,

Which, as it must be simple, must be one :

With small Digressions it will yet dispense,

Nor needs it always allegoric Sense.

Its Style must still be natural and clear,

And Elegance in ev'ry Part appear :

Its humble Method nothing has of Fierce,

But hates the Rattling of a lofty Verse ;

With native Beauty pleases and excites,

And never with harsh Sounds the Ear affrights.

Q. What Examples of the Pastoral do you recommend, as written in a just Style and Manner ?

A. Virgil's first Eclogue is reckon'd the Standard of Pastorals, which I shall therefore give you, as it is translated by Mr. Dryden. It is a Dialogue between between Melibæus, an unfortunate Shepherd, and Tityrus, another Shepherd under more fortunate Circumstances. The former addresses his Complaint of his Sufferings and Banishment to Tityrus, who in the midst of the publick Calamity enjoys his Flocks, and expresses his Gratitude to his Benefactor ; while Melibæus accuses Fortune and the fatal Effects of a Civil War, bidding adieu to his native Country.

MELIBOEUS.

Beneath the Shade which Beechen Boughs diffuse,
 You Tityrus entertain your Sylvan Muse.
 Round the wide World in Banishment we roam,
 Forc'd from our pleasing Fields and native Home ;
 While stretch'd at Ease you sing your happy Loves,
 And Amaryllis fills the shady Groves.

TITYRUS.

These Blessings, Friend, a Deity bestow'd ;
 For never can I deem him less than God.

The

The tender Firflings of my woolly Breed
 Shall on his holy Altar often bleed.
 He gave me Kine to graze the flow'ry Plain,
 And to my Pipe renew'd the rural Strain.

MELIBOEUS.

I envy not your Fortune, but admire,
 That while the raging Sword and wasteful Fire
 Destroy the wretched Neighbourhood around,
 No hostile Arms approach your happy Ground.
 Far diff'rent is my Fate; my feeble Goats
 With Pains I drive from their forsaken Cotes :
 And this you see I scarcely drag along,
 Who yearning on the Rocks has left her Young,
 The Hope and Promise of my failing Fold.
 My Loss by dire Portents the Gods foretold ;
 For, had I not been blind, I might have seen
 Yon riven Oak, the fairest on the Green,
 And the hoarse Raven on the blasted Bough
 By croaking from the Left presag'd the coming Blow.

But tell me, Tityrus, what heav'nly Power
 Preserv'd your Fortunes in that fatal Hour ?

TITYRUS.

TITYRUS.

Fool that I was, I thought Imperial Rome
 Like Mantua, where on Market-days we come, }
 And thither drive our tender Lambs from home. }
 So Kids and Whelps their Sires and Dams express ;
 And so the Great I measur'd by the Less :
 But Country-Towns, compar'd with her, appear
 Like Shrubs when lofty Cypresses are near.

MELIBOEUS.

What great Occasion call'd you hence to Rome ?

TITYRUS.

Freedom, which came at length, tho' slow to come.

Nor did my Search of Liberty begin
 Till my black Hairs were chang'd upon my Chin,
 Nor Amaryllis would vouchsafe a Look,
 Till Galatea's meaner Bonds I broke.
 Till then a helpless, hopeless, homely Swain,
 I sought not Freedom, nor aspir'd to Gain :
 Tho' many a Victim from my Folds was bought,
 And many a Cheese to Country Markets brought,
 Yet all the little that I got I spent,
 And still return'd as empty as I went.

ME-

MELIBOEUS.

We stood amaz'd to see your Mistress mourn,
 Unknowing that she pin'd for your Return ;
 We wonder'd why she kept her Fruit so long,
 For whom so late th'ungather'd Apples hung :
 But now the Wonder ceases, since I see
 She kept them only, Tityrus, for thee :
 For thee the bubbling Springs appear'd to mourn,
 And whisp'ring Pines made Vows for thy Return.

TITYRUS.

What should I do ! while here I was chain'd,
 No Glimpse of Godlike Liberty remain'd ;
 Nor could I hope in any Place but there
 To find a God so present to my Pray'r.
 There first the Youth of heav'nly Birth I view'd,
 For whom our monthly Victims are renew'd.
 He heard my Vows, and graciously decreed
 My Grounds to be restor'd, my former Flocks to feed.

MELIBOEUS.

O fortunate old Man ! whose Farm remains
 For you sufficient, and requites your Pains,
 Tho' Rushes overspread the neighb'ring Plains ;
 Tho'

Tho' here the marshy Grounds approach your Fields,

And there the Soil a stony Harvest yields.

Your teeming Ewes shall no strange Meadows try,
Nor fear a Rot from tainted Company.

Behold yon bord'ring Fence of Sallow Trees
Is fraught with Flow'rs, the Flow'rs are fraught with Bees :

The busy Bees, with a soft murm'ring Strain,
Invite to gentle Sleep the lab'ring Swain :

While from the neighb'ring Rock with rural Songs

The Pruner's Voice the pleasing Dream prolongs ;
Stock-Doves and Turtles tell their am'rous Pain,
And from the lofty Elms of Love complain.

TITYRUS.

Th'Inhabitants of Seas and Skies shall change,
And Fish on Shore, and Stags in Air shall range,
The banish'd Partbian dwell on Arar's Brink,
And the blue German shall the Tigris drink ;
Ere I, forsaking Gratitude and Truth,
Forget the Figure of that Godlike Youth.

MELIBOEUS.

But we must beg our Bread in Climes unknown,
 Beneath the scorching, or the freezing Zone;
 And some to far Oaxis shall be sold,
 Or try the Libyan Heat, or Scythian Cold;
 The rest among the Britons be confin'd,
 A Race of Men from all the World disjoin'd.
 O! must the wretched Exiles ever mourn,
 Nor after Length of rolling Years return?
 Are we condemn'd by Fate's unjust Decree,
 No more our Houses and our Homes to see?
 Or shall we mount again the rural Throne,
 And rule the Country Kingdoms once our own?
 Did we for these Barbarians plant and sow,
 On these, on these, our happy Fields bestow?
 Good Heav'n, what dire Effects from civil } Discord flow!

Now let me graff my Pears, and prune the Vine;
 The Fruit is theirs, the Labour only mine.
 Farewel my Pastures, my paternal Stock,
 My fruitful Fields, and my more fruitful Flock!
 No more, my Goats, shall I behold you climb
 The steepy Cliffs, or crop the flow'ry Thyme!
 No more, extended in the Grot below,
 Shall see you browzing on the Mountain's Brow
 The

The prickly Shrubs, and after on the Bare
 Lean down the deep Abyſs, and hang in Air !
 No more my Sheep ſhall ſip the Morning Dew ;
 No more my Song ſhall pleaſe the rural Crew :
 Adieu, my tuneful Pipe ! and all the World adieu !

TITURUS.

This Night, at leaſt, with me forget your Care ;
 Cheſnuts and Curds and Cream ſhall be your Fare :
 The Carpet-Ground ſhall be with Leaves o'erſpread,
 And Boughs ſhall weave a Cov'ring for your Head :
 For ſee yon funny Hill the Shade extends,
 And curling Smoke from Cottages aſcends.

From this Poem the Reader muſt not imagine that the Nature of the Poem requires it always to be carried on by way of Dialogue. A Shepherd alone may ſing the Praiſes of his Love, complain of her Inconſtancy, lament her Abſence, her Death, &c. and addreſs himſelf to Groves, Hills, Rivers, and such-like rural Objects. A Pastoral of this Nature, written by the celebrated Mr. Pope, and inscrib'd to Mr. Wycherley, I shall here insert, without any Apology. The Beginning of it is an Imitation of the foregoing Eclogue of Virgil.

Beneath the Shade a spreading Beech displays,
Hylas and Ægon sung their rural Lays :
This mourn'd a faithless, That an absent Love,
 And Delia's Name and Doris fill'd the Grove.
 Ye Mantuan Nymphs, your sacred Succour bring ;
Hylas and Ægon's rural Lays I sing.

Thou, whom the Nine with Plautus's Wit inspire,
 The Art of Terence, and Menander's Fire ; Whose Sense instructs us, and whose Humour charms,
 Whose Judgment sways us, and whose Spirit warms !
 Oh, skill'd in Nature ! see the Hearts of Swains,
 Their artless Passions, and their tender Pains.

Now setting Phœbus shone serenely bright,
 And fleecy Clouds were streak'd with Purple Light ;

When

When tuneful Hylas, with melodious Moan, Taught Rocks to weep, and made the Mountains groan.

Go, gentle Gales, and bear my Sighs away !
 To Delia's Ear the tender Notes convey.
 As some sad Turtle his lost Love deplores,
 And with deep Murmurs fills the sounding Shores ;
 Thus, far from Delia, to the Winds I mourn,
 Alike unheard, unpity'd, and forlorn.

Go, gentle Gales, and bear my Sighs along !
 For her, the feather'd Quires neglect their Song :
 For her, the Lymes their pleasing Shades deny ;
 For her, the Lillies hang their Heads and die.
 Ye Flow'rs, that droop, forsaken by the Spring,
 Ye Birds, that left by Summer cease to sing,
 Ye Trees, that fade when Autumn-Heats remove,
 Say, is not Absence Death to those who love ?

Go, gentle Gales, and bear my Sighs away !
 Curs'd be the Fields that cause my Delia's Stay :
 Fade ev'ry Blossom, wither ev'ry Tree,
 Die ev'ry Flow'r, and perish all but she.
 What have I said ? where'er my Delia flies,
 Let Spring attend, and sudden Flow'rs arise ;
 Let opening Roses knotted Oaks adorn,
 And liquid Amber drop from ev'ry Thorn.

Go, gentle Gales, and bear my Sighs along !
 The Birds shall cease to tune their Ev'ning Song,

The Winds to breathe, the waving Woods to move,

And Streams to murmur, ere I cease to love.

Not bubbling Fountains to the thirsty Swain,

Not balmy Sleep to Lab'ers faint with Pain,

Not Show'rs to Larks, or Sunshine to the Bee,

Are half so charming as thy Sight to me.

Go, gentle Gales, and bear my Sighs away!

Come, Delia, come; ah, why this long Delay?

Thro' Rocks and Caves the Name of Delia sounds;

Delia, each Cave and echoing Rock rebounds.

Ye Pow'rs, what pleasing Frenzy sooths my Mind!

Do Lovers dream, or is my Delia kind?

She comes, my Delia comes!—Now cease my Lay,

And cease, ye Gales, to bear my Sighs away!

Next Ægon sung, while Windsor Groves admir'd :

Rehearse, ye Muses, what yourselves inspir'd.

Resound ye Hills, resound my mournful Strain!

Of perjur'd Doris, dying I complain :

Here where the Mountains, less'ning as they rise,

Lose the low Vales, and steal into the Skies ;

While lab'ring Oxen, spent with Toil and Heat,

In their loose Traces from the Field retreat ;

While curling Smoaks from Village-tops are seen,

And the fleet Shades glide o'er the dusky Green.

Resound, ye Hills, resound my mournful Lay!

Beneath yon Poplar oft we pass'd the Day :

Oft

Oft on the Rind I carv'd her am'rous Vows,
 While she with Garlands hung the bending Boughs:
 The Garlands fade, the Vows are worn away ;
 So dies her Love, and so my Hopes decay.

Resound, ye Hills, resound my mournful Strain !
 Now bright Arcturus glads the teeming Grain ;
 Now golden Fruits on loaded Branches shine,
 And grateful Clusters swell with Floods of Wine ;
 Now blushing Berries paint the yellow Grove :
 Just Gods ! shall all Things yield Returns but Love ?

Resound, ye Hills, resound my mournful Lay !
 The Shepherds cry, " Thy Flocks are left a Prey." —

Ah ! what avails it me the Flocks to keep,
 Who lost my Heart while I preserv'd my Sheep.
Pan came, and ask'd what Magic caus'd my Smart,
 Or what ill Eyes malignant Glances dart ?
 What Eyes but hers, alas ! have Pow'r to move ?
 And is there Magic but what dwells in Love ?

Resound, ye Hills, resound my mournful Strains !
 I'll fly from Shepherds, Flocks, and flow'ry
 Plains. —

From Shepherds, Flocks, and Plains, I may remove,

Forfake Mankind, and all the World—but Love !
 I know thee, Love ! wild as the raging Main,
 More fell than Tygers on the Libyan Plain :

Thou wert from Ætna's burning Entrails torn,
 Got by fierce Whirlwinds, and in Thunder born.
 Resound, ye Hills, resound my mournful Lay!
 Farewel, ye Woods, adieu the Light of Day!
 One Leap from yonder Cliff shall end my Pains.
 No more, ye Hills, no more resound my Strains!
 Thus sung the Shepherds till th'Approach of Night,
 The Skies yet blushing with departing Light,
 When falling Dews with Spangles deck'd the Glade,
 And the low Sun had lengthen'd ev'ry Shade.

To these two Pastorals, which are written agreeable to the Taste of Antiquity, and the Rules above prescrib'd, I shall beg Leave to subjoin another, wherein the ingenious Author, the late Mr. Gay, has ventur'd to deviate from the beaten Road, and to describe the Shepherds and Ploughmen of our own Time and Country, instead of those of the Golden Age, (as the Poets call it) to which the modern Critics confine the Pastoral. His six Pastorals, which he calls

calls the Shepherd's Week, are a beautiful and lively Representation of the Manners, Customs, and Notions of our Rusticks ; but the Whole being too long for our present Design, I shall only transcribe the first of them, entitled, The Squabble, wherein two Clowns try to out-do each other in singing the Praises of their Sweet-hearts, leaving it to a Third to determine the Controversy. The Persons Names are Lobbin Clout, Cuddy, and Cloddipole.

LOBBIN CLOUT.

Thy Younglings, Cuddy, are but just awake ;
 No Thrustles shrill the Bramble-bush forsake ;
 No chirping Lark the Welkin Sheen * invokes ;
 No Damsel yet the swelling Udder strokes ;
 O'er yonder Hill does scant † the Dawn appear ;
 Then why does Cuddy leave his Cott so rear ‡ ?

* Shining or bright Sky.
 † Early.

† Scarce.

CUDDY.

CUDDY.

Ah Lobbin Clout ! I ween *, my Plight is guest ;
 For he, that loves, a Stranger is to Rest.
 If Swains belye not, thou hast prov'd the Smart,
 And Blouzelinda's Mistress of thy Heart.
 This rising rear betokeneth well thy Mind ;
 Those Arms are folded for thy Blouzelind.
 And well, I trow, our piteous Plights agree ;
 Thee Blouzelinda smites, Buxoma me.

LOBBIN CLOUT.

Ah Blouzelind ! I love thee more by half
 Than does their Fawns, or Cows the new-fall'n Calf.
 Woe worth the Tongue, may Blisters sore it gall,
 That names Buxoma, Blouzelind withal !

CUDDY.

Hold, witlefs Lobbin Clout, I thee advise,
 Lest Blisters sore on thy own Tongue arise,
 Lo yonder Cloddipole, the blithsome Swain,
 The wisest Lout of all the neighb'ring Plain !
 From Cloddipole we learnt to read the Skies,
 To know when Hail will fall, or Winds arise.

He

* Conceive.

He taught us erst * the Heifer's Tail to view,
When stuck aloft, that Show'rs would straight ensue :

He first that useful Secret did explain,
That pricking Corns foretold the gath'ring Rain,
When Swallows fleet soar high and sport in Air,
He told us that the Welkin would be clear.
Let Cloddipole then hear us twain rehearse,
And praise his Sweet-heart in alternate Verse.
I'll wager this same oaken Staff with thee,
That Cloddipole shall give the Prize to me,

LOBBIN CLOUT.

See this Tobacco-Pouch, that's lin'd with Hair,
Made of the Skin of sleekest Fallow-Deer :
This Pouch, that's ty'd with Tape of reddest Hue,
I'll wager, that the Prize shall be my Due.

CUDDY.

Begin thy Carrols then, thou vaunting Slouch ;
Be thine the oaken Staff, or mine the Pouch.

LOBBIN CLOUT.

My Blouzelinda is the blithest Lass,
Than Primrose sweeter, or the Clover-Grass.

* Formerly.

Fair

Fair is the King-cup that in Meadow blows,
 Fair is the Daisy that beside her grows ;
 Fair is the Gillyflow'r of Gardens sweet,
 Fair is the Marygold, for Pottage meet :
 But Blouzelind's than Gillyflow'r more fair,
 Than Daisy, Marygold, or King-cup rare.

CUDDY.

My brown Buxoma is the feateft Maid,
 That e'er at Wake delightful Gambol play'd :
 Clean as young Lambkins, or the Goose's Down,
 And like the Goldfinch in her Sunday Gown.
 The witless Lamb may sport upon the Plain,
 The frisking Kid delight the gaping Swain ;
 The wanton Calf may skip with many a Bound,
 And my Cur Tray play deffest * Feats around :
 But neither Lamb nor Kid, nor Calf nor Tray, Dance like Buxoma on the first of May.

LOBBIN CLOUT.

Sweet is my Toil when Blouzelind is near ;
 Of her bereft, 'tis Winter all the Year.
 With her no Sultry Summer's Heat I know ;
 In Winter, when she's nigh, with Love I glow.

• Nimblest.

Come,

Come, Blouzelinda, ease thy Swain's Desire,
My Summer's Shadow, and my Winter's Fire !

C U D D Y .

As with Buxoma once I work'd at Hay,
E'en Noon-tide Labour seem'd an Holiday ;
And Holidays, if haply she were gone,
Like Worky-days I wish'd would soon be done.
Eftsoons *, O Sweet-heart kind, my Love repay,
And all the Year shall then be Holiday.

L O B B I N C L O U T .

As Blouzelinda, in a gamesome Mood,
Behind a Hay-cock loudly laughing stood,
I sily ran, and snatch'd a hasty Kifs ;
She wip'd her Lips, nor took it much amifs.
Believe me Cuddy, while I'm bold to say,
Her Breath was sweeter than the ripen'd Hay.

C U D D Y .

As my Buxoma, in a Morning fair,
With gentle Finger stroak'd her milky Care,
I quaintly † stole a Kifs ; at first, 'tis true,
She frown'd, yet after granted one or two.

* Very soon.

† Waggishly.

Lobbin,

Lobbin, I swear, believe who will my Vows,
Her Breath by far excell'd the breathing Cows.

LOBBIN CLOUT.

