PLEASURES OF HOPE.

PART THE FIRST.

ANALYSIS OF PART I.

THE Poem opens with a comparison between the beauty of remote objects in a landscape, and those ideal scenes of felicity which the imagination delights to contemplate—the influence of anticipation upon the other passions is next delineated—an allusion is made to the well-known fiction in Pagan tradition, that, when all the guardian deities of mankind abandoned the world, Hope alone was left behind—the consolations of this passion in situations of danger and distress—the seaman on his watch—the soldier marching into battle—allusion to the interesting adventures of Byron.

The inspiration of Hope, as it actuates the efforts of genius, whether in the department of science, or of taste—domestic felicity, how intimately connected with views of future happiness—picture of a mother watching her infant when asleep—pictures of the prisoner, the maniac, and the wanderer.

From the consolations of individual misery a transition is made to prospects of political improvement in the future state of society—the wide field that is yet open for the progress of humanising arts among uncivilised nations—from these views of amelioration of society, and the extension of liberty and truth over despotic and barbarous countries, by a melancholy contrast of ideas, we are led to reflect upon the hard fate of a brave people recently conspicuous in their struggles for independence—description of the capture of Warsaw, of the last contest of the oppressors and the oppressed, and the massacre of the Polish patriots at the bridge of Prague—apostrophe to the self-interested enemies of human improvement—the wrongs of Africa—the barbarous policy of Europeans in India—prophecy in the Hindoo mythology of the expected descent of the Deity to redress the miseries of their race, and to take vengeance on the violators of justice and mercy.

PART I.

At summer eve, when Heaven's ethereal bow
Spans with bright arch the glittering hills below,
Why to yon mountain turns the musing eye,
Whose sunbright summit mingles with the sky?

Why do those cliffs of shadowy tint appear
 More sweet than all the landscape smiling near?—
 'Tis distance lends enchantment to the view,
 And robes the mountain in its azure hue.
 Thus, with delight, we linger to survey
 The promised joys of life's unmeasured way;
 Thus, from afar, each dim-discovered scene
 More pleasing seems than all the past hath been,
 And every form, that Fancy can repair
 From dark oblivion, glows divinely there.

What potent spirit guides the raptured eye
 To pierce the shades of dim futurity?
 Can Wisdom lend, with all her heavenly power,
 The pledge of Joy's anticipated hour?
 Ah, no! she darkly sees the fate of man—
 Her dim horizon bounded to a span;
 Or, if she hold an image to the view,
 'Tis Nature pictured too severely true.
 With thee, sweet HOPE! resides the heavenly light,
 That pours remotest rapture on the sight:
 Thine is the charm of life's bewilder'd way,
 That calls each slumbering passion into play.
 Waked by thy touch, I see the sister band,
 On tiptoe watching, start at thy command,
 And fly where'er thy mandate bids them steer,
 To Pleasure's path, or Glory's bright career.

Primeval HOPE, the Aönian Muses say,
 When Man and Nature mourn'd their first decay;

When every form of death, and every woe,
 Shot from malignant stars to earth below ;
 When Murder bared her arm, and rampant War
 Yoked the red dragons of her iron car ;
 When Peace and Mercy, banish'd from the plain,
 Sprung on the viewless winds to Heaven again ;
 All, all forsook the friendless, guilty mind,
 But HOPE, the charmer, linger'd still behind.

Thus, while Elijah's burning wheels prepare
 From Carmel's heights to sweep the fields of air,
 The prophet's mantle, ere his flight began,
 Dropt on the world—a sacred gift to man.

Auspicious HOPE ! in thy sweet garden grow
 Wreaths for each toil, a charm for every woe ;
 Won by their sweets, in Nature's languid hour,
 The way-worn pilgrim seeks thy summer bower ;
 There, as the wild bee murmurs on the wing,
 What peaceful dreams thy handmaid spirits bring !
 What viewless forms th' Æolian organ play,
 And sweep the furrow'd lines of anxious thought away.

Angel of life ! thy glittering wings explore
 Earth's loneliest bounds, and Ocean's wildest shore.
 Lo ! to the wintry winds the pilot yields
 His bark careering o'er unfathom'd fields ;
 Now on Atlantic waves he rides afar,
 Where Andes, giant of the western star,
 With meteor-standard to the winds unfurl'd,
 Looks from his throne of clouds o'er half the world !

Now far he sweeps, where scarce a summer smiles,
On Behring's rocks, or Greenland's naked isles :
Cold on his midnight watch the breezes blow,
From wastes that slumber in eternal snow ;
And waft, across the waves' tumultuous roar,
The wolf's long howl from Oonalaska's shore.

Poor child of danger, nursling of the storm,
Sad are the woes that wreck thy manly form !
Rocks, waves, and winds, the shattered bark delay ;
Thy heart is sad, thy home is far away.

But HOPE can here her moonlight vigils keep,
And sing to charm the spirit of the deep :
Swift as yon streamer lights the starry pole,
Her visions warm the watchman's pensive soul ;
His native hills that rise in happier climes,
The grot that heard his song of other times,
His cottage home, his bark of slender sail,
His glassy lake, and broomwood-blossom'd vale,
Rush on his thought ; he sweeps before the wind,
Treads the loved shore he sigh'd to leave behind ;
Meets at each step a friend's familiar face,
And flies at last to Helen's long embrace ;
Wipes from her cheek the rapture-speaking tear !
And clasps, with many a sigh, his children dear !
While, long neglected, but at length caress'd,
His faithful dog salutes the smiling guest,
Points to the master's eyes (where'er they roam)
His wistful face, and whines a welcome home.

Friend of the brave! in peril's darkest hour,
Intrepid Virtue looks to thee for power ;
To thee the heart its trembling homage yields,
On stormy floods, and carnage-cover'd fields,
When front to front the banner'd hosts combine,
Halt ere they close, and form the dreadful line.
When all is still on Death's devoted soil,
The march-worn soldier mingles for the toil !
As rings his glittering tube, he lifts on high
The dauntless brow, and spirit-speaking eye,
Hails in his heart the triumph yet to come,
And hears thy stormy music in the drum !

And such thy strength-inspiring aid that bore
The hardy Byron to his native shore—
In horrid climes, where Chiloe's tempests sweep
Tumultuous murmurs o'er the troubled deep,
'Twas his to mourn Misfortune's rudest shock,
Scourged by the winds, and cradled on the rock,
To wake each joyless morn and search again
The famish'd haunts of solitary men ;
Whose race, unyielding as their native storm,
Know not a trace of Nature but the form ;
Yet, at thy call, the hardy tar pursued,
Pale, but intrepid, sad, but unsubdued,
Pierced the deep woods, and hailing from afar
The moon's pale planet and the northern star,
Paused at each dreary cry, unheard before,
Hyænas in the wild, and mermaids on the shore ;

Till, led by thee o'er many a cliff sublime,
He found a warmer world, a milder clime,
A home to rest, a shelter to defend,
Peace and repose, a Briton and a friend !

Congenial HOPE ! thy passion-kindling power,
How bright, how strong, in youth's untroubled hour !
On yon proud height, with Genius hand in hand,
I see thee 'light, and wave thy golden wand.

“ Go, child of Heaven ! (thy winged words proclaim)
'Tis thine to search the boundless fields of fame !
Lo ! Newton, priest of Nature, shines afar,
Scans the wide world, and numbers every star !
Wilt thou, with him, mysterious rites apply,
And watch the shrine with wonder-beaming eye !
Yes, thou shalt mark, with magic art profound,
The speed of light, the circling march of sound ;
With Franklin grasp the lightning's fiery wing,
Or yield the lyre of Heaven another string.

“ The Swedish sage admires, in yonder bowers,
His winged insects, and his rosy flowers ;
Calls from their woodland haunts the savage train,
With sounding horn, and counts them on the plain—
So once, at Heaven's command, the wanderers came
To Eden's shade, and heard their various name.

“ Far from the world, in yon sequester'd clime,
Slow pass the sons of Wisdom, more sublime ;
Calm as the fields of Heaven, his sapient eye
The loved Athenian lifts to realms on high,
Admiring Plato, on his spotless page,
Stamps the bright dictates of the Father sage :
' Shall Nature bound to Earth's diurnal span
The fire of God, th' immortal soul of man ? '

“ Turn, child of Heaven, thy rapture-lighten'd eye
To Wisdom's walks, the sacred Nine are nigh :
Hark ! from bright spires that gild the Delphian height,
From streams that wander in eternal light,
Ranged on their hill, Harmonia's daughters swell
The mingling tones of horn, and harp, and shell ;
Deep from his vaults the Loxian murmurs flow,
And Pythia's awful organ peals below.

“ Beloved of Heaven ! the smiling Muse shall shed
Her moonlight halo on thy beauteous head ;
Shall swell thy heart to rapture unconfined,
And breathe a holy madness o'er thy mind.
I see thee roam her guardian power beneath,
And talk with spirits on the midnight heath ;
Enquire of guilty wanderers whence they came,
And ask each blood-stain'd form his earthly name ;
Then weave in rapid verse the deeds they tell,
And read the trembling world the tales of hell.

“ When Venus, throned in clouds of rosy hue,
Flings from her golden urn the vesper dew,
And bids fond man her glimmering noon employ,
Sacred to love, and walks of tender joy ;
A milder mood the goddess shall recal,
And soft as dew thy tones of music fall ;
While Beauty's deeply-pictured smiles impart
A pang more dear than pleasure to the heart—
Warm as thy sighs shall flow the Lesbian strain,
And plead in Beauty's ear, nor plead in vain.

“ Or wilt thou Orphean hymns more sacred deem,
 And steep thy song in Mercy’s mellow stream ;
 To pensive drops the radiant eye beguile—
 For Beauty’s tears are lovelier than her smile ;—
 On Nature’s throbbing anguish pour relief,
 And teach impassion’d souls the joy of grief ?

“ Yes ; to thy tongue shall seraph words be given,
 And power on earth to plead the cause of Heaven ;
 The proud, the cold untroubled heart of stone,
 That never mused on sorrow but its own,
 Unlocks a generous store at thy command,
 Like Horeb’s rocks beneath the prophet’s hand.
 The living lumber of his kindred earth,
 Charm’d into soul, receives a second birth,
 Feels thy dread power another heart afford,
 Whose passion-touch’d harmonious strings accord
 True as the circling spheres to Nature’s plan ;
 And man, the brother, lives the friend of man.

“ Bright as the pillar rose at Heaven’s command,
 When Israel march’d along the desert land,
 Blazed through the night on lonely wilds afar,
 And told the path—a never-setting star :
 So, heavenly Genius, in thy course divine,
 HOPE is thy star, her light is ever thine.”

Propitious Power ! when rankling cares annoy
 The sacred home of Hymenean joy ;
 When doom’d to Poverty’s sequester’d dell,
 The wedded pair of love and virtue dwell,

Unpitied by the world, unknown to fame,
Their woes, their wishes, and their hearts the same—
Oh, there, prophetic HOPE ! thy smile bestow,
And chase the pangs that worth should never know—
There, as the parent deals his scanty store
To friendless babes, and weeps to give no more,
Tell, that his manly race shall yet assuage
Their father's wrongs, and shield his latter age.
What though for him no Hybla sweets distil,
Nor bloomy vines wave purple on the hill ;
Tell, that when silent years have pass'd away,
That when his eye grows dim, his tresses grey,
These busy hands a lovelier cot shall build,
And deck with fairer flowers his little field,
And call from Heaven propitious dews to breathe
Arcadian beauty on the barren heath ;
Tell, that while Love's spontaneous smile endears
The days of peace, the sabbath of his years,
Health shall prolong to many a festive hour
The social pleasures of his humble bower.

Lo ! at the couch where infant beauty sleeps,
Her silent watch the mournful mother keeps ;
She, while the lovely babe unconscious lies,
Smiles on her slumbering child with pensive eyes,
And weaves a song of melancholy joy—
“ Sleep, image of thy father, sleep, my boy ;
No lingering hour of sorrow shall be thine ;
No sigh that rends thy father's heart and mine ;

Bright as his manly sire the son shall be
In form and soul ; but, ah ! more blest than he !
Thy fame, thy worth, thy filial love at last,
Shall soothe his aching heart for all the past—
With many a smile my solitude repay,
And chase the world's ungenerous scorn away.

“ And say, when summon'd from the world and thee,
I lay my head beneath the willow tree,
Wilt thou, sweet mourner ! at my stone appear,
And soothe my parted spirit lingering near ?
Oh, wilt thou come at evening hour to shed
The tears of Memory o'er my narrow bed ;
With aching temples on thy hand reclined,
Muse on the last farewell I leave behind,
Breathe a deep sigh to winds that murmur low,
And think on all my love, and all my woe ? ”

So speaks affection, ere the infant eye
Can look regard, or brighten in reply ;
But when the cherub lip hath learnt to claim
A mother's ear by that endearing name ;
Soon as the playful innocent can prove
A tear of pity, or a smile of love,
Or cons his murmuring task beneath her care,
Or lisps with holy look his evening prayer,
Or gazing, mutely pensive, sits to hear
The mournful ballad warbled in his ear ;
How fondly looks admiring HOPE the while,
At every artless tear, and every smile ;

How glows the joyous parent to descry
A guileless bosom, true to sympathy !

Where is the troubled heart consign'd to share
Tumultuous toils, or solitary care,
Unblest by visionary thoughts that stray
To count the joys of Fortune's better day !
Lo, nature, life, and liberty relume
The dim-eyed tenant of the dungeon gloom,
A long-lost friend, or hapless child restored,
Smiles at his blazing hearth and social board ;
Warm from his heart the tears of rapture flow,
And virtue triumphs o'er remember'd woe.

Chide not his peace, proud Reason ! nor destroy
The shadowy forms of uncreated joy,
That urge the lingering tide of life, and pour
Spontaneous slumber on his midnight hour.
Hark ! the wild maniac sings, to chide the gale
That wafts so slow her lover's distant sail ;
She, sad spectatress, on the wintry shore,
Watch'd the rude surge his shroudless corse that bore,
Knew the pale form, and, shrieking in amaze,
Clasp'd her cold hands, and fix'd her maddening gaze :
Poor widow'd wretch ! 'twas there she wept in vain,
Till Memory fled her agonising brain ;—
But Mercy gave, to charm the sense of woe,
Ideal peace, that truth could ne'er bestow ;
Warm on her heart the joys of Fancy beam,
And aimless HOPE delights her darkest dream.

Oft when yon moon has climb'd the midnight sky,
And the lone sea-bird wakes its wildest cry,
Piled on the steep, her blazing faggots burn
To hail the bark that never can return ;

And still she waits, but scarce forbears to weep
That constant love can linger on the deep.

And, mark the wretch, whose wanderings never knew
The world's regard, that soothes, though half untrue ;
Whose erring heart the lash of sorrow bore,
But found not pity when it err'd no more.
Yon friendless man, at whose dejected eye
Th' unfeeling proud one looks—and passes by,
Condemn'd on Penury's barren path to roam,
Scorn'd by the world, and left without a home—
Even he, at evening, should he chance to stray
Down by the hamlet's hawthorn-scented way,
Where, round the cot's romantic glade, are seen
The blossom'd bean-field, and the sloping green,
Leans o'er its humble gate, and thinks the while—
Oh ! that for me some home like this would smile,
Some hamlet shade, to yield my sickly form
Health in the breeze, and shelter in the storm !
There should my hand no stinted boon assign
To wretched hearts with sorrow such as mine !—
That generous wish can soothe unpitied care,
And HOPE half mingles with the poor man's prayer.

HOPE ! when I mourn, with sympathising mind,
The wrongs of fate, the woes of human kind,
Thy blissful omens bid my spirit see
The boundless fields of rapture yet to be ;
I watch the wheels of Nature's mazy plan,
And learn the future by the past of man.

Come, bright Improvement ! on the car of Time,
And rule the spacious world from clime to clime ;
Thy handmaid arts shall every wild explore,
Trace every wave, and culture every shore.
On Erie's banks, where tigers steal along,
And the dread Indian chants a dismal song,
Where human fiends on midnight errands walk,
And bathe in brains the murderous tomahawk,
There shall the flocks on thymy pasture stray,
And shepherds dance at Summer's opening day ;
Each wandering genius of the lonely glen
Shall start to view the glittering haunts of men,
And silent watch, on woodland heights around,
The village curfew as it tolls profound.

In Libyan groves, where damned rites are done,
That bathe the rocks in blood, and veil the sun,
Truth shall arrest the murderous arm profane,
Wild Obi flies—the veil is rent in twain.

Where barbarous hordes on Scythian mountains roam,
Truth, Mercy, Freedom, yet shall find a home ;
Where'er degraded Nature bleeds and pines,
From Guinea's coast to Sibir's dreary mines,
Truth shall pervade th' unfathom'd darkness there,
And light the dreadful features of despair.—
Hark ! the stern captive spurns his heavy load,
And asks the image back that Heaven bestow'd !
Fierce in his eye the fire of valour burns,
And, as the slave departs, the man returns.

Oh! sacred Truth! thy triumph ceased a while,
 And HOPE, thy sister, ceased with thee to smile,
 When leagued Oppression pour'd to Northern wars
 Her whisker'd pandoors and her fierce hussars,
 Waved her dread standard to the breeze of morn,
 Peal'd her loud drum, and twang'd her trumpet horn;
 Tumultuous horror brooded o'er her van,
 Presaging wrath to Poland—and to man!

Warsaw's last champion from her height survey'd,
 Wide o'er the fields, a waste of ruin laid,—
 Oh! Heaven! he cried, my bleeding country save!—
 Is there no hand on high to shield the brave?
 Yet, though destruction sweep those lovely plains,
 Rise, fellow-men! our country yet remains!
 By that dread name, we wave the sword on high!
 And swear for her to live!—with her to die!

He said, and on the rampart-heights array'd
 His trusty warriors, few, but undismay'd;
 Firm'd-paced and slow, a horrid front they form,
 Still as the breeze, but dreadful as the storm;
 Low murmuring sounds along their banners fly,
 Revenge, or death,—the watch-word and reply;
 Then peal'd the notes, omnipotent to charm,
 And the loud tocsin toll'd their last alarm!—

In vain, alas! in vain, ye gallant few!
 From rank to rank your volley'd thunder flew:—
 Oh, bloodiest picture in the book of Time,
 Sarmatia fell, unwept, without a crime;

Found not a generous friend, a pitying foe,
 Strength in her arms, nor mercy in her woe!
 Dropp'd from her nerveless grasp the shatter'd spear,
 Closed her bright eye, and curb'd her high career;—
 HOPE, for a season, bade the world farewell,
 And Freedom shriek'd—as KOSCIUSKO fell!

The sun went down, nor ceased the carnage there,
 Tumultuous Murder shook the midnight air—
 On Prague's proud arch the fires of ruin glow,
 His blood-dyed waters murmuring far below;
 The storm prevails, the rampart yields a way,
 Bursts the wild cry of horror and dismay!
 Hark, as the smouldering piles with thunder fall,
 A thousand shrieks for hopeless mercy call!
 Earth shook—red meteors flash'd along the sky,
 And conscious Nature shudder'd at the cry!

Oh! righteous Heaven; ere Freedom found a grave,
 Why slept the sword, omnipotent to save?
 Where was thine arm, O Vengeance! where thy rod,
 That smote the foes of Zion and of God;
 That crush'd proud Ammon, when his iron car
 Was yoked in wrath, and thunder'd from afar?
 Where was the storm that slumber'd till the host
 Of blood-stain'd Pharaoh left their trembling coast;
 Then bade the deep in wild commotion flow,
 And heaved an ocean on their march below?

Departed spirits of the mighty dead!
 Ye that at Marathon and Leuctra bled!

Friends of the world! restore your swords to man,
 Fight in his sacred cause, and lead the van!
 Yet for Sarmatia's tears of blood atone,
 And make her arm puissant as your own!
 Oh! once again to Freedom's cause return
 The patriot TELL—the BRUCE OF BANNOCKBURN!

Yes! thy proud lords, unpitied land! shall see
 That man hath yet a soul—and dare be free!
 A little while, along thy saddening plains,
 The starless night of Desolation reigns;
 Truth shall restore the light by Nature given,
 And, like Prometheus, bring the fire of Heaven!
 Prone to the dust Oppression shall be hurl'd,
 Her name, her nature, wither'd from the world!

Ye that the rising morn invidious mark,
 And hate the light—because your deeds are dark;
 Ye that expanding truth invidious view,
 And think, or wish, the song of HOPE untrue;
 Perhaps your little hands presume to span
 The march of Genius and the powers of man;
 Perhaps ye watch, at Pride's unhallow'd shrine,
 Her victims, newly slain, and thus divine:—
 “Here shall thy triumph, Genius, cease, and here
 Truth, Science, Virtue, close your short career.”

Tyrants! in vain ye trace the wizard ring;
 In vain ye limit Mind's unwearied spring:
 What! can ye lull the winged winds asleep,
 Arrest the rolling world, or chain the deep?

No!—the wild wave contemns your sceptred hand :
It roll'd not back when Canute gave command !

Man ! can thy doom no brighter soul allow ?
Still must thou live a blot on Nature's brow ?
Shall War's polluted banner ne'er be furl'd ?
Shall crimes and tyrants cease but with the world ?
What ! are thy triumphs, sacred Truth, belied ?
Why then hath Plato lived—or Sidney died ?

Ye fond adorers of departed fame,
Who warm at Scipio's worth, or Tully's name !
Ye that, in fancied vision, can admire
The sword of Brutus, and the Theban lyre !
Rapt in historic ardour, who adore
Each classic haunt, and well-remember'd shore,
Where Valour tuned, amidst her chosen throng,
The Thracian trumpet, and the Spartan song ;
Or, wandering thence, behold the later charms
Of England's glory, and Helvetia's arms !
See Roman fire in Hampden's bosom swell,
And fate and freedom in the shaft of Tell !
Say, ye fond zealots to the worth of yore,
Hath Valour left the world—to live no more ?
No more shall Brutus bid a tyrant die,
And sternly smile with vengeance in his eye ?
Hampden no more, when suffering Freedom calls,
Encounter Fate, and triumph as he falls ?
Nor Tell disclose, through peril and alarm,
The might that slumbers in a peasant's arm ?

Yes! in that generous cause, for ever strong,
 The patriot's virtue and the poet's song,
 Still, as the tide of ages rolls away,
 Shall charm the world, unconscious of decay.

Yes! there are hearts, prophetic HOPE may trust,
 That slumber yet in uncreated dust,
 Ordain'd to fire th' adoring sons of earth,
 With every charm of wisdom and of worth ;
 Ordain'd to light, with intellectual day,
 The mazy wheels of nature as they play,
 Or, warm with Fancy's energy, to glow,
 And rival all but Shakspeare's name below.

And say, supernal Powers! who deeply scan
 Heaven's dark decrees, unfathom'd yet by man,
 When shall the world call down, to cleanse her shame,
 That embryo spirit, yet without a name,—
 That friend of Nature, whose avenging hands
 Shall burst the Libyan's adamantine bands?
 Who, sternly marking on his native soil
 The blood, the tears, the anguish, and the toil,
 Shall bid each righteous heart exult, to see
 Peace to the slave, and vengeance on the free!

Yet, yet, degraded men! th' expected day
 That breaks your bitter cup, is far away ;
 Trade, wealth, and fashion, ask you still to bleed,
 And holy men give Scripture for the deed ;
 Scourged, and debased, no Briton stoops to save
 A wretch, a coward ; yes, because a slave!—

Eternal Nature ! when thy giant hand
 Had heaved the floods, and fix'd the trembling land,
 When life sprang startling at thy plastic call,
 Endless her forms, and man the lord of all !
 Say, was that lordly form inspired by thee,
 To wear eternal chains and bow the knee ?
 Was man ordain'd the slave of man to toil,
 Yoked with the brutes, and fetter'd to the soil ;
 Weigh'd in a tyrant's balance with his gold ?
 No !—Nature stamp'd us in a heavenly mould !
 She bade no wretch his thankless labour urge,
 Nor, trembling, take the pittance and the scourge !
 No homeless Libyan, on the stormy deep,
 To call upon his country's name, and weep !—

Lo ! once in triumph, on his boundless plain,
 The quiver'd chief of Congo loved to reign ;
 With fires proportion'd to his native sky,
 Strength in his arm, and lightning in his eye ;
 Scour'd with wild feet his sun-illumined zone,
 The spear, the lion, and the woods, his own !
 Or led the combat, bold without a plan,
 An artless savage, but a fearless man !

The plunderer came !—alas ! no glory smiles
 For Congo's chief, on yonder Indian isles ;
 For ever fall'n ! no son of Nature now,
 With Freedom charter'd on his manly brow !
 Faint, bleeding, bound, he weeps the night away,
 And when the sea-wind wafts the dewless day,

Starts, with a bursting heart, for evermore
To curse the sun that lights their guilty shore !
The shrill horn blew ; at that alarum knell
His guardian angel took a last farewell !

That funeral dirge to darkness hath resign'd
 The fiery grandeur of a generous mind !
 Poor fetter'd man ! I hear thee whispering low
 Unhallow'd vows to Guilt, the child of Woe,
 Friendless thy heart ; and canst thou harbour there
 A wish but death—a passion but despair ?

The widow'd Indian, when her lord expires,
 Mounts the dread pile, and braves the funeral fires !
 So falls the heart at Thraldom's bitter sigh !
 So Virtue dies, the spouse of Liberty !

But not to Libya's barren climes alone,
 To Chili, or the wild Siberian zone,
 Belong the wretched heart and haggard eye,
 Degraded worth, and poor misfortune's sigh !—
 Ye orient realms, where Ganges' waters run !
 Prolific fields ! dominions of the sun !
 How long your tribes have trembled and obey'd !
 How long was Timour's iron sceptre sway'd,
 Whose marshall'd hosts, the lions of the plain,
 From Scythia's northern mountains to the main,
 Raged o'er your plunder'd shrines and altars bare,
 With blazing torch and gory cimitar,—
 Stunn'd with the cries of death each gentle gale,
 And bathed in blood the verdure of the vale !
 Yet could no pangs the immortal spirit tame,
 When Brama's children perish'd for his name ;
 The martyr smiled beneath avenging power,
 And braved the tyrant in his torturing hour !

When Europe sought your subject realms to gain,
And stretch'd her giant sceptre o'er the main,
Taught her proud barks the winding way to shape,
And braved the stormy Spirit of the Cape;
Children of Brama! then was Mercy nigh
To wash the stain of blood's eternal dye?
Did Peace descend, to triumph and to save,
When freeborn Britons cross'd the Indian wave?
Ah, no!—to more than Rome's ambition true,
The Nurse of Freedom gave it not to you!
She the bold route of Europe's guilt began,
And, in the march of nations, led the van!

Rich in the gems of India's gaudy zone,
And plunder piled from kingdoms not their own,
Degenerate trade! thy minions could despise
The heart-born anguish of a thousand cries;
Could lock, with impious hands, their teeming store,
While famish'd nations died along the shore:
Could mock the groans of fellow-men, and bear
The curse of kingdoms peopled with despair;
Could stamp disgrace on man's polluted name,
And barter, with their gold, eternal shame!

But hark! as bow'd to earth the Bramin kneels,
From heavenly climes propitious thunder peals!
Of India's fate her guardian spirits tell,
Prophetic murmurs breathing on the shell,
And solemn sounds that awe the listening mind,
Roll on the azure paths of every wind.

“ Foes of mankind ! (her guardian spirits say,)

Revolving ages bring the bitter day,

When Heaven’s unerring arm shall fall on you,

And blood for blood these Indian plains bedew ;

Nine times have Brama’s wheels of lightning hurl’d

His awful presence o’er the alarmed world ;

Nine times hath Guilt, through all his giant frame,

Convulsive trembled, as the Mighty came ;

Nine times hath suffering Mercy spared in vain—

But Heaven shall burst her starry gates again !

He comes ! dread Brama shakes the sunless sky

With murmuring wrath, and thunders from on high,

Heaven’s fiery horse, beneath his warrior form,

Paws the light clouds, and gallops on the storm !

Wide waves his flickering sword ; his bright arms glow

Like summer suns, and light the world below !

Earth, and her trembling isles in Ocean’s bed,

Are shook ; and Nature rocks beneath his tread !

“ To pour redress on India’s injured realm,

The oppressor to dethrone, the proud to whelm ;

To chase destruction from her plunder’d shore

With arts and arms that triumph’d once before,

The tenth Avatar comes ! at Heaven’s command

Shall Seriswattee wave her hallow’d wand !

And Camdeo bright, and Ganesa sublime,

Shall bless with joy their own propitious clime !—

Come, Heavenly Powers ! primeval peace restore !

Love !—Mercy !—Wisdom !—rule for evermore !”

PART THE SECOND.

ANALYSIS OF PART II.

APOSTROPHE to the power of Love—its intimate connexion with generous and social Sensibility—allusion to that beautiful passage in the beginning of the book of Genesis, which represents the happiness of Paradise itself incomplete, till love was superadded to its other blessings—the dreams of future felicity which a lively imagination is apt to cherish, when Hope is animated by refined attachment—this disposition to combine, in one imaginary scene of residence, all that is pleasing in our estimate of happiness, compared to the skill of the great artist who personified perfect beauty, in the picture of Venus, by an assemblage of the most beautiful features he could find—a summer and winter evening described, as they may be supposed to arise in the mind of one who wishes, with enthusiasm, for the union of friendship and retirement.

Hope and Imagination inseparable agents—even in those contemplative moments when our imagination wanders beyond the boundaries of this world, our minds are not unattended with an impression that we shall some day have a wider and more distinct prospect of the universe, instead of the partial glimpse we now enjoy.

The last and most sublime influence of Hope is the concluding topic of the poem—the predominance of a belief in a future state over the terrors attendant on dissolution—the baneful influence of that sceptical philosophy which bars us from such comforts—allusion to the fate of a suicide—episode of Conrad and Ellenore—conclusion.

PART II.

In joyous youth, what soul hath never known
Thought, feeling, taste, harmonious to its own?
Who hath not paused while Beauty's pensive eye
Ask'd from his heart the homage of a sigh?

Who hath not own'd, with rapture-smitten frame,
The power of grace, the magic of a name?

There be, perhaps, who barren hearts avow,
Cold as the rocks on Torneo's hoary brow;
There be, whose loveless wisdom never fail'd,
In self-adoring pride securely mail'd:—
But, triumph not, ye peace-enamour'd few!
Fire, Nature, Genius, never dwelt with you!
For you no fancy consecrates the scene
Where rapture utter'd vows, and wept between;
'Tis yours, unmoved, to sever and to meet;
No pledge is sacred, and no home is sweet!

Who that would ask a heart to dulness wed,
The waveless calm, the slumber of the dead?
No; the wild bliss of Nature needs alloy,
And fear and sorrow fan the fire of joy!
And say, without our hopes, without our fears,
Without the home that plighted love endears,
Without the smile from partial beauty won,
Oh! what were man?—a world without a sun.

Till Hymen brought his love-delighted hour,
There dwelt no joy in Eden's rosy bower!
In vain the viewless seraph lingering there,
At starry midnight charm'd the silent air;
In vain the wild-bird caroll'd on the steep,
To hail the sun, slow wheeling from the deep;
In vain, to soothe the solitary shade,
Aërial notes in mingling measure play'd;

The summer wind that shook the spangled tree,
 The whispering wave, the murmur of the bee ;—
 Still slowly pass'd the melancholy day,
 And still the stranger wist not where to stray.
 The world was sad !—the garden was a wild !
 And man, the hermit, sigh'd—till woman smiled !

True, the sad power to generous hearts may bring
 Delirious anguish on his fiery wing ;
 Barr'd from delight by Fate's untimely hand,
 By wealthless lot, or pitiless command ;
 Or doom'd to gaze on beauties that adorn
 The smile of triumph or the frown of scorn ;
 While Memory watches o'er the sad review
 Of joys that faded like the morning dew ;
 Peace may depart—and life and nature seem
 A barren path, a wildness, and a dream !

But can the noble mind for ever brood,
 The willing victim of a weary mood,
 On heartless cares that squander life away,
 And cloud young Genius brightening into day ?—
 Shame to the coward thought that e'er betray'd
 The noon of manhood to a myrtle shade !—
 If HOPE's creative spirit cannot raise
 One trophy sacred to thy future days,
 Scorn the dull crowd that haunt the gloomy shrine,
 Of hopeless love to murmur and repine !
 But, should a sigh of milder mood express
 Thy heart-warm wishes, true to happiness,

Should Heaven's fair harbinger delight to pour
 Her blissful visions on thy pensive hour,
 No tear to blot thy memory's pictured page,
 No fears but such as fancy can assuage ;
 Though thy wild heart some hapless hour may miss
 The peaceful tenor of unvaried bliss,
 (For love pursues an ever-devious race,
 True to the winding lineaments of grace ;))
 Yet still may HOPE her talisman employ
 To snatch from Heaven anticipated joy,
 And all her kindred energies impart
 That burn the brightest in the purest heart.

When first the Rhodian's mimic art array'd
 The queen of Beauty in her Cyprian shade,
 The happy master mingled on his piece
 Each look that charm'd him in the fair of Greece.
 To faultless Nature true, he stole a grace
 From every finer form and sweeter face ;
 And as he sojourn'd on the Ægean isles,
 Woo'd all their love, and treasured all their smiles ;
 Then glow'd the tints, pure, precious, and refined,
 And mortal charms seem'd heavenly when combined !
 Love on the picture smiled ! Expression pour'd
 Her mingling spirit there—and Greece adored !

So thy fair hand, enamour'd Fancy ! gleans
 The treasured pictures of a thousand scenes ;
 Thy pencil traces on the lover's thought
 Some cottage-home, from towns and toil remote,

Where love and lore may claim alternate hours,
 With Peace embosom'd in Idalian bowers !
 Remote from busy Life's bewilder'd way,
 O'er all his heart shall Taste and Beauty sway !
 Free on the sunny slope, or winding shore,
 With hermit steps to wander and adore !
 There shall he love, when genial morn appears,
 Like pensive Beauty smiling in her tears,
 To watch the brightening roses of the sky,
 And muse on Nature with a poet's eye !—
 And when the sun's last splendour lights the deep,
 The woods and waves, and murmuring winds asleep,
 When fairy harps th' Hesperian planet hail,
 And the lone cuckoo sighs along the vale,
 His path shall be where streamy mountains swell
 Their shadowy grandeur o'er the narrow dell,
 Where mouldering piles and forests intervene,
 Mingling with darker tints the living green ;
 No circling hills his ravish'd eye to bound,
 Heaven, Earth, and Ocean, blazing all around.

The moon is up—the watch-tower dimly burns—
 And down the vale his sober step returns ;
 But pauses oft, as winding rocks convey
 The still sweet fall of music far away ;
 And oft he lingers from his home awhile
 To watch the dying notes !—and start, and smile !

Let Winter come ! let polar spirits sweep
 The darkening world, and tempest-troubled deep !

Though boundless snows the wither'd heath deform,
And the dim sun scarce wanders through the storm,
Yet shall the smile of social love repay,
With mental light, the melancholy day !
And, when its short and sullen noon is o'er,
The ice-chain'd waters slumbering on the shore,
How bright the faggots in his little hall
Blaze on the hearth, and warm the pictured wall !

How blest he names, in Love's familiar tone,
The kind fair friend, by nature mark'd his own ;
And, in the waveless mirror of his mind,
Views the fleet years of pleasure left behind,
Since when her empire o'er his heart began !
Since first he call'd her his before the holy man !

Trim the gay taper in his rustic dome,
And light the wintry paradise of home ;
And let the half-uncurtain'd window hail
Some way-worn man benighted in the vale !
Now, while the moaning night-wind rages high,
As sweep the shot-stars down the troubled sky,
While fiery hosts in Heaven's wide circle play,
And bathe in lurid light the milky-way,
Safe from the storm, the meteor, and the shower,
Some pleasing page shall charm the solemn hour—
With pathos shall command, with wit beguile,
A generous tear of anguish, or a smile—
Thy woes, Arion ! and thy simple tale,
O'er all the heart shall triumph and prevail !

Charm'd as they read the verse too sadly true,
How gallant Albert, and his weary crew,
Heaved all their guns, their foundering bark to save,
And toil'd—and shriek'd—and perish'd on the wave !

Yes, at the dead of night, by Lonna's steep,
The seaman's cry was heard along the deep ;

There on his funeral waters, dark and wild,
 The dying father bless'd his darling child !
 Oh ! Mercy, shield her innocence, he cried,
 Spent on the prayer his bursting heart, and died !

Or they will learn how generous worth sublimes
 The robber Moor, and pleads for all his crimes !
 How poor Amelia kiss'd, with many a tear,
 His hand, blood-stain'd, but ever, ever dear !
 Hung on the tortured bosom of her lord,
 And wept and pray'd perdition from his sword !
 Nor sought in vain ! at that heart-piercing cry
 The strings of Nature crack'd with agony !
 He, with delirious laugh, the dagger hurl'd,
 And burst the ties that bound him to the world !
 Turn from his dying words, that smite with steel
 The shuddering thoughts, or wind them on the wheel—
 Turn to the gentler melodies that suit
 Thalia's harp, or Pan's Arcadian lute ;
 Or, down the stream of Truth's historic page,
 From clime to clime descend, from age to age !

Yet there, perhaps, may darker scenes obtrude
 Than Fancy fashions in her wildest mood ;
 There shall he pause with horrent brow, to rate
 What millions died—that Cæsar might be great !
 Or learn the fate that bleeding thousands bore,
 March'd by their Charles to Dneiper's swampy shore ;
 Faint in his wounds, and shivering in the blast,
 The Swedish soldier sunk—and groan'd his last !

File after file the stormy showers benumb,
Freeze every standard-sheet, and hush the drum !
Horseman and horse confess'd the bitter pang,
And arms and warriors fell with hollow clang !
Yet, ere he sunk in Nature's last repose,
Ere life's warm torrent to the fountain froze,
The dying man to Sweden turn'd his eye,
Thought of his home, and closed it with a sigh !
Imperial Pride look'd sullen on his plight,
And Charles beheld—nor shudder'd at the sight !

Above, below, in Ocean, Earth, and Sky,
Thy fairy worlds, Imagination, lie,
And HOPE attends, companion of the way,
Thy dream by night, thy visions of the day !
In yonder pensile orb, and every sphere
That gems the starry girdle of the year ;
In those unmeasured worlds, she bids thee tell,
Pure from their God, created millions dwell,
Whose names and natures, unreveal'd below,
We yet shall learn, and wonder as we know ;
For, as Iona's saint, a giant form,
Throned on her towers, conversing with the storm,
(When o'er each Runic altar, weed-entwined,
The vesper clock tolls mournful to the wind,)
Counts every wave-worn isle, and mountain hoar,
From Kilda to the green Ierne's shore ;
So, when thy pure and renovated mind
This perishable dust hath left behind,

Thy seraph eye shall count the starry train,
Like distant isles embosom'd in the main ;
Rapt to the shrine where motion first began,
And light and life in mingling torrent ran ;
From whence each bright rotundity was hurl'd,
The throne of God,—the centre of the world !

Oh ! vainly wise, the moral Muse hath sung
That suasive HOPE hath but a Siren tongue !
True ; she may sport with life's untutor'd day,
Nor heed the solace of its last decay,
The guileless heart her happy mansion spurn,
And part, like Ajut—never to return !

But yet, methinks, when Wisdom shall assuage
The grief and passions of our greener age,
Though dull the close of life, and far away
Each flower that hail'd the dawning of the day ;
Yet o'er her lovely hopes, that once were dear,
The time-taught spirit, pensive, not severe,
With milder griefs her aged eye shall fill,
And weep their falsehood, though she loves them still !

Thus, with forgiving tears, and reconciled,
The king of Judah mourn'd his rebel child !
Musing on days, when yet the guiltless boy
Smiled on his sire, and fill'd his heart with joy !
My Absalom ! the voice of Nature cried,
Oh ! that for thee thy father could have died !
For bloody was the deed, and rashly done,
That slew my Absalom !—my son !—my son !

Unfading HOPE ! when life's last embers burn,
 When soul to soul, and dust to dust return !
 Heaven to thy charge resigns the awful hour !
 Oh ! then, thy kingdom comes ! Immortal Power !
 What though each spark of earth-born rapture fly
 The quivering lip, pale cheek, and closing eye !
 Bright to the soul thy seraph hands convey
 The morning dream of life's eternal day—
 Then, then, the triumph and the trance begin,
 And all the phoenix spirit burns within !

