PRINTED BY ORDER OF GOVERNMENT
AT THE GOVERNMENT CENTRAL PRESS.

1881.

PREFATORY NOTE.

THE descriptive notes in this memorandum were prepared in February 1880, and are necessarily fragmentary, as being supplementary to the information in The Cave Temples of India, and chiefly intended to preserve additional notes which have either come to hand since that work was sent to the press, or which could not conveniently be wrought into it. In several cases their object is chiefly to indicate distinctly the position of each inscription.

The inscriptions from the various caves have been prepared by Paṇḍit Bhagwānlāl Indrajī and myself, as explained in the text. I am indebted, however, to Dr. G. Bühler, C.I.E., for notes and suggestions; to J. F. Fleet, Esq., C.S., for the preparation of the Mārasimha grant and the revisal of the proofs of the three inscriptions that follow it; and to Dr. E. W. West for the translations of the Pahlavi inscriptions at Kaṇheri which were supplied to the Indian Antiquary, while these notes were passing through the press, and incorporated at p. 63; and also for the use of numerous notes and drawings from which part of the materials used have been drawn. The impressions of the Kuḍā inscriptions taken by the Archæological Survey in 1877-78, being in England, Dr. West's very excellent copies have been employed in their place.

It is the first time that any large collection of the cave-inscriptions has been made in one paper, and it is only to be regretted that want of time has prevented the completion of them here. The Nāsik, Kaṇheri, and Nānāghāt inscriptions yet remain to be translated; but fac-similes have been taken of all except of a portion of those at Kaṇheri, and these, I hope, will be made this season.

From the abraded and fragmentary character of many of these inscriptions, it will be understood that the translations are to a certain extent only tentative. They suggest many points of interest which must be discussed elsewhere: it has been my main object to supply the materials for such discussion. The fac-similes alone ought to be valuable as a contribution to Indian palæography, especially from the later Maurya period about B.C. 200 to the 7th century A.D.

The plates were printed off and a large portion of the following pages were in type before I left Bombay on 1st May last, but only about a third of the matter had been printed off. Since then, owing to my distance from the press and other causes, the printing has been carried to completion more slowly than I had expected.

Archæological Surveyor.

1.—NOTES ON THE ROCK-TEMPLES AT MHÂR AND KUDÂ AND THEIR INSCRIPTIONS.

THE small village of Pâl is about a mile north-west from Mhâr. Near it is a group of caves excavated in the almost perpendicular scarp of a hill, and numbering about twenty-eight in all. As they have never been described in any detail, the following rough notes may be of use. Beginning from the south end of the series :—

Excavation No. I is the largest in the group. It is unfinished and seems to have been suddenly stopped (see plan, Plate I). A seat $1\frac{1}{2}$ feet high runs round three sides of the main chamber. Floor of cells 3 feet above the hall. Right side of the hall was being extended by cutting away a layer of 8 or 9 inches. E is a raised portion of the verandah floor; it seems as if the floor was being lowered a foot, and a part at E left unfinished. The shrine contains a rough square mass, as if for a dâgoba. Upon the front of it at D is rudely sculptured a Buddha in bas-relief. On the sides at B and C are standing attendants. This is the only sculpture in any of the caves here. There are six rough columns in the verandah: the left one (A) is finished (see sketch). Most of the other five columns have a bracket left at the top.

In front of Cave I, at a lower level, are three tanks 14 or 15 feet square each. Two have small square entrances, the other is perhaps partly broken in.

Cave II. See plan: inner cell unfinished.

Cave III. The most perfect of the series. At F is the entrance to a well. A stair-case leads not only to No. IV, but still lower to the level of the tanks in front of No. I. Its exit has been ruined, but the steps there are now built up with loose stones. The inner verandah is now chunamed and panelled (see plate). The door into the hall has sockets for posts. An irregular recess at the right end of the verandah contains a seat, beaded, and has pilasters; seats inside the parapet also beaded; column of verandah as in the plate.

No. IV. Verandah has two columns—broken. Sockets for posts in the floor and ceiling, just inside the front door. The partition wall is broken through in two places.

No. V. Verandah has two octagonal columns with bases 20 inches square. Square pilasters both ornamented in the style so common at Kanheri and Junnar (see plate). Parapet with seat inside, between pillars and pilasters. Front of verandah is smoothly polished and still very perfect. The hall is rough and has been plastered with clay. A seat runs round three sides 18 inches high, with plain beading. Front door has sockets in the floor and in the top of door jamb for posts. The front of this cave has been almost exactly similar to No. III, and to one or two others in the series.

No. VI. A small unfinished cell, about the same level as the tanks in front of No. I.

No. VII. A larger unfinished cell, having a tank at the left side of the front, half filled with mud.

No. VIII. A larger irregular cave with verandah.

No. IX. Two carved pillars in front are broken away. Capitals are of the Nâsik and Junnar lotâ-shape type. Pilasters ornamented as those in No. V, which also occurs in another cave. The hall has a seat round back and two sides : three cells in the left and as many in the right side : large recess from the hall in the back wall for dâgoba, which has been removed, but the umbrella remains attached to the roof : on each side of this recess is a cell. There are small holes as if for a screen across the front of the recess. All the cell doors have sockets for frames as in No. III. The following inscription of four lines and two letters is on the back of the hall to the right :—

MHAR INSCRIPTION.¹

Translation.

“To the Perfect one! Prince Kâṇabhoja Vheṇupâlita's⁵ Leṇa, chaityagrîha, and eight (8)⁶ cells; this much work is endowed, and two (2) cisterns on each side of the Leṇa, also a passage connected⁷ with the Leṇa are presented. It is a charitable gift of that Kumâra (or Prince).”⁸

² Read ति.

³ I believe that the writer has by mistake omitted the letter ṇa after le in this word.

⁴ Or ० लु०.

⁶ After the figure 8, a letter like vi is visible, but it seems to be a mistake for ti; ti in Prâkrit is used for Sanskrit iti, “this much,” “so much.”

⁷ Aliganaka or aluganaka might be a corruption of the Sanskrit âlaganaka, “attached,” which seems to be a suitable word in the place.

⁸ The characters of this record seem to be of about the time of Vâsishṭhîputra the Andhrabhṛitya.

There are ten more caves at this level,—one, a small open cell with a dâgoba 5 or 6 feet high.

In the next level, the seventh contains a short inscription at the right end of the verandah, and at the other end of the same verandah is a small dâgoba in relief. One of the preceding six is a cell with a dâgoba, as above.

The most northerly cave next to this last and containing the inscription, is at a much lower level—the lowest in the series.

There are 27 or 28 caves in all, exclusive of tanks. Nos. II and III are the highest. They are in a straight portion of the hill, with an easterly aspect, less than a mile from Mhâr. The parapets in front of two of the undescribed caves are carved in the “rail pattern” with thin uprights.¹

At the foot of the hill, under some trees, are three fallen dâgobas, which must have stood close to where they now lie.

Kôl,—a small village across the Sâvitri, south-east from Mhâr. In a hill behind it are two small groups of caves—the first to the north-east of the village consists of a few dilapidated cells; the other to the south-east contains one cell larger than any of the others, but all are apparently unfinished. In this second group are three short inscriptions. One of them reads thus:—

*Transcript.*²

Gahapatiputasa seṭhisa.

agharakhitasa degadhamam lena(m).

Translation.

“A cave, the religious gift of Śeṭh Sagharakhita (Samgharakshita), son of Gahapati.”

In a hill to the north-east of Mhâr are a few cells and cisterns, and there is a cell in a hill to the south, near the road leading to Nâgotanâ.

Kuḍâ is on the east side of the north-east arm of the Râjapur creek. A small branch creek runs up through mangrove bushes nearly to the village. The caves are about 150 to 200 feet above the sea level in a hill which is about 250 feet high at this point. They face to west-south-west, and the whole 26 caves are within about 200 yards in two lines of elevation,—Nos. I to XV below, and Nos. XVI to XXVI some forty feet higher up the hill. The view from the caves is splendid, the wide expanse of the Râjapur creek, like a mountain lake, some 5 miles wide, is right in front, entirely shut in by hills from 200 to 600 feet in height, which in most places run down nearly to the water, and a rocky islet occupies nearly the centre of the seeming lake. From the top of the hill, the hill fort of Ṭhala is plainly visible, and another to the north. The creek is called Kâlwa khâḍî, and the hill north-east of the caves Mohola.

¹ I have largely availed myself of Mr. A. A. West's very full notes in this account; the plate also is from his drawings. Conf. Dr. Wilson's account, J. B. B. R. A. S., vol. III., pt. ii, p. 43.

² Translated by Dr. G. Bühler, C. I. E.

Cave No. I. Debris in front 2 feet higher than the floor of cave; little or no court. Front of the verandah, broken away; has had two plain octagonal columns and square pilasters with ornament—as in Mhâr caves—broken. At the left end is a plain cell with recessed bench or bed towards the back of the cave. Inscription (No. 1)¹ in two lines² is over the door of this, and extends along the back as far as the central door (2nd plate). It is deeply cut on a smooth surface and very distinct; the upper line seems complete, but some letters are wanting at the end of the second line, where the wall is broken away.

INSCRIPTION No. 1.

Translation.

“ This cave is the meritorious gift of Sivabhûti, the son of Sulasadata and Utaradatâ, and writer to Mahâbhoja Mandava Khandapâlita,^५ son of Mahâbhoja Sadageri Vijayâ—together with his wife Namdâ.”

Remarks.

Mahâbhoja is a title probably equivalent to râja.^६ It occurs also in No. 2 of the Bedâsâ inscriptions, under the form Mahâbhoya.

Sadageri is apparently connected with the epithet Sadâkara, given to Mahâbhoja Sudamsana in inscription 19: it may be a family name or title.

Mandava may be either the Sanskrit Mândavya or Mândapa. In the first case the epithet would characterise Khandapâlita as a member of a Brahmanical gotra or race; in the second it might indicate that he was lord of a town called Mandapa. This latter seems the preferable explanation as Mândapa is a very common name for towns all over India, and three small villages called Mâdâd or Mandâdh, i.e., probably Mândapagadh, lie close to Kudâ. Moreover, we have Bhag-Mândala and Kol-Mândala or Mândana near the mouth of the Sâvitri or Bânkot River, which appear to correspond to the ‘Mandabad’ of Barbosa (1514); and a little to the south of the same river are Madangadh and Mândivali.^७

^१ The accompanying plates of inscriptions are from a series of very excellent copies, made many years ago by the Messrs. West and very kindly handed over to me with all their notes and drawings by Dr. E. West and A. A. West, Esq.

^२ Prof. H. Jacobi of Munster has transliterated and translated this inscription in India Antiquary, vol. VII., p. 253.

^३ The ka wants the cross stroke in the copy, but the stone is injured here and there can be no doubt that the letter is ka.

^४ The translations and remarks are the work of Paṇḍit Bhagwânâlâl Indrajî: I have rendered them into English.

^५ Sans. Skandapâlita.

^६ See Prof. Jacobi's remarks, Ind. Ant., vol. VII., p. 254.

^७ The Mandagara of Ptolemy is to be sought for in this neighbourhood,

Vertical line of text or markings on the left side of the page.

Lenam at the end is broken away, but part of the letter le is still left.

The doorway in the centre is 7 feet wide, with sockets for door-posts. Plain square hall, leading at the back into an ante-chamber the full width of the hall, with two plain octagonal columns in front on a raised sill, and two square pilasters with the same ornament as the outer ones, but perfect: one of the columns fallen. The antechamber is plain, with remains of plaster on the walls. In the middle of the back is a 9½-feet doorway, without holes for wood-work: a bench runs round the ends and remainder of the back. The shrine is nearly square, with a middle-sized dâgoba in the centre.

No. II adjoins No. I and is on the same level; court very small. The front room or verandah has a door and a large open window; it has a recessed bench at the left end. Behind, towards the right side, is a cell with stone bed in the left side. Both doors have sockets for wooden frames, and there are traces of plaster on the walls of the outer room.

No. III, close adjoining, 1 foot lower level. Court small. On the left-hand side wall outside, is a fragment of an inscription (No. 2), being the ends of two lines deeply cut on a rough surface,—the rest is peeled off:—

INSCRIPTION No. 2.

Pâli.	Sanskrit.
.....भूतिसभूतेः
.....लेनंलयनम्॥

The first line ending in bhûtisa suggests the name of Sivabhûti, as in the first inscription. In the second lenam only is left. The cave was probably the gift of a member of the same family.

No. IV, about 12 feet to the right, and at 10 feet higher level; has a court with a bench on each side; steps up to the verandah, broken. The verandah has two octagonal pillars with square bases, and square pilasters with the same ornament as at Mhâr. A thin parapet joins each column with its corresponding pilaster, with rail pattern outside—the uprights carved with the ornament of the pilaster only doubled in the height. At the back of the verandah is a large central door, with a window on each side of it. Hall 1' 6" higher than the verandah—plain, square, with bench round back and two sides. Three recesses begun in the back wall with square pillars between them. No plaster in this cave, which was evidently never completed.

No. V close adjoining, and at 6 feet lower level; has a court with a tank of good water in a recess in the left. Inscription No. 3 is above the level of, and to the right hand of, this recess; it has been cut moderately deep on a rough surface, and is much weather-worn—many of the letters are very uncertain.

INSCRIPTION No. 3.

This is too much damaged to be decipherable. In the second line we might read:—

podhio be 2 deya dhamam.

“The charitable gift of two (2) cisterns.”

The 3rd letter resembles ba, the next is either hi or dhi, the lower stroke of the next letter is rather long for o, and the following two characters may be also misreadings in the copy.

Inscription No. 4 is on the opposite or right-hand wall : it has been deeply cut, but is so weather-worn that only a few letters at the ends of five lines can be made out.

INSCRIPTION No. 4.

This inscription is damaged : in the middle of the first line there is space for four letters, and this and the second are completed in the transcripts. The name of one of the donors in the 3rd line is lost. He was "an ascetic and disciple of the Thera (Bhadānta) Sivadata," and the other donor was "Sâtimitâ,¹ a female disciple."

Remark.

Thero, i.e. sthavira, is a term frequently applied to aged monks among the Buddhists and Jainas, and their names are always in the plural majestatis. Bhadānta is applied both to Bauddha and Jaina monks, and means "reverend," "worthy of worship." A vicarious form is bhayaṅta, (see below, inscription No. 25,) from which the Jaina Prākṛit form Bhaṅte has been derived.

The verandah has one square pillar to the right of the centre, and a pilaster at the left side. In the left end of the verandah is inscription No. 5. It is in six lines on a decaying surface, but only three letters are much injured.

INSCRIPTION No. 5.²

² This is Prof. Jacobi's 2nd inscription (Ind. Ant., vol. VII., p. 254).

³ Read भदंत. ⁴ Read ०तान ; the surface of the rock is injured here. ⁵ Read ०तुय.

⁶ Two letters ya-ma, added beyond the end of this line, are only lightly cut and look recent ; if inserted where the mark indicates they make Mayabodhî : if we read Mâtuya bodhi-ya it might be translated by "her female disciple's mother Bodhi and of her female disciple Asâlhamitâ."

Translation.

“To the Perfect! A Lena and cistern, the charitable gift of the female ascetic (or nun) Padumanikâ¹, daughter of Nâganikâ² the ascetic, the sister's daughter of the Thera Bhadañta Pâtimita³ and Bhadañta Âgimita,⁴ and, of her female disciples Bodhi and Asâhmitâ.⁵”

Remarks.

Siddham is here translated as an abridgment of Siddham namah.⁶ Buddhists and Jainas distinguish those persons who have arrived at the state of perfection by the name Siddhas. And it is a common practice among them to salute them at the commencement of any writing. This word is also found in the Brahmanical inscriptions of later date, and it is highly probable they derived it from the Buddhists. They apply the name, however, to their great Yogîs or sages. It is true that according to Pânini it is not grammatically correct to say siddham namah; still it is in common use. Both Buddhists and Brâhmanas teach their pupils to repeat the phrase before commencing their lessons in the alphabet.

At the right end of the verandah is a recessed bench. Behind the verandah at the left end is a small open room, with a bench on the right side; behind this is a cell with a bench or bed at the back; and to the left of this is another inner cell with a bench or bed on the right of it. In the right end of the verandah back wall a door leads into another cell, with a very small one beyond it having a recess in the back wall. There are traces of plaster on the walls and ceiling of this cave.

No. VI. Close adjoining the last and at 3 feet lower level, the next has a court in front with the head and forelegs of a standing elephant, 11 feet high, projecting from each side wall—that on the right nearly gone; trunk and tusks of the other broken. On the front of the cave, behind this left elephant, is a sculptured figure of Buddha, 18" high, seated on a throne with his feet on a lotos, over a wheel, with three deer on each side, and upheld by Nâga figures with others below (see 3rd plate,⁷ fig. 2). At each side of Buddha a chauri-bearer stands on a lotos, the left one being Avalokitêswara, holds a lotos stem with his left arm. Two Vidyâdharas hold a crown over Buddha's head; and above this is a segmental arc

⁶ Some scholars will differ from this opinion of the Pañdit's, which was also held by Dr. Stevenson.—The proper translation of siddham is 'hail!' In the phrase siddham namah or, as the Lekhâvalis have it, namah siddham, the word siddham refers to the well-known Sûtra siddhovarnasamâmnâyah, 'established (and auspicious) is the record of the letters.'—G. supported by makaras on each side, and two flying figures above it. Inscription (No. 6) is beneath to the left. It has been faintly cut and is much decayed.

INSCRIPTION No. 6.

[दे] यधर्मोयं संघोपसायिककार्यं हरि
.....पि.....प...स...ताम

This inscription is in a later alphabet than the preceding ones, and in Sanskrit. It is partly illegible. In the beginning we have [de] ya dharmoyam, 'this meritorious gift,' and then sa[m]ghopasāyikakārya, 'the honourable tranquillizer of the Saṅgha.' The rest is illegible.

The steps up are broken. The verandah has two octagonal pillars with square bases, and square pilasters. Between the pillars and pilasters is a thin parapet, ornamented outside with rail pattern, and with a bench on the inside as in Cave III at Nāsik— which cave belongs to about the same age as this.

On the left pilaster is a Buddha, seated cross-legged on a cushion, 13 inches high, with a chauri-bearer on each side standing on a lotos—the left one, Avalokitêśwara, holding a lotos stem with his left arm. Above is a segmental arch with Gandharvas on each side. The cushion rests on a high four-footed stool or table, between the legs of which is a lotos with a deer on each side of its stem. The legs of the seat stand on the ornament or semi-circular moulding at the bottom of the pilaster, which contains inscription (No. 7), and outside the lower end of each leg is a small kneeling figure with joined hands. The inscription is in four lines and some odd letters, faintly cut and indistinct.

On the inner side of this pilaster, the upper group of sculpture consists of a Buddha seated cross-legged, 8 inches high, with a standing chauriwâlâ on either hand. The lower group has a similar Buddha, 11 inches high, on a lotos, with two standing chauriwâlâs—the left one being Padmapāni. Under each side lotos is a kneeling figure with joined hands.

On the face of the right pilaster near the top are two 8-inch Buddhas seated on cushions, separated by a pillar, and with a kneeling figure in the outer lower corner of each compartment. Below these is a 13-inch Buddha seated on a sinhâsana with feet on lotos, and two chauriwâlâs, one with lotos as before and

Remarks.

Selarûpakamam (Sans. śailarûpakarma) refers to the figures⁴ in the back corners of the cave. The Sanskrit work rûpamaṇḍana, by Maṇḍana, treats of the construction of images, whence it is evident that rûpa refers technically to such figures.

In the back wall of the verandah is a central door and two large windows lighting the large square hall, which has a bench round both sides and the back. The back halves of each side wall of this room are sculptured, but like those already described they are all after-additions of much later date than the caves. On the left side wall are, first,—at the top, four 9-inch Buddhas seated cross-legged in the jñānamudrâ, or attitude of meditation, each in separate compartments. Under these are two groups, separated by a pilaster, each consisting of a 13-inch Buddha on a siṃhāsana with his feet on a lotos, and chauri-bearers as before; crown or tiara borne over his head by Vidyâdharas, and makâra-arch as before, with four Vidyâdharas carrying garlands. Below the lotoses are two deer, four kneeling figures to the left and six to the right. Below these are mouldings with two deer and a kirtimukh in alternate panels. Second,—Buddha seated cross-legged on lotos, 28 inches high, with chauriwâlâs, the left one holding his clothes on his hip with his left hand, right one holding a lotos stem with his left hand. Overhead a plain arch with a kneeling Vidyâdhara on each side, the left one holding some object and the right one a flower or fruit. Below, the stem of the central lotos is upheld by two Nâga figures cut off at midhigh, with two kneeling figures to the left and three to the right. Third,—above is a dâgoba in bas-relief; below, a Buddha in jñānamudrâ 15 inches high, on a lotos, with a standing chauri-bearer to the right. All three groups have remains of paint on them.