Leek to the Welch, to Dutchmen Butter's dear,
Of Irish Swains Potatoe is the Cheer ;
Oats for their Feasts the Scottish Shepherds grind,
Sweet Turnips are the Food of Blouzelind :
While she loves Turnips, Butter I'll despise,
Nor Leeks, nor Oatmeal, nor Potatoe prize.

CUDDY.

In good Roast-Beef my Landlord sticks his Knife,
The Capon fat delights his dainty Wife ;
Pudding our Parson eats, the Squire loves Hare,
But White-pot thick is my Buxoma's Fare.
While she loves White-pot, Capon ne'er shall be,
Nor Hare, nor Beef, nor Pudding, Food for me.

LOBBIN CLOUT.

As once I play'd at Blindman's-buff, it hapt
About my Eyes the Towel thick was wrapt :
I mis'd the Swains, and seiz'd on Blouzelind.
True speaks that ancient Proverb, Love is blind.

CUDDY.

As at Hot-Cockles once I laid me down,
 And felt the weighty Hand of many a Clown ;
Buxoma gave a gentle Tap, and I
 Quick rose, and read soft Mischief in her Eye.

LOBBIN CLOUT.

On two near Elms the slacken'd Cord I hung,
 Now high, now low my Blouzelinda swung :
 With the rude Wind her rump'd Garment rose,
 And show'd her taper Leg, and Scarlet Hose.

CUDDY.

Across the fallen Oak the Plank I laid,
 And myself pois'd against the tott'ring Maid :
 High leapt the Plank, adown Buxoma fell ;
 I spy'd—but faithful Sweet-hearts never tell.

LOBBIN CLOUT.

This Riddle, Cuddy, if thou canst, explain ;
 This wily Riddle puzzles ev'ry Swain :
What Flow'r is that which bears the Virgin's Name,
*The richest Metal joined with the same * ?*

* Mary-gold.

CUD-

CUDDY.

Answer, thou Carle, and judge this Riddle right,
 I'll frankly own thee for a cunning Wight :
What Flow'r is that which Royal Honour craves ?
*Adjoin the Virgin, and 'tis strown on Graves **.

CLODDIPOLE.

Forbear, contending Louts, give o'er your Strains ;
 An oaken Staff each merits for his Pains.
 But see, the Sun-beams bright to Labour warn,
 And gild the Thatch of Goodman Hodges' Barn.
 Your Herds for want of Water stand adry ;
 They're weary of your Songs — and so am I.

Thus much may suffice for the Pastoral. Those who desire more may consult the Versions we have of Theocretus, and the admir'd Writings of our Countryman Mr. Ambrose Philips. Let us now consider the Elegy.

* Rosemary.

C H A P.

C H A P. VII.

Of the ELEGY.

Q. WHat is an Elegy ?

A. A mournful and plaintive Kind of Poem, first invented to bewail the Death of a Friend, and afterwards us'd to express the Complaints of Lovers, or any other doleful and melancholy Subject.

Q. Are no other Subjects admitted in this Sort of Poem ?

A. Yes ; in Process of Time, not only Matters of Grief, but Joy, Wishes, Prayers, Expostulations, Reproaches, Admonitions, and almost every other Subject, were admitted into Elegy ; however, funeral Lamentations and Affairs of Love seem most agreeable to its Character.

F

Q. What

Q. What Rules are to be observ'd in writing Elegy?

A. The Plan of an Elegy, as indeed of all other Poems, ought to be made before a Line is written; or else the Author will ramble in the Dark, and his Verses will have no Dependence on each other. No epigrammatic Points or Conceits, none of those fine Things which most People are so fond of in every Sort of Poem, must be allow'd in this, but must give place to nobler Beauties, those of Nature and the Passions. The Elegy is adorn'd with frequent Commiserations, Complaints, Exclamations, Addresses to Things or Persons, short and proper Digressions, Allusions, Comparisons, and Prosopopœias or feign'd Persons. The Diction ought to be neat, easy, perspicuous, expressive of the Manners, tender, and pathetic; and the Numbers smooth and flowing.—These Rules

Rules are express'd in the following Verses.

The Elegy demands a solemn Stile ;
 It mourns with flowing Hair at fun'ral Pile ;
 It paints the Lover's Torments and Delights,
 How the Nymph flatters, threatens, and invites.
 But well those Raptures if you'd make us see,
 You must know Love as well as Poetry.

The Model of this Poem should be made,
 And ev'ry Step of all its Progress laid,
 Each Part directed to some certain End,
 And Verse on Verse perpetually depend.

No glitt'ring Points, nor any nice Conceit,
 Must load the Elegy with foreign Weight :
Passion and Nature here avow their Right,
 And with Disdain reject that mean Delight.

Remember that the Diction ev'ry where
 Be gentle, tender, neat, correct, and clear ;
 Let it the Manners all along express,
 And shew the Passions in their proper Dress.
 Throughout the Whole let nothing rough be found,

But still preserve its smooth and flowing Sound.

Q. Can't you give me a good Elegy or two by way of Example ?

F 2

A. Yes ;

A. Yes ; I shall chuse one written by Mr. Pope to the Memory of an unfortunate Lady, which I believe will be sufficient to give you a just Idea of the tender and mournful Character of this Kind of Poem.

What beck'ning Ghost along the Moonlight
Shade

Invites my Step, and points to yonder Glade ?
'Tis she !—but why that bleeding Bosom gor'd ?
Why dimly gleams the visionary Sword ?
Oh ever beauteous, ever friendly ! tell,
Is it, in Heav'n, a Crime to love too well ?
To bear too tender, or too firm a Heart,
To act a Lover's, or a Roman's Part ?
Is there no bright Reversion in the Sky,
For those who greatly think, or bravely die ?

Why bade ye else, ye Pow'rs ! her Soul aspire
Above the vulgar Flight of low Desire ?
Ambition first sprung from your blest Abodes,
The glorious Fault of Angels and of Gods :
Thence to their Images on Earth it flows,
And in the Breasts of Kings and Heroes glows !
Most Souls, 'tis true, but peep out once an Age,
Dull, sullen Pris'ners in the Body's Cage :

Dim

Dim Lights of Life, that burn a Length of Years,
 Useless, unseen, as Lamps in Sepulchres ;
 Like Eastern Kings a lazy State they keep,
 And close confin'd in their own Palace sleep.

From these perhaps (ere Nature bade her die)
 Fate snatch'd her early to the pitying Sky.

As into Air the purer Spirits flow,
 And sep'rate from their Kindred Dregs below ;
 So flew the Soul to its congenial Place,
 Nor left one Virtue to redeem her Race.

But thou, false Guardian of a Charge too good,
 Thou mean Deserter of thy Brother's Blood !
 See on these ruby Lips the trembling Breath,
 These Cheeks, now fading at the Blast of Death ;
 Cold is that Breast which warm'd the World before,

And those Love-darting Eyes must roll no more.
 Thus, if eternal Justice rules the Ball,
 Thus shall your Wives, and thus your Children
 fall :

On all the Line a sudden Vengeance waits,
 And frequent Herfes shall besiege your Gates.
 There Passengers shall stand, and pointing say,
 (While the long Fun'ral blacken all the Way)
 Lo these were they whose Souls the Furies steel'd,
 And curs'd with Hearts unknowing how to yield.
 Thus unlamented pass the Proud away,
 The Gaze of Fools, and Pageant of a Day!

So perish all, whose Breast ne'er learnt to glow
For others Good, or melt at others Woe.

What can atone (oh ever-injur'd Shade!)
Thy Fate unpity'd, and thy Rites unpaid?
No Friend's Complaint, no kind domestic Tear
Pleas'd thy pale Ghost, or grac'd thy mournful Bier.

By foreign Hands thy dying Eyes were clos'd,
By foreign Hands thy decent Limbs compos'd,
By foreign Hands thy humble Grave adorn'd,
By Strangers honour'd, and by Strangers mourn'd!
What tho' no Friends in sable Weeds appear,
Grieve for an Hour, perhaps, then mourn a Year,
And bear about the Mockery of Woe
To Midnight Dances, and the public Show;
What tho' no sacred Earth allow thee Room,
Nor hallow'd Dirge be mutter'd o'er thy Tomb;
Yet shall thy Grave with rising Flow'rs be dress'd,
And the green Turf lie lightly on thy Breast:
There shall the Morn her earliest Tears bestow,
There the first Roses of the Year shall blow;
While Angels with their silver Wings o'ershade
The Ground, now sacred by thy Reliques made.

So peaceful rests, without a Stone, a Name,
What once had Beauty, Titles, Wealth, and Fame:

How lov'd, how honour'd once, avails thee not,
To whom related, or by whom begot;

A Heap of Dust alone remains of thee,
 'Tis all thou art, and all the Proud shall be !
 Poets themselves must fall, like those they sung,
 Deaf the prais'd Ear, and mute the tuneful Tongue.
 Ev'n he, whose Soul now melts in mournful Lays,
 Shall shortly want the gen'rous Tear he pays:
 Then from his closing Eyes thy Form shall part,
 And the last Pang shall tear thee from his Heart :
 Life's idle Business at one Gasp be o'er,
 The Muse forgot, and thou beloy'd no more !

C H A P. VIII.

Of the ODE.

Q. WHat Sort of Poem is an Ode ?
 A. The Ode, among the Ancients, signified no more than a Song, being a Composition proper to be sung,
 and made for that Purpose ; the Singing usually accompanied with some Musical Instrument, chiefly the Lyre, whence this Kind of Poetry obtain'd the Name of Lyric.

Q. Is there there no Difference then between an Ode and a Song ?

A. Yes, with us they are different Things, the Ode being seldom sung, except upon solemn Occasions, and being usually employ'd in grave and lofty Subjects, such as the Praises of Heroes and great Exploits, and even of G O D himself.

Q. What Sort of Verse is us'd in the Ode ?

A. Odes generally consist of Verses of different Measures, (as you will see presently) and are distinguish'd into Stanzas or Strophes, which are a certain Number of Verses including a perfect Sense, at the End of which the same Measures commonly begin again, and the Verses are dispos'd in the same Order with respect to the Rhyme, as in the former Stanza. But this depends so much upon the Poet's Fancy, and the Stanza is capable of such a vast Variety, that it would be Folly to attempt to lay down Rules concerning it.

Q. What is the Character of this Kind of Poem ?

A. Its distinguishing Character is Sweetness ; for the Poet is to sooth the Minds of his Readers by the Variety of the Verse, the Delicacy of the Words, the Beauty of the Numbers, and the Description of Things most delightful in their own Nature.

Sweetness is most peculiar to the Ode,
 Ev'n when it rises to the Praise of G O D.
 Th' Expression should be easy, Fancy high ;
 Yet That not seem to creep, nor This to fly :
 No Words transpos'd, but in such Order all,
 As, tho' hard wrought, may seem by Chance to fall.

Here Words obscene will surely give Offence,
 And in all Poetry debase the Sense.

Variety of Numbers still belong
 To the sweet Melody of Ode or Song.

Q. What

Q What Examples of the Ode can you give me in the English Language?

A. I shall set down several, and those upon various Subjects; for tho' the Ode (as I have said) is generally us'd in lofty ones, it admits of pleasant, amorous, moral, or philosophical Subjects, and almost of any other whatsoever. And since Horace is esteem'd the Prince of the ancient Lyric Poets, at least among the Latins, it may not be amiss to begin with a Translation of one of his Odes, wherein he advises his Friend Delius to be content, and to live merrily, putting him in Mind of the Certainty of Death.

HOR. Ode 3. Book II.

An even Mind, in ev'ry State,
 Amidst the Frowns and Smiles of Fate,
 Dear mortal Delius, always show;
 Let not too much of cloudy Fear,
 Nor too intemp'rate Joys appear,
 Or to contract, or to extend thy Brow:

Whether

Whether thy dull unhappy Years
 Run slowly clogg'd with Hopes and Fears
 And sit too heavy on thy Soul ;
 Or whether crown'd with Beds of Flow'rs,
 Mirth softly drives thy easy Hours,
 And cheers thy Spirits with the choicest Bowl.

Where Poplars white, the lofty Pine,
 And Myrtles friendly Branches join,
 And hospitable Shades compose ;
 Where near a purling Spring doth glide
 In winding Streams, and softly chide
 The interrupting Pebble as it flows :

There bring thy Wine, thy Odours spread ;
 Let fading Roses crown thy Head,
 Whilst Time, and Age, and Life will bear ;
 For you must leave your Groves, your House,
 And Farm, where yellow Tyber flows ;
 And thy heap'd Wealth shall fill thy greedy Heir.

For, whether sprung from Royal Blood,
 Or from the meanest of the Crowd,
 'Tis all a Case ; there's nought can save ;
 The Hand of Fate doth strike at all,
 And thou art surely doom'd to fall
 A Sacrifice to the impartial Grave.

Our Lots are cast, Fate shakes the Urn,
 And each Man's Lot must take his Turn ;
 Some soon leap out, and some more late :
 But still 'tis sure each Mortal's Lot
 Will doom his Soul to Charon's Boat,
 To bear th'eternal Banishment of Fate.

The following Ode is one of the Rev. Dr. Watts's, a Gentleman to whom the World is indebted for many valuable Works, and who seems to have succeeded in the Lyric Way of Writing as well as any of the modern Poets ; for a peculiar Sweetness (the Characteristic of the Ode) runs through all his Compositions of this Kind.

Few happy Matches.

I.

Say, mighty LOVE, and teach my Song,
 To whom thy sweetest Joys belong,
 And who the happy Pairs,
 Whose yielding Hearts, and joining Hands,
 Find Blessings twisted with their Bands,
 To soften all their Cares.

II. Not

II.

Not the wild Herd of Nymphs and Swains
 That thoughtless fly into the Chains,
 As Custom leads the Way :
 If there be Bliss without Design,
 Ivies and Oaks may grow and twine,
 And be as blest as they.

III.

Not sordid Souls of earthy Mould,
 Who drawn by kindred Charms of Gold
 To dull Embraces move :
 So two rich Mountains of Peru
 May rush to wealthy Marriage too,
 And make a World of Love.

IV.

Not the mad Tribe that Hell inspires
 With wanton Flames ; those raging Fires
 The purer Bliss destroy :
 On Ætna's Top let Furies wed,
 And Sheets of Lightning dress the Bed,
 T'improve the burning Joy.

V.

Not the dull Pairs, whose Marble Forms
 None of the melting Passions warms,
 Can mingle Hearts and Hands :
 Logs of green Wood that quench the Coals
 Are married just like Stoic Souls,
 With Officers for their Bands.

VI. Not

VI.

Not Minds of melancholy Strain,
 Still silent, or that still complain,
 Can the dear Bondage bless :
 As well may heav'nly Concerts spring
 From two old Lutes with ne'er a String,
 Or none besides the Bass.

VII.

Nor can the soft Enchantments hold
 Two jarring Souls of angry Mould,
 The Rugged and the Keen :
Samson's young Foxes might as well
 In Bonds of chearful Wedlock dwell,
 With Firebrands ty'd between.

VIII.

Nor let the cruel Fetters bind
 A gentle to a savage Mind ;
 For Love abhors the Sight :
 Loose the fierce Tyger from the Deer ;
 For native Rage and native Fear
 Rise, and forbid Delight.

IX.

Two kindest Souls alone must meet ;
 'Tis Friendship makes the Bondage sweet,
 And feeds their mutual Loves :
 Bright Venus on her rolling Throne
 Is drawn by gentlest Birds alone,
 And Cupid's Yoke the Doves,

The

The following Ode is one of Mr. Pope's, and nothing more need be said to recommend it.

The dying Christian to his Soul.

I.

Vital Spark of heav'nly Flame !
 Quit, oh quit this mortal Frame :
 Trembling, hoping, ling'ring flying,
 Oh the Pain, the Bliss of dying !
 Cease fond Nature, cease thy Strife,
 And let me languish into Life.

II.

Hark ! they whisper ; Angels say,
 Sister Spirit, come away.
 What is this absorbs me quite,
 Steals my Senses, shuts my Sight,
 Drowns my Spirits, draws my Breath ?
 Tell me, my Soul, can this be Death ?

III.

The World recedes ; it disappears ;
 Heav'n opens on my Eyes ; my Ears

With

With Sounds seraphic ring :
 Lend, lend your Wings ! I mount ! I fly !
 O Grave, where is thy Victory ?
 O Death, where is thy Sting ?

Longinus has preserv'd a Fragment of Sappho, an ancient Greek Poetess, which is in great Reputation amongst the Criticks, and has been very well translated into English by Mr. Philips. This Translation being written in the very Spirit of Sappho, and as near the Greek as the Genius of our Language will permit, may give the Reader an Idea of the elegant Stile of the admired Author, and shew how exactly she copied Nature. To enter into the Beauties of this Ode, we must suppose a Lover sitting by his Mistress, and thus expressing his Passion.

I.

Blest as th'immortal Gods is he,
 The Youth who fondly sits by thee,
 And sees and hears thee all the while Softly speak and sweetly smile.

II.

'Twas this depriv'd my Soul of Rest,
 And rais'd such Tumults in my Breast ;
 For while I gaz'd in Transport tost,
 My Breath was gone, my Voice was lost :

III.

My Bosom glow'd, the subtle Flame
 Ran quick through all my vital Frame :
 O'er my dim Eyes a Darkness hung ;
 My Ears with hollow Murmurs rung.

IV.

In dewy Damps my Limbs were chill'd ;
 My Blood with gentle Horrors thrill'd ;
 My feeble Pulse forgot to play :
 I fainted, sunk, and dy'd away.

G

Having

Having given this Instance of the Sapphic Ode, it is proper to take notice of those which are called Anacreontic, being written in the Manner and Taste of Anacreon, a Greek Poet, famous for the Delicacy of his Wit, and the exquisite yet easy and natural Turn of his Poesy. We have several of his Odes still extant, and many modern ones in Imitation of him, which are mostly composed in Verses of seven Syllables, or three Feet and a half. The following is translated from Anacreon by the Rev. Mr. Samuel Wesley.

On the ROSE.

In the Garland-bearing Spring
To the ROSE I strike the String ;
Join the Concert while I sing.

Scented first by heav'nly Breath
Sprung the Rose for Man beneath ;
Fragrant Blossom ! yielding Joy,
Dear to Venus and her Boy ;

}

To

To the Graces dear, in Hours
 Full of Love and full of Flow'rs :
 To the Muses it belongs,
 Subject of Poetic Songs :
 Sweet to him who haply strays,
 Doubtful, slow, through thorny Ways ;
 Sweet to her who from the Stalk
 Plucks it in her Morning's Walk,
 That her Virgin-Hand may move
 To her Breast the Flow'r of Love.