Oh ! deep-enchancing prelude to repose,
 The dawn of bliss, the twilight of our woes !
 Yet half I hear the panting spirit sigh,
 It is a dread and awful thing to die !
 Mysterious worlds, untravell'd by the sun !
 Where Time's far wandering tide has never run,
 From your unfathom'd shades, and viewless spheres,
 A warning comes, unheard by other ears.
 'Tis Heaven's commanding trumpet, long and loud,
 Like Sinai's thunder, pealing from the cloud !
 While Nature hears, with terror-mingled trust,
 The shock that hurls her fabric to the dust ;
 And, like the trembling Hebrew, when he trod
 The roaring waves, and call'd upon his God,
 With mortal terrors clouds immortal bliss,
 And shrieks, and hovers o'er the dark abyss !

Daughter of Faith, awake, arise, illumine
 The dread unknown, the chaos of the tomb ;

Melt, and dispel, ye spectre-doubts, that roll
Cimmerian darkness o'er the parting soul !
Fly, like the moon-eyed herald of Dismay,
Chased on his night-steed by the star of day !
The strife is o'er—the pangs of Nature close,
And life's last rapture triumphs o'er her woes.
Hark ! as the spirit eyes, with eagle gaze,
The noon of Heaven undazzled by the blaze,
On heavenly winds that waft her to the sky,
Float the sweet tones of star-born melody ;
Wild as that hallow'd anthem sent to hail
Bethlehem's shepherds in the lonely vale,
When Jordan hush'd his waves, and midnight still
Watch'd on the holy towers of Zion hill !

Soul of the just ! companion of the dead !
Where is thy home, and whither art thou fled ?
Back to its heavenly source thy being goes,
Swift as the comet wheels to whence he rose ;
Doom'd on his airy path a while to burn,
And doom'd, like thee, to travel, and return.—
Hark ! from the world's exploding centre driven,
With sounds that shook the firmament of Heaven,
Careers the fiery giant, fast and far,
On bickering wheels, and adamantine car ;
From planet whirl'd to planet more remote,
He visits realms beyond the reach of thought ;
But wheeling homeward, when his course is run,
Curbs the red yoke, and mingles with the sun !

So hath the traveller of earth unfurl'd
 Her trembling wings, emerging from the world ;
 And o'er the path by mortal never trod,
 Sprung to her source, the bosom of her God !

Oh ! lives there, Heaven, beneath thy dread expanse,
 One hopeless, dark idolater of Chance,
 Content to feed, with pleasures unrefined,
 The lukewarm passions of a lowly mind ;
 Who, mouldering earthward, 'reft of every trust,
 In joyless union wedded to the dust,
 Could all his parting energy dismiss,
 And call this barren world sufficient bliss ?—
 There live, alas ! of heaven-directed mien,
 Of cultured soul, and sapient eye serene,
 Who hail thee, Man ! the pilgrim of a day,
 Spouse of the worm, and brother of the clay,
 Frail as the leaf in Autumn's yellow bower,
 Dust in the wind, or dew upon the flower ;
 A friendless slave, a child without a sire,
 Whose mortal life and momentary fire,
 Light to the grave his chance-created form,
 As ocean-wrecks illuminate the storm ;
 And, when the gun's tremendous flash is o'er,
 To night and silence sink for evermore !—

Are these the pompous tidings ye proclaim,
 Lights of the world, and demi-gods of Fame ?
 Is this your triumph—this your proud applause,
 Children of Truth, and champions of her cause ?

For this hath Science search'd, on weary wing,
By shore and sea—each mute and living thing !
Launch'd with Iberia's pilot from the steep,
To worlds unknown, and isles beyond the deep ?
Or round the cope her living chariot driven,
And wheel'd in triumph through the signs of Heaven.
Oh ! star-eyed Science, hast thou wander'd there,
To waft us home the message of despair ?
Then bind the palm, thy sage's brow to suit,
Of blasted leaf, and death-distilling fruit !
Ah me ! the laurell'd wreath that Murder rears,
Blood-nursed, and water'd by the widow's tears,
Seems not so foul, so tainted, and so dread,
As waves the night-shade round the sceptic head.
What is the bigot's torch, the tyrant's chain ?
I smile on death, if Heaven-ward HOPE remain !
But, if the warring winds of Nature's strife
Be all the faithless charter of my life,
If Chance awaked, inexorable power,
This frail and feverish being of an hour ;
Doom'd o'er the world's precarious scene to sweep,
Swift as the tempest travels on the deep,
To know Delight but by her parting smile,
And toil, and wish, and weep a little while ;
Then melt, ye elements, that form'd in vain
This troubled pulse, and visionary brain !
Fade, ye wild flowers, memorials of my doom,
And sink, ye stars, that light me to the tomb !

Truth, ever lovely,—since the world began,
 The foe of tyrants, and the friend of man,—
 How can thy words from balmy slumber start
 Reposing Virtue, pillow'd on the heart !
 Yet, if thy voice the note of thunder roll'd,
 And that were true which Nature never told,
 Let Wisdom smile not on her conquer'd field ;
 No rapture dawns, no treasure is reveal'd !
 Oh ! let her read, nor loudly, nor elate,
 The doom that bars us from a better fate ;
 But, sad as angels for the good man's sin,
 Weep to record, and blush to give it in !

And well may Doubt, the mother of Dismay,
 Pause at her martyr's tomb, and read the lay.
 Down by the wilds of yon deserted vale,
 It darkly hints a melancholy tale !
 There as the homeless madman sits alone,
 In hollow winds he hears a spirit moan !
 And there, they say, a wizard orgie crowds,
 When the Moon lights her watch-tower in the clouds.
 Poor lost Alonzo ! Fate's neglected child !
 Mild be the doom of Heaven—as thou wert mild !
 For oh ! thy heart in holy mould was cast,
 And all thy deeds were blameless, but the last.
 Poor lost Alonzo ! still I seem to hear
 The clod that struck thy hollow-sounding bier !
 When Friendship paid, in speechless sorrow drown'd,
 Thy midnight rites, but not on hallow'd ground !

Cease, every joy, to glimmer on my mind,
But leave—oh ! leave the light of HOPE behind !
What though my winged hours of bliss have been,
Like angel-visits, few and far between,
Her musing mood shall every pang appease,
And charm—when pleasures lose the power to please!

Yes ; let each rapture, dear to Nature, flee :
 Close not the light of Fortune's stormy sea—
 Mirth, Music, Friendship, Love's propitious smile,
 Chase every care, and charm a little while,
 Ecstatic throbs the fluttering heart employ,
 And all her strings are harmonised to joy !—
 But why so short is Love's delighted hour ?
 Why fades the dew on Beauty's sweetest flower ?
 Why can no hymned charm of music heal
 The sleepless woes impassion'd spirits feel ?
 Can Fancy's fairy hands no veil create,
 To hide the sad realities of fate ?—

No ! not the quaint remark, the sapient rule,
 Nor all the pride of Wisdom's worldly school,
 Have power to soothe, unaided and alone,
 The heart that vibrates to a feeling tone !
 When stepdame Nature every bliss recalls,
 Fleet as the meteor o'er the desert falls ;
 When, 'reft of all, yon widow'd sire appears
 A lonely hermit in the vale of years ;
 Say, can the world one joyous thought bestow
 To Friendship, weeping at the couch of Woe ?
 No ! but a brighter soothes the last adieu,—
 Souls of impassion'd mould, she speaks to you !
 Weep not, she says, at Nature's transient pain,
 Congenial spirits part to meet again !

What plaintive sobs thy filial spirit drew,
 What sorrow choked thy long and last adieu !

Daughter of Conrad? when he heard his knell,
 And bade his country and his child farewell!
 Doom'd the long isles of Sydney-cove to see,
 The martyr of his crimes, but true to thee?
 Thrice the sad father tore thee from his heart,
 And thrice return'd, to bless thee, and to part;
 Thrice from his trembling lips he murmur'd low
 The plaint that own'd unutterable woe;
 Till Faith, prevailing o'er his sullen doom,
 As bursts the morn on night's unfathom'd gloom,
 Lured his dim eye to deathless hopes sublime,
 Beyond the realms of Nature and of Time!

"And weep not thus," he cried, "young Ellenore,
 My bosom bleeds, but soon shall bleed no more!
 Short shall this half-extinguish'd spirit burn,
 And soon these limbs to kindred dust return!
 But not, my child, with life's precarious fire,
 The immortal ties of Nature shall expire;
 These shall resist the triumph of decay,
 When time is o'er, and worlds have pass'd away!
 Cold in the dust this perish'd heart may lie,
 But that which warm'd it once shall never die!
 That spark unburied in its mortal frame,
 With living light, eternal, and the same,
 Shall beam on Joy's interminable years,
 Unveil'd by darkness—unassuaged by tears!
 "Yet, on the barren shore and stormy deep,
 One tedious watch is Conrad doom'd to weep;

But when I gain the home without a friend,
And press the uneasy couch where none attend,
This last embrace, still cherish'd in my heart,
Shall calm the struggling spirit ere it part!
Thy darling form shall seem to hover nigh,
And hush the groan of life's last agony!

“Farewell! when strangers lift thy father's bier,
And place my nameless stone without a tear;
When each returning pledge hath told my child
That Conrad's tomb is on the desert piled;
And when the dream of troubled Fancy sees
Its lonely rank grass waving in the breeze;
Who then will soothe thy grief, when mine is o'er?
Who will protect thee, helpless Ellenore?
Shall secret scenes thy filial sorrows hide,
Scorn'd by the world, to factious guilt allied?
Ah! no; methinks the generous and the good
Will woo thee from the shades of solitude!
O'er friendless grief Compassion shall awake,
And smile on innocence, for Mercy's sake!”

Inspiring thought of rapture yet to be,
The tears of Love were hopeless, but for thee?
If in that frame no deathless spirit dwell,
If that faint murmur be the last farewell,
If Fate unite the faithful but to part,
Why is their memory sacred to the heart?
Why does the brother of my childhood seem
Restored a while in every pleasing dream?

Why do I joy the lonely spot to view,
By artless friendship bless'd when life was new ?
Eternal HOPE ! when yonder spheres sublime
Peal'd their first notes to sound the march of Time,
Thy joyous youth began—but not to fade.—
When all the sister planets have decay'd ;
When wrapt in fire the realms of ether glow,
And Heaven's last thunder shakes the world below ;
Thou, undismay'd, shalt o'er the ruins smile,
And light thy torch at Nature's funeral pile.

THEODRIC :

DOMESTIC TALE.

E

'Twas sunset, and the Ranz des Vaches was sung,
And lights were o'er th' Helvetian mountains flung,
That gave the glacier tops their richest glow,
And tinged the lakes like molten gold below :

Warmth flush'd the wonted regions of the storm,
 Where, Phoenix-like, you saw the eagle's form,
 That high in Heaven's vermilion wheel'd and soar'd,
 Woods nearer frown'd, and cataracts dash'd and roar'd
 From heights browsed by the bounding bouquetin ;
 Herds tinkling roam'd the long-drawn vales between,
 And hamlets glitter'd white, and gardens flourish'd green :
 'Twas transport to inhale the bright sweet air !
 The mountain-bee was revelling in its glare,
 And roving with his minstrelsy across
 The scented wild weeds, and enamell'd moss.
 Earth's features so harmoniously were link'd,
 She seem'd one great glad form, with life instinct,
 That felt Heaven's ardent breath, and smiled below
 Its flush of love, with consentaneous glow.

A Gothic church was near ; the spot around
 Was beautiful, ev'n though sepulchral ground ;
 For there nor yew nor cypress spread their gloom,
 But roses blossom'd by each rustic tomb.

Amidst them one of spotless marble shone—
 A maiden's grave—and 'twas inscribed thereon,
 That young and loved she died whose dust was there :

" Yes," said my comrade, " young she died, and fair !
 Grace form'd her, and the soul of gladness play'd
 Once in the blue eyes of that mountain-maid :
 Her fingers witch'd the chords they pass'd along,
 And her lips seem'd to kiss the soul in song :
 Yet woo'd, and worshipp'd as she was, till few
 Aspired to hope, 'twas sadly, strangely true,

That heart, the martyr of its fondness, burn'd
And died of love that could not be return'd.

Her father dwelt where yonder Castle shines
O'er clustering trees and terrace-mantling vines :
As gay as ever, the laburnum's pride
Waves o'er each walk where she was wont to glide,—
And still the garden whence she graced her brow,
As lovely blooms, though trode by strangers now.
How oft, from yonder window o'er the lake,
Her song of wild Helvetian swell and shake
Has made the rudest fisher bend his ear,
And rest enchanted on his oar to hear !
Thus bright, accomplish'd, spirited, and bland,
Well-born, and wealthy for that simple land,
Why had no gallant native youth the art
To win so warm—so exquisite a heart ?
She, 'midst these rocks inspired with feelings strong
By mountain-freedom—music—fancy—song,
Herself descended from the brave in arms,
And conscious of romance-inspiring charms,
Dreamt of Heroic beings ; hoped to find
Some extant spirit of chivalric kind ;
And scorning wealth, look'd cold ev'n on the claim
Of manly worth, that lack'd the wreath of fame.

Her younger brother, sixteen summers old,
And much her likeness both in mind and mould,
Had gone, poor boy ! in soldiership to shine,
And bore an Austrian banner on the Rhine.

'Twas when, alas ! our Empire's evil star
 Shed all the plagues, without the pride, of war ;
 When patriots bled, and bitterer anguish cross'd
 Our brave, to die in battles foully lost.
 The youth wrote home the rout of many a day ;
 Yet still he said, and still with truth could say,
 One corps had ever made a valiant stand,—
 The corps in which he served,—THEODRIC'S band.
His fame, forgotten chief ! is now gone by,
 Eclipsed by brighter orbs in Glory's sky ;
 Yet once it shone, and veterans, when they show
 Our fields of battle twenty years ago,
 Will tell you feats his small brigade perform'd,
 In charges nobly faced and trenches storm'd.
 Time was, when songs were chanted to his fame,
 And soldiers loved the march that bore his name :
 The zeal of martial hearts was at his call,
 And that Helvetian's, UDOLPH'S, most of all.
 'Twas touching, when the storm of war blew wild,
 To see a blooming boy,—almost a child,—
 Spur fearless at his leader's words and signs,
 Brave death in reconnoitring hostile lines,
 And speed each task, and tell each message clear,
 In scenes where war-train'd men were stunn'd with fear.

THEODRIC praised him, and they wept for joy
 In yonder house,—when letters from the boy
 Thank'd Heaven for life, and more, to use his phrase,
 Than twenty lives—his own Commander's praise.

Then follow'd glowing pages, blazoning forth
The fancied image of his leader's worth,
With such hyperbolés of youthful style
As made his parents dry their tears and smile :
But differently far his words impress'd
A wondering sister's well-believing breast ;—
She caught th' illusion, bless'd THEODRIC'S name,
And wildly magnified his worth and fame ;
Rejoicing life's reality contain'd
One, heretofore, her fancy had but feign'd,
Whose love could make her proud !—and time and chance
To passion raised that day-dream of Romance.

Once, when with hasty charge of horse and man
Our arrière-guard had check'd the Gallic van,
THEODRIC, visiting the outposts, found
His UDOLPH wounded, weltering on the ground :
Sore crush'd,—half-swooning, half-upraised he lay,
And bent his brow, fair boy ! and grasp'd the clay.
His fate moved ev'n the common soldier's ruth—
THEODRIC succour'd him ; nor left the youth
To vulgar hands, but brought him to his tent,
And lent what aid a brother would have lent.

Meanwhile, to save his kindred half the smart
The war-gazette's dread blood-roll might impart,
He wrote th' event to them ; and soon could tell
Of pains assuaged and symptoms auguring well ;
And last of all, prognosticating cure,
Enclosed the leech's vouching signature.

Their answers, on whose pages you might note
That tears had fall'n, whilst trembling fingers wrote,
Gave boundless thanks for benefits conferr'd,
Of which the boy, in secret, sent them word,
Whose memory Time, they said, would never blot ;
But which the giver had himself forgot.

In time, the stripling, vigorous and heal'd,
Resumed his barb and banner in the field,
And bore himself right soldier-like, till now
The third campaign had manlier bronzed his brow,
When peace, though but a scanty pause for breath,—
A curtain-drop between the acts of death,—
A check in frantic war's unfinish'd game,
Yet dearly bought, and direly welcome, came.
The camp broke up, and UDOLPH left his chief
As with a son's or younger brother's grief :
But journeying home, how rapt his spirits rose !
How light his footsteps crush'd St. Gothard's snows ;
How dear seem'd ev'n the waste and wild Shreckhorn,
Though wrapt in clouds, and frowning as in scorn
Upon a downward world of pastoral charms ;
Where, by the very smell of dairy-farms,
And fragrance from the mountain-herbage blown,
Blindfold his native hills he could have known !

His coming down yon lake,—his boat in view
Of windows where love's fluttering kerchief flew,—
The arms spread out for him—the tears that burst,—
('Twas JULIA'S, 'twas his sister's, met him first :)

Their pride to see war's medal at his breast,
And all their rapture's greeting, may be guess'd.

Ere long, his bosom triumph'd to unfold
A gift he meant their gayest room to hold,—
The picture of a friend in warlike dress ;
And who it was he first bade JULIA guess.
'Yes,' she replied, 'twas he methought in sleep,
When you were wounded, told me not to weep.'
The painting long in that sweet mansion drew
Regards its living semblance little knew.

Meanwhile THEODRIC, who had years before
Learnt England's tongue, and loved her classic lore,
A glad enthusiast now explored the land,
Where Nature, Freedom, Art, smile hand in hand ;
Her women fair ; her men robust for toil ;
Her vigorous souls, high-cultured as her soil ;
Her towns, where civic independence flings
The gauntlet down to senates, courts, and kings ;
Her works of art, resembling magic's powers ;
Her mighty fleets, and learning's beauteous bowers,—
These he had visited, with wonder's smile,
And scarce endured to quit so fair an isle.
But how our fates from unmomentous things
May rise, like rivers out of little springs !
A trivial chance postponed his parting day,
And public tidings caused, in that delay,
An English Jubilee. 'Twas a glorious sight !
At eve stupendous London, clad in light,

Pour'd out triumphant multitudes to gaze ;
Youth, age, wealth, penury, smiling in the blaze ;
Th' illumined atmosphere was warm and bland,
And Beauty's groups, the fairest of the land,
Conspicuous, as in some wide festive room,
In open chariots pass'd with pearl and plume.
Amidst them he remark'd a lovelier mien
Than e'er his thoughts had shaped, or eyes had seen ;
The throng detain'd her till he rein'd his steed,
And, ere the beauty pass'd, had time to read
The motto and the arms her carriage bore.
Led by that clue, he left not England's shore
Till he had known her ; and to know her well
Prolong'd, exalted, bound, enchantment's spell ;
For with affections warm, intense, refined,
She mix'd such calm and holy strength of mind,
That, like Heaven's image in the smiling brook,
Celestial peace was pictured in her look.
Hers was the brow, in trials unperplex'd,
That cheer'd the sad, and tranquillised the vex'd ;
She studied not the meanest to eclipse,
And yet the wisest listen'd to her lips ;
She sang not, knew not Music's magic skill,
But yet her voice had tones that sway'd the will.
He sought—he won her—and resolved to make
His future home in England for her sake.

Yet, ere they wedded, matters of concern
To CÆSAR'S Court commanded his return,

A season's space,—and on his Alpine way,
 He reach'd those bowers, that rang with joy that day :
 The boy was half beside himself,—the sire,
 All frankness, honour, and Helvetian fire,
 Of speedy parting would not hear him speak ;
 And tears bedew'd and brighten'd JULIA'S cheek.

Thus, loth to wound their hospitable pride,
 A month he promised with them to abide ;
 As blithe he trod the mountain-sward as they,
 And felt his joy make ev'n the young more gay.
 How jocund was their breakfast-parlour, fann'd
 By yon blue water's breath,—their walks how bland !
 Fair JULIA seem'd her brother's soften'd sprite—
 A gem reflecting Nature's purest light,—
 And with her graceful wit there was inwrought
 A wildly sweet unworldliness of thought,
 That almost child-like to his kindness drew,
 And twin with UDOLPH in his friendship grew.
 But did his thoughts to love one moment range ?—
 No ! he who had loved CONSTANCE could not change !
 Besides, till grief betray'd her undesign'd,
 Th' unlikely thought could scarcely reach his mind,
 That eyes so young on years like his should beam
 Unwoo'd devotion back for pure esteem.

True she sang to his very soul, and brought
 Those trains before him of luxuriant thought,
 Which only Music's heaven-born art can bring,
 To sweep across the mind with angel wing.

Once, as he smiled amidst that waking trance,
She paused o'ercome, he thought it might be chance,
And, when his first suspicions dimly stole,
Rebuked them back like phantoms from his soul.
But when he saw his caution gave her pain,
And kindness brought suspense's rack again,
Faith, honour, friendship, bound him to unmask
Truths which her timid fondness fear'd to ask.

And yet with gracefully ingenuous power
Her spirit met th' explanatory hour ;—
Ev'n conscious beauty brighten'd in her eyes,
That told she knew their love no vulgar prize ;
And pride like that of one more woman-grown,
Enlarged her mien, enrich'd her voice's tone.
'Twas then she struck the keys, and music made
That mock'd all skill her hand had e'er display'd.
Inspired and warbling, rapt from things around,
She look'd the very Muse of magic sound,
Painting in sound the forms of joy and woe,
Until the mind's eye saw them melt and glow.
Her closing strain composed and calm she play'd,
And sang no words to give its pathos aid ;
But grief seem'd lingering in its lengthen'd swell,
And like so many tears the trickling touches fell.
Of CONSTANCE then she heard THEODRIC speak,
And steadfast smoothness still possess'd her cheek.
But when he told her how he oft had plann'd
Of old a journey to their mountain-land,

That might have brought him hither years before,
'Ah! then,' she cried, 'you knew not England's shore!
And had you come,—and wherefore did you not?'

'Yes,' he replied, 'it would have changed our lot!'
Then burst her tears through pride's restraining bands,
And with her handkerchief, and both her hands,
She hid her voice and wept.—Contrition stung
THEODRIC for the tears his words had wrung.

'But no,' she cried, 'unsay not what you've said,
Nor grudge one prop on which my pride is stay'd;
To think I could have merited your faith
Shall be my solace even unto death!'

'JULIA,' THEODRIC said, with purposed look
Of firmness, 'my reply deserved rebuke;
But by your pure and sacred peace of mind,
And by the dignity of womankind,
Swear that when I am gone you'll do your best
To chase this dream of fondness from your breast.'

Th' abrupt appeal electrified her thought;—
She look'd to Heav'n as if its aid she sought,
Dried hastily the tear-drops from her cheek,
And signified the vow she could not speak.

Ere long he communed with her mother mild:
'Alas!' she said, 'I warn'd—conjured my child,
And grieved for this affection from the first,
But like fatality it has been nursed;
For when her fill'd eyes on your picture fix'd,
And when your name in all she spoke was mix'd,

'Twas hard to chide an over-grateful mind !
 Then each attempt a likelier choice to find
 Made only fresh-rejected suitors grieve,
 And UDOLPH'S pride—perhaps her own—believe
 That, could she meet, she might enchant ev'n you.
 You came.—I augur'd the event, 'tis true,
 But how was UDOLPH'S mother to exclude
 The guest that claim'd our boundless gratitude ?
 And that unconscious you had cast a spell
 On JULIA'S peace, my pride refused to tell :
 Yet in my child's illusion I have seen,
 Believe me well, how blameless you have been :
 Nor can it cancel, howsoe'er it end,
 Our debt of friendship to our boy's best friend.'
 At night he parted with the aged pair ;
 At early morn rose JULIA to prepare
 The last repast her hands for him should make :
 And UDOLPH to convoy him o'er the lake.
 The parting was to her such bitter grief,
 That of her own accord she made it brief ;
 But, lingering at her window, long survey'd
 His boat's last glimpses melting into shade.

THEODRIC sped to Austria, and achieved
 His journey's object. Much was he relieved
 When UDOLPH'S letters told that JULIA'S mind
 Had borne his loss, firm, tranquil, and resign'd.
 He took the Rhenish route to England, high
 Elate with hopes, fulfill'd their ecstasy,

And interchanged with CONSTANCE'S own breath
The sweet eternal vows that bound their faith.

To paint that being to a grovelling mind
Were like portraying pictures to the blind.
'Twas needful ev'n infectiously to feel
Her temper's fond and firm and gladsome zeal,
To share existence with her, and to gain
Sparks from her love's electrifying chain
Of that pure pride, which, lessening to her breast
Life's ills, gave all its joys a treble zest,
Before the mind completely understood
That mighty truth—how happy are the good !

Ev'n when her light forsook him, it bequeathed
Ennobling sorrow ; and her memory breathed
A sweetness that survived her living days,
As odorous scents outlast the censer's blaze.

Or, if a trouble dimm'd their golden joy,
'Twas outward dross, and not infused alloy :
Their home knew but affection's looks and speech—
A little Heaven, above dissension's reach.
But 'midst her kindred there was strife and gall ;
Save one congenial sister, they were all
Such foils to her bright intellect and grace,
As if she had engross'd the virtue of her race.
Her nature strove th' unnatural feuds to heal,
Her wisdom made the weak to her appeal ;
And, tho' the wounds she cured were soon unclosed,
Unwearied still her kindness interposed.

Oft on those errands though she went in vain,
 And home, a blank without her, gave him pain,
 He bore her absence for its pious end.—
 But public grief his spirit came to bend ;
 For war laid waste his native land once more,
 And German honour bled at every pore.
 Oh ! were he there, he thought, to rally back
 One broken band, or perish in the wrack !
 Nor think that CONSTANCE sought to move and melt
 His purpose : like herself she spoke and felt :—
 ‘ Your fame is mine, and I will bear all woe
 Except its loss !—but with you let me go
 To arm you for, to embrace you from, the fight ;
 Harm will not reach me—hazards will delight !’
 He knew those hazards better ; one campaign
 In England he conjured her to remain,
 And she express’d assent, although her heart
 In secret had resolved they should not part. .

How oft the wisest on misfortune’s shelves
 Are wreck’d by errors most unlike themselves ?
That little fault, that fraud of love’s romance,
That plan’s concealment, wrought their whole mischance.
He knew it not preparing to embark,
 But felt extinct his comfort’s latest spark,
 When, ’midst those number’d days, she made repair
 Again to kindred worthless of her care.
 ’Tis true she said the tidings she would write
 Would make her absence on his heart sit light ;

But, haplessly, reveal'd not yet her plan,
And left him in his home a lonely man.

Thus damp'd in thoughts, he mused upon the past :
'Twas long since he had heard from UDOLPH last,
And deep misgivings on his spirit fell
That all with UDOLPH's household was not well.
'Twas that too true prophetic mood of fear
That augurs griefs inevitably near,
Yet makes them not less startling to the mind
When come. Least look'd-for then of human kind.
His UDOLPH ('twas, he thought at first, his sprite,)
With mournful joy that morn surprised his sight.
How changed was UDOLPH ! Scarce THEODRIC durst
Inquire his tidings,—he reveal'd the worst.
'At first,' he said, 'as JULIA bade me tell,
She bore her fate high-mindedly and well,
Resolved from common eyes her grief to hide,
And from the world's compassion saved our pride ;
But still her health gave way to secret woe,
And long she pined—for broken hearts die slow !
Her reason went, but came returning, like
The warning of her death-hour—soon to strike ;
And all for which she now, poor sufferer ! sighs,
Is once to see THEODRIC ere she dies.
Why should I come to tell you this caprice ?
Forgive me ! for my mind hast lost its peace.
I blame myself, and ne'er shall cease to blame,
That my insane ambition for the name

Of brother to THEODRIC, founded all
Those high-built hopes that crush'd her by their fall.
I made her slight her mother's counsel sage,
But now my parents droop with grief and age :
And, though my sister's eyes mean no rebuke,
They overwhelm me with their dying look.
The journey's long, but you are full of ruth ;
And she who shares your heart, and knows its truth,
Has faith in your affection, far above
The fear of a poor dying object's love.'—
'She has, my UDOLPH,' he replied, ' 'tis true ;
And oft we talk of JULIA—oft of you.'
Their converse came abruptly to a close ;
For scarce could each his troubled looks compose,
When visitants, to CONSTANCE near akin,
(In all but traits of soul,) were usher'd in.
They brought not her, nor 'midst their kindred band
The sister who alone, like her, was bland ;
But said—and smiled to see it gave him pain—
That CONSTANCE would a fortnight yet remain.
Vex'd by their tidings, and the haughty view
They cast on UDOLPH as the youth withdrew,
THEODRIC blamed his CONSTANCE's intent.—
The demons went, and left him as they went
To read, when they were gone beyond recal,
A note from her loved hand explaining all.
She said, that with their house she only staid
That parting peace might with them all be made ;

But pray'd for love to share his foreign life,
 And shun all future chance of kindred strife.
 He wrote with speed, his soul's consent to say :
 The letter miss'd her on her homeward way.
 In six hours CONSTANCE was within his arms :
 Moved, flush'd, unlike her wonted calm of charms,
 And breathless—with uplifted hands outspread—
 Burst into tears upon his neck, and said,—
 ' I knew that those who brought your message laugh'd,
 With poison of their own to point the shaft ;
 And this my one kind sister thought, yet loth
 Confess'd she fear'd 'twas true you had been wroth.
 But here you are, and smile on me : my pain
 Is gone, and CONSTANCE is herself again.'
 His ecstasy, it may be guess'd, was much :
 Yet pain's extreme and pleasure's seem'd to touch.
 What pride ! embracing beauty's perfect mould ;
 What terror ! lest his few rash words mistold
 Had agonised her pulse to fever's heat :
 But calm'd again so soon it healthful beat,
 And such sweet tones were in her voice's sound,
 Composed herself, she breathed composure round.
 Fair being ! with what sympathetic grace
 She heard, bewail'd, and pleaded JULIA's case ;
 Implored he would her dying wish attend,
 ' And go,' she said, ' to-morrow with your friend ;
 I'll wait for your return on England's shore,
 And then we'll cross the deep, and part no more.'

To-morrow both his soul's compassion drew
 To JULIA'S call, and CONSTANCE urged anew
 That not to heed her now would be to bind
 A load of pain for life upon his mind.
 He went with UDOLPH—from his CONSTANCE went—
 Stifling, alas! a dark presentiment
 Some ailment lurk'd, ev'n whilst she smiled, to mock
 His fears of harm from yester-morning's shock.
 Meanwhile a faithful page he singled out,
 To watch at home, and follow straight his route,
 If aught of threaten'd change her health should show.
 —With UDOLPH then he reach'd the house of woe.

That winter's eve, how darkly Nature's brow
 Scowl'd on the scenes it lights so lovely now!
 The tempest, raging o'er the realms of ice,
 Shook fragments from the rifted precipice;
 And, whilst their falling echoed to the wind,
 The wolf's long howl in dismal discord join'd.
 While white yon water's foam was raised in clouds
 That whirl'd like spirits wailing in their shrouds:
 Without was Nature's elemental din—
 And beauty died, and friendship wept, within!

Sweet JULIA, though her fate was finish'd half,
 Still knew him—smiled on him with feeble laugh—
 And bless'd him, till she drew her latest sigh!
 But lo! while UDOLPH'S bursts of agony,
 And age's tremulous wailings, round him rose,
 What accents pierced him deeper yet than those!

'Twas tidings, by his English messenger,
Of CONSTANCE—brief and terrible they were.
She still was living when the page set out
From home, but whether now was left in doubt.
Poor JULIA ! saw he then thy death's relief—
Stunn'd into stupor more than wrung with grief?
It was not strange ; for in the human breast
Two master-passions cannot co-exist,
And that alarm which now usurp'd his brain
Shut out not only peace, but other pain.
'Twas fancying CONSTANCE underneath the shroud
That cover'd JULIA made him first weep loud,
And tear himself away from them that wept.
Fast hurrying homeward, night nor day he slept,
Till, launch'd at sea, he dreamt that his soul's saint
Clung to him on a bridge of ice, pale, faint,
O'er cataracts of blood. Awake, he bless'd
The shore ; nor hope left utterly his breast,
Till reaching home, terrific omen ! there
The straw-laid street preluded his despair—
The servant's look—the table that reveal'd
His letter sent to CONSTANCE last, still seal'd—
Though speech and hearing left him, told too clear
That he had now to suffer—not to fear.
He felt as if he ne'er should cease to feel—
A wretch live-broken on misfortune's wheel :
Her death's cause—he might make his peace with Heaven,
Absolved from guilt, but never self-forgiven.

The ocean has its ebbings—so has grief ;
 'Twas vent to anguish, if 'twas not relief,
 To lay his brow ev'n on her death-cold cheek.
 Then first he heard her one kind sister speak :
 She bade him, in the name of Heaven, forbear
 With self-reproach to deepen his despair :

‘ 'Twas blame,’ she said, ‘ I shudder to relate,
 But none of yours, that caused our darling’s fate ;
 Her mother (must I call her such ?) foresaw,
 Should CONSTANCE leave the land, she would withdraw
 Our House’s charm against the world’s neglect—
 The only gem that drew it some respect.

Hence, when you went, she came and vainly spoke
 To change her purpose—grew incensed, and broke
 With execrations from her kneeling child.

Start not ! your angel from her knee rose mild,
 Fear’d that she should not long the scene outlive,
 Yet bade ev’n you th’ unnatural one forgive.

Till then her ailment had been slight, or none ;
 But fast she droop’d, and fatal pains came on :
 Foreseeing their event, she dictated

And sign’d these words for you.’ The letter said—

‘ THEODRIC, this is destiny above
 Our power to baffle ; bear it then, my love !
 Rave not to learn the usage I have borne,
 For one true sister left me not forlorn ;
 And though you’re absent in another land,
 Sent from me by my own well-meant command,

Your soul, I know, as firm is knit to mine
As these clasp'd hands in blessing you now join :
Shape not imagined horrors in my fate—
Ev'n now my sufferings are not very great ;
And when your grief's first transports shall subside,
I call upon your strength of soul and pride
To pay my memory, if 'tis worth the debt,
Love's glorying tribute—not forlorn regret :
I charge my name with power to conjure up
Reflection's balmy, not its bitter cup.
My pardoning angel, at the gates of Heaven,
Shall look not more regard than you have given
To me ; and our life's union has been clad
In smiles of bliss as sweet as life e'er had.
Shall gloom be from such bright remembrance cast ?
Shall bitterness outflow from sweetness past ?
No ! imaged in the sanctuary of your breast,
There let me smile, amidst high thoughts at rest ;
And let contentment on your spirit shine,
As if its peace were still a part of mine :
For if you war not proudly with your pain,
For you I shall have worse than lived in vain.
But I conjure your manliness to bear
My loss with noble spirit—not despair ;
I ask you by our love to promise this,
And kiss these words, where I have left a kiss,—
The latest from my living lips for yours.'—

Words that will solace him while life endures :

For though his spirit from affliction's surge
Could ne'er to life, as life had been, emerge,
Yet still that mind whose harmony elate
Rang sweetness, even beneath the crush of fate,—
That mind in whose regard all things were placed
In views that soften'd them, or lights that graced,
That soul's example could not but dispense
A portion of its own bless'd influence ;
Invoking him to peace and that self-sway
Which Fortune cannot give, nor take away :
And though he mourn'd her long, 'twas with such woe
As if her spirit watch'd him still below."

MARTIAL ELEGY.

FROM THE GREEK OF TYRTÆUS.

How glorious fall the valiant, sword in hand,
 In front of battle for their native land !
 But oh ! what ills await the wretch that yields,
 A recreant outcast from his country's fields !
 The mother whom he loves shall quit her home,
 An aged father at his side shall roam ;
 His little ones shall weeping with him go,
 And a young wife participate his woe ;
 While scorn'd and scowl'd upon by every face,
 They pine for food, and beg from place to place.

Stain of his breed ! dishonouring manhood's form,
 All ills shall cleave to him :—Affliction's storm
 Shall blind him wandering in the vale of years,
 Till, lost to all but ignominious fears,
 He shall not blush to leave a recreant's name,
 And children, like himself, inured to shame.

But we will combat for our fathers' land,
And we will drain the life-blood where we stand,
To save our children :—fight ye side by side,
And serried close, ye men of youthful pride,
Disdaining fear, and deeming light the cost
Of life itself in glorious battle lost.

Leave not our sires to stem the unequal fight,
Whose limbs are nerved no more with buoyant might ;
Nor, lagging backward, let the younger breast
Permit the man of age (a sight unblest'd)
To welter in the combat's foremost thrust,
His hoary head dishevell'd in the dust,
And venerable bosom bleeding bare.

But youth's fair form, though fallen, is ever fair,
And beautiful in death the boy appears,
The hero boy, that dies in blooming years :
In man's regret he lives, and woman's tears,
More sacred than in life, and lovelier far,
For having perish'd in the front of war.

SONG OF HYBRIAS THE CRETAN.

MY wealth's a burly spear and brand,
 And a right good shield of hides untann'd,
 Which on my arm I buckle :
 With these I plough, I reap, I sow,
 With these I make the sweet vintage flow,
 And all around me truckle.

But your wights that take no pride to wield
 A massy spear and well-made shield,
 Nor joy to draw the sword :
 Oh, I bring those heartless, hapless drones,
 Down in a trice on their marrow-bones,
 To call me King and Lord.

FRAGMENT.

FROM THE GREEK OF ALCMAN.

THE mountain summits sleep : glens, cliffs, and caves
 Are silent—all the black earth's reptile brood—
 The bees—the wild beasts of the mountain wood :
 In depths beneath the dark red ocean's waves
 Its monsters rest, whilst wrapt in bower and spray
 Each bird is hush'd that stretch'd its pinions to the day.

SPECIMENS OF TRANSLATION FROM MEDEA.

Σκαιοὺς δε λεγων, κουδέν τι σοφους
 Τους προσθε βροτους ουκ αν αμαρτοις.

Medea, v. 194, p. 33, Glasg. edit.

TELL me, ye bards, whose skill sublime
 First charm'd the ear of youthful Time,
 With numbers wrapt in heavenly fire,
 Who bade delighted Echo swell
 The trembling transports of the lyre,
 The murmur of the shell—
 Why to the burst of Joy alone
 Accords sweet Music's soothing tone?
 Why can no bard, with magic strain,
 In slumbers steep the heart of pain?
 While varied tones obey your sweep,
 The mild, the plaintive, and the deep,
 Bends not despairing Grief to hear
 Your golden lute, with ravish'd ear?
 Has all your art no power to bind
 The fiercer pangs that shake the mind,
 And lull the wrath at whose command
 Murder bares her gory hand?
 When flush'd with joy, the rosy throng
 Weave the light dance, ye swell the song!
 Cease, ye vain warblers! cease to charm!
 The breast with other raptures warm!
 Cease! till your hand with magic strain
 In slumbers steep the heart of pain!

SPEECH OF THE CHORUS,

IN THE SAME TRAGEDY,

TO DISSUADE MEDEA FROM HER PURPOSE OF PUTTING HER CHILDREN TO DEATH, AND FLYING FOR PROTECTION TO ATHENS.

O HAGGARD queen ! to Athens dost thou guide
Thy glowing chariot, steep'd in kindred gore ;
Or seek to hide thy foul infanticide
Where Peace and Mercy dwell for evermore ?

The land where Truth, pure, precious, and sublime,
Woos the deep silence of sequester'd bowers,
And warriors, matchless since the first of time,
Rear their bright banners o'er unconquer'd towers !

Where joyous youth, to Music's mellow strain,
Twines in the dance with nymphs for ever fair,
While Spring eternal on the liliated plain,
Waves amber radiance through the fields of air !

The tuneful Nine (so sacred legends tell)
First waked their heavenly lyre these scenes among ;
Still in your greenwood bowers they love to dwell ;
Still in your vales they swell the choral song !

But there the tuneful, chaste, Pierian fair,
The guardian nymphs of green Parnassus, now
Sprung from Harmonia, while her graceful hair
Waved in high auburn o'er her polish'd brow !

ANTISTROPHE I.