On the right wall, beginning from the left are: first, Buddha, 30 inches high, seated cross-legged on a lotos, with the usual chauriwâlâs on each side standing on lotoses. Overhead a plain arch with a Vidyâdhara on each side carrying a festoon. Below, the central lotos stem is supported by two Nâga figures, each on one knee, with a kneeling Nâganî behind him, and on the left another kneeling female behind, with a man kneeling behind her. On the right is only one other kneeling figure. Below the three on the left is inscription No. 10 in five lines pretty distinctly cut on a smooth surface in characters of the same type as those used in Nos. 6, 7, and 8, and in the Sanskrit language.

“ This meritorious gift of the Śākyaabhiṅshu Budhasiṅgha ; may the merit of it be for the attainment of supreme knowledge by father, mother, and Bhaṭārka, and then to the whole sentient world.”

Remarks.

Bhaṭāraka is a title applied to a Bauddha high priest : it was not so used in very early times, but by the later Digambara and Svetāmbara Jainas and Buddhists it came to be so employed, as it had been previously to kings, and again in more recent times even to a proud consequential person. Bhaṭārka seems to be a provincial and corrupt spelling of this word.

After this comes another group of sculpture, the same as the last as far as the Nāganis ; between the left Nāganī and left chauriwāla is inscription No. 11, and between the right hand ones is No. 12. They are but faintly cut.

Third : a Buddha, 19 inches high, same as the first down to the lotoses ; below, the Nāgas appear to have torn up the lotos stem and are bearing it aloft ; the Nāganis kneeling behind as before (see 3rd plate, fig. 3). At the back of the hall is a low screen wall supporting two octagonal pillars and pilasters with the Mhâr pattern on them. An entrance between them leads to the antechamber of the shrine, and a low parapet or rail behind the bench is carved with animals. The left side is shewn in the third plate, fig. 1. The other side has 1st, (from left,) a sârdûla driven by a dwarf holding its tail; 2nd, a maned tiger with a dwarf holding its tail and brandishing a club; 3rd, a bull similarly driven; and 4th, a tiger.¹

On the return of the back wall on each side, which meets this parapet, are two figures, male and female, similar to what we find on the front screens in the Chaitya Caves at Kanheri and Kârlê. In the left corner is a male 5' 4" high and female 5' 2," allowing for head-dresses, with a child holding the woman's foot at the right lower corner. The attitudes and dress of these and the corresponding pair (male 5' 4," female 5' 0,") in the right corner, are shewn in the fifth plate. Are they dancing? These seem older than any of the other wall sculptures.

The floor of the antechamber is level with the top of the bench in the hall, and had also benches on the inner sides of the thin parapets. At the left end is a cell benched on the right side; and just above this bench is an entrance, 18 inches square, into a smaller cell filled with stones and rubbish. A doorway, about 9 feet wide, leads into the shrine with a plain dâgoba in it, reaching to near the roof, and joined to it by the staff of the umbrella which is carved on the rock above. There are trees of plaster and painting on all the walls, roofs and columns of this cave.

No. VII. Close to the last and at 5 feet higher level is Cave VII, with a water tank to the right of the entrance. The court is plain, with steps up to the entrance at the left end of the verandah, which has two octagonal columns with square bases and square pilasters, with the ornament already shewn on a pilaster at Mhâr (1st plate). Between the pillars is a thin plain parapet with a seat inside. A door in the back of the verandah, to the right, leads into a cell with a stone bench on the left side. Traces of plaster are on the walls; and there are sockets for the door frame. In the right end of the verandah is a recessed bench. On the left end wall is inscription No. 13² (see 6th plate) in four lines, very deeply and clearly cut on a smooth surface, and entire:—

Remarks.

Mâmakavejiya, an epithet of Isirakhita, is equivalent to the Sanskrit mâmakavediya. Mâmaka may be the name of some once famous vaidyâ, or physician, who gave the name to his family; or if mâmaka be some branch of medicine not now known, the term would mean one of a family skilled in that branch.

Upâsaka is a Bauddha and Jaina title for a householder or layman of the sect. In the Chaturvidha Saṅgha there are four classes of people—Bhikshus, Bihkshunîs, Upâsikas, and Upâsikâs.

Just beyond the tank outside this is another cistern, dry and broken in, with inscription No. 14 on the back of the recess over it. It is deeply cut but much weatherworn, so that the latter half of the first two lines is indistinct and the copy conjectural; the 3rd letter in the 2nd line was probably pu, and the 5th ku, as read; and in the next line the first syllable must have been manî.

“The meritorious gift of Maṇḍava Kumâra, son of Sivama, the chief of the Mandavas (?)”

No. VIII is just beyond the last tank and 3 feet lower than No. VII. It consists of an oblong chamber, with a door near the right end and a window to the left, now broken into one; at the left end is a stone bench. A door in the back, towards the right, leads into a cell having a short recessed bench on the left. Half the length of this bench has been cut to a depth of 19 inches, leaving a 3 inch wall at the front of the bench, and fitted for receiving a trap lid 3" thick, which would complete the bench and form a box 21" square and 16" deep.

No. IX is close to the last and at 6 feet higher level. Entered from the left side of the court is a cell with a stone bench at the back; the front wall is nearly gone, but it had a window to the right of the door. In the right side is a window and a door leading into the verandah which has two octagon columns with cushion bases and capitals and plain octagon pilasters. A large door at the back, with sockets for a frame, leads into a chamber containing a plain dāgoba, the abacus of the capital reaching to the roof. The dāgoba is towards the back of the shrine, but about equidistant from the back and sides. There are traces of plaster on the walls. Inscription No. 15 is at the right end of the verandah of this cave, deeply cut on a smooth panel.

Inside is an oblong chamber opening towards the right into a cell, with a stone bed at the back. Over the window is inscription No. 16, deeply cut on a rough surface. This inscription has an odd representation of a lion at the commencement. The ‘râja’ was perhaps one of the Mahâbhojas. Of duṭaya (daughter) the du is partially visible and tâya appears in the copy for tuya. After Goyanmâyâ, le is also partially legible in the copy.

No. XIII, close to the last and at 2 feet higher level, has an open verandah with a short bench at the right end. Traces of plaster on the walls. Steps lead down in front from the right end of the verandah. Remarks.

Vijayanikâ is apparently the same as the Vijayâ of Nos. 1 and 9: the epithets Mahâbhoya and Sâdakara, applied to her father here, corresponding with the feminine forms Mahâbhøjî and Sâdagerî applied to Vijayâ.

Remarks.

The first legible letter is ga, the next hapa wants the first part of the ha; after sethi there is apparently a weather-worn no, followed by sanâ, and na podhi deya dhammam is peeled off. A snânaprahi, Pâli nâna podhi, is a tank where the bhikshus could bathe,—open above, with a large aperture and stair down into the water.

About 20 feet from No. XIV is a small recess (apparently a tank now buried) nearly filled with earth and roots, with inscription No. 22 on the back of it, cut on a very rough weather-worn surface.

This has not been read.

About 45 feet beyond No. XIV is a recess like a cell, nearly filled with earth and boulders.

No. XV. About 55 yards beyond No. XIV and at 20 feet higher level is another dâgoba cave. The verandah has had four plain octagonal pillars, of which one is gone; at the ends are square pilasters with the same ornament as before. At each end of the verandah is a cell with a stone bench at the back.

Remarks.

Ahila may be Sanskrit Abhîra, as in early times they were spread over this part of the country, and as testified by an inscription at Nâsik, they were even powerful. Their proper names, like the two mentioned here, often ended in -data. But it may, also, be a diminutive ahi, ‘snake,’ and an equivalent of Sapila (Sarpila) in No. 5.

Adhagachhaka is the name of a religious sect. The Jainas are divided into gachhas.

A wide doorway in the centre leads into the shrine containing a plain dâgoba of which the abacus is against the roof. There are traces of plaster on the walls and roof, and of painting on the columns.

The next four caves are about 30 feet above the level of No. XV, and in a position between XIV and XV but further back towards the summit of the hill, and are here numbered from left to right as an upper range. No. XVI has a tank with good water to the left of the entrance to the court; and another to the right. Both tanks have inscriptions Nos. 24 and 26 on the backs of their recesses. The court is plain, with a low bench across the front of the cave, which consists of an oblong chamber with door and window, and a bench or bed at the left end. Between the door and window is inscription No. 25, very deeply cut and distinct. A door near the left end of the chamber leads into a cell with a bench in its left side. Translation.

“The meritorious gift of a cistern by the gardener Mugudâ(sa).”¹

No. XVII. About 7 feet beyond the tank to the right of this last, and on the same level as that cave, is No. XVII, very like the last, only with a very large window to the left of the door. The doors have no sockets. Traces of plaster on the walls. The right end of the verandah is broken into that of the next cave. Inscription No. 27² is on the back wall of the front chamber close to the ceiling and to the left of the cell door (see 8th plate). It has been deeply cut on a smooth surface, but much of it is peeled off.

INSCRIPTION No. 27.

After the first letters we can read—

कोट स्वामिपुत्रस गृह[प]तिणो सथवाहस नागस लेण देयधंम

Sanskrit.

.....स्वामिपुत्रस्य गृहपतेः सार्थवाहस्य नागस्य लयनम् देयधर्मः ॥

Translation.

“The meritorious gift of a lena by Nâga, the trader and householder whoson of Svâmi.....”

Remark.

Sathavâha, Sans. Sârtha-vâha, is ‘a great merchant,’ ‘leader of a caravan,’ and is often applied to a ship-owner or trader.

No. XVIII is close to, and on the same level as, the last, but there is no bench or step up into the verandah, which is therefore 1 foot lower. The door is between two large open windows, and there is a bench at the left end. The cell at the back, towards the right end, has had a large window, now broken into the door, and a bench at the back. Both doors have sockets. There are traces of plaster on the walls. Inscription No. 28 is on the back wall of the verandah to the left, and close under the roof³ it is deeply cut and distinct.

² Jacobi's No. 11 (ibid, p. 257); his copy, however, was defective.

³ Jacobi's No. 12 (ibid, p. 257); but his copy was imperfect.

No. XIX is close to XVIII ; court 13 feet wide, plain, and at 1 foot 6 inches higher level than the last ; verandah 14' 9" by 6' 6" like No. XVII ; door to right and large window to left, with rough square pillar between them. At the left end a passage 3' 9" wide leads back with a recessed bed 6' 2" by 2' 3" on the right side. To the right a door in the back leads into a cell 6' 9" square, with a recessed bench at the back, 4' 8" long. Both doors have sockets : traces of plaster on the walls.

No. XX is about 57 yards further and at 10 feet higher level ; difficult of access ; front of verandah gone, and most of the back wall, which has had a door in the centre and a window to the left of it opening into a small square room.

No. XXI is about 27 yards further and 5 feet higher than No. XIX. The court is plain and the verandah has two roughly hewn square pillars. A doorway in the middle of the back wall leads into an unfinished chamber, with a square mass in the centre of the back wall and, being worked out on both sides, was probably intended for a dâgoba. To the left of the entrance is a tank choked up with inscription No. 29, on the back of the recess ; it has been deeply cut, but is weather-worn.

No. XXII close to the last and at 3 feet lower level ; division of the courts broken ; bench at left side of the court. A door to the right and window to the left are now broken into one. Inside is a chamber with a bench at the back. Between this and the next is a tank in a recess with good water.

No. XXIII. Just beyond the tank and at same level as the last is a cave with central door and two large windows. At the back of the outer oblong room is a nearly square one, with door and window and a recessed bench at the back. Over the left-hand window is inscription No. 30, cut on a rough surface.

Remark.

Bitiyika, Sans. dvitîyakâ, ‘the second,’ probably means the wife or second person in the household, or possibly daughter.

No. XXIV is 12 feet further on and at 4 feet higher level. It is similar to the last, only the front room or verandah is broken in, and the recessed bench is on the right of the inner cell. Inscription No. 31 is to the right of the door and partly on the right end: it is much weather-worn and indistinct.

No. XXV is close adjoining and at the same level. The front of the verandah is gone; bench at left end; large open window and door in back wall leading into a chamber with recessed bench at the back.

No. XXVI adjoins; verandah broken into from the last; bench at right end of ruined verandah; window and door at the back enter a small plain chamber.

Lêna, Sans. layanam, ‘an abode,’ among Bauddha caves, a residence for Bhikshus. The other description of cave is the chaityagriha, which contained a dâgoba and was used for worship only. Later in the history of Buddhism when Lênas came to be made very large, a dâgoba, with the dharmachakra and sinha on either side of it (as in Caves III and VIII at Nâsik), were carved on the wall, or were set into a separate cell or shrine as at Bagh. From the fifth or sixth century, the Mahâyâna sect introduced colossal images of Buddha into the shrines of the lênas, or vihâras. The root vihri means to ‘walk about,’ ‘go apart,’ and the term vihâra was applied to large monastic halls, where the monks could walk about, to which they betook themselves for the rains, or, perhaps, the name arose from the legends invented respecting Buddha's having visited and walked about in the locality of each monastery. These vihâras served the double purpose of being temples for the images of Buddha and places of abode for the Bhikshus. On this plan the Nepâl monasteries are now formed: but the word vihâra does not seem to have been in general use before the sixth century A. D.

Gaṇḍakûṭi is a small apartment for an image of Buddha only, but with no accommodation for a monk.

Saṅghârâma is analogous to the Jaina dharmasâlâs at their great tîrthas, having a temple and residences for Bhikshus and Srâvakas when the great saṅghas or pilgrimages visited them. Nothing of this sort, however, now remains in connection with any of the caves of Western India.

2.—BHAJA CAVES AND THEIR INSCRIPTIONS.

The small group of caves at Bhâjâ, about a mile south of the railway, or three miles south of the Kârlê caves, are cut in a low spur of the hill which is crowned by Îsapur fort.

The whole of the caves seem to have been the work of the Hînayâna sect, and do not appear to have been altered by the Mahâyânas of later times. The Chaitya-cave is of a very early type, and has had a wooden front. There are no inscriptions upon it. To the east of it are several ruined vihâras,—none of them large, nor with pillars in their halls,—and the only carving in them are 'Chaitya arches' over the cell doors and string courses of 'rail pattern' connecting them, after the style of Cave XII at Ajaṇṭâ. To the west is a group of fourteen dâgobas cut out of the solid rock; those in front are exposed, but the five behind are under the rock, and in some cases their capitals are joined to it. Several of these have inscriptions, much weather-worn and abraded, which the Paṇḍit has deciphered pretty completely.

Still further west, a small vihâra cave was discovered, and excavated in December 1879. The verandah had a half-arch roof, ribbed, and with dâgobas and Caryatides alternately, arranged along the upper part of the back wall, which is pierced below by two doors and a latticed window. There is also a cell at the right end of the verandah, on each side the door of which and extending along part of the front wall is a large scene carved in low relief, in which are numerous figures; to the right of the cell door elephants and wild beasts, sacred trees, human figures, both male and female, some with short broad swords, one female with a horse or ass's head, &c. On the left side, female demons of hideous proportions seem to be carrying off a chariot and its occupants.

To the left of the window a small square stone seat was carved, but is much broken. On each side the central door, and to the left of the side door is a dwâra-pâla, also in low relief, with very rich turban, necklaces, bracelets, &c. That on the right holds a bow; the one between the doors (much injured) held two spears; the figure was much damaged and the stone cracked before excavation, but shortly afterwards some mischievous person pushed or knocked it out and destroyed it. The third, to the left, holds two spears with barbed heads. In the left end of the verandah is a small recess, with a pillar and two pilasters in front. The capitals of the pillar and right side pilaster (the left one is broken) are carved with a sort of centaurs or sphinxes, having the bodies of cows or buffaloes, and human female busts. This recess is raised from the floor, and the plinth below is carved with numerous figures executed with much minuteness, and all in a very early style of sculpture.

Inside is a square room with a bench along the left side, over which are two low recesses, and two loftier panels carved each with an armed man. These recesses and panels are each surmounted by a Chaitya arch, projecting well forward. On the back and right side are two cells, and between their doors are recesses also, either for moveable images, or, possibly, for setting vessels and utensils in. All four walls are carved with 'Chaitya arches' connected by string courses of 'rail pattern.'

Altogether, this cave is one of the most curious, and apparently most ancient vihâra cave in Western India, and thus tends to support the theory I put forth some years ago, that the Bhâjâ caves were not, as had been previously suggested, an offshoot from those of Kârlé, but quite an earlier foundation.

The inscriptions are only eight in all, short, and of little immediate historical importance,¹ though they may yet turn out to have connections with others. The first is in the more ancient form of characters; the second is of a later date, the alphabet bearing a near resemblance to that used by the Ândhrabhṛityas.

INSCRIPTION No. 1.

Over a cell door in Cave XVII, west of the Chaitya-cave. It is a good deal mutilated, but pretty legible² :—

नडसवस नायस

भोगवतस गामो दानं

Sanskrit.

नटशर्वस्य ज्ञातस्य

भोगवतस्य गर्भो दानम् ॥

Translation.

“The gift of a cell from Nâdasava, a Nâya of Bhogavatî.”

Remarks.

Nâya is the name of a caste, otherwise known as Jñâta. Bhogavâtasa—‘a native of Bhogavatî.’

¹ Two of the Bhâjâ inscriptions (our Nos. 2 and 8) were copied by the late Professor L. W. Westergaard, and Nos. 1 and 2 by M. D'Ochoa, in 1844, and given to Dr. J. Bird, who gave what he believed to be translations of them (J. B. B. R. A. S., vol. I, pp. 439-443). No better specimens of the results of the ignorance and self-assurance of pedantry could well be produced. He seems to have allowed himself, like Dr. Inman, to be entangled by a theory as to what the inscriptions ought to say, and each word had to be taken up in a particular way and manipulated to suit his system. He claims to differ from Westergaard in his readings both of vowels and consonants, and then transliterates inscription No. 2 as—

Mahâratha sâkasâkâ pûtasâ tânamdâtasa dayyâdamâpâda, and translates it: “The righteous gift of a symbol and vehicle of the purified Sâka Sâka Sakra or Indra), the resting place of the giver.”—J. B.

² The photozincograph of these inscriptions (9th plate) is not quite satisfactory. The first letter looks like ना and भोगवतस like भोगतस. The actual readings have been ascertained by an inspection of the original.

INSCRIPTION No. 2.

Over two wells in one recess, west from the last :—

महाराथिस कोसिकीपुतस

Sanskrit.

महाराथिनः कौशिकीपुत्रस्य
विष्णुदत्तस्य देयधर्मः प्रहिः ॥
Translation.

“The religious gift¹ of a cistern by Viṇhudata², son of Kosikī,³ a great warrior.”

Remark.

Mahārathi is a Paurāṇik title of a great warrior: it is common in the families of Rājas. This man, the son of Kauśikī, does not appear to have been even a petty rāja; but as the Āndhrabhṛityas were notably in the habit of assuming the mother's name as he does here, Viṇhudata may have been connected with that royal family.

INSCRIPTION No. 3.

On the second dâgoba, counting from north-east to south-west, in the front row, and much weather-worn :—

थेरानं भवंत धमगिरिनां थुप⁴
Sanskrit.

स्थविराणां भदन्तधर्मगिरिणां स्तूपः ॥
Translation.

“The Thupo of the venerable reverend (bhadaṅta) Dhamagiri.⁵”

INSCRIPTION No. 4.

On the base of the third dâgoba, also weather-worn :—

Sanskrit.

स्थविराणां भदन्तापिकिणकानां स्तूपः ॥
Translation.

“The Thupo of the venerable reverend Āmpikīṇaka.”

Remark.

Āmpikīṇaka is a peculiar name not met with anywhere else. The anusvāra may be a mistake, and the pi may possibly be hi, so that the name may be read Ahikīṇaka.

¹ There is some difficulty in rendering deyadhama into English; dhama seems to be closely allied in application to the sense of θρησκεία, and the compound might perhaps be translated, ‘charitable, virtuous,’ or ‘meritorious gift’ or ‘benefaction.’—J. B.

² Sans. Viṣṇudatta.

³ Sans. Kauśikī.

⁴ In भवंत the head of the second letter is joined to the anusvāra by a flaw in the stone. The form appears to be a corruption of or mistake for भयंत.

3.—THE INSCRIPTIONS AT BEDSA CAVES.

The Bedśâ caves are on the south side of the range of hills in which those of Bhâjâ and Pâtan are, and a few miles south-west from the Khaḍkâlê railway station. Next to Bhâjâ and Koṇḍânê in age, the group is but a small one, and its special peculiarity is a vaulted vihâra. This vihâra is very much like a Chaitya cave, having an apsidal back ; but it is low and has no pillars. The cells are arranged round the sides and back ; have the chaitya-arch ornament over ² This fills the line ; the name of the Bhadaṅta has never been added.

each; and pilasters of the antique pattern shewn in the accompanying plate, with a portion of the shaft cut away at the corners. Between these pilasters are grated windows of the pattern shewn in the drawing.¹

There are only three inscriptions, of which two were copied by the late Professor Westergaard and interpreted by Dr. James Bird in his usual style; for he found no difficulty in getting Pāli inscriptions to support an esoteric meaning in accordance with his theory.