From the ROSE what Pleasures rise
 To the Gay, and to the Wise !
 This with gladsome Wreath invests
 Vernal and Autumnal Feasts ;
 Grace and Ornament affords
 To our Altars and our Boards.

ROSES all that's fair adorn ;
 Rosy-finger'd is the Morn,
 Rosy-arm'd the Nymphs are seen,
 Rosy-skin'd is Beauty's Queen.
 These the Sick and Languid please,
 Nay the Dead are deck'd with these :
 These can even conquer Time,
 Since, when faded from their Prime,
 Still they breathe Perfume, and hold
 Youthful Odour when they're old.
 Say we whence the ROSE's Bloom :
 When, from the neglected Foam,

Hoary Ocean Venus gave
 Dew-besprinkled from the Wave ;
 When Minerva, fierce and fair,
 Queen of Tumult and of War,
 Issued from the Head of Jove,
 Dreadful to the Realms above ;
 Then the gen'ral Mother Earth
 Teem'd, and bore a flow'ry Birth,
 New-born ROSE, producing Thee,
 Various, beauteous Progeny !

See the Gods in Council meet !
 See the Soil with Nectar sweet,
 Soft they tinge ! and quick the ROSE
 Sacred to Lyæus grows :
 Deathless Flow'r, divinely born !
 Glorious Offspring of the Thorn !

I proceed now to the noblest Kind of Ode called the Pindaric, from its being written in Imitation of the Manner of Pindar, an ancient Greek Poet, who is celebrated for the Boldness and Height of his Flights, the Impetuosity of his Style, and the seeming Wildness and Irregularity that runs through his Compositions, which yet is said to be the Effect

Effect of the greatest Art. This Sort of Ode is distinguished from all others by the happy Transitions and Digressions which it admits, and the surprizing yet natural Returns to the Subject. This requires great Judgment and Genius, and the Poet who would excel in this Manner of Writing should draw the Plan of his Poem, and mark out the Places where these elegant Sallies and Wanderings may be made, and where the Returns will be easy and proper; otherwise it will be nothing but Chaos and Confusion in sonorous Verses. In the Pindaric Ode the Stanza is not confin'd to a certain Number of Verses, nor the Verses to a certain Number of Syllables, nor the Rhymes to a certain Distance; so that no Rules can be laid down as to these Matters: However, it is not a wild Inequality of Verse that entitles an Ode to the Pindaric Character, nor are Pindar's Numbers so irregular as they have been generally imagin'd.

Pindaric Odes are of the highest Flight,
 Happy the Force, and fierce is the Delight.
 The Poet here must be indeed inspir'd,
 With Fury too, as well as Fancy fir'd ;
 For Art and Nature in this Ode must join,
 To make the wond'rous Harmony divine.
 But tho' all seem to be in Fury done,
 The Language still must soft and easy run ;
 The bright Transitions and Digressions rise,
 And with their natural Returns surprize.

Mr. Cowley was the first that introduced this Sort of Poetry into our Language, and none of our Poets seem to have come nearer to the Character of Pindar, whose Odes he has translated admirably well, which we therefore recommend to be perused and studied by our young Readers : But as some may think him now and then defective either in his Diction or his Numbers (which, if if he be so, must be attributed merely to the Time he wrote in) we shall take Examples of the Pindaric Ode from the most celebrated of our modern Poets. The first shall be that of Mr. Dryden in honour of St. CECILIA'S Day, entitled ALEXANDER'S Feast, or The Power of Music; wherein we find a wonderful Sublimity of Thought, a Loftiness and Sweetness of Expression, and a most pleasing Variety of Numbers.

'Twas at the royal Feast, for Persia won,
 By Philip's warlike Son,
 Aloft in awful State
 The god-like Hero sate
 On his imperial Throne:
 His valiant Peers were plac'd around;
 Their brows with Roses and with myrtles bound,
 (So should Desert in Arms be crown'd :)
 The lovely Tbais by his Side
 Sate like a blooming eastern Bride,
 In flow'r of Youth and Beauty's Pride.

Happy, happy, happy Pair !
 None but the Brave,
 None but the Brave,
 None but the Brave,
 None but the Brave deserves the Fair.
 Chor. Happy, happy, &c.

Timotheus plac'd on high,
 Amid the tuneful Quire,
 With flying Fingers touch'd the Lyre :
 The trembling Notes ascend the Sky,
 And heav'nly Joys inspire.
 The Song began from Jove,
 Who left his blissful Seats above,
 (Such is the pow'r of mighty Love !
 A Dragon's fiery Form bely'd the God :
 Sublimé on radiant Spires he rode,
 When he to fair Olympia press'd :
 And while he sought her snowy Breast :
 Then round her slender Waist he curl'd,
 And stamp'd an Image of himself, a Sov'reign of the World.
 The list'ning Crowd admire the lofty Sound.
 A present Deity, they shout around :
 A present Deity the vaulted Roofs rebound :
 With ravish'd Ears
 The Monarch hears,

Assumes

Affumes the God,
Affects to nod,
And seems to shake the Spheres.

Chor. With raviſh'd Ears, &c.

The Praise of Bacchus then the ſweet Muſician ſung ;

Of Bacchus ever fair and ever young :

The jolly God in Triumph comes ;

Sound the Trumpets, beat the Drums :

Fluſh'd with a purple Grace

He ſhews his honeſt Face ;

Now give the Hautboys Breath ; he comes, he comes.

Bacchus, ever fair and young,

Drinking Joys did firſt ordain :

Bacchus' Bleſſings are a Treasure,

Drinking is the Soldier's Pleaſure :

Rich the Treasure,

Sweet the Pleaſure :

Sweet is Pleaſure after Pain.

Chor. Bacchus' Bleſſings, &c.

Sooth'd with the Sound the King grew vain,

Fought all his Battles o'er again ;

And thrice he routed all his Foes, and thrice he ſlew the Slain.

The Maſter ſaw the Madneſs riſe ;

His glowing Cheeks, his ardent Eyes ;

And

And while he Heav'n and Earth defy'd,
 Chang'd his Hand, and check'd his Pride.

He chose a mournful Muse
 Soft Pity to infuse :

He sung Darius great and good,

By too severe a Fate,

Fallen, fallen, fallen, fallen,

Fallen from his high Estate,

And welt'ring in his Blood.

Deserted at his utmost Need,

By those his former Bounty fed,

On the bare Earth expos'd he lies,

With not a Friend to close his Eyes.

With down-cast looks the joyless victor late,

Revolving in his alter'd Soul

The various Turns of Chance below ;

And, now and then, a Sigh he stole ;

And Tears began to flow.

Chor. Revolving, &c.

The mighty Master smil'd, to see

That Love was in the next Degree :

'Twas but a kindred Sound to move ;

For Pity melts the Mind to love.

Softly sweet, in Lydian Measures,

Soon he sooth'd his Soul to Pleasures.

War, he sung, is Toil and Trouble ;

Honour but an empty Bubble.

Never

Never ending, still beginning,
 Fighting still, and still destroying,
 If the World be worth thy winning,
 Think, O think, it worth enjoying.
 Lovely Tbais sits besides thee,
 Take the Good the Gods provide thee.
 The many rend the skies, with loud Applause ;
 So Love was crown'd, but Music won the Cause.
 The Prince, unable to conceal his Pain,
 Gaz'd on the Fair,
 Who caus'd his Care,
 And sigh'd and look'd, sigh'd and look'd,
 Sigh'd and look'd, and sigh'd again :
 At length with Love and Wine at once oppress'd,
 The vanquish'd Victor sunk upon her Breast.
 Chor. The Prince, &c.

Now strike the golden Lyre again ;
 A louder yet, and yet a louder Strain.
 Break his Bands of Sleep asunder,
 And rouse him, like a rattling Peal of Thunder.
 Hark, hark, the horrid Sound
 Has rais'd up his Head,
 As awak'd from the Dead,
 And amaz'd, he stares around.
 Revenge, revenge, Timotheus cries,
 See the Furies arise :

See the Snakes that they rear,
 How they hiss in their Hair,
 And the Sparkles that flash from their Eyes ;
 Behold a ghastly Band,
 Each a Torch in his Hand !
 Those are Grecian Ghosts, that in Battle were slain,
 And unbury'd remain,
 Inglorious on the Plain.
 Give the Vengeance due
 To the valiant Crew.

Behold how they toss their Torches on high,
 How they point to the Persian Abodes,
 And glitt'ring Temples of their hostile Gods.
 The Princes applaud, with a furious Joy ;
 And the King seiz'd a Flambeau, with Zeal to destroy ;
Thais led the Way,
 To light him to his Prey,
 And, like another Helen, fir'd another Troy.
 Chor. And the King seiz'd, &c.

Thus long ago,
 Ere heaving Bellows learn'd to blow,
 While Organs yet were mute ;
Timotheus to his breathing Flute,
 And sounding Lyre,
 Cou'd swell the Soul to rage, or kindle soft Desire.
 At

At last divine Cecilia came,
 Inventress of the vocal Frame ;
 The sweet Enthusiast, from her sacred Store,
 Enlarg'd the former narrow Bounds,
 And added Length to solemn Sounds,
 With Nature's Mother-wit, and Arts unknown before.

Let old Timotheus yield the Prize,
 Or both divide the Crown ;
 He rais'd a Mortal to the Skies ;
 She drew an Angel down.

Grand Chor. At last, &c.

As Mr. Pope has employ'd his masterly Pen upon the same Subject, it would be doing him a Sort of Injustice not to let him appear with Mr. Dryden. Each of these Odes, we may venture to say, are written with a Spirit of Poetry peculiar to the great Genius of their respective Authors ; but which of them has best succeeded in the Pindaric Manner, let the Critics determine.

ODE on St. CECILIA'S Day. By Mr.
POPE.

I.

Descend ye Nine ! descend and sing ;
 The breathing Instruments inspire,
 Wake into Voice each silent String,
 And sweep the sounding Lyre !
 In a sadly-pleasing Strain
 Let the warbling Lute complain :
 Let the loud Trumpet sound,
 Till the Roofs all around
 The shrill Echoes rebound :
 While, in more lengthen'd Notes and flow,
 The deep, majestic, solemn Organs blow.
 Hark ! the Numbers soft and clear
 Gently steal upon the Ear ;
 Now louder, and yet louder rise,
 And fill with spreading Sounds the Skies :
 Exulting in Triumph now swell the bold Notes,
 In broken Air, trembling, the wild Music floats ;
 Till, by Degrees, remote and small,
 The Strains decay,
 And melt away,
 In a dying, dying Fall.

II. By

II.

By Music Minds an equal Temper know,
 Nor swell too high, nor sink too low.
 If in the Breast tumultuous Joys arise,
 Music her soft assuasive Voice applies ;
 Or when the Soul is press'd with Cares,
 Exalts her in enliv'ning Airs.

Warriors she fires with animated Sounds,
 Pours Balm into the bleeding Lover's Wounds:
 Melancholy lifts her Head,
Morpheus rouzes from his Bed,
 Sloth unfolds her Arms and wakes,
 List'ning Envy drops her Snakes ;
 Intestine War no more our Passions wage,
 And giddy Factions hear away their Rage.

III.

But when our Country's Cause provokes to Arms,
 How martial Music ev'ry Bosom warms !
 So when the first bold Vessel dar'd the Seas,
 High on the Stern the Tbracian rais'd his Strain,
 While Argo saw her kindred Trees
 Descend from Pelion to the Main.
 Transported Demi-gods stood round,
 And Men grew Heroes at the Sound,
 Enflam'd

Enflam'd with Glory's Charms :
 Each Chief his sev'nfold Shield display'd,
 And half unsheath'd the shining Blade ;
 And Seas, and Rocks, and Skies rebound
 To Arms, to Arms, to Arms !

IV.

But when thro' all th' infernal Bounds
 Which flaming Phlegeton surrounds,
 Love, strong as Death the Poet led To the pale Nations of the Dead,
 What Sounds were heard,
 What Scenes appear'd
 O'er all the dreary Coasts !
 Dreadful Gleams,
 Dismal Screams,
 Fires that glow,
 Shrieks of Woe,
 Sullen Moans,
 Hollow Groans,
 And Cries of tortur'd Ghosts !
 But hark ! he strikes the golden Lyre,
 And see, the tortur'd Ghosts respire !
 See, shady Forms advance !
 Thy Stone, O Sisyphus, stands still,
Ixion rests upon his Wheel,
 And the pale Spectres dance !

The Furies sink upon their Iron Beds,
 And Snakes uncurl'd hang list'ning round their Heads.

V.

By the Streams that ever flow,
 By the fragrant Winds that blow
 O'er th' Elysian Flow'rs ;
 By those happy Souls who dwell
 In yellow Meads of Asphodel,
 Or amaranthine Bow'rs ;
 By the Heroes armed Shades,
 Glitt'ring thro' the gloomy Glades ;
 By the Youths that dy'd for Love,
 Wand'ring in the Myrtle Grove ;
 Restore, restore Eurydice to Life :
 Oh take the Husband, or return the Wife !
 He sung, and Hell consented
 To hear the Poet's Pray'r ;
 Stern Proserpine relented,
 And gave him back the Fair.
 Thus Song could prevail
 O'er Death and o'er Hell,
 A Conquest how hard and how glorious !
 Tho' Fate had fast bound her
 With Styx nine times round her,
 Yet Music and Love were victorious.

H

VI. But

VI.

But soon, too soon, the Lover turns his Eyes :
 Again she falls, again she dies, she dies !
 How wilt thou now the fatal Sisters move ?
 No Crime was thine, if 'tis no Crime to love.

Now under hanging Mountains
 Beside the Fall of Fountains,
 Or where Hebrus wanders,
 Rolling in Mæanders,

All alone,

Unheard, unknown,

He makes his Moan ;

And calls her Ghost,

For ever, ever, ever lost !

Now with Furies surrounded,

Despairing, confounded,

He trembles, he glows

Amidst Rhodope's Snows :

See, wild as the Winds, o'er the Desert he flies !

Hark ! Hæmus resounds with the Bacchanals Cries-- — Ah see, he dies !

Yet ev'n in Death Eurydice he sung,

Eurydice still trembled on his Tongue,

Eurydice the Woods,

Eurydice the Floods,

Eurydice the Rocks and hollow Mountains rung.

VI. Music

VII.

Music the fiercest Grief can charm,
 And Fate's severest Rage disarm :
 Music can soften Pain to Ease,
 And make Despair and Madness please :
 Our Joys below it can improve,
 And antedate the Bliss above.

This the divine CECILIA found,
 And to her Maker's Praise confin'd the Sound.
 When the full Organ joins the tuneful Quire,
 Th'immortal Pow'rs incline their Ear ;
 Borne on the swelling Notes our Souls aspire,
 While solemn Airs improve the sacred Fire,
 And Angels lean from Heav'n to hear.
 Of Orpheus now no more let Poets tell,
 To bright Cecilia greater Pow'r is giv'n ;
 His Numbers rais'd a Shade from Hell,
 Hers lift the Soul to Heav'n.

Thus much may suffice for the Pindaric Poetry ; but before we quit the Subject we are upon, it is proper to say something of that Species of Odes which we call Songs, being little poetical Compositions set to a Tune, and fre-frequently sung in Company by way of Entertainment and Diverſion. Of theſe we have vaſt Numbers amongſt us, but not many that are excellent; for, as the Duke of Buckinghamſhire obſerves.

Tho' nothing ſeems more eaſy, yet no Part
Of Poetry requires a nicer Art :
 For as in Rows of richeſt Pearl there lies
 Many a Blemiſh that eſcapes our Eyes,
 The leaſt of which Defects is plainly ſhown
 In ſome ſmall Ring, and brings the Value down ;
 So Songs ſhould be to juſt Perfection wrought,
 Yet where can one be found without a Fault ?

The Song admits of almoſt any Subject, but the greateſt Part of them turn either upon Love or Drinking. Be the Subject, however, what it will, the Verſes ſhould be eaſy, natural and flowing, and contain a certain Harmony, ſo that Poetry and Muſic may be agreeably united. In theſe Compoſitions, as
 in

in all others, obscene and profane Expressions should be carefully avoided, and indeed every Thing that tends to take off the Respect which is due to Religion and Virtue, and to encourage Vice and Immorality. I shall here give the Reader a few of our best modern Songs, and I know of none that has been more justly admired than the following one, written by the ingenious Mr. Gay, wherein he has described two Lovers taking Leave of each other in the most tender and affecting Manner.

All in the Downs the Fleet was moor'd,
 The Streamers waving in the Wind,
 When black-ey'd Susan came on board,
 Oh ! where shall I my true Love find !
 Tell me, ye jovial Sailors, tell me true,
 If my sweet William sails among the Crew.

William, who high upon the Yard
 Rock'd with the Billows to and fro,
 Soon as her well-known Voice he heard,
 He sigh'd and cast his Eyes below :
 The Cord slides swiftly through his glowing Hands,
 And (quick as Lightning) on the Deck he stands.

So the sweet Lark, high-pois'd in Air,
 Shuts close his Pinions to his Breast,
 (If chance his Mate's shrill Call he hear)
 And drops at once into her Nest.
 The noblest Captain in the British Fleet
 Might envy William's Lips those Kisses sweet.

O Susan, Susan, lovely Dear,
 My Vows shall ever true remain ;
 Let me kiss off that falling Tear,
 We only part to meet again.
 Change as ye list, ye Winds ; my Heart shall be
 The faithful Compass that still points to thee.

Believe not what the Landmen say,
 Who tempt with Doubts thy constant Mind ;
 They'll tell thee, Sailors, when away,
 In ev'ry Port a Mistress find :
 Yes, yes, believe them when they tell thee so,
 For thou art present wheresoe'er I go.

If to fair India's Coast we sail
 Thy Eyes are seen in Di'monds bright ;
 Thy Breath is Afric's spicy Gale,
 Thy Skin is Ivory so white :
 Thus ev'ry beauteous Object that I view
 Wakes in my Soul some Charm of lovely Sue.

Tho' Battle call me from thy Arms,
 Let not my pretty Susan mourn,
 Tho' Cannons roar, yet safe from Harms
William shall to his Dear return.
 Love turns aside those Balls that round me fly,
 Lest precious Tears should drop from Susan's Eye.