Where silent vales, and glades of green array,
 The murmuring wreaths of cool Cephisus lave,
 There, as the muse hath sung, at noon of day,
 The Queen of Beauty bow'd to taste the wave ;

And bless'd the stream, and breathed across the land
 The soft sweet gale that fans yon summer bowers ;
 And there the sister Loves, a smiling band,
 Crown'd with the fragrant wreaths of rosy flowers !

“ And go,” she cries, “ in yonder valleys rove,
 With Beauty's torch the solemn scenes illumine ;
 Wake in each eye the radiant light of Love,
 Breathe on each cheek young Passion's tender bloom !

Entwine, with myrtle chains, your soft controul,
 To sway the hearts of Freedom's darling kind !
 With glowing charms enrapture Wisdom's soul,
 And mould to grace ethereal Virtue's mind.”

STROPHE II.

The land where Heaven's own hallow'd waters play,
 Where friendship binds the generous and the good,
 Say, shall it hail thee from thy frantic way,
 Unholy woman ! with thy hands embrued

In thine own children's gore! Oh! ere they bleed,
Let Nature's voice thy ruthless heart appal!
Pause at the bold, irrevocable deed—
The mother strikes—the guiltless babes shall fall!

Think what remorse thy maddening thoughts shall sting,
When dying pangs their gentle bosoms tear!
Where shalt thou sink, when lingering echoes ring
The screams of horror in thy tortured ear?

No! let thy bosom melt to Pity's cry,—
In dust we kneel—by sacred Heaven implore—
O! stop thy lifted arm, ere yet they die,
Nor dip thy horrid hands in infant gore!

ANTISTROPHE II.

Say, how shalt thou that barbarous soul assume,
Undamp'd by horror at the daring plan?
Hast thou a heart to work thy children's doom?
Or hands to finish what thy wrath began?

When o'er each babe you look a last adieu,
And gaze on Innocence that smiles asleep,
Shall no fond feeling beat to Nature true,
Charm thee to pensive thought—and bid thee weep?

When the young suppliants clasp their parent dear,
 Heave the deep sob, and pour the artless prayer—
 Ay ! thou shalt melt ;—and many a heart-shed tear
 Gush o'er the harden'd features of despair !

Nature shall throb in every tender string,—
 Thy trembling heart the ruffian's task deny ;—
 Thy horror-smitten hands afar shall fling
 The blade, undrench'd in blood's eternal dye.

CHORUS.

Hallow'd Earth ! with indignation
 Mark, oh mark, the murderous deed !
 Radiant eye of wide creation,
 Watch th' accurs'd infanticide !

Yet, ere Colchia's rugged daughter
 Perpetrate the dire design,
 And consign to kindred slaughter
 Children of thy golden line ?

Shall mortal hand, with murder gory,
 Cause immortal blood to flow !
 Sun of Heaven !—array'd in glory
 Rise, forbid, avert the blow !

In the vales of placid gladness
Let no rueful maniac range ;
Chase afar the fiend of Madness,
Wrest the dagger from Revenge !

Say, hast thou, with kind protection,
Rear'd thy smiling race in vain ;
Fostering Nature's fond affection,
Tender cares, and pleasing pain ?

Hast thou, on the troubled ocean,
Braved the tempest loud and strong,
Where the waves, in wild commotion,
Roar Cyanean rocks among ?

Didst thou roam the paths of danger,
Hymenean joys to prove ?
Spare, O sanguinary stranger,
Pledges of thy sacred love !

Ask not Heaven's commiseration,
After thou hast done the deed ;
Mercy, pardon, expiation,
Perish when thy victims bleed.

O'CONNOR'S CHILD ;

OR,

“THE FLOWER OF LOVE LIES BLEEDING.”

I.

OH ! once the harp of Innisfail
Was strung full high to notes of gladness ;
But yet it often told a tale
Of more prevailing sadness.

Sad was the note, and wild its fall,
 As winds that moan at night forlorn
 Along the isles of Fion-Gall,
 When, for O'Connor's child to mourn,
 The harper told, how lone, how far
 From any mansion's twinkling star,
 From any path of social men,
 Or voice, but from the fox's den,
 The lady in the desert dwelt ;
 And yet no wrongs, no fears she felt :
 Say, why should dwell in place so wild,
 O'Connor's pale and lovely child ?

II.

Sweet lady ! she no more inspires
 Green Erin's hearts with beauty's power,
 As, in the palace of her sires,
 She bloom'd a peerless flower.
 Gone from her hand and bosom, gone,
 The royal broche, the jewell'd ring,
 That o'er her dazzling whiteness shone,
 Like dew on lilies of the spring.
 Yet why, though fall'n her brother's kerne,
 Beneath De Bourgo's battle stern,
 While yet in Leinster unexplored,
 Her friends survive the English sword ;
 Why lingers she from Erin's host,
 So far on Galway's shipwreck'd coast ;
 Why wanders she a huntress wild—
 O'Connor's pale and lovely child ?

III.

And fix'd on empty space, why burn
Her eyes with momentary wildness ;
And wherefore do they then return
To more than woman's mildness ?
Dishevell'd are her raven locks ;
On Connocht Moran's name she calls ;
And oft amidst the lonely rocks
She sings sweet madrigals.
Placed 'midst the fox-glove and the moss,
Behold a parted warrior's cross !
That is the spot where, evermore,
The lady, at her shieling door,
Enjoys that, in communion sweet,
The living and the dead can meet,
For, lo ! to love-lorn fantasy,
The hero of her heart is nigh.

IV.

Bright as the bow that spans the storm,
In Erin's yellow vesture clad,
A son of light—a lovely form,
He comes and makes her glad ;
Now on the grass-green turf he sits,
His tassell'd horn beside him laid ;
Now o'er the hills in chase he flits,
The hunter and the deer a shade !
Sweet mourner ! these are shadows vain
That cross the twilight of her brain ;

Yet she will tell you, she is blest,
 Of Connocht Moran's tomb possess'd,
 More richly than in Aghrim's bower,
 When bards high praised her beauty's power,
 And kneeling pages offer'd up
 The mórat in a golden cup.

v.

“ A hero's bride ! this desert bower,
 It ill befits thy gentle breeding :
 And wherefore dost thou love this flower
 To call—‘ My love lies bleeding ? ’
 This purple flower my tears have nursed ;
 A hero's blood supplied its bloom :
 I love it, for it was the first
 That grew on Connocht Moran's tomb.
 Oh ! hearken, stranger, to my voice !
 This desert mansion is my choice !
 And blest, though fatal, be the star
 That led me to its wilds afar :
 For here these pathless mountains free
 Gave shelter to my love and me ;
 And every rock and every stone
 Bore witness that he was my own.

vi.

O'Connor's child, I was the bud
 Of Erin's royal tree of glory ;
 But woe to them that wrapt in blood
 The tissue of my story !

Still as I clasp my burning brain,
 A death-scene rushes on my sight ;
 It rises o'er and o'er again,
 The bloody feud—the fatal night,
 When chafing Connocht Moran's scorn,
 They call'd my hero basely born ;
 And bade him choose a meaner bride
 Than from O'Connor's house of pride.
 Their tribe, they said, their high degree,
 Was sung in Tara's psaltery ;
 Witness their Eath's victorious brand,
 And Cathal of the bloody hand ;
 Glory (they said) and power and honour
 Were in the mansion of O'Connor :
 But he, my loved one, bore in field
 A humbler crest, a meaner shield.

VII.

Ah, brothers ! what did it avail,
 That fiercely and triumphantly
 Ye fought the English of the Pale,
 And stemm'd De Bourgo's chivalry !
 And what was it to love and me,
 That barons by your standard rōde ;
 Or beal-fires for your jubilee
 Upon a hundred mountains glow'd ?
 What though the lords of tower and dome
 From Shannon to the North-sea foam,—
 Thought ye your iron hands of pride
 Could break the knot that love had tied ?

No :—let the eagle change his plume,
 The leaf its hue, the flower its bloom ;
 But ties around this heart were spun,
 That could not, would not, be undone !

VIII.

At bleating of the wild watch-fold
 Thus sang my love—‘ Oh, come with me :
 Our bark is on the lake, behold
 Our steeds are fasten'd to the tree.
 Come far from Castle-Connor's clans :—
 Come with thy belted forestere,
 And I, beside the lake of swans,
 Shall hunt for thee the fallow-deer ;
 And build thy hut, and bring thee home
 The wild-fowl and the honey-comb ;
 And berries from the wood provide,
 And play my clarshech by thy side.
 Then come, my love !’—How could I stay ?
 Our nimble stag-hounds track'd the way,
 And I pursued, by moonless skies,
 The light of Connocht Moran's eyes.

IX.

And fast and far, before the star
 Of day-spring, rush'd we through the glade,
 And saw at dawn the lofty bawn
 Of Castle-Connor fade.
 Sweet was to us the hermitage
 Of this unplough'd, untrodden shore ;

Like birds all joyous from the cage,
 For man's neglect we loved it more,
 And well he knew, my huntsman dear,
 To search the game with hawk and spear ;
 While I, his evening food to dress,
 Would sing to him in happiness.
 But, oh, that midnight of despair !
 When I was doom'd to rend my hair :
 The night, to me, of shrieking sorrow !
 The night, to him, that had no morrow !

When all was hush'd at even tide,
 I heard the baying of their beagle :
 Be hush'd ! my Connocht Moran cried,
 'Tis but the screaming of the eagle.
 Alas ! 'twas not the eyrie's sound ;
 Their bloody bands had track'd us out ;
 Up-listening starts our couchant hound—
 And, hark ! again, that nearer shout
 Brings faster on the murderers.
 Spare—spare him—Brazil—Desmond fierce !
 In vain—no voice the adder charms ;
 Their weapons cross'd my sheltering arms :
 Another's sword has laid him low—
 Another's and another's ;
 And every hand that dealt the blow—
 Ah me ! it was a brother's !

Yes, when his moanings died away,
 Their iron hands had dug the clay,
 And o'er his burial turf they trod,
 And I behold—oh God! oh God!—
 His life-blood oozing from the sod

XI.

Warm in his death-wounds sepulchred,
 Alas! my warrior's spirit brave
 Nor mass nor ulla-lulla heard,
 Lamenting, soothe his grave.
 Dragg'd to their hated mansion back,
 How long in thraldom's grasp I lay
 I knew not, for my soul was black,
 And knew no change of night or day.
 One night of horror round me grew;
 Or if I saw, or felt, or knew,
 'Twas but when those grim visages,
 The angry brothers of my race,
 Glared on each eye-ball's aching throb,
 And check'd my bosom's power to sob,
 Or when my heart with pulses drear
 Beat like a death-watch to my ear.

XII.

But Heaven, at last, my soul's eclipse
 Did with a vision bright inspire;
 I woke and felt upon my lips
 A prophetess's fire.
 Thrice in the east a war-drum beat,
 I heard the Saxon's trumpet sound,

And ranged, as to the judgment-seat,
 My guilty, trembling brothers round.
 Clad in the helm and shield they came ;
 For now De Bourgo's sword and flame
 Had ravaged Ulster's boundaries,
 And lighted up the midnight skies.
 The standard of O'Connor's sway
 Was in the turret where I lay ;
 That standard, with so dire a look,
 As ghastly shone the moon and pale,
 I gave,—that every bosom shook
 Beneath its iron mail.

XIII.

And go ! (I cried) the combat seek,
 Ye hearts that unappalled bore
 The anguish of a sister's shriek,
 Go !—and return no more !
 For sooner guilt the ordeal brand
 Shall grasp unhurt, than ye shall hold
 The banner with victorious hand,
 Beneath a sister's curse unroll'd.
 O stranger ! by my country's loss !
 And by my love ! and by the cross !
 I swear I never could have spoke
 The curse that sever'd nature's yoke,
 But that a spirit o'er me stood,
 And fired me with the wrathful mood ;
 And frenzy to my heart was given,
 To speak the malison of heaven.

XIV.

They would have cross'd themselves, all mute ;
They would have pray'd to burst the spell ;
But at the stamping of my foot
Each hand down powerless fell !
And go to Athunree ! (I cried)
High lift the banner of your pride !
But know that where its sheet unrolls,
The weight of blood is on your souls !
Go where the havoc of your kerne
Shall float as high as mountain fern !
Men shall no more your mansion know ;
The nettles on your hearth shall grow !
Dead, as the green oblivious flood
That mantles by your walls, shall be
The glory of O'Connor's blood !
Away ! away to Athunree !
Where, downward when the sun shall fall,
The raven's wing shall be your pall !
And not a vassal shall unlace
The vizor from your dying face !

XV.

A bolt that overhung our dome
Suspended till my curse was given,
Soon as it pass'd these lips of foam,
Peal'd in the blood-red heaven.
Dire was the look that o'er their backs
The angry parting brothers threw :

But now, behold ! like cataracts,
Come down the hills in view
O'Connor's plumed partisans ;
Thrice ten Kilnagorvian clans
Were marching to their doom ;
A sudden storm their plumage toss'd,
A flash of lightning o'er them cross'd,
And all again was gloom !

xvi.

Stranger ! I fled the home of grief,
At Connocht Moran's tomb to fall ;
I found the helmet of my chief,
His bow still hanging on our wall,
And took it down, and vow'd to rove
This desert place a huntress bold ;
Nor would I change my buried love
For any heart of living mould.
No ! for I am a hero's child ;
I'll hunt my quarry in the wild ;
And still my home this mansion make,
Of all unheeded and unheeding,
And cherish, for my warrior's sake—
'The flower of love lies bleeding.' ”

LOCHIEL'S WARNING.

WIZARD—LOCHIEL.

WIZARD.

LOCHIEL, Lochiel! beware of the day
 When the Lowlands shall meet thee in battle array!
 For a field of the dead rushes red on my sight,
 And the clans of Culloden are scatter'd in fight.
 They rally, they bleed, for their kingdom and crown;
 Woe, woe to the riders that trample them down!
 Proud Cumberland prances, insulting the slain,
 And their hoof-beaten bosoms are trod to the plain.
 But hark! through the fast-flashing lightning of war,
 What steed to the desert flies frantic and far?
 'Tis thine, oh Glenullin! whose bride shall await,
 Like a love-lighted watch-fire, all night at the gate.
 A steed comes at morning: no rider is there;
 But its bridle is red with the sign of despair.
 Weep, Albin! to death and captivity led!
 Oh weep! but thy tears cannot number the dead:
 For a merciless sword on Culloden shall wave,
 Culloden! that reeks with the blood of the brave.

LOCHIEL.

Go, preach to the coward, thou death-telling seer!
 Or, if gory Culloden so dreadful appear,

Draw, dotard, around thy old wavering sight
This mantle, to cover the phantoms of fright.

WIZARD.

Ha! laugh'st thou, Lochiel, my vision to scorn?
Proud bird of the mountain, thy plume shall be torn!
Say, rush'd the bold eagle exultingly forth,
From his home, in the dark rolling clouds of the north?
Lo! the death-shot of foemen outspeeding, he rode
Companionless, bearing destruction abroad;
But down let him stoop from his havoc on high!
Ah! home let him speed,—for the spoiler is nigh.
Why flames the far summit? Why shoot to the blast
Those embers, like stars from the firmament cast?
'Tis the fire-shower of ruin, all dreadfully driven
From his eyrie, that beacons the darkness of heaven.
Oh, crested Lochiel! the peerless in might,
Whose banners arise on the battlements' height,
Heaven's fire is around thee, to blast and to burn;
Return to thy dwelling! all lonely return!
For the blackness of ashes shall mark where it stood,
And a wild mother scream o'er her famishing brood.

LOCHIEL.

False Wizard, avaunt! I have marshall'd my clan,
Their swords are a thousand, their bosoms are one!
They are true to the last of their blood and their breath,
And like reapers descend to the harvest of death.
Then welcome be Cumberland's steed to the shock!
Let him dash his proud foam like a wave on the rock!

But woe to his kindred, and woe to his cause,
 When Albin her claymore indignantly draws ;
 When her bonneted chieftains to victory crowd,
 Clanronald the dauntless, and Moray the proud,
 All plaided and plumed in their tartan array——

WIZARD.

——Lochiel, Lochiel ! beware of the day ;
 For, dark and despairing, my sight I may seal,
 But man cannot cover what God would reveal ;
 'Tis the sunset of life gives me mystical lore,
 And coming events cast their shadows before.
 I tell thee, Culloden's dread echoes shall ring
 With the bloodhounds that bark for thy fugitive king.
 Lo ! anointed by Heaven with the vials of wrath,
 Behold, where he flies on his desolate path !
 Now in darkness and billows, he sweeps from my sight :
 Rise, rise ! ye wild tempests, and cover his flight !
 'Tis finish'd. Their thunders are hush'd on the moors :
 Culloden is lost, and my country deplores.
 But where is the iron-bound prisoner ? Where ?
 For the red eye of battle is shut in despair.
 Say, mounts he the ocean-wave, banish'd, forlorn,
 Like a limb from his country cast bleeding and torn ?
 Ah no ! for a darker departure is near ;
 The war-drum is muffled, and black is the bier ;
 His death-bell is tolling : oh ! mercy, dispel
 Yon sight, that it freezes my spirit to tell !

Life flutters convulsed in his quivering limbs,
And his blood-streaming nostril in agony swims.
Accursed be the faggots, that blaze at his feet,
Where his heart shall be thrown, ere it ceases to beat,
With the smoke of its ashes to poison the gale——

LOCHIEL.

——Down, soothless insulter! I trust not the tale:

For never shall Albin a destiny meet,
 So black with dishonour, so foul with retreat.
 Tho' my perishing ranks should be strew'd in their gore,
 Like ocean-weeds heap'd on the surf-beaten shore,
 Lochiel, untainted by flight or by chains,
 While the kindling of life in his bosom remains,
 Shall victor exult, or in death be laid low,
 With his back to the field, and his feet to the foe!
 And leaving in battle no blot on his name,
 Look proudly to Heaven from the death-bed of fame.

YE MARINERS OF ENGLAND :

A NAVAL ODE.

I.

YE Mariners of England!
 That guard our native seas;
 Whose flag has braved, a thousand years,
 The battle and the breeze!
 Your glorious standard launch again
 To match another foe!
 And sweep through the deep,
 While the stormy winds do blow;
 While the battle rages loud and long,
 And the stormy winds do blow.

H

II.

The spirits of your fathers
Shall start from every wave!—
For the deck it was their field of fame,
And Ocean was their grave :
Where Blake and mighty Nelson fell,
Your manly hearts shall glow,
As ye sweep through the deep,
While the stormy winds do blow,
While the battle rages loud and long,
And the stormy winds do blow.

III.

Britannia needs no bulwarks,
No towers along the steep ;
Her march is o'er the mountain-waves,
Her home is on the deep.
With thunders from her native oak,
She quells the floods below,—
As they roar on the shore,
When the stormy winds do blow :
When the battle rages loud and long,
And the stormy winds do blow.

IV.

The meteor flag of England
Shall yet terrific burn ;
Till danger's troubled night depart,
And the star of peace return.

Then, then, ye ocean-warriors !
 Our song and feast shall flow
 To the fame of your name,
 When the storm has ceased to blow ;
 When the fiery fight is heard no more,
 And the storm has ceased to blow.

BATTLE OF THE BALTIC.

I.

OF Nelson and the North,
 Sing the glorious day's renown,
 When to battle fierce came forth
 All the might of Denmark's crown,
 And her arms along the deep proudly shone ;
 By each gun the lighted brand,
 In a bold determined hand,
 And the Prince of all the land
 Led them on.—

II.

Like leviathans afloat,
 Lay their bulwarks on the brine ;
 While the sign of battle flew
 On the lofty British line :

H 2

It was ten of April morn by the chime :
 As they drifted on their path,
 There was silence deep as death ;
 And the boldest held his breath,
 For a time.—

III.

But the might of England flush'd
 To anticipate the scene ;
 And her van the fleeter rush'd
 O'er the deadly space between.
 'Hearts of oak!' our captain cried; when each gun
 From its adamant lips
 Spread a death-shade round the ships,
 Like the hurricane eclipse
 Of the sun.

IV.

Again! again! again!
 And the havoc did not slack,
 Till a feeble cheer the Dane
 To our cheering sent us back ;—
 Their shots along the deep slowly boom :—
 Then ceased—and all is wail,
 As they strike the shatter'd sail ;
 Or, in conflagration pale,
 Light the gloom.—

V.

Out spoke the victor then,
 As he hail'd them o'er the wave ;

‘Ye are brothers ! ye are men !
And we conquer but to save :—
So peace instead of death let us bring ;
But yield, proud foe, thy fleet,
With the crews, at England’s feet,
And make submission meet
To our King.’—

VI.

Then Denmark bless’d our chief,
That he gave her wounds repose ;
And the sounds of joy and grief
From her people wildly rose,
As death withdrew his shades from the day.
While the sun look’d smiling bright
O’er a wide and woeful sight,
Where the fires of funeral light
Died away.

VII.

Now joy, Old England, raise !
For the tidings of thy might,
By the festal cities’ blaze,
Whilst the wine-cup shines in light ;
And yet amidst that joy and uproar,
Let us think of them that sleep,
Full many a fathom deep,
By thy wild and stormy steep,
Elsinore !

VIII.

Brave hearts! to Britain's pride
 Once so faithful and so true,
 On the deck of fame that died;—
 With the gallant good Riou;*
 Soft sigh the winds of Heaven o'er their grave!
 While the billow mournful rolls,
 And the mermaid's song condoles,
 Singing glory to the souls
 Of the brave!

HOHENLINDEN.

ON Linden, when the sun was low,
 All bloodless lay th' untrodden snow,
 And dark as winter was the flow
 Of Iser, rolling rapidly.

But Linden saw another sight,
 When the drum beat, at dead of night,
 Commanding fires of death to light
 The darkness of her scenery.

* Captain Riou, justly entitled the gallant and the good, by Lord Nelson, when he wrote home his despatches.

By torch and trumpet fast array'd,
Each horseman drew his battle-blade,
And furious every charger neigh'd,
To join the dreadful revelry.

Then shook the hills with thunder riven,
Then rush'd the steed to battle driven,
And louder than the bolts of heaven,
Far flash'd the red artillery.

But redder yet that light shall glow
On Linden's hills of stainèd snow,
And bloodier yet the torrent flow
Of Iser, rolling rapidly.

'Tis morn, but scarce yon level sun
Can pierce the war-clouds, rolling dun,
Where furious Frank, and fiery Hun,
Shout in their sulph'rous canopy.

The combat deepens. On, ye brave,
Who rush to glory, or the grave!
Wave, Munich! all thy banners wave,
And charge with all thy chivalry!

Few, few, shall part where many meet!
The snow shall be their winding-sheet,
And every turf beneath their feet
Shall be a soldier's sepulchre.

GLENARA.

O HEARD ye yon pibroch sound sad in the gale,
 Where a band cometh slowly with weeping and wail?
 'Tis the chief of Glenara laments for his dear;
 And her sire, and the people, are call'd to her bier.

Glenara came first with the mourners and shroud;
 Her kinsmen they follow'd, but mourn'd not aloud:
 Their plaids all their bosoms were folded around;
 They march'd all in silence,—they look'd on the ground.

In silence they reach'd over mountain and moor,
 To a heath, where the oak-tree grew lonely and hoar:
 "Now here let us place the grey stone of her cairn:
 Why speak ye no word!"—said Glenara the stern.

"And tell me, I charge you! ye clan of my spouse,
 Why fold ye your mantles, why cloud ye your brows?"
 So spake the rude chieftain:—no answer is made,
 But each mantle unfolding, a dagger display'd.

"I dreamt of my lady, I dreamt of her shroud,"
 Cried a voice from the kinsmen, all wrathful and loud;
 "And empty that shroud, and that coffin did seem:
 Glenara! Glenara! now read me my dream!"

O ! pale grew the cheek of that chieftain, I ween,
 When the shroud was unclosed, and no lady was seen ;
 When a voice from the kinsmen spoke louder in scorn,
 'Twas the youth who had loved the fair Ellen of Lorn :

“ I dreamt of my lady, I dreamt of her grief,
 I dreamt that her lord was a barbarous chief :
 On a rock of the ocean fair Ellen did seem ;
 Glenara ! Glenara ! now read me my dream ! ”

In dust, low the traitor has knelt to the ground,
 And the desert reveal'd where his lady was found ;
 From a rock of the ocean that beauty is borne—
 Now joy to the house of fair Ellen of Lorn !

EXILE OF ERIN.

THERE came to the beach a poor Exile of Erin,
 The dew on his thin robe was heavy and chill :
 For his country he sigh'd, when at twilight repairing
 To wander alone by the wind-beaten hill :
 But the day-star attracted his eye's sad devotion,
 For it rose o'er his own native isle of the ocean,
 Where once, in the fire of his youthful emotion,
 He sang the bold anthem of Erin go bragh.

Sad is my fate! said the heart-broken stranger ;
The wild deer and wolf to a covert can flee,
But I have no refuge from famine and danger,
A home and a country remain not to me.
Never again, in the green sunny bowers,
Where my forefathers lived, shall I spend the sweet hours,
Or cover my harp with the wild-woven flowers,
And strike to the numbers of Erin go bragh

Erin, my country! though sad and forsaken,
 In dreams I revisit thy sea-beaten shore;
 But, alas! in a far foreign land I awaken,
 And sigh for the friends who can meet me no more!
 Oh cruel fate! wilt thou never replace me
 In a mansion of peace—where no perils can chase me?
 Never again shall my brothers embrace me?
 They died to defend me, or live to deplore!

Where is my cabin-door, fast by the wild wood?
 Sisters and sire! did ye weep for its fall?
 Where is the mother that look'd on my childhood?
 And where is the bosom friend, dearer than all?
 Oh! my sad heart! long abandon'd by pleasure,
 Why did it dote on a fast-fading treasure?
 Tears, like the rain-drop, may fall without measure,
 But rapture and beauty they cannot recal.

Yet all its sad recollections suppressing,
 One dying wish my lone bosom can draw:
 Erin! an exile bequeaths thee his blessing
 Land of my forefathers! Erin go bragh!
 Buried and cold, when my heart stills her motion,
 Green be thy fields,—sweetest isle of the ocean!
 And thy harp-striking bards sing aloud with devotion,—
 Erin mavournin—Erin go bragh!*

* Ireland my darling, Ireland for ever.

LORD ULLIN'S DAUGHTER.

A CHIEFTAIN, to the Highlands bound,
 Cries, "Boatman, do not tarry!
 And I'll give thee a silver pound
 To row us o'er the ferry."—

"Now who be ye, would cross Lochgyle,
 This dark and stormy water?"
 "O, I'm the chief of Ulva's isle,
 And this Lord Ullin's daughter.—

And fast before her father's men
 Three days we've fled together,
 For should he find us in the glen,
 My blood would stain the heather.

His horsemen hard behind us ride;
 Should they our steps discover,
 Then who will cheer my bonny bride
 When they have slain her lover?"—

Out spoke the hardy Highland wight,
 "I'll go, my chief—I'm ready:—
 It is not for your silver bright;
 But for your winsome lady:

And by my word ! the bonny bird
In danger shall not tarry :
So though the waves are raging white,
I'll row you o'er the ferry."—

By this the storm grew loud apace,
The water-wraith was shrieking ;
And in the scowl of heaven each face
Grew dark as they were speaking.

But still as wilder blew the wind,
And as the night grew drearer,
Adown the glen rode armed men,
Their trampling sounded nearer.—

“ O haste thee, haste !” the lady cries,
“ Though tempests round us gather ;
I'll meet the raging of the skies,
But not an angry father.”—

The boat has left a stormy land,
A stormy sea before her,—
When, oh ! too strong for human hand,
The tempest gather'd o'er her.—

And still they row'd amidst the roar
Of waters fast prevailing :
Lord Ullin reach'd that fatal shore,
His wrath was changed to wailing.—

For sore dismay'd, through storm and shade,
His child he did discover :—
One lovely hand she stretch'd for aid,
And one was round her lover.

“ Come back ! come back ! ” he cried in grief,
“ Across this stormy water :
And I'll forgive your Highland chief,
My daughter !—oh my daughter ! ”—

'Twas vain :—the loud waves lash'd the shore,
 Return or aid preventing :—
 The waters wild went o'er his child,
 And he was left lamenting.

ODE TO THE MEMORY OF BURNS.

SOUL of the Poet ! wheresoe'er,
 Reclaim'd from earth, thy genius plume
 Her wings of immortality :
 Suspend thy harp in happier sphere,
 And with thine influence illumine
 The gladness of our jubilee.

And fly like fiends from secret spell,
 Discord and Strife, at BURNS's name,
 Exorcised by his memory ;
 For he was chief of bards that swell
 The heart with songs of social flame,
 And high delicious revelry.

And Love's own strain to him was given,
 To warble all its ecstasies
 With Pythian words unsought, unwill'd,—
 Love, the surviving gift of Heaven,
 The choicest sweet of Paradise,
 In life's else bitter cup distill'd.

Who that has melted o'er his lay
To Mary's soul, in Heaven above,
But pictured sees, in fancy strong,
The landscape and the livelong day
That smiled upon their mutual love?—
Who that has felt forgets the song?

Nor skill'd one flame alone to fan :
His country's high-soul'd peasantry
What patriot-pride he taught!—how much
To weigh the inborn worth of man!
And rustic life and poverty
Grow beautiful beneath his touch.

Him, in his clay-built cot, the Muse
Entranced, and show'd him all the forms,
Of fairy-light and wizard gloom,
(That only gifted Poet views,)
The Genii of the floods and storms,
And martial shades from Glory's tomb.

On Bannock-field what thoughts arouse
The swain whom BURNS's song inspires!
Beat not his Caledonian veins,
As o'er the heroic turf he ploughs,
With all the spirit of his sires,
And all their scorn of death and chains?

And see the Scottish exile, tann'd
By many a far and foreign clime,
Bend o'er his home-born verse, and weep
In memory of his native land,
With love that scorns the lapse of time,
And ties that stretch beyond the deep.

Encamp'd by Indian rivers wild,
The soldier resting on his arms,
In BURNS'S carol sweet recalls
The scenes that bless'd him when a child,
And glows and gladdens at the charms
Of Scotia's woods and waterfalls.

O deem not, 'midst this worldly strife,
An idle art the Poet brings :
Let high Philosophy control,
And sages calm, the stream of life,
'Tis he refines its fountain-springs,
The nobler passions of the soul.

It is the muse that consecrates
The native banner of the brave,
Unfurling, at the trumpet's breath,
Rose, thistle, harp ; 'tis she elates
To sweep the field or ride the wave,
A sunburst in the storm of death.

And thou, young hero, when thy pall
Is cross'd with mournful sword and plume,
When public grief begins to fade,
And only tears of kindred fall,
Who but the Bard shall dress thy tomb,
And greet with fame thy gallant shade ?

Such was the soldier—BURNS, forgive
That sorrows of mine own intrude
In strains to thy great memory due. '
In verse like thine, oh ! could he live,
The friend I mourn'd—the brave—the good—
Edward that died at Waterloo ! *

Farewell, high chief of Scottish song !
That couldst alternately impart
Wisdom and rapture in thy page,
And brand each vice with satire strong,
Whose lines are mottoes of the heart,
Whose truths electrify the sage.

Farewell ! and ne'er may Envy dare
To wring one baleful poison drop
From the crush'd laurels of thy bust :
But while the lark sings sweet in air,
Still may the grateful pilgrim stop,
To bless the spot that holds thy dust.

* Major Edward Hodge, of the 7th Hussars, who fell at the head of his squadron in the attack of the Polish Lancers.

LINES

WRITTEN ON VISITING A SCENE IN ARGYLESHIRE.

At the silence of twilight's contemplative hour,
 I have mused in a sorrowful mood,
 On the wind-shaken weeds that embosom the bower,
 Where the home of my forefathers stood.
 All ruin'd and wild is their roofless abode,
 And lonely the dark raven's sheltering tree :
 And travell'd by few is the grass-cover'd road,
 Where the hunter of deer and the warrior trode,
 To his hills that encircle the sea.

Yet wandering, I found on my ruinous walk,
 By the dial-stone aged and green,
 One rose of the wilderness left on its stalk,
 To mark where a garden had been.
 Like a brotherless hermit, the last of its race,
 All wild in the silence of nature, it drew,
 From each wandering sun-beam, a lonely embrace,
 For the night-weed and thorn overshadow'd the place,
 Where the flower of my forefathers grew.

Sweet bud of the wilderness ! emblem of all
 That remains in this desolate heart !
 The fabric of bliss to its centre may fall,
 But patience shall never depart !

Though the wilds of enchantment, all vernal and bright,
 In the days of delusion by fancy combined
 With the vanishing phantoms of love and delight,
 Abandon my soul, like a dream of the night,
 And leave but a desert behind.

Be hush'd, my dark spirit ! for wisdom condemns
 When the faint and the feeble deplore ;
 Be strong as the rock of the ocean that stems
 A thousand wild waves on the shore !
 Through the perils of chance, and the scowl of disdain,
 May thy front be unalter'd, thy courage elate !
 Yea ! even the name I have worshipp'd in vain
 Shall awake not the sigh of remembrance again :
 To bear is to conquer our fate.

THE SOLDIER'S DREAM.

OUR bugles sang truce—for the night-cloud had lower'd,
 And the sentinel stars set their watch in the sky ;
 And thousands had sunk on the ground overpower'd,
 The weary to sleep, and the wounded to die.

When reposing that night on my pallet of straw,
 By the wolf-scaring faggot that guarded the slain ;
 At the dead of the night a sweet vision I saw,
 And thrice ere the morning I dreamt it again.

Methought from the battle-field's dreadful array,
Far, far I had roam'd on a desolate track :
'Twas Autumn,—and sunshine arose on the way
To the home of my fathers, that welcomed me back.

I flew to the pleasant fields traversed so oft
In life's morning march, when my bosom was young ;
I heard my own mountain-goats bleating aloft,
And knew the sweet strain that the corn-reapers sung.

Then pledged we the wine-cup, and fondly I swore,
From my home and my weeping friends never to part ;
My little ones kiss'd me a thousand times o'er,
And my wife sobb'd aloud in her fulness of heart.

Stay, stay with us,—rest, thou art weary and worn ;
And fain was their war-broken soldier to stay ;—
But sorrow return'd with the dawning of morn,
And the voice in my dreaming ear melted away.

TO THE RAINBOW.

TRIUMPHAL arch, that fill'st the sky
When storms prepare to part,
I ask not proud Philosophy
To teach me what thou art—

Still seem, as to my childhood's sight,
A midway station given
For happy spirits to alight
Betwixt the earth and heaven.

Can all that Optics teach, unfold
Thy form to please me so,
As when I dreamt of gems and gold
Hid in thy radiant bow?

When Science from Creation's face
Enchantment's veil withdraws,
What lovely visions yield their place
To cold material laws!

And yet, fair bow, no fabling dreams,
But words of the Most High,
Have told why first thy robe of beams
Was woven in the sky.

When o'er the green undeluged earth
Heaven's covenant thou didst shine,
How came the world's grey fathers forth
To watch thy sacred sign!

And when its yellow lustre smiled
O'er mountains yet untrod,
Each mother held aloft her child
To bless the bow of God.

Methinks, thy jubilee to keep,
The first-made anthem rang
On earth deliver'd from the deep,
And the first poet sang.

Nor ever shall the Muse's eye
Unraptured greet thy beam:
Theme of primeval prophecy,
Be still the prophet's theme!

The earth to thee her incense yields,
The lark thy welcome sings,
When glittering in the freshen'd fields
The snowy mushroom springs.

How glorious is thy girdle, cast
O'er mountain, tower, and town,
Or mirror'd in the ocean vast,
A thousand fathoms down!

As fresh in yon horizon dark,
As young thy beauties seem,
As when the eagle from the ark
First sported in thy beam:

For, faithful to its sacred page,
Heaven still rebuilds thy span,
Nor lets the type grow pale with age
That first spoke peace to man.

THE LAST MAN.

ALL worldly shapes shall melt in gloom,
The Sun himself must die,
Before this mortal shall assume
Its Immortality !
I saw a vision in my sleep,
That gave my spirit strength to sweep
Adown the gulf of Time !
I saw the last of human mould
That shall Creation's death behold,
As Adam saw her prime !

The Sun's eye had a sickly glare,
The Earth with age was wan,
The skeletons of nations were
Around that lonely man !
Some had expired in fight,—the brands
Still rusted in their bony hands ;
In plague and famine some !
Earth's cities had no sound nor tread ;
And ships were drifting with the dead
To shores where all was dumb !

Yet, prophet-like, that lone one stood,
With dauntless words and high,
That shook the sere leaves from the wood
As if a storm pass'd by,

Saying, We are twins in death, proud Sun!
Thy face is cold, thy race is run,
'Tis Mercy bids thee go;
For thou ten thousand thousand years
Hast seen the tide of human tears,
That shall no longer flow.

What though beneath thee man put forth
His pomp, his pride, his skill;
And arts that made fire, flood, and earth,
The vassals of his will?—
Yet mourn I not thy parted sway,
Thou dim discrowned king of day :
For all those trophied arts
And triumphs that beneath thee sprang,
Heal'd not a passion or a pang
Entail'd on human hearts.

Go, let oblivion's curtain fall
Upon the stage of men,
Nor with thy rising beams recal
Life's tragedy again :
Its piteous pageants bring not back,
Nor waken flesh, upon the rack
Of pain anew to writhe ;
Stretch'd in disease's shapes abhorr'd,
Or mown in battle by the sword,
Like grass beneath the scythe.

Ev'n I am weary in yon skies
To watch thy fading fire ;
Test of all sumless agonies,
Behold not me expire.
My lips that speak thy dirge of death—
Their rounded gasp and gurgling breath

To see thou shalt not boast.
The eclipse of Nature spreads my pall,—
The majesty of Darkness shall Receive my parting ghost!

This spirit shall return to Him
Who gave its heavenly spark;
Yet think not, Sun, it shall be dim
When thou thyself art dark!
No! it shall live again, and shine
In bliss unknown to beams of thine,
By Him recall'd to breath,
Who captive led captivity,
Who robb'd the grave of Victory,—
And took the sting from Death!

Go, Sun, while Mercy holds me up
On Nature's awful waste
To drink this last and bitter cup
Of grief that man shall taste—
Go, tell the night that hides thy face,
Thou saw'st the last of Adam's race,
On Earth's sepulchral clod,
The darkening universe defy
To quench his Immortality,
Or shake his trust in God!

A DREAM.

WELL may sleep present us fictions,
 Since our waking moments teem
 With such fanciful convictions
 As make life itself a dream.—
 Half our daylight faith's a fable ;
 Sleep disports with shadows too,
 Seeming in their turn as stable
 As the world we wake to view.
 Ne'er by day did Reason's mint
 Give my thoughts a clearer print
 Of assured reality,
 Than was left by Phantasy
 Stamp'd and colour'd on my sprite,
 In a dream of yesternight. *

In a bark, methought, lone steering,
 I was cast on Ocean's strife ;
 This, 'twas whisper'd in my hearing,
 Meant the sea of life.
 Sad regrets from past existence
 Came, like gales of chilling breath ;
 Shadow'd in the forward distance
 Lay the land of Death.

Now seeming more, now less remote,
On that dim-seen shore, methought,
I beheld two hands a space
Slow unshroud a spectre's face ;
And my flesh's hair upstood,—
'Twas mine own similitude.—

But my soul revived at seeing
 Ocean, like an emerald spark,
Kindle, while an air-dropt being
 Smiling steer'd my bark.
Heaven-like—yet he look'd as human
 As supernal beauty can,
More compassionate than woman,
 Lordly more than man.
And as some sweet clarion's breath
Stirs the soldier's scorn of death—
So his accents bade me brook
The spectre's eyes of icy look,
Till it shut them—turn'd its head,
Like a beaten foe, and fled.

“Types not this,” I said, “fair spirit !
 That my death hour is not come ?
Say, what days shall I inherit ?—
 Tell my soul their sum.”
“No,” he said, “yon phantom's aspect,
 Trust me, would appal thee worse,

Held in clearly measured prospect :—
 Ask not for a curse !
 Make not, for I overhear
 Thine unspoken thoughts as clear
 As thy mortal ear could catch
 The close-brought tickings of a watch—
 Make not the untold request
 That's now revolving in thy breast.