INSCRIPTION No. 1.

Consisting of two lines on the rock behind a dāgoba; weather-worn and the beginning of each line lost:—

..... य गोभूतिनं आरणकान पैण्डपातिकानं मारकुडवासीनं थुपो
..... वासिना भतासाळमितेन कारित

Sanskrit.

..... गोभूतीनामारण्यकानां पैण्डपातिकानां मारकूटवासीनां रूपः

Translation.

“The Thūpo of Gobhūti, native of Mārakūḍa, an Āraṇaka (and) Peḍapātika. Caused to be made by Asālamita Bhata,² inhabitant of.....”

Remarks.

Peḍapātikānam, Sans. piṇḍapātikānām, is one who lives on alms, and is here used in the plural majestatis. Āraṇaka, Sans. āraṇyaka, a dweller in forests.³ Mārakūḍa, Sans. Mārakūṭa, the hill of Māra, is perhaps the old name of that in which the Bedṣā caves are.

Bhata—must be bhaṭṭa—a warrior. The name of his birth-place is lost.

INSCRIPTION No. 2.

This consists of three lines, and is cut in the rock over a water cistern near the Chaitya, and tolerably distinct:—

महाभोजवालिकाय म[हा]देवि-
य महारठिनिय सामडिनिकाय
[दे]यधम आपदेवणकस वित्तियिकाय-

Sanskrit.

महाभोजवालिकाया महादेव्या
महारथिन्याः सामडिनिकाया

² Sans. Ashāḍhamitra Bhaṭṭa;—Bhata is probably Sans. bhakta, ‘devoted.’—G. B.

³ Gobhūti must have been rather a notable ascetic in the eyes of his countrymen, having a double title to sanctity.

Translation.

“The religious gift of Mahâbhoya’s daughter (bâlikâ) Sâmadinikâ, the Mahâ-dêvi (or princess) Mahârathini¹ and second wife of Âpadêvaṅaka.²”

Remarks.

Madêvi is a mistake of the engraver’s for Mahâdêvi. Mahâbhoya must have been a râja in this part of the country, whose daughter’s name Sâmadinikâ may also be read Sâmesinikâ, but the third letter is more like di than si, and the second, if intended for me, is not regularly formed.

INSCRIPTION NO. 3.

Over the door of a cell in the right end of the verandah of the Chaitya:—

नासिकान अनदस सेठिस पुतस पुसणकस दान-

Sanskrit.

नासिकस्थानन्दस्य श्रेष्ठिनः पुत्रस्य पुष्यणकस्य दानम् ॥

Translation.

“A gift of Pusaṅaka,³ son of Anada⁴ Seṭhi, inhabitant of Nâsik.”⁵

Remark.

The fourth letter looks like ta, but the sense requires us to read na, perhaps indicated by the last stroke being somewhat lengthened.

4.—THE INSCRIPTIONS IN THE BAUDDHA ROCK-TEMPLES AT KARLE.

The Rock-Temples of Kârîlê are so well known and have been so often described that nothing need be added here respecting them. The carvings on the front wall of the great cave are manifestly of very various ages: those of Buddha and his attendants being evidently the latest. Whether the pairs of figures on each side the doors, and on the inside of the ends of the outer screen, are of the same age as the rest of the front is doubtful. Similar pairs are carved higher up on each end of the verandah, but they are carved in a much better style; and in the case of at least two of those below, we have ¹ This title may mean wife [or daughter] of a great warrior.

² Compare the above transcript and translation with those of Dr. J. Bird (J. B. B. R. A. S., vol. I., p. 441):—

Mahâtya palakaiyya manava ya mahâratanayya sâmadhinakaiyya dayâdhama upada manâkâsa vâtya kaiyya

(though one hardly knows whether he meant the Devanâgarî spelling or the Roman to be followed, or why he makes them different). His translation is:—

“A righteous gift of a small offering to the moving power (body), the intellectual principal, the cherishing material body, the offspring of Manu, the precious jewel, the supreme heavenly one here.”

By those who know as little of the language as Dr. Bird, any meaning apparently can be extracted from an inscription; and the publication of such stuff leads to sensible people entertaining doubts of all translations from languages like cunciform but little known.—J. B.

inscriptions stating that they were added by a Bhadanta or cleric,—whether whilst the excavation of the cave was going on or long after, we do not know.

The inscriptions, however, on the famous Chaitya-cave and its neighbouring monastic dwellings have never been translated. Dr. Stevenson and Dr. J. Wilson attempted one or two of the most prominent, but not with much success. Whilst camped in the neighbourhood in December 1879, Paṇḍit Bhagvānlāl Indrāji took fresh facsimiles of the whole series of twenty-two inscriptions, and transliterated them into Devanāgarī, then turned them verbatim into Sanskrit, and with his assistance in rendering them literally I have made the following English versions from his vernacular :—

INSCRIPTION No. 1.

On the left end of the verandah of the great Chaitya-cave, on a deep flat moulding over the heads of three large elephants :—

वैजयन्तीता सेठिणा भूतपालेना सेलघरं परिनिष्ठापितं जम्बुदिपम्हि¹ उत्तम

Sanskrit.

वैजयन्तीतः श्रेष्ठिना भूतपालेन शैलघृहं परिनिष्ठापितं जम्बुद्वीप उत्तमम्॥

Translation.

“Séth Bhûtapâla, from Vejayanti,² has established a rock-mansion, the most excellent in Jambudvîpa.”³

Remarks.

Vejayantitâ—vaijayantitah—‘ from Vaijayanti ’; *sethi—śreshthih—*is now usually applied only to merchants. But the original meaning of śreshthi is ‘ great, excellent, chief, best,’ and so might be applied to any man of high rank.

On the opposite end of the verandah, facing this is the word sidham, in large letters, as if an inscription had been just begun, but never carried further than the invocation.

INSCRIPTION No. 2.

On the lion-pillar, or sinhastambha, on the left of the entrance :—

महारठिस गोतिपुत्रस अगिमित्रणकस सिहस्तभो दानं

Sanskrit.

महारथिनो गोतिपुत्रस्याग्निमित्रणकस्य सिंहस्तभो दानम्॥

² Dr. Bühler has suggested this rendering, and that the correct reading is doubtless vejayantito ‘ from Vejayanti,’ as the fac-simile shows: Vaijayanti occurs both in Brahmanical and Jaina books as the name of a town on the coast of the Konkan (see Petersb. Dict. sub voce; and Mr. K. T. Telang’s ‘ Kadamba Inscriptions,’ J. B. B. R. A. S. vol. XII., p. 321). It is probably the Greek Byzantion.—G. Bühler.

³ This dedication is strikingly brief: this ‘ rock-mansion ’ is undoubtedly (Jambudîpamhi uttama) ‘ the most excellent in Jambudvîpa ’; but we wish the princely merchant had told us a little more of himself,—in whose reign he lived, or when.—J. B.

*Translation.*¹

“ From Agimitraṇaka, son of Goti, a great warrior, the gift of a lion-pillar. ”

Remarks.

Agimitraṇaka, Sans. Agnimitraṇaka : the syllable -naka, added to the name seems to have been a usual practice in those early times. In No. 5 we have Mahādēvanaka for Mahādēva, and in No. 8, Mitadēvanaka.

INSCRIPTION NO. 3.

On the right end of the verandah below the feet of the elephants :—

येरानं भयंतइंददेवस हथि च पुवा दो हथिनं च
उपरिमा हेषिमा च वेयिकादानं

Sanskrit.

स्यविराणां भदन्तेन्द्रेवस्य[देवानां] हस्तिनौ च पूर्वे द्वौ हस्तिनां च
उपरितना अधस्तना च वेदिकादानम् ॥

Translation.

“ The gift of, first, two elephants,² and above and below the elephants, a (rail-pattern) moulding, by the venerable reverend (bhadanta) Indadēva.³ ”

Remarks.

Over the plinth on which this inscription is, are three elephants, of which the first two, with the rail-pattern belt above and below, were the gift of this Bhadanta. The word vedi here used is applied in Sanskrit to an altar, seat, dais, &c., but in this place and elsewhere it evidently applies to bands or string-courses carved with the rail-pattern.⁴

INSCRIPTION NO. 4.

Over the right-hand side door into the Chaitya :—

धेनुकाकटा गंधिकस सिहदत्तस दानं घरमुघ

Sanskrit.

धेनुकाकटात् गन्धिकस्य सिहदत्तस्य दानं गृहमुखम् ॥

Translation.

“ The gift of a door by Sihadata,⁵ a perfumer, from Dhenukākāṭa. ”

¹ This inscription was translated by Dr. Stevenson : “ The Chief Agimitra, son of the great king Bhoti, erected this lion-crowned pillar. ” J. B. B. R. A. S., vol. V., pp. 3, and 426, 427.

² Hathi seems to stand for hathi and to be nominative plural. As the plural might be used to denote the number three, the translation might thus be : ‘ Three elephants, and below and above the first two elephants, a moulding the gift of, &c’.—G. Bühler.

³ Sans. Indradēva.

⁴ It is perhaps from the root ve ‘ to weave, bind together ’ as a railing.

⁵ Sans. Siṅhadatta.

Remarks.

Gandhika is literally a dealer in perfumes, but in early times it was nearly equivalent to our modern druggist, for the perfumer, along with the perfumes he obtained from distant countries, had facilities for obtaining medicinal drugs also, and naturally added them to his stock in trade until he engrossed this part of the business of the vaidya, or physician, who would at first sell also the drugs he prescribed. Gharamugha, Sans. grihamukha, 'a façade,' implies also the architrave and sculpture round the door, with the arch above and its enclosed lattice work.

INSCRIPTION No. 5.

The upper inscription on a pillar of the open screen in front of the verandah:—

गहतस महादेव-
णकस मातु भायिलाया दानं

Sanskrit.

गृहस्थस्य महादेव-
णकस्य मातुभ्राजिलाया दानम् ॥

Translation.

"The gift of Bhâyilâ¹, the mother of Mahâdêvanaka, a householder."

Remark.

Gahata may be a corruption of grihastha. The gift must be the pillar bearing this inscription.

INSCRIPTION No. 6.

On the same pillar, but lower down:—

धेणुकाकटकेण वदकिना सामि[के]
ण वेणुवासपुतेण घरस
मुघं कतं दारमुधुकस...

Sanskrit.

धेनुकाकटकेण वर्द्धकिना स्वामिके-
न विष्णुवासपुत्रेण गृहस्थ
मुखं कृतं द्वारमूर्द्धक...

Translation.

"Sâmika², son of Veṇuvâsa,³ a carpenter, a native of Dheṇukâkaṭa, made the doorway and.....above the door."

The end of this inscription after the word dâramudhukasa is destroyed. The door referred to is perhaps that entering the Chaitya on the left, on which there is no inscription.

² Sans. Svâmika.

³ Sans. Vishṇuvâsa. (or Veṇuvâsa).—G.B.

INSCRIPTION No. 7.

On the fourth pillar inside the Chaitya on the left hand :—

धेनुकाकटा यवनस सिहधयानां यभो दान

Sanskrit.

धेनुकाकटायवनस्य सिहधयानां [यस्य] स्तंभो दानम् ॥

Translation.

“The gift of a pillar by Sihadhaya,¹ a Yavana, from Dhenukākata.”

Remarks.

Sihadhaya's name is in the plural, while Yavana is singular, perhaps by a mistake of the engraver. Yona or Yavana, 'a Greek,'—probably an Indo-Baktrian, many of whom were converts to Buddhism.

INSCRIPTION No. 8.

On the shaft of the fifth pillar on the left or north side of the nave :—

सोपारका भयतान धमुतर-
यान संमानयस थेरस [मा]-
तुलस अंतेवासिस भान-
कस नदापुतिस सातिमितस
सह [मातापि]तुय यभो दानमुलं

Sanskrit.

शोपारकाद्भदन्तानां धर्मोत्तरी-
यानां सन्मानार्थाय स्थविरस्य मा-
तुलस्यान्तेवासिनो भागिनिय-
कस्य नन्दापुत्रस्य स्वातिमित्रस्य
सह [मातापि]तृभ्यां स्तम्भदानमूल्यम् ॥

Translation.

“The gift of the cost of a pillar by Sātimita,² from Sopāraka, out of respect for his maternal uncle the Bhadañta Dhamutaraya, by his (i.e., the Bhadañta's) disciple and sister's son Sātimita, the son of Nandā, with his mother and father.”

Remarks.

Sopāraka, or Śorpāraka, is Supāra rear Bassein, of which the Bhadañta was an inhabitant.

Samānathasa is in the genitive case, which is used in Prākṛit for the Sanskrit dative sammānārthāya 'for respect to.' In Sanskrit sammānārtham or sammāndya is used; but in Aśoka's inscriptions, sūpāthāya (Sans. sūpārthāya) 'for soup,' 'for the purpose of soup,' is found; so here, the pillar is for the purpose of respect.

Bhānaka in Prākṛit, bhāgineyaka in Sanskrit, of which bhānaka is a corruption; in modern Gujarāṭi, bhāno is used.

This inscription is much obliterated, probably intentionally, and beneath it, in clear cut letters, is the following, of the same Sātimita :—

² Sans. Svātimitra.

INSCRIPTION No. 9.

सौपारका भयंतान धमुतरियान भाण-
कस सातिमितस
ससरीरो यभो दानं

Sanskrit.

सौपारिकाद्भन्तानां धर्मोत्तरीयानां भागिने-
यस्य स्वातिमित्रस्य
सशरीरः स्तम्भो दानम् ॥

Translation.

“The gift of a pillar containing relics, by Sâtimita from Sopâraka sister's son of Bhadanta Dhamutaraya.”

Remarks.

There is a hole or receptacle cut for the purpose of holding a relic in the centre of a lotos carved on the front of the pillar just where the inscription ends. No other example like this has been noticed elsewhere.

INSCRIPTION No. 10.

On the shaft of the third pillar on the same side :—

धेनुकाकटा
धंयवनस

Sanskrit.

धेनुकाकटात्
धर्मयवनस्य ॥

Translation.

“ (The gift) of Dhama, a Yavana from Dhenukâkâṭa.”

Remark.

Here we have a Yavana with the Indian name of Dhama or Dharma.

Dhenukâkâṭa—now Dharanikoṭa near Amarâvati on the Kṛishnâ, the old capital of the Ândhras. It is frequently mentioned in the cave inscriptions.

INSCRIPTION No. 11.

On the shaft of the seventh pillar on the left side :—

धेनुकाकटा उषभदत्तपुत्रस्य मित्तेदे- वणकस्य यभो दानं

Sanskrit.

धेनुकाकटादृषभदत्तपुत्रस्य मित्रेदे-
वणकस्य स्तम्भो दानम् ॥

13

15

Translation.

“The gift of a pillar by Mitadêvanaka¹, son of Usabhadata² from Dhenukâkaṭa.”

INSCRIPTION No. 12.

On the inner face of the gallery :—

असादमिताये भिक्षुणि[ये]....

Sanskrit.

अषाढामेत्राया भिक्षुण्याः...

Translation.

“(Gift) of Asâḍhamitâ³, a nun.....”

Remark.

This must refer to the belt of rail pattern just under the inscription. Some letters at the end of the line are destroyed—probably veyi (or vedikâ) dânam, ‘gift of the rail.’

INSCRIPTION No. 13.

On the upper frieze to the right of the central door of the Chaitya and outside :—

[1] सिधं रञ्जो खहरातस खतपस नहपानस जामातरा दिनिकपुतेन उत्तमदातेनत्रि-

“To the Perfect. Usabhadata,⁴ son of Dinika and son-in-law of the King Kharâta Khatapa Nahapâna, the giver of 300,000 cows,—having given gold, and being a visitor to the tîrtha at the Baṇâsâ river⁵; the giver of sixteen villages to gods and Brâhman; at the holy place Pabhâsa the giver of eight wives to Brâhman; and who caused 300,000 cows to be given;⁶ and who at Valuraka

² Sans. Rishabhadatta.

³ Sans. Ashâḍhamitrâ.

⁴ Sans. Rishabhadatta.

⁵ This conjecture tîrthakareṇa is not a very probable one, as tîratha is a modern form and not used in the old Prâkrits. Probably the ra of ratha is a mistake for ti. The explanation of the word suvarṇatîrthakareṇa is furnished by Nâsik inscription No. 17, where Usavadâta calls himself nadyâm barnâsyâm suvarṇadânâtîrthakara, which in my opinion means ‘the founder of a Tîrtha and giver of a gift of gold on the river Baṇâs’; or ‘the founder of a Tîrtha by means of a gift of gold.’—G. Bühler.

⁶ Instead of gâvasâpi I read (a)nuvasam pi and translate, “who caused annually three hundred thousand (pieces of money) to be distributed.” Nâsik inscription No. 17 reads anuvârsham brahmanâsâtasahasrîbhajâpayitrâ.—G. Bühler.

Remarks.

This inscription is somewhat broken : the name of Puḷumāyi is gone, but the space left and the name of Vāsiṭhīputa before it, renders it almost certain that this is the name wanting.

The mention of the 5th fortnight of Grīshma shows that the year was not divided into six seasons (ritu) but into three—Grīshma, Varshā, and Hemanta.

Autkhaḷakiya or Okhaḷakiya must be a clan or sept name.

INSCRIPTION No. 15.

Over the male and female figures to the right of the right-hand side door. The characters used seem rather later, if anything, than those in the preceding inscription :—

भद्रसमस भिक्षुस देयधम मिथून

Sanskrit.

भद्रसमस्य भिक्षोर्देयधर्मो मिथुनम् ॥

Translation.

“ Gift of a pair by the Bhikshu Bhadasama.”

INSCRIPTION No. 16.

This faces the last, being over another pair of figures on the inner side of the right end of the outer screen or front of the verandah :—

Sanskrit.

भद्रसमस्य भिक्षोर्देयधर्मो मिथुनम् ॥

Translation.

“ Gift of a pair by the Bhikshu Bhadasama.”

On a piece of rail-pattern carving below the sculptures to the left of the central door :—

...[स]मणाय मातुय दानं वेयिका

Sanskrit.

...श्रमणाया मातुदीनं वेदिका॥

The beginning of this inscription is destroyed ; what is left reads,—“ the gift of a védikā by the mother of Samaṇā.”²

INSCRIPTION No. 18.

Low down and to the right of the central door of the Chaitya :—

² Sans. Śramaṇā.

Translation.

“To the Perfect! The king Vāsithîputa, the illustrious (siri) Pulimâvi, in the year (of his reign) twenty-four (24), in the third (3) fortnight of the winter (hemanta) months, the second (2) day. This meritorious gift of a nine-celled mandapa by the (Upāsaka) layman Harapharaṇa, son of Setapharaṇa,³ a Sovasaka, native of Abulâmâ, for the possession of the saṅgha of the Mahâsaṅghas from the four quarters. For the continuance in welfare and happiness of father and mother and all people and living things. Established in the twenty-first year, and with me Budharakhita and his mother an Upāsikâ. And in addition the meritorious gift of another passage by the mother of Budharakhita.”

Remarks.

The language of this important inscription differs from that usually employed and the varieties of spelling remind us of what occurs on the Kshatrapa coins ;

² Inscription No. 19—just over an image of Buddha which has been inserted at a later date between the central and right-hand door of the Chaitya-cave—is not yet ready. It is of the 19th year of Vāsishthîputra's time, and records a benefaction to the Bhikshus by the tâlukdâr of Mâmala—the modern Mâwal.

³ Harapharaṇa and Setapharaṇa are clearly two Persian names. The former corresponds with the Greek Horophernes or Holophernes. The latter part of both -pharaṇa is the Persian frana, 'lord.' Seta is perhaps the ancient khshaeta and the modern shîd.—G. Bühler.

for in one place the genitive ends in -sa and in another in -sya, and we have puta in Vāsīthîputasa and putta in Pharaṇaputtasya.

The names of the Upāsaka Harapharaṇa and his father Setapharaṇa are unlike any in use in India, and may possibly be of Parthians. The name of their family sovasaka has a resemblance to Śvāvaka, but their native place Abulâmâ has not an Indian name. For hitasughasthataya we must read hitasughasthataye (in Sans. hitasukhasthitaye) ekavisasavachare nithio—established in the 1st year. The vi in ekavisa^o is doubtful and might be read ti, making 31st year; but it is uncertain whether he reigned so long as 31 years.

Budharakhita and his mother seem to have been relations who aided Harapharaṇa in the work.

INSCRIPTION No. 21.