The Boatswain gave the dreadful Word,
 The Sails their swelling Bosom spread,
 No longer must she stay on board ;
 They kiss'd, she sigh'd, he hung his Head :
 Her less'ning Boat unwilling rows to Land ;
 Adieu, she cries ! and wav'd her lilly Hand.

To this give me leave to add the following Song, by the same ingenious Gentleman, which, perhaps, is equal to any Piece we have, of this Kind of Poesy.

'Twas when the Seas were roaring,
 With hollow Blasts of Wind,
 A Damsel lay deploring,
 All on a Rock reclin'd.

' Wide o'er the roaring Billows,
 She cast a wishful Look ;
 Her Head was crown'd with Willows,
 That trembled o'er the Brook.

Twelve Months were gone and over,
 And nine long tedious Days ;
 Why didst thou, vent'rous Lover,
 Why didst thou trust the Seas ?

Cease, cease, thou cruel Ocean,
 And let my Lover rest :
 Ah ! what's thy troubled Motion,
 To that within my Breast ?

The Merchant robb'd of Treasure,
 Views Tempests in Despair ;
 But what's the Loss of Treasure,
 To losing of my Dear !

Should you some Coast be laid on,
 Where Gold and Diamonds grow,
 You'll find a richer Maiden,
 But none that loves you so.

How

How can they say that Nature
 Has nothing made in vain ;
 Why then beneath the Water
 Do hideous Rocks remain ?

No Eye those Rocks discover,
 That lurk beneath the Deep,
 To wreck the wand'ring Lover,
 And leave the Maid to weep.

All melancholly lying,
 Thus wail'd she for her Dear,
 Repaid each Blast with sighing,
 Each Billow with a Tear :

When o'er the white Waves stooping
 His floating Corps she spy'd ;
 Then like a Lilly drooping,
 She bow'd her Head, and dy'd.

The following Song, wherein a Shepherd in Love complains of the Inconstancy of his Mistress, has so much of the Pathetic in it, the Thoughts are so natural, and the Language so well adapted to the Subject, that I think it deserves deserves to be reckon'd amongst the best Compositions of this Nature.

Despairing beside a clear Stream
A Shepherd forsaken was laid,
And whilst a false Nymph was his Theme
A Willow supported his Head :
The Wind that blew over the Plain
To his Sighs with a Sigh did reply,
And the Brook in return to his Pain
Ran mournfully murmuring by.

Alas! silly Swain that I was,
Thus sadly complaining he cry'd ;
When first I beheld her fair Face,
'Twere better by far I had dy'd :
She talk'd, and I bless'd the dear Tongue ;
When she smil'd, 'twas a Pleasure too great ;
I listen'd, and cry'd, when she sung,
Was Nightingale ever so sweet !

How foolish was I to believe
She could doat on so lowly a Clown,
Or that her fond Heart would not grieve
To forsake the fine Folks of the Town ;
To think that a Beauty so gay
So kind and so constant would prove,
To go clad like our Maidens in gray,
And live in a Cottage on Love !

What

What tho' I have Skill to complain,
 Tho' the Muses my Temples have crown'd ?
 What tho' when they hear my soft Strain
 The Virgins sit weeping around ?
 Ah Colin ! thy Hopes are in vain,
 Thy Pipe and thy Laurel resign ;
 Thy Fair-one inclines to a Swain
 Whose Music is sweeter than thine.

And you, my Companions so dear,
 Who sorrow to see me betray'd,
 Whatever I suffer, forbear,
 Forbear to accuse the false Maid :
 If thro' the wide World I should range,
 'Tis in vain from my Fortune to fly ;
 'Twas hers to be false and to change,
 'Tis mine to be constant and die.

If, while my hard Fate I sustain,
 In her Breast any Pity is found,
 Let her come with the Nymphs of the Plain,
 And see me laid low in the Ground :
 The last humble Boon that I crave
 Is to shade me with Cypress and Yew,
 And when she looks down on my Grave
 Let her own that her Shepherd was true.

Then

Then to her new Love let her go,
 And deck her in golden Array,
 Be finest at ev'ry fine Show,
 And frolick it all the long Day :
 While Colin, forgotten and gone,
 No more shall be heard of, or seen,
 Unless when beneath the pale Moon
 His Ghost shall glide over the Green.

In the next Song, the peevish Uneasiness of a Lover, in the Absence of his Mistress is very naturally described, and there are so many Beauties scatter'd through the whole, that I am persuaded the Reader will not be displeas'd with the Length of it.

My Time, O ye Muses, was happily spent,
 When Phœbe went with me wherever I went ;
 Ten thousand sweet Pleasures I felt in my Breast :
 Sure never fond Shepherd like Colin was blest !
 But now she is gone, and has left me behind,
 What a marvellous Change on a sudden I find !
 When Things were as fine as could possibly be,
 I thought 'twas the Spring ; but alas ! it was she.

With

With such a Companion to tend a few Sheep,
 To rise up to play, or to lie down to sleep,
 I was so good-humour'd, so chearful and gay,
 My Heart was as light as a Feather all Day ;
 But now I so cross and so peevish am grown,
 So strangely uneasy as never was known ;
 My Fair-one is gone, and my Joys are all drown'd,
 And my Heart—I am sure it weighs more than a Pound.

The Fountain that wont to run sweetly along,
 And dance to soft Murmurs the Pebbles among,
 Thou know'st, little Cupid, if Phæbe was there,
 'Twas Pleasure to look at, 'twas Music to hear :
 But now she is absent, I walk by its Side,
 And still, as it murmurs, do nothing but chide ;
 Must you be so chearful, while I go in Pain ?
 Peace there with your Bubbling, and hear me complain.

When my Lambkins around me would oftentimes play,
 And when Phæbe and I were as joyful as they,
 How pleasant their Sporting, how happy the Time,
 When Spring, Love, and Beauty were all in their Prime !

But

But now in their Frolicks when by me they pass,
 I fling at their Fleeces a Handful of Grass ;
 Be still then, I cry, for it makes me quite mad
 To see you so merry, while I am so sad.

My Dog I was ever well pleased to see
 Come wagging his Tail to my Fair-one and me ;
 And Phæbe was pleas'd too, and to the Dog said,
 Come hither, poor Fellow, and patted his Head :
 But now when he's fawning, I with a sour Look
 Cry, Sirrah ! and give him a Blow with my Crook ;
 And I'll give him another, for why should not

Tray

Be as dull as his Master, when Phæbe's away ?

When walking with Phæbe, what Sights have
 I seen !
 How fair was the Flower, how fresh was the Green !
 What a lovely Appearance the Trees and the Shade,
 The Corn-fields and Hedges, and ev'ry thing made !
 But since she has left me, tho' all are still there,
 They none of 'em now so delightful appear :
 'Twas nought but the Magic, I find, of her Eyes
 Made so many beautiful Prospects arise.

Sweet

Sweet Music went with us both all the Wood thro',
 The Lark, Linnet, Throftle, and Nightingale too;
 Winds over us whisper'd, Flocks by us did bleat,
 And chirp went the Grashopper under our Feet :
 But now she is absent, tho' still they sing on,
 The Woods are but lonely, the Melody's gone ;
 Her Voice in the Concert, as now I have found,
 Gave ev'ry thing else its agreeable Sound.

Rose, what is become of thy delicate Hue ?
 And where is Violet's beautiful Blue ?
 Does ought of its Sweetness the Blossom beguile ?
 That Meadow, those Daisies, why do they not smile ?

Ah! Rivals, I see what it was that you drest
 And made yourselves fine for, a Place in her Breast :
 You put on your Colours to pleasure her Eye,
 To be pluck'd by her Hand, on her Bosom to die.

How slowly Time creeps till my Phæbe return,
 While amidst the soft Zephyr's cool Breezes I burn !

Methinks if I knew whereabouts he would tread,
 I would breathe on his Wings, and 'twould melt down the Lead.

Fly

Fly swifter, ye Minutes, bring hither my Dear,
 And rest so much longer for't when she is here.
 Ah! Colin, old Time is full of Delay,
 Nor will budge one Foot faster for all thou canst say.

Will no pitying Power, that hears me complain,
 Or cure my Disquiet, or soften my Pain?
 To be cur'd thou must, Colin, thy Passion remove;
 But what Swain is so silly to live without Love?
 No, Deity, bid the dear Nymph to return,
 For ne'er was poor Shepherd so sadly forlorn.
 Ah! what shall I do? I shall die with Despair;
 Take heed, all ye Swains, how ye love one so fair.

To the foregoing Songs, which are generally known and allow'd to be Master-pieces of the Kind, I shall take the Freedom to add one that has never before appear'd in Public.

I.

When Chloe was here, and my Suit did approve,
 All Nature look'd gay, and the Fields were in Love:
 Our Lambkins came skipping around us to see
 A Pair so united, so happy as We.

II. When

II.

When to shun the Mid-Heat, to the Woods we repair,
 The Birds hover round us all charm'd with the Fair ;
 They lend a soft Ear to the Voice of my Love,
 And warble our Vows through the ecchoing Grove.

III.

E'en the Fishes that glide in the murmuring Rill,
 That meanders along at the Foot of the Hill, Peep out of the Stream when my Charmer they hear,
 And leap and rejoice that my Chloe's so near.

IV.

'Twas her Presence alone that enliven'd the Day,
 And every Month with my Chloe was May :
 No Lady at Court with my Dearest could vie ;
 No Lord of 'em all was so happy as I.

V.

But now she is gone how severe is my Woe !
 And Nature seems sicken'd wherever I go :
 My Lambkins no longer will sport on the Plain,
 But drooping lie down, and all bleating complain.

VI.

The Grove, when I traverse to soften my Care,
 No Warblers I find — for my Chloe's not there ;
 But (instead of the Linnet) the Screech-Owl, the Crow,
 And the Raven's hoarse Croaking add Woe to my Woe.

VII.

The Fish in the sweet purling Stream that ran by,
 Through Sorrow lie dead, and the Rivulets dry.
 Dear Chloe, adieu ! — Farewel all ye Swains ;
 Adieu to my Pipe, to my Sheep, to the Plains !

To these amorous Songs let me add another, describing the Happiness of a married Couple, wherein the Numbers are sweet and flowing, and the Language exceedingly natural and easy.

At Upton on the Hill,
 There lives a happy Pair ;
 The Swain his Name is Will,
 And Molly is the Fair.

Ten Years are gone and more
 Since Hymen join'd these two :
 Their Hearts were one before
 The sacred Rites they knew.

Since which auspicious Day
 Sweet Harmony does reign ;
 Both love, and both obey :
 Hear this each Nymph and Swain.
 If haply Cares invade,
 (As who is free from Care ?)
 Th'Impression's lighter made,
 By taking each a Share.

Pleas'd with a calm Retreat,
 They've no ambitious View ;
 In Plenty live, not State,
 Nor envy those that do.
 Sure Pomp is empty Noise,
 And Cares increase with Wealth,
 They aim at truer Joys,
 Tranquillity and Health.

With Safety and with Ease
 Their present Life does flow ;
 They fear no raging Seas,
 Nor Rocks that lurk below.

May still a steady Gale
 Their little Bark attend,
 And gently fill each Sail
 Till Life itself shall end.

After so many Songs on the Subject of Love, it may be expected I should add one, at least, in Praise of Wine. I have accordingly chosen the following, which, in my Opinion, is the best of the Kind that has appear'd in our Language. The Thought is very pretty, that the Wisdom of the ancient Philosophers was owing to the generous Juice of the Vine ; and the Allusions to some principal Part of their Characters, or to some remarkable Story which has been handed down to us concerning them, are particularly beautiful.

Diogenes surly and proud,
 Who snarl'd at the Macedon Youth,
 Delighted in Wine that was good,
 Because in good Wine there is Truth :

But

But growing as poor as a Job,
 And unable to purchase a Flask,
 He chose for his Mansion a Tub,
 And liv'd by the Scent of the Cask.

Heraclitus ne'er would deny
 To tittle and cherish his Heart,
 And, when he was maudling, would cry
 Because he had empty'd his Quart :
 Tho' some are so foolish to think
 He wept at Men's Follies and Vice,
 'Twas only his Custom to drink
 Till the Liquor flow'd out of his Eyes.

Democritus always was glad
 Of a Bumper to cheer up his Soul,
 And wou'd laugh like a Man that was mad
 When over a full flowing Bowl :
 As long as his Cellar was stor'd,
 The Liquor he'd merrily quaff ;
 And when he was drunk as a Lord,
 At those that were sober he'd laugh.

Copernicus too, like the rest,
 Believ'd there was Wisdom in Wine,
 And thought that a Cup of the best
 Made Reason the brighter to shine :

With Wine he replenish'd his Veins,
 And made his Philosophy reel ;
 Then fancy'd the World, like his Brains,
 Turn'd round as a Chariot Wheel.

Aristotle, that Master of Arts,
 Had been but a Dunce without Wine ;
 And what we ascribe to his Parts,
 Is due to the Juice of the Vine :
 His Belly, most Authors agree,
 Was as big as a Watering-Trough ;
 He therefore leapt into the Sea,
 Because he'd have Liquor enough.

Old Plato, that learned Divine,
 He fondly to Wisdom was prone ;
 But had it not been for good Wine,
 His Merits we ne'er should have known :
 By Wine we are generous made,
 It furnishes Fancy with Wings ;
 Without it we ne'er should have had Philosophers, Poets, or Kings.

I shall conclude this Collection with that well-known but excellent Song of the Miller of Mansfield, which for the pleasant

Whose Aim is alone their own Coffers to fill,
 As all his Concern's to bring Grist to his Mill.
 He eats when he's hungry, he drinks when he's dry,
 And down when he's weary contented does lie ;
 Then rises up chearful to work and to sing :
 If so happy a Miller, then who'd be a King ?

These Examples, of a Sort of Poem which admits of an almost endless Variety, are some of the best that have fallen under my Observation. I forbear saying any Thing in particular of the Madrigal, Roundelay, and some other Species of the Ode or Song, as being trifling in themselves, and little known amongst us ; besides, that I fear the Reader will think I have already de-tain'd him too long upon this Subject.

C H A P. IX.

Of SATIRE.

Q. WHat is a Satire ?

A. It is a free, jocosè, witty, and sharp Poem, wherein the Follies and Vices of Mankind are lash'd and ridicul'd, in order to their Reformation. Its subject therefore is whatever deserves our Contempt or Abhorrence; its Manner is Invective, and its End Shame. So that Satire may be look'd upon as the Physician of a dis-temper'd Mind, which it endeavours to cure by bitter and unfavoury but salutary Applications.

Q. What are the Qualifications requisite in a good Satyrift ?

A. He

A. He ought to be a Man of Wit and Address, Sagacity and Eloquence. He should also have a great deal of Good-Nature, as all the Sentiments which are beautiful in this Way of Writing, must proceed from that Quality in the Author. It is Good-Nature produces that Disdain of all Baseness, Vice and Folly, which prompts the Poet to express himself with Smartness against the Errors of Men, but without Bitterness to their Persons. It is this Quality that keeps the Mind even, and never lets an Offence unseasonably throw the Satyrist out of his Character.

Q. What is chiefly to be observed in writing Satire ?

A. In the first Place, that it be true and general, that is, levell'd at Abuses in which Numbers are interested ; for the personal Kind of Satire, or that which exposes particular Characters, and affects Men's Reputation, is scarce to be distinguished from Scandal and Defamation. The Poet must also take care, that whilst he is endeavouring to correct the Guilty, he do not make use of Expressions that may corrupt the Innocent ; he must therefore avoid all obscene Words and Images. In this respect Horace and Juvenal, the chief Satyrists among the Romans, are faulty, and ought to be read with Caution.
and

Q. What is the Style proper for Satire ?

A. It is sometimes grave and animated, inveighing against Vice with Warmth and Earnestness ; but that which is pleasant, sportive, and full of Raillery, has generally the best Effect, as it seems only to play with Men's Follies, tho' it omits no Opportunity of making them feel the Lash. The Language should be manly and decent, and the Verses smooth and flowing.—These Rules

Rules are well express'd in the following Lines.

Folly and Vice of ev'ry Sort and Kind,
 That wound our Reason or debase the Mind,
 All that deserves our Laughter or our Hate,
 To biting Satire's Province does relate.
 The Slothful, Parasite, affected Fool,
 Th' Ungrateful, and the pert loquacious Tool,
 The Lustful, Drunkard, th'avaritious Slave,
 The noisy Bravo, and the tricking Knave,
Satire by wholesome Lessons would reclaim,
 And heal their Vices, to secure their Fame.

The Latin Writers Decency neglect,
 But modern Readers challenge more Respect,
 And at immodest Writings take Offence,
 If clean Expressions cover not the Sense.
Satire should be from all Obsceneness free,
 Not impudent, and yet preach Modesty.

Good Satire comes not but from Men of Sense,
 Wit, and Sagacity, and Eloquence ;
 Of good Address, and such a Poignancy
 As may consist with Mirth and Pleasantry.
 Rage you must hide, and Prejudice lay down ;
 A Satire's Smile is sharper than its Frown.

No Parts distinct does biting Satire know,
 And without certain Rules its Course will go.

Of

Oft by Infination it begins,
 And oft abruptly falls upon our Sins :
 But this Abruptness should regard the Whole,
 Which must its Words and Manner too controul,
 Let flowing Language utter all you say,
 And smoothest Words the sharpest Thoughts convey.

According to the Method I have hitherto observ'd, I shall here give the Reader a Specimen of this Kind of Poem; and one of the best that our Language affords. It is a Satire call'd Mack Flecknoe, written by the celebrated Mr. DRYDEN, which has been justly admired and praised by the greatest Critics.

MACK FLECKNOE.

All human Things are subject to decay,
 And, when Fate summons, Monarchs must obey.
 This Flecknoe found, who, like Augustus, young
 Was call'd to Empire, and had govern'd long;
In

In Prose and Verse, was own'd, without Dispute,
 Through all the Realms of Nonsense, absolute.
 This aged Prince, now flourishing in Peace,
 And blest with Issue of a large Increase ;
 Worn out with Business, did at length debate
 To settle the Succession of the State :
 And, pond'ring, which of all his Sons was fit
 To reign, and wage immortal War with Wit,
 Cry'd, 'tis resolv'd ; for Nature pleads, that he Should only rule, who most resembles me.
Sb—— alone my perfect Image bears,
 Mature in Dulness from his tender Years :
Sb—— alone, of all my Sons, is he,
 Who stands confirm'd in full Stupidity.
 The rest, to some faint Meaning make Pretence,
 But Sb—— never deviates into Sense.
 Some Beams of Wit on others Souls may fall,
 Strike through, and make a lucid Interval ;
 But Sb——'s genuine Night admits no Ray,
 His rising Fogs prevail upon the Day.
 Besides, his goodly Fabrick fills the Eye,
 And seems design'd for thoughtless Majesty :
 Thoughtless as Monarch Oaks, that shade the Plain,
 And, spread in solemn State, supinely reign.
Heywood and Sbirley were but Types of thee,
 Thou last great Prophet of Tautology.