'Tis to live again, remeasuring
 Youth's years, like a scene rehearsed,
 In thy second life-time treasuring
 Knowledge from the first.
 Hast thou felt, poor self deceiver !
 Life's career so void of pain,
 As to wish its fitful fever
 New begun again ?
 Could experience, ten times thine,
 Pain from Being disentwine—
 Threads by Fate together spun ?
 Could thy flight Heaven's lightning shun ?
 No, nor could thy foresight's glance
 'Scape the myriad shafts of Chance.

Wouldst thou bear again Love's trouble—
 Friendship's death-dissever'd ties ;
 Toil to grasp or miss the bubble
 Of Ambition's prize ?

Say thy life's new guided action
 Flow'd from Virtue's fairest springs—
 Still would Envy and Detraction
 Double not their stings?
 Worth itself is but a charter
 To be mankind's distinguish'd martyr."
 —I caught the moral, and cried, "Hail!
 Spirit! let us onward sail
 Envyng, fearing, hating none—
 Guardian Spirit, steer me on!"

VALEDICTORY STANZAS

TO

TO J. P. KEMBLE, Esq.

COMPOSED FOR A PUBLIC MEETING, HELD JUNE, 1817.

PRIDE of the British stage,
 A long and last adieu!
 Whose image brought th' heroic age
 Revived to Fancy's view.
 Like fields refresh'd with dewy light
 When the sun smiles his last,
 Thy parting presence makes more bright
 Our memory of the past;
 And memory conjures feelings up
 That wine or music need not swell,
 As high we lift the festal cup
 To Kemble—fare thee well!

His was the spell o'er hearts
Which only Acting lends,—
The youngest of the sister Arts,
Where all their beauty blends :
For ill can Poetry express
Full many a tone of thought sublime,
And Painting, mute and motionless,
Steals but a glance of time.
But by the mighty actor brought,
Illusion's perfect triumphs come,—
Verse ceases to be airy thought,
And Sculpture to be dumb.

Time may again revive,
But ne'er eclipse the charm,
When Cato spoke in him alive,
Or Hotspur kindled warm.
What soul was not resign'd entire
To the deep sorrows of the Moor,—
What English heart was not on fire
With him at Agincourt ?
And yet a majesty possess'd
His transport's most impetuous tone,
And to each passion of the breast
The Graces gave their zone.

High were the task—too high,
Ye conscious bosoms here
In words to paint your memory
Of Kemble and of Lear ;

But who forgets that white discrowned head,
 Those bursts of Reason's half-extinguish'd glare—
 Those tears upon Cordelia's bosom shed,
 In doubt more touching than despair,
 If 'twas reality he felt ?
 Had Shakspeare's self amidst you been,
 Friends, he had seen you melt,
 And triumph'd to have seen !

And there was many an hour
 Of blended kindred fame,
 When Siddons's auxiliar power
 And sister magic came.
 Together at the Muse's side
 The tragic paragons had grown—
 They were the children of her pride,
 The columns of her throne,
 And undivided favour ran
 From heart to heart in their applause,
 Save for the gallantry of man
 In lovelier woman's cause.

Fair as some classic dome,
 Robust and richly graced,
 Your KEMBLE's spirit was the home
 Of genius and of taste ;
 Taste like the silent dial's power,
 That, when supernal light is given,
 Can measure inspiration's hour,
 And tell its height in heaven.

At once ennobled and correct,
His mind survey'd the tragic page,
And what the actor could effect,
The scholar could presage.

These were his traits of worth :
And must we lose them now !
And shall the scene no more shew forth
His sternly-pleasing brow !
Alas, the moral brings a tear !—
'Tis all a transient hour below ;
And we that would detain thee here,
Ourselves as fleetly go !
Yet shall our latest age
This parting scene review :
Pride of the British stage,
A long and last adieu !

GERTRUDE OF WYOMING.

ADVERTISEMENT.

Most of the popular histories of England, as well as of the American war, give an authentic account of the desolation of Wyoming, in Pennsylvania, which took place in 1778, by an incursion of the Indians. The Scenery and Incidents of the following Poem are connected with that event. The testimonies of historians and travellers concur in describing the infant colony as one of the happiest spots of human existence, for the hospitable and innocent manners of the inhabitants, the beauty of the country, and the luxuriant fertility of the soil and climate. In an evil hour, the junction of European with Indian arms converted this terrestrial paradise into a frightful waste. MR. ISAAC WELD informs us, that the ruins of many of the villages, perforated with balls, and bearing marks of conflagration, were still preserved by the recent inhabitants, when he travelled through America in 1796.

PART I

I.

ON Susquehanna's side, fair Wyoming!
Although the wild-flower on thy ruin'd wall,
And roofless homes, a sad remembrance bring
Of what thy gentle people did befall;

Yet thou wert once the loveliest land of all
That see the Atlantic wave their morn restore.
Sweet land! may I thy lost delights recal,
And paint thy Gertrude in her bowers of yore,
Whose beauty was the love of Pennsylvania's shore!

II.

Delightful Wyoming! beneath thy skies,
The happy shepherd swains had nought to do
But feed their flocks on green declivities,
Or skim perchance thy lake with light canoe,
From morn till evening's sweeter pastime grew,
With timbrel, when beneath the forests brown,
Thy lovely maidens would the dance renew;
And aye those sunny mountains half-way down
Would echo flagelet from some romantic town.

III.

Then, where of Indian hills the daylight takes
His leave, how might you the flamingo see
Disporting like a meteor on the lakes—
And playful squirrel on his nut-grown tree:
And every sound of life was full of glee,
From merry mock-bird's song, or hum of men;
While hearkening, fearing nought their revelry,
The wild deer arch'd his neck from glades, and then,
Unhunted, sought his woods and wilderness again.

IV.

And scarce had Wyoming of war or crime
 Heard, but in transatlantic story rung,
 For here the exile met from every clime,
 And spoke in friendship every distant tongue :
 Men from the blood of warring Europe sprung
 Were but divided by the running brook ;
 And happy where no Rhenish trumpet sung,
 On plains no sieging mine's volcano shook,
 The blue-eyed German changed his sword to pruning-hook.

V

Nor far some Andalusian saraband
 Would sound to many a native roundelay—
 But who is he that yet a dearer land
 Remembers, over hills and far away ?
 Green Albin * ! what though he no more survey
 Thy ships at anchor on the quiet shore,
 Thy pellochs † rolling from the mountain bay,
 Thy lone sepulchral cairn upon the moor,
 And distant isles that hear the loud Corbrechtan ‡ roar !

VI.

Alas ! poor Caledonia's mountaineer,
 That want's stern edict e'er, and feudal grief,
 Had forced him from a home he loved so dear !
 Yet found he here a home and glad relief,

* Scotland.

† The Gaelic appellation for the porpoise.

‡ The great whirlpool of the Western Hebrides.

And plied the beverage from his own fair sheaf,
That fired his Highland blood with mickle glee :
And England sent her men, of men the chief,
Who taught those sires of Empire yet to be,
To plant the tree of life,—to plant fair Freedom's tree!

VII.

Here was not mingled in the city's pomp
Of life's extremes the grandeur and the gloom ;
Judgment awoke not here her dismal tromp,
Nor seal'd in blood a fellow creature's doom,
Nor mourn'd the captive in a living tomb.
One venerable man, beloved of all,
Sufficed, where innocence was yet in bloom,
To sway the strife, that seldom might befall:
And Albert was their judge, in patriarchal hall.

VIII.

How reverend was the look, serenely aged,
He bore, this gentle Pennsylvanian sire,
Where all but kindly fervours were assuaged,
Undimm'd by weakness' shade, or turbid ire!
And though, amidst the calm of thought entire,
Some high and haughty features might betray
A soul impetuous once, 'twas earthly fire
That fled composure's intellectual ray,
As Ætna's fires grow dim before the rising day.

IX.

I boast no song in magic wonders rife,
 But yet, oh Nature! is there nought to prize,
 Familiar in thy bosom scenes of life?
 And dwells in daylight truth's salubrious skies
 No form with which the soul may sympathise?—
 Young, innocent, on whose sweet forehead mild
 The parted ringlet shone in simplest guise,
 An inmate in the home of Albert smiled,
 Or bless'd his noonday walk—she was his only child.

X.

The rose of England bloom'd on Gertrude's cheek—
 What though these shades had seen her birth, her sire
 A Briton's independence taught to seek
 Far western worlds; and there his household fire
 The light of social love did long inspire,
 And many a halcyon day he lived to see
 Unbroken but by one misfortune dire,
 When fate had reft his mutual heart—but she
 Was gone—and Gertrude climb'd a widow'd father's knee.

XI.

A loved bequest,—and I may half impart—
 To them that feel the strong paternal tie,
 How like a new existence to his heart
 That living flower uprose beneath his eye,

Dear as she was from cherub infancy,
 From hours when she would round his garden play,
 To time when as the ripening years went by,
 Her lovely mind could culture well repay,
 And more engaging grew, from pleasing day to day.

XII.

I may not paint those thousand infant charms:
 (Unconscious fascination, undesign'd!)
 The orison repeated in his arms,
 For God to bless her sire and all mankind;
 The book, the bosom on his knee reclined,
 Or how sweet fairy-lore he heard her con,
 (The playmate ere the teacher of her mind:)
 All uncompanion'd else her heart had gone
 Till now, in Gertrude's eyes, their ninth blue summer shone.

XIII.

And summer was the tide, and sweet the hour,
 When sire and daughter saw, with fleet descent,
 An Indian from his bark approach their bower,
 Of buskin'd limb, and swarthy lineament;
 The red wild feathers on his brow were blent,
 And bracelets bound the arm that help'd to light
 A boy, who seem'd, as he beside him went,
 Of Christian vesture, and complexion bright,
 Led by his dusky guide, like morning brought by night.

XIV.

Yet pensive seem'd the boy for one so young—
The dimple from his polish'd cheek had fled ;
When, leaning on his forest-bow unstrung,
Th' Oneyda warrior to the planter said,

And laid his hand upon the stripling's head,
"Peace be to thee! my words this belt approve;
The paths of peace my steps have hither led:
This little nursling, take him to thy love,
And shield the bird unfledged, since gone the parent dove.

xv.

Christian! I am the foeman of thy foe;
Our wampum league thy brethren did embrace:
Upon the Michigan, three moons ago,
We launch'd our pirogues for the bison chase,
And with the Hurons planted for a space,
With true and faithful hands, the olive-stalk;
But snakes are in the bosoms of their race,
And though they held with us a friendly talk,
The hollow peace-tree fell beneath their tomahawk!

xvi.

It was encamping on the lake's far port,
A cry of Areouski * broke our sleep,
Where storm'd an ambush'd foe thy nation's fort,
And rapid, rapid whoops came o'er the deep;
But long thy country's war-sign on the steep
Appear'd through ghastly intervals of light,
And deathfully their thunders seem'd to sweep,
Till utter darkness swallow'd up the sight,
As if a shower of blood had quench'd the fiery fight!

* The Indian God of War.

XVII.

It slept—it rose again—on high their tower
Sprung upwards like a torch to light the skies,
Then down again it rain'd an ember shower,
And louder lamentations heard we rise:
As when the evil Manitou that dries
Th' Ohio woods, consumes them in his ire,
In vain the desolated panther flies,
And howls amidst his wilderness of fire:
Alas! too late, we reach'd and smote those Hurons dire!

XVIII.

But as the fox beneath the nobler hound,
So died their warriors by our battle-brand;
And from the tree we, with her child, unbound
A lonely mother of the Christian land:—
Her lord—the captain of the British band—
Amidst the slaughter of his soldiers lay.
Scarce knew the widow our delivering hand;
Upon her child she sobb'd, and swoon'd away,
Or shriek'd unto the God to whom the Christians pray.

XIX.

Our virgins fed her with their kindly bowls
Of fever-balm and sweet sagamité:
But she was journeying to the land of souls,
And lifted up her dying head to pray

That we should bid an ancient friend convey
 Her orphan to his home of England's shore ;
 And take, she said, this token far away,
 To one that will remember us of yore,
 When he beholds the ring that Waldegrave's Julia wore.

XX.

And I, the eagle of my tribe, have rush'd
 With this lorn dove."—A sage's self-command
 Had quell'd the tears from Albert's heart that gush'd;
 But yet his cheek—his agitated hand—
 That shower'd upon the stranger of the land
 No common boon, in grief but ill beguiled
 A soul that was not wont to be unmann'd ;
 " And stay," he cried, " dear pilgrim of the wild,
 Preserver of my old, my boon companion's child !

XXI.

Child of a race whose name my bosom warms,
 On earth's remotest bounds how welcome here !
 Whose mother oft, a child, has fill'd these arms,
 Young as thyself, and innocently dear,
 Whose grandsire was my early life's compeer.
 Ah, happiest home of England's happy clime !
 How beautiful ev'n now thy scenes appear,
 As in the noon and sunshine of my prime !
 How gone like yesterday these thrice ten years of time !

XXII.

And Julia ! when thou wert like Gertrude now,
Can I forget thee, favourite child of yore ?
Or thought I, in thy father's house, when thou
Wert lightest-hearted on his festive floor,
And first of all his hospitable door
To meet and kiss me at my journey's end ?
But where was I when Waldegrave was no more ?
And thou didst pale thy gentle head extend
In woes, that ev'n the tribe of deserts was thy friend !”

XXIII.

He said—and strain'd unto his heart the boy ;—
Far differently, the mute Oneyda took
His calumet of peace, and cup of joy ;
As monumental bronze unchanged his look ;
A soul that pity touch'd, but never shook ;
Train'd from his tree-rock'd cradle to his bier
The fierce extreme of good and ill to brook
Impassive—fearing but the shame of fear—
A stoic of the woods—a man without a tear.

XXIV.

Yet deem not goodness on the savage stock
Of Outalissi's heart disdain'd to grow ;
As lives the oak unwither'd on the rock
By storms above, and barrenness below ;

He scorn'd his own, who felt another's woe :
And ere the wolf-skin on his back he flung,
Or laced his mocasins, in act to go,
A song of parting to the boy he sung,
Who slept on Albert's couch, nor heard his friendly tongue.

XXV.

"Sleep, wearied one ! and in the dreaming land
 Shouldst thou to-morrow with thy mother meet,
 Oh ! tell her spirit that the white man's hand
 Hath pluck'd the thorns of sorrow from thy feet ;
 While I in lonely wilderness shall greet
 Thy little foot-prints—or by traces know
 The fountain, where at noon I thought it sweet
 To feed thee with the quarry of my bow,
 And pour'd the lotus-horn, or slew the mountain roe.

XXVI.

Adieu ! sweet scion of the rising sun !
 But should affliction's storms thy blossom mock,
 Then come again—my own adopted one !
 And I will graft thee on a noble stock :
 The crocodile, the condor of the rock,
 Shall be the pastime of thy sylvan wars ;
 And I will teach thee in the battle's shock,
 To pay with Huron blood thy father's scars,
 And gratulate his soul rejoicing in the stars ! "

XXVII.

So finish'd he the rhyme (how'er uncouth)
 That true to nature's fervid feelings ran ;
 (And song is but the eloquence of truth :)
 Then forth uprose that lone way-faring man ;

But dauntless he, nor chart, nor journey's plan
In woods required, whose trained eye was keen,
As eagle of the wilderness, to scan
His path by mountain, swamp, or deep ravine,
Or ken far friendly huts on good savannas green.

XXVIII.

Old Albert saw him from the valley's side—
His pirogue launch'd—his pilgrimage begun—
Far, like the red-bird's wing he seem'd to glide ;
Then dived, and vanish'd in the woodlands dun.
Oft, to that spot by tender memory won,
Would Albert climb the promontory's height,
If but a dim sail glimmer'd in the sun ;
But never more to bless his longing sight,
Was Outalissi hail'd, with bark and plumage bright.

PART II.

I.

A VALLEY from the river shore withdrawn
Was Albert's home, two quiet woods between,
Whose lofty verdure overlook'd his lawn ;
And waters to their resting-place serene

Came freshening, and reflecting all the scene :
(A mirror in the depth of flowery shelves ;)
So sweet a spot of earth, you might (I ween)
Have guess'd some congregation of the elves,
To sport by summer moons, had shaped it for themselves.

II.

Yet wanted not the eye far scope to muse,
Nor vistas open'd by the wandering stream ;
Both where at evening Alleghany views,
Through ridges burning in her western beam,
Lake after lake interminably gleam :
And past those settlers' haunts the eye might roam
Where earth's unliving silence all would seem ;
Save where on rocks the beaver built his dome,
Or buffalo remote low'd far from human home.

III.

But silent not that adverse eastern path,
Which saw Aurora's hills th' horizon crown :
There was the river heard, in bed of wrath,
(A precipice of foam from mountains brown,)
Like tumults heard from some far distant town ;
But softening in approach he left his gloom,
And murmur'd pleasantly, and laid him down
To kiss those easy curving banks of bloom,
That lent the windward air an exquisite perfume.

IV.

It seem'd as if those scenes sweet influence had
On Gertrude's soul, and kindness like their own
Inspired those eyes affectionate and glad,
That seem'd to love whate'er they look'd upon ;
Whether with Hebe's mirth her features shone,
Or if a shade more pleasing them o'er cast,
(As if for heavenly musing meant alone ;)
Yet so becomingly th' expression past,
That each succeeding look was lovelier than the last.

V.

Nor guess I, was that Pennsylvanian home,
With all its picturesque and balmy grace,
And fields that were a luxury to roam,
Lost on the soul that look'd from such a face !
Enthusiast of the woods ! when years apace
Had bound thy lovely waist with woman's zone,
The sunrise path, at morn, I see thee trace
To hills with high magnolia overgrown,
And joy to breathe the groves, romantic and alone.

VI.

The sunrise drew her thoughts to Europe forth,
That thus apostrophized its viewless scene :
“ Land of my father's love, my mother's birth !
The home of kindred I have never seen !

We know not other—oceans are between :
 Yet say, far friendly hearts ! from whence we came,
 Of us does oft remembrance intervene ?
 My mother sure—my sire a thought may claim ;—
 But Gertrude is to you an unregarded name.

VII.

And yet, loved England ! when thy name I trace
 In many a pilgrim's tale and poet's song,
 How can I choose but wish for one embrace
 Of them, the dear unknown, to whom belong
 My mother's looks,—perhaps her likeness strong ?
 Oh, parent ! with what reverential awe,
 From features of thy own related throng,
 An image of thy face my soul could draw !
 And see thee once again whom I too shortly saw !”

VIII.

Yet deem not Gertrude sigh'd for foreign joy ;
 To soothe a father's couch her only care,
 And keep his reverend head from all annoy :
 For this, methinks, her homeward steps repair,
 Soon as the morning wreath had bound her hair ;
 While yet the wild deer trod in spangling dew,
 While boatmen carol'd to the fresh-blown air,
 And woods a horizontal shadow threw,
 And early fox appear'd in momentary view.

IX.

Apart there was a deep untrodden grot,
Where oft the reading hours sweet Gertrude wore ;
Tradition had not named its lonely spot ;
But here (methinks) might India's sons explore
Their fathers' dust, or lift, perchance of yore,
Their voice to the great Spirit :—rocks sublime
To human art a sportive semblance bore,
And yellow lichens colour'd all the clime,
Like moonlight battlements, and towers decay'd by time.

X.

But high in amphitheatre above,
Gay tinted woods their massy foliage threw :
Breathed but an air of heaven, and all the grove
As if instinct with living spirit grew,
Rolling its verdant gulfs of every hue ;
And now suspended was the pleasing din,
Now from a murmur faint it swell'd anew,
Like the first note of organ heard within
Cathedral aisles,—ere yet its symphony begin.

XI.

It was in this lone valley she would charm
The lingering noon, where flowers a couch had strown ;
Her cheek reclining, and her snowy arm
On hillock by the pine-tree half o'ergrown :

And aye that volume on her lap is thrown,
Which every heart of human mould endears ;
With Shakspeare's self she speaks and smiles alone,
And no intruding visitation fears,
To shame the unconscious laugh, or stop her sweetest tears.

XII.

And nought within the grove was heard or seen
But stock-doves plaining through its gloom profound,
Or winglet of the fairy humming-bird,
Like atoms of the rainbow fluttering round ;
When, lo ! there enter'd to its inmost ground
A youth, the stranger of a distant land ;
He was, to weet, for eastern mountains bound ;
But late th' equator suns his cheek had tann'd,
And California's gales his roving bosom fann'd.

XIII.

A steed, whose rein hung loosely o'er his arm,
He led dismounted ; ere his leisure pace,
Amid the brown leaves, could her ear alarm,
Close he had come, and worshipp'd for a space
Those downcast features :—she her lovely face
Uplift on one, whose lineaments and frame
Wore youth and manhood's intermingled grace :
Iberian seem'd his boot—his robe the same,
And well the Spanish plume his lofty looks became.

XIV.

For Albert's home he sought—her finger fair
Has pointed where the father's mansion stood.
Returning from the copse he soon was there ;
And soon has Gertrude hied from dark green wood ;

Nor joyless, by the converse, understood
Between the man of age and pilgrim young,
That gay congeniality of mood,
And early liking from acquaintance sprung ;
Full fluently conversed their guest in England's tongue.

xv.

And well could he his pilgrimage of taste
Unfold,—and much they loved his fervid strain,
While he each fair variety retraced
Of climes, and manners, o'er the eastern main.
Now happy Switzer's hills—romantic Spain,—
Gay liliated fields of France,—or, more refined,
The soft Ausonia's monumental reign ;
Nor less each rural image he design'd
Than all the city's pomp and home of human kind.

xvi.

Anon some wilder portraiture he draws ;
Of Nature's savage glories he would speak,—
The loneliness of earth that overawes,—
Where, resting by some tomb of old Cacique,
The lama-driver on Peruvia's peak
Nor living voice nor motion marks around ;
But storks that to the boundless forest shriek,
Or wild-cane arch high flung o'er gulf profound,
That fluctuates when the storms of El Dorado sound.

XVII.

Pleased with his guest, the good man still would ply
Each earnest question, and his converse court ;
But Gertrude, as she eyed him, knew not why
A strange and troubling wonder stopt her short.
“ In England thou hast been,—and, by report,
An orphan’s name (quoth Albert) mayst have known.
Sad tale!—when latest fell our frontier fort,—
One innocent—one soldier’s child—alone
Was spared, and brought to me, who loved him as my own.

XVIII.

Young Henry Waldegrave ! three delightful years
These very walls his infant sports did see,
But most I loved him when his parting tears
Alternately bedew’d my child and me :
His sorest parting, Gertrude, was from thee ;
Nor half its grief his little heart could hold ;
By kindred he was sent for o’er the sea,
They tore him from us when but twelve years old,
And scarcely for his loss have I been yet consoled !”

XIX.

His face the wanderer hid—but could not hide
A tear, a smile, upon his cheek that dwell ;
“ And speak ! mysterious stranger ! (Gertrude cried)
It is!—it is!—I knew—I knew him well !

'Tis Waldegrave's self, of Waldegrave come to tell !"
 A burst of joy the father's lips declare !
 But Gertrude speechless on his bosom fell ;
 At once his open arms embraced the pair,
 Was never group more blest in this wide world of care.

xx.

“ And will ye pardon then (replied the youth)
 Your Waldegrave's feigned name, and false attire ?
 I durst not in the neighbourhood, in truth,
 The very fortunes of your house enquire ;
 Lest one that knew me might some tidings dire
 Impart, and I my weakness all betray,
 For had I lost my Gertrude and my sire,
 I meant but o'er your tombs to weep a day,
 Unknown I meant to weep, unknown to pass away.

xxi.

But here ye live, ye bloom,—in each dear face,
 The changing hand of time I may not blame ;
 For there, it hath but shed more reverend grace,
 And here, of beauty perfected the frame :
 And well I know your hearts are still the same—
 They could not change—ye look the very way,
 As when an orphan first to you I came.
 And have ye heard of my poor guide, I pray ?
 Nay, wherefore weep ye, friends, on such a joyous day ?”

XXII.

“ And art thou here? or is it but a dream?
And wilt thou, Waldegrave, wilt thou, leave us more?”—
“ No, never! thou that yet dost lovelier seem
Than aught on earth—than ev’n thyself of yore—
I will not part thee from thy father’s shore;
But we shall cherish him with mutual arms,
And hand in hand again the path explore
Which every ray of young remembrance warms,
While thou shalt be my own, with all thy truth and charms!”

XXIII.

At morn, as if beneath a galaxy
Of over-arching groves in blossoms white,
Where all was odorous scent and harmony,
And gladness to the heart, nerve, ear, and sight:
There, if, O gentle Love! I read aright
The utterance that seal’d thy sacred bond,
’Twas listening to these accents of delight,
She hid upon his breast those eyes, beyond
Expression’s power to paint, all languishingly fond—

XXIV.

“ Flower of my life, so lovely and so lone!
Whom I would rather in this desert meet,
Scorning, and scorn’d by fortune’s power, than own
Her pomp and splendours lavish’d at my feet!

Turn not from me thy breath more exquisite
Than odours cast on heaven's own shrine—to please—
Give me thy love, than luxury more sweet,
And more than all the wealth that loads the breeze,
When Coromandel's ships return from Indian seas."

XXV.

Then would that home admit them—happier far
Than grandeur's most magnificent saloon,
While, here and there, a solitary star
Flush'd in the darkening firmament of June ;
And silence brought the soul-felt hour, full soon,
Ineffable, which I may not portray ;
For never did the hymenean moon
A paradise of hearts more sacred sway,
In all that slept beneath her soft voluptuous ray.

PART III.

I.

O LOVE ! in such a wilderness as this,
Where transport and security entwine,
Here is the empire of thy perfect bliss,
And here thou art a god indeed divine.
Here shall no forms abridge, no hours confine,
The views, the walks, that boundless joy inspire !
Roll on, ye days of raptured influence, shine !
Nor, blind with ecstasy's celestial fire,
Shall love behold the spark of earth-born time expire.

II.

Three little moons, how short ! amidst the grove
And pastoral savannas they consume !
While she, beside her buskin'd youth to rove,
Delights, in fancifully wild costume,
Her lovely brow to shade with Indian plume ;
And forth in hunter-seeming vest they fare ;
But not to chase the deer in forest gloom,
'Tis but the breath of heaven—the blessed air—
And interchange of hearts unknown, unseen to share.

III.

What though the sportive dog oft round them note,
Or fawn, or wild bird bursting on the wing ;
Yet who, in Love's own presence, would devote
To death those gentle throats that wake the spring,
Or writhing from the brook its victim bring ?
No !—nor let fear one little warbler rouse ;
But, fed by Gertrude's hand, still let them sing,
Acquaintance of her path, amidst the boughs,
That shade ev'n now her love, and witness'd first her vows.

IV.

Now labyrinths, which but themselves can pierce,
Methinks, conduct them to some pleasant ground,
Where welcome hills shut out the universe,
And pines their lawny walk encompass round ;
There, if a pause delicious converse found,
'Twas but when o'er each heart th' idea stole,
(Perchance a while in joy's oblivion drown'd)
That come what may, while life's glad pulses roll,
Indissolubly thus should soul be knit to soul.

V.

And in the visions of romantic youth,
What years of endless bliss are yet to flow !
But mortal pleasure, what art thou in truth ?
The torrent's smoothness, ere it dash below !

And must I change my song? and must I show,
 Sweet Wyoming! the day when thou wert doom'd,
 Guiltless, to mourn thy loveliest bowers laid low!
 When where of yesterday a garden bloom'd,
 Death overspread his pall, and blackening ashes gloom'd!

VI.

Sad was the year, by proud oppression driven,
 When Transatlantic Liberty arose,
 Not in the sunshine and the smile of heaven,
 But wrapt in whirlwinds, and begirt with woes,
 Amidst the strife of fratricidal foes;
 Her birth-star was the light of burning plains*;
 Her baptism is the weight of blood that flows
 From kindred hearts—the blood of British veins—
 And famine tracks her steps, and pestilential pains.

VII.

Yet, ere the storm of death had raged remote,
 Or siege unseen in heaven reflects its beams,
 Who now each dreadful circumstance shall note,
 That fills pale Gertrude's thoughts, and nightly dreams!
 Dismal to her the forge of battle gleams
 Portentous light! and music's voice is dumb;
 Save where the fife its shrill reveillé screams,
 Or midnight streets re-echo to the drum,
 That speaks of maddening strife, and bloodstain'd fields to come.

* Alluding to the miseries that attended the American civil war.

VIII.

It was in truth a momentary pang ;
 Yet how comprising myriad shapes of woe !
 First when in Gertrude's ear the summons rang,
 A husband to the battle doom'd to go !
 " Nay meet not thou (she cried) thy kindred foe !
 But peaceful let us seek fair England's strand !"
 " Ah, Gertrude, thy beloved heart, I know,
 Would feel like mine the stigmatising brand !
 Could I forsake the cause of Freedom's holy band !

IX.

But shame—but flight—a recreant's name to prove,
 To hide in exile ignominious fears ;
 Say, ev'n if this I brook'd, the public love
 Thy father's bosom to his home endears :
 And how could I his few remaining years,
 My Gertrude, sever from so dear a child ?"
 So, day by day, her boding heart he cheers :
 At last that heart to hope is half beguiled,
 And, pale through tears suppress'd, the mournful beauty smiled.

X.

Night came,—and in their lighted bower, full late,
 The joy of converse had endured—when, hark !
 Abrupt and loud, a summons shook their gate ;
 And heedless of the dog's obstrep'rous bark,

A form had rush'd amidst them from the dark,
And spread his arms,—and fell upon the floor ;
Of aged strength his limbs retain'd the mark ;
But desolate he look'd, and famish'd poor,
As ever shipwreck'd wretch lone left on desert shore.

XI.

Uprisen, each wondering brow is knit and arch'd :
 A spirit from the dead they deem him first :
 To speak he tries ; but quivering, pale, and parch'd,
 From lips, as by some powerless dream accursed,
 Emotions unintelligible burst ;
 And long his filmed eye is red and dim ;
 At length the pity-proffer'd cup his thirst
 Had half assuaged, and nerved his shuddering limb,
 When Albert's hand he grasp'd ;—but Albert knew not him—

XII.

“ And hast thou then forgot,” (he cried forlorn,
 And eyed the group with half indignant air,)
 “ O ! hast thou, Christian chief, forgot the morn
 When I with thee the cup of peace did share ?
 Then stately was this head, and dark this hair,
 That now is white as Appalachia's snow ;
 But, if the weight of fifteen years' despair,
 And age hath bow'd me, and the torturing foe,
 Bring me my boy—and he will his deliverer know !” —

XIII.

It was not long, with eyes and heart of flame,
 Ere Henry to his loved Oneyda flew :
 “ Bless thee, my guide !” —but backward, as he came,
 The chief his old bewilder'd head withdrew,

And grasp'd his arm, and look'd and look'd him through.
 'Twas strange—nor could the group a smile control—
 The long, the doubtful scrutiny to view :
 At last delight o'er all his features stole,
 " It is—my own," he cried, and clasp'd him to his soul.

XIV.

" Yes ! thou recal'st my pride of years, for then
 The bowstring of my spirit was not slack,
 When, spite of woods, and floods, and ambush'd men,
 I bore thee like the quiver on my back,
 Fleet as the whirlwind hurries on the rack ;
 Nor foeman then, nor cougar's crouch I fear'd *,
 For I was strong as mountain cataract :
 And dost thou not remember how we cheer'd,
 Upon the last hill-top, when white men's huts appear'd ?

XV.

Then welcome be my death-song, and my death !
 Since I have seen thee, and again embraced."
 And longer had he spent his toil-worn breath ;
 But with affectionate and eager haste,
 Was every arm outstretch'd around their guest,
 To welcome and to bless his aged head.
 Soon was the hospitable banquet placed ;
 And Gertrude's lovely hands a balsam shed
 On wounds with fever'd joy that more profusely bled.

* Cougar, the American tiger.

XVI.

"But this is not a time,"—he started up,
 And smote his breast with woe-denouncing hand—
 "This is no time to fill the joyous cup,
 The Mammoth comes,—the foe,—the Monster Brandt,—
 With all his howling desolating band ;—
 These eyes have seen their blade and burning pine
 Awake at once, and silence half your land.
 Red is the cup they drink ; but not with wine :
 Awake, and watch to-night, or see no morning shine !

XVII.

Scorning to wield the hatchet for his bribe,
 'Gainst Brandt himself I went to battle forth :
 Accursed Brandt ! he left of all my tribe
 Nor man, nor child, nor thing of living birth :
 No ! not the dog that watch'd my household hearth,
 Escaped that night of blood, upon our plains !
 All perish'd !—I alone am left on earth !
 To whom nor relative nor blood remains,
 No !—not a kindred drop that runs in human veins !

XVIII.

But go !—and rouse your warriors, for, if right
 These old bewilder'd eyes could guess, by signs
 Of striped and starred banners, on yon height
 Of eastern cedars, o'er the creek of pines—

Some fort embattled by your country shines :
 Deep roars th' innavigable gulf below
 Its squared rock, and palisaded lines.
 Go ! seek the light its warlike beacons show ;
 Whilst I in ambush wait, for vengeance, and the foe !”

XIX.

Scarce had he utter'd—when Heaven's verge extreme
 Reverberates the bomb's descending star,—
 And sounds that mingled laugh,—and shout,—and scream,—
 To freeze the blood, in one discordant jar,
 Rung to the pealing thunderbolts of war.
 Whoop after whoop with rack the ear assail'd ;
 As if unearthly fiends had burst their bar ;
 While rapidly the marksman's shot prevail'd :
 And aye, as if for death, some lonely trumpet wail'd.

XX.

Then look'd they to the hills, where fire o'erhung
 The bandit groups, in one Vesuvian glare ;
 Or swept, far seen, the tower, whose clock unring
 Told legible that midnight of despair.
 She faints,—she falters not,—th' heroic fair,—
 As he the sword and plume in haste array'd.
 One short embrace—he clasp'd his dearest care—
 But hark ! what nearer war-drum shakes the glade ?
 Joy, joy ! Columbia's friends are trampling through the shade !

XXI.

Then came of every race the mingled swarm,
Far rung the groves and gleam'd the midnight grass,
With flambeau, javelin, and naked arm ;
As warriors wheel'd their culverins of brass,
Sprung from the woods, a bold athletic mass,
Whom virtue fires, and liberty combines :
And first the wild Moravian yagers pass,
His plumed host the dark Iberian joins—
And Scotia's sword beneath the Highland thistle shines.

XXII.

And in the buskin'd hunters of the deer,
To Albert's home, with shout and cymbal throng :—
Roused by their warlike pomp, and mirth, and cheer,
Old Outalissi woke his battle-song,
And, beating with his war-club cadence strong,
Tells how his deep-stung indignation smarts,
Of them that wrapt his house in flames, ere long,
To whet a dagger on their stony hearts,
And smile avenged ere yet his eagle spirit parts.—

XXIII.

Calm, opposite the Christian father rose,
Pale on his venerable brow its rays
Of martyr light the conflagration throws ;
One hand upon his lovely child he lays,

And one the uncover'd crowd to silence sways ;
 While, though the battle flash is faster driven,—
 Unaw'd, with eye unstartled by the blaze,
 He for his bleeding country prays to Heaven,—
 Prays that the men of blood themselves may be forgiven.

XXIV.

Short time is now for gratulating speech :
 And yet, beloved Gertrude, ere began
 Thy country's flight, yon distant towers to reach,
 Look'd not on thee the rudest partisan
 With brow relax'd to love ? And murmurs ran,
 As round and round their willing ranks they drew,
 From beauty's sight to shield the hostile van.
 Grateful, on them a placid look she threw,
 Nor wept, but as she bade her mother's grave adieu !

XXV.

Past was the flight, and welcome seem'd the tower,
 That like a giant standard-bearer frown'd
 Defiance on the roving Indian power,
 Beneath, each bold and promontory mound
 With embrasure emboss'd, and armour crown'd,
 And arrowy frize, and wedged ravelin,
 Wove like a diadem its tracery round
 The lofty summit of that mountain green ;
 Here stood secure the group, and eyed a distant scene.

XXVI.

A scene of death ! where fires beneath the sun,
And blended arms, and white pavilions glow ;
And for the business of destruction done,
Its requiem the war-horn seem'd to blow :

There, sad spectatress of her country's woe !
 The lovely Gertrude, safe from present harm,
 Had laid her cheek, and clasp'd her hands of snow
 On Waldegrave's shoulder, half within his arm
 Enclosed, that felt her heart, and hush'd its wild alarm !

XXVII.

But short that contemplation—sad and short
 The pause to bid each much-loved scene adieu !
 Beneath the very shadow of the fort,
 Where friendly swords were drawn, and banners flew ;
 Ah ! who could deem that foot of Indian crew
 Was near ?—yet there, with lust of murd'rous deeds,
 Glean'd like a basilisk, from woods in view,
 The ambush'd foeman's eye—his volley speeds,
 And Albert—Albert falls ! the dear old father bleeds !

XXVIII.

And tranced in giddy horror Gertrude swoon'd ;
 Yet, while she clasps him lifeless to her zone,
 Say, burst they, borrow'd from her father's wound,
 These drops ?—Oh, God ! the life-blood is her own !
 And faltering, on her Waldegrave's bosom thrown—
 “ Weep not, O Love ! ”—she cries, “ to see me bleed—
 Thee, Gertrude's sad survivor, thee alone
 Heaven's peace commiserate ; for scarce I heed
 These wounds ;—yet thee to leave is death, is death indeed !

XXIX.

Clasp me a little longer on the brink
Of fate! while I can feel thy dear caress;
And when this heart hath ceased to beat—oh! think,
And let it mitigate thy woe's excess,
That thou hast been to me all tenderness,
And friend to more than human friendship just.
Oh! by that retrospect of happiness,
And by the hopes of an immortal trust,
God shall assuage thy pangs—when I am laid in dust!

XXX.

Go, Henry, go not back, when I depart,
The scene thy bursting tears too deep will move,
Where my dear father took thee to his heart,
And Gertrude thought it ecstasy to rove
With thee, as with an angel, through the grove
Of peace, imagining her lot was cast
In heaven; for ours was not like earthly love.
And must this parting be our very last?
No! I shall love thee still, when death itself is past.—

XXXI.

Half could I bear, methinks, to leave this earth,—
And thee, more loved than aught beneath the sun,
If I had lived to smile but on the birth
Of one dear pledge;—but shall there then be none,

In future times—no gentle little one,
 To clasp thy neck, and look, resembling me?
 Yet seems it, ev'n while life's last pulses run,
 A sweetness in the cup of death to be,
 Lord of my bosom's love! to die beholding thee!"

XXXII.

Hush'd were his Gertrude's lips! but still their bland
 And beautiful expression seem'd to melt
 With love that could not die! and still his hand
 She presses to the heart no more that felt.
 Ah, heart! where once each fond affection dwelt,
 And features yet that spoke a soul more fair.
 Mute, gazing, agonising, as he knelt,—
 Of them that stood encircling his despair,
 He heard some friendly words;—but knew not what they were.

XXXIII.

For now, to mourn their judge and child, arrives
 A faithful band. With solemn rites between
 'Twas sung, how they were lovely in their lives,
 And in their deaths had not divided been.
 Touch'd by the music, and the melting scene,
 Was scarce one tearless eye amidst the crowd:—
 Stern warriors, resting on their swords, were seen
 To veil their eyes, as pass'd each much-loved shroud—
 While woman's softer soul in woe dissolved aloud.

xxxiv.

Then mournfully the parting bugle bid
Its farewell, o'er the grave of worth and truth ;
Prone to the dust, afflicted Waldegrave hid
His face on earth ;—him watch'd, in gloomy ruth,

His woodland guide : but words had none to soothe
 The grief that knew not consolation's name :
 Casting his Indian mantle o'er the youth,
 He watch'd, beneath its folds, each burst that came
 Convulsive, ague-like, across his shuddering frame !

XXXV.

“ And I could weep ; ”—th' Oneyda chief
 His descant wildly thus begun :
 “ But that I may not stain with grief
 The death-song of my father's son,
 Or bow this head in woe !
 For by my wrongs, and by my wrath !
 To-morrow Areouski's breath,
 (That fires yon heaven with storms of death,)
 Shall light us to the foe :
 And we shall share, my Christian boy !
 The foeman's blood, the avenger's joy !

XXXVI.

But thee, my flower, whose breath was given
 By milder genii o'er the deep,
 The spirits of the white man's heaven
 Forbid not thee to weep :—
 Nor will the Christian host,
 Nor will thy father's spirit grieve,
 To see thee, on the battle's eve,

Lamenting, take a mournful leave
 Of her who loved thee most :
 She was the rainbow to thy sight !
 Thy sun—thy heaven—of lost delight !