In a recess over a water cistern at the end of Cave XIII:—

.....[सवच्छरे ?] ५ हेमाताण पखे..... [एता] य पुवाय ध[भ]यत

अन्तेवासिनीभिः ऋषभया

This inscription is so defaced that a consecutive translation is impossible. The sense runs thus:—

In the fifth year and of the Hemanta-paksba (of some rāja—possibly Pulumâyî), the female disciple of (some) Bhadanta, gave a leṇa; and a sister's daughter a Śrāvīkâ (or laic) gave a cistern for the saṅgha of ascetics. With the donor several other names of relations are associated, (but obliterated,) with Usabhâ,¹ a female disciple.

Hematâṇam—Sans. haimantânâm—is in the plural, 'of the months of winter.'

INSCRIPTION No. 22.

This is in Excavation No. III. to the south of the Chaitya:—

सिध पवइतस बुधरखितस देयधम

¹ Sans. Rishabhâ. The frequent occurrence of such names would seem to indicate some connection with Jainism;—the first Jaina being Rishabha.

Sanskrit.

5.—SAILARWADI.

The Sailârwâdi caves are in the Garoḍi hill, about 420 feet above the level of the plain, and some two miles from Talêgânw Dâbhâḍa. They consist of seven or eight small caves, with one inscription (No. 2 on the plate) in five lines, on a surface full of holes and flaws, which reads thus :—

सिधं धेणुकाकडे वाथवस
हालकियस कुडुत्रिकस उसभ

Translation.

“ To the Perfect one ! The charitable gift of a Lêṇa¹ by Siagutanikâ,² wife of Usabhanaka,³ a kuṇbi (by caste) and ploughman (by occupation), residing in Dheṇukâkaḍa,⁴ together with her son Nanda⁵ a householder, with (?).⁶”

² This must be a Prâkrit corruption of Simhaguptinika. Prof. R. G. Bhândârkar, who also supplied me with a version of this inscription, reads Dasabhanakasa kudumbinîya Sê Agratanikâya, ‘Agratanikâ, the wife of Daśabhanaka.’ He had only an eye copy, however, and da and u closely resemble one another.—J. B.

³ Sans. Rishabhanaka, i.e., Rishabha.

⁴ This is the Prâkrit form of the name Dhenukâkaṭa; ta preceded by a vowel in any Sanskrit word is changed into da in Prâkrit (Hemachandra’s Prâkrit Vyākaraṇa, viii. 1. 94). In like manner in this inscription we have kudumbika and kudumbini.

⁵ Sans. Nanda.

⁶ The copulative saho at the end of the inscription is either a mistake, or something more was intended to be added.

On the lid of the box

On one side of the box

2. Inscription from a Bauddha Cave at Śailârwâdî

3. Inscription from a Bauddha Cave at Pitâlkhorâ

Remarks.

Kunbi: this word is derived from the Sanskrit kuṭumbika, meaning a person supporting a family; it is now generally used to indicate a particular caste. From the style of alphabet used in this inscription it appears to belong to somewhere between the times of Vāsishṭhîputra and Gautamîputra II. of the Ândhra dynasty.

6.—INSCRIPTION FROM KOLHÂPUR.

In making some excavations about two years ago at Kolhâpur the foundations of a large Stûpa were turned up, and in the centre of it was found a square stone box containing a rock-crystal box, or relic-casket. On the square lid of the stone box was cut in pure Maurya or Aśôka characters an inscription (No. 1 on the plate), while on the side of the box was the letter A.

The Pitalkhora Bauddha Caves are near the deserted village of Pâtna, 12 miles south of Châlisgânw in Khândesh. They are of a very early date, ranking with Bhâjâ and Khondânê.

On two pillars of the Chaitya-cave are short inscriptions⁴ :—

Sanskrit.

राजवेद्यस्य वात्सीपुत्रस्य मगिलस्य पुत्रस्य दत्तकस्य दानम् ॥

“ Gift of Dataka¹, son of the royal physician Magila, the son of Vachhî.”

Remark.

The alphabet of these inscriptions in the Vihâra differs very little from those in the Chaitya, and may belong to about 100 B. C., or earlier a little. At this time Paithana was evidently the capital of the district.

8.—JUNNAR CAVES AND INSCRIPTIONS.

A number of inscriptions from the Junnar Caves were given in No. 1 of these Memoranda, and some of them were afterwards translated by Dr. Kern of Leiden.² The Paṇḍit having gone to Junnar with a memorandum of all those known to exist, he took fac-simile impressions of all the accessible ones and copies of the others.

INSCRIPTION No. 1.

This is in one of a group of caves near the base of the east scarp of Sivaneri hill towards the southern end, on the back of a recessed bench on the left side of a small cave consisting of three cells each about 7 feet square broken into one. The letters left are all clear and distinct, but the first portion of it is broken away.

.....य भूतेनकस

.....पोढि चा देयधम.

Sanskrit.

.....य भूतेनकस्य

.....प्रहिष्व देयधर्मः ॥

It records the gift of a podhi or cistern and probably the lena by some person, perhaps named Bhutenaka.

The above inscription is in the fifth excavation of this group. The third is a chamber 20½ feet by 19½ and 11 feet high with the cylindrical base or drum of a dâgoba 5' in diameter near the back. It is 3½ feet high, with a small sunken recess in the flat top, which suggests the idea that the upper portion of it must have been structural. The entrance is 6 feet wide, and the verandah is 16½ feet by 4½ inside the pilasters, and with two columns in front (one destroyed) of the pattern so common here and at Nâsik. A drawing of one of these and the adjoining pilaster is given in the accompanying Plate.³

² Ind. Ant., vol. VI., p. 39.

³ This plate is a photolithograph from a drawing among the MS. notes of the Messrs. West.

INSCRIPTION No. 2.¹

This is in one of the group in the upper scarp on the east side of the fort. It is in a chamber 21' by 11', exactly over a vihâra below, measuring 24' by 22', with seven cells, with which it communicates by a stair outside at the right end. The inscription is deeply cut along the upper part of the left wall.

मूर्द्धकीयस्य मल्लस्य गौल्लिकीयस्यानन्दस्य द्वयोर्जनयोर्देयधर्म उपस्थानम् ॥

“ Gift of a reception-hall by Mudhakiya Mala and Golikiya Ânada, two men.”

Remarks.

Mudhakiya, probably the Sanskrit Mûrdhaktya, and Golikiya, Sanskrit Gollakiya (the li is injured and might be li or la) are the names of the families to which Mala (Sans. Malla) and Ânada (Sans. Ananda) respectively belonged.

Upathâna, Sans. upasthâna, ‘sitting near,’—a place for receiving visits, a drawing-room—referring to the room in which the inscription is.

Higher up than the group in which Inscription No. 1 is found are a number of cisterns, recesses and caves, on one of which there is a small fragment of an inscription.² In the group known as the Bârâ-koṭri, on the same side of the hill is Inscription No. 3, of which Dr. Stevenson gives the first three lines as his No. 8, and the two last as No. 9.³

INSCRIPTION No. 4.

This inscription is in a Chaitya Cave 31' by 20½' with a flat roof described in my Memorandum. The accompanying drawing of one of the pillars in the front part of the cave will illustrate their style.⁴ The roof is painted in square panels with a circular ornament in each panel, and the same with the roof of the outer verandah.⁵ The inscription is on the back wall of the verandah near the right end.

Remark.

Dhamanigama, Sans. dharmanāigama, 'who trades uprightly'; kūtavāñijya and dharmavāñijya are 'unjust' and 'just trading.'

INSCRIPTION No. 5.

This is near the extreme end of this row of caves, high up above a cistern. It is inaccessible and an eye copy could only be made. It is, however, clearly cut.

यवनस इरिलस गतान देयधम ने पोढियो

Sanskrit.

यवनस्येरिलस्य गतान (!) देयधमो द्वौ प्रही ॥

"The meritorious gift of two cisterns by the Yavana Irla Gatāna (?)."

Remarks.

Yavana is generally applied to foreigners, but it is impossible to say to what country this man belonged; he may have been a Parthian or Baktrian Greek.

Gatāna after the name Irla might be read gabhānam (Sans. garbhebhyaḥ—the 6th case in Prākṛit being used for the 4th in Sanskrit¹)—and we should then translate 'for the cells'; but this is doubtful, and in No. 33 the word is again used where such a meaning would not apply.

INSCRIPTION No. 6.

This is in the last excavation of the group, on the back of a recess above an open cistern. It is difficult to get at and much effaced. At the end of the second line are some letters like hanāvavī.²

Remark.

Apaguriya may be the name of a clan.

INSCRIPTION No. 7.

On the façade of the Chaitya³ at Mānmoḍi hill, on the central flat surface of a half lotus over the entrance—

² This is No. 8 of Col. Sykes's copies.

³ See frontispiece to the Cave Temples.

“ The meritorious gift of the façade of a (garbha) hall by the Yavana Chānda.¹ ”

Remark.

The name Chanda is in the plural (conf. Kārlē Inscription No. 7). The ra at the end is broken away.

INSCRIPTION No. 8.

This is found in the series at caves in the southern spur of the Mānmoḍi hill about a mile east from the Chaitya in which is Inscription No. 7. It is on the back wall of an open verandah in a group of chambers now all broken into one. It is much defaced,² what is legible reads—

.....[ग]हपतिपु[तानं] भातूणं दाण क

“ ...A five-celled (house).....the meritorious gift of the brothers, sons of Gahapati..... ”

On a large unfinished Chaitya in this group there are a number of inscriptions, many of them but indistinctly cut on a rough surface.

INSCRIPTION No. 9.

This is on the left end of the back wall of the verandah, just above the level of the door, faintly cut on a rough surface.³

Remarks.

The name of Puvānada, like that of all villages, is in the plural.

² It is given as No. 2 of the Junnar inscriptions in Bird's Caves of Western India.

³ This is No. 22 of Dr. Stevenson's, and No. 6 of Dr. Bird's copies.

INSCRIPTIONS Nos. 10, 11, 12.

These three inscriptions are on two octagonal pillars in front of the same large unfinished Chaitya Cave at the foot of the hill. They are in well cut letters, but the language is neither Pāli nor Sanskrit. No. 10 is on the left pillar, on the right side of it; No. 11 is on the right pillar corresponding side facing No. 10; and No. 12 is on the adjacent face towards the inner sides, but the lines do not align with those of No. 11.¹

Remarks.

What trade the Koṇāchikas were of, does not appear. The Sakas were perhaps foreigners but converts (upāsakas) to Buddhism: Aduṭhūma is a foreign name.

There is a Varāda 6 miles N. from Junnar, and a Katur, 5 miles S.S.W., which may be the Vaḍāli and Kaṭaputa (Sans. Kaṭaputra) of this inscription.

INSCRIPTION No. 14.

On the back of the recess over the door and alongside the window on its left. It is contiguous to No. 13. Many of the letters, especially in the lower lines, are very uncertain, as the rock is rough.²

Junnar Cave Inscriptions.

Remark.

The Sidhagaṇas evidently belonged to or were a division of the Aparājita sect of Buddhists; Aparājita (unconquered) is used as an adjective qualifying sidhagaṇa. Mānamukāḍa (Sans. Mānamukūṭa, 'crown of pride') appears to be the old name of the Mānmoḍa hill, where the inscription is. Next to the last verandah, is another 18' by 6½' with two columns and pilasters, without cells, and nearly full of earth. The inscription is outside close to the pilaster. INSCRIPTION No. 23.

In the eastern slope of the southern spur of the Mânmodi hill is another series of caves. The first excavation is a verandah with two cells, and with two octagonal pillars and pilasters in front. The second is an unfinished Chaitya 33½' by 11½' with flat roof and a large square rough block of stone near the back. On the right hand wall outside the verandah, between the octagonal pilaster and the doorway into the next verandah and rather above the level of the door is an inscription in three long lines but nearly all obliterated. In the second line “son of Satamala” and in the third “son of Virabhuti” can just be made out.

9.—KANHERI CAVES.

The Kanheri Caves are too numerous to describe here in detail. Most of them are of a very simple type and were probably nearly all excavated by the early Hīnayāna sect, but in after times as the Mahāyāna schools gained in popularity and influence, sculptures were introduced by them on the walls of many of the caves and especially in the verandah of the great Chaitya Cave and in the caves numbered 29, 35, 64, 66, 67, &c., and some of these and of the larger vihāras may have been entirely excavated by them. We do not, however, find here elaborately carved pillars and pilasters, such as are the rule in the later caves at Ajañtā, Aurangābād, Elurā, Ghaṭotkacha, nor are pillars introduced into the halls except in the Mahārāja's or Darbār Cave: stone benches too are common in the cells and occur even in No. 35, the walls of which are covered with sculptures of Buddha and attendants. And stone benches in the cells are found elsewhere only in Hīnayāna excavations. Such ornament, however, as we do find here is not without interest, and should be compared with what we find at Nāsik, Junnar, and the Konkan groups of caves.

The accompanying plates¹ will afford illustrations of these. On the first plate the first figure shows one of the most common of the pilaster ornaments and which is often found in very old caves both at Kanheri and elsewhere. The next figure shows the same ornament in its most developed form from Cave 35.

The third is a sketch of a pillar in the verandah of No. 45, showing one of the most common forms of pillars in the early caves. The next is a slight modification of the same ornament as in the first figure. The fifth sketch is from a fragment of a pilaster in the verandah of Cave 42 and is an exception to the general rule of exceedingly plain shafts in these caves. The pilaster has been carved with much minuteness and care, though all its details show that it is of an earlier type than those of Ajañtā, &c. The last figure on this plate is a perspective sketch of the end portion of a stone bench in Cave No. 45.

The second plate gives further illustrations of the pilaster ornaments.² Fig. 1 gives the ornament in its simplest form and is from Cave No. 32. Fig. 2 is very similar and is from Cave No. 56.

No. 3 is from the Mhār Caves and differs only in the wings being more widened: it is inserted here for comparison.

No. 4 is from Cave 59 at Kanheri, and instead of having a short flute in the centre it is hollowed out into a shallow flat-bottomed depression.

No. 5 is very similar and is from Cave 37.

No. 6 is also like the preceding two but has the wings more widened out: it is from Cave 50.

No. 7, from Cave 64, has two flutes in the centre.

No. 8, from Cave 29, has the bottoms of the flutes more squared out.

No. 9, from Cave 35, introduces additional curves above and below the neck, being a duplication of the original pattern.

² The second half of this plate has been marked by mistake "Junnar." Though some of the patterns are also found at Junnar all the examples, except No. 3, here given are from the Kanheri caves.

1.—COPPER-PLATE INSCRIPTION.

A copper-plate was found at Kanheri by Dr. James Bird in 1839. The following is his own account of the discovery²:—

“Immediately in front of the large arched cave, and on a ledge of the mountain, some thirty or forty feet below, there are several small Thopas, or monumental receptacles for the bones of a Buddha, or Rahat, built of cut stone at the base. These were once of a pyramidal shape, but are now much dilapidated, and appear like a heap of stones. Several years ago I thought of opening some of them, in expectation of obtaining coins or other relics; but found no favourable opportunity until lately, when several lengthened visits in company with Dr. Heddle gave me the desired means of doing so.

“The largest of the topes selected for examination appeared to have been one time between twelve or sixteen feet in height. It was much dilapidated, and was penetrated from above to the base, which was built of cut stone. After digging to the level of the ground and clearing away the materials, the workmen came to a circular stone, hollow in the centre, and covered at the top by a piece of gypsum. This contained two small copper urns, in one of which were some ashes mixed with a ruby, a pearl, small pieces of gold, and a small gold box containing a piece of cloth; in the other, a silver box and some ashes were found. Two copper-plates containing legible inscriptions in the Lath, or cave-character, accompanied the urns, and these, as far as I have yet been able to decipher them, inform us that the persons buried here were of the Buddhist faith. The smaller of the copper-plates bears an inscription in two lines, the last part of which contains the Buddhist creed.”

What the first part of this inscription was we shall probably never learn: for Dr. Bird, like too many virtuosi, carefully retained the plates. He died in London about a dozen years ago, and they have not been heard of since.

Of the larger plate, he published a small lithograph in his Historical Researches, a copy of which lithograph he seems to have sent to the Asiatic Society of Bengal, where it was reproduced with a number of additional mistakes, and an interlinear transcription in Dêvanâgarî, and accompanied with what was called a “literal translation” by a Calcutta Bâbu: this was so nonsensical, however, that no one could accept it as a translation.

Failing to get a loan of the plate itself, Dr. Stevenson of Bombay³ attempted to revise Dr. Bird’s copy, and to a certain extent succeeded; but he made serious errors in the transcription and translation. Using his copy¹ as a basis, Paṇḍit Bhagwānlāl Indrajī ingeniously suggests the following amendments in the copy, making scarcely any marked changes in the shapes of the letters, and then transliterates it into intelligible Sanskrit.

Line 1. In Trikūṭa^o, the tri in Bird's copy looks like stra, but the upper part must be for the circle denoting i, badly formed. The whole character is depressed below its proper place in the line, but so also are the ri in chatvāri, and gi, ri in Kṛishnagiri, in the same line. The anusvāra in Trikūṭakānām is omitted either from the negligence of the copyist or in the original. In the copy we have savvatsare, where evidently ॡ has been misread as ॢ . In dvaye, the e is thrown back upon the dva.

Line 2. Sindhuvishayāntargatagramikanakavāstavya, we should perhaps read ^o*gramika Naka, Bhoka* (or Toka), or grame kanaka^o—'an inhabitant of the village of Bhoka or Toka in Sindh,' or of Kānaka.

The bhā in suprabhāyāḥ is written as bha, the vowel mark being omitted in the J. B. B. R. A. S. copy; it appears in the J. A. S. B. one.

Line 3. For Śrāvakāryaganyo, the copy has vṛāvakāryaganko, ॣ having taken the place of । and ॥ = nko that of ॥ = nyo. In charaṇa, ra is written ॥ ; and in kuśalo the lo is written as ॢ .

Line 4. Śāradvatīputra looks like śaraṇṣati, ॣ being written for ॣ = dva.

Line 5. The anusvāra in ^o*kalinām* is omitted; and in yaksha, for ksha, we have only sha.

Line 6. In vaṅkanakā the last ka is written as no; the śa in diśaṅtva is written ॣ ; and in prachalita, the i is attached to the letters na-ma of the line above.

Line 7. In ghāṛṇitā the i circle is omitted over ^o*ṛṇṇa*. In yāvadvā, the last syllable is wrongly written dva; and at the end of line 8 the visarga is omitted after the word nāmnaḥ.²

“Salutation to the omniscient (Buddha)! In the year two hundred and forty-five of the increasing rule of the Trikûtakas, in the great vihâra of Krishnagiri, Buddharuchi—an inhabitant of Kanaka († Kabhoka or Katoka) a village in the Sindhu country, the son of the glorious Buddhaśri and Pushyavarman, intent on religious duties, of the religion of Sâkyâ Muni (who was) strong in the possession of the ten powers, revered, possessed of perfect knowledge—an Ârya-gaṇa of his (i.e., Ś. M.’s) Śrâvaks,—erected this Chaitya of dressed stone and brick, to last while moon, sun and ocean endure, to the great Śrâvaka of the Paramamuni (Buddha)—the noble Sâradvatîputra. Therefore let the Devas, Yakshas, Siddhas, Vidyâdharas, Gaṇas, and Mânibhadra, Pûrṇabhadra, Pañchika, Ârya-Vajrapâṇi, Vankaṇaka, (?) &c., be propitious. Moreover, as long as the milky ocean, the waters of the whirlpools of which are whirled round by the sea monsters which are driven about by its thousand waves, is an ocean of milk; and as long as the rugged Meru is piled with great rocks; and as long as the rivers of clear water flow with water into the ocean;—so long may this enduring and auspicious fame attach itself to the excellent son of him named Pushya(varman).”

Remarks.

Almost the only word of importance in this inscription is the name of the Trikûtakas, of which the dominion is said to have lasted 245 years. Hitherto no other reference has been made to any such dynasty. Among the great dynasties of which we have inscriptions, the Ândhras employ no date from a fixed epoch, nor do they mention such a title as Trikûṭaka. The Kshatrapas employ a fixed epoch, but the characters on their coins bearing dates about 250 of their era are of a much earlier type than those of this plate, which apparently belong to about the sixth century A. D. The Guptas style their era ‘Guptakâla,’ ‘Guptasya-kâla,’ ‘Guptanripârâjyabhukti,’ or ‘Sam.’ but such a name as Trikûṭa does not occur in their inscriptions; nor among the numerous copper-plates of the Valabhi dynasty, whose power, moreover, is not known to have ever extended to the Koṅkaṇ. The Gurjara and Râshtrakûṭa kings all dated in the Sâkakâla, and the earliest known Râshtrakûṭa king was Dantivarman early in the 7th century A. D.¹ The Sîlahâras were only petty kings in the Koṅkaṇ, and Kapardi I., their earliest king, belongs to the ninth century (cir. 820 A. D.).²

Trikûṭaka—native of a town or country (Trikûṭa) ‘on three hills’—must refer to some place in Aparânta, or the Northern Koṅkaṇ, not far from Kaṇheri where the plate was deposited.