Even I, a Dunce of more Renown than they,
 Was sent before but to prepare thy Way ;
 And, coarsely clad in Norwich Drugget, came
 To teach the Nations in thy greater Name.
 My warbling Lute, the Lute I whilom strung,
 When to King John of Portugal I sung,
 Was but the Prelude to that glorious Day,
 When thou on Silver Thames didst cut thy Way,
 With well-tim'd Oars before the Royal Barge,
 Swell'd with the Pride of thy celestial Charge :
 And big with Hymn, Commander of an Host,
 The like was ne'er in Epsom Blankets tost.
 Methinks I see the new Arion sail,
 The Lute still trembling underneath thy Nail.
 At thy well-sharpen'd Thumb from Shore to Shore,
 The Trebles squeak for Fear, the Bases roar :
 Ecchoes from Pissing-Alley Sb—— call,
 And Sb—— they resound from Aston-Hall.
 About thy Boat the little Fishes throng
 As at the Morning Toast that floats along.
 Sometimes as Prince of thy harmonious Band,
 Thou wield'st thy Papers in thy threshing Hand.
 St. Andre's Feet ne'er kept more equal Time,
 Not ev'n the Feet of thy own Psyche's Rhime :
 Tho' they in Number as in Sense excel ;
 So just, so like Tautology, they fell,

That,

That, pale with Envy, Singleton forswore
 The Lute and Sword, which he in Triumph } bore,
 And vow'd he ne'er would act Villierius more. }

Here stopt the good old Sire, and wept for Joy,
 In silent Raptures of the hopeful Boy.

All Arguments, but most his Plays, persuade
 That for anointed Dulness he was made.

Close to the Walls which fair Augusta bind,
 (The fair Augusta much to Fears inclin'd)
 An antient Fabrick, rais'd t'inform the Sight,
 There stood of Yore, and Barbican it hight :
 A Watch Tower once ; but now so Fate ordains,
 Of all the Pile an empty Name remains :
 From its old Ruins Brothel-houses rise
 Scenes of lewd Loves, and of polluted Joys,
 Where their vast Courts the Mother-Strumpets keep,
 And, undisturb'd by Watch, in Silence sleep *.
 Near these a Nursery erects its Head,
 Where Queens are form'd, and future Heroes bred ;

* Parodies on these Lines of COWLEY,
 (Davidis, Book I.)

*Where their vast Courts the Mother-waters keep,
 And undisturb'd by Moons, in Silence sleep.*

Where

Where unfledg'd Actors learn to laugh and cry,
 Where Infant Punks their tender Voices try *,
 And little Maximins the Gods defy. }
 Great Fletcher never treads in Buskins here,
 Nor greater Johnson dares in Socks appear ;
 But gentle Simpkin just Reception finds
 Amidst this Monument of vanish'd Minds :
 Pure Clinches the Suburbian Muse affords
 And Panton waging harmless War with Words.
 Here Flecknoe, as a Place to Fame well known,
 Ambitiously design'd his Sb——'s Throne.
 For antient Decker prophesy'd long since,
 That in this Pile should reign a mighty Prince, }
 Born for a Scourge of Wit, and Flail of Sense :
 To whom true Dulness should some Psyches owe,
 But Worlds of Misers from his Pen should flow ;
Humourists and Hypocrites it should produce,
 Whole Raymond Families, and Tribes of Bruce.
 Now Empress Fame had publish'd the Renown
 Of Sb——'s Coronation through the Town.

Parodies on these Lines of COWLEY,
 (Davideis, Book I.)

* ———— Where unfledg'd Tempests lie,
And infant Winds their tender Voices try.

Rouz'd by Report of Fame, the Nations meet,
 From near Bunbill, and distant Watling-Street.
 No Persian Carpets spread th'Imperial Way,
 But scatter'd Limbs of mangled Poets lay :
 From dusty Shops neglected Authors come,
 Martyrs of Pies, and Reliques of the Bum.
 Much Heywood, Sbirley, Ogleby there lay,
 But Loads of Sb—— almost choak'd the Way.
 Bilk'd Stationers for Yeomen stood prepar'd,
 And H——n was Captain of the Guard.
 The Hoary Prince in Majesty appear'd,
 High on a Throne of his own Labours rear'd.
 At his Right-hand our young Ascanius fate
Rome's other Hope, and Pillar of the State.
 His Brows thick Fogs, instead of Glories, grace,
 And lambent Dulness play'd around his Face.
 As Hannibal did to the Altars come,
 Swore by his Sire a mortal Foe to Rome ;
 So Sb—— swore, nor should his Vow be vain,
 That he till Death true Dulness would maintain ;
 And, in his Father's Right, and Realm's Defence, Ne'er to have Peace with Wit, nor Truce with Sense.

The King himself the sacred Unction made,
 As King by Office, and as Priest by Trade.
 In his sinister Hand, instead of Ball,
 He plac'd a mighty Mug of potent Ale ;

Love's

Love's Kingdom to his Right he did convey,
 At once his Sceptre, and his Rule of Sway ;
 Whose righteous Lore the Prince had practis'd young,

And from whose Loins recorded Psyche sprung :
 His Temples, last, with Poppies were o'erspread,
 That nodding seem'd to consecrate his Head.
 Just at the Point of Time, if Fame not lye,
 On his Left hand twelve reverend Owls did fly.
 So Romulus, 'tis sung, by Tyber's Brook
 Prefage of Sway from twice six Vultures took.
 Th'admiring Throng loud Acclamations make,
 And Omens of his future Empire take.
 The Sire then shook the Honours of his Head,
 And from his Brows Damps of Oblivion shed
 Full on the Filial Dulness : Long he stood,
 Repelling from his Breast the raging God ;
 At length burst out in this prophetic Mood.

Heav'ns bless my Son, from Ireland let him reign

To far Barbadoes or the Western Main ;
 Of this Dominion may no End be known,
 And greater than his Father's be his Throne ;
 Beyond Love's Kingdom, let him stretch his Pen !--
 He paus'd, and all the People cry'd Amen.
 Then thus, continu'd he : My Son, advance
 Still in new Impudence, new Ignorance.

Success let others teach, learn thou from me
Pangs without Birth, and fruitless Industry.
Let Virtuosos in five Years be writ ;
Yet not one Thought accuse thy Toil of Wit.
Let gentle George in Triumph tread the Stage,
Make Dorimant betray, and Loveit rage ;
Let Cully, Cockwood, Fopling, charm the Pit,
And in their Folly shew the Writers Wit.
Yet still thy Tools shall stand in thy Defence,
And justify their Author's want of Sense.
Let them be all by thy own Model made
Of Dulness, and desire no foreign Aid ;
That they to future Ages may be known,
Not Copies drawn, but Issue of thy own.
Nay let thy Men of Wit too be the same,
All full of thee, and diff'ring but in Name.
But let no alien S—d—y interpose
To lard with Wit thy hungry Epsom Prose.
And when false Flowers of Rhetoric thou would'st cull,
Trust Nature, do not labour to be dull ;
But write thy best, and top ; and in each Line,
Sir Formal's Oratory will be thine :
Sir Formal, tho' unsought, attends thy Quill,
And does by Northern Dedications fill.
Nor let false Friends seduce thy Mind to Fame,
By arrogating Johnson's hostile Name.

Let

Let Father Flecknoe fire thy Mind with Praise,
 And Uncle Ogleby thy Envy raise.
 Thou art my Blood, where Johnson has no Part :
 What Share have we in Nature or in Art ?
 Where did his Wit on Learning fix a Brand,
 And rail at Arts he did not understand ?
 Where made he love in Prince Nicander's Vein,
 Or swept the Dust in Psyche's humble Strain ?
 Where sold he Bargains, Whip-stitch, kifs my Arse

Promis'd a Play, and dwindled to a Farce ?
 When did his Muse from Fletcher's Scenes purloin,
 As thou whole Etb'ridge dost transfuse to thine ?
 But so transfus'd, as Oil and Waters flow,
 His always floats above, thine sinks below.
 This is thy Province, this thy wondrous Way,
 New Humours to invent for each new Play :
 This is that boasted Bias of thy Mind,
 By which, one Way, to Dulness 'tis inclin'd :
 Which makes thy Writings lean on one Side still,
 And, in all Changes, that Way bends thy Will.
 Nor let thy Mountain-Belly make Pretence
 Of Likeness ; thine's a Tympany of Sense.
 A Ton of Man in thy large Bulk is writ,
 But sure thou'rt but a Kilderkin of Wit.
 Like mine, thy gentle Numbers feebly creep ;
 Thy Tragic Muse gives Smiles, thy Comic, Sleep,

where I can more properly speak of it than under the Head of Satire. An excellent Example of this Kind is a Poem in Blank Verse, intitled, The Splendid Shilling, written by Mr. John Philips, which, in the Opinion of one of the best Judges of this Age, is the finest Burlesque in the English Language. In this Poem the Author has handled a low Subject in the lofty Stile and Numbers of Milton; in which Way of Writing Mr. Philips has been imitated by several, but none have come up to the Humour and happy Turn of the Original. When we read it, we are betray'd into a Pleasure that we could not expect; tho', at the same time, the Sublimity of the Stile, and Gravity of the Phrase, seem to chastise that Laughter which they provoke. The Poet's Invocation to his Muse, is prefix'd to his Poem by Way of Motto.

— — — Sing, heav'nly Muse,
 Things unattempted yet in Prose or Rhyme,
 A Shilling, Breeches, and Chimeras dire.

Happy the Man, who, void of Care and Strife,
 In silken or in leathern Purse retains
 A SPLENDID SHILLING : He nor hears with Pain

New Oysters cry'd, nor sighs for chearful Ale ;
 But with his Friends, when nightly Mists arise,
 To Jun'per's, Magpye, or Town-Hall * repairs ;
 Where, mindful of the Nymph, whose wanton
 Eye

Transfix'd his Soul and kindled am'rous Flames,
 CHLOE or PHILLIS, he each circling Glas
 Wisheth her Health, and Joy, and equal Love.
 Mean while he smokes, and laughs at merry Tale,
 Or Pun ambiguous, or Conundrum quaint.

But, I whom griping Penury furrounds,
 And Hunger, sure Attendant upon Want,
 With scanty Offals, and small acid Tiff,
 (Wretched Repast !) my meagre Corps sustain ;
 Then solitary walk, or doze at home

* Alehouses of Note in Oxford, when the Author wrote this Poem.

In

In Garret vile, and with a warming Puff
 Regale chill'd Fingers, or from Tube as black
 As Winter-Chimney, or well-polish'd Jet,
 Exhale Mundungus, ill-perfuming Scent.
 Not blacker Tube, nor of a shorter Size,
 Smokes Cambro-Briton (vers'd in Pedigree
 Sprung from Cadwaladar and Arthur, Kings Full famous in romantic Tale) when he
 O'er many a craggy Hill and barren Cliff,
 Upon a Cargo of fam'd Cestrian Cheese
 High over-shadowing rides, with a Design
 To vend his Wares, or at th' Arvonian Mart,
 Or Maridurum, or the ancient Town
 Yclep'd Brechinia, or where Vaga's Stream
 Encircles Ariconium, fruitful Soil !
 Whence flow nectareous Wines, that well may vie
 With Massic, Setin, or renown'd Falern.

Thus, while my joyless Minutes tedious flow,
 With Looks demure and silent Pace, a Dun,
 Horrible Monster ! hated by Gods and Men,
 To my aërial Citadel ascends ;
 With vocal Heel thrice thund'ring at my Gate,
 With hideous Accent thrice he calls ; I know
 The Voice ill-boding, and the solemn Sound.
 What should I do ? or whither turn ? Amaz'd,
 Confounded, to the dark Recess I fly
 Of Wood-hole ; strait my bristling Hairs erect
 Thro' sudden Fear ; a chilly Sweat bedews

My

My shudd'ring Limbs, and (wonderful to tell !)
 My Tongue forgets her Faculty of Speech ;
 So horrible he seems ! his faded Brow
 Entrench'd with many a Frown, and conic Beard,
 And spreading Band, admir'd by modern Saints,
 Disastrous Acts forebode ; in his Right-hand
 Long Scrolls of Paper solemnly he waves,
 With Characters and Figures dire inscrib'd,
 Grievous to mortal Eyes ; (ye Gods avert Such Plagues from righteous Men !) behind him stalks

Another Monster not unlike himself,
 Sullen of Aspect, by the Vulgar call'd
 A Catchpole, whose polluted Hands the Gods
 With Force incredible and magic Charms
 Erst have endued ; if he his ample Palm
 Should haply on ill-fated Shoulder lay
 Of Debtor, strait his Body to the Touch
 Obsequious, (as whilom Knights were wont)
 To some enchanted Castle is convey'd,
 Where Gates impregnable, and coercive Chains
 In Durance strict detain him, till, in Form
 Of Money, PALLAS sets the Captive free.

Beware, ye Debtors, when ye walk, beware,
 Be circumspect ; oft with insidious Ken
 This Caitiff eyes your Steps aloof, and oft
 Lies perdue in a Nook or gloomy Cave,
 Prompt to enchant some inadvertent Wretch

With

With his unhallow'd Touch. So (Poets sing)
Grimalkin, to domestic Vermin sworn
 An everlasting Foe, with watchful Eye
 Lies nightly brooding o'er a chinky Gap,
 Protending her fell Claws, to thoughtless Mice
 Sure Ruin. So her disembowel'd Web
Arachne in a Hall or Kitchen spreads,
 Obvious to vagrant Flies : She secret stands
 Within her woven Cell ; the humming Prey,
 Regardless of their Fate, rush on the Toils
 Inextricable, nor will ought avail
 Their Arts, or Arms, or Shapes of lovely Hue.
 The Wasp insidious, and the buzzing Drone,
 And Butterfly proud of expanded Wings
 Distinct with Gold, entangled in her Snares,
 Useless Resistance make : With eager Strides
 She tow'ring flies to her expected Spoils ;
 Then with envenom'd Jaws the vital Blood
 Drinks of reluctant Foes, and to her Cave
 Their bulky Carcasses triumphant drags.

So pass my Days : But when nocturnal Shades
 This World envelop, and th'inclement Air
 Persuades Men to repel benumbing Frosts
 With pleasant Wines, and crackling Blaze of Wood,

Me, lonely sitting, nor the glimm'ring Light
 Of make-weight Candle, nor the joyous Talk
 Of loving Friend delights ; distress'd, forlorn, Amidst

Amidst the Horrors of the tedious Night
 Darkling I sigh, and feed with dismal Thoughts
 My anxious Mind ; or sometimes mournful Verse
 Indite, and sing of Groves and Myrtle Shades,
 Or desp'rate Lady near a purling Stream,
 Or Lover pendent on a Willow-Tree.
 Mean while I labour with eternal Drought,
 And restless wish and rave ; my parched Throat
 Finds no Relief, nor heavy Eyes Repose :
 But if a Slumber haply does invade
 My weary Limbs, my Fancy's still awake,
 Thoughtful of Drink, and eager in a Dream
 Tipples imaginary Pots of Ale,
 In vain ; awake I find the settled Thirst
 Still gnawing, and the pleasant Phantom curse.
 Thus do I live, from Pleasure quite debarr'd,
 Nor taste the Fruits that the Sun's genial Rays
 Mature, Jobn-Apple, nor the downy Peach,
 Nor Walnut, in rough-furrow'd Coat secure,
 Nor Medlar, Fruit delicious in Decay :
 Afflictions great ! yet greater still remain ;
 My Galligaskins, that have long withstood
 The Winter's Fury and encroaching Frosts,
 By Time subdu'd (what will not Time subdue !)
 An horrid Chasm disclose, with Orifice
 Wide, discontinuous ; at which the Winds,
Eurus and Auster, and the dreadful Force
 Of Boreas, that congeals the Cronian Waves

Tumultuous enter with dire chilling Blasts,
 Portending Agues. Thus a well-fraught Ship
 Long sail'd secure, or thro' th' Ægean Deep,
 Or the Ionian, till, cruising near
 The Lilybæan Shore, with hideous Crush
 On Scylla or Charybdis (dang'rous Rocks!)
 She strikes rebounding, whence the shatter'd Oak,
 So fierce a Shock unable to withstand,
 Admits the Sea; in at the gaping Side
 The crowding Waves gush with impetuous Rage,
 Resistless, overwhelming; Horrors seize
 The Mariners, Death in their Eyes appears,
 They stare, they lave, they pump, they pray:
 (Vain Efforts!) still the batt'ring Waves rush in,
 Implacable, till delug'd by the Foam
 The Ship sinks found'ring in the vast Abyss.

This Poem, as I have hinted already, is look'd upon as a Master piece in its Kind; but there is another Sort of Verse and Style, which is most frequently made Use of in treating any Subject in a ludicrous Manner, I mean that which is generally call'd Hudi-brastic, from an admirable Poem, intitled Hudibras, written by the ingenious

ous Mr. Samuel Butler. Almost every one knows that this Poem is a Satire upon the Authors of our Civil Dissensions in the Reign of King Charles I. wherein the Poet has, with Abundance of Wit and Humour, expos'd and ridicul'd the Hypocrisy or blind Zeal of those unhappy Times. In short, it is a Kind of burlesque Epic Poem, which, for the Oddity of the Rhimes, the Quaintness of the Similies, the Novelty of the Thoughts, and that fine Raillery which runs through the whole Performance, is not to be parallel'd. But a few Passages, chosen out of the Work I am speaking of, will give the Reader the best Idea of this Sort of Poetry: And first, I shall take Part of the Character of Sir Hudibras, the Hero of the Poem, whose Qualifications the Author thus pleasantly describes.