XXXVII.

To-morrow let us do or die !
 But when the bolt of death is hurl'd,
 Ah ! whither then with thee to fly,
 Shall Outalissi roam the world ?
 Seek we thy once-loved home ?
 The hand is gone that cropt its flowers :
 Unheard their clock repeats its hours !
 Cold is the hearth within their bowers !
 And should we thither roam,
 Its echoes, and its empty tread,
 Would sound like voices from the dead !

XXXVIII.

Or shall we cross yon mountains blue,
 Whose streams my kindred nation quaff'd,
 And by my side, in battle true,
 A thousand warriors drew the shaft ?
 Ah ! there, in desolation cold,
 The desert serpent dwells alone,
 Where grass o'ergrows each mouldering bone,
 And stones themselves to ruin grown,
 Like me, are death-like old.
 Then seek we not their camp,—for there—
 The silence dwells of my despair !

XXXIX.

But hark, the trump!—to-morrow thou
In glory's fires shalt dry thy tears :
Ev'n from the land of shadows now
My father's awful ghost appears,
Amidst the clouds that round us roll ;
He bids my soul for battle thirst—
He bids me dry the last—the first—
The only tears that ever burst
From Outalissi's soul ;
Because I may not stain with grief
The death-song of an Indian chief!"

LINES

WRITTEN AT THE REQUEST OF THE HIGHLAND SOCIETY IN LONDON, WHEN MET TO COMMEMORATE THE 21ST OF MARCH,
THE DAY OF VICTORY IN EGYPT.

PLEDGE to the much-loved land that gave us birth !
Invincible romantic Scotia's shore !
Pledge to the memory of her parted worth !
And first, amidst the brave, remember Moore !

And be it deem'd not wrong that name to give,
In festive hours, which prompts the patriot's sigh !
Who would not envy such as Moore to live ?
And died he not as heroes wish to die ?

Yes, though too soon attaining glory's goal,
To us his bright career too short was given ;
Yet in a mighty cause his phoenix soul
Rose on the flames of victory to Heaven !

How oft (if beats in subjugated Spain
One patriot heart) in secret shall it mourn
For him !—How oft on far Corunna's plain
Shall British exiles weep upon his urn !

Peace to the mighty dead!—our bosom thanks
 In sprightlier strains the living may inspire!
 Joy to the chiefs that lead old Scotia's ranks,
 Of Roman garb and more than Roman fire!

Triumphant be the thistle still unfurl'd,
 Dear symbol wild! on Freedom's hills it grows,
 Where Fingal stemm'd the tyrants of the world,
 And Roman eagles found unconquer'd foes.

Joy to the band * this day on Egypt's coast,
 Whose valour tamed proud France's tricolor,
 And wrench'd the banner from her bravest host,
 Baptiz'd Invincible in Austria's gore!

Joy for the day on red Vimeira's strand,
 When, bayonet to bayonet opposed,
 First of Britannia's host her Highland band
 Gave but the death-shot once, and foremost closed!

Is there a son of generous England here
 Or fervid Erin?—he with us shall join,
 To pray that in eternal union dear,
 The rose, the shamrock, and the thistle twine!

Types of a race who shall th' invader scorn,
 As rocks resist the billows round their shore;
 Types of a race who shall to time unborn
 Their country leave unconquer'd as of yore!

* The 42d Regiment.

STANZAS

TO THE MEMORY OF THE SPANISH PATRIOTS LATEST KILLED IN RESISTING THE REGENCY AND THE DUKE OF ANGOULEME.

BRAVE men who at the Trocadero fell—
Beside your cannons conquer'd not, though slain,
There is a victory in dying well
For Freedom,—and ye have not died in vain ;
For, come what may, there shall be hearts in Spain
To honour, ay embrace your martyr'd lot,
Cursing the Bigot's and the Bourbon's chain,
And looking on your graves, though trophied not,
As holier hallow'd ground than priests could make the spot !

What though your cause be baffled—freemen cast
In dungeons—dragg'd to death, or forced to flee ;
Hope is not wither'd in affliction's blast—
The patriot's blood 's the seed of Freedom's tree ;
And short your orgies of revenge shall be,
Cowl'd Demons of the Inquisitorial cell !
Earth shudders at your victory,—for ye
Are worse than common fiends from Heaven that fell,
The baser, ranker sprung, Autochthones of Hell !

Go to your bloody rites again—bring back
 The hall of horrors and the assessor's pen,
 Recording answers shriek'd upon the rack ;
 Smile o'er the gaspings of spine-broken men ;—
 Preach, perpetrate damnation in your den ;—
 Then let your altars, ye blasphemers ! peal
 With thanks to Heaven, that let you loose again,
 To practise deeds with torturing fire and steel
 No eye may search—no tongue may challenge or reveal !

Yet laugh not in your carnival of crime
 Too proudly, ye oppressors !—Spain was free,
 Her soil has felt the foot-prints, and her clime
 Been winnow'd by the wings of Liberty ;
 And these even parting scatter as they flee
 Thoughts—influences, to live in hearts unborn,
 Opinions that shall wrench the prison-key
 From Persecution—show her mask off-torn,
 And tramp her bloated head beneath the foot of Scorn.

Glory to them that die in this great cause ;
 Kings, Bigots, can inflict no brand of shame,
 Or shape of death, to shroud them from applause :—
 No !—manglers of the martyr's earthly frame !
 Your hangmen fingers cannot touch his fame.
 Still in your prostrate land there shall be some
 Proud hearts, the shrines of Freedom's vestal flame.
 Long trains of ill may pass unheeded, dumb,
 But vengeance is behind, and justice is to come.

SONG OF THE GREEKS.

AGAIN to the battle, Achaïans !
Our hearts bid the tyrants defiance !
Our land, the first garden of Liberty's tree—
It has been, and shall yet be, the land of the free :
For the cross of our faith is replanted,
The pale dying crescent is daunted,
And we march that the foot-prints of Mahomet's slaves
May be wash'd out in blood from our forefathers' graves.
Their spirits are hovering o'er us,
And the sword shall to glory restore us.

Ah ! what though no succour advances,
Nor Christendom's chivalrous lances
Are stretch'd in our aid—be the combat our own !
And we'll perish or conquer more proudly alone ;
For we've sworn by our Country's assaulters,
By the virgins they've dragg'd from our altars,
By our massacred patriots, our children in chains,
By our heroes of old, and their blood in our veins,
That, living, we shall be victorious,
Or that, dying, our deaths shall be glorious.

A breath of submission we breathe not ;
 The sword that we've drawn we will sheathe not !
 Its scabbard is left where our martyrs are laid,
 And the vengeance of ages has whetted its blade.
 Earth may hide—waves engulf—fire consume us,
 But they shall not to slavery doom us :
 If they rule, it shall be o'er our ashes and graves ;
 But we've smote them already with fire on the waves,
 And new triumphs on land are before us,
 To the charge !—Heaven's banner is o'er us.

This day shall ye blush for its story,
 Or brighten your lives with its glory.
 Our women, oh, say, shall they shriek in despair,
 Or embrace us from conquest with wreaths in their hair ?

Accursed may his memory blacken,
 If a coward there be that would slacken
 Till we've trampled the turban, and shown ourselves worth
 Being sprung from and named for the godlike of earth.
 Strike home, and the world shall revere us
 As heroes descended from heroes.

Old Greece lightens up with emotion
 Her inlands, her isles of the Ocean ;
 Fanes rebuilt and fair towns shall with jubilee ring,
 And the Nine shall new-hallow their Helicon's spring :

Our hearths shall be kindled in gladness,
That were cold and extinguish'd in sadness ;
Whilst our maidens shall dance with their white-waving arms,
Singing joy to the brave that deliver'd their charms,
When the blood of you Mussulman cravens
Shall have purpled the beaks of our ravens.

ODE TO WINTER.

WHEN first the fiery-mantled sun
 His heavenly race began to run ;
 Round the earth and ocean blue,
 His children four the Seasons flew.
 First, in green apparel dancing,
 The young Spring smiled with angel grace ;
 Rosy Summer next advancing,
 Rush'd into her sire's embrace :—
 Her bright-hair'd sire, who bade her keep
 For ever nearest to his smiles,
 On Calpe's olive-shaded steep,
 On India's citron-cover'd isles :
 More remote and buxom-brown,
 The Queen of vintage bow'd before his throne ;
 A rich pomegranate gemm'd her crown,
 A ripe sheaf bound her zone.
 But howling Winter fled afar,
 To hills that prop the polar star,
 And loves on deer-borne car to ride
 With barren Darkness by his side,

Round the shore where loud Lofoden
Whirls to death the roaring whale,
Round the hall where Runic Odin
Howls his war-song to the gale ;
Save when adown the ravaged globe
He travels on his native storm,
Deflowering Nature's grassy robe,
And trampling on her faded form :—
Till light's returning lord assume
The shaft that drives him to his polar field,
Of power to pierce his raven plume
And crystal-cover'd shield.
Oh, sire of storms ! whose savage ear
The Lapland drum delights to hear,
When Frenzy with her blood-shot eye
Implores thy dreadful deity,
Archangel ! power of desolation !
Fast descending as thou art,
Say, hath mortal invocation
Spells to touch thy stony heart ?
Then, sullen Winter, hear my prayer,
And gently rule the ruin'd year ;
Nor chill the wanderer's bosom bare,
Nor freeze the wretch's falling tear ;—
To shuddering Want's unmantled bed
Thy horror-breathing agues cease to lead,
And gently on the orphan head
Of innocence descend.—

But chiefly spare, O king of clouds !
 The sailor on his airy shrouds ;
 When wrecks and beacons strew the steep,
 And spectres walk along the deep.
 Milder yet thy snowy breezes
 Pour on yonder tented shores,
 Where the Rhine's broad billow freezes,
 Or the dark-brown Danube roars.
 Oh, winds of Winter ! list ye there
 To many a deep and dying groan ;
 Or start, ye demons of the midnight air,
 At shrieks and thunders louder than your own.
 Alas ! ev'n your unhallow'd breath
 May spare the victim fallen low ;
 But man will ask no truce to death,—
 No bounds to human woe *.

SPOKEN BY MRS. BARTLEY AT DRURY-LANE THEATRE, ON THE FIRST
 OPENING OF THE HOUSE AFTER THE DEATH OF THE PRINCESS CHARLOTTE, 1817.

BRITONS ! although our task is but to show
 The scenes and passions of fictitious woe,
 Think not we come this night without a part
 In that deep sorrow of the public heart,

* This ode was written in Germany, at the close of 1800, before the conclusion of hostilities.

Which like a shade hath darken'd every place,
And moisten'd with a tear the manliest face !
The bell is scarcely hush'd in Windsor's piles,
That toll'd a requiem from the solemn aisles,
For her, the royal flower, low laid in dust,
That was your fairest hope, your fondest trust.
Unconscious of the doom, we dreamt, alas !
That ev'n these walls, ere many months should pass,
Which but return sad accents for her now,
Perhaps had witness'd her benignant brow,
Cheer'd by the voice you would have raised on high,
In bursts of British love and loyalty.
But, Britain ! now thy chief, thy people mourn,
And Claremont's home of love is left forlorn :—
There, where the happiest of the happy dwelt,
The 'scutcheon glooms, and royalty hath felt
A wound that every bosom feels its own,—
The blessing of a father's heart o'erthrown—
The most beloved and most devoted bride
Torn from an agonised husband's side,
Who "long as Memory holds her seat" shall view
That speechless, more than spoken last adieu,
When the fixed eye long look'd connubial faith,
And beam'd affection in the trance of death.
Sad was the pomp that yesternight beheld,
As with the mourner's heart the anthem swell'd ;
While torch succeeding torch illumed each high
And banner'd arch of England's chivalry.

The rich plumed canopy, the gorgeous pall,
The sacred march, and sable-vested wall,—
These were not rites of inexpressive show,
But hallow'd as the types of real woe !
Daughter of England ! for a nation's sighs,
A nation's heart went with thine obsequies !—
And oft shall time revert a look of grief
On thine existence, beautiful and brief.
Fair spirit ! send thy blessing from above
On realms where thou art canonised by love !
Give to a father's, husband's bleeding mind,
The peace that angels lend to human kind ;
To us who in thy loved remembrance feel
A sorrowing, but a soul-ennobling zeal—
A loyalty that touches all the best
And loftiest principles of England's breast !
Still may thy name speak concord from the tomb—
Still in the Muse's breath thy memory bloom !
They shall describe thy life—thy form portray ;
But all the love that mourns thee swept away,
'Tis not in language or expressive arts
To paint—ye feel it, Britons, in your hearts !

LINES ON THE GRAVE OF A SUICIDE.

By strangers left upon a lonely shore,
 Unknown, unhonour'd, was the friendless dead ;
 For child to weep, or widow to deplore,
 There never came to his unburied head :—
 All from his dreary habitation fled.
 Nor will the lantern'd fisherman at eve
 Launch on that water by the witches' tower,
 Where hellebore and hemlock seem to weave
 Round its dark vaults a melancholy bower
 For spirits of the dead at night's enchanted hour.

They dread to meet thee, poor unfortunate !
 Whose crime it was, on Life's unfinish'd road,
 To feel the step-dame buffetings of fate,
 And render back thy being's heavy load.
 Ah ! once, perhaps, the social passions glow'd
 In thy devoted bosom—and the hand
 That smote its kindred heart, might yet be prone
 To deeds of mercy. Who may understand
 Thy many woes, poor suicide, unknown ?—
 He who thy being gave shall judge of thee alone.

REULLURA.*

STAR of the morn and eve,
 Reullura shone like thee,
 And well for her might Aodh grieve,
 The dark-attired Culdee.
 Peace to their shades ! the pure Culdees
 Were Albyn's earliest priests of God,
 Ere yet an island of her seas
 By foot of Saxon monk was trod,
 Long ere her churchmen by bigotry
 Were barr'd from wedlock's holy tie.
 'Twas then that Aodh, famed afar,
 In Iona preach'd the word with power,
 And Reullura, beauty's star,
 Was the partner of his bower.

But, Aodh, the roof lies low,
 And the thistle-down waves bleaching,
 And the bat flits to and fro
 Where the Gaël once heard thy preaching ;
 And fallen is each column'd aisle
 Where the chiefs and the people knelt.
 'Twas near that temple's goodly pile
 That honoured of men they dwelt.

* Reullura, in Gaëlic, signifies " beautiful star."

For Aodh was wise in the sacred law,
And bright Reullura's eyes oft saw
The veil of fate uplifted.
Alas, with what visions of awe
Her soul in that hour was gifted—
When pale in the temple and faint,
With Aodh she stood alone
By the statue of an aged Saint !
Fair sculptured was the stone,
It bore a crucifix ;
Fame said it once had graced
A Christian temple, which the Picts
In the Britons' land laid waste :
The Pictish men, by St. Columb taught,
Had hither the holy relic brought.
Reullura eyed the statue's face,
And cried, " It is, he shall come,
Even he, in this very place,
To avenge my martyrdom.

For, woe to the Gaël people !
Ulvfagre is on the main,
And Iona shall look from tower and steeple
On the coming ships of the Dane ;
And, dames and daughters, shall all your locks
With the spoiler's grasp entwine ?
No ! some shall have shelter in caves and rocks,
And the deep sea shall be mine.

Baffled by me shall the Dane return
 And here shall his torch in the temple burn,
 Until that holy man shall plough
 The waves from Innisfail.
 His sail is on the deep e'en now,
 And swells to the southern gale."

" Ah ! know'st thou not, my bride,"
 The holy Aodh said,
 " That the Saint whose form we stand beside
 Has for ages slept with the dead ?"
 " He liveth, he liveth," she said again,
 " For the span of his life tenfold extends
 Beyond the wonted years of men.
 He sits by the graves of well-loved friends
 That died ere thy grandsire's grandsire's birth ;
 The oak is decay'd with age on earth,
 Whose acorn-seed had been planted by him ;
 And his parents remember the day of dread
 When the sun on the cross look'd dim,
 And the graves gave up their dead.
 Yet preaching from clime to clime,
 He hath roam'd the earth for ages,
 And hither he shall come in time
 When the wrath of the heathen rages,
 In time a remnant from the sword—
 Ah ! but a remnant to deliver ;
 Yet, blest be the name of the Lord !
 His martyrs shall go into bliss for ever.

Lochlin *, appall'd, shall put up her steel,
 And thou shalt embark on the bounding keel ;
 Safe shalt thou pass through her hundred ships,
 With the Saint and a remnant of the Gaël,
 And the Lord will instruct thy lips
 To preach in Innisfail †.”

The sun, now about to set,
 Was burning o'er Tiree,
 And no gathering cry rose yet
 O'er the isles of Albyn's sea,
 Whilst Reullura saw far rowers dip
 Their oars beneath the sun,
 And the phantom of many a Danish ship,
 Where ship there yet was none.
 And the shield of alarm was dumb,
 Nor did their warning till midnight come,
 When watch-fires burst from across the main,
 From Rona, and Uist, and Skye,
 To tell that the ships of the Dane
 And the red-hair'd slayers were nigh.

Our islemen arose from slumbers,
 And buckled on their arms ;
 But few, alas ! were their numbers
 To Lochlin's mailed swarms.

* Denmark.

† Ireland.

And the blade of the bloody Norse
Has fill'd the shores of the Gaël
With many a floating corse,
And with many a woman's wail.
They have lighted the islands with ruin's torch,
And the holy men of Iona's church
In the temple of God lay slain ;
All but Aodh, the last Culdee,
But bound with many an iron chain,
Bound in that church was he.
And where is Aodh's bride ?
Rocks of the ocean flood !
Plunged she not from your heights in pride,
And mock'd the men of blood ?
Then Ulvfagre and his bands
In the temple lighted their banquet up,
And the print of their blood-red hands
Was left on the altar cup.
'Twas then that the Norseman to Aodh said,
" Tell where thy church's treasure 's laid,
Or I'll hew thee limb from limb."
As he spoke the bell struck three,
And every torch grew dim
That lighted their revelry.

But the torches again burnt bright,
And brighter than before,
When an aged man of majestic height
Enter'd the temple door.

Hush'd was the revellers' sound,
They were struck as mute as the dead,
And their hearts were appall'd by the very sound
Of his footsteps' measured tread.
Nor word was spoken by one beholder,
Whilst he flung his white robe back o'er his shoulder,
And stretching his arms—as eath
Unriveted Aodh's bands,
As if the gyves had been a wreath
Of willows in his hands.

All saw the stranger's similitude
To the ancient statue's form ;
The Saint before his own image stood,
And grasp'd Ulvfagre's arm.
Then up rose the Danes at last to deliver
Their chief, and shouting with one accord,
They drew the shaft from its rattling quiver,
They lifted the spear and sword,
And levell'd their spears in rows.
But down went axes and spears and bows,
When the Saint with his crosier sign'd,
The archer's hand on the string was stopt,
And down, like reeds laid flat by the wind,
Their lifted weapons dropt.
The Saint then gave a signal mute,
And though Ulvfagre will'd it not,
He came and stood at the statue's foot,
Spell-riveted to the spot,

Till hands invisible shook the wall,
And the tottering image was dash'd
Down from its lofty pedestal.
On Ulvfagre's helm it crash'd—
Helmet, and skull, and flesh, and brain,
It crush'd as millstones crush the grain,
Then spoke the Saint, whilst all and each
Of the Heathen trembled round,
And the pauses amidst his speech
Were as awful as the sound :

“ Go back, ye wolves ! to your dens ” (he cried),
“ And tell the nations abroad,
How the fiercest of your herd has died
That slaughter'd the flock of God.
Gather him bone by bone,
And take with you o'er the flood
The fragments of that avenging stone
That drank his heathen blood.
These are the spoils from Iona's sack,
The only spoils ye shall carry back ;
For the hand that uplifteth spear or sword
Shall be wither'd by palsy's shock,
And I come in the name of the Lord
To deliver a remnant of his flock.”

A remnant was call'd together,
A doleful remnant of the Gaël,
And the Saint in the ship that had brought him hither
Took the mourners to Innisfail.
Unscathed they left Iona's strand,
When the opal morn first flush'd the sky,
For the Norse dropt spear, and bow, and brand,
And look'd on them silently ;
Safe from their hiding-places came
Orphans and mothers, child and dame :
But, alas ! when the search for Reullura spread,
No answering voice was given,
For the sea had gone o'er her lovely head,
And her spirit was in Heaven.

THE TURKISH LADY.

'Twas the hour when rites unholy
 Call'd each Paynim voice to prayer,
 And the star that faded slowly
 Left to dews the freshen'd air.

Day her sultry fires had wasted,
 Calm and sweet the moonlight rose;
 Ev'n a captive spirit tasted
 Half oblivion of his woes.

Then 'twas from an Emir's palace
 Came an Eastern lady bright :
 She, in spite of tyrants jealous,
 Saw and loved an English knight.

“Tell me, captive, why in anguish
 Foes have dragg'd thee here to dwell,
 Where poor Christians as they languish
 Hear no sound of Sabbath bell?”—

“'Twas on Transylvania's Bannat,
 When the Crescent shone afar,
 Like a pale disastrous planet
 O'er the purple tide of war—

In that day of desolation,
Lady, I was captive made ;
Bleeding for my Christian nation
By the walls of high Belgrade."

"Captive! could the brightest jewel
From my turban set thee free?"
"Lady, no!—the gift were cruel,
Ransom'd, yet if reft of thee.

Say, fair princess! would it grieve thee
Christian climes should we behold?"—
"Nay, bold knight! I would not leave thee
Were thy ransom paid in gold!"

Now in Heaven's blue expansion
Rose the midnight star to view,
When to quit her father's mansion
Thrice she wept, and bade adieu!

"Fly we then, while none discover!
Tyrant barks, in vain ye ride!"—
Soon at Rhodes the British lover
Clasp'd his blooming Eastern bride.

THE BRAVE ROLAND.

THE brave Roland!—the brave Roland!—
 False tidings reach'd the Rhenish strand
 That he had fall'n in fight ;
 And thy faithful bosom swoon'd with pain,
 O loveliest maiden of Allémayne !
 For the loss of thine own true knight.

But why so rash has she ta'en the veil,
 In yon Nonnenwerder's cloisters pale ?
 For her vow had scarce been sworn,
 And the fatal mantle o'er her flung,
 When the Drachenfels to a trumpet rung—
 'Twas her own dear warrior's horn !

Woe ! woe ! each heart shall bleed—shall break !
 She would have hung upon his neck,
 Had he come but yester-even !
 And he had clasp'd those peerless charms,
 That shall never, never fill his arms,
 Or meet him but in heaven.

Yet Roland the brave—Roland the true—
He could not bid that spot adieu ;

 It was dear still 'midst his woes ;
For he loved to breathe the neighbouring air,
And to think she bless'd him in her prayer,
 When the Halleluiah rose.

There 's yet one window of that pile,
Which he built above the Nun's green isle ;
 Thence sad and oft look'd he
(When the chant and organ sounded slow)
On the mansion of his love below,
 For herself he might not see.

She died !—He sought the battle-plain ;
Her image fill'd his dying brain,
 When he fell and wish'd to fall :
And her name was in his latest sigh,
When Roland, the flower of chivalry,
 Expired at Roncevall.

THE SPECTRE BOAT.

A BALLAD.

LIGHT rued false Ferdinand to leave a lovely maid forlorn,
Who broke her heart and died to hide her blushing cheek
from scorn.

One night he dreamt he woo'd her in their wonted
bower of love,
Where the flowers sprang thick around them, and the birds sang sweet above.

But the scene was swiftly changed into a church yard's dismal view,
And her lips grew black beneath his kiss, from love's delicious hue.

What more he dreamt, he told to none; but shuddering,
pale, and dumb,
Look'd out upon the waves, like one that knew his hour
was come.

'Twas now the dead watch of the night—the helm was lashed a-lee,
And the ship rode where Mount Ætna lights the deep
Levantine sea;

When beneath its glare a boat came, row'd by a woman
in her shroud,
Who, with eyes that made our blood run cold, stood up
and spoke aloud :—

“ Come, Traitor, down, for whom my ghost still wanders unforgiven !

Come down, false Ferdinand, for whom I broke my peace with heaven ! ”—

It was vain to hold the victim, for he plunged to meet her
call,

Like the bird that shrieks and flutters in the gazing
serpent's thrall.

You may guess the boldest mariner shrunk daunted from the sight,

For the Spectre and her winding-sheet shone blue with hideous light ;

Like a fiery wheel the boat spun with the waving of her hand,

And round they went, and down they went, as the cock crew from the land.

THE LOVER TO HIS MISTRESS.

ON HER BIRTH-DAY.

If any white-wing'd Power above
My joys and griefs survey,
The day when thou wert born, my love—
He surely bless'd that day.

I laugh'd (till taught by thee) when told
Of Beauty's magic powers,
That ripen'd life's dull ore to gold,
And changed its weeds to flowers.

My mind had lovely shapes portray'd ;
But thought I earth had one
Could make even Fancy's visions fade
Like stars before the sun ?

I gazed, and felt upon my lips
The unfinish'd accents hang :
One moment's bliss, one burning kiss,
To rapture changed each pang.

And though as swift as lightning's flash
 Those tranced moments flew,
 Not all the waves of time shall wash
 Their memory from my view.

But duly shall my raptured song,
 And gladly shall my eyes,
 Still bless this day's return, as long
 As thou shalt see it rise.

SONG.

OH, how hard it is to find
 The one just suited to our mind ;
 And if that one should be
 False, unkind, or found too late,
 What can we do but sigh at fate,
 And sing Woe's me—Woe's me ?

Love's a boundless burning waste,
 Where Bliss's stream we seldom taste,
 And still more seldom flee
 Suspense's thorns, Suspicion's stings ;
 Yet somehow Love a something brings
 That's sweet—ev'n when we sigh 'Woe's me !'

ADELGITHA.

THE ordeal's fatal trumpet sounded,
And sad pale ADELGITHA came,
When forth a valiant champion bounded,
And slew the slanderer of her fame.

She wept, deliver'd from her danger ;
But when he knelt to claim her glove—
“ Seek not,” she cried, “ oh ! gallant stranger,
For hapless ADELGITHA'S love.

For he is in a foreign far land
Whose arms should now have set me free ;
And I must wear the willow garland
For him that's dead, or false to me.”

“ Nay ! say not that his faith is tainted ! ”—
He raised his vizor—At the sight
She fell into his arms and fainted ;
It was indeed her own true knight !

LINES

ON RECEIVING A SEAL WITH THE CAMPBELL CREST, FROM
K. M—, BEFORE HER MARRIAGE.

THIS wax returns not back more fair
Th' impression of the gift you send,
Than stamp'd upon my thoughts I bear
The image of your worth, my friend!—

We are not friends of yesterday ;—
But poets' fancies are a little
Disposed to heat and cool, (they say,)—
By turns impressible and brittle.

Well ! should its frailty e'er condemn
My heart to prize or please you less,
Your type is still the sealing gem,
And mine the waxen brittleness.

What transcripts of my weal and woe
This little signet yet may lock,—
What utterances to friend or foe,
In reason's calm or passion's shock !

What scenes of life's yet curtain'd page
May own its confidential die,
Whose stamp awaits th' unwritten page,
And feelings of futurity!—

Yet wheresoe'er my pen I lift
To date the epistolary sheet,
The blest occasion of the gift
Shall make its recollection sweet ;

Sent when the star that rules your fates
Hath reach'd its influence most benign—
When every heart congratulates,
And none more cordially than mine.

So speed my song—mark'd with the crest
That erst the advent'rous Norman wore,
Who won the Lady of the West,
The daughter of Macaillan Mor.

Crest of my sires ! whose blood it seal'd
With glory in the strife of swords,
Ne'er may the scroll that bears it yield
Degenerate thoughts or faithless words !

Yet little might I prize the stone,
If it but typed the feudal tree
From whence, a scattered leaf, I'm blown
In Fortune's mutability.

No!—but it tells me of a heart
 Allied by friendship's living tie ;
 A prize beyond the herald's art—
 Our soul-sprung consanguinity !

KATH'RINE ! to many an hour of mine
 Light wings and sunshine you have lent ;
 And so adieu, and still be thine
 The all-in-all of life—Content !

GILDEROY.

THE last, the fatal hour is come,
 That bears my love from me :
 I hear the dead note of the drum,
 I mark the gallows' tree !

The bell has toll'd ; it shakes my heart ;
 The trumpet speaks thy name ;
 And must my Gilderoy depart
 To bear a death of shame ?

No bosom trembles for thy doom ;
 No mourner wipes a tear ;
 The gallows' foot is all thy tomb,
 The sledge is all thy bier.

Oh, Gilderoy ! bethought we then
So soon, so sad to part,
When first in Roslin's lovely glen
You triumph'd o'er my heart ?

Your locks they glitter'd to the sheen,
Your hunter garb was trim ;
And graceful was the ribbon green
That bound your manly limb !

Ah ! little thought I to deplore
Those limbs in fetters bound ;
Or hear, upon the scaffold floor,
The midnight hammer sound.

Ye cruel, cruel, that combined
The guiltless to pursue ;
My Gilderoy was ever kind,
He could not injure you !

A long adieu ! but where shall fly
Thy widow all forlorn,
When every mean and cruel eye
Regards my woe with scorn ?

Yes ! they will mock thy widow's tears,
And hate thine orphan boy ;
Alas ! his infant beauty wears
The form of Gilderoy.

Then will I seek the dreary mound
That wraps thy mouldering clay,
And weep and linger on the ground,
And sigh my heart away.

STANZAS

ON THE THREATENED INVASION.

1803.

OUR bosoms we'll bare for the glorious strife,
 And our oath is recorded on high,
 To prevail in the cause that is dearer than life,
 Or crush'd in its ruins to die !
 Then rise, fellow freemen, and stretch the right hand,
 And swear to prevail in your dear native land !

'Tis the home we hold sacred is laid to our trust—
 God bless the green Isle of the brave !
 Should a conqueror tread on our forefathers' dust,
 It would rouse the old dead from their grave !
 Then rise, fellow freemen, and stretch the right hand,
 And swear to prevail in your dear native land !

In a Briton's sweet home shall a spoiler abide,
 Profaning its loves and its charms ?
 Shall a Frenchman insult the loved fair at our side ?
 To arms ! oh, my Country, to arms !
 Then rise, fellow freemen, and stretch the right hand,
 And swear to prevail in your dear native land !

Shall a tyrant enslave us, my countrymen!—No!

His head to the sword shall be given—

A death-bed repentance be taught the proud foe,

And his blood be an offering to Heaven!

Then rise, fellow freemen, and stretch the right hand,

And swear to prevail in your dear native land!

THE RITTER BANN.

THE Ritter Bann from Hungary

Came back, renown'd in arms,

But scorning jousts of chivalry,

And love and ladies' charms.

While other knights held revels, he

Was wrapt in thoughts of gloom,

And in Vienna's hostelrie

Slow paced his lonely room.

There enter'd one whose face he knew,—

Whose voice, he was aware,

He oft at mass had listen'd to

In the holy house of prayer.

'Twas the Abbot of St. James's monks,

A fresh and fair old man:

His reverend air arrested even

The gloomy Ritter Bann.

But seeing with him an ancient dame
Come clad in Scotch attire,
The Ritter's colour went and came,
And loud he spoke in ire :

“ Ha ! nurse of her that was my bane,
Name not her name to me ;
I wish it blotted from my brain :
Art poor ?—take alms, and flee.”

“ Sir Knight,” the abbot interposed,
“ This case your ear demands ;”
And the crone cried, with a cross enclosed
In both her trembling hands :

“ Remember, each his sentence waits ;
And he that shall rebut
Sweet Mercy's suit, on him the gates
Of Mercy shall be shut.

You wedded, undispensed by Church,
Your cousin Jane in Spring ;—
In Autumn, when you went to search
For churchmen's pardoning.

Her house denounced your marriage-band,
Betroth'd her to De Grey,
And the ring you put upon her hand
Was wrench'd by force away.

Then wept your Jane upon my neck,
Crying, ' Help me, nurse, to flee
To my Howel Bann's Glamorgan hills ;'
But word arrived—ah me !—

You were not there ; and 'twas their threat,
By foul means or by fair,
To-morrow morning was to set
The seal on her despair.

I had a son, a sea-boy, in
A ship at Hartland Bay ;
By his aid from her cruel kin
I bore my bird away.

To Scotland from the Devon's
Green myrtle shores we fled ;
And the Hand that sent the ravens
To Elijah, gave us bread.

She wrote you by my son, but he
From England sent us word
You had gone into some far countrie,
In grief and gloom he heard.

For they that wrong'd you, to elude
Your wrath, defamed my child ;
And you—ay, blush, Sir, as you should—
Believed, and were beguiled.

To die but at your feet, she vow'd
To roam the world ; and we
Would both have sped and begg'd our bread,
But so it might not be.

For when the snow-storm beat our roof,
She bore a boy, Sir Bann,
Who grew as fair your likeness' proof
As child e'er grew like man.

'Twas smiling on that babe one morn
While heath bloom'd on the moor,
Her beauty struck young Lord Kinghorn
As he hunted past our door.

She shunn'd him, but he raved of Jane,
And roused his mother's pride :
Who came to us in high disdain,—
' And where's the face,' she cried,

' Has witch'd my boy to wish for one
So wretched for his wife?—
Dost love thy husband? Know, my son
Has sworn to seek his life.'

Her anger sore dismayed us,
For our mite was wearing scant,
And, unless that dame would aid us,
There was none to aid our want.

So I told her, weeping bitterly,
What all our woes had been ;
And, though she was a stern ladie,
The tears stood in her een.

And she housed us both, when, cheerfully,
My child to her had sworn,
That even if made a widow, she
Would never wed Kinghorn."——

Here paused the nurse, and then began
The abbot, standing by :—
“Three months ago a wounded man
To our abbey came to die.

He heard me long, with ghastly eyes
And hand obdurate clench'd,
Spoke of the worm that never dies,
And the fire that is not quench'd.

At last by what this scroll attests
He left atonement brief,
For years of anguish to the breasts
His guilt had wrung with grief.

‘There lived,’ he said, ‘a fair young dame
Beneath my mother’s roof ;
I loved her, but against my flame
Her purity was proof.

I feign'd repentance, friendship pure ;
That mood she did not check,
But let her husband's miniature
Be copied from her neck,

As means to search him ; my deceit
Took care to him was borne
Nought but his picture's counterfeit,
And Jane's reported scorn.

The treachery took : she waited wild ;
My slave came back and lied
Whate'er I wish'd ; she clasp'd her child,
And swoon'd, and all but died.

I felt her tears for years and years
Quench not my flame, but stir ;
The very hate I bore her mate
Increased my love for her.

Fame told us of his glory, while
Joy flush'd the face of Jane ;
And while she bless'd his name, her smile
Struck fire into my brain.

No fears could damp ; I reach'd the camp,
Sought out its champion ;
And if my broad-sword fail'd at last,
'Twas long and well laid on.

This wound's my meed, my name's Kinghorn,
My foe's the Ritter Bann.'——
The wafer to his lips was borne,
And we shrived the dying man.

He died not till you went to fight
The Turks at Warradein ;
But I see my tale has changed you pale."——
The abbot went for wine ;

And brought a little page who pour'd
It out, and knelt and smiled ;—
The stunned knight saw himself restored
To childhood in his child ;

And stoop'd and caught him to his breast,
Laugh'd loud and wept anon,
And with a shower of kisses press'd
The darling little one.

“ And where went Jane ? ” — “ To a nunnery, Sir —
Look not again so pale —
Kinghorn's old dame grew harsh to her. ” —
“ And has she ta'en the veil ? ” —

“ Sit down, Sir, ” said the priest, “ I bar
Rash words. ” — They sat all three,
And the boy play'd with the knight's broad star,
As he kept him on his knee.

“ Think ere you ask her dwelling-place, ”
The abbot further said ;
“ Time draws a veil o'er beauty's face
More deep than cloister's shade.

Grief may have made her what you can
Scarce love perhaps for life.”
“ Hush, abbot, ” cried the Ritter Bann,
“ Or tell me where's my wife.”

The priest undid two doors that hid
The inn's adjacent room,
And there a lovely woman stood,
Tears bathed her beauty's bloom.

One moment may with bliss repay
Unnumber'd hours of pain ;
Such was the throb and mutual sob
Of the knight embracing Jane.

SONG.

DRINK ye to her that each loves best,
And if you nurse a flame
That's told but to her mutual breast,
We will not ask her name.

Enough, while memory tranced and glad
Paints silently the fair,
That each should dream of joys he's had,
Or yet may hope to share.

Yet far, far hence be jest or boast
From hallow'd thoughts so dear ;
But drink to her that each loves most,
As she would love to hear.

SONG.

“ MEN OF ENGLAND.”

---

MEN of England ! who inherit
 Rights that cost your sires their blood !
 Men whose undegenerate spirit
 Has been proved on field and flood :—

By the foes you've fought uncounted,
 By the glorious deeds ye've done,
 Trophies captured—breaches mounted,
 Navies conquer'd—kingdoms won.

Yet, remember, England gathers
 Hence but fruitless wreaths of fame,
 If the freedom of your fathers
 Glow not in your hearts the same.

What are monuments of bravery,
 Where no public virtues bloom ?
 What avail in lands of slavery,
 Trophied temples, arch, and tomb ?

Pageants !—Let the world revere us
 For our people's rights and laws,
 And the breasts of civic heroes
 Bared in Freedom's holy cause.

Yours are Hampden's, Russell's glory,
 Sidney's matchless shade is yours,—
 Martyrs in heroic story,
 Worth a hundred Agincourts!

We're the sons of sires that baffled
 Crown'd and mitred tyranny;—
 They defied the field and scaffold
 For their birthrights—so will we!

 THE HARPER.

ON the green banks of Shannon, when Sheelah was nigh,
 No blithe Irish lad was so happy as I;
 No harp like my own could so cheerily play,
 And wherever I went was my poor dog Tray.

When at last I was forced from my Sheelah to part,
 She said, (while the sorrow was big at her heart,)
 Oh! remember your Sheelah when far, far away:
 And be kind, my dear Pat, to our poor dog Tray.

Poor dog! he was faithful and kind, to be sure,
 And he constantly loved me, although I was poor;
 When the sour-looking folks sent me heartless away,
 I had always a friend in my poor dog Tray.

When the road was so dark, and the night was so cold,
 And Pat and his dog were grown weary and old,
 How snugly we slept in my old coat of grey,
 And he lick'd me for kindness—my poor dog Tray.

Though my wallet was scant, I remember'd his case,
Nor refused my last crust to his pitiful face ;
But he died at my feet on a cold winter day,
And I play'd a sad lament for my poor dog Tray.

Where now shall I go, poor, forsaken, and blind ?
Can I find one to guide me, so faithful, and kind ?
To my sweet native village, so far, far away,
I can never more return with my poor dog Tray.

THE WOUNDED HUSSAR.

ALONE to the banks of the dark-rolling Danube
 Fair Adelaide hied when the battle was o'er:—
 “Oh whither,” she cried, “hast thou wander'd, my lover,
 Or here dost thou welter and bleed on the shore?”

What voice did I hear? 'twas my Henry that sigh'd!
 All mournful she hasten'd, nor wander'd she far,
 When bleeding, and low, on the heath she descried,
 By the light of the moon, her poor wounded Hussar!

From his bosom that heaved, the last torrent was streaming,
 And pale was his visage, deep mark'd with a scar!
 And dim was that eye, once expressively beaming,
 That melted in love, and that kindled in war!

How smit was poor Adelaide's heart at the sight!
 How bitter she wept o'er the victim of war!
 “Hast thou come, my fond Love, this last sorrowful night,
 To cheer the lone heart of your wounded Hussar?”

“Thou shalt live,” she replied, “Heaven's mercy relieving
 Each anguishing wound, shall forbid me to mourn!”—
 “Ah no! the last pang of my bosom is heaving!
 No light of the morn shall to Henry return!

Thou charmer of life, ever tender and true !

Ye babes of my love, that await me afar !”—

His faltering tongue scarce could murmur adieu,

When he sunk in her arms—the poor wounded Hussar!

LOVE AND MADNESS.

AN ELEGY.

WRITTEN IN 1795.

HARK ! from the battlements of yonder tower*

The solemn bell has toll'd the midnight hour !