Now, the Raghuvamśa (IV. śl. 52, 53, 58) says that Raghu, when he conquered the Koṅkaṇ, built a city called Trikûṭa³ on a lofty site, as a tower of victory. The inference from this is that in Kâlidâsa’s time, such a place as Trikûṭa really existed not far from the western coast. Aparânta was this western ¹ Govinda I. of the Râshtrakûṭas (Ind. Ant., vol. V., p. 144; vol. VI., p. 72) most probably flourished cir. 660 to 680 A. D., though it is not impossible that he may have been the Âppâyika-Gôvinda mentioned in the Aihole inscription (Ind. Ant., vol. VIII., pp. 238, 244), who must have lived about A. D. 625. The Elurâ inscription gives us the name of his father Indrarâja, and of his grandfather Dantivarman.—J. B.

² From the form of the characters, I incline to think that this inscription may be dated in the Gupta era; the Trikûtakas, like the Valabhi Senâpatîs, may have continued to use the Gupta era on assuming independence; or it may have been adopted from Gujarât.—J. B.

³ See also Ind. Ant., vol. III., pp. 6, 7.

coast, which the Greeks called Ariake or Abarike, and the commentary on the Raghuvamśa mentions on the authority of the Viśvakôsha that the district in which was Sorpâraka (the modern Supârâ), was called Aparânta :—

Aparântastu pâschâtýás te cha Surpâarakâdayah.

Ptolemy and the Periplus both mention Tagara as a noted city in the west of India. Now, Tagara is a corruption of the Sanskrit Trigiri—a synonym of Trikûṭa; and Tagara may be identified with Junnar, which answers to the statement in the Raghuvamśa, in being built fully 2,000 feet above the sea, and surrounded by steep hills such as Sivanêri,¹ Mânmodi, &c., and is readily reached from the Koṅkaṇ by the Nânâghât and Mâlsej Ghât. The kings of this place, then, would be the Trikûṭakas, and their rule may have extended to Salsette; but of their history we know nothing.²

The Junnar cave inscriptions, however, belong to a much earlier date, and afford us no information about these Trikûṭakas.

2.—INSCRIPTIONS.

The following inscription was translated by Pandit Bhagwânâlâl Indrajî and published in the J. Bom. B. R. A. S. in 1877 (vol. XII., p. 407). It is numbered 19 in Mr. West's collection and is found in cave No. 36, on the right hand side wall, outside the verandah, where it occupies a space about 3 feet 8 inches wide by 2 feet 6 inches high, but the surface is rough and in some cases, especially in the fourth, sixth and last lines, portions of it are much abraded. The letters are similar to those used in other Ândhrabhṛitya inscriptions.

“Siddham! In the 8th year of king Mādhariputta, the lord Sirisena, in the 6th fortnight of Grīshma, the 10th day. On the above (day) a merchant householder the son of Venhunandi,¹ merchant, a resident of Kalyāna, constructed a cave of Satta (?) with the respectable....² with his father Venhunandi, with his mother Bodhisamā, with his brother ...hathi, with an assembly of all (nikāya) co-religionists.”

Portions of other two inscriptions have also been translated by the Paṇḍit (J. B. B. R. A. S., vol. XIII., p. 11). They are among the latest at Kaṇheri, both belonging to the 9th century, and to the Śilāhāra kings of the Koṅkaṇ, who were tributaries to the Rāshtrakūṭas of the Dekhan. They are interesting as giving us the names of two kings in each of these dynasties as well as two dates, twenty-four years apart, in the contemporary rule of one sovereign in each family. Kapardī II., the Śilāhāra king, whose capital was probably Chemula or perhaps “Puri,” the son of Pulaśakti, was evidently reigning during the whole interval A. D. 853-878; and apparently Amoghavarsha ruled during the same period. He is distinctly the son or successor of Jagattunga: Amoghavarsha I. was son of Govinda III., one of whose birudas was Jagattunga, but he must have ruled cir. 810-830; and Amoghavarsha II. was the son of Indra II. Indra either bore the birudas of Jagadrudra and Jagattunga, or was succeeded by a son of that name; but the dates seem to point to Indra II. himself who may have borne the biruda of Amoghavarsha, and he succeeded Jagattunga about 850 A. D.³

The first is No. 15 of West’s collection, and is from the architrave over the verandah of Cave No. X.—the Darbār or Mahārāja’s cave. It consists of eight lines: three upper ones 11 feet long, then three others 11 feet 7 inches long, and two additional lines 5 feet 6 inches long, to the left of the second three, and on the same level.⁴

Translation.

“May it be propitious (svasti)! On the 2nd day of the dark half of Mār-gaśīrsha in the Prajāpati year, after seven hundred and seventy-five years, in figures—Sainvat 775⁵ of the Śaka king had passed: during the victorious and happy reign of Amoghavarshadēva, the great sovereign, the great king of kings, the noble lord, meditating on the feet of the great sovereign, the chief of kings, the majestic lord, the illustrious Jagattunga, he presented the whole of the Koṅkaṇ, during the flourishing and victorious reign in it of Kapardī, who has gained the five great titles, a jewel among the great chiefs of districts, meditating on the feet of Pulaśakti, the gem of the great chiefs of districts.....”

The next is No. 43 in West's enumeration, and is on the architrave over the verandah in Cave 78, just opposite to the last. It is in an inscription of two 7 feet lengths, of five lines each, each length being over an intercolumniation, and the short line below being on the capital of a column. It is faint and indistinct in places, and is in the same late alphabet as No. 15. Only the first portion is here translated.

Translation.

“May it be propitious! After seven hundred and ninety-nine, in figures 799 years of the Śaka king had elapsed, during the prosperous and victorious reign of the illustrious Amoghavarshadeva, the great lord, the chief of great kings, (by whom) was presented the whole of the Koṅkaṇ, in the circle of which Kapardī a jewel among the chiefs of districts, during his victorious and prosperous reign.....”

The whole of the inscriptions have not all been taken in fac-simile yet, and therefore are not translated here.

The other inscriptions are in preparation and will be published when ready.

3.—PAHLAVI INSCRIPTIONS IN THE KANHERI CAVES.

In Cave 66 there are three Pahlavi inscriptions of which Dr. E. W. West of Munich has supplied the following account with translations.¹

These three Pahlavi inscriptions are all dated, and consist chiefly of the names of certain Pârsis who visited the Kanheri Caves early in the eleventh century. They are all three inscribed in vertical lines, to be read from the top downwards; Pahlavi writing being read from right to left. As they would be more conveniently read if the lines were horizontal, the reason for inscribing them in vertical lines is not obvious; but it may be noted that a few short Pahlavi inscriptions, in the same comparatively modern character,² are found in Persia, which are also inscribed in vertical lines.

The earliest date is that in the inscription on the verandah pilaster to the right of a person entering the cave. This inscription is so faintly cut that the greater part of it would be illegible if it were not for the fact that the names it contains are the same as those in the second inscription.

With the assistance of that inscription it may be read, line for line, as follows³:—

¹ These inscription have been translated by Dr. E. W. West, for the Indian Antiquary, where they will also appear with his remarks in full. Mr. K. M. Kama also kindly supplied me with versions of the three longer inscriptions prepared by Pârsi scholars.

² Not the Sasanian inscriptions, which are always in horizontal lines.

³ As some sounds are written more ways than one in Pahlavi, italics are used to express such variants; thus, d is used for d written like t, j for j written like y, l and r for l and r written either like n or like an Avesta o, v and z for v and z written like ch.

This inscription is evidently incomplete, as it stops in the middle of a name and also omits the names contained in the last two lines of the next inscription. Nearly the whole of the first two lines have been broken away and removed since 1870, and the copy of them could not, therefore, be corrected in 1875; so that the reading of so much of the second line as does not occur in the next inscription, is doubtful.

In the following translations of these three inscriptions, as transcribed, the words in italics are understood, but not expressed, in the original Pahlavi:—

Translation.

“In the name of God.⁵

“Through strong omens and the good Judge this⁶ year 378 of Yazdakard, on the day Aûharmazd of the month Mitrô (10th October 1009), there have come to this place the co-religionists⁷ Yazdân-pânak and Mâh-aiyyâr sons of Mitra-aiyyâr, &c. (as in No. 2, as far as) Bêlt-zâd son of Mâh⁸. . . .”

The next date, which is only forty-five days later, occurs in the inscription in the recess over the water-tank alongside the cave (No. 1 on the plate). This inscription, though likewise cut faintly, is much more distinct than the last, and is numbered with the Pahlavi cipher for “two” preceding the invocation in its first line. It contains the same names as the last inscription, with a few others added at the end to complete the list, and may be read as follows:—

¹ Aiyyâr is merely a provisional reading for the Pahlavi equivalent of Pers. yâr, until its true sound is ascertained. In the second inscription it is always circumflexed, as if to be read âîdbâr.

² Or, perhaps, Khîrâd or Aîr-ae, as the final d (not being â) is doubtful after a vowel.

³ In the second inscription the l is distinctly noted by a diacritical mark, otherwise it would be better to read Farukhō-zâd, a common Pahlavi name.

⁴ Hitherto I have generally read this word âtarō direct from the Avesta, but it occurs in Sasanian inscriptions, not only in a form which can be read either âtarō or âtûr, but also in another form which must be read âtûr; it is also transcribed by Syriac writers as âdûr or âdur. The second part of the name is here written mahân, but is mâhân in the next inscription and in the next name here.

⁵ The Pahlavi word is here in the singular number.

⁶ As already stated, the reading of this first phrase is doubtful. Another guess would make it mean “in a good omened and happy state I write.”

⁷ This word is doubtful, but hamdînîkân seems to be the only intelligible reading for it as it stands in No. 2.

⁸ Breaking off in the middle of a name.

“2. In the name of God.

“In the year 378 of Yazdakard, the month Âvân and day Mitrō (24th November 1009), there have come to this place the co-religionists Yazdân-pânak and Mâh-aīyyâr, sons of Mitra-aīyyâr, Panj-bûkht and Padar-bûkht sons of Mâh-aīyyâr, Mardân-shâd son of Hîrâd-Bâhrâm and Hîrâd-Bâhrâm⁴ son of Mardân-shâd, Mitra-aīyyâr son of Bâhrâm-panâh and Bâhrâm-panâh⁴ son of Mitra-aīyyâr, Falân-zâd and Zâd-sparham sons of Âtûr-mâhân, Nûk-mâhân, Dîn-Bâhrâm, Bajûrg-âtûr, Hîrâd-mard, and Bêh-zâd sons of Mâh-bâzâe, and Bâhrâm-panâh son of Mitra-bandâd. In the month Âtûr⁵ Aûharmazd son of Âvân-bandâd died.”

The third inscription in point of time is that on the left-hand pilaster of the verandah, and is numbered with the Pahlavi cipher for “three” preceding the invocation in its first line (No. 2 of the accompanying plates). It is dated twelve years later than the preceding inscriptions, and contains a different list of names, in which only four of the names in the previous inscriptions occur. It is fairly legible, and may be read as follows:—

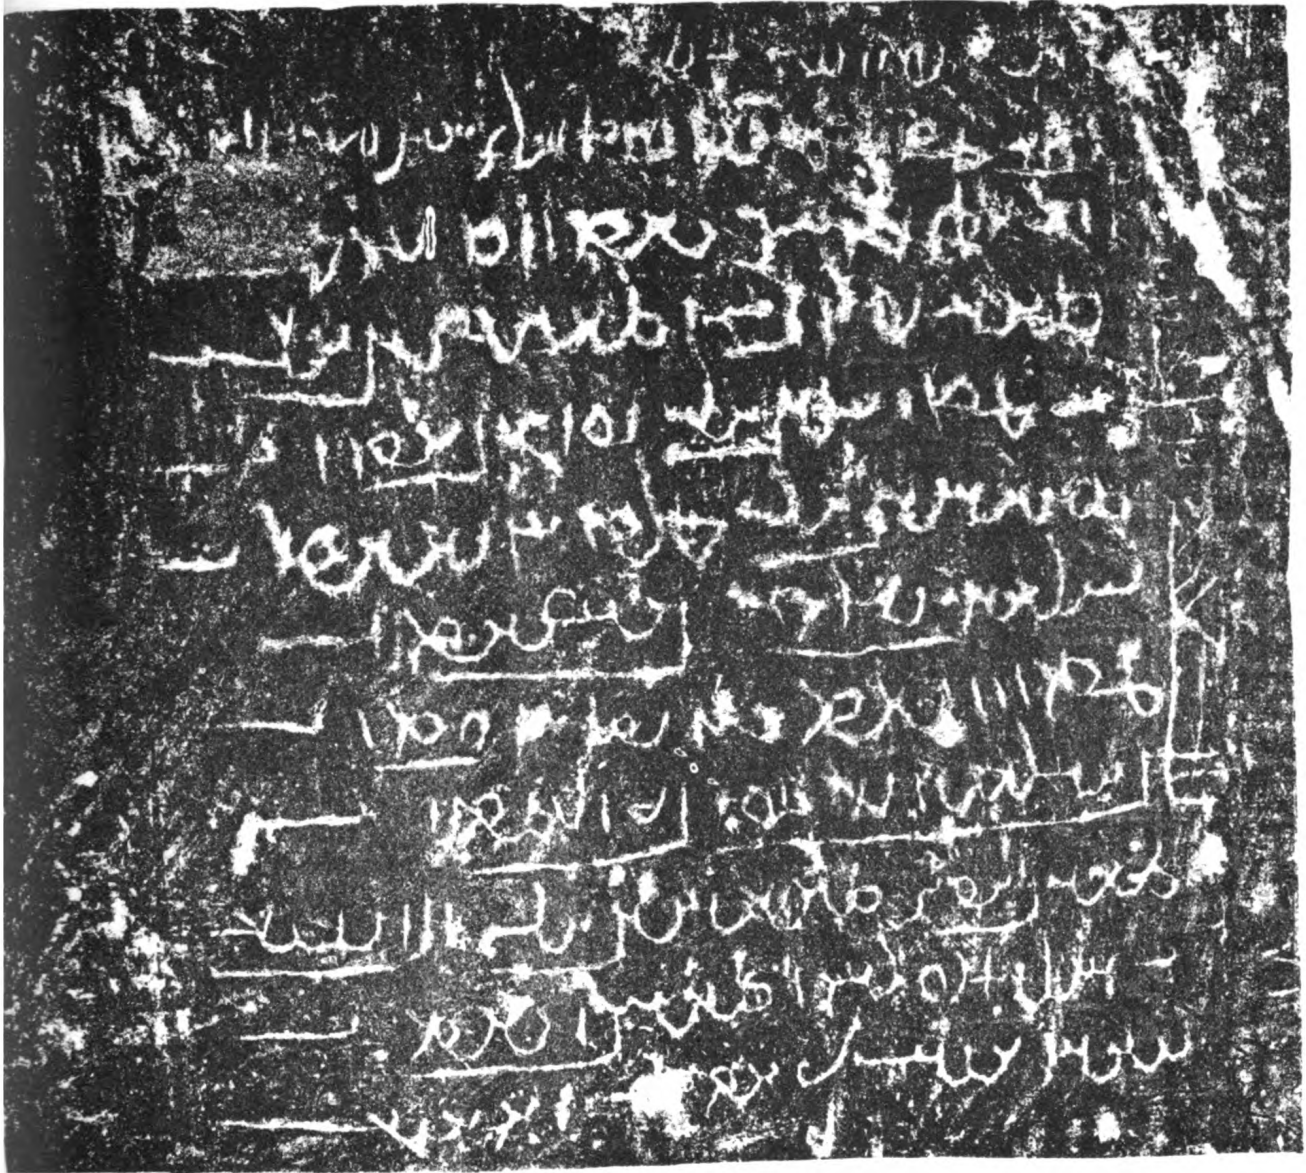

¹ This word is illegible, but is assumed to be the same as in the preceding inscription. The za in yazatô, like the zd in yazdân and Aûharmazd, and the zda in yazdakardō is written like â or ha, as it always is in Pahlavi MSS. ; but this is merely a graphical variant, as these words are written with za, zd, and zda in Sasanian Pahlavi.

² The last syllable is circumflexed, but can hardly contain the letter d.

³ The last letter is doubtful, and the word looks more like mûrû, but this would be unintelligible. This last line is evidently an addition to the inscription after the list of names was finished.

⁴ Probably a son of the preceding man, who had been named after his grandfather, a custom still common among the Pârsis.

⁵ That is, in the following month (9th Dec. to 8th Jan.). It might possibly be “on the day Mâh of the month Âtûr (20th Dec.)”; or it might be translated “Mâh-Âtûr and Aûharmazd sons of Avân-bandâd died,” but the word “died” is doubtful. This last sentence seems to have been a later addition to the inscription.

“ In the month Mitrô and day Dînô of the year 390 of Yazdakard (30th October 1021) there have come from Irân⁶ to this place Mâh-Frôbag and Mâh-aiyyâr⁷ sons of Mitra-aiyyâr, Panj-bûkht⁷ son of Mâh-aiyyâr, Mardân-shâd⁷ son of Hirâd-Bâhrâm, Bêh-zâd son of Mitra-vindâd, Jâvidân-bûd son of Bâhrâm-Gûshnasp, Bajûrg-âtûr⁷ son of Mâh-bâzâe, Mâh-aiyyâr and Bandêsh sons of Hirâd-farukhō, and Mâh-bandâd son of Gêhân-khash, the listener to instruction.”⁸

It must have been during the visit mentioned in this third inscription that the few words were inscribed on the dâgoba (discovered by Dr. West),⁹ for they mention the same year and one of the same names. This short inscription was correctly deciphered in 1866, as published in the Zartoshti Abhâs No. 3, p. 164, and is as follows :—

Shnat 300
 90-î Yazdaka(rd)
 Shatra-iyâr
 Mâh-Frôba(g).

“ The year 390 of Yazdakard, Shatra-iyâr. Mâh-Frôbag.”

Besides these four Pahlavi inscriptions at Kanheri there has been a fifth, of which only two or three detached letters are legible on another stone of the dâgoba, which is now in the Museum of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society. This inscription appears to have consisted of seven vertical lines on a

¹ These last two words are doubtful, min being nearly all cut away, and Airân hardly legible; they occupy the place of the doubtful word hamdênîkân in the first two inscriptions.

² Possibly the same name as the Mitra-bandâd of the first two inscriptions.

³ Or, perhaps, Bôsth.

⁴ This word is doubtful, being partly broken away.

⁵ The Pahlavi word is here in the plural number.

⁶ The words “ from Irân ” are doubtful, being partly cut away to form a mortice in the rock for attaching wood-work.

⁷ These four names also occur in the former lists in Nos. 1 and 2.

⁸ This last phrase is doubtful, and it is possible that the list of names is incomplete in this inscription, as it is in that on the other pilaster.

flat space between two groups of sculpture ; but the surface of the stone is so much decayed, that the letters legible are only just sufficient to show that the words have been Pahlavi.

4.—COINS.

During the excavations in making a path round the upper contour of the great reservoir at Vihâr in Salsette, in January 1855, upwards of a thousand copper coins were dug up in an earthenware pot. They were much corroded, but of some of the best of them drawings were made by the Messrs. West. As no notice has been published of these, it may not be uninteresting to have a reproduction of the drawings preserved, which is done in the accompanying plate. Three of them are distinctly Muhammadan, and not of a very early type. Only about half a dozen were of this coinage, and most of the others bear a cross on one side with a point between each of the arms ; and on the obverse is a small figure like a Maltese cross with a point on each side of it, over which is a line bent down at each end, and the remainder of the field is occupied by a symbol—the intent of which is very doubtful—between two sets of four points. A sixth has a rude outline of a cross on one side of it, the other being plain. Other pieces of copper of similar sizes were quite smooth.

10.—CAVE AT AMBIVALE.

The cave is about half a mile from the village of Ambivale near Jambrug, north from Karjat, under Kotaligadh, and to the east of it. It is cut in a long low hill forming the concave side of a curve in the bank of the river. The cave overlooks the river, being about 20 feet above it, sloping rock leading up to it from the water. It consists of a large square hall, about 42 feet by 39 feet and 10 feet high, having four cells off each of three sides (12 cells in all). Around these same three sides runs a low bench similar to the bench in Cave 35 at Kanheri and in No. III at Nâsik. Two doorways, a central and a side one to the right, lead into a verandah, 31' long by about 5' 10" deep, the eaves of which are supported by 3' 9" of return of wall at either end and by four pillars. Between each pair of pillars (except the central pair—where the entrance is,) and the end pillars and pilasters is a low seat, with a parapet wall running along the outer side and forming a back to the seat. The outside of the parapet wall was ornamented in the same style as Cave III. at Nâsik, with festoons and rosettes, but is so damaged that little now remains.

The pillars are of the same pattern as those of Nâsik—pot capitals with flat tiles surmounting them, but roughly finished. The shafts, springing from the seats, have no bases. The central pair of pillars have octagonal shafts, the remaining two are 16-sided.