We grant, altho' he had much Wit,
 H' was very shy of using it,
 As being loth to wear it out,
 And therefore bore it not about,
 Unless on Holidays, or so,
 As Men their best Apparel do.
 Beside, 'tis known, he could speak Greek,
 As naturally as Pigs squeak ;
 That Latin was no more difficile,
 Than to a Blackbird 'tis to whistle :
 B'ing rich in both he never scanted
 His Bounty unto such as wanted ;
 But much of either would afford
 To many that had not one Word.
 For Hebrew Roots, altho' they're found
 To flourish most in barren Ground,
 He had such Plenty as suffic'd
 To make some think him circumcis'd :
 And truly so he was, perhaps,
 Not as a Profelyte, but for Claps.

He was in Logic a great Critic,
 Profoundly skill'd in Analytic :
 He cou'd distinguish and divide
 A Hair 'twixt South and South-West Side ;
 On either which he would dispute,
 Confute, change Hands, and still confute ;
 He'd

He'd undertake to prove by Force
 Of Argument a Man's no Horse ;
 He'd prove a Buzzard is no Fowl,
 And that a Lord may be an Owl,
 A Calf an Alderman, a Goose a Justice,
 And Rooks Committee-Men and Trustees.
 He'd run in Debt by Disputation,
 And pay with Ratiocination :
 All this by Syllogism, true
 In Mood and Figure, he would do.

For Rbetoric, he could not ope
 His Mouth, but out there flew a Trope ;
 And when he happen'd to break off
 I' th' Middle of his Speech, or Cough,
 H' had hard Words ready to shew why,
 And tell what Rules he did it by :
 Else, when with greatest Art he spoke,
 You'd think he talk'd like other Folk :
 For all a Rbetorician's Rules
 Teach nothing but to name his Tools.
 But, when he pleas'd to shew't, his Speech
 In Loftiness of Sound was rich ;
 A Babylonish Dialect,
 Which learned Pedants much affect :
 It was a party-colour'd Dress
 Of patch'd and pye-ball'd Languages ;
 'Twas English cut on Greek and Latin,
 Like Fustian heretofore on Sattin.

It had an odd promiscuous Tone,
 As if he talk'd three Parts in one ;
 Which made some think when he did gabble,
 They'd heard three Labourers of Babel,
 Or Cerberus himself pronounce
 A Leash of Languages at once.
 This he as volubly wou'd vent
 As if his Stock wou'd ne'er be spent ;
 And truly to support that Charge,
 He had Supplies as vast and large ;
 For he could coin or counterfeit
 New Words, with little or no Wit ;
 Words so debas'd and hard, no Stone
 Was hard enough to touch them on :
 And when with hasty Noise he spoke 'em,
 The Ignorant for current took 'em ;
 That had the Orator, who once
 Did fill his Mouth with Pebble-stones
 When he harangu'd, but known his Phrase,
 He wou'd have us'd no other Ways.

In Mathematicks he was greater Than Tycbo Brabe, or Erra Pater :
 For he, by geometric Scale,
 Could take the Size of Pots of Ale ;
 Resolve by Sines and Tangents streight,
 If Bread or Butter wanted Weight ;
 And wisely tell what Hour o' th' Day
 The Clock does strike, by Algebra,

Beside, he was a shrewd Philosopher,
 And had read ev'ry Text and Gloss over ;
 Whate'er the crabbed'st Author hath,
 He understood b'implicit Faith ;
 Whatever Sceptic could enquire for,
 For ev'ry Why he had a Wherefore ;
 Knew more than forty of 'em do,
 As far as Words and Terms could go :
 All which he understood by Rote,
 And, as Occasion serv'd, wou'd quote ;
 No Matter whether right or wrong,
 They might be either said or sung.
 His Notions fitted Things so well,
 That which was which he could not tell ;
 But oftentimes mistook the one
 For th' other, as great Clerks have done.
 He could reduce all Things to Acts,
 And knew their Natures by Abstracts ;
 Where Entity and Quiddity,
 The Ghosts of Defunct Bodies fly ;
 Where Truth in Person does appear,
 Like Words congeal'd in Northern Air.
 He knew what's what, and that's as high
 As Metaphysic Wit can fly.

Then, as to School Divinity, the Poet compares his Knight to the most famous famous Doctors, and tells us that he was

Profound in all the nominal
And real Ways beyond them all ;
For he a Rope of Sand could twist
As tough as learned Sorbonist,
And weave fine Cobwebs, fit for Skull
That's empty when the Moon is full ;
Such as take Lodgings in a Head
That's to be let unfurnished.
He could raise Scruples dark and nice,
And after solve 'em in a Trice ;
As if Divinity had catch'd
The Itch on Purpose to be scratch'd ;
Or, like a Mountebank, did wound
And stab herself with Doubts profound,
Only to shew with how small Pain
The Sores of Faith are cur'd again ;
Altho' by woful Proof we find
They always leave a Scar behind.
He knew the Seat of Paradise,
Could tell in what Degree it lies ;
And, as he was dispos'd could prove it
Below the Moon, or else above it.
What Adam dream'd of, when his Bride
Came from her Closet in his Side ;

Whether the Devil tempted her
 By a Higb-Dutch Interpreter ;
 If either of them had a Navel ;
 Who first made Music malleable ;
 Whether the Serpent, at the Fall,
 Had cloven Feet, or none at all :
 All this, without a Gloss or Comment,
 He could unriddle in a Moment,
 In proper Terms, such as Men smatter
 When they throw out and miss the Matter.

Soon after this, when the Poet comes to give us an Account of the Knight's Companion in his Adventures, he has a pretty Sneer upon the Use of Rhymes in Poetry, to which good Sense is too frequently forced to submit.

A Squire he had, whose Name was Ralpb,
 That in th' Adventure went his Half.
 Tho' Writers, for more stately Tone,
 Do call him Ralpb, 'tis all one :
 And when we can with Metre safe,
 We'll call him so ; if not plain Ralpb :
 (For Rhyme the Rudder is of Verses,
 With which, like Ships, they steer their Courses.)

W. L. EN

When Sir Hudibras and Ralpho are made Prisoners, and set in the Stocks, it is pleasant to observe with what philosophical Reflections the Knight endeavours to comfort himself and the Squire under their Afflictions: That tho' the Body may be confin'd, the Soul is incapable of Restraint; that our Liberty depends upon keeping our Passions in Subjection; and that Diogenes, contented within the narrow Limits of a Tub, was more happy than Alexander, who is said to have wept because he had not another World to conquer.

But Hudibras, who scorn'd to stoop
To Fortune, or be said to droop,
Chear'd up himself with Ends of Verse,
And Sayings of Philosophers.

Quoth he, th'one half of Man, his Mind,
Is sui juris, unconfin'd,
And cannot be laid by the Heels,
Whate'er the other Moiety feels.
'Tis not Restraint or Liberty
That makes Men Prisoners or free,

But Perturbations that possess
 The Mind or Equanimities.
 The whole World was not half so wide
 To Alexander, when he cry'd
 Because he had but one to subdue,
 As was a narrow paltry Tub to Diogenes ; who is not said
 (For ought that ever I could read)
 To whine, put Finger i'th' Eye, and sob,
 Because h'had ne'er another Tub.

The Reflection that they had fought bravely, and gain'd Honour by the Action, tho' they had the Misfortune to be beaten, is another Alleviation of his Distress.

He that is valiant, and dares fight,
 Tho' drubb'd, can lose no Honour by't.
 Honour's a Lease for Lives to come,
 And cannot be extended from
 The legal Tenant ; 'tis a Chattel
 Not to be forfeited in Battle.
 If he that is in Battle slain
 Be in the Bed of Honour lain,
 He that is beaten may be said
 To lie in Honour's Truckle-Bed.

For as we see th'eclipsed Sun
 By Mortals is more gaz'd upon,
 Than when, adorn'd with all his Light,
 He shines in serene Sky most bright :
 So Valour in a low Estate
 Is most admir'd and wonder'd at.

These Lines put me in mind of another Passage in this Poem, where the Seat of Honour is very humourously supposed to be in the Breech, because a Kick on that Part is look'd upon as one of the greatest Indignities that can be offer'd, and creates an immediate and strong Resentment in the Person who receives it.

— Honour in the Breech is lodg'd,
 As wise Philosophers have judg'd,
 Because a Kick in that Part more
 Hurts Honour, than deep Wounds before.

Who can forbear smiling at that sound and salutary Reasoning, whereby Squire
Ralpho demonstrates the Prudence and Advantages of a timely Flight, rather than staying to be slain in Battle? It is generally allow'd, that a well-conducted Retreat is almost as honourable as a Victory; but perhaps the Wisdom of running away from an Enemy was never proved by such Arguments as are contain'd in the following Lines:

— I with Reason chose
 This Stratagem t'amuse our Foes,
 To make an hon'able Retreat,
 And wave a total sure Defeat:
 For he who fights and runs away
 May live to fight another Day,
 But he who is in Battle slain
 Can never rise and fight again.
 Hence timely Running's no mean Part
 Of Conduct in the martial Art;
 By which some glorious Feats atchieve,
 As Citizens by breaking thrive;
 And Cannons conquer Armies, while
 They seem to draw off and recoil.
 'Tis held the gallant'st Course and bravest,
 To great Exploits, as well as safest,

That

That spares th'Expence of Time and Pains,
 And dang'rous beating out of Brains ;
 And in the End prevails as certain
 As those that never trust to Fortune,
 To make their Fear do Execution
 Beyond the stoutest Resolution ;
 As Earthquakes kill without a Blow,
 And, only trembling, overthrow.
 If th'Ancients crown'd their bravest Men
 That only sav'd a Citizen,
 What Victory could e'er be won,
 If ev'ry one would save but one ?
 Or Fight endanger'd to be lost,
 Where all resolve to save the most ?
 By this means, when a Battle's won,
 The War's as far from being done ;
 For those that save themselves, and fly,
 Go Halves, at least, i'th'Victory ;
 And sometimes, when the Loss is small,
 And Danger great, they challenge all ;
 Print new Additions to their Feats,
 And Emendations in Gazettes ;
 And when, for furious Haste to run,
 They durst not stay to fire a Gun,
 Have don't with Bonfires, and at home
 Made Squibs and Crackers overcome :
 To set the Rabble on a Flame,
 And keep their Governors from Blame,

Disperse

Disperse the News, the Pulpit tells,
 Confirm'd with Fire-works and with Bells ;
 And tho' reduc'd to that Extreme,
 They have been forc'd to sing Te Deum,
 Yet with religious Blasphemy,
 By flatt'ring Heaven with a Lie,
 And for their Beating giving Thanks,
 They've rais'd Recruits, and fill'd their Banks :
 For those who run from th' Enemy
 Engage them equally to fly ;
 And when the Fight becomes a Chace,
 Those win the Day that win the Race.

But it is Time to have done ; for to select all the beautiful Passages of this inimitable Poem, would be almost to transcribe the whole. I therefore proceed to Comedy, which naturally follows
Satire, its End being the same.

CHAP.

CHAP. X.

Of COMEDY.

Q. What is Comedy?

A. It is one of the great Parts of Dramatic Poetry, representing the Actions, Humours, and Customs of common Life.

Q. What do you mean by Dramatic Poetry?

A. That which is written for the Stage is call'd Dramatic, from Drama, a Greek Word signifying Action, or what we popularly call a Play.

Q. What is the Design of Comedy?

A. To make Vice and Folly appear ridiculous, and to recommend Virtue, not so much by Description as personal Action, being represented by Persons on a Stage, that the Spectators may see and be ashamed of those Failings in others, which they are too apt to overlook or excuse in themselves: In a Word, Comedy is intended at once to delight and to instruct Mankind.

Q. Are Comedies written in Verse?

A. They were formerly, but our English Writers have now laid aside that Practice; for as the Characters in Comedy are taken from ordinary and private Life, it seems unnatural to make such Persons speak in Verse.

Q. What Things are reckon'd essential to Comedy?

A. The Fable, the Manners, the Sentiments, and the Diction.

Q. What is meant by the Fable?

A. It is the Subject-Matter of the Poem, the Foundation of the whole Composition, or what we usually call the Plot. As this is the chief Thing in a Play, the Poet's first and principal
Care

Care ought to be employ'd in the Contrivance of it ; that it be not seen through all at once, but open itself gradually, till it end in a happy Discovery ; and that the several Incidents, or particular Actions, may seem naturally to produce each other, and be all subservient to promote the main Design.

Q What is meant by the Manners in Comedy.

A. The Manners in Comedy, or other Poetry, denote the Temper, Genius, and Humour which the Poet gives to his Persons, and whereby he distinguishes his Characters. The Manners are said to be good when they are well express'd, that is, when the Discourse of the Persons plainly discovers their Inclinations, and what Resolutions they will certainly pursue. In Characters taken from History, the Poet must preserve a Likeness of Manners ; that is, he must must not give a Person any Quality contrary to those which History has given him. It is also required, that the Manners be suitable to the Age, Sex, Rank, Climate, and Condition of the Person to whom they are attributed. And they must be equal, that is, constant or consistent through the whole Character: The Fearful must never be Brave, the Avaritious must never be Liberal, nor on the contrary. In this respect Shakespeare's Manners are admirable, and ought to be carefully studied: Add to this, that the Manners should be necessary; that is, no vicious Quality or Inclination should be given to any Person in a Play, unless it be requisite to the carrying on of the Action. Upon the whole, the Poet must look into Nature, must study Mankind, and from thence draw the Proprieties of Characters or Manners.

Horace, in his Art of Poetry, has so justly described the Manners that are suitable to the several Stages of Life, that a Poet should always have them in his View. The Passage is such a beautiful Picture of human Nature, that I cannot forbear giving the Reader a Copy of it from the Earl of Roscommon's excellent Translation.

One that has newly learnt to speak and go
 Loves childish Plays, is soon provok'd and pleas'd,
 And changes ev'ry Hour his wav'ring Mind.
 A Youth, that first casts off his Tutor's Yoke,
 Loves Horses, Hounds, and Sports, and Exercise;
 Prone to all Vice, impatient of Reproof,
 Proud, careless, fond, inconstant, and profuse.
 Gain and Ambition rule our riper Years,
 And make us Slaves to Interest and Pow'r.
Old Men are only walking Hospitals,
 Where all Defects and all Diseases crowd,
 With restless Pain, and more tormenting Fear;
 Lazy, morose, full of Delays and Hopes,
 Oppress'd with Riches which they dare not use;
 Ill-natur'd Censors of the present Age,
 And fond of all the Follies of the past.

Thus

Thus all the Treasure of our flowing Years
 Our Ebb of Life for ever takes away.
Boys must not have th'ambitious Cares of Men,
 Nor Men the weak Anxieties of Age.

As to what we call Humour, it is usually look'd on as peculiar to the English Drama; at least our Comic Poets have excell'd therein, and carried it beyond those of any other Nation. By Humour is meant some extravagant Habit, Passion, or Affection, by the Oddness whereof a Person is distinguish'd from the rest of Men; which being represented in a lively and natural Manner, most frequently begets that Pleasure in the Audience which is testified by Laughter. The Critics consider Humour as a subordinate or weaker Passion, chiefly found among the lower Sort of People, whose Characters are therefore fittest for Comedy, in which Humour is reckon'd the truest Wit.
 The

The Duke of Buckinghamshire, a very good Judge of these Matters, makes Humour to be all in all : Wit, according to him, should never be used but to add an Agreeableness to some just and proper Sentiment, which, for want of such a Turn, might pass without its Effect.

That silly Thing Men call Sbeer-Wit, avoid,
 With which our Age so nauseously is cloy'd ;
Humour is all ; Wit should be only brought
 To turn agreeably some proper Thought.

Q. What is to be observ'd with regard to the Sentiments in Dramatic Writings ?

A. The Poet must take Care that they agree with the Manners of his Characters. In order to this, he must not be content to look into his own Mind, to see what he himself would think in any Conjunction or Circumstance ; but he must consider the Temper, the Quality, lity, the prevailing Passion of the Person whose Character he is to draw ; he himself must assume, as it were, the Manners of that Person, and then make him think and speak as it is probable such a one would really do on any Subject or Occasion. This requires a thorough Knowledge of Nature, a strong Imagination, and a great Genius.

Q. What Rules have you concerning Diction ?

A. The Stile of Comedy should be pure and neat, but simple and familiar ; neither above the Reach of ordinary Capacities, nor sullied with base and vulgar Expressions. In all Dramatic Writings the Language should naturally express the Sentiments, and be agreeable to the Character of the Speaker, as Horace has well observ'd :

You must take care, and use quite diff'rent Words
When Servants speak, or their commanding Lords ;
When

When grave old Men, or head-strong Youths discourse,
 When stately Matrons, or a busy Nurse ;
 A cheating Tradesman, or a lab'ring Clown,
 A Greek or Asian, bred at Court or Town.

Q. Into what Parts is a Comedy generally divided ?

A. The Parts of a Comedy are four, viz. (1.) The Protasis, or Entrance, which proceeds very little into the Action, but shews us the Characters of the Persons. (2.) The Epitasis, or Working-up of the Plot, wherein the Play grows warmer, the Design or Action draws on and thickens, and we see something promising. (3.) The Catastasis, or Full-Growth of the Plot, which is now brought to its greatest Height ; but here the Play takes what we may call a Counter-Turn, our Expectation is destroy'd, and the Action embroil'd in new Difficulties. (4.) The Catastrophe, which we call the Disco- every or Unraveling of the Plot, wherein we see all Things settling again upon their first Foundations, and terminating in an unexpected happy Issue.

Q. Is there no other Division of a Comedy.

A. Yes, it is divided into five Parts call'd Acts; and every Play that has more or less than five is reckon'd irregular. This was a Dramatic Law in Horace's Time, and stands unrepeal'd to this Day; tho' it seems to draw its Force from the Authority of Antiquity, rather than that of Reason or Nature. However, some pretend that every just Action consists of five distinct Parts, and accordingly assign one to each Act in a Play. The first, say they, proposes the Matter or Argument of the Fable, and shews the principal Characters. The second proceeds into the Affair or Business. The third furnishes Obstacles and Difficulties. The fourth either removes

moves those Difficulties, or finds new ones in the Attempt. The fifth puts an End to all by a fortunate Discovery.

Q Of what Use is this Division of a Play into several Acts?