Roused from drear visions of distemper'd sleep,

Poor B——k wakes—in solitude to weep !

“Cease, Memory, cease (the friendless mourner cried)

To probe the bosom too severely tried !

Oh ! ever cease, my pensive thoughts, to stray

Through the bright fields of Fortune's better day,

When youthful HOPE, the music of the mind,

Tuned all its charms, and E——n was kind !

Yet, can I cease, while glows this trembling frame,

In sighs to speak thy melancholy name !

I hear thy spirit wail in every storm !

In midnight shades I view thy passing form !

Pale as in that sad hour when doom'd to feel,

Deep in thy perjured heart, the bloody steel !

* Warwick Castle.

Demons of Vengeance ! ye at whose command
I grasp'd the sword with more than woman's hand,
Say ye, did Pity's trembling voice controul,
Or horror damp the purpose of my soul ?
No ! my wild heart sat smiling o'er the plan,
Till Hate fulfill'd what baffled Love began !

Yes ; let the clay-cold breast that never knew
One tender pang to generous Nature true,
Half-mingling pity with the gall of scorn,
Condemn this heart, that bled in love forlorn !

And ye, proud fair, whose soul no gladness warms,
Save Rapture's homage to your conscious charms !
Delighted idols of a gaudy train,
Ill can your blunter feelings guess the pain,
When the fond faithful heart, inspired to prove
Friendship refined, the calm delight of Love,
Feels all its tender strings with anguish torn,
And bleeds at perjured Pride's inhuman scorn.

Say, then, did pitying Heaven condemn the deed,
When Vengeance bade thee, faithless lover ! bleed ?
Long had I watch'd thy dark foreboding brow,
What time thy bosom scorn'd its dearest vow !
Sad, though I wept the friend, the lover changed,
Still thy cold look was scornful and estranged,
Till from thy pity, love, and shelter thrown,
I wander'd hopeless, friendless, and alone !

Oh! righteous Heaven! 'twas then my tortured soul
First gave to wrath unlimited controul!
Adieu the silent look! the streaming eye!
The murmur'd plaint! the deep heart-heaving sigh!
Long-slumbering Vengeance wakes to better deeds;
He shrieks, he falls, the perjured lover bleeds!
Now the last laugh of agony is o'er,
And pale in blood he sleeps, to wake no more!

'Tis done! the flame of hate no longer burns:
Nature relents, but, ah! too late returns!
Why does my soul this gush of fondness feel?
Trembling and faint, I drop the guilty steel!
Cold on my heart the hand of terror lies,
And shades of horror close my languid eyes!

Oh! 'twas a deed of Murder's deepest grain!
Could B———k's soul so true to wrath remain?
A friend long true, a once fond lover fell!—
Where Love was foster'd could not Pity dwell?

Unhappy youth! while yon pale crescent glows
To watch on silent Nature's deep repose,
Thy sleepless spirit, breathing from the tomb,
Foretels my fate, and summons me to come!
Once more I see thy sheeted spectre stand,
Roll the dim eye, and wave the paly hand!

Soon may this fluttering spark of vital flame
 Forsake its languid melancholy frame !
 Soon may these eyes their trembling lustre close,
 Welcome the dreamless night of long repose !
 Soon may this woe-worn spirit seek the bourne
 Where, lull'd to slumber, Grief forgets to mourn !”

HALLOWED GROUND.

WHAT'S hallow'd ground ? Has earth a clod
 Its Maker meant not should be trod
 By man, the image of his God
 Erect and free,
 Unscourged by Superstition's rod
 To bow the knee ?

That's hallow'd ground—where, mourn'd and miss'd,
 The lips repose our love has kiss'd :—
 But where's their memory's mansion ? Is't
 Yon churchyard's bowers ?
 No ! in ourselves their souls exist,
 A part of ours.

A kiss can consecrate the ground
Where mated hearts are mutual bound :
The spot where love's first links were wound,
 That ne'er are riven,
Is hallow'd down to earth's profound,
 And up to Heaven !

For time makes all but true love old ;
The burning thoughts that then were told
Run molten still in memory's mould ;
 And will not cool,
Until the heart itself be cold
 In Lethe's pool.

What hallows ground where heroes sleep ?
'Tis not the sculptured piles you heap !
In dews that heavens far distant weep
 Their turf may bloom ;
Or Genii twine beneath the deep
 Their coral tomb :

But strew his ashes to the wind
Whose sword or voice has served mankind—
And is he dead, whose glorious mind
 Lifts thine on high ?—
To live in hearts we leave behind,
 Is not to die.

Is't death to fall for Freedom's right?
 He's dead alone that lacks her light!
 And murder sullies in Heaven's sight
 The sword he draws:—
 What can alone ennoble fight?
 A noble cause!

Give that! and welcome War to brace
 Her drums! and rend Heaven's reeking space!
 The colours planted face to face,
 The charging cheer,
 Though Death's pale horse lead on the chase,
 Shall still be dear.

And place our trophies where men kneel
 To Heaven! but Heaven rebukes my zeal.
 The cause of Truth and human weal,
 O God above!
 Transfer it from the sword's appeal
 To Peace and Love.

Peace, Love! the cherubim, that join
 Their spread wings o'er Devotion's shrine,
 Prayers sound in vain, and temples shine,
 Where they are not—
 The heart alone can make divine
 Religion's spot.

To incantations dost thou trust,
And pompous rites in domes august ?
See mouldering stones and metal's rust
 Belle the vaunt,
That men can bless one pile of dust
 With chime or chaunt.

The ticking wood-worm mocks thee, man !
Thy temples—creeds themselves grow wan !
But there's a dome of nobler span,
 A temple given
Thy faith, that bigots dare not ban—
 Its space is Heaven !

Its roof star-pictured Nature's ceiling,
Where trancing the rapt spirit's feeling,
And God himself to man revealing,
 The harmonious spheres
Make music, though unheard their pealing
 By mortal ears.

Fair stars ! are not your beings pure ?
Can sin, can death, your worlds obscure ?
Else why so swell the thoughts at your Aspect above ?
Ye must be Heavens that make us sure
 Of heavenly love !

And in your harmony sublime
 I read the doom of distant time ;
 That man's regenerate soul from crime
 Shall yet be drawn,
 And reason on his mortal clime
 Immortal dawn.

What's hallow'd ground ? 'Tis what gives birth
 To sacred thoughts in souls of worth !—
 Peace ! Independence ! Truth ! go forth
 Earth's compass round ;
 And your high priesthood shall make earth
 All hallow'd ground.

SONG.

WITHDRAW not yet those lips and fingers,
     Whose touch to mine is rapture's spell ;
 Life's joy for us a moment lingers,
     And death seems in the word—Farewell.
 The hour that bids us part and go,
 It sounds not yet,—oh ! no, no, no !

Time, whilst I gaze upon thy sweetness,
     Flies like a courser nigh the goal ;
 To-morrow where shall be his fleetness,
     When thou art parted from my soul ?
 Our hearts shall beat, our tears shall flow,
 But not together—no, no, no !

CAROLINE.

---

I'LL bid the hyacinth to blow,
I'll teach my grotto green to be ;
And sing my true love, all below
The holly bower and myrtle tree.

There all his wild-wood sweets to bring,
The sweet South wind shall wander by,
And with the music of his wing
Delight my rustling canopy.

Come to my close and clustering bower,
Thou spirit of a milder clime,
Fresh with the dews of fruit and flower,
Of mountain heath, and moory thyme.

With all thy rural echoes come,
Sweet comrade of the rosy day,
Wafting the wild bee's gentle hum,
Or cuckoo's plaintive roundelay.

Where'er thy morning breath has play'd,
    Whatever isles of ocean fann'd,
Come to my blossom-woven shade,
    Thou wandering wind of fairy-land.

For sure from some enchanted isle,
    Where Heaven and Love their sabbath hold,
Where pure and happy spirits smile,
    Of beauty's fairest, brightest mould :

From some green Eden of the deep,
    Where Pleasure's sigh alone is heaved,
Where tears of rapture lovers weep,
    Endear'd, undoubting, undeceived :

From some sweet paradise afar,
    Thy music wanders, distant, lost—
Where Nature lights her leading star,
    And love is never, never cross'd.

Oh gentle gale of Eden bowers,
    If back thy rosy feet should roam,
To revel with the cloudless Hours
    In Nature's more propitious home,

Name to thy loved Elysian groves,
    That o'er enchanted spirits twine,
A fairer form than Cherub loves,
    And let the name be CAROLINE.

CAROLINE.

PART II.

TO THE EVENING STAR.

GEM of the crimson-colour'd Even,
 Companion of retiring day,
 Why at the closing gates of Heaven,
 Beloved star, dost thou delay ?

So fair thy pensile beauty burns,
 When soft the tear of twilight flows ;
 So due thy plighted love returns,
 To chambers brighter than the rose :

To Peace, to Pleasure, and to Love,
 So kind a star thou seem'st to be,
 Sure some enamour'd orb above
 Descends and burns to meet with thee.

Thine is the breathing, blushing hour,
 When all unheavenly passions fly,
 Chased by the soul-subduing power
 Of Love's delicious witchery.

O! sacred to the fall of day,
Queen of propitious stars, appear,
And early rise, and long delay,
When Caroline herself is here!

Shine on her chosen green resort,
Whose trees the sunward summit crown,
And wanton flowers, that well may court
An angel's feet to tread them down.

Shine on her sweetly-scented road,
Thou star of evening's purple dome,
That lead'st the nightingale abroad,
And guid'st the pilgrim to his home.

Shine where my charmer's sweeter breath
Embalms the soft exhaling dew,
Where dying winds a sigh bequeath
To kiss the cheek of rosy hue.

Where, winnow'd by the gentle air,
Her silken tresses darkly flow,
And fall upon her brow so fair,
Like shadows on the mountain snow.

Thus, ever thus, at day's decline,
In converse sweet, to wander far,
O bring with thee my Caroline,
And thou shalt be my Ruling Star!

THE BEECH TREE'S PETITION.

---

O LEAVE this barren spot to me !
 Spare, woodman, spare the beechen tree !
 Though bush or floweret never grow
 My dark unwarming shade below ;
 Nor summer bud perfume the dew
 Of rosy blush, or yellow hue !
 Nor fruits of autumn, blossom-born,
 My green and glossy leaves adorn ;
 Nor murmuring tribes from me derive
 Th' ambrosial amber of the hive ;
 Yet leave this barren spot to me :
 Spare, woodman, spare the beechen tree !

Thrice twenty summers I have seen
 The sky grow bright, the forest green ;
 And many a wintry wind have stood
 In bloomless, fruitless solitude,
 Since childhood in my pleasant bower
 First spent its sweet and sportive hour,
 Since youthful lovers in my shade
 Their vows of truth and rapture made ;
 And on my trunk's surviving frame
 Carv'd many a long-forgotten name.

Oh ! by the sighs of gentle sound,
 First breathed upon this sacred ground ;
 By all that Love has whisper'd here,
 Or beauty heard with ravish'd ear ;
 As Love's own altar honour me :
 Spare, woodman, spare the beechen tree !

FIELD FLOWERS.

YE field flowers ! the gardens eclipse you, 'tis true,
 Yet, wildings of Nature, I doat upon you,
 For ye waft me to summers of old,
 When the earth teem'd around me with fairy delight,
 And when daisies and buttercups gladden'd my sight,
 Like treasures of silver and gold.

I love you for lulling me back into dreams
 Of the blue Highland mountains and echoing streams,
 And of birchen glades breathing their balm,
 While the deer was seen glancing in sunshine remote,
 And the deep mellow crush of the wood-pigeon's note
 Made music that sweeten'd the calm.

Not a pastoral song has a pleasanter tune
 Than ye speak to my heart, little wildings of June :
 Of old ruinous castles ye tell,
 Where I thought it delightful your beauties to find,
 When the magic of Nature first breathed on my mind,
 And your blossoms were part of her spell.

Even now what affections the violet awakes ;
What loved little islands, twice seen in their lakes,
 Can the wild water-lily restore ;
What landscapes I read in the primrose's looks,
And what pictures of pebbled and minnowy brooks,
 In the vetches that tangled their shore.

Earth's cultureless buds, to my heart ye were dear,
Ere the fever of passion, or ague of fear,
 Had scathed my existence's bloom ;
Once I welcome you more, in life's passionless stage,
With the visions of youth to revisit my age,
 And I wish you to grow on my tomb.

SONG.

TO THE EVENING STAR.

STAR that bringest home the bee,
 And sett'st the weary labourer free!
 If any star shed peace, 'tis thou,
 That send'st it from above,
 Appearing when Heaven's breath and brow
 Are sweet as hers we love.

Come to the luxuriant skies,
 Whilst the landscape's odours rise,
 Whilst far-off lowing herds are heard,
 And songs when toil is done,
 From cottages whose smoke unstirr'd
 Curls yellow in the sun.

Star of love's soft interviews,
 Parted lovers on thee muse;
 Their remembrancer in Heaven
 Of thrilling vows thou art,
 Too delicious to be riven
 By absence from the heart.

STANZAS TO PAINTING.

O THOU by whose expressive art
 Her perfect image Nature sees
 In union with the Graces start,
 And sweeter by reflection please !

In whose creative hand the hues
 Fresh from yon orient rainbow shine ;
 I bless thee, Promethéan muse !
 And call thee brightest of the Nine !

Possessing more than vocal power,
 Persuasive more than poet's tongue ;
 Whose lineage, in a raptured hour,
 From Love, the Sire of Nature, sprung ;

Does Hope her high possession meet ?
 Is joy triumphant, sorrow flown ?
 Sweet is the trance, the tremor sweet,
 When all we love is all our own.

But oh ! thou pulse of pleasure dear,
 Slow throbbing, cold, I feel thee part ;
 Lone absence plants a pang severe,
 Or death inflicts a keener dart.

Then for a beam of joy to light
In memory's sad and wakeful eye!
Or banish from the noon of night
Her dreams of deeper agony.

Shall Song its witching cadence roll?
Yea, even the tenderest air repeat,
That breathed when soul was knit to soul,
And heart to heart responsive beat?

What visions rise! to charm, to melt!
The lost, the loved, the dead are near!
Oh, hush that strain too deeply felt!
And cease that solace too severe!

But thou, serenely silent art!
By heaven and love wast taught to lend
A milder solace to the heart,
The sacred image of a friend.

All is not lost! if, yet possesst,
To me that sweet memorial shine:—
If close and closer to my breast
I hold that idol all divine.

Or, gazing through luxurious tears,
Melt o'er the loved departed form,
Till death's cold bosom half appears
With life, and speech, and spirit warm.

She looks ! she lives ! this tranced hour,
Her bright eye seems a purer gem
Than sparkles on the throne of power,
Or glory's wealthy diadem.

Yes, Genius, yes ! thy mimic aid
A treasure to my soul has given,
Where beauty's canonized shade
Smiles in the sainted hues of heaven.

No spectre forms of pleasure fled,
Thy softening, sweetening, tints restore ;
For thou canst give us back the dead,
E'en in the loveliest looks they wore.

Then blest be Nature's guardian Muse,
Whose hand her perish'd grace redeems !
Whose tablet of a thousand hues
The mirror of creation seems.

From Love began thy high descent ;
And lovers, charm'd by gifts of thine,
Shall bless thee mutely eloquent ;
And call thee brightest of the Nine !

THE MAID'S REMONSTRANCE.

NEVER wedding, ever wooing,
Still a love-lorn heart pursuing,
Read you not the wrong you're doing
In my cheek's pale hue?
All my life with sorrow strewing,
Wed, or cease to woo.

Rivals banish'd, bosoms plighted,
Still our days are disunited ;
Now the lamp of hope is lighted,
Now half-quench'd appears,
Damp'd, and wavering, and benighted,
'Midst my sighs and tears.

Charms you call your dearest blessing,
Lips that thrill at your caressing,
Eyes a mutual soul confessing,
Soon you'll make them grow
Dim, and worthless your possessing,
Not with age, but woe!

ABSENCE.

'Tis not the loss of love's assurance,
It is not doubting what thou art,
But 'tis the too, too long endurance
Of absence, that afflicts my heart.

The fondest thoughts two hearts can cherish,
When each is lonely doom'd to weep,
Are fruits on desert isles that perish,
Or riches buried in the deep.

What though, untouch'd by jealous madness,
Our bosom's peace may fall to wreck ;
Th' undoubting heart, that breaks with sadness,
Is but more slowly doom'd to break.

Absence ! is not the soul torn by it
From more than light, or life, or breath ?
'Tis Lethe's gloom, but not its quiet,
The pain without the peace of death !

INSCRIBED ON THE MONUMENT LATELY FINISHED BY MR. CHANTREY,

Which has been erected by the Widow of Admiral Sir G. Campbell, K.C.B., to the memory of her Husband.

To him, whose loyal, brave, and gentle heart,
Fulfill'd the hero's and the patriot's part,—
Whose charity, like that which Paul enjoin'd,
Was warm, beneficent, and unconfined,—
This stone is rear'd : to public duty true,
The seaman's friend, the father of his crew—
Mild in reproof, sagacious in command,
He spread fraternal zeal throughout his band,
And led each arm to act, each heart to feel,
What British valour owes to Britain's weal.
These were his public virtues :—but to trace
His private life's fair purity and grace,
To paint the traits that drew affection strong
From friends, an ample and an ardent throng,
And, more, to speak his memory's grateful claim,
On her who mourns him most, and bears his name—
O'ercomes the trembling hand of widow'd grief,
O'ercomes the heart, unconscious of relief,
Save in religion's high and holy trust,
Whilst placing their memorial o'er his dust.

STANZAS

ON THE BATTLE OF NAVARINO.

HEARTS of oak that have bravely deliver'd the brave,
 And uplifted old Greece from the brink of the grave,
 'Twas the helpless to help, and the hopeless to save,
 That your thunderbolts swept o'er the brine :
 And as long as yon sun shall look down on the wave,
 The light of your glory shall shine.

For the guerdon ye sought with your bloodshed and toil,
 Was it slaves, or dominion, or rapine, or spoil ?
 No ! your lofty emprise was to fetter and foil
 The uprooter of Greece's domain !
 When he tore the last remnant of food from her soil,
 Till her famish'd sank pale as the slain !

Yet, Navarin's heroes ! does Christendom breed
 The base hearts that will question the fame of your deed ?
 Are they men ?—let ineffable scorn be their meed,
 And oblivion shadow their graves !—
 Are they women ?—to Turkish serails let them speed ;
 And be mothers of Mussulman slaves.

Abettors of massacre ! dare ye deplore
That the death-shriek is silenced on Hellas's shore ?
That the mother aghast sees her offspring no more
 By the hand of Infanticide grasp'd ?
And that stretch'd on yon billows distain'd by their gore
 Missolonghi's assassins have gasp'd ?

Prouder scene never hallow'd war's pomp to the mind,
Than when Christendom's pennons wooed social the wind,
And the flower of her brave for the combat combined,
 Their watch-word, humanity's vow :
Not a sea-boy that fought in that cause, but mankind
 Owes a garland to honour his brow !

Nor grudge, by our side, that to conquer or fall
Came the hardy rude Russ, and the high-mettled Gaul :
For whose was the genius, that plann'd at its call,
 Where the whirlwind of battle should roll ?
All were brave ! but the star of success over all
 Was the light of our Codrington's soul.

That star of thy day-spring, regenerate Greek !
Dimm'd the Saracen's moon, and struck pallid his cheek :
In its fast flushing morning thy Muses shall speak
 When their lore and their lutes they reclaim :
And the first of their songs from Parnassus's peak
 Shall be "Glory to Codrington's name!"

LINES

ON REVISITING A SCOTTISH RIVER.

AND call they this Improvement?—to have changed,
 My native Clyde, thy once romantic shore,
 Where Nature's face is banish'd and estranged,
 And heaven reflected in thy wave no more ;
 Whose banks, that sweeten'd May-day's breath before,
 Lie sere and leafless now in summer's beam,
 With sooty exhalations cover'd o'er ;
 And for the daisied green-sward, down thy stream
 Unsightly brick lanes smoke, and clanking engines gleam.

Speak not to me of swarms the scene sustains ;
 One heart free tasting Nature's breath and bloom
 Is worth a thousand slaves to Mammon's gains.
 But whither goes that wealth, and gladdening whom ?
 See, left but life enough and breathing-room
 The hunger and the hope of life to feel,
 Yon pale Mechanic bending o'er his loom,
 And Childhood's self as at Ixion's wheel,
 From morn till midnight task'd to earn its little meal.

Is this Improvement?—where the human breed
Degenerate as they swarm and overflow,
Till Toil grows cheaper than the trodden weed,
And man competes with man, like foe with foe,
Till Death, that thins them, scarce seems public woe?
Improvement!—smiles it in the poor man's eyes,
Or blooms it on the cheek of Labour?—No—
To gorge a few with Trade's precarious prize,
We banish rural life, and breathe unwholesome skies.

Nor call that evil slight; God has not given
This passion to the heart of man in vain,
For Earth's green face, th' untainted air of Heaven,
And all the bliss of Nature's rustic reign.
For not alone our frame imbibes a stain
From foetid skies; the spirit's healthy pride
Fades in their gloom—And therefore I complain,
That thou no more through pastoral scenes shouldst glide,
My Wallace's own stream, and once romantic Clyde!

THE "NAME UNKNOWN ;"

IN IMITATION OF KLOPSTOCK.

PROPHETIC pencil! wilt thou trace
 A faithful image of the face,
 Or wilt thou write the "Name Unknown,"
 Ordain'd to bless my charmed soul,
 And all my future fate control,
 Unrivall'd and alone?

Delicious Idol of my thought!
 Though sylph or spirit hath not taught
 My boding heart thy precious name ;
 Yet musing on my distant fate,
 To charms unseen I consecrate
 A visionary flame.

Thy rosy blush, thy meaning eye,
 Thy virgin voice of melody,
 Are ever present to my heart ;
 Thy murmur'd vows shall yet be mine,
 My thrilling hand shall meet with thine,
 And never, never part!

Then fly, my days, on rapid wing,
 Till Love the viewless treasure bring :

While I, like conscious Athens, own
 A power in mystic silence seal'd,
 A guardian angel unreveal'd,
 And bless the "Name Unknown!"

LINES

ON THE CAMP HILL, NEAR HASTINGS.

In the deep blue of eve,
 Ere the twinkling of stars had begun,
 Or the lark took his leave
 Of the skies and the sweet setting sun,

I climb'd to yon heights,
 Where the Norman encamp'd him of old,
 With his bowmen and knights,
 And his banner all burnish'd with gold.

At the Conqueror's side
 There his minstrelsy sat harp in hand,
 In pavilion wide ;
 And they chaunted the deeds of Roland.

Still the ramparted ground
 With a vision my fancy inspires,
 And I hear the trump sound,
 As it marshall'd our Chivalry's sires.

On each turf of that mead
Stood the captors of England's domains,
That ennobled her breed
And high-mettled the blood of her veins.

Over hauberk and helm
As the sun's setting splendour was thrown,
Thence they look'd o'er a realm—
And to-morrow beheld it their own.

FAREWELL TO LOVE.

I HAD a heart that doted once in passion's boundless pain,
 And though the tyrant I abjured, I could not break his chain ;

But now that Fancy's fire is quench'd, and ne'er can burn
 anew,

I've bid to Love, for all my life, adieu ! adieu ! adieu !

I've known, if ever mortal knew, the spells of Beauty's thrall,

And if my song has told them not, my soul has felt
 them all ;

But Passion robs my peace no more, and Beauty's
 witching sway

Is now to me a star that's fall'n—a dream that's pass'd away.

Hail ! welcome tide of life, when no tumultuous billows roll,
 How wondrous to myself appears this halcyon calm of soul !

The wearied bird blown o'er the deep would sooner quit
 its shore,

Than I would cross the gulf again that time has brought me o'er.

Why say they Angels feel the flame?—Oh, spirits of the skies!
 Can love like ours, that dotes on dust, in heavenly bosoms rise?—
 Ah no! the hearts that best have felt its power, the best
 can tell,
 That peace on earth itself begins, when Love has bid farewell.

LINES ON POLAND.

AND have I lived to see thee sword in hand
 Uprise again, immortal Polish Land!—
 Whose flag brings more than chivalry to mind,
 And leaves the tri-color in shade behind;
 A theme for uninspired lips too strong;
 That swells my heart beyond the power of song:—
 Majestic men, whose deeds have dazzled faith,
 Ah! yet your fate's suspense arrests my breath;
 Whilst envying bosoms, bared to shot and steel,
 I feel the more that fruitlessly I feel.

Poles! with what indignation I endure
 Th' half-pitying servile mouths that call you poor;
 Poor! is it England mocks you with her grief,
 Who hates, but dares not chide, th' Imperial Thief?

France with her soul beneath a Bourbon's thrall,
And Germany that has no soul at all,—
States, quailing at the giant overgrown,
Whom dauntless Poland grapples with alone!
No, ye are rich in fame e'en whilst ye bleed:
We cannot aid you—we are poor indeed!
In Fate's defiance—in the world's great eye,
Poland has won her immortality;
The Butcher, should he reach her bosom now,
Could not tear Glory's garland from her brow;
Wreathed, filleted, the victim falls renown'd,
And all her ashes will be holy ground!

But turn, my soul, from presages so dark:
Great Poland's spirit is a deathless spark
That's fann'd by Heaven to mock the Tyrant's rage:
She, like the eagle, will renew her age,
And fresh historic plumes of Fame put on,—
Another Athens after Marathon,—
Where eloquence shall fulmine, arts refine,
Bright as her arms that now in battle shine.
Come—should the heavenly shock my life destroy,
And shut its flood-gates with excess of joy;
Come but the day when Poland's fight is won—
And on my grave-stone shine the morrow's sun—
The day that sees Warsaw's cathedral glow
With endless ensigns ravish'd from the foe,—

Her women lifting their fair hands with thanks,
Her pious warriors kneeling in their ranks,
The 'scutcheon'd walls of high heraldic boast,
The odorous altars' elevated host,
The organ sounding through the aisles' long glooms,
The mighty dead seen sculptured o'er their tombs ;
(John, Europe's saviour—Poniatowski's fair Resemblance—Kosciusko's shall be there ;)
The taper'd pomp—the hallelujah's swell,
Shall o'er the soul's devotion cast a spell,
Till visions cross the rapt enthusiast's glance,
And all the scene becomes a waking trance.
Should Fate put far—far off that glorious scene,
And gulfs of havoc interpose between,
Imagine not, ye men of every clime,
Who act, or by your sufferance share, the crime—
Your brother Abel's blood shall vainly plead
Against the "deep damnation" of the deed.
Germans, ye view its horror and disgrace
With cold phosphoric eyes and phlegm of face.
Is Allemagne profound in science, lore,
And minstrel art?—her shame is but the more
To doze and dream by governments oppress'd,
The spirit of a book-worm in each breast.
Well can ye mouth fair Freedom's classic line,
And talk of Constitutions o'er your wine :
But all your vows to break the tyrant's yoke
Expire in Bacchanalian song and smoke :

Heavens! can no ray of foresight pierce the leads
 And mystic metaphysics of your heads,
 To show the self-same grave Oppression delves
 For Poland's rights is yawning for yourselves?

See, whilst the Pole, the vanguard aid of France,
 Has vaulted on his barb, and couch'd the lance,
 France turns from her abandon'd friends afresh,
 And soothes the Bear that prowls for patriot flesh;
 Buys, ignominious purchase! short repose,
 With dying curses, and the groans of those
 That served, and loved, and put in her their trust.
 Frenchmen! the dead accuse you from the dust—
 Brows laurell'd—bosoms mark'd with many a scar
 For France—that wore her Legion's noblest star,
 Cast dumb reproaches from the field of Death
 On Gallic honour: and this broken faith
 Has robb'd you more of Fame—the life of life—
 Than twenty battles lost in glorious strife!
 And what of England—is she steep'd so low
 In poverty, crest-fall'n, and palsied so,
 That we must sit much wroth, but timorous more,
 With Murder knocking at our neighbour's door!—
 Not Murder mask'd and cloak'd, with hidden knife,
 Whose owner owes the gallows life for life;
 But Public Murder!—that with pomp and gaud,
 And royal scorn of Justice, walks abroad
 To wring more tears and blood than e'er were wrung
 By all the culprits Justice ever hung!

We read the diadem'd Assassin's vaunt,
 And wince, and wish we had not hearts to pant
 With useless indignation—sigh, and frown,
 But have not hearts to throw the gauntlet down.

If but a doubt hung o'er the grounds of fray,
 Or trivial rapine stopp'd the world's highway;
 Were this some common strife of States embroil'd ;—
 Britannia on the spoiler and the spoil'd
 Might calmly look, and, asking time to breathe,
 Still honourably wear her olive wreath.
 But this is Darkness combating with Light :
 Earth's adverse Principles for empire fight :
 Oppression, that has belted half the globe,
 Far as his knout could reach or dagger probe,
 Holds reeking o'er our brother-freemen slain
 That dagger—shakes it at us in disdain ;
 Talks big to Freedom's states of Poland's thrall,
 And, trampling one, contemns them one and all.

My country! colours not thy once proud brow
 At this affront?—Hast thou not fleets enow
 With Glory's streamer, lofty as the lark,
 Gay fluttering o'er each thunder-bearing bark,
 To warm the insulter's seas with barbarous blood,
 And interdict his flag from Ocean's flood?
 Ev'n now far off the sea-cliff, where I sing,
 I see, my Country, and my Patriot King!

Your ensign glad the deep. Becalm'd and slow
A war-ship rides; while Heaven's prismatic bow
Uprisen behind her on th' horizon's base,
Shines flushing through the tackle, shrouds, and stays,
And wraps her giant form in one majestic blaze.
My soul accepts the omen; Fancy's eye
Has sometimes a veracious augury :
The Rainbow types Heaven's promise to my sight ;
The Ship, Britannia's interposing Might!
But if there should be none to aid you, Poles,
Ye'll but to prouder pitch wind up your souls,
Above example, pity, praise, or blame,
To sow and reap a boundless field of Fame.
Ask aid no more from Nations that forget
Your championship—old Europe's mighty debt.
Though Poland, Lazarus-like, has burst the gloom,
She rises not a beggar from the tomb :
In Fortune's frown, on Danger's giddiest brink,
Despair and Poland's name must never link.
All ill has bounds—plague, whirlwind, fire, and flood:
Ev'n Power can spill but bounded sums of blood.
States caring not what Freedom's price may be,
May late or soon, but must at last be free ;
For body-killing tyrants cannot kill
The public soul—the hereditary will
That downward, as from sire to son it goes,
By shifting bosoms more intensely glows :
Its heir-loom is the heart, and slaughter'd men
Fight fiercer in their orphans o'er again.

Poland recasts—though rich in heroes old—
 Her men in more and more heroic mould:
 Her eagle ensign best among mankind
 Becomes, and types her eagle-strength of mind:
 Her praise upon my faltering lips expires:
 Resume it, younger bards, and nobler lyres!

MARGARET AND DORA.

MARGARET's beauteous—Grecian arts
 Ne'er drew form completer,
 Yet why, in my heart of hearts,
 Hold I Dora's sweeter?

Dora's eyes of heavenly blue
 Pass all painting's reach,
 Ringdoves' notes are discord to
 The music of her speech.

Artists! Margaret's smile receive,
 And on canvas show it;
 But for perfect worship leave
 Dora to her poet.

A THOUGHT SUGGESTED BY THE NEW YEAR.

THE more we live, more brief appear
Our life's succeeding stages :
A day to childhood seems a year,
And years like passing ages.

The gladsome current of our youth,
Ere passion yet disorders,
Steals, lingering like a river smooth
Along its grassy borders.

But, as the care-worn cheek grows wan,
And sorrow's shafts fly thicker,
Ye stars, that measure life to man,
Why seem your courses quicker ?

When joys have lost their bloom and breath,
And life itself is vapid,
Why, as we reach the Falls of death,
Feel we its tide more rapid ?

It may be strange—yet who would change,
 Time's course to slower speeding ;
 When one by one our friends have gone,
 And left our bosoms bleeding ?

Heaven gives our years of fading strength
 Indemnifying fleetness ;
 And those of Youth, a seeming length,
 Proportion'd to their sweetness.

SONG.

How delicious is the winning
 Of a kiss at Love's beginning,
 When two mutual hearts are sighing
 For the knot there's no untying !

Yet, remember, 'midst your wooing,
 Love has bliss, but Love has ruing ;
 Other smiles may make you fickle,
 Tears for other charms may trickle.

Love he comes, and Love he tarries,
 Just as fate or fancy carries ;
 Longest stays, when sorest chidden ;
 Laughs and flies, when press'd and bidden.

Bind the sea to slumber stilly,
Bind its odour to the lily,
Bind the aspen ne'er to quiver,
Then bind Love to last for ever!

Love's a fire that needs renewal
Of fresh beauty for its fuel;
Love's wing moults when caged and captured,
Only free, he soars enraptured.

Can you keep the bee from ranging,
Or the ringdove's neck from changing?
No! nor fetter'd Love from dying
In the knot there's no untying.

THE POWER OF RUSSIA.

So all this gallant blood has gush'd in vain !
And Poland, by the Northern Condor's beak
And talons torn, lies prostrated again.
O British patriots, that were wont to speak
Once loudly on this theme, now hush'd or meek !
O heartless men of Europe—Goth and Gaul,
Cold, adder-deaf to Poland's dying shriek ;—
That saw the world's last land of heroes fall—
The brand of burning shame is on you all—all—all !

But this is not the drama's closing act !
 Its tragic curtain must uprising anew.
 Nations, mute accessories to the fact !
 That Upas-tree of power, whose fostering dew
 Was Polish blood, has yet to cast o'er you
 The lengthening shadow of its head elate—
 A deadly shadow, darkening Nature's hue.
 To all that's hallow'd, righteous, pure and great,
 Wo ! wo ! when they are reach'd by Russia's withering hate.

Russia, that on his throne of adamant,
 Consults what nation's breast shall next be gored :
 He on Polonia's Golgotha will plant
 His standard fresh ; and, horde succeeding horde,
 On patriot tomb-stones he will whet the sword,
 For more stupendous slaughters of the free.
 Then Europe's realms, when their best blood is pour'd,
 Shall miss thee, Poland ! as they bend the knee,
 All—all in grief, but none in glory, likening thee.

Why smote ye not the Giant whilst he reel'd ?
 O fair occasion, gone for ever by !
 To have lock'd his lances in their northern field,
 Innocuous as the phantom chivalry
 That flames and hurtles from yon boreal sky !
 Now wave thy pennon, Russia, o'er the land
 Once Poland ; build thy bristling castles high ;
 Dig dungeons deep ; for Poland's wrested brand
 Is now a weapon new to widen thy command—

An awful width ! Norwegian woods shall build
 His fleets ; the Swede his vassal, and the Dane ;
 The glebe of fifty kingdoms shall be till'd
 To feed his dazzling, desolating train,
 Camp'd sumless, 'twixt the Black and Baltic main :
 Brute hosts, I own ; but Sparta could not write,
 And Rome, half-barbarous, bound Achaia's chain :
 So Russia's spirit, 'midst Slavonic night,
 Burns with a fire more dread than all your polish'd light.

But Russia's limbs (so blinded statesmen speak)
 Are crude, and too colossal to cohere.
 O, lamentable weakness ! reckoning weak
 The stripling Titan, strengthening year by year.
 What implement lacks he for war's career,
 That grows on earth, or in its floods and mines,
 (Eighth sharer of the inhabitable sphere)
 Whom Persia bows to, China ill confines,
 And India's homage waits, when Albion's star declines !

But time will teach the Russ, ev'n conquering War
 Has handmaid arts : ay, ay, the Russ will woo
 All sciences that speed Bellona's car,
 All murder's tactic arts, and win them too ;
 But never holier Muses shall imbue
 His breast, that's made of nature's basest clay :
 The sabre, knout, and dungeon's vapour blue
 His laws and ethics : far from him away
 Are all the lovely Nine, that breathe but Freedom's day.

Say, ev'n his serfs, half-humanized, should learn
 Their human rights,—will Mars put out his flame
 In Russian bosoms? no, he'll bid them burn
 A thousand years for nought but martial fame,
 Like Romans:—yet forgive me, Roman name!
 Rome could impart what Russia never can;
 Proud civic rights to salve submission's shame.
 Our strife is coming; but in freedom's van
 The Polish eagle's fall is big with fate to man.

Proud bird of old! Mohammed's moon recoil'd
 Before thy swoop: had we been timely bold,
 That swoop, still free, had stunn'd the Russ, and foil'd
 Earth's new oppressors, as it foil'd her old.
 Now thy majestic eyes are shut and cold:
 And colder still Polonia's children find
 The sympathetic hands, that we outhold.
 But, Poles, when we are gone, the world will mind,
 Ye bore the brunt of fate, and bled for humankind.

So hallowedly have ye fulfill'd your part,
 My pride repudiates ev'n the sigh that blends
 With Poland's name—name written on my heart.
 My heroes, my grief-consecrated friends!
 Your sorrow, in nobility, transcends
 Your conqueror's joy: his cheek may blush; but shame
 Can tinge not yours, though exile's tear descends;
 Nor would ye change your conscience, cause, and name,
 For his, with all his wealth, and all his felon fame.

Thee, Niemciewitz, whose song of stirring power
 The Czar forbids to sound in Polish lands ;
 Thee, Czartoryski, in thy banish'd bower,
 The patricide, who in thy palace stands,
 May envy ; proudly may Polonia's bands
 Throw down their swords at Europe's feet in scorn,
 Saying—" Russia from the metal of these brands
 Shall forge the fetters of your sons unborn ;
 Our setting star is your misfortunes' rising morn."

LINES

ON LEAVING A SCENE IN BAVARIA.

ADIEU the woods and waters' side,
 Imperial Danube's rich domain !
 Adieu the grotto, wild and wide,
 The rocks abrupt, and grassy plain !
 For pallid Autumn once again
 Hath swell'd each torrent of the hill ;
 Her clouds collect, her shadows sail,
 And watery winds that sweep the vale
 Grow loud and louder still.

But not the storm, dethroning fast
Yon monarch oak of massy pile ;
Nor river roaring to the blast
Around its dark and desert isle ;
Nor church-bell tolling to beguile
The cloud-born thunder passing by,
Can sound in discord to my soul :
Roll on, ye mighty waters, roll !
And rage, thou darkened sky !

Thy blossoms now no longer bright ;
Thy wither'd woods no longer green ;
Yet, Eldurn shore, with dark delight
I visit thy unlovely scene !
For many a sunset hour serene
My steps have trod thy mellow dew ;
When his green light the glow-worm gave,
When Cynthia from the distant wave
Her twilight anchor drew,

And plough'd, as with a swelling sail,
The billowy clouds and starry sea ;
Then while thy hermit nightingale
Sang on his fragrant apple-tree,—
Romantic, solitary, free,
The visitant of Eldurn's shore,
On such a moonlight mountain stray'd,
As echoed to the music made
By Druid harps of yore.

Around thy savage hills of oak,
 Around thy waters bright and blue,
No hunter's horn the silence broke,
 No dying shriek thine echo knew ;
 But safe, sweet Eldurn woods, to you
The wounded wild deer ever ran,
 Whose myrtle bound their grassy cave,
 Whose very rocks a shelter gave
From blood-pursuing man.

Oh heart effusions, that arose
 From nightly wanderings cherish'd here ;
To him who flies from many woes,
 Even homeless deserts can be dear !
 The last and solitary cheer
Of those that own no earthly home,
 Say—is it not, ye banish'd race,
 In such a loved and lonely place
Companionless to roam ?

Yes ! I have loved thy wild abode,
 Unknown, unplough'd, untrodden shore :
Where scarce the woodman finds a road,
 And scarce the fisher plies an oar ;
 For man's neglect I love thee more ;
That art nor avarice intrude
 To tame thy torrent's thunder-shock,
 Or prune thy vintage of the rock
Magnificently rude.

Unheeded spreads thy blossom'd bud
 Its milky bosom to the bee ;
 Unheeded falls along the flood
 Thy desolate and aged tree.
 Forsaken scene, how like to thee
 The fate of unbefriended Worth !
 Like thine her fruit dishonour'd falls ;
 Like thee in solitude she calls
 A thousand treasures forth.