The doorways have had modern carved doors inserted at a late date, and with some built basements with carved figures on them in six of the cells at the back. The cave has thus been converted into a Brahmanical temple. A Jogi, recently dead, occupied the cave, the consequence being that the surface of the rock in the hall and verandah has been thoroughly coated with soot.

On the second pillar of verandah, on the left of entrance, is a Pâli inscription in one vertical line, reading downwards.¹

¹ There are some remains of letters on each of the centre pair of pillars, though indistinct.

11.—INSCRIPTIONS IN THE AJANTA CAVES.

The Ajanta Caves and their paintings were treated in considerable detail in No. 9. of these papers,¹ and some specimens were there given of the remaining fragments of the oldest wall-paintings from Cave X.

Since writing the Notes, however, I have come upon two wood engravings in the Illustrated London News of 8th September 1849, representing, on a very small scale, two of the large copies made by the late Major Gill, and so unfortunately destroyed by fire at the Sydenham Crystal Palace in 1866. They represent portions of these old paintings as they existed more than thirty years ago. These woodcuts are not executed with much minuteness of detail; they represent, however, the grouping of the figures in a portion of the painting on each wall of this cave. The first, from the left wall, is that from which most of the copies given in the Notes were taken, and shows that nearly forty years ago it had become a mere series of fragments.

The second represents part of a scene from the right wall, which has since become almost black, and has been scribbled all over by native visitors. It may perhaps be possible even yet, however, to recover a portion of these interesting paintings; but in the meantime it seems desirable to preserve such records as we possess of them, and with this view the accompanying lithograph from these woodcuts is here given. Almost at the first glance we may recognise this as a representation of the famous Chhadanta Jātaka.² The head of the Chhadanta elephant appears in the extreme left of the drawing, under his favourite Banian tree; the hunter Sonuttara appears among the rocks of the ridge named Suvarṇa in the kāshāya dress of a mendicant, and further to the right he is seen carrying the tusks to Subhadrā, the consort of the king of Banāras. To the right of this, he and a companion are again represented supplicating or listening to the king with the queen at his right hand; and lastly, the queen is represented seated, in deep grief for the murder and dying of a broken heart, while the king stands before her addressing her.

The larger inscriptions are unfortunately so damaged as to render satisfactory translations impossible. Transcriptions of all, so far as they are legible, have been made by Paṇḍit Bhagwānlāl Indrajī, and are here given with tentative translations and remarks on them.

ROCK INSCRIPTION No. 1.

The oldest is that on the left side of the arch on the front of the Chaitya Cave No. X. It is in Prākṛit, and the characters are of a very early form of those used throughout the Western India Cave Inscriptions.

Sanskrit.

वासिष्ठीपुत्रस्य कटा वासिष्ठीपुत्रस्य कट-
हो दत्तः गृहमुख- or ह्दिनो गृहमुख-
दानम् दानम्

“A Kaṭahā and the gift of a cave-façade by Vāsiṭhiputa.”

Kaṭahā may be the Sanskrit kaṭāha, ‘a bambu lattice-work’ or ‘partition of bambu work,’ in Gujarāti kūḍa or kaḍo. Hence it may be inferred that the cave had some wooden lattice-work in the great arch over the doorway and lower façade, (which was probably of brick¹) and both were gifts of Vāsiṭhiputa.

Vāsiṭhiputa or Vāsiṭhīputra might be supposed to be the well-known Vāsiṭhīputra Puḍumāvi of the Nāsik inscriptions, but from the character of the letters, compared with those of the inscriptions of that king, this would seem to be earlier by two centuries. Then we find no title, such as Rāṇo, applied to him, as in other inscriptions. And the usage of naming sons from their mothers is shown from other inscriptions to have been common to other families besides that of the Āndhrabhṛitya dynasty. Thus at Pitalkhorā, we have the royal physician Vachhiputa; at Bhājā, Kosikiputa; at Kuḍā, Kochhiputa, &c. He seems, therefore, to have been a private person, and if so, we may translate thus:—

“The gift of a cave-façade by Vāsiṭhiputa Kaṭahadi.”

Kaṭahadi might then be regarded as either a family name or one derived from his native place, Katahāḍa, Sans. Katahrada.

INSCRIPTION No. 2.

On the back wall of Cave No. XII, on the left side of the door of the right end cell—

सउववरको सउपा[सयो]

Sanskrit.

स्थानकं देयधर्मः
घनामददस्य वणिजः
सोपवरकं सउपा[श्रयम्]

“The meritorious gift of a dwelling with cells and hall by the merchant Ghanāmadada.”

Remarks.

The letters of this inscription are not very clear, the language is Prākṛit and at the end of the last line are the syllables saupā. It may have been intended to engrave saupāsayo, but these syllables as they stand convey no meaning.

Sthānaka is ‘a dwelling.’ The residence of the priests of the Dhundiya sect of Jainas is still called sthānaka. It may have been applied to the layanās of early times. The uvavarakas, Sans. apavarakas, are the cells which surround the hall, and the upāsaya, Sans. upāsraya, is the central hall,—the whole together constituting a sthānaka.

Ghanâmadada resembles a local name probably corrupted from Sans. Ganapadra, and if so, the record may mean the gift of a merchant residing at Ghanâmadada: it is, however, very seldom to find such a record without the name of the donor.

INSCRIPTION No. 3.

This is on the left end wall outside the verandah in Cave XVI. The language is Sanskrit, and the composition is in verse. It is written in 27 lines. The letters are in the same square style as in the Sivanî Copper-plates, and which was current in the Chhatisgarh district and the country around the Benagaṅgâ about the 5th and 6th century. It is much weatherworn, especially towards the left side where it is most exposed. The following is a transcription of all the letters that are legible, made from a careful examination. Though the translation cannot, from the nature of the case, be very satisfactory, still some information may be gleaned from it.

It records the gift of a dwelling for monks by the son of a minister named Hastibhoja; his name is effaced, but it was perhaps Varâhadeva, which occurs in the 21st line. The donor was minister to king Harishena, and his father Hastibhoja was minister to Devasena, the father of Harishena. The inscription supplies the following list of kings:—

1. Vindhyaśakti.
2. Pravarasena.
3. (Rudra ?)sena.
4.
5. Devasena.
6. Harishena.

From the broken state of the inscription it is not clear whether Pravarasena was a son of Vindhyaśakti, or, as is probable, of a member of the Vindhyaśakti family. Of his son only -sena is legible, preceded by a faintly traceable form like -dra, so that the name may have been Bhadrasena, Chandrasena, Indrasena, Rudrasena, &c. The expression "Kuntalendra"—king of Kuntala—occurring in connection with him shows that he had something to do with the king of that country. Later on Kuntala is included in his dominions. His son's name is lost: he began to reign as a minor. His son was Devasena; and his was Harishena. Besides this inscription we have two copper-plate grants of this Vākātaka dynasty which seems to have had a somewhat extensive sway: one of these is the Sivanî grant translated (but not very accurately) by Mr. Prinsep, and the other found in a ploughed field at Chamak, 7 or 8 miles south of Ilichpur, some 11 or 12 years ago, and a transcript of which is given in the Notes, No. 9 (p. 54).

“..... extinguisher of the increasing fire of the sins of the three worlds
.....having bowed (to him) I describe the early succession of kings.

“Vindhyaśakti, whose valour increased in great battles, whose strength in his anger cannot be overcome by the gods,.....mighty in alms and in wars. Who was twice-born (dvija or kshatri), distinguished,—such was (he) on the earth. (He) who was majestic, like Indra and Vishṇu, who had won the whole earth by the vigour of his own arms.....and who was a standard of the web of glory to the dynasty of Vākātaka. Who covered the sun by the dust cloud caused by (the prancing of) his steeds in the battlefield..... Having made his enemies..... caused them bowed down and humbled. He who had quelled his foes, and whose deeds are like Indra’s, toiled in meritorious acts.....

His son was Pravarasena whose lotus-like feet were kissed by the rays from the jewels in the coronets of kings, whose eyes are like the fresh opening lotus and the rays of the sunPravarasena’s son was (Rudra?)sena the conqueror of all enemies, who justly (ruled) the earth of the king of kings. King of Kuntala.....

“ (He) the son of Pravarasena, exalted by highest excellence, by power, by generosity in punishing.....

“ His son.....having obtained power when eight years of age, ruled excellently.

“ His son Devasena became in the world.....of men and gods. By his lovely and purifying enjoyments.....of king of men and gods. Through the meritorious acts of this king..... Hastibhoja (became his minister) on this earth, who was the dwelling of good qualities and treasury of.....

“ Who had a broad and firm breast and lotus eyes..... who resembled the *Gandhahasti*¹ of the quarters ; he was a well-wisher, modest,.....and who acted in accordance with the dictates of his heart ; whose punishments are not destructive. Again, he being desirous of good, and from his capability to protect the people in the best and happiest way, he became popular and daily accessible by the people as a (father,) mother and friend.....This king having installed (him) and being at ease, he began to enjoy himself according to his heart's desire.

“ Afterwards this (king's) son was king Harishena, whose (eyes) were like the wet lotus..... the destroyer of miseries (Hari), the attractor of (men's) minds (Hara), beautiful like Kâma (Cupid), of glorious deeds and majesty like Indra's, (lord of the countries) including Kuntala,² Avanti,³ Kalinga,⁴ Kosala,⁵ Trikûta,⁶ Lâta,⁷ *Andhra*⁸.....

“ ...Son of Hastibhoja well known in the world, became minister to this king ; the whole world.....who was a senior, of staid and tranquil mind, endowed with the qualities of almsgiving, mercy, and generosity, and possessed of a sense of justice, ruled the country uprightly.....

“ To whom merit is a help for the other world because he acquired a heap of merits and made a prison round Lôkaguru (the teacher of the world—Buddha). Life, age, wealth, happiness.....constructed a magnificent dwelling fit for the abode of the chiefs of monks, in honour of (his) mother and father, in the chief of mountains inhabited by the king of serpents, whose fronts are covered with clouds filled with water.....

“ (The dwelling) ornamented with windows, doors, splendid verandahs, railings, and images of Devakanyâs (goddesses) and delightfully arranged pillars..... with *Chaitya-Mandira*⁹.....

“ A large reservoir of water and (adorned) by the abode of the chief of serpents and others¹⁰.....Warmed in summer by the heat of the sun, and fit for enjoyment at all seasons.....(as) the dwelling of Indra and the bright caves of Mandara.....in the mountain to which none is equal in greatness (he) made with love, pleasure, and expansive modesty a cave brilliant with the radiance of the crown of Indra This Varâhadeva, praised among the Sugatas, having given (the cave) into possession of the Saṅgha, having enjoyed comforts of men and gods, with

¹ The elephants of smell, so called because it was fabled that ordinary elephants were terrified by the mere smell of these.

² Part of Kânnadâ, somewhere about Anagundi or Hampe.

³ Western Mâlwa, round Ujjain,

⁴ The country between Oḍesa and the Kṛishṇâ.

⁵ Usually Audha, but here perhaps the district about Chhatisgarh in Central India.

⁶ Junnar in the Pûṇâ Zilla and adjacent districts,

⁷ Bharoch district,

⁸ The Tailaṅga country ; the name of the chief seat of power is probably lost in the lacuna.

⁹ This is no longer found : it may have been structural and outside.—J. B.

¹⁰ Nâgendraveśma is the recess for the image of the Nâga. This without doubt refers to the figure of Nâgendra in the staircase leading down from the front of the cave. (See Notes, p. 57.)—J. B.

“Again, may the whole world attain the state of tranquillity, excellence, freedom from evil, and sorrow, and various sins.”

INSCRIPTION No. 4.

This is on the side wall outside the verandah in Cave No. XVII, and like the last has also suffered much from the weather. This inscription is in 29 lines, and is in Sanskrit verse, each line containing one śloka.

This inscription furnishes the following names of kings :—

1. Dhratarâshtra.
2. Harisâmba.
3. Saurisâmba.
4. Upendragupta.
5. (Āgaja ? or) Kâcha.
6. Bhikshudâsa.
7. Niladâsa.
8. Kâcha II.
9. Kṛishṇadâsa.

There was perhaps one name more, preceding that of Dhratarâshtra, who is said to have been the son of some king. Whether Harisâmba was the son or brother of the preceding king is not clear. Saurisâmba is apparently the son of Harisâmba, but we know nothing of the relation of Upendragupta to his predecessor; so also the relation of Bhikshudâsa to Upendragupta is lost. Kṛishṇadâsa had two sons whose names, where they first occur, are obliterated, as is that of his wife. Later on Ravisâmba occurs as the name of one of them, and from the fragmentary phrases it appears that the elder murdered his brother, but afterwards repented. This is followed by the account of the construction of the Vihâra by the king or his minister, while Harishena was ruling—almost certainly one of the Vâkâṭakas to whom this Asamaka family may have been subordinate.

The characters in this inscription bear a close resemblance to those of the Valabhî and early Châlukya copperplate grants. From the style of alphabet and the tenor of the inscriptions it would seem then that Caves Nos. XVI, XVII, XVIII and the Chaitya-Cave No. XXVI, belong all to very nearly the same date.

“Making obeisance to the Muni who completely attained to the three sciences, I will set forth a description of the qualities of the donor of the vihāra, whose deeds are pure.....to the king regarding all as equal to himself and who has the royal umbrella over his head, was a son by name Dhratarāshṭra of the white umbrella.....This king's (son) was Harisāmba, whose face was as the lotus and the moon. Again king Saurisāmba, of pure lustre, was this king's (son).....Upendragupta of great fame and beauty. Then his son was king (Agaja)¹ whose well-known name was Kācha..... (was) Bhikshudāsa for spreading renown in the world. The king known in the earth by the name of Niladāsa (was) the son of this king..... Kācha, renowned and famous. Then Kṛishṇadāsa was this king's son who was an increaser of the splendour of his dynasty was (his wife) who was gentle, whose dress was white as the moonbeams, whose face was like the full moon, and who was adorned by modesty and good behaviour..... to this king by her were born two sons equal to Pradyumna and Sāmba, whose large eyes were lotus-like and whose beauty was as red burning gold. The first born, first to enjoy independent power (Ekādhipati), and the second assumed the name of *Ravisāmba*² Asmaka and others.....by frequently overcoming, they two were glorious as the sun and the moon of those, the creepers of whose glory in friendship have spread, and who conduct

¹ The word may also be read Avana instead of Agaja, which means 'a protector,' and if this reading be correct it cannot be a proper name; and the whole may mean that his "son was a protector (of the world) whose well-known name was Kācha."

² It would seem that correctly either Ravisāmba should be a title, or Ekādhipatya is a proper name, which however seems unlikely.

INSCRIPTION No. 5.

This occurs on the pilaster at the left end of the verandah in Cave XXII. Much of it is broken away, only a few letters in each of the eleven lines are now left. The language is Sanskrit prose, and the letters are similar to those of the inscription in Cave XVI.

¹ As there is no dāgoba or Chaitya in Cave XVII, it seems that the word Chaitya was used by the Buddhists, as it still is by the Jainas, for an image of Buddha.

² The Gandhakuti was perhaps the small Cave No. XVIII. The name is applied only to a temple containing images, and not to a monastic abode. The image in Cave XVIII must have been moveable.

INSCRIPTION No. 6.

On the front of the Chaitya-cave No. XXVI, over the right side door (see Notes, p. 83, and Plate XXI). It consists of 27 lines in Sanskrit verse, and with the exception of flaws in the first and in some of the lower lines, it is fairly legible. The alphabet is similar to that used in the early Chālukya and Valabhī copper-plates, and if not of the same date as that on Cave XVII, is but little later.

“He (Buddha) is victorious, ready and attentive to the good of the people, the destroyer of comforts, indued with spiritual knowledge, in whom all the three pure virtues have grown up, who has whose pure splendour is mercy, (2.) by whom release from frequent deaths, comforts, and power of not growing old, and of immortality, have been obtained, and who, though he is deceased and gone to happy and fearless and houseless final emancipation³ (yet) does good to the world. (3.) For this cause, saluting him and reciting his virtues is fruitful and of great and abundant advantage, and where even the gift of a flower is the cause of the fruit called heaven and final beatitude.⁴

“(4.) Therefore, a learned person, who follows the practice of those before him should here worship the Tathāgatas (Buddhas), whose hearts are soft through mercy and who are greatly popular among people by their well-known virtues.

“(5.) Devas from being subject to miseries are devoid of success. Also Śambhu, from the curse, was of trembling eyes. Krishṇa, though unwilling, became subject to the will of Yama. The Sugatas, therefore, because altogether free from fears, are victorious.

³ Literally, “who, though he is gone to the city of quiescence, happy and without danger, and where there is no need for a house.”

⁴ The northern or Mahāyāna Buddhists hold that if Buddha had lost all influence, it would be useless worshipping him or remembering his deeds. The Hinayāna sect say that worshipping and meditating on him of itself purifies the heart and leads to the desired end without any influence exerted on Buddha's part. The doctrine in the inscription is that of the Mahāyānas.

“(6.) Even Sthavirâchala Muni who was grateful, of accomplished desires, and virtuous, made for Buddha a stone dwelling, glorifying religion. (7.) Why should the Bodhisattvas, who are desirous of worldly happiness as well as of final release and are possessed of prosperity, not previously have acquired fame? (8.) A human being enjoys heaven so long as his fame in the world lasts; (so) fame that may endure as long as the sun and moon, must be acquired in the mountains.

“(9.) [In honour of that Bhavirâja] who has been in friendship with him through several transmigrations, who is steady, grateful, wise, learned, proficient in the Sura and Asura teaching of the Âchâryas, minister of the magnanimous king Asmaka, (10.) clever in worldly business, exceedingly fortunate every way, fulfiller of the desires of all the needy, a sweet speaker, exalted by virtues, gentle in modesty, much praised in the world for good behaviour: (11.) and who, as the excellent minister of the king, accomplishes merely by conciliation what is attained (usually) by punishments and by exertions only. (12.) His son Devarâja, a leader, was equal to him, and on the demise of his father exalted his dignity by his high qualities. (13.) In honour of that Bhavirâja, and in honour of his father and mother, Bhikshu Buddhahadra has caused a temple to be built to Buddha.

“(14.) Having recourse to Bhikshu Dharmadatta and (his) good disciple Bhadrabandhu, I constructed this temple through them.¹ (15.) May whatever merit is therein be for the attainment by these and by the world of the fruit of great Bodhi desired by all of pure qualities.

“(16.) He who on attaining the knowledge of the religion of Buddha is surrounded by relatives, and whose heart has been purified by the observance of many religious abstinences and by moral conduct, and has made the final release of people his duty, became a Bhikshu in his youth. (17.) Again the smallest virtue resulting in good cannot be accomplished while engaged in worldly affairs. The result of the actions of sages who are exalted by virtue tends to the enjoyment of happiness by the people.

“This temple is established for the welfare (of people, in a hill?), tuneful with the notes of various birds, and whose caves are filled with the sounds of cow-tails (chauris).....and which is inhabited by the Yogiśvaras.....The same aggrieved Achârya having taken over the anxiety of the people regarding the Sugata.....”

“The Śākya Bhikshu, the Bhadanta Guṇâkara's meritorious gift, may whatever merit is in this be for the attainment of supreme knowledge by all sentient beings, mother and father being first.”

¹ It would seem from this that the donor Buddhahadra was not resident near, but entrusted the work to these devotees.

PAINTED INSCRIPTIONS IN THE AJANTA CAVES.

Inscriptions written on the paintings are found in six of the caves,—Nos. II, IX, X, XVI, XVII, and XXII—most of them more or less mutilated.

PAINTED INSCRIPTIONS IN CAVE No. II.

No. 1.

There are no inscriptions in Cave No. I, but in No. II. besides fragments of a pretty long one in small letters on a dark green ground in the left hand cell outside the verandah there are two or three inside. No. 1 is on the lotus throne of a painted figure of a seated Buddha on the back wall of the hall.¹ The letters of this inscription are as late as the 6th or 7th century.

Besides this there is a line written among the Buddhas, but the letters are so mutilated and indistinct as almost to defy copying.

Nos. 3 to 8 are on the back and right hand wall of a chamber outside Cave II. to the left. They are descriptive of the subjects of the paintings on which they have been written, but unfortunately the paintings are as much destroyed as the inscriptions.

No. 3.

क्षान्तिवादिः¹

On the back wall to the right of a door in it, a man is represented seated on a stool (bhadrasana) in a plain dress indicative of a Sādhu or Brāhmaṇ; his head is destroyed; under his seat is No. 3 in letters of about the 6th century, in which we read the word kshāntivādiḥ—'a discourse on forbearance.'²

No. 4.

Facing him is another seated figure, and below is a belt of green colour on which is No. 4 in two lines, so mutilated as to be untranslatable—possibly it related to the kshānti philosophy.

Below this is a Brāhmaṇa or Pāsupata, seated on a stool in plain dress and with a Rudrāksha rosary about his neck. Opposite him is another male figure and between them is a woman seated, with her hands joined towards the former, whilst she speaks to the latter of the two.