A. It is contrived to give a Respite or Breathing time both to the Actors and Spectators; for in the Interval between the Acts, the Stage remains empty, and without any visible Action, tho' it is supposed all the while there is one carrying on out of Sight. This Division, however, is not made purely for the Sake of the Respite, but to give Things a greater Degree of Probability, and render the Intrigue more affecting. Add to this, that Authors contrive to have the most dry and difficult Parts of the Drama transacted between the Acts, that the Spectators may have no Notion of these but what their Fancy presents them with at a Distance, and that nothing may appear on the

M 3

Stage

Stage but what is natural and entertaining.

Q Are not the Acts of a Play divided into lesser Parts?

A. Yes, they are divided into Scenes, the Number whereof is not fixed, either by Reason or Experience, but depends on the Business to be done in each Act, and the Number of Persons to be employ'd.—Here it is proper to take notice, that in most of our printed Plays a new Scene is never express'd to begin, but when the Place of Action is supposed to be changed by shifting the moveable Scene in the Representation; whereas a Scene, consider'd as a Division of an Act, is properly so much of it as is spoken or acted by any Number of Persons present upon the Stage at the same Time. Whenever, therefore, a new Actor appears, or an old one disappears, the Action being changed into other Hands, a new Scene then then commences. It is one of the Laws of the Drama, tho' not sufficiently observ'd, that the Scenes be well connected, i. e. that they succeed one another in such Manner that the Stage be never left quite empty till the End of the Act.

The Reader may perhaps expect, from the Method we have hitherto observed, that we should now give him a Specimen of this Sort of Dramatic Poetry; but as Pieces written for the Stage are much too long for the Compass of our present Undertaking, we can only refer him to the Works of Shakespear, that great Master of Nature, and those of Ben Johnson, who was a careful Observer of the Laws of the Drama, and perhaps the most learned, judicious, and correct of all our Comic Poets.— We now proceed to Tragedy.

C H A P. XI.

Of TRAGEDY.

Q. WHat is Tragedy?

A. It is a dramatic Poem representing some signal Action perform'd by illustrious Persons, and which has frequently a fatal Issue: Or, (if you like Aristotle's Definition of it better) it is the Imitation of one grave and entire Action, of a just Length, and which, without the Assistance of Narration, raises in us Pity and Terror, and refines and purges the Passions.

Q. What is meant by refining the Passions?

A. The reducing them to proper Bounds; for Tragedy, by shewing the Miseries that attend the Subjection to them, them, teaches us to watch them more narrowly ; and by seeing the great Misfortunes of others, the Sense of our own is lessen'd. Writings of this Kind tend to cherish and cultivate that Humanity which is the Ornament of our Nature : They soften Insolence, sooth Affliction, and subdue the Mind to the Dispensations of Providence.

Q. Are Tragedies written in Verse ?

A. Our Tragedies are generally written in Blank Verse, which is a due Medium between Prose and Rhyme, and seems wonderfully adapted to this Kind of Drama.

Q. Is Rhyme never to be used in Tragedy ?

A. Yes, the Poet frequently ends his Play, or perhaps every Act of it, with two or three Couplets, which have an agreeable Effect, and give the Actor a graceful Exit.

Q. What

Q. What are the Essentials of Tragedy.

A. In Tragedy, as well as Comedy, the essential Parts are the Fable, Manners, Sentiments, and Diction.

The Fable is of Tragedy the End,
 To which the grand Design does wholly tend.
 The Poet here employs his Care and Art
 To move the Passions, and incline the Heart :
 But if, in labour'd Acts, the pleasing Rage
 Cannot by Turns our Hopes and Fears engage,
 Nor in our Minds a feeling Pity raise,
 In vain with learned Scenes he fills his Plays.

As the Fable, or main Plot, consists of many Incidents or Scenes, the Poet should make a Draught of these before he begins to write, wherein he should mark all the fine Touches of the Passions, and the admirable Turns that produce them : And having thus the whole Plan before him, he will the better discover and correct its Faults, before fore he proceeds to the Execution of it. This is a Rule laid down by the Duke of Buckinghamshire, who says,

Beside the main Design compos'd with Art,
 Each moving Scene must have a Plot apart.
 Contrive each little Turn, mark ev'ry Place,
 As Painters first chalk out the future Face:
 Yet be not fondly your own Slave for this,
 But change hereafter what appears amiss.

Such Incidents as are most productive of Terror and Compassion are most proper for Tragedy. These are such as happen among Friends or Relations; as when a Brother kills, or is going to kill a Brother, a Father or Mother their Son, or the Son his Father or Mother, and the like. We may distinguish these Incidents into three Kinds: The first, when a Person has a perfect Knowledge of what he does, or intends to do: The second, when the Actor does not know the Heinousness of his Action till

till after it is done : And the third, when one Person is going to kill another that is unknown to him, and is prevented by a Discovery of their Relation and Friendship. Incidents of this last Sort are the most beautiful ; the first have something too horrible ; but the second are agreeable enough, for the Crime being committed through Ignorance, there is nothing in it flagitious or inhuman, and the Discovery is extremely affecting.

This naturally leads me to observe, that all Incidents are not to be represented on the Stage. Those that are shocking, are better transacted behind the Scenes, as that of Medea's murdering her Children, and such like Barbarities, which have too much Horror in them to be viewed by an Audience that does not delight in Cruelty and Bloodshed. Add to this, that in all the Incidents, as well as in the main Fable,
 the

the Poet should always keep within the Bounds of Probability.

Q. What have you to say concerning the Manners, the Sentiments, and the Diction of Tragedy ?

A. As to the Manners, it is sufficient to refer to what has been said upon that Subject under the Head of Comedy. What I have there observ'd with regard to the Sentiments, should likewise be attended to, the Substance of which is well express'd in the following Lines :

The Poet still must look within to find
 The secret Turns of Nature in the Mind.
 He must be sad, be proud, and in a Storm,
 And to each Character his Mind conform :
 The Proteus must all Shapes, all Passions wear,
 If he would have just Sentiments appear.

With respect to the Diction, it must be adapted to the Sentiments and Characters ; and therefore the Stile of Tragedy should not always be equal
 and

and uniform, but judiciously diversified. Care must be taken to make every Passion speak a Language suitable to its Nature: Anger is proud, and utters haughty Expressions, but talks in Words less fierce and fiery as it abates: Grief is more humble, and uses a Language like itself, dejected, plain, and sorrowful.

Wise Nature by Variety does please,
 And diff'ring Passions wear a diff'ring Dress.
 Bold Anger in rough haughty Words appears;
Sorrow is humble, and dissolves in Tears.
 Make not your Hecuba with Fury rage,
 And shew a ranting Grief upon the Stage.
 In Sorrow you must softer Methods keep,
 And, to excite our Tears, yourself must weep.
 Those bombast Words, with which bad Plays abound,
 Come not from Hearts that are in Sadness drown'd.

Q. Are there any other Rules of Importance to be observ'd in Dramatic Writings?

A.

A. Yes ; the Critics require three Unities to be observ'd in every regular Play, viz. those of Action, Time, and Place. By the Unity of Action they mean, that one great Action is to be carried on throughout the Play, on which all the under Actions must depend, and which they must all have a Tendency to promote. For, say they, if two Actions be equally labour'd and driven on by the Poet, the Unity of the Piece will be destroy'd, and it will be no longer one Play, but two. The Action must also have a Beginning, Middle, and End; which F. Bossu, a celebrated French Critic, thus explains : The Causes and Designs of undertaking an Action are the Beginning; the Effects of those Causes, and the Difficulties met with in the Execution of it, are the Middle; and the unravelling and removing these Difficulties is the End.

By

By Unity of Time (strictly speaking) is meant, that all the Transactions represented in a Play may naturally be supposed to have pass'd in as little Time as is taken up in the Representation. This Rule indeed is very seldom observ'd by Dramatic Poets; and the Critics are not agreed about the Matter, some allowing twenty-four Hours, others twelve, and others but four or five for the Time of the Action. But as every Play ought to be a just Imitation of Nature, the greater the Likeness in this Particular, as well as others, the more perfect the Piece must be esteem'd.

What is meant by Unity of Place is, that the Scene should never be shifted throughout the Play, but remain in the same Place where it was laid at the Beginning. This indeed would be to keep close to Nature and Probability, for what is presented on the same Stage, which

which is never moved, should be supposed to have pass'd in the same House, and the same Apartment. But as this Restraint would cramp the Poet too much, and would suit very ill with Abundance of Subjects, the Unity of Place is allow'd to be sufficiently observed, if the Action is confin'd to the same Town or City: The Scene, however, ought never to be changed in the Middle of an Act. In general, the French (in Imitation of the Ancients) observe this Law more strictly than the English; but the more judicious and accurate of our Writers take Care not to deviate too far from Probability, by shifting the Scene between the Acts, much farther than the Persons concern'd may be supposed to have gone in the Interval, and therefore seldom carry it out of the same Town. Others have no Regard at all to Unity of Place; and most of our great Shakespear's Plays are faulty in this Respect.

N most

Q. What Characters are most proper for Tragedy?

A. Those which are neither consummately virtuous and innocent, nor scandalously wicked. To make a perfectly good Man unhappy excites Horror, not Terror, nor Compassion: To punish a notorious Criminal gives us a Sort of Satisfaction, but neither creates Fear nor Pity, which is the Business of Tragedy. The Poet should not make a Person draw his Misfortunes on himself by superlative Wickedness, but by some involuntary Fault, either committed through Ignorance, or the Transport of a violent Passion. Hear what the Duke of Buckinghamshire says upon this Subject:

Reject that vulgar Error, which appears
So fair, of making perfect Characters.

There's

There's no such Thing in Nature, and you'll draw
A faultless Monster, which the World ne'er saw.
 Some Faults must be, which his Misfortunes drew,
 But such as may deserve Compassion too.

Q. Is a Tragedy always to end with the Misfortunes of some principal Person?

A. No, sometimes it may have a happy Catastrophe; and sometimes a double one, that is, happy for the Good, and unhappy for the Guilty; but the single and unfortunate Catastrophe is reckon'd the best, as it is most likely to produce Terror and Compassion.—It is a Dispute indeed among the Critics, whether Virtue should always be rewarded, and Vice punish'd in the Catastrophe of a Tragedy; but the Reasons on the negative Side seem the strongest.

Q. In what manner is the Plot or Fable of a Play generally unravell'd?

N 2

A. By

A. By some accidental Discovery of the Name, Fortune, Quality, or other Circumstances of a principal Person, before unknown. Those Discoveries, which are immediately follow'd by a Change of the Fortune or Condition of some chief Character, are the most beautiful, and have the best Effect upon the Audience. There are several Sorts of Discoveries: First, by certain Marks in the Body, either natural or accidental; such as that of Ulysses, who having received a Wound in his Thigh by a Boar, before the Trojan War, is discover'd by the old Nurse upon washing his Legs after his Return home incognito. Secondly, by Tokens; as the Casket of Things, which the Priest found with Ion, when he was exposed, discovers Crensa, whom he was going to kill, to be his Mother. Thirdly, by Remembrance; that is, when the Sight or Hearing of any Thing occasions sions us to recollect our Misfortunes : Thus, when Ulysses heard Demodocus sing his Actions at the Siege of Troy, the Memory of them so affected him that he could not refrain from Tears, which discover'd him to Alcinous. But the finest Discoveries are those which arise from the Subject, or Incidents of the Fable ; as that of Oedipus from his excessive Curiosity ; or that of Orestes, when he discovers Iphigenia by a Letter sent by Pylades, which it was natural for her to send on that Occasion.

Thus I have laid down the chief Rules and Observations relating to the Drama, as they have been deliver'd to us by the greatest Critics ancient and modern : But the Reader will excuse my not giving him an Example of Tragedy, for the Reason mention'd at the Conclusion of the foregoing Chapter. Whoever would thoroughly understand the Nature of this Part of Dramatic Poesy, let him carefully study Shakespear, Otway, Lee, Rowe, Dryden, and other Tragic Writers of establish'd Reputation.—We now come to the Epic Poem, the most difficult of all others.

C H A P. XII.

Of the EPIC or HEROIC Poem.

Q. WHAT is an Epic Poem ?

A. It is a Discourse invented with Art, to form the Manners, by Instructions disguised under the Allegory of an important Action, related in Verse, in a probable, entertaining, and surprising Manner.

Q. What distinguishes an Epic from a Dramatic Poem ?

A. Its

A. Its being a Narration, that is, related by the Poet, not acted by Persons introduced for that Purpose.

Q. Which are the chief Things to be consider'd in an Epic Poem ?

A. The first is the Fable, that is, the Form and artful Representation of the Action, which is the Matter of the Poem ; and as the Action is more or less perfect, so is the Fable. The Action in an Epic Poem, as well as in Tragedy must be One, not all the Actions of a Person's Life ; and on this principal Action must all the Episodes, or Under Actions, be dependent. It must likewise be entire, that is, compleat in all its Parts ; or, as Aristotle describes it, have a Beginning, a Middle, and an End. Nothing should go before, be intermix'd with, or follow this main Action, but what is related to it ; nor should any single Step be omitted in that just and regular Process which it must be supposed to take from its Origin to its Consummation. The Epic Action ought also to be great, suitable to the Dignity of Princes, Heroes, and illustrious Persons, and to the very Nature of an Heroic Poem. As to its Duration, it is not circumscrib'd within any limited Time; but the warmer and more violent the Action is, the less must be its Continuance: Thus the Iliad, whose Subject is the Anger of Achilles, contains only forty seven Days; but the Æneid, whose Hero is of a quite different Character, takes up almost seven Years.

Q. What are the Rules relating to the Manners, Sentiments, and Diſtion of an Heroic Poem?

A. The Manners and Sentiments fall under the same Rules as those of Tragedy: And as to the Diſtion, it ought to be perspicuous, but at the same time figurative, noble, and sublime. — See
M. Boi-

M. Boileau's Thoughts upon Epic Poetry in the following Verses :

Would you your Reader never should be tir'd ?
 Chuse some great Hero fit to be admir'd,
 In Courage signal, and in Virtue bright ;
 Let ev'n his Imperfections give Delight ;
 Let his great Actions our Attention bind :
 Like Cæsar, or like Scipio, frame his Mind ;
 And not like Oedipus's perjur'd Race :
 A common Conqueror is a Theme too base.

Be your Beginning plain, and take good Heed
 Too soon you mount not on the airy Steed ;
 Nor tell your Reader, in a thund'ring Verse,
I sing the Conqueror of the Universe.

What can an Author after this produce ?
The lab'ring Mountain must bring forth a Mouse.

Chuse not your Tale of Incidents too full ;
 Too much Variety may make it dull.
Achilles' Rage alone, when wrought with Skill,
 Abundantly does a whole Iliad fill.

Be your Narrations lively, short, and smart ;
 In your Descriptions shew your noblest Art :
 'Tis there your Poetry may be employ'd ;
 But ev'ry trivial Circumstance avoid.
 Let no mean Objects stay the curious Sight ;
 Allow your Work a just and noble Flight.

With

With Figures numberless your Story grace,
 And ev'ry Thing in beauteous Colours trace :
 At once you may be pleasing and sublime,
 And scorn a heavy melancholy Rhyme.

Thus Homer's Works vast Treasures do unfold,
 And whatsoe'er he touches turns to Gold.
 All in his Hands new Beauty does acquire ;
 He always pleases, and can never tire.
 A happy Warmth he ev'ry where may boast,
 Nor is he in too long Digressions lost.
 His Verses without Rule a Method find,
 And of themselves appear in Order join'd.
 All without Trouble answers his Intent,
 Each Syllable still tending to th'Event.
 Let his Example your Endeavours raise ;
 To love his Writings is a Kind of Praise.

To say much more upon this Subject would swell our Work beyond its intended Size, and be of very little Service to the Generality of Readers, the Epic Poem being not to be undertaken but by a most elevated and uncommon
 Genius, such a one as does not appear in the World in the Compass of many Ages. Homer, Virgil, Milton, and Tasso,

Tasso, are the chief, if not the only Epic Poets that three thousand Years have produced ; for tho' several others have attempted this sublime Species of Poetry, they have only shewn their own Rashness, and how unequal they were to such an arduous Enterprize.

The Length of an Epic Poem does not permit me to insert one here ; but I cannot leave the Subject without quoting a few Passages from Homer, Virgil, and Milton, to give the Reader a Taste, as it were, of the innumerable Beauties of their wonderful Performances. That Episode, wherein Hector, before he engages, takes leave of his Wife Andromache, and embraces his young Son Astyanax, is one of the most beautiful and pathetic in the whole Iliad, the Poet having there assembled all that Love, Grief, and Compassion could inspire, and shewn that his Genius was no less capable of touching the Heart

Heart with Tenderneſs, than of firing it with Glory. Heſtor not finding Andromache at home, is haſtening to the Field, and accidentally meets her at one of the Gates of the City.

Heſtor, this heard, return'd without Delay ;
 Swift thro' the Town he trod his former Way,
 Thro' Streets of Palaces and Walks of State,
 And met the Mourner at the Scæan Gate.
 With Haſte to meet him ſprung the joyful Fair,
 His blameleſs Wife, Action's wealthy Heir :
 The Nurse ſtood near, in whoſe Embraces preſt,
 His only Hope hung ſmiling at her Breaſt,
 Whom each ſoft Charm and early Grace adorn,
 Fair as the new-born Star that gilds the Morn.
 Silent the Warrior ſmil'd, and pleas'd reſign'd
 To tender Paſſions all his mighty Mind :
 His beauteous Princeſs caſt a mournful Look,
 Hung on his Hand, and then dejected ſpoke ;
 Her Boſom labour'd with a boding Sigh,
 And the big Tear ſtood trembling in her Eye.

Too daring Prince ! ah, whither doſt thou run ?
 Ah too forgetful of thy Wife and Son !
 And think'ſt thou not how wretched we ſhall be,
 A Widow I, an helpleſs Orphan he !

For

For sure such Courage Length of Life denies,
 And thou must fall thy Virtue's Sacrifice.
Greece in her single Heroes strove in vain ;
 Now Hosts oppose thee, and thou must be slain !
 Oh, grant me, Gods, ere Hector meets his Doom,
 All I can ask of Heav'n, an early Tomb !
 So shall my Days in one sad Tenor run,
 And end with Sorrows as they first begun.
 No Parent now remains my Grief to share,
 No Father's Aid, no Mother's tender Care.

After having made a pretty long Digression upon the Greatness of her past Calamities in the Loss of her Parents and seven Brothers, she thus proceeds :

Yet while my Hector still survives, I see
 My Father, Mother, Brethren, all in thee.
 Alas ! my Parents, Brothers, Kindred, all,
 Once more will perish if my Hector fall.
 Thy Wife, thy Infant, in thy Danger share :
 Oh prove a Husband's and a Father's Care !
 Let others in the Field their Arms employ,
 But stay my Hector here, and guard his Troy.