Oh ! silent spirit of the place,
 If, lingering with the ruin'd year,
 Thy hoary form and awful face
 I yet might watch and worship here !
 Thy storm were music to mine ear,
 Thy wildest walk a shelter given
 Sublimer thoughts on earth to find,
 And share, with no unhallow'd mind,
 The majesty of heaven.

What though the bosom friends of Fate,—
 Prosperity's unweaned brood,—
 Thy consolations cannot rate,
 O self-dependent solitude !
 Yet with a spirit unsubdued,
 Though darken'd by the clouds of Care,
 To worship thy congenial gloom,
 A pilgrim to the Prophet's tomb
 The Friendless shall repair.

On him the world hath never smiled
Or look'd but with accusing eye ;—
All-silent goddess of the wild,
To thee that misanthrope shall fly !
I hear his deep soliloquy,
I mark his proud but ravaged form,
As stern he wraps his mantle round,
And bids, on winter's bleakest ground,
Defiance to the storm.

Peace to his banish'd heart, at last,
In thy dominions shall descend,
And, strong as beechwood in the blast,
His spirit shall refuse to bend ;
Enduring life without a friend,
The world and falsehood left behind,
Thy votary shall bear elate,
(Triumphant o'er opposing Fate,)
His dark inspired mind.

But dost thou, Folly, mock the Muse
A wanderer's mountain walk to sing,
Who shuns a warring world, nor woos
The vulture cover of its wing ?
Then fly, thou cowering, shivering thing,
Back to the fostering world beguiled,
To waste in self-consuming strife
The loveless brotherhood of life,
Reviling and reviled !

Away, thou lover of the race
That hither chased yon weeping deer !
If Nature's all majestic face
More pitiless than man's appear ;
Or if the wild winds seem more drear
Than man's cold charities below,
Behold around his peopled plains,
Where'er the social savage reigns,
Exuberance of woe !

His art and honours wouldst thou seek
Emboss'd on grandeur's giant walls ?
Or hear his moral thunders speak
Where senates light their airy halls,
Where man his brother man enthralls ;
Or sends his whirlwind warrants forth
To rouse the slumbering fiends of war,
To dye the blood-warm waves afar,
And desolate the earth ?

From clime to clime pursue the scene,
And mark in all thy spacious way,
Where'er the tyrant man has been,
There Peace, the cherub, cannot stay ;
In wilds and woodlands far away
She builds her solitary bower,
Where only anchorites have trod,
Or friendless men, to worship God,
Have wander'd for an hour.

In such a far forsaken vale,—
 And such, sweet Eldurn vale, is thine,—
 Afflicted nature shall inhale
 Heaven-borrow'd thoughts and joys divine ;
 No longer wish, no more repine
 For man's neglect or woman's scorn ;—
 Then wed thee to an exile's lot,
 For if the world hath loved thee not,
 Its absence may be borne.

THE DEATH-BOAT OF HELIGOLAND.

CAN restlessness reach the cold sepulchred head ?—
 Ay, the quick have their sleep-walkers, so have the dead.
 There are brains, though they moulder, that dream in the tomb,
 And that maddening forehear the last trumpet of doom,
 Till their corpses start sheeted to revel on earth,
 Making horror more deep by the semblance of mirth :
 By the glare of new-lighted volcanoes they dance,
 Or at mid-sea appal the chill'd mariner's glance.
 Such, I wot, was the band of cadaverous smile
 Seen ploughing the night-surge of Heligo's isle.

The foam of the Baltic had sparkled like fire,
 And the red moon look'd down with an aspect of ire ;
 But her beams on a sudden grew sick-like and grey,
 And the mews that had slept clang'd and shriek'd far away—
 And the buoys and the beacons extinguish'd their light,
 As the boat of the stony-eyed dead came in sight,

High bounding from billow to billow ; each form
Had its shroud like a plaid flying loose to the storm ;
With an oar in each pulseless and icy-cold hand,
Fast they plough'd by the lee-shore of Heligoland,
Such breakers as boat of the living ne'er cross'd ;
Now surf-sunk for minutes again they uptoss'd ;
And with livid lips shouted reply o'er the flood
To the challenging watchman that curdled his blood—
' We are dead—we are bound from our graves in the west,
First to Hecla, and then to ——' Unmeet was the rest
For man's ear. The old abbey bell thunder'd its clang,
And their eyes gleam'd with phosphorous light as it rang :
Ere they vanished, they stopp'd, and gazed silently grim,
Till the eye could define them, garb, feature, and limb.

Now who were those roamers ?—of gallows or wheel
Bore they marks, or the mangling anatomist's steel ?
No, by magistrates' chains 'mid their grave-clothes you saw
They were felons too proud to have perish'd by law :
But a ribbon that hung where a rope should have been,
'Twas the badge of their faction, its hue was not green,
Showed them men who had trampled and tortured and driven
To rebellion the fairest Isle breathed on by Heaven,—
Men whose heirs would yet finish the tyrannous task,
If the Truth and the Time had not dragg'd off their mask.
They parted—but not till the sight might discern
A scutcheon distinct at their pinnace's stern,
Where letters emblazon'd in blood-colour'd flame,
Named their faction—I blot not my page with its name.

SONG.

WHEN LOVE came first to earth, the SPRING
Spread rose-beds to receive him,
And back he vow'd his flight he'd wing
To Heaven, if she should leave him.

But SPRING departing, saw his faith
Pledged to the next new comer—
He revell'd in the warmer breath
And richer bowers of SUMMER.

Then sportive AUTUMN claim'd by rights
 An Archer for her lover,
 And even in WINTER's dark cold nights
 A charm he could discover.

Her routs and balls, and fireside joy,
 For this time were his reasons—
 In short, Young Love's a gallant boy,
 That likes all times and seasons.

SONG.

EARL MARCH look'd on his dying child,
 And smit with grief to view her—
 The youth, he cried, whom I exiled,
 Shall be restored to woo her.

She's at the window many an hour
 His coming to discover :
 And he look'd up to Ellen's bower,
 And she look'd on her lover—

But ah ! so pale, he knew her not,
 Though her smile on him was dwelling.
 And am I then forgot—forgot ?—
 It broke the heart of Ellen.

In vain he weeps, in vain he sighs,
Her cheek is cold as ashes ;
Nor love's own kiss shall wake those eyes
To lift their silken lashes.

SONG.

WHEN NAPOLEON was flying
From the field of Waterloo,
A British soldier dying
To his brother bade adieu !

“ And take,” he said, “ this token
To the maid that owns my faith,
With the words that I have spoken
In affection's latest breath.”

Sore mourn'd the brother's heart,
When the youth beside him fell ;
But the trumpet warn'd to part,
And they took a sad farewell.

There was many a friend to lose him,
For that gallant soldier sigh'd ;
But the maiden of his bosom
Wept when all their tears were dried.

LINES TO JULIA M——.

SENT WITH A COPY OF THE AUTHOR'S POEMS.

SINCE there is magic in your look
 And in your voice a witching charm,
 As all our hearts consenting tell,
 Enchantress, smile upon my book,
 And guard its lays from hate and harm
 By beauty's most resistless spell.

The sunny dew-drop of thy praise,
 Young day-star of the rising time,
 Shall with its odoriferous morn
 Refresh my sere and wither'd bays.
 Smile, and I will believe my rhyme
 Shall please the beautiful unborn.

Go forth, my pictured thoughts, and rise
 In traits and tints of sweeter tone,
 When Julia's glance is o'er ye flung ;
 Glow, gladden, linger in her eyes,
 And catch a magic not your own,
 Read by the music of her tongue.

DRINKING SONG OF MUNICH.

SWEET Iser ! were thy sunny realm
 And flowery gardens mine,
 Thy waters I would shade with elm
 To prop the tender vine ;
 My golden flagons I would fill
 With rosy draughts from every hill ;
 And under every myrtle bower,
 My gay companions should prolong
 The laugh, the revel, and the song,
 To many an idle hour.

Like rivers crimson'd with the beam
 Of yonder planet bright,
 Our balmy cups should ever stream
 Profusion of delight ;
 No care should touch the mellow heart,
 And sad or sober none depart ;
 For wine can triumph over woe,
 And Love and Bacchus, brother powers,
 Could build in Iser's sunny bowers
 A paradise below.

LINES

ON THE DEPARTURE OF EMIGRANTS FOR NEW SOUTH WALES.

ON England's shore I saw a pensive band,
 With sails unfurl'd for earth's remotest strand,
 Like children parting from a mother, shed
 Tears for the home that could not yield them bread ;
 Grief mark'd each face receding from the view,
 'Twas grief to nature honourably true.
 And long, poor wanderers o'er the ecliptic deep,
 The song that names but home shall make you weep ;
 Oft shall ye fold your flocks by stars above
 In that far world, and miss the stars ye love ;
 Oft when its tuneless birds scream round forlorn,
 Regret the lark that gladdens England's morn,
 And, giving England's names to distant scenes,
 Lament that earth's extension intervenes.

But cloud not yet too long, industrious train,
 Your solid good with sorrow nursed in vain :
 For has the heart no interest yet as bland
 As that which binds us to our native land ?
 The deep-drawn wish, when children crown our hearth,
 To hear the cherub-chorus of their mirth,
 Undamp'd by dread that want may e'er unhouse,
 Or servile misery knit those smiling brows :
 The pride to rear an independent shed,
 And give the lips we love unborrow'd bread :

To see a world, from shadowy forests won,
In youthful beauty wedded to the sun ;
To skirt our home with harvests widely sown,
And call the blooming landscape all our own,
Our children's heritage, in prospect long.
These are the hopes, high-minded hopes and strong,
That beckon England's wanderers o'er the brine,
To realms where foreign constellations shine ;
Where streams from undiscover'd fountains roll,
And winds shall fan them from th' Antarctic pole.
And what though doom'd to shores so far apart
From England's home, that ev'n the homesick heart
Quails, thinking, ere that gulf can be recross'd,
How large a space of fleeting life is lost :
Yet there, by time, their bosoms shall be changed,
And strangers once shall cease to sigh estranged,
But jocund in the year's long sunshine roam,
That yields their sickle twice its harvest-home.

There, marking o'er his farm's expanding ring
New fleeces whiten and new fruits upspring,
The grey-hair'd swain, his grandchild sporting round,
Shall walk at eve his little empire's bound,
Emblazed with ruby vintage, ripening corn,
And verdant rampart of acacian thorn,
While, mingling with the scent his pipe exhales,
The orange-grove's and fig-tree's breath prevails ;
Survey with pride beyond a monarch's spoil,
His honest arm's own subjugated soil ;

And summing all the blessings God has given,
Put up his patriarchal prayer to Heaven,
That when his bones shall here repose in peace,
The scions of his love may still increase,
And o'er a land where life has ample room,
In health and plenty innocently bloom.

Delightful land, in wildness ev'n benign,
The glorious past is ours, the future thine !
As in a cradled Hercules, we trace
The lines of empire in thine infant face.
What nations in thy wide horizon's span
Shall teem on tracts untrodden yet by man !
What spacious cities with their spires shall gleam,
Where now the panther laps a lonely stream,
And all but brute or reptile life is dumb !
Land of the free ! thy kingdom is to come,
Of states, with laws from Gothic bondage burst,
And creeds by charter'd priesthoods unaccurst :
Of navies, hoisting their emblazon'd flags,
Where shipless seas now wash unbeacon'd crags ;
Of hosts review'd in dazzling files and squares,
Their pennon'd trumpets breathing native airs,—
For minstrels thou shalt have of native fire,
And maids to sing the songs themselves inspire :—
Our very speech, methinks, in after-time,
Shall catch th' Ionian blandness of thy clime ;
And whilst the light and luxury of thy skies

Give brighter smiles to beauteous woman's eyes,
The Arts, whose soul is love, shall all spontaneous rise.
Untrack'd in deserts lies the marble mine,
Undug the ore that midst thy roofs shall shine ;
Unborn the hands—but born they are to be—
Fair Australasia, that shall give to thee
Proud temple-domes, with galleries winding high,
So vast in space, so just in symmetry,
They widen to the contemplating eye,
With colonnaded aisles in long array,
And windows that enrich the flood of day
O'er tessellated pavements, pictures fair,
And niched statues breathing golden air.
Nor there, whilst all that's seen bids Fancy swell,
Shall Music's voice refuse to seal the spell ;
But choral hymns shall wake enchantment round,
And organs yield their tempests of sweet sound.

Meanwhile, ere Arts triumphant reach their goal,
How blest the years of pastoral life shall roll !
Ev'n should some wayward hour the settler's mind
Brood sad on scenes for ever left behind,
Yet not a pang that England's name imparts,
Shall touch a fibre of his childrens' hearts :
Bound to that native land by nature's bond,
Full little shall their wishes rove beyond
Its mountains blue, and melon-skirted streams,
Since childhood loved and dreamt of in their dreams.

How many a name, to us uncouthly wild,
Shall thrill that region's patriotic child,
And bring as sweet thoughts o'er his bosom's chords,
As aught that's named in song to us affords !
Dear shall that river's margin be to him,
Where sportive first he bathed his boyish limb,
Or petted birds, still brighter than their bowers,
Or twined his tame young kangaroo with flowers.
But more magnetic yet to memory
Shall be the sacred spot, still blooming nigh,
The bower of love, where first his bosom burn'd,
And smiling passion saw its smile return'd.

Go forth and prosper then, emprising band :
May He, who in the hollow of his hand
The ocean holds, and rules the whirlwind's sweep,
Assuage its wrath, and guide you on the deep!

LINES

ON REVISITING CATHCART.

OH! scenes of my childhood, and dear to my heart,
 Ye green waving woods on the margin of Cart,
 How blest in the morning of life I have stray'd,
 By the stream of the vale and the grass-cover'd glade!

Then, then every rapture was young and sincere,
 Ere the sunshine of bliss was bedimm'd by a tear,
 And a sweeter delight every scene seem'd to lend,
 That the mansion of peace was the home of a FRIEND.

Now the scenes of my childhood and dear to my heart,
 All pensive I visit, and sigh to depart?
 Their flowers seem to languish, their beauty to cease,
 For a stranger inhabits the mansion of peace.

But hush'd be the sigh that untimely complains,
 While Friendship and all its enchantment remains,
 While it blooms like the flower of a winterless clime,
 Untainted by chance, unabated by time.

THE CHERUBS.

SUGGESTED BY AN APOLOGUE IN THE WORKS OF FRANKLIN.

Two spirits reach'd this world of ours :
 The lightning's locomotive powers
 Were slow to their agility :
 In broad day-light they moved incog.,
 Enjoying, without mist or fog,
 Entire invisibility.

The one, a simple cherub lad,
 Much interest in our planet had,
 Its face was so romantic ;
 He couldn't persuade himself that man
 Was such as heavenly rumours ran,
 A being base and frantic.

The elder spirit, wise and cool,
 Brought down the youth as to a school ;
 But strictly on condition,
 Whatever they should see or hear,
 With mortals not to interfere ;
 'Twas not in their commission.

They reach'd a sovereign city proud,
 Whose emperor pray'd to God aloud,
 With all his people kneeling,
 And priests perform'd religious rites :
 "Come," said the younger of the sprites,
 "This shows a pious feeling."

YOUNG SPIRIT.

"Ar'n't these a decent godly race?"

OLD SPIRIT.

"The dirtiest thieves on Nature's face."

YOUNG SPIRIT.

"But hark, what cheers they're giving
 Their emperor?—And is he a thief?"

OLD SPIRIT.

"Ay, and a cut-throat too ;—in brief,
 THE GREATEST SCOUNDREL LIVING."

YOUNG SPIRIT.

"But say, what were they praying for,
 This people and their emperor?"

OLD SPIRIT.

"—Why, but for God's assistance
 To help their army, late sent out :
 And what that army is about,
 You'll see at no great distance."

On wings outspeeding mail or post,
 Our sprites o'ertook the Imperial host,
 In massacres it wallow'd :
 A noble nation met its hordes,
 But broken fell their cause and swords,
 Unfortunate, though hallow'd.

They saw a late bombarded town,
 Its streets still warm with blood ran down ;
 Still smoked each burning rafter ;
 And hideously, 'midst rape and sack,
 The murderer's laughter answer'd back
 His prey's convulsive laughter.

They saw the captive eye the dead,
 With envy of his gory bed,—
 Death's quick reward of bravery :
 They heard the clank of chains, and then
 Saw thirty thousand bleeding men
 Dragg'd manacled to slavery.

“ Fie ! fie ! ” the younger heavenly spark
 Exclaim'd :—“ we must have miss'd our mark,
 And enter'd hell's own portals :
 Earth can't be stain'd with crimes so black ;
 Nay, sure, we've got among a pack
 Of fiends, and not of mortals ? ”

“No,” said the elder; “no such thing :
 Fiends are not fools enough to wring
 The necks of one another :—
 They know their interests too well :
 Men fight ; but every devil in hell
 Lives friendly with his brother.

And I could point you out some fellows,
 On this ill-fated planet Tellus,
 In royal power that revel ;
 Who, at the opening of the book
 Of judgment, may have cause to look
 With envy at the devil.”

Name but the devil, and he'll appear.
 Old Satan in a trice was near,
 With smutty face and figure :
 But spotless spirits of the skies,
 Unseen to e'en his saucer eyes,
 Could watch the fiendish nigger.

“Halloo !” he cried, “I smell a trick :
 A mortal supersedes Old Nick,
 The scourge of earth appointed :
 He robs me of my trade, outrants
 The blasphemy of hell, and vaunts
 Himself the Lord's anointed !

Folks make a fuss about my mischief :
 D——d fools; they tamely suffer this chief
 To play his pranks unbounded.”
 The cherubs flew ; but saw from high,
 At human inhumanity,
 The devil himself astounded.

SENEX'S SOLILOQUY ON HIS YOUTHFUL IDOL.

PLATONIC friendship at your years,
 Says Conscience, should content ye :
 Nay, name not fondness to her ears,
 The darling's scarcely twenty.

Yes, and she'll loathe me unforgiven,
 To dote thus out of season ;
 But beauty is a beam from heaven,
 That dazzles blind our reason.

I'll challenge Plato from the skies,
 Yes, from his spheres harmonic,
 To look in M—y C——'s eyes,
 And try to be Platonic.

TO SIR FRANCIS BURDETT,

ON HIS SPEECH DELIVERED IN PARLIAMENT, AUGUST 7, 1832, RESPECTING THE FOREIGN POLICY OF GREAT BRITAIN.

BURDETT, enjoy thy justly foremost fame,
Through good and ill report—through calm and storm—
For forty years the pilot of reform !
But that which shall afresh entwine thy name
With patriot laurels never to be sere,
Is that thou hast come nobly forth to chide
Our slumbering statesmen for their lack of pride—
Their flattery of Oppressors, and their fear—
When Britain's lifted finger, and her frown,
Might call the nations up, and cast their tyrants down !

Invoke the scorn—Alas ! too few inherit
The scorn for despots cherish'd by our sires,
That baffled Europe's persecuting fires,
And shelter'd helpless states !—Recal that spirit,
And conjure back Old England's haughty mind—
Convert the men who waver now, and pause
Between their love of self and humankind ;
And move, Amphion-like, those hearts of stone—
The hearts that have been deaf to Poland's dying groan !

Tell them, we hold the Rights of Man too dear,
 To bless ourselves with lonely freedom blest ;
 But could we hope, with sole and selfish breast,
 To breathe untroubled Freedom's atmosphere ?—
 Suppose we wish'd it ? England could not stand
 A lone oasis in the desert ground
 Of Europe's slavery ; from the waste around
 Oppression's fiery blast and whirling sand
 Would reach and scathe us ! No ; it may not be :
 Britannia and the world conjointly must be free !

Burdett, demand why Britons send abroad
 Soft greetings to th' infanticidal Czar,
 The Bear on Poland's babes that wages war.
 Once, we are told, a mother's shriek o'erawed
 A lion, and he dropt her lifted child ;
 But Nicholas, whom neither God nor law,
 Nor Poland's shrieking mothers, overawe,
 Outholds to us his friendship's gory clutch :
 Shrink, Britain—shrink, my king and country, from the touch !

He prays to Heaven for England's king, he says—
 And dares he to the God of mercy kneel,
 Besmear'd with massacres from head to heel ?
 No ; Moloch is his god—to him he prays ;
 And if his weird-like prayers had power to bring
 An influence, their power would be to curse.

His hate is baleful, but his love is worse—
 A serpent's slaver deadlier than its sting !
 Oh, feeble statesmen—ignominious times,
 That lick the tyrant's feet, and smile upon his crimes !

ODE TO THE GERMANS.

THE spirit of Britannia
 Invokes, across the main,
 Her sister Allemannia
 To burst the Tyrant's chain :
 By our kindred blood, she cries,
 Rise, Allemannians, rise,
 And hallow'd thrice the band
 Of our kindred hearts shall be,
 When your land shall be the land
 Of the free—of the free !

With Freedom's lion-banner
 Britannia rules the waves ;
 Whilst your BROAD STONE OF HONOUR*
 Is still the camp of slaves.
 For shame, for glory's sake,
 Wake, Allemannians wake,

* Ehrenbreitstein signifies, in German, " the broad stone of honour."

And thy tyrants now that whelm
 Half the world shall quail and flee,
 When your realm shall be the realm
 Of the free—of the free!

MARS owes to you his thunder*
 That shakes the battle field,
 Yet to break your bonds asunder
 No martial bolt has peal'd.
 Shall the laurel'd land of art
 Wear shackles on her heart?
 No! the clock ye framed to tell,
 By its sound, the march of time;
 Let it clang oppression's knell
 O'er your clime—o'er your clime!

The press's magic letters,
 That blessing ye brought forth,—
 Behold! it lies in fetters
 On the soil that gave it birth:
 But the trumpet must be heard,
 And the charger must be spurr'd;
 For your father Armin's Sprite
 Calls down from heaven, that ye
 Shall gird you for the fight,
 And be free!—and be free!

* Germany invented gunpowder, clock-making, and printing.

LINES

ON A PICTURE OF A GIRL IN THE ATTITUDE OF PRAYER.

By the Artist Gruse, in the possession of Lady Stepney.

WAS man e'er doom'd that beauty made
 By mimic art should haunt him ;
 Like Orpheus, I adore a shade,
 And dote upon a phantom.

Thou maid that in my inmost thought
 Art fancifully sainted,
 Why liv'st thou not—why art thou nought
 But canvas sweetly painted ?

Whose looks seem lifted to the skies,
 Too pure for love of mortals—
 As if they drew angelic eyes
 To greet thee at heaven's portals.

Yet loveliness has here no grace,
 Abstracted or ideal—
 Art ne'er but from a living face
 Drew looks so seeming real.

What wert thou, maid?—thy life—thy name
Oblivion hides in mystery ;
Though from thy face my heart could frame
A long romantic history.

Transported to thy time I seem,
Though dust thy coffin covers—
And hear the songs, in fancy's dream,
Of thy devoted lovers.

How witching must have been thy breath—
How sweet the living charmer—
Whose every semblance after death
Can make the heart grow warmer !

Adieu, the charms that vainly move
My soul in their possession—
That prompt my lips to speak of love,
Yet rob them of expression.

Yet thee, dear picture, to have praised
Was but a poet's duty ;
And shame to him that ever gazed
Impassive on thy beauty.

LINES

ON THE VIEW FROM ST. LEONARD'S.

HAIL to thy face and odours, glorious Sea!
 'Twere thanklessness in me to bless thee not,
 Great beauteous Being! in whose breath and smile
 My heart beats calmer, and my very mind
 Inhales salubrious thoughts. How welcomer
 Thy murmurs than the murmurs of the world!
 Though like the world thou fluctuatest, thy din
 To me is peace, thy restlessness repose.
 Ev'n gladly I exchange yon spring-green lanes
 With all the darling field-flowers in their prime,
 And gardens haunted by the nightingale's
 Long trills and gushing ecstasies of song,
 For these wild headlands, and the sea-mew's clang—

With thee beneath my windows, pleasant Sea,
 I long not to o'erlook earth's fairest glades
 And green savannahs—Earth has not a plain
 So boundless or so beautiful as thine;
 The eagle's vision cannot take it in:
 The lightning's wing, too weak to sweep its space,

Sinks half-way o'er it like a wearied bird :
 It is the mirror of the stars, where all
 Their hosts within the concave firmament,
 Gay marching to the music of the spheres,
 Can see themselves at once.

Nor on the stage

Of rural landscape are there lights and shades
 Of more harmonious dance and play than thine.
 How vividly this moment brightens forth,
 Between grey parallel and leaden breadths,
 A belt of hues that stripes thee many a league,
 Flush'd like the rainbow ; or the ringdove's neck,
 And giving to the glancing sea-bird's wing
 The semblance of a meteor.

Mighty Sea !

Cameleon-like thou changest, but there's love
 In all thy change, and constant sympathy
 With yonder Sky—thy Mistress; from her brow
 Thou tak'st thy moods and wear'st her colours on
 Thy faithful bosom ; morning's milky white,
 Noon's sapphire, or the saffron glow of eve;
 And all thy balmier hours, fair Element,
 Have such divine complexion—crisp'd smiles,
 Luxuriant heavings, and sweet whisperings,
 That little is the wonder Love's own Queen
 From thee of old was fabled to have sprung—
 Creation's common ! which no human power
 Can parcel or inclose ; the lordliest floods

And cataracts that the tiny hands of man
 Can tame, conduct, or bound, are drops of dew
 To thee that could'st subdue the Earth itself,
 And brook'st commandment from the heavens alone
 For marshalling thy waves—

Yet, potent Sea !

How placidly thy moist lips speak ev'n now
 Along yon sparkling shingles. Who can be
 So fanciless as to feel no gratitude
 That power and grandeur can be so serene,
 Soothing the home-bound navy's peaceful way,
 And rocking ev'n the fisher's little bark
 As gently as a mother rocks her child ?—

The inhabitants of other worlds behold
 Our orb more lucid for thy spacious share
 On earth's rotundity ; and is he not
 A blind worm in the dust, great Deep, the man
 Who sees not or who seeing has no joy
 In thy magnificence ? What though thou art
 Unconscious and material, thou canst reach
 The inmost immaterial mind's recess,
 And with thy tints and motion stir its chords
 To music, like the light on Memnon's lyre !

The Spirit of the Universe in thee
 Is visible ; thou hast in thee the life—
 The eternal, graceful, and majestic life

Of nature, and the natural human heart
Is therefore bound to thee with holy love.

Earth has her gorgeous towns ; the earth-circling sea
Has spires and mansions more amusive still—
Men's volant homes that measure liquid space
On wheel or wing. The chariot of the land
With pain'd and panting steeds and clouds of dust
Has no sight-gladdening motion like these fair
Careerers with the foam beneath their bows,
Whose streaming ensigns charm the waves by day,
Whose carols and whose watch-bells cheer the night,
Moor'd as they cast the shadows of their masts
In long array, or hither flit and yond
Mysteriously with slow and crossing lights,
Like spirits on the darkness of the deep.

There is a magnet-like attraction in
These waters to the imaginative power
That links the viewless with the visible,
And pictures things unseen. To realms beyond
Yon highway of the world my fancy flies,
When by her tall and triple mast we know
Some noble voyager that has to woo
The trade-winds and to stem the ecliptic surge.
The coral groves—the shores of conch and pearl,
Where she will cast her anchor and reflect
Her cabin-window lights on warmer waves,

And under planets brighter than our own :
The nights of palmy isles, that she will see
Lit boundless by the fire-fly—all the smells
Of tropic fruits that will regale her—all
The pomp of nature, and the inspiriting
Varieties of life she has to greet,
Come swarming o'er the meditative mind.

True, to the dream of Fancy, Ocean has
His darker tints ; but where's the element
That chequers not its usefulness to man
With casual terror ? Scathes not Earth sometimes
Her children with Tartarean fires, or shakes
Their shrieking cities, and, with one last clang
Of bells for their own ruin, strews them flat
As riddled ashes—silent as the grave ?
Walks not Contagion on the Air itself ?
I should—old Ocean's Saturnalian days
And roaring nights of revelry and sport
With wreck and human woe—be loth to sing ;
For they are few and all their ills weigh light
Against his sacred usefulness, that bids
Our pensile globe revolve in purer air.
Here Morn and Eve with blushing thanks receive
Their freshening dews, gay fluttering breezes cool
Their wings to fan the brow of fever'd climes,
And here the Spring dips down her emerald urn
For showers to glad the earth.

Old Ocean was

Infinity of ages ere we breathed
Existence—and he will be beautiful
When all the living world that sees him now
Shall roll unconscious dust around the sun.
Quelling from age to age the vital throb
In human hearts, Death shall not subjugate
The pulse that swells in his stupendous breast,
Or interdict his minstrelsy to sound
In thundering concert with the quiring winds ;
But long as Man to parent Nature owns
Instinctive homage, and in times beyond
The power of thought to reach, bard after bard
Shall sing thy glory, BEATIFIC SEA.

THE DEAD EAGLE.

WRITTEN AT ORAN.

FALL'N as he is, this king of birds still seems Like royalty in ruins. Though his eyes
Are shut, that look undazzled on the sun,
He was the sultan of the sky, and earth
Paid tribute to his eyry. It was perch'd
Higher than human conqueror ever built

His banner'd fort. Where Atlas' top looks o'er
Zahara's desert to the equator's line :
From thence the winged despot mark'd his prey,
Above th' encampments of the Bedouins, ere
Their watchfires were extinct, or camels knelt
To take their loads, or horsemen scour'd the plain,
And there he dried his feathers in the dawn,
Whilst yet th' unwaken'd world was dark below.

There's such a charm in natural strength and power,
That human fancy has for ever paid
Poetic homage to the bird of Jove.
Hence, 'neath his image, Rome array'd her turms
And cohorts for the conquest of the world.
And figuring his flight, the mind is fill'd
With thoughts that mock the pride of wingless man.
True the carr'd aeronaut can mount as high ;
But what's the triumph of his volant art ?
A rash intrusion on the realms of air.
His helmless vehicle, a silken toy,
A bubble bursting in the thunder-cloud ;
His course has no volition, and he drifts
The passive plaything of the winds. Not such
Was this proud bird : he clove the adverse storm,
And cuff'd it with his wings. He stopp'd his flight
As easily as the Arab reins his steed,
And stood at pleasure 'neath Heaven's zenith, like
A lamp suspended from its azure dome.

Whilst underneath him the world's mountains lay
Like molehills, and her streams like lucid threads.
Then downward, faster than a falling star,
He near'd the earth, until his shape distinct
Was blackly shadow'd on the sunny ground ;
And deeper terror hush'd the wilderness,
To hear his nearer whoop. Then, up again
He soar'd and wheel'd. There was an air of scorn
In all his movements, whether he threw round
His crested head to look behind him ; or
Lay vertical and sportively display'd
The inside whiteness of his wing declined,
In gyres and undulations full of grace,
An object beautifying Heaven itself.

He—reckless who was victor, and above
The hearing of their guns—saw fleets engaged
In flaming combat. It was nought to him
What carnage, Moor or Christian, strew'd their decks.
But if his intellect had match'd his wings,
Methinks he would have scorn'd man's vaunted power
To plough the deep ; his pinions bore him down
To Algiers the warlike, or the coral groves,
That blush beneath the green of Bona's waves ;
And traversed in an hour a wider space
Than yonder gallant ship, with all her sails
Wooing the winds, can cross from morn till eve.
His bright eyes were his compass, earth his chart,

His talons anchor'd on the stormiest cliff,
 And on the very light-house rock he perch'd,
 When winds churn'd white the waves.

The earthquake's self

Disturb'd not him that memorable day,
 When, o'er yon table-land, where Spain had built
 Cathedrals, cannon'd forts, and palaces,
 A palsy-stroke of Nature shook Oran,
 Turning her city to a sepulchre,
 And strewing into rubbish all her homes ;
 Amidst whose traceable foundations now,
 Of streets and squares, the hyæna hides himself.
 That hour beheld him fly as careless o'er
 The stifled shrieks of thousands buried quick,
 As lately when he pounced the speckled snake,
 Coil'd in yon mallows and wide nettle fields
 That mantle o'er the dead old Spanish town.

Strange is the imagination's dread delight
 In objects link'd with danger, death, and pain !
 Fresh from the luxuries of polish'd life,
 The echo of these wilds enchanted me ;
 And my heart beat with joy when first I heard
 A lion's roar come down the Lybian wind,
 Across yon long, wide, lonely inland lake,
 Where boat ne'er sails from homeless shore to shore.

And yet Numidia's landscape has its spots
 Of pastoral pleasantness—though far between,
 The village planted near the Maraboot's
 Round roof has aye its feathery palm trees
 Pair'd, for in solitude they bear no fruits.
 Here nature's hues all harmonise—fields white
 With alatum, or blue with bugloss—banks
 Of glossy fennel, blent with tulips wild,
 And sunflowers, like a garment pranked with gold ;
 Acres and miles of opal asphodel,
 Where sports and couches the black-eyed gazelle.
 Here, too, the air's harmonious—deep-toned doves
 Coo to the fife-like carol of the lark ;
 And when they cease, the holy nightingale
 Winds up his long, long shakes of ecstasy,
 With notes that seem but the protracted sounds
 Of glassy runnels bubbling over rocks.

SONG.

To Love in my heart, I exclaim'd t'other morning,
 Thou hast dwelt here too long, little lodger, take warning ;
 Thou shalt tempt me no more from my life's sober duty,
 To go gadding, bewitch'd by the young eyes of beauty.
 For weary's the wooing, ah, weary,
 When an old man will have a young dearie.

The god left my heart, at its surly reflections,
But came back on pretext of some sweet recollections,
And he made me forget what I ought to remember,
That the rose-bud of June cannot bloom in November.

Ah ! Tom, 'tis all o'er with thy gay days—
Write psalms, and not songs for the ladies.

But time's been so far from my wisdom enriching,
That the longer I live, beauty seems more bewitching ;
And the only new lore my experience traces,
Is to find fresh enchantment in magical faces.

How weary is wisdom, how weary !
When one sits by a smiling young dearie !

And should she be wroth that my homage pursues her,
I will turn and retort on my lovely accuser ;
Who's to blame, that my heart by your image is haunted —
It is you, the enchantress—not I, the enchanted.

Would you have me behave more discreetly,
Beauty, look not so killingly sweetly.

WRITTEN IN A BLANK LEAF OF LA PEROUSE'S VOYAGES.

LOVED Voyager! his pages had a zest
 More sweet than fiction to my wondering breast,
 When, rapt in fancy, many a boyish day
 I track'd his wanderings o'er the watery way,
 Roam'd round the Aleutian isles in waking dreams,
 Or pluck'd the fleur-de-lys by Jesso's streams—
 Or gladly leap'd on that far Tartar strand,
 Where Europe's anchor ne'er had bit the sand,
 Where scarce a roving wild tribe cross'd the plain,
 Or human voice broke nature's silent reign;
 But vast and grassy deserts feed the bear,
 And sweeping deer-herds dread no hunter's snare.
 Such young delight his real records brought,
 His truth so touch'd romantic springs of thought,
 That all my after-life—his fate and fame
 Entwined romance with La Perouse's name.—
 Fair were his ships, expert his gallant crews,
 And glorious was th' emprise of La Perouse,—
 Humanely glorious! Men will weep for him,
 When many a guilty martial fame is dim:

He plough'd the deep to bind no captive's chain—
Pursued no rapine—strew'd no wreck with slain ;
And, save that in the deep themselves lie low,
His heroes pluck'd no wreath from human woe.
'Twas his the earth's remotest bound to scan,
Conciliating with gifts barbaric man—
Enrich the world's contemporaneous mind,
And amplify the picture of mankind.
Far on the vast Pacific—'midst those isles,
O'er which the earliest morn of Asia smiles,
He sounded and gave charts to many a shore
And gulf of Ocean new to nautic lore ;
Yet he that led Discovery o'er the wave,
Still fills himself an undiscover'd grave.
He came not back,—Conjecture's cheek grew pale,
Year after year—in no propitious gale,
His lily banner held its homeward way,
And Science sadden'd at her martyr's stay.
An age elapsed—no wreck told where or when
The chief went down with all his gallant men,
Or whether by the storm and wild sea flood
He perish'd, or by wilder men of blood—
The shuddering Fancy only guess'd his doom,
And doubt to Sorrow gave but deeper gloom.
An age elapsed—when men were dead or grey,
Whose hearts had mourn'd him in their youthful day ;
Fame traced on Mannicolo's shore at last,
The boiling surge had mounted o'er his mast.

The islesmen told of some surviving men,
But Christian eyes beheld them ne'er again.
Sad bourne of all his toils—with all his band—
To sleep, wreck'd, shroudless, on a savage strand !
Yet what is all that fires a hero's scorn
Of death?—the hope to live in hearts unborn :
Life to the brave is not its fleeting breath,
But worth—foretasting fame, that follows death.
That worth had La Perouse—that meed he won ;
He sleeps—his life's long stormy watch is done.
In the great deep, whose boundaries and space
He measured, Fate ordain'd his resting-place ;
But bade his fame, like th' Ocean rolling o'er
His relics—visit every earthly shore.
Fair Science on that Ocean's azure robe
Still writes his name in picturing the globe,
And paints—(what fairer wreath could glory twine ?)
His watery course—a world-encircling line.

*And such thy strength-inspiring aid that bore
The hardy Byron to his native shore—*

THE following picture of his own distress, given by BYRON in his simple and interesting narrative, justifies the description in page 5.

After relating the barbarity of the Indian cacique to his child, he proceeds thus:—"A day or two after we put to sea again, and crossed the great bay I mentioned we had been at the bottom of when we first hauled away to the westward. The land here was very low and sandy, and something like the mouth of a river which discharged itself into the sea, and which had been taken no notice of by us before, as it was so shallow that the Indians were obliged to take everything out of their canoes, and carry them over land. We rowed up the river four or five leagues, and then took into a branch of it that ran first to the eastward, and then to the northward: here it became much narrower, and the stream excessively rapid, so that we gained but little way, though we wrought very hard. At night we landed upon its banks, and had a most uncomfortable lodging, it being a perfect swamp, and we had nothing to cover us, though it rained excessively. The Indians were little better off than we, as there was no wood here to make their wigwams; so that all they could do was to prop up the bark, which they carry in the bottom of their canoes, and shelter themselves as well as they could to the leeward of it. Knowing the difficulties they had to encounter here, they had provided themselves with some seal; but we had not a morsel to eat, after the heavy fatigues of the day, excepting a sort of root we saw the Indians make use of, which was very disagreeable to the taste. We laboured all next day against the stream, and fared as we had done the day before. The next day brought us to the carrying place. Here was plenty of wood, but nothing to be got for sustenance. We passed this night, as we had frequently done, under a tree; but what we suffered at this time is not easy to be expressed. I had been three days at the oar without any kind of nourishment except the wretched root above mentioned. I had no shirt, for it had rotted off by bits. All my clothes consisted of a short grieko (something like a bear-skin), a piece of red cloth which had once been a waistcoat, and a ragged pair of trowsers, without shoes or stockings."

Among the negroes of the West Indies, Obi, or Orbiah, is the name of a magical power, which is believed by them to affect the object of its malignity with dismal calamities. Such a belief must undoubtedly have been deduced from the superstitious mythology of their kinsmen on the coast of Africa. I have, therefore, personified Obi as the evil spirit of the African, although the history of the African tribes mentions the evil spirit of their religious creed by a different appellation.

How long was Timour's iron sceptre sway'd,

To elucidate this passage, I shall subjoin a quotation from the preface to Letters from a Hindoo Rajah, a work of elegance and celebrity.

“The impostor of Mecca had established, as one of the principles of his doctrine, the merit of extending it either by persuasion, or the sword, to all parts of the earth. How steadily this injunction was adhered to by his followers, and with what success it was pursued, is well known to all who are in the least conversant in history.

“The same overwhelming torrent which had inundated the greater part of Africa, burst its way into the very heart of Europe; and covering many kingdoms of Asia with unbounded desolation, directed its baneful course to the flourishing provinces of Hindostan. Here these fierce and hardy adventurers, whose only improvement had been in the science of destruction, who added the fury of fanaticism to the ravages of war, found the great end of their conquest opposed by objects which neither the ardour of their persevering zeal, nor savage barbarity, could surmount. Multitudes were sacrificed by the cruel hand of religious persecution, and whole countries were deluged in blood, in the vain hope, that by the destruction of a part the remainder might be persuaded, or terrified, into the profession of Mahomedism. But all these sanguinary efforts were ineffectual; and at length, being fully convinced that, though they might extirpate, they could never hope to convert, any number of the Hindoos, they relinquished the impracticable idea with which they had entered upon their career of conquest, and contented themselves with the acquirement of the civil dominion and almost universal empire of Hindostan.”—Letters from a Hindoo Rajah, by Eliza Hamilton.