No. 5.

Below these figures is inscription No. 5, also so destroyed as to be illegible,—but perhaps relating to the same subject.

² Kshāntivādin was the name of Gautama Buddha in one of his previous births. The kshāntis are the states produced by continued meditation on the four verities: see Vassilief, p. 140.

Below this again has been a royal figure surrounded by attendants, but the merest fragments are left of the scene.

The painting on the right side of this same room has also been almost entirely destroyed.

No. 6.

Among the fragments left are parts of a cow, over which is written the inscription No. 6 consisting of the name—Sarasuti, in letters of the same age as the others.

सरसुति

Sarasuti is a Prākṛit form of “Sarasvati,” the goddess of learning.

No. 7.

On the same wall near the front corner, has been a figure of a king seated on a throne, which bears the inscription No. 7:—

चैत्रिवल्लोकीराजा (?)

“King Chaitri of Valorka.”

Vallura is met with in the Ghaṭotkacha inscription, and may be a form of Valorka.

No. 8.

Above this is the broken inscription No. 8 which possibly expressed some religious tenet:—

[१].....नान प्रसेहे मनः स्वस्यात्रैव दुःखादि गाहि.....

PAINTED INSCRIPTIONS IN CAVE NO. IX.

Fragments of inscriptions on the paintings of this cave are numerous, but all in a more or less dilapidated condition. As many as sixteen have been noticed, but of some only a letter or two have been left. Five of the most legible have been given on the accompanying plate.

No. 9.

This is on the front wall of the Chaitya Cave No. IX, inside, over the door and close to the head of a Bhikshu:—

[दियधर्मो]यं शा[क्यभिलो]

स्तद्धृषि[यस्य]

.....माता

.....

“The meritorious gift of the Śākya Bhikshu Sanghapriya.”

The letter ya has been supplied. The characters are similar to those of the 6th century, and the portion of the painting on which it is, is of a correspondingly modern date, but it overlies part of a picture in a much earlier style of painting.

No. 10.

On the first pillar on the left side of the aisle, under a painted figure of a standing Buddha. The letters are of the 6th century:—

देयधर्मो उपासकजसदे-
वस्य

“The meritorious gift of the Upāsaka Jasadeva.”

There are three other fragments on different sides of this same pillar; two of them are over umbrellas, and one on the petals of a lotus. All are apparently of the same general character.

No. 11.

On an architrave or jamb attached to the first pillar on the left side of the cave, under the throne of a seated figure of Buddha. It is in somewhat earlier letters than the preceding:—

देयधर्मोयं भदन्त[ध]र्मेसेन[स्य]

“The meritorious gift of the reverend Dharmasena.”

On a broken pillar, the fourth from the front, on the same side of the cave, is a fragment in one line and a half. On the third standing pillar is another, also mutilated. And on the fifth standing (8th) pillar is another, on an umbrella, a line and half in length.

No. 12.

On the back wall of the cave under a painted dâgoba or Chaitya. This inscription is so damaged as to be illegible, but it affords specimens of the letters which apparently belong to about the 5th century, the period to which the painting on which it occurs may belong.¹ The inscription as usual begins with Deya dahama,—the second word misspelt as it sometimes is in these inscriptions. The letter bha, may perhaps indicate that the donor was a “Bhadanta.”

देयद्धर्मभ.....स्य म.....

There are also two other fragments on this same wall.

No. 13.

On the 9th pillar (6th standing one) on the left side, under a standing figure of Buddha:—

देयधर्मोयं शाक्यभिक्षोर्भदन्तभद्रसे[नस्य?]

“The meritorious gift of the Śākya Bhikshu, the Bhadanta Bhadra-sena.”

On the first standing pillar, on the right side, are about eight letters of another; and at the feet of a standing Buddha are traces of two or three letters. On the next are large fragments of two lines. On the entablature over this pillar, are fragments of an inscription in four lines.

INSCRIPTIONS IN CAVE NO. X.

Fragments of about twenty inscriptions have been found in this cave, most of them on the pillars, and having reference to the painted figures of Buddha with which they have been covered. Of several only a few bits of letters remain.

No. 14.

This is on the left wall, opposite the third column, just over a portion of the very early painting in this cave, and evidently belongs to the same age.¹ It is painted in dark brown letters on a light ground. The characters belong to the same age as the carved inscriptions elsewhere of the time of Śātakarṇi, as on the Amarāvati tope, &c. Unfortunately only a fragment is left of what it must originally have been.

No. 15.

On the same wall, opposite the space between the fifth and sixth pillars, above the old painting and just below a portion of the later painting consisting of figures of Buddha in orange colour. It is in three lines on a thin white ground. The letters are of about the 6th century, but it is much defaced :—

आचार्य.....सचिवस्य
देयधर्मो यदत्रपुण्यं तद्भवतु सर्वस-
त्वानां दुःखमोचा

“The meritorious gift.....Āchārya of.....Sachiva: may whatever merit is in this be for the (release) from miseries of all sentient creatures.”

There was another inscription, also on a thin white ground on the same wall, but it has faded entirely.

No. 16.

This is on the 6th pillar—4th standing one,—on the right side of the cave, about 5 feet up, at the feet of a standing figure of Buddha, in three short lines in white, on a reddish ground. The letters resemble those of about the 5th century :—

देयधर्मोयं शाक्य-
भिक्षोर्भदंत द्राढ-
धर्मस्य

“This meritorious gift of the Śākya Bhikshu, the reverend Drāḍhadharma.”
The name is written as Drāḍhadharma—apparently by mistake.

On the front of the 7th pillar (5th standing one), on the right side of the nave, at about 4½ feet from the earth painted on a green ground below a figure of a standing Buddha.

विपाशिः सम्यक्संबुद्धः चेतिक[य]रिकस्य

“Vipaśśi, the perfectly wise. (Gift) of Chetikayarik.”

By Vipaśśi is probably to be understood the name of the Buddha represented: the name, however, should be written with ssī.

On the 7th standing pillar on the same side over an umbrella is another in two lines and perhaps a letter or two of a third.

On the first standing pillar, on the left of the nave, are parts of an inscription in one line; and on the petals of a lotus is another in two lines, in a later character than the others. On the third is a fragment of a small one in two lines.

No. 18.

On the ninth pillar on the left side of the nave there have been two inscriptions under figures of Buddha on adjoining sides; one of these is destroyed, but it probably contained the name of the donor. Under the other Buddha we read—

“Of the same.”

No. 19.

On the 8th pillar (3rd standing) on the left side of the cave, on the lotus under the feet of a standing Buddha—

No. 20.

On another side of the same pillar, also on a lotus, under a seated Buddha, with a kneeling figure on each side the lotus stalk, but the inscription mutilated—

[भद]न्त सुदत्तस्य

“Of the reverend Sudatta.”

On the 4th standing pillar, left side, are very faint traces of two,—one surrounded by a black border, over the nimbus of a Buddha; the other on an umbrella over a Buddha, on another side of the pillar.

No. 21.

On the 10th pillar (the 5th standing one) on the same side, on the umbrella, over a standing figure of Buddha—

देयधर्मोयं शाक्यभिक्षोर्भदन्तसंघगुप्तस्य

On the 6th standing pillar, on the left side, are a few letters of another on an umbrella.

No. 24.

On the 17th pillar (10th standing one), on the left side, below a seated figure of Buddha, in three pretty long lines, but much defaced. The alphabet is apparently in characters of about the 5th or 6th century. In the beginning is a verse on the importance of making images of Buddha.

“..... whoever makes an image of Jina (Buddha) they.....of senses and of good lustre.....this meritorious gift of the Śākya Bhikshu Âchârya the Bhadanta Budhasena.”

On the next pillar there is also an inscription of two short lines. On the wall of the right aisle, under the 4th, 5th, and 6th ribs, are a few letters of an inscription in larger characters. Under the 20th rib is a single line. And under the 24th and 25th ribs are some fragments of another in two lines.

PAINTED INSCRIPTIONS IN CAVE NO. XVI.

These are below three figures of seated Buddhas on the left wall of the hall.¹ The characters used in these inscriptions belong to about the 6th century.

12.—GHATOTKACHA INSCRIPTION.

This inscription is cut on the left end of the back wall of the verandah of the large Buddhist cave near Gulwāḍā, a few miles from Ajaṅṭā. It was originally a very long one but has been much destroyed by the decay of the stone, especially below the tenth line. It is in Sanskrit ślokas, and the lines are made to follow the verses. Translation.

1. "The treasure of marvels called Buddha is victorious, who is the sage of sages, god of gods, teacher of teachers, best of the good, whose genius results from unproductive actions.

2. "From him virtue declared by the skilled in religion (arises) as also the assembly (gana-sangha), the foremost of assemblies (gana) (originates), and even an ungrateful and unjust prison (?)¹ dedicated to his virtuous person, becomes the bestower of good.

3. "In the southern country there was a renowned and great family of the best of Brâhman named Vallûra which has earned deserved glory since the time commencing from Brahmâ, and which is adored by the great.

4. "In this (family) was Yajña.....prakâsa the best of Brâhman equal to the Brâhman of ancient times (as) Bhṛigu, Atri, Gargga, Angiras, noted for good qualities.

¹ A similar expression occurs in the Ajañña inscription No. 3. The allusion is obscure.

5. "His son was Deva equal to a Deva (god), who was wise, a householder, just, a performer of religious rites. Having obtained possession of the countries of several princes, like Arjuna he performed religious rites therein.

6. "After him came Soma, equal to Soma (the moon), a Brâhman, the performer of acts mentioned in Śruti and Śmṛiti ; he set his heart on two wives born in Kshatriya families.

7. "He had born by his Kshatriya wife, of high family and chastity, a beautiful son named Ravi bearing the mark of a king, and who obtained rule over the whole Malaya country.

8. "He (Soma) had, by other Brâhmanî (wives), sons who were generous, and had attained their desires in the Vedas, the residence of which Brâhman is still Vallûra in the southern country.

9. "The son of Ravi was by name Pravara ; to him was born the illustrious Râma by name. His son was the famed Kîrtti, and his was Hastibhoja.

10. "When the Vâkâṭaka Devasena lived, Hastibhoja, the store (?) of people of good qualities, in this world, till now.....

11.—18. "In men of patience, wise, advanced together.....men of good qualitieswhich action of the king..... half of whose seat.....After this Devarâja..... white as the rays of the moon..... then filled with a hundred qualities.....In many of his sons.....the whole consequence..... well"

Remark.

The Hastibhoja of this inscription is probably the same as is named in the 8rd Ajaṅṭâ inscription (p. 69). He is here made the contemporary of Devasena. This supplies us with the ancestry of the minister Hastibhoja :—

1. Yajña.....prakâśa.
2. Deva.
3. Soma.
4. Ravi, born of a Kshatriya.
5. Pravara.
6. Râma.
7. Kîrtti.
8. Hastibhoja, after whose name the inscription is much defaced.

There is, however, a Devarâja mentioned who may be the same as in the 6th Ajaṅṭâ inscription (p. 77), and if so we should then add—

9. Varahâdeva.
10. Bhavirâja.
11. Devarâja.

It would follow from this that this cave is of somewhat later date than Ajaṅṭâ Caves Nos. XVI, XVII, and XXVI.¹

¹ This is borne out also by its architecture.

ELURĀ.

PANEL IN TIN THĀL.

Scale of 12" 6" 1 2 3 4 feet.

13.—INSCRIPTIONS IN THE ROCK-TEMPLES OF ELURA.

The inscriptions at Elurâ are very few and mostly so dilapidated as to be disappointing. Beginning from the south end of the series, at the Bauddha Caves, we take them in order as they come.

(1).—VIŚVAKARMA CAVE.

In the Buddhist Chaitya known as the Viśvakarma Cave, on the balcony above the porch, is the Mantra of the Mahāyāna sect—

Ye dharma hetu prabhavā hetuñ tesham tathāgato hyavadatteshām cha yo nirodha evam vādi mahāsramana[h].

It is written at the end of every MS. in Nepāl, but does not occur in India perhaps before the 5th century; the earliest yet known being on a dāgoba at Kanheri and one given from a slab *Jour. Asiat. Soc. Beng.*¹ of rather later date. This is in characters of perhaps of the 8th or 9th century.

In the Tîn Thâl, the last of the Bauddha Caves at Elurâ, there is a panel, repeated in several places, and in each instance divided into nine compartments each sculptured with a separate figure. In the centre is Buddha, seated in the jñāna mudrâ or attitude of meditation, his hands placed over one another with the palms up, and resting on the upturned soles of his feet. He squats upon a padmāsana or lotus seat. On each side of him is an attendant with a chauri or fly-flap. In the compartments right and left of the central one, and also seated on padmāsanas, are Padmapāṇi and Vajrapāṇi, recognisable by their positions with respect to Buddha as well as by the frontal emblems of a Buddha and a dāgoba, and the cognizances of a lotus and the vajra. The three figures in the upper line are perhaps Sāmanta Bhadra, Viśvapāṇi, and Ratnapāṇi—though the second bears the sword,² one of the symbols of Manjuśri. Of the three in the lower row, that on the right has the book borne on a flower, the special emblem of Manjuśri, who holds the place of Sarasvatī in the Bauddha mythology. The one on the left, in this row, bears a flag (dhvaja), and he and the next must be also Bodhisattvas,—such as Dharmapāṇi, Manipāṇi, Karmapāṇi, &c. It will be observed that the attitudes of the eight figures surrounding the central one vary: the legs in the 1st, 2nd, 6th, 7th and 8th are in the same positions,—the right knee being raised; in the 1st, 6th and 7th, the right hand is open, as if these figures were in the act of speaking; the 2nd and 8th have the fingers of the hand closed upon the knee; again the 3rd, 4th and 9th have the right knee flat on the seat and the hand leaning on it, while the left hand in each of these supports the cognizance. The symmetry of this arrangement is evidently studied. The same figures appear as supporters or attendants on the figures of Buddha in the shrines in the Do Thâl and Tîn Thâl (see plate).

² The sword borne on a lotus is also one of the distinguishing marks or cognizances of the Simhanātha Lōkēśvara Bodhisattva of the modern Nepalese Buddhists. This sword is called Chandrahāsa Khaḍaga (see Notes, No. 9, p. 101). Both the sword and book, together with the bow and arrow, are borne by the six-armed figure found at the temple of Sambhunātha and figured as Lokanātha by Mr. Hodgson in Trans. R. As. Soc., vol. II, p. 255, pl. iv, fig. g.

On some of the pillars of the Tin Thâl are rudely cut inscriptions in characters of about the fourteenth century, probably the work of visitors.

(2).—DÂŚA AVATÂRA.

On the west side of a mandapa in front of the Dâśa Avatâra temple is a long Devanâgarî inscription, but faintly cut, and very much chipped. About half of the first two lines is lost, and indeed few letters are not injured. With much care the Paṇḍit painted what was intelligible and then made the following transcript. A photograph was also taken. The language is in Sanskrit verse and the letters of about A.D. 700-750. It is in 14 long lines and contains 29½ ślokas of different metres :—

A connected translation would be almost impossible, but the contents are as follows:—

(Sl. 1, 2). It opens with an address to Śiva and Pârvatî; (3) contained probably an address to Sarasvatî; (4, destroyed) but probably in it the poet announced his subject; (5) he says what had been told by poets of former kings was remembered and known, so he is led to celebrate the fame of this dynasty; (6, the 1st charaṇa is wanting—perhaps forgotten:) he writes of the Râshṭrakûṭas: Who in the world does not know of them? the only dynasty fit to protect the earth; who conquer Vishṇu in the churning of the four oceans; (7, much damaged,) relates to the râjas of the past, who were liberal to those they loved and who asked of them: who were terrible to the crowds of elephants of the armies of their powerful enemies; (8) account of Dantivarman, whose glory like the waves of the milky ocean lightened the whole horizon, &c; (11—13) his son Indrarâja is celebrated; (14) this Viśam Mahipati Indrarâja's son was Govindrâja; (15) Govind's praises; (16) his son was Karkarâja; (17, 18) his praises; (19) his son was Indrarâja; (20) his praises ; (21) Dantidurga was his son ; (22) he is praised ; (23) placing his feet on the necks of his enemies, and Vallabha having become tributary was overcome, and Sandhubhupa¹, Kanchi, Kalinga, Kośala, Śrī Sailadeśa, and besides, the Mâlwa, Lâta, Tauka râjas were subjugated, whence he took the name of Śrīvallabha ; (24) continues his praises ; (25) contains the name of Mahârâja Śarva, who was probably a brother or a friend to the king, for he is described as connected with the king as Arjuna (Bibhatsu) with Yudhishtira (Jayin). (26) At Ujjain he gave great presents to râjas and much money to the poor ; (27, 28) his praises are continued ; (29) the second part of this is obscure,—he approached with his army and staid at this temple ; a Gurjara râja is mentioned, apparently in connection with it : his fame is then celebrated. The inscription, however, is unfinished and stops before ending the 30th verse.

This inscription then carries the Râshtrakûta dynasty back two generations previous to those mentioned in other inscriptions.² The kings here named are—

(3).—KAILÂSA.

On the ceiling and architraves of the front porch of the great monolithic temple of Kailâsa there are some remains of painting of three different ages. The lowest of these is perhaps of about the 8th century or when the temple was finished, and done on a ground similar to that used at Ajañtâ. An elephant, a human figure, &c., can be distinguished, of good execution.

At a later date this has been covered over with a coating of lime and painted upon with figures of the gods, and on the architraves is a battle scene. On the south side are two armies ; in the one to the left are a horse and then two elephants ; over one are the letters -lurunghu (or thu ?), and behind are horsemen, &c. The man on the horse has a spear ; in the army to the right is, first an elephant bearing a spearman, who is about to slay the horseman, and a man is represented falling down. Above the elephant, painted in modern Devanâgarî characters, we read—and over the horseman—

Svasti Śrī Pramârirâû

Malagaha.

Behind Pramârirâû's⁴ elephant are footmen in mail, bearing spears and round shields, their hair tied with a band, and all with large earrings—as the Arab ¹ The letters are much injured, and Sandhubhupa may be read Sandhukûpa, and yaśrīvallabhatâmvâpa, may perhaps be prithvîvallabhatâmvâpa.

² See Ind. Ant., vol. V, p. 144 ; vol. VI, pp. 60-72 ; or Arch. Reports, vol. III, pp. 31ff.

³ For the Râshtrakûtas after Govinda, see Arch. Surv. West. Ind., vol. III, p. 32 ; or Ind. Ant., vol. VI, pp. 59-72.

⁴ Kṛishnadeva Pramâra, the fifth predecessor of Bhôja Râja of Dhâra, reigned about 890-900 A.D., and Kṛishnarâjâdeva Akalavarsha of the Râshtrakûta dynasty ruled about 945 A. D. (Ind. Ant., vol. VI, p. 51 ; Report Arch. Sur. W. India, vol. III, p. 32) ; but neither of these could have come into contact with the Muhammadans.

writers remarked of the Râshtrakûtas; behind are horsemen with swords and shields.

On the west side, a râja is represented seated with a chhatra held over him; to the left some people are paying respects to him, and to the right are two bearded men seated with chhatras. Over the râja is written—

Svasti Kannuradêvarâya,

and over the men—

-raraṇa(or ? la)

the rest is lost.

This Kannuradêva is probably Krishṇadêva or Kannaradêva II of the Nikumbhavaṃśa who ruled at Pâtna, probably as feudatories of the Devagiri râjas. Kaṇhar fort, near Pâtna, possibly takes its name from the same prince who flourished about 1150 A. D.

On the north side is a fight; from the left an army advances, in which is, first, an elephant bearing a râja, and behind him come men with drawn bows and arrows and others with sword and shield: the râja's name, however, is lost. On the right, many men with sword and shield advance rapidly all with the sword arm stretched out, and pierced with arrows; all have beards and large eyes and may be intended for Muhammadans; over them is painted the word Mahamaraloku (or Masamaraloku).

On the base of the pilaster on the north or left side of the entrance to the hall is a short inscription in three lines of Canarese, which reads—

*Gaṅgapagaḷa maga Vagayaṃṇana ba-
raha | Saka 1312 Śrî*

It is thus translated by Mr. J. F. Fleet:—

“The writing of Vagayaṇṇa, the son of Gaṅgapa. Śaka 1312. Śrî!”

In Kailâsa there is a rock-cut inscription on the pilaster to the right of a figure of Lakshmî facing the visitor in entering the court, and under a figure of a four-armed gaṇa. There was one also on the left, but it is abraded so that only two letters are left; that on the right is also partly destroyed, but seems to read—

*râdhê[ku]labhadraṅkarasya
Śrî jalakî(nde ?)
dadhichadḍa(ṇḍa).....*

The 3rd letter is injured and the 7th is read doubtfully -ṅka, so also is the last letter in the 2nd line: the last letter legible in the 3rd line seems to be dda, but it is very faint and may be ṇḍa or even dau. Any interpretation must be doubtful, but it seems probable the reading is—

*Radhekula Bhadrâṅkurasya
Śrî jalakrîdau dadhichanḍa.....*

“(The gift) of Lakshmî sporting in water and Udadhichanḍa (a gaṇa of Siva), by Bhadrâṅkura of the Râdhe family.”