Hector having answer'd Andromache in a Manner equally noble and affectionate, — Th'il-

— Th'illustrious Chief of Troy

Stretch'd his fond Arms to clasp the lovely Boy.
 The Babe clung crying to his Nurse's Breast,
 Scar'd at the dazzling Helm and nodding Crest.
 With secret Pleasure each fond Parent smil'd,
 And Hector hasted to relieve his Child,
 The glitt'ring Terrors from his Brows unbound,
 And plac'd the beaming Helmet on the Ground :
 Then kiss'd the Child, and lifting high in Air,
 Thus to the Gods prefer'd a Father's Pray'r.

O thou, whose Glory fills th'æthereal Throne,
 And all ye deathless Pow'rs, protect my Son !
 Grant him, like me, to purchase just Renown,
 To guard the Trojans, to defend the Crown,
 Against his Country's Foes the War to wage,
 And rise the Hector of the future Age !

So when, triumphant from successful Toils,
 Of Heroes slain he bears the reeking Spoils,
 Whole Hosts may hail him with deserv'd Acclaim,
 And say, This Chief transcends his Father's Fame ;
 While, pleas'd amidst the gen'ral Shouts of Troy,
 His Mother's conscious Heart o'erflows with Joy.

He spoke, and fondly gazing on her Charms,
 Restor'd the pleasing Burden to her Arms :
 Soft on her fragrant Breast the Babe she laid,
 Hush'd to repose, and with a Smile survey'd,
 The troubled Pleasure soon chastis'd by Fear,
 She mingled with the Smile a tender Tear.

Never (as the excellent Translator observes) was a finer Piece of Painting than this. Hector extends his Arms to embrace his Child, who, affrighted at the glittering of his Helmet and the Nodding of the Plume, shrinks back into the Bosom of his Nurse. The Chief unbraces his Helmet, lays it on the Ground, takes the Infant in his Arms, lifts him towards Heaven, and offers a Prayer for him to the Gods; then returns him to his Mother Andromache, who receives him with a Smile of Pleasure, but at the same Time her Fears for her Husband make her burst into Tears. After another short Speech, wherein Hector endeavours to allay his Wife's Affliction, and advises her to mind her domestic Employments, while he obeys the Call of Honour, and acts in the proper Character of a Hero,

— — The glorious Chief resumes
 His tow'ry Helmet, black with shading Plumes;
 His Princess parts with a prophetic Sigh,
 Unwilling parts, and oft reverts her Eye
 That stream'd at ev'ry Look; then, moving slow, Sought her own Palace, and indulg'd her Woe.

I now come to Virgil, who has copied many of Homer's Beauties, and frequently surpass'd the Original. It is not my Business to enter into a Comparison between these two Poets, or to determine which is the noblest and most perfect Composition of the Kind, the Iliad or the Æneid. Each Poet has his peculiar Character and Excellencies; and if Homer had more Fire and Fertility of Invention, it is allow'd that Virgil far exceeded him in the Accuracy of his Judgment.—But to pursue our present Design: The first Passage I shall take from Virgil, (I mean from Mr. Pitt's excellent Translation) is that noble Description of a Storm which Æolus

Æolus raises at the Request of Juno, in order to destroy Æneas's Fleet. The God having pierced with his Spear the Mountain where the Winds were kept in Confinement, they rush out with the utmost Impetuosity and Fury.

The Winds, embattled, as the Mountain rent,
Flew all at once impetuous thro' the Vent :
Earth, in their Course, with giddy Whirls they sweep,

Rush to the Seas, and bare the Bosom of the Deep :
East, West, and South, all black with Tempests,
roar,

And roll vast Billows to the trembling Shore.

The Cordage cracks ; with unavailing Cries

The Trojans mourn, while sudden Clouds arise,

And ravish from their Sight the Splendor of the Skies. }
}

Night hovers o'er the Floods ; the Day retires ;

The Heav'ns flash thick with momentary Fires ;

Loud Thunders shake the Poles ; from ev'ry Place

Grim Death appear'd, and glar'd in ev'ry Face.

The Account of Neptune's appeasing the Storm, and the Simile introduced

O

by

by the Poet on that Occasion, are likewise extremely beautiful.

He spoke, and speaking chas'd the Clouds away,
 Hush'd the loud Billows, and restor'd the Day.
 With his huge Trident the majestic God
 Clear'd the wild Syrtes, and compos'd the Flood :
 Then mounted on his radiant Car he rides,
 And wheels along the Level of the Tides.
 As when Sedition fires th'ignoble Crowd,
 And the wild Rabble storms, and thirsts for Blood ;
 Of Stones and Brands a mingled Tempest flies,
 With all the sudden Arms that Rage supplies :
 If some grave Sire appears amid the Strife,
 In Morals strict and Innocence of Life,
 All stand attentive, while the Sage controuls
 Their Wrath, and calms the Tumult of their Souls.

So did the roaring Deeps their Rage compose,
 When the great Father of the Floods arose.
 Rapt by his Steeds, he flies in open Day,
 Throws up the Reins, and skims the wat'ry Way.

Virgil's Description of the Silence of the Night, in the fourth Book of the Æneid, is deservedly admired, being one of the most elegant and natural in the whole Poem. 'Twas

'Twas Night ; and, weary with the Toils of Day,
In soft Repose the whole Creation lay.

The Murmurs of the Groves and Surges die,
The Stars roll solemn thro' the glowing Sky ;
Wide o'er the Fields a brooding Silence reigns,
The Flocks lie stretch'd along the flow'ry Plains ;
The furious Savages that haunt the Woods,
The painted Birds, the Fishes of the Floods ;
All, all, beneath the gen'ral Darknefs, share
In Sleep a soft Forgetfulness of Care.

Let us now look into Milton's Paradise Lost, a Work which is an Honour to our Country, and is at least equal to either the Iliad or the Aeneid in all the Beauties that are essential to Epic Poetry. As Milton's Genius (says Mr. Addison) was wonderfully turn'd to the Sublime, his Subject is the noblest that could have enter'd into the Mind of Man. Every Thing that is truly great and astonishing has a Place in it : The whole System of the intellectual World ; the Chaos, and the Creation ; Heaven, Earth, and Hell, enter into the Constitution of his Poem. The Greatness of his Thoughts is answerable to the Greatness of his Subject ; and by a Choice of the noblest Words and Phrases, he has carried our Language to a higher Pitch than any English Poet ever did before him, and made the Sublimity of his Stile equal to that of his Sentiments. He has likewise enrich'd our Language with several Words of his own coining, especially compound Epithets, in which he seems to have imitated Homer. And here let me observe, that Epithets judiciously chosen and properly applied are some of the most agreeable Ornaments of Poetry, which without them would be lifeless and insipid ; but then, I say, they must be used with Discretion and suited to the Nature of the Subject, not forced into the Verse merely to help out the Measure, without any Justness or Propriety ; of which Fault, if I am not mistaken, Homer is too often guilty.

As

As Milton's Poem is written in Blank Verse, he has naturaliz'd several foreign Modes of Speech, which Rhyme will seldom admit of; as placing the Adjective after the Substantive, and other Transpositions. This Turn of Expression is not only agreeable to the Practice of the Ancients, but even in the English Language, adds much to the Grandeur and Majesty of a Poem, when managed with Care and Judgment. The Poet has also interspers'd several old Words throughout his Work, which makes it appear the more venerable, and gives it the greater Air of Antiquity. Upon the whole, Milton's Stile is admirable, tho' in some Places it has too much Stiffness and Obscurity.—But let him speak for himself.

In the first Book of this Poem, after the dreadful Overthrow and Fall of the Angels from Heaven, we have a Description of Satan's Posture on the burning Lake, his rising from it, and his Shield and Spear, which is an Instance of the Poet's lofty Imagination, and sufficient to strike Terror into the Mind of the Reader.

Thus Satan talking to his nearest Mate,
 With Head up-lift above the Wave, and Eyes
 That sparkling blaz'd, his other Parts beside Prone on the Flood, extended long and large,
 Lay floating many a Rood — —
 Forthwith upright he rears from off the Pool
 His mighty Stature ; on each Hand the Flames Driv'n backward slope their pointing Spires, and roll'd

In Billows, leave i'th' Midst a horrid Vale.
 Then with expanded Wings he steers his Flight
 Aloft, incumbent on the dusky Air
 That felt unusual Weight — —
 — — — His pond'rous Shield,
 Ethereal Temper, massy, large, and round,
 Behind him cast ; the broad Circumference
 Hung on his Shoulders like the Moon, whose Orb
 Thro' Optic Glafs the Tuscan Artists view
 At Ev'ning, from the Top of Fesole,
 Or in Valderno, to descry new Lands,

Rivers, or Mountains, on her spotted Globe.
 His Spear (to equal which the tallest Pine,
 Hewn on Norwegian Hills to be the Mast
 Of some great Admiral, were but a Wand)
 He walk'd with, to support uneasy Steps
 Over the burning Marl — —

Satan's Speech to the Sun is one of the finest that is ascrib'd to him in the whole Poem, the Opening of which is very bold and noble.

O thou, that with surpassing Glory crown'd
 Look'st from thy sole Dominion like the God
 Of this new World ; at whose Sight all the Stars
 Hide their diminish'd Heads ; to thee I call,
 But with no friendly Voice, and add thy Name,
 O Sun! to tell thee how I hate thy Beams,
 That bring to my Remembrance from what State
 I fell, how glorious once above thy Sphere.

The Description of Satan preparing himself for Combat is truly sublime, and equal to that of Discord in Homer, or of Fame in Virgil.

— — — Satan alarm'd,
 Collecting all his Might, dilated stood
 Like Teneriff, or Atlas, unremov'd :
 His Stature reach'd the Sky, and on his Crest
 Sat Horror plum'd — —

But perhaps there is not a greater Instance of Sublimity in the whole Poem, (as an excellent Critic has observ'd) than where the Messiah is represented at the Head of his Angels, as calming the Confusion of the Chaos, riding into the Midst of it, and drawing the first Out-line of the Creation.

On heav'nly Ground they stood, and from the Shore

They view'd the vast immeasurable Abyss,
 Outrageous as a Sea, dark, wasteful, wild ;
 Up from the Bottom turn'd by furious Winds
 And surging Waves, as Mountains to assault
 Heav'n's Height, and with the Centre mix the Pole.

Silence, ye troubled Waves, and thou Deep, Peace !
 Said then th'omnific Word, your Discord end :
 Nor stay'd ; but, on the Wings of Cherubim
 Uplifted,

Uplifted, in Paternal Glory rode
 Far into Chaos, and the World unborn ;
 For Chaos heard his Voice. Him all his Train
 Follow'd in bright Proceſſion, to behold
 Creation, and the Wonders of his Might.
 Then ſtay'd the fervid Wheels, and in his Hand
 He took the golden Compaſſes, prepar'd
 In God's eternal Store to circumscribe
 This Universe, and all created Things.
 One Foot he center'd, and the other turn'd
 Round, through the vaſt Profundity obſcure ;
 And ſaid, Thus far extend, thus far thy Bounds,
This be thy juſt Circumference, O World !

The Meſſiah's Return into Heaven, after having finiſh'd his great Work of Creation, is repreſented with the ſame wonderful Sublimity both of Sentiments and Expreſſion.

— — The Creator from his Work
 Deſiſting, tho' unwearied, up return'd,
 Up to the Heav'n of Heav'ns, his high Abode,
 Thence to behold this new-created World,
 Th' Addition of his Empire, how it ſhew'd
 In Proſpect from his Throne, how good, how fair, Anſw'ring his great Idea : Up he rode,
 Follow'd

Follow'd with Acclamation, and the Sound
 Symphonious of ten thousand Harps, that tun'd
 Angelic Harmonies ; the Earth, the Air
 Resounding — — — —
 The Heav'ns and all the Constellations rung,
 The Planets in their Station list'ning stood,
 While the bright Pomp ascended jubilant.
Open, ye everlasting Gates, they sung,
Open, ye Heav'ns, your living Doors ; let in
The great Creator from his Work return'd Magnificent, his six Days Work, a World !

The Description of Adam and Eve in their State of Innocence, as they first appear'd to Satan, is exquisitely drawn ; and well might the Poet represent the fallen Angel as gazing upon this happy Pair with Astonishment and Envy.

Two of far nobler Shape erect and tall,
 God-like erect ! with native Honour clad,
 In naked Majesty, seem'd Lords of all ;
 And worthy seem'd : for in their Looks divine
 The Image of their glorious Maker shone,
 Truth, Wisdom, Sanctitude severe and pure ;
 Severe, but in true filial Freedom plac'd :
 For Contemplation be and Valour form'd,

For

For Softness she and sweet attractive Grace ;
He for God only, she for God in him.
 His fair large Front, and Eye sublime, declar'd
 Absolute Rule ; and Hyacinthen Locks
 Round from his parted Forelock manly hung
 Clust'ring, but beneath his Shoulders broad.
 She, as a Veil, down to her slender Waist
 Her unadorned golden Tresses wore
 Dishevel'd, but in wanton Ringlets wav'd.
 So pass'd they naked on, nor shun'd the Sight
 Of God or Angel, for they thought no Ill :
 So Hand in Hand they pass'd, the loveliest Pair
 That ever since in Love's Embraces met.

After the Fall of our first Parents from their State of Innocence and Happiness, the Poet has fill'd their Speeches with such Sentiments as not only interest the Reader in their Afflictions, but raise in him the most melting Passions of Humanity and Commiseration. Who can forbear sympathizing with Adam in his Distress, whilst he wishes for Death, and bewails his Existence ?

— — — — Why delays
 His Hand to execute, what his Decree
 Fix'd on this Day? Why do I over-live?
 Why am I mock'd with Death, and lengthen'd out
 To deathless Pain? How gladly would I meet
 Mortality my Sentence, and be Earth
 Insensible! how glad would lay me down,
 As in my Mother's Lap! There should I rest
 And sleep secure; his dreadful Voice no more
 Would thunder in my Ears; no Fear of worse
 To me and to my Offspring would torment me
 With cruel Expectation — —

The Complaint of Eve, upon hearing that she was to be remov'd from the Garden of Paradise, is particularly beautiful; the Thoughts being full of Softness, and suitable to a Woman's Character.

Must I then leave thee, Paradise? thus leave
 Thee, native Soil, these happy Walks and Shades,
 Fit Haunt of Gods? where I had Hope to spend
 Quiet, tho' sad, the Respite of that Day
 That must be mortal to us both. O Flow'rs,
 That never will in other Climate grow,
 My early Visitation, and my last

At Ev'n, which I bred up with tender Hand
 From the first op'ning Bud, and gave you Names ;
 Who now shall rear you to the Sun, or rank
 Your Tribes, and water from th'ambrosial Fount ?
 Thee, lastly, nuptial Bow'r, by me adorn'd
 With what to Sight or Smell was sweet ; from thee
 How shall I part, and whither wander down
 Into a lower World, to this obscure
 And wild ? How shall we breathe in other Air
 Less pure, accusom'd to immortal Fruits ?

The Speech of Adam upon the same Occasion abounds with Sentiments equally moving, but of a more masculine and elevated Turn. The following Passage in it is remarkably sublime and poetical.

This most afflicts me, that departing hence
 As from his Face I shall be hid, depriv'd
 His blessed Count'nance. Here I could frequent,
 With Worship, Place by Place where he vouchsaf'd
 Presence divine ; and to my Sons relate,
 On this Mount he appear'd, under this Tree
 Stood visible, among these Pines his Voice
 I heard, here with him at this Fountain talk'd :
 So many graceful Altars I would rear

Of

Of grassy Turf, and pile up ev'ry Stone
 Of Lustre from the Brook, in Memory
 Or Monument to Ages, and thereon
 Offer sweet-smelling Gums, and Fruits, and Flow'rs.
 In yonder nether World where shall I seek
 His bright Appearances, or Footsteps trace ?
 For tho' I fled him angry, yet recall'd
 To Life prolong'd, and promis'd Race, I now
 Gladly behold tho' but his utmost Skirts
 Of Glory, and far off his Steps adore.

I have now done with Milton ; but I beg Leave (tho' perhaps it may seem foreign to the present Purpose) to cite one Passage from another of our Countrymen, I mean Mr. Thomson, who has happily imitated the Stile and Numbers of Milton, as well as the Beauty and Sublimity of his Sentiments.— In his Poem call'd Summer, he thus finely describes the Pleasures of the Morning, and the Rising of the Sun.

Falsely luxurious, will not Man awake ;
 And, springing from the Bed of Sloth, enjoy
 The

The cool, the fragrant, and the silent Hour,
 To Meditation due, and sacred Song ?
 For is there ought in Sleep can charm the Wise ?
 To lie in dead Oblivion, losing half
 The fleeting Moments of too short a Life ?
 Total Extinction of th' enlighten'd Soul !

Or else to ferv'rish Vanity alive,
 Wilder'd and tossing through distemper'd Dreams ?
 Who would in such a gloomy State remain
 Longer than Nature craves, when ev'ry Muse
 And ev'ry blooming Pleasure wait without,
 To bless the wildly devious Morning-Walk ?

But yonder comes the powerful King of Day
 Rejoicing in the East. The less'ning Cloud,
 The kindling Azure, and the Mountain's Brow
 Illum'd with fluid Gold, his near Approach
 Betoken glad. Lo ! now apparent all,
 Assant the dew-bright Earth, and colour'd Air,
 He looks in boundless Majesty abroad ;
 And sheds the shining Day, that burnish'd plays
 On Rocks, and Hills, and Tow'rs, and wandring Streams,

High-gleaming from afar. Prime Chearer, Light !
 Of all material Beings first and best !
 Efflux divine ! Nature's resplendent Robe !
 Without whose resting Beauty all were wrapt
 In unessential Gloom : And thou, O Sun !

Soul

Soul of surrounding Worlds, in whom best seen
Shines out thy Maker, may I sing of thee !

Thus I have gone through the Task
I propos'd to myself, and have endeavour'd to give the Reader some Idea of every Species of Poetry that is worth his Notice. As to the Acrostic, the Echo, and such Kinds of false Wit, it would be spending Time to no Purpose to say any Thing about them.

F I N I S.

100

100

100

100