The value of the inscription however is, that the alphabet belongs to the date of the temple, and corresponds to that in use in Râshtrakûta inscriptions of the time of Dantidurga, early in the 8th century, and thus confirms the date assigned to Kailâsa on architectural grounds.

Beside a lînga on the right side of the porch are some four letters in the southern form of alphabet and of about the same age. On the other side is a painted inscription of Śaka 1384, below a lînga, worshipped by Mārkaṇḍêya, and was probably written when the painting was renewed and the lînga restored, after the last iconoclastic invasion of the Musalmâns. On the padmâsana of Lakshmî at the entrance, is a carved inscription :—

Samvatu 1385 Kârtika vadi 8.....

Probably the date here is also in the Śaka era, to which the characters agree, thus bringing it to the same time as the above date of restoration.

The first of the small temples on the platform behind the great shrine and to the right was dedicated to the Mâtris, whose seven seats are arranged along the back, with Kârtikasvâmi's or Śiva's at the left end and one for Gaṇapati and Bhṛîngi at the right wall; a small figure was found of Vaishṇavî in excavating the area below. The next temple was for Chanda—whose place it is,—and has a pedestal for one image. Chanda is usually represented nude, in a state of lustful excitement, two or four-handed, with trîśula, and jug or damaru, jaṭâ head-dress, and Śiva's third eye; the refuse of the offerings in a Śaiva temple are thrown to him.

The third small temple is for Pârvatî, whose shrine ought always to be just behind Śiva's; the fourth, on the north-east, is for Bhairava or Rudra; and the fifth—on the north, was for Gaṇeśa.

(4).—RÂMESVARA.

In Râmeśvara, on a pillar by the side of the entrance, is carved—the name of some visitor from the south, in characters of the 7th or 8th century.

Śri Nâgadêvana

(5).—THE JAINA CAVES.

Among the Jaina Caves in the northern spur of the hill, the Chhota Kailâsa,—as it is called, from its being a monolithic temple like the great Brahmanical shrine,—has never been finished. During the excavation of a part of the earth with which the court and hall is filled, some images were discovered, all more or less mutilated. On one of these wanting the head is an inscription dated Śaka 1169 (A.D. 1247) recording the dedication of the image by a native of Vardhanâpura.

In the lower hall of the Indra Sabhâ on the front of a square pillar is a colossal figure of a Tîrthanîkara with a short inscription in the Kâyastha or old Nâgarî character, and attributed by Mr. J. F. Fleet to the 9th or 10 century. It reads—

Śri Nâgavarmma kri(kri)tâ pratimâ.

“The image made by Śri Nâgavarmâ.”

At the left or west end of the front aisle is a chapel with colossal Digambara Tîrthanîkaras on each side the entrance, and under the one on the north or right side is an inscription in three short lines in rather older like characters than the last. It reads—

Srī Sohila Brahmachāriṇaḥ Śāntibhaṭṭā-raka pratimeyam.

“This is the image of Śāntibhaṭṭāraka (made by) Sohila, a Brahmachāriṇa.”

There are also in the hall on the left of the court of the Indra Sabhā some fragments of inscriptions in old Canarese characters which Mr. Fleet ascribes, from the form of the alphabet, to about 750 to 850 A.D.

(6).—PĀRSVANĀTHA.

On the northern spur of the hill in which the Elurā Caves are, is a large image of Pārsvanātha, the 23rd Jaina Tīrthamkara. It is in the usual squatting position on a śinhāsana or throne, and measures 9 feet from knee to knee, and 16 feet from the snake-hoods, which form a canopy over it, to the base of the throne, which has a wheel in front. Right and left are worshippers—among whom are represented Śiva and Pārvatī. Over this figure a structural building was erected early last century.

On the cushion on which the image is represented as sitting, is carved the following inscription dated in 1234-5 A. D. It was copied by me in 1877, and has been translated by Dr. Bühler.

14.—BANAVASI PALI INSCRIPTION.

In the court of the great temple of Banavâsi in Canara, I found the following Pâli inscription on the two edges of a large slate slab on which was carved a five-hooded cobra. The first line is on the left margin of the slab from top to bottom, and the second line and the half are on the right side margin,—a letter being broken away at the beginning of the full line, perhaps two more a little way down ² and some at the end.

The following is Paṇḍit Bhagwânâlâl Indrajî's reading and translation:—

“To the Perfect ! In the year 12 of the century the king (being) Hâritiputa Sâtakani, the cherisher of the Vehnukadaḍuḍu(?) family, the 7th fortnight of the winter months, 1st day, the meritorious gift of the Mahâbhuvî (Mahâbhojî) the king's daughter, Sivakhandanâgasiri, wife of Jivaputa, with her son—of a Nâga, a tank and a vihâra. These three works by the prime minister Khadasâti. Naṭaka, the disciple of Damoraka and son of the Âchârya Jayantaka, made the Nâga.”

¹ That is, destroyed his karma, which bound him to the Samsâra.

² The letters in the second line transliterated as °ya sakri° and Sivakhadanâ° may be also read somewhat differently.—J. B.

Remark.

The letters of this inscription seem to belong to the second century, and resemble those of the inscriptions of Yajña Śri Śātakarṇi ; it may be a little later, but not earlier. Who this Hāritīputra was we cannot say ; he has the title of Śātakarṇi, which, though associated with the Āndhrabhṛitya dynasty, may have prevailed also in other families. It is a title for a warrior. The "century" of the date, if it means a cycle of a hundred years, has not been previously met with in the Peninsula of India,¹ though used in Kāśmīr. As in Rudrādaman's inscription we have the 72nd year, not of his reign, but the numeral of the current year ; so here the date is in that of the current year of the century. Until we find other inscriptions connected with or throwing light on this we need not say more about it.

Vehṇukaḍa, Sans. Vishṇukaṭa, probably was the name of a place, to which the Duṭu family belonged.²

15.—SILAHARA GRANT OF MARASIMHA.

It is well known that the late Mr. Wathen, Secretary to the Government of Bombay, collected a considerable number of copper-plate grants, which he translated in the early volumes of the Royal Asiatic Society's Journal. Some of the grants are still in possession of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, though even of these some plates seem to have been lost ; thus, of Wathen's Grant No. 10 (Journal Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. II, p. 388, and Vol. V, p. 183), only the second plate is now in the Society's Museum ; and of his No. 1 (Journal Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. I, p. 379, and Vol. III, p. 94), the third plate has disappeared within the last eight or ten years. How many may have been lost entirely we have no means of knowing.

Mr. Wathen published no fac-similes,—indeed no real fac-similes of Indian inscriptions had been published before his death,—and, though a good scholar, he sometimes fell into mistakes and mislections. It is exceedingly desirable, then, that we should have fac-similes of his inscriptions, and indeed of all old inscriptions translated in the first-half of the century, to submit to the examination of the greatly advanced scholarship of the present time.

Mr. Wathen seems to have taken ink impressions of many, if not of all, of his plates, and left numerous copies of these with the Society. The paper has now, after a lapse of forty years, become very rotten, and will scarcely bear handling. From among these old impressions, however, I picked out a few, and succeeded in mounting them. They are all "reverses," and can only be read by looking through the paper, or holding them up before a looking-glass ; but this can be remedied in photo-lithography, and I have thought it worth while to have the accompanying plates, forming a complete grant, taken from these impressions, in order to preserve it, the original plates being lost.

¹ Albiruni, in speaking of the Lokakāla, says the natives of India reckon by centuries, and leaving out the number of the century, call the year of it the 'Samvatsara of the century.'—J. B.

² An article containing my somewhat different reading and translation will be published in the Indian Antiquary.—G. Bühler.

They contain a Silâhâra grant of Mârasimha, dated Śaka 980. Wathen's account of them was published in the Journal Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. II, p. 384, and Vol. IV, p. 281.

Mr. J. F. Fleet, C.S., has supplied me with the following transliteration and analysis of this grant. He will publish a full translation at some future date.

¹ This form of the name must be an adaptation of Silâra, to suit the metre of this particular verse. The usual form, Silâhâra, occurs in line 27.

² This serpent king, Maleyaṅka, is not mentioned in any other Silâhâra inscription known to me.

³ The punctuation of this inscription is very indifferent. The marks are frequently put, as here, in the wrong place and in the middle of a word.

A GRANT OF MARASIMHA. - ŚAKA 980

Handwritten text in Brahmi script on a dark red background, likely a grant or inscription. The text is densely packed and covers most of the page area.

Analysis.

After giving the Śilâhâra genealogy from Jatiga down to the Mahâmaṇḍa-lêsvara Mârasimha, this inscription proceeds to record that,—in Śaka 930, the Vilambi saṃvatsara, on Thursday, the seventh day of the bright fortnight of Pausha, at the time of the sun's commencing his progress to the north,— Mârasimha, while reigning at his capital of Kṣiḡiḡiladurga or Kṣiḡiladurga,¹ bestowed upon a priest named Chikkadêva the village of Kuṇṭavâda,² situated on the south bank of the river Kṛishnâvêrṇâ, in the centre of the villages of Kan-navâda³ and Hâdalivâda⁴ and Gâlikuṭṭi,⁵ in the Sirivoḷal⁶ Twenty-four, which was in the Miriṅja⁷ district of the (Kûṇḡi) Three-thousand.

16.—THREE INSCRIPTIONS

FROM THE CABINET OF THE AMERICAN ORIENTAL SOCIETY, NEWHAVEN, U.S.

The accompanying plates are photo-lithographed from rubbings kindly sent me by Professor Addison Van Name, the Treasurer and Librarian of the American Oriental Society, Newhaven. The stones on which the inscriptions are engraved were presented to the Society by Dr. Fitz-Edward Hall about 20 years ago.

¹ It occurs spelt in both ways in this inscription. I cannot identify the place.

² The 'Kootwar' of the maps.

³ The 'Kunwar' of the maps.

⁴ Probably the modern 'Ghalwar' of the maps.

I cannot identify this place, unless it is represented by the modern 'Dowlee' of the maps.

⁶ The Sanskrit form of this name would be Śrîpura. It is the modern Śirôl,—the 'Sheerool' of the maps,—in lat. 16° 44' N., and long. 74° 40' E. The other places are close by.

⁷ The modern Miraj.

The first and largest was procured by him in 1857, at Bhera-Ghât on the Narmadâ about six miles west of the village of Tewar, where also the second was found, and which is about six miles west from Jabalpur. "The larger stone" he says, "had been brought as serviceable building material to the side of a temple which was in course of erection. When rescued it was on the point of being buried, face downward, in one the walls. Had its threatened fate been realized, quite possibly it would not have been spoken of in print for several centuries." This stone "is $33\frac{1}{2}$ inches broad by $22\frac{1}{2}$ inches high. It is a plain block of greenstone (aphanite containing a little carbonate of lime) of a soft texture, and easily cut. The inscription upon it is of 29 lines—the last one of them indented about 4 inches—which cover its whole surface excepting a narrow and unornamented margin. It is engraved with great care, and with no little skill and nicety of execution, and is in almost perfect preservation, so that its characters are, for the most part, as regular, elegant, and legible as the best manuscript." Dr. Hall remarks that "it seems to have been aimed, in the manuscript of this memorial, to make it as formidable in aspect as practicable. To this end few occasions are left unimproved of doubling consonants where the grammar permits their duplication, and of yoking the final letters of words to the initials of those that succeed. For example we have अज्जुन, कीर्त्या, and even निधिर्न and गर्भ; as also किम्वा, which is an error. Equally unauthorized is सिन्ह, which is everywhere put for सिंह. The dental न is, in two instances, combined laterally with र, and likewise in several places, with the dental and palatal sibilants; for the sake of conjunction, the anusvâra is changed to न, before a sibilant in stanzas 6 and 35. In the last verse of the 29th stanza the स of सार्ध is repeated, although the visarga of the preceding word is retained. But on the other hand the sibilants are nowhere confounded: द and ढ have different symbols; and they are employed, generally, with just discrimination. The deviations, in this article, from accuracy, like several of the peculiarities above noticed, may have been the fault of the engraver. Thus बुद्धि is once substituted for बुद्धि, बन्धुर for बन्धुर, बहुमाय for बहुमाय, बाल for बाल, and बाप्प for बाप्प. From the 11th stanza we learn that the juvâmûliya and its क were once written क् ; and from the 12th stanza that the shape of the upadhmanîya and its प (प्र) was प्." Whether in the middle or end of a word "the anusvâra is more often turned into a conjunct nasal; and a consonant or the first consonant of a group is doubled under a ँ, the only exceptions (to this latter rule being घ, र्थ, र्थ, ई, ई, in all cases of their occurrence; and also, in a single instance म्. As regards the diphthongs e, ai, o, au, the inscription follows, with total indifference, the ordinary Devanâgarî method of writing them, or that which is usual in the Bengâlî. The sign of omission (ऽ) is not employed on the stone nor are the verses of its text numbered; but the marks of interpunction, (i) after a half-verse, (ii) after a verse, are introduced with entire regularity. At the end of a half-verse stands always म् and not anusvâra: in two cases, however, (10a, 28b) the virâma is omitted. Of other omissions, we have, verse 2a, कुरा: for कुरा:—this is at a place where a few syllables (viz. घम्भर्वम्भर्मा) have been erased and re-cut. Another like case of correction occurs just before in the same line (viz. बुमुदस्यकिंश), and a third near the end of the 9th line of the inscription, or at the end of 12a, affecting the syllables" which read जगन्वज्र: "The correctness of this reading, however, is not entirely certain. The ज, indeed, admits of no question ; the ग् is less clear, but yet is altogether probable ; for the next syllable the stone gives only the double vv," not rvv as read by Hall, "omitting the superposed r (ॡ) which causes the reduplication ; and the following character is entirely illegible, but cannot possibly we think be स्तृ : (as read by Hall), its lower part, which alone remains unobliterated, is clearly (r), and not (r') ; above it might stand almost any single letter, but not a double one ; for that there is no room, nor could a स्तृ have been cut without leaving distinct traces on the unbroken part of the stone. We know not what to conjecture, if not ग्रः, ग्रह् is sometimes found used in the sense of 'possession' by a passion ; the clause might then mean 'Murala ceased to be possessed of arrogance.' In the following pāda the stone reads distinctly चकपे for चकमे. This is probably Mahīdhara's error ; but, if the metre did not forbid, we might regard it as a misreading for चकपे, 'trembled' ; perhaps the word was in the cutter's mind. Of the first syllable in the same line and pāda only the upper part of the right hand lines are left : the consonant must be क् ; but it might be combined with r and with any vowel excepting i," but we presume the reading कङ्गः proposed by Dr. Hall to be the correct one. At the beginning of verse 6 "the reading is रूपैरनेकैर्, 'with manifold forms.' In verse 10, the last syllable of the first half-verse, which comes at the end of a line, is much broken : what is left seems to us to point out distinctly, as the original reading, त् instead of वा (as read by Hall) : this would change the meaning of the word from active to passive. In verse 17*b* finally the stone has जनिप (जनिप्?) for जनिष्ट."

The inscription has been translated and commented on by Dr. Hall.

Another copper-plate grant found many years ago at the village of Kumbhi,¹ on the Herun river, 35 miles N. E. from Jabalpur, and dated "Saṁ. 932," gives the genealogy of the Kalachuri or Kulachuri kings of Chedi or Dāhala as in this inscription but with some slight additions. With certain notes gathered from other sources, this genealogy stands thus:—

Yuvarāja Dēva, either the same as Lakshmaṇa Dēva or his son, and contemporary with Vākpati Rājā (cir. A. D. 974).²

Kokalla Dēva, his son, (mentioned in śl. 8 of this inscription) contemporary with Bhoja (cir. 1003-1058 A. D.).³

Gāngeya Dēva, son (śll. 9, 10).

Karṇa Dēva, son, married Āvalladēvī, a Hūṇa (śl. 12,13); a great warrior. Bhīma Dēva of Gujarāt (1022-1073 A.D.) marched against him.⁴

Yaśahkarṇa Dēva, son (śl. 14).

Gayākarnā Dēva, son (śll. 15-24), married Alhaṇa Dēvī, the daughter of Vijayasimha by Śyāmaladēvī, daughter of Udayāditya, son of Bhoja of Mālava (cir. 1058-1080).

² Asiat. Res. vol. IX, p. 108; J. A. S. B. vol. XXX, p. 318, 321, 331; Bonthādēvī "the glory of the family of the lords of Chēdi, the daughter of king Lakshmaṇa" was married to Vikramāditya, or Vijayāditya II., the Chālukya king (cir. 950-973 A. D.), and was the mother of Tailapa,—Ind. Ant. vol. VIII, p. 15; J. A. S. B. vol. XXXI, p. 114; and Ind. Ant. vol. VI, p. 48ff.

⁴ Rās Mālā, vol. I, pp. 83, 90; Ind. Ant. vol. VI, p. 185; Asiat. Res. vol. IX, p. 103.

Narasimha Dêva, their son (śl. 25), in whose time this and the following grants were made, dated "Saṁvat 907 and 928."

Jayasimha Dêva, younger brother (śl. 26).

Vijayasimha, son, married Gosalâdêvi.

Ajayasimha Dêva, heir apparent in "Saṁ. 932."

It is evident that the era used in these and other¹ inscriptions of this dynasty is neither the Śaka nor Vikrama Saṁvat; and Dr. Hall, after noting some of the coincidences, as that Udayâditya, the grandfather of Alhaṇadêvi, was the son of Bhoja, concludes that the year 850 of this Chêdi era must have fallen about A.D. 1100—making its initial epoch about A.D. 250. He then remarks that "the specifications attached to the dates 907 and 928 are, however, so full, that any one who chooses to undertake a somewhat tedious calculation is provided with data from which the first year of this, or of some other unaccustomed epoch, may be definitely determined."² If we take 26 years for a generation, the eight that precede Ajayasimha in "Saṁ. 932," will cover 208 years or bring us back to 724 for the accession of Yuvarâja, the contemporary of Vâkpati and probably of Tailapa (973-997 A.D.). This supports Hall's suggestion that the era began about A.D. 250. Kokalla's³ and Gângeya's with part of Karṇa's reign would be covered by the long reign of Bhoja. Alhaṇadêvi's uncle Naravarṇa died in 1133 A.D. in her lifetime and most probably while her son Narasimha was a child, and so his accession would naturally fall about 1150-1160 A.D., or "Saṁ." 900-910, and this, his first inscription, is dated "Sunday, the 11th of Mârġa Sudi, Saṁ. 907."

INSCRIPTION NO. 2.

The second stone was found at the village of Tewar,—the Tripura of the Purânas. The stone on which it is cut "is of like character with the other, but has a more amygdaloidal structure, being full of little cavities which hold carbonate of lime. It is 12 inches broad and 7¼ inches high, and contains 8 lines. The characters are coarsely, irregularly, and inelegantly cut."⁴ It is dated "in the year 928 : Sunday, the 6th of Śrâvaṇa Sudi, asterism Haste."

² Jour. Am. Or. Soc. vol. VI, p. 501; also p. 522.

³ Akâlavarsha, the Râshṭrakûṭa (A.D. 835), married Mahâdêvi, the daughter of Kokalla of Chêdi (Jour. R. A. Soc. vol. III, p. 102; J. B. B. R. A. S. vol. IV, p. 101; J. A. S. B. vol. XXX, p. 319); but this must have been the earlier prince of the same name mentioned in the Jabalpur stone removed from Bilbarî (J. A. S. B., vol. XXX, p. 318, &c.). Dr. Hall seems to have regarded them as the same person.

⁴ The notes respecting these two grants are given here in considerable detail, because the Journal of the American Oriental Society is not always accessible in India.

Photographed, Govt. Office, Poona, 1880.

Here again we have the names of the kings Gayâkarna, Narasimha Dêva, and the prince Jayasimha Dêva.

INSCRIPTION No. 3.

The third inscription was dug from the ruins of a temple in the village of Harsaudâ about $10\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Chârwa, in the district of Hoshangâbâd. The stone measures $13\frac{1}{2}$ inches in height by 13 inches in breadth, "besides a raised and rounded margin. It is thick and heavy, and shaped upon the back into some form of which the intent is not now recognizable. Its material is greenstone like that of the others, but much harder and tougher in quality." Dr. Hall published a revised Devanâgarî transcript and translation of this inscription in the Journal of the Bengal Asiatic Society (vol. XXVIII, pp. 1-8).

It will be remarked that it does not belong to the Chêdi dynasty, but to a Dêvapâla Dêva, of Dhârâ, not otherwise known to us. It is dated in Samvat 1275 (A.D. 1218-19), Chitrabhânu¹ Samvatsara.

of Nawânagar. They were in Gujarâti, and of so recent a date as not to require their being lithographed. The following are transcripts of them, prepared by