While famish'd nations died along the shore:

The following account of British conduct, and its consequences, in Bengal, will afford a sufficient idea of the fact alluded to in this passage:

After describing the monopoly of salt, betel-nut, and tobacco, the historian proceeds thus:—“Money in this current came but by drops; it could not quench the thirst of those who waited in India to receive it. An expedient, such as it was, remained to quicken its pace. The natives could live with little salt, but could not want food. Some of the agents saw themselves well situated for collecting the rice into stores; they did so. They knew the Gentoos would rather die than violate the principles of their religion by eating flesh. The alternative would therefore be between giving what they had, or dying. The inhabitants sunk;—they that cultivated the land, and saw the harvest at the disposal of others, planted in doubt—scarcity ensued. Then the monopoly was easier managed—sickness ensued. In some districts the languid living left the bodies of their numerous dead unburied.”—Short History of the English Transactions in the East Indies, p. 145.

Avatar is the word used to express his descent.

That gave the glacier tops their richest glow,

The sight of the glaciers of Switzerland, I am told, has often disappointed travellers who had perused the accounts of their splendour and sublimity given by Bourrit and other describers of Swiss scenery. Possibly Bourrit, who had spent his life in an enamoured familiarity with the beauties of Nature in Switzerland, may have leaned to the romantic side of description. One can pardon a man for a sort of idolatry of those imposing objects of Nature which heighten our ideas of the bounty of Nature or Providence, when we reflect that the glaciers—those seas of ice—are not only sublime, but useful: they are the inexhaustible reservoirs which supply the principal rivers of Europe; and their annual melting is in proportion to the summer heat which dries up those rivers and makes them need that supply.

That the picturesque grandeur of the glaciers should sometimes disappoint the traveller, will not seem surprising to any one who has been much in a mountainous country, and recollects that the beauty of Nature in such countries is not only variable, but capriciously dependent on the weather and sunshine. There are about four hundred different glaciers*, according to the computation of M. Bourrit, between Mont Blanc and the frontiers of the Tyrol. The full effect of the most lofty and picturesque of them can, of course, only be produced by the richest and warmest lights of the atmosphere; and the very heat which illuminates them must have a changing influence on many of their appearances. I imagine it is owing to this circumstance, namely, the casualty and changeableness of the appearance of some of the glaciers, that the impressions made by them on the minds of other and more transient travellers have been less enchanting than those described by M. Bourrit. On one occasion M. Bourrit seems even to speak of a past phenomenon, and certainly one which no other spectator attests in the same terms, when he says, that there once existed, between the Kandel Steig and Lauterbrun, "a passage amidst singular glaciers, sometimes resembling magical towns of ice, with pilasters, pyramids, columns, and obelisks, reflecting to the sun the most brilliant hues of the finest gems."—M. Bourrit's description of the Glacier of the Rhone is quite enchanting:—"To form an idea," he says, "of this superb spectacle, figure in your mind a scaffolding of transparent ice, filling a space of two miles, rising to the clouds, and darting flashes of light like the sun. Nor were the several parts less magnificent and surprising. One might see, as it were, the streets and buildings of a city, erected in the form of an amphitheatre, and embellished with pieces of water, cascades, and torrents. The effects were as prodigious as the immensity and the height;—the most beautiful azure—the most splendid white—the regular appearance of a thousand pyramids of ice, are more easy to be imagined than described.”—Bourrit, iii. 163.

From heights browsed by the bounding bouquetin ;

Laborde, in his “Tableau de la Suisse,” gives a curious account of this animal, the wild sharp cry and elastic movements of which must heighten the picturesque appearance of its haunts:—“Nature,” says Laborde, “has destined it to mountains covered with snow: if it is not exposed to keen cold, it becomes blind. Its agility in leaping much surpasses that of the chamois, and would appear incredible to those who have not seen it. There is not a mountain so high or steep to which it will not trust itself, provided it has room to place its feet; it can scramble along the highest wall, if its surface be rugged.”

*Their tribe, they said, their high degree,
Was sung in Tara's psallery;*

The pride of the Irish in ancestry was so great, that one of the O'Neals being told that Barret of Castlemonone had been there only 400 years, he replied—that he hated the clown as if he had come there but yesterday.

Tara was the place of assemblage and feasting of the petty princes of Ireland. Very splendid and fabulous descriptions are given by the Irish historians of the pomp and luxury of those meetings. The psallery of Tara was the grand national register of Ireland. The grand epoch of political eminence in the early history of the Irish is the reign of their great and favourite monarch, Ollam Fodlah, who reigned, according to Keating, about 950 years before the Christian æra. Under him was instituted the great Fes at Tara, which it is pretended was a triennial convention of the states, or a parliament; the members of which were the Druids, and other learned men, who represented the people in that assembly. Very minute accounts are given by Irish annalists of the magnificence and order of these entertainments; from which, if credible, we might collect the earliest traces of heraldry that occur in history. To preserve order and regularity in the great number and variety of the members who met on such occasions, the Irish historians inform us that, when the banquet was ready to be served up, the shield-bearers of the princes, and other members of the convention, delivered in their shields and targets, which were readily distinguished by the coats of arms emblazoned upon them. These were arranged by the grand marshal and principal herald, and hung upon the walls on the right side of the table; and, upon entering the apartments, each member took his seat under his respective shield or target, without the slightest disturbance. The concluding days of the meeting, it is allowed by the Irish antiquaries, were spent in very free excess of conviviality; but the first six, they say, were devoted to the examination and settlement of the annals of the kingdom. These were publicly rehearsed. When they had passed the approbation of the assembly, they were transcribed into the authentic chronicles of the nation, which was called the Register, or Psalter, of Tara.

Col. Vallancey gives a translation of an old Irish fragment, found in Trinity-college, Dublin, in which the palace of the above assembly is thus described, as it existed in the reign of Cormac:—

“In the reign of Cormac, the palace of Tara was nine hundred feet square; the diameter of the surrounding rath, seven dice or casts of a dart; it contained one hundred and fifty apartments; one hundred and fifty dormitories, or sleeping-rooms for guards, and sixty men in each; the height was twenty-seven cubits; there were one hundred and fifty common drinking-horns, twelve doors, and one thousand guests daily, besides princes, orators, and men of science, engravers of gold and silver, carvers, modellers, and nobles." The Irish description of the banqueting-hall is thus translated: "Twelve stalls or divisions in each wing; sixteen attendants on each side, and two to each table; one hundred guests in all."

And stemm'd De Bourgo's chivalry!

The house of O'Connor had a right to boast of their victories over the English. It was a chief of the O'Connor race who gave a check to the English champion De Courcy, so famous for his personal strength, and for cleaving a helmet at one blow of his sword, in the presence of the kings of France and England, when the French champion declined the combat with him. Though ultimately conquered by the English under De Bourgo, the O'Connors had also humbled the pride of that name on a memorable occasion: viz., when Walter De Bourgo, an ancestor of that De Bourgo who won the battle of Athunree, had become so insolent as to make excessive demands upon the territories of Connaught, and to bid defiance to all the rights and properties reserved by the Irish chiefs. Eath O'Connor, a near descendant of the famous Cathal, surnamed of the Bloody Hand, rose against the usurper, and defeated the English so severely, that their general died of chagrin after the battle.

Or beal-fires for your jubilee

The month of May is to this day called Mi Beal tiennie, i. e. the month of Beal's fire, in the original language of Ireland, and hence, I believe, the name of the Beltan festival in the Highlands. These fires were lighted on the summits of mountains (the Irish antiquaries say) in honour of the sun; and are supposed, by those conjecturing gentlemen, to prove the origin of the Irish from some nation who worshipped Baal or Belus. Many hills in Ireland still retain the name of Cnoc Greine, i. e. the Hill of the Sun; and on all are to be seen the ruins of druidical altars.

And play my clarshech by thy side.

The clarshech, or harp, the principal musical instrument of the Hibernian bards, does not appear to be of Irish origin, nor indigenous to any of the British islands.—The Britons undoubtedly were not acquainted with it during the residence of the Romans in their country, as in all their coins, on which musical instruments are represented, we see only the Roman lyre, and not the British teylin, or harp.

Bawn, from the Teutonic Bawen—to construct and secure with branches of trees, was so called because the primitive Celtic fortifications were made by digging a ditch, throwing up a rampart, and on the latter fixing stakes, which were interlaced with boughs of trees. This word is used by Spenser ; but it is inaccurately called by Mr. Todd, his annotator, an eminence.

To speak the malison of heaven.

If the wrath which I have ascribed to the heroine of this little piece should seem to exhibit her character as too unnaturally stripped of patriotic and domestic affections, I must beg leave to plead the authority of Corneille in the representation of a similar passion: I allude to the denunciation of Camille, in the tragedy of "Horace." When Horace, accompanied by a soldier bearing the three swords of the Curiatii, meets his sister, and invites her to congratulate him on his victory, she expresses only her grief, which he attributes at first only to her feelings for the loss of her two brothers; but when she bursts forth into reproaches against him as the murderer of her lover, the last of the Curiatii, he exclaims:

"O ciel! qui vit jamais une pareille rage!
Crois-tu donc que je sois insensible à l'outrage,
Que je souffre en mon sang ce mortel déshonneur?
Aime, aime cette mort qui fait notre bonheur;
Et préfère du moins au souvenir d'un homme
Ce que doit ta naissance aux intérêts de Rome."

At the mention of Rome, Camille breaks out into this apostrophe:

"Rome, l'unique objet de mon ressentiment!
Rome, à qui vient ton bras d'immoler mon amant!
Rome qui t'a vu naître et que ton cœur adore!
Rome enfin que je hais parce qu'elle t'honore!
Puissent tous ses voisins ensemble conjurés
Saper ses fondements encor mal assurés;
Et si ce n'est assez de toute l'Italie,
Que l'Orient contre elle à l'Occident s'allie;
Que cent peuples unis des bouts de l'univers

Voir le dernier Romain à son dernier soupir,
Moi seule en être cause, et mourir de plaisir!"

And go to Athunree! (I cried)

In the reign of Edward the Second, the Irish presented to Pope John the Twenty-second a memorial of their sufferings under the English, of which the language exhibits all the strength of despair. "Ever since the English (say they) first appeared upon our coasts, they entered our territories under a certain specious pretence of charity, and external hypocritical show of religion, endeavouring at the same time, by every artifice malice could suggest, to extirpate us root and branch, and without any other right than that of the strongest; they have so far succeeded by base fraudulence, and cunning, that they have forced us to quit our fair and ample habitations and inheritances, and to take refuge like wild beasts in the mountains, the woods, and the morasses of the country ;—nor even can the caverns and dens protect us against their insatiable avarice. They pursue us even into these frightful abodes ; endeavouring to dispossess us of the wild uncultivated rocks, and arrogate to themselves the PROPERTY OF EVERY PLACE ON WHICH we can stamp the figure of our feet.”

The greatest effort ever made by the ancient Irish to regain their native independence, was made at the time when they called over the brother of Robert Bruce from Scotland. William De Bourgo, brother to the Earl of Ulster, and Richard de Bermingham, were sent against the main body of the native insurgents, who were headed rather than commanded by Felim O'Connor. The important battle which decided the subjection of Ireland, took place on the 10th of August, 1315. It was the bloodiest that ever was fought between the two nations, and continued throughout the whole day, from the rising to the setting sun. The Irish fought with inferior discipline, but with great enthusiasm. They lost ten thousand men, among whom were twenty-nine chiefs of Connaught. Tradition states that, after this terrible day, the O'Connor family, like the Fabian, were so nearly exterminated, that throughout all Connaught not one of the name remained, except Felim's brother, who was capable of bearing arms.

Lochiel, the chief of the warlike clan of the Camerons, and descended from ancestors distinguished in their narrow sphere for great personal prowess, was a man worthy of a better cause and fate than that in which he embarked, the enterprise of the Stuarts in 1745. His memory is still fondly cherished among the Highlanders, by the appellation of the “gentle Lochiel ;” for he was famed for his social virtues as much as his martial and magnanimous (though mistaken) loyalty. His influence was so important among the Highland chiefs, that it depended on his joining with his clan whether the standard of Charles should be raised or not in 1745. Lochiel was himself too wise a man to be blind to the consequences of so hopeless an enterprise, but his sensibility to the point of honour overruled his wisdom. Charles appealed to his loyalty, and he could not brook the reproaches of his Prince. When Charles landed at Borrodale, Lochiel went to meet him, but on his way called at his brother's house (Cameron of Fassavern), and told him on what errand he was going ; adding, however, that he meant to dissuade the Prince from his enterprise. Fassavern advised him in that case to communicate his mind by letter to Charles. “No,” said Lochiel, “I think it due to my Prince to give him my reasons in person for refusing to join his standard.”—“Brother,” replied Fassavern, “I know you better than you know yourself : if the Prince once sets eyes on you, he will make you do what he pleases.” The interview accordingly took place ; and Lochiel, with many arguments, but in vain, pressed the Pretender to return to France, and reserve himself and his friends for a more favourable occasion, as he had come, by his own acknowledgment, without arms, or money, or adherents : or, at all events, to remain concealed till his friends should meet and deliberate what was best to be done. Charles, whose mind was wound up to the utmost impatience, paid no regard to this proposal, but answered, “that he was determined to put all to the hazard.” “In a few days,” said he, “I will erect the royal standard, and proclaim to the people of Great Britain, that Charles Stuart is come over to claim the crown of his ancestors, and to win it, or perish in the attempt. Lochiel, who my father has often told me was our firmest friend, may stay at home and learn from the newspapers the fate of his Prince."—"No," said Lochiel, "I will share the fate of my Prince, and so shall every man over whom nature or fortune hath given me any power."

The other chieftains who followed Charles embraced his cause with no better hopes. It engages our sympathy most strongly in their behalf, that no motive, but their fear to be reproached with cowardice or disloyalty, impelled them to the hopeless adventure. Of this we have an example in the interview of Prince Charles with Clanronald, another leading chieftain in the rebel army.

"Charles," says Home, "almost reduced to despair, in his discourse with Boisdale, addressed the two Highlanders with great emotion, and summing up his arguments for taking arms, conjured them to assist their Prince, their countryman, in his utmost need. Clanronald and his friend, though well inclined to the cause, positively refused, and told him that to take up arms without concert or support was to pull down certain ruin on their own heads. Charles persisted, argued, and implored. During this conversation (they were on shipboard) the parties walked backwards and forwards on the deck; a Highlander stood near them, armed at all points, as was then the fashion of his country. He was a younger brother of Kinloch Moidart, and had come off to the ship to enquire for news, not knowing who was aboard. When he gathered from their discourse that the stranger was the Prince of Wales; when he heard his chief and his brother refuse to take arms with their Prince, his colour went and came, his eyes sparkled, he shifted his place, and grasped his sword. Charles observed his demeanour, and turning briskly to him, called out, 'Will you assist me?'—'I will, I will,' said Ronald: 'though no other man in the Highlands should draw a sword, I am ready to die for you!' Charles, with a profusion of thanks to his champion, said, he wished all the Highlanders were like him. Without further deliberation, the two Macdonalds declared that they would also join, and use their utmost endeavours to engage their countrymen to take arms."—Home's Hist. Rebellion, p. 40.

*Lo anointed by Heaven with the vials of wrath,
Behold, where he flies on his desolate path!*

The lines allude to the many hardships of the royal sufferer.

An account of the second sight, in Irish called Taish, is thus given in Martin's Description of the Western Isles of Scotland.

"The second sight is a singular faculty of seeing an otherwise invisible object, without any previous means used by the person who sees it for that end. The vision makes such a lively impression upon the seers, that they neither see nor think of anything else except the vision as long as it continues ; and then they appear pensive or jovial according to the object which was represented to them.

“ At the sight of a vision the eyelids of the persons are erected, and the eyes continue staring until the object vanishes. This is obvious to others who are standing by when the persons happen to see a vision ; and occurred more than once to my own observation, and to others that were with me.

“ There is one in Skie, of whom his acquaintance observed, that when he sees a vision the inner part of his eyelids turns so far upwards, that, after the object disappears, he must draw them down with his fingers, and sometimes employ others to draw them down, which he finds to be much the easier way.

“ This faculty of the second sight does not lineally descend in a family, as some have imagined ; for I know several parents who are endowed with it, and their children are not ; and vice versâ. Neither is it acquired by any previous compact. And after strict inquiry, I could never learn from any among them, that this faculty was communicable to any whatsoever. The seer knows neither the object, time, nor place of a vision before it appears ; and the same object is often seen by different persons living at a considerable distance from one another. The true way of judging as to the time and circumstances is by observation ; for several persons of judgment who are without this faculty are more capable to judge of the design of a vision than a novice that is a seer. If an object appear in the day or night, it will come to pass sooner or later accordingly.

“ If an object is seen early in a morning, which is not frequent, it will be accomplished in a few hours afterwards ; if at noon, it will probably be accomplished that very day ; if in the evening, perhaps that night ; if after candles be lighted, it will be accomplished that night : the latter always an accomplishment by weeks, months, and sometimes years, according to the time of the night the vision is seen.

“ When a shroud is seen about one, it is a sure prognostic of death. The time is judged according to the height of it about the person ; for if it is not seen above the middle, death is not to be expected for the space of a year, and perhaps some months longer : and as it is frequently seen to ascend higher towards the head, death is concluded to be at hand within a few days, if not hours, as daily experience confirms. Examples of this kind were shown me, when the person of whom the observations were then made was in perfect health.

“ It is ordinary with them to see houses, gardens, and trees in places void of all these, and this in process of time is wont to be accomplished : as at Mogslot, in the Isle of Skie, where there were but a few sorry low houses, thatched with straw ; yet in a few years the vision, which appeared often, was accomplished by the building of several good houses in the very spot represented to the seers, and by the planting of orchards there.

“ To see a spark of fire is a forerunner of a dead child, to be seen in the arms of those persons ; of which there are several instances. To see a seat empty at the time of sitting in it, is a presage of that person's death quickly after it.

“ When a novice, or one that has lately obtained the second sight, sees a vision in the night-time without doors, and comes near a fire, he presently falls into a swoon.

“Some find themselves as it were in a crowd of people, having a corpse, which they carry along with them; and after such visions the seers come in sweating, and describe the vision that appeared. If there be any of their acquaintance among them, they give an account of their names, as also of the bearers; but they know nothing concerning the corpse.”

Horses and cows (according to the same credulous author) have certainly sometimes the same faculty; and he endeavours to prove it by the signs of fear which the animals exhibit, when second-sighted persons see visions in the same place.

“The seers (he continues) are generally illiterate and well-meaning people, and altogether void of design: nor could I ever learn that any of them ever made the least gain by it; neither is it reputable among them to have that faculty. Besides, the people of the Isles are not so credulous as to believe implicitly before the thing predicted is accomplished; but when it is actually accomplished afterwards, it is not in their power to deny it, without offering violence to their own sense and reason. Besides, if the seers were deceivers, can it be reasonable to imagine that all the islanders who have not the second sight should combine together, and offer violence to their understandings and senses, to enforce themselves to believe a lie from age to age? There are several persons among them whose title and education raise them above the suspicion of concurring with an impostor merely to gratify an illiterate contemptible set of persons; nor can reasonable persons believe that children, horses, and cows, should be pre-engaged in a combination in favour of the second sight.”—Martin's Description of the Western Isles of Scotland, p. 3. 11.

From merry mock-bird's song, —

The mocking-bird is of the form of, but larger than, the thrush; and the colours are a mixture of black, white, and grey. What is said of the nightingale by its greatest admirers is what may with more propriety apply to this bird, who, in a natural state, sings with very superior taste. Towards evening I have heard one begin softly, reserving its breath to swell certain notes, which by this means had a most astonishing effect. A gentleman in London had one of these birds for six years. During the space of a minute he was heard to imitate the woodlark, chaffinch, blackbird, thrush, and sparrow. In this country (America) I have frequently known the mocking-birds so engaged in this mimicry, that it was with much difficulty I could ever obtain an opportunity of hearing their own natural note. Some go so far as to say, that they have neither peculiar notes, nor favourite imitations. This may be denied. Their few natural notes resemble those of the (European) nightingale. Their song, however, has a greater compass and volume than the nightingale's, and they have the faculty of varying all intermediate notes in a manner which is truly delightful.—Ashe's Travels in America, vol. ii. p. 73.

And distant isles that hear the loud Corbrechtan roar!

The Corybrechtan, or Corbrechtan, is a whirlpool on the western coast of Scotland, near the island of Jura, which is heard at a prodigious distance.

Its name signifies the whirlpool of the Prince of Denmark ; and there is a tradition that a Danish prince once undertook, for a wager, to cast anchor in it. He is said to have used woollen instead of hempen ropes, for greater strength, but perished in the attempt. On the shores of Argyleshire, I have often listened with great delight to the sound of this vortex, at the distance of many leagues. When the weather is calm, and the adjacent sea scarcely heard on these picturesque shores, its sound, which is like the sound of innumerable chariots, creates a magnificent and fine effect.

Of buskin'd limb, and swarthy lineament ;

In the Indian tribes there is a great similarity in their colour, stature, &c. They are all, except the Snake Indians, tall in stature, straight, and robust. It is very seldom they are deformed, which has given rise to the supposition that they put to death their deformed children. Their skin is of a copper colour : their eyes large, bright, black, and sparkling, indicative of a subtle and discerning mind : their hair is of the same colour, and prone to be long, seldom or never curled. Their teeth are large and white ; I never observed any decayed among them, which makes their breath as sweet as the air they inhale.—Travels through America by Captains Lewis and Clarke, in 1804-5-6.

Peace be to thee ! my words this belt approve ;

The Indians of North America accompany every formal address to strangers, with whom they form or recognise a treaty of amity, with a present of a string, or belt, of wampum. Wampum (says Cadwallader Colden) is made of the large whelk shell, buccinum, and shaped like long beads ; it is the current money of the Indians.—History of the five Indian Nations, p. 34, New York edition.

Our wampum league thy brethren did embrace :

When they solicit the alliance, offensive, or defensive, of a whole nation, they send an embassy with a large belt of wampum and a bloody hatchet, inviting them to come and drink the blood of their enemies. The wampum made use of on these and other occasions, before their acquaintance with the Europeans, was nothing but small shells which they picked up by the sea-coasts, and on the banks of the lakes ; and now it is nothing but a kind of cylindrical beads, made of shells, white and black, which are esteemed among them as silver and gold are among us. The black they call the most valuable, and both together are their greatest riches and ornaments ; these among them answering all the end that money does amongst us. They have the art of stringing, twisting, and interweaving them into their belts, collars, blankets, and mocasins, &c. in ten thousand different sizes, forms, and figures, so as to be ornaments for every part of dress, and expressive to them of all their important transactions. They dye the wampum of various colours and shades, and mix and dispose them with great ingenuity and order, and so as to be significant among themselves of almost everything they please; so that by these their words are kept, and their thoughts communicated to one another, as ours are by writing. The belts that pass from one nation to another in all treaties, declarations, and important transactions, are very carefully preserved in the cabins of their chiefs, and serve not only as a kind of record or history, but as a public treasure.—Major Rogers's Account of North America.

As when the evil Manitou—

It is certain the Indians acknowledge one Supreme Being, or Giver of Life, who presides over all things; that is, the Great Spirit, and they look up to him as the source of good, from whence no evil can proceed. They also believe in a bad Spirit, to whom they ascribe great power; and suppose that through his power all the evils which befall mankind are inflicted. To him, therefore, they pray in their distresses, begging that he would either avert their troubles, or moderate them when they are no longer avoidable.

They hold also that there are good Spirits of a lower degree, who have their particular departments, in which they are constantly contributing to the happiness of mortals. These they suppose to preside over all the extraordinary productions of Nature, such as those lakes, rivers, and mountains that are of an uncommon magnitude; and likewise the beasts, birds, fishes, and even vegetables or stones, that exceed the rest of their species in size or singularity.—Clarke's Travels among the Indians.

*And I, the eagle of my tribe, have rush'd
With this lorn dove.—*

The testimony of all travellers among the American Indians who mention their hieroglyphics, authorises me in putting this figurative language in the mouth of Outalissi. The dove is among them, as elsewhere, an emblem of meekness; and the eagle, that of a bold, noble, and liberal mind. When the Indians speak of a warrior who soars above the multitude in person and endowments, they say, "he is like the eagle, who destroys his enemies, and gives protection and abundance to the weak of his own tribe."

Far differently, the mute Oneyda took, &c.

They are extremely circumspect and deliberate in every word and action ; nothing hurries them into any intemperate wrath, but that inveteracy to their enemies which is rooted in every Indian's breast. In all other instances they are cool and deliberate, taking care to suppress the emotions of the heart. If an Indian has discovered that a friend of his is in danger of being cut off by a lurking enemy, he does not tell him of his danger in direct terms as though he were in fear, but he first coolly asks him which way he is going that day, and having his answer, with the same indifference tells him that he has been informed that a noxious beast lies on the route he is going. This hint proves sufficient, and his friend avoids the danger with as much caution as though every design and motion of his enemy had been pointed out to him.

If an Indian has been engaged for several days in the chase, and by accident continued long without food, when he arrives at the hut of a friend, where he knows that his wants will be immediately supplied, he takes care not to show the least symptoms of impatience, or betray the extreme hunger that he is tortured with ; but on being invited in, sits contentedly down, and smokes his pipe with as much composure as if his appetite was cloyed and he was perfectly at ease. He does the same if among strangers. This custom is strictly adhered to by every tribe ; as they esteem it a proof of fortitude, and think the reverse would entitle them to the appellation of old women.

If you tell an Indian that his children have greatly signalised themselves against an enemy, have taken many scalps, and brought home many prisoners, he does not appear to feel any strong emotions of pleasure on the occasion ; his answer generally is, " They have done well," and he makes but very little inquiry about the matter ; on the contrary, if you inform him that his children are slain or taken prisoners, he makes no complaints ; he only replies, " It is unfortunate :"—and for some time asks no questions about how it happened.—Lewis and Clarke's Travels.

His calumet of peace, &c.

Nor is the calumet of less importance or less revered than the wampum in many transactions relative both to peace and war. The bowl of this pipe is made of a kind of soft red stone, which is easily wrought and hollowed out ; the stem is of cane, alder, or some kind of light wood, painted with different colours, and decorated with the heads, tails and feathers of the most beautiful birds. The use of the calumet is to smoke either tobacco or some bark, leaf, or herb, which they often use instead of it, when they enter into an alliance on any serious occasion, or solemn engagements: this being among them the most sacred oath that can be taken, the violation of which is esteemed most infamous, and deserving of severe punishment from Heaven. When they treat of war, the whole pipe and all its ornaments are red : sometimes it is red only on one side, and by the disposition of the feathers, &c. one acquainted with their customs will know at first sight what the nation who presents it intends or desires. Smoking the calumet is also a religious ceremony on some occasions, and in all treaties is considered as a witness between the parties, or rather as an instrument by which they invoke the sun and moon to witness their sincerity, and to be as it were a guarantee of the treaty between them. This custom of the Indians, though to appearance somewhat ridiculous, is not without its reasons: for as they find that smoking tends to disperse the vapours of the brain, to raise the spirits, and to qualify them for thinking and judging properly, they introduce it into their councils, where, after their resolves, the pipe was considered as a seal of their decrees, and as a pledge of their performance thereof it was sent to those they were consulting, in alliance or treaty with;—so that smoking among them at the same pipe is equivalent to our drinking together and out of the same cup.—Major Rogers's Account of North America, 1766.

The lighted calumet is also used among them for a purpose still more interesting than the expression of social friendship. The austere manners of the Indians forbid any appearance of gallantry between the sexes in the day-time; but at night the young lover goes a-calumetting, as his courtship is called. As these people live in a state of equality, and without fear of internal violence or theft in their own tribes, they leave their doors open by night as well as by day. The lover takes advantage of this liberty, lights his calumet, enters the cabin of his mistress, and gently presents it to her. If she extinguish it, she admits his addresses; but if she suffer it to burn unnoticed, he retires with a disappointed and throbbing heart.—Ashe's Travels.

An Indian child, as soon as he is born, is swathed with clothes, or skins; and being laid on his back, is bound down on a piece of thick board, spread over with soft moss. The board is somewhat larger and broader than the child, and bent pieces of wood, like pieces of hoops, are placed over its face to protect it, so that if the machine were suffered to fall the child probably would not be injured. When the women have any business to transact at home, they hang the boards on a tree, if there be one at hand, and set them a swinging from side to side, like a pendulum, in order to exercise the children.—Weld, vol. ii. p. 246.

*The fierce extreme of good and ill to brook
Impassive——*

Of the active as well as passive fortitude of the Indian character, the following is an instance related by Adair in his Travels:—

A party of the Senekah Indians came to war against the Katahba, bitter enemies to each other. In the woods the former discovered a sprightly warrior belonging to the latter, hunting in their usual light dress: on his perceiving them, he sprang off for a hollow rock four or five miles distant, as they intercepted him from running homeward. He was so extremely swift and skilful with the gun, as to kill seven of them in the running fight before they were able to surround and take him. They carried him to their country in sad triumph; but though he had filled them with uncommon grief and shame for the loss of so many of their kindred, yet the love of martial virtue induced them to treat him, during their long journey, with a great deal more civility than if he had acted the part of a coward. The women and children, when they met him at their several towns, beat him and whipped him in as severe a manner as the occasion required, according to their law of justice, and at last he was formally condemned to die by the fiery torture. It might reasonably be imagined that what he had for some time gone through, by being fed with a scanty hand, a tedious march, lying at night on the bare ground, exposed to the changes of the weather, with his arms and legs extended in a pair of rough stocks, and suffering such punishment on his entering into their hostile towns, as a prelude to those sharp torments for which he was destined, would have so impaired his health and affected his imagination, as to have sent him to his long sleep, out of the way of any more sufferings. Probably this would have been the case with the major part of the white people under similar circumstances; but I never knew this with any of the Indians; and this cool-headed, brave warrior did not deviate from their rough lessons of martial virtue, but acted his part so well as to surprise and sorely vex his numerous enemies:—for when they were taking him, unpinioned, in their wild parade, to the place of torture, which lay near to a river, he suddenly dashed down those who stood in his way, sprang off, and plunged into the water, swimming underneath like an otter, only rising to take breath, till he reached the opposite shore. He now ascended the steep bank, but though he had good reason to be in a hurry, as many of the enemy were in the water, and others running, very like bloodhounds, in pursuit of him, and the bullets flying around him from the time he took to the river, yet his heart did not allow him to leave them abruptly, without taking leave in a formal manner, in return for the extraordinary favours they had done, and intended to do him. After slapping a part of his body in defiance to them (continues the author), he put up the shrill war whoop, as his last salute, till some more convenient opportunity offered, and darted off in the manner of a beast broke loose from its torturing enemies. He continued his speed so as to run by about midnight of the same day as far as his eager pursuers were two days in reaching. There he rested till he happily discovered five of those Indians who had pursued him:—he lay hid a little way off their camp, till they were sound asleep. Every circumstance of his situation occurred to him, and inspired him with heroism. He was naked, torn, and hungry, and his enraged enemies were come up with him;—but there was now everything to relieve his wants, and a fair opportunity to save his life, and get great honour and sweet revenge, by cutting them off. Resolution, a convenient spot, and sudden surprise, would effect the main object of all his wishes and hopes. He accordingly crept, took one of their tomahawks, and killed them all on the spot,—clothed himself, took a choice gun, and as much ammunition and provisions as he could well carry in a running march. He set off afresh with a light heart, and did not sleep for several successive nights, only when he reclined, as usual, a little before day, with his back to a tree. As it were by instinct, when he found he was free from the pursuing enemy, he made directly to the very place where he had killed seven of his enemies, and was taken by them for the fiery torture. He digged them up, burnt their bodies to ashes, and went home in safety with singular triumph. Other pursuing enemies came, on the evening of the second day, to the camp of their dead people, when the sight gave them a greater shock than they had ever known before. In their chilled war council they concluded that as he had done such surprising things in his defence before he was captivated, and since that in his naked condition, and now was well armed, if they continued the pursuit he would spoil them all, for he surely was an enemy wizard,—and therefore they returned home.—Adair's General Observations on the American Indians, p. 394.

It is surprising (says the same author) to see the long continued speed of the Indians. Though some of us have often run the swiftest of them out of sight for about the distance of twelve miles, yet afterwards, without any seeming toil, they would stretch on, leave us out of sight, and out-wind any horse.—Ibid. p. 318.

If an Indian were driven out into the extensive woods, with only a knife and a tomahawk, or a small hatchet, it is not to be doubted but he would fatten even where a wolf would starve. He would soon collect fire by rubbing two dry pieces of wood together, make a bark hut, earthen vessels, and a bow and arrows; then kill wild game, fish, fresh-water tortoises, gather a plentiful variety of vegetables, and live in affluence.—Ibid. p. 410.

*Sleep, wearied one! and in the dreaming land
Shouldst thou to-morrow with thy mother meet,*

There is nothing (says Charlevoix) in which these barbarians carry their superstitions farther than in what regards dreams; but they vary greatly in their manner of explaining themselves on this point. Sometimes it is the reasonable soul which ranges abroad, while the sensitive continues to animate the body. Sometimes it is the familiar genius who gives salutary counsel with respect to what is going to happen. Sometimes it is a visit made by the soul of the object of which he dreams. But in whatever manner the dream is conceived, it is always looked upon as a thing sacred, and as the most ordinary way in which the gods make known their will to men. Filled with this idea, they cannot conceive how we should pay no regard to them. For the most part they look upon them either as a desire of the soul, inspired by some genius, or an order from him, and in consequence of this principle they hold it a religious duty to obey them. An Indian having dreamt of having a finger cut off, had it really cut off as soon as he awoke, having first prepared himself for this important action by a feast. Another having dreamt of being a prisoner, and in the hands of his enemies, was much at a loss what to do. He consulted the jugglers, and by their advice caused himself to be tied to a post, and burnt in several parts of the body.—Charlevoix, Journal of a Voyage to North America.

The crocodile, the condor of the rock,

The alligator, or American crocodile, when full grown, (says Bertram) is a very large and terrible creature, and of prodigious strength, activity, and swiftness in the water. I have seen them twenty feet in length, and some are supposed to be twenty-two or twenty-three feet in length. Their body is as large as that of a horse, their shape usually resembles that of a lizard, which is flat, or cuneiform, being compressed on each side, and gradually diminishing from the abdomen to the extremity, which, with the whole body, is covered with horny plates, or squamæ, impenetrable when on the body of the live animal, even to a rifle-ball, except about their head, and just behind their forelegs or arms, where, it is said, they are only vulnerable. The head of a full grown one is about three feet, and the mouth opens nearly the same length. Their eyes are small in proportion, and seem sunk in the head, by means of the prominency of the brows; the nostrils are large, inflated, and prominent on the top, so that the head on the water resembles, at a distance, a great chunk of wood floating about: only the upper jaw moves, which they raise almost perpendicular, so as to form a right angle with the lower one. In the fore-part of the upper jaw, on each side, just under the nostrils, are two very large, thick, strong teeth, or tusks, not very sharp, but rather the shape of a cone: these are as white as the finest polished ivory, and are not covered by any skin or lips, but always in sight, which gives the creature a frightful appearance; in the lower jaw are holes opposite to these teeth to receive them; when they clap their jaws together, it causes a surprising noise, like that which is made by forcing a heavy plank with violence upon the ground, and may be heard at a great distance. But what is yet more surprising to a stranger, is the incredibly loud and terrifying roar which they are capable of making, especially in breeding-time. It most resembles very heavy distant thunder, not only shaking the air and waters, but causing the earth to tremble; and when hundreds are roaring at the same time, you can scarcely be persuaded but that the whole globe is violently and dangerously agitated. An old champion, who is, perhaps, absolute sovereign of a little lake or lagoon, (when fifty less than himself are obliged to content themselves with swelling and roaring in little coves round about,) darts forth from the reedy coverts, all at once, on the surface of the waters in a right line, at first seemingly as rapid as lightning, but gradually more slowly, until he arrives at the centre of the lake, where he stops. He now swells himself by drawing in wind and water through his mouth, which causes a loud sonorous rattling in the throat for near a minute; but it is immediately forced out again through his mouth and nostrils with a loud noise, brandishing his tail in the air, and the vapour running from his nostrils like smoke. At other times, when swoln to an extent ready to burst, his head and tail lifted up, he spins or twirls round on the surface of the water. He acts his part like an Indian chief, when rehearsing his feats of war.—Bertram's Travels in North America.

Then forth uprose that lone way-faring man;

They discover an amazing sagacity, and acquire, with the greatest readiness, anything that depends upon the attention of the mind. By experience, and an acute observation, they attain many perfections to which the Americans are strangers. For instance, they will cross a forest or a plain, which is two hundred miles in breadth, so as to reach with great exactness the point at which they intend to arrive, keeping, during the whole of that space, in a direct line, without any material deviations; and this they will do with the same ease, let the weather be fair or cloudy. With equal acuteness they will point to that part of the heavens the sun is in, though it be intercepted by clouds or fogs. Besides this, they are able to pursue, with incredible facility, the traces of man or beast, either on leaves or grass; and on this account it is with great difficulty they escape discovery. They are indebted for these talents not only to nature, but to an extraordinary command of the intellectual qualities, which can only be acquired by an unremitting attention, and by long experience. They are, in general, very happy in a retentive memory. They can recapitulate every particular that has been treated of in council, and remember the exact time when they were held. Their belts of wampum preserve the substance of the treaties they have concluded with the neighbouring tribes for ages back, to which they will appeal and refer with as much perspicuity and readiness as Europeans can to their written records.

The Indians are totally unskilled in geography, as well as all the other sciences, and yet they draw on their birch-bark very exact charts or maps of the countries they are acquainted with. The latitude and longitude only are wanting to make them tolerably complete.

Their sole knowledge in astronomy consists in being able to point out the polar star, by which they regulate their course when they travel in the night.

They reckon the distance of places not by miles or leagues, but by a day's journey, which, according to the best calculation I could make, appears to be about twenty English miles. These they also divide into halves and quarters, and will demonstrate them in their maps with great exactness by the hieroglyphics just mentioned, when they regulate in council their war-parties, or their most distant hunting excursions.—Lewis and Clarke's Travels.

Some of the French missionaries have supposed that the Indians are guided by instinct, and have pretended that Indian children can find their way through a forest as easily as a person of maturer years; but this is a most absurd notion. It is unquestionably by a close attention to the growth of the trees, and position of the sun, that they find their way. On the northern side of a tree there is generally the most moss; and the bark on that side, in general, differs from that on the opposite one. The branches toward the south are, for the most part, more luxuriant than those on the other sides of trees, and several other distinctions also subsist between the northern and southern sides, conspicuous to Indians, being taught from their infancy to attend to them, which a common observer would, perhaps, never notice. Being accustomed from their infancy likewise to pay great attention to the position of the sun, they learn to make the most accurate allowance for its apparent motion from one part of the heavens to another: and in every part of the day they will point to the part of the heavens where it is, although the sky be obscured by clouds or mists.

An instance of their dexterity in finding their way through an unknown country came under my observation when I was at Staunton, situated behind the Blue Mountains, Virginia. A number of the Creek nation had arrived at that town on their way to Philadelphia, whither they were going upon some affairs of importance, and had stopped there for the night. In the morning, some circumstance or other, which could not be learned, induced one half of the Indians to set off without their companions, who did not follow until some hours afterwards. When these last were ready to pursue their journey, several of the towns-people mounted their horses to escort them part of the way. They proceeded along the high road for some miles, but, all at once, hastily turning aside into the woods, though there was no path, the Indians advanced confidently forward. The people who accompanied them, surprised at this movement, informed them that they were quitting the road to Philadelphia, and expressed their fear lest they should miss their companions who had gone on before. They answered that they knew better, that the way through the woods was the shortest to Philadelphia, and that they knew very well that their companions had entered the wood at the very place where they did. Curiosity led some of the horsemen to go on; and to their astonishment, for there was apparently no track, they overtook the other Indians in the thickest part of the wood. But what appeared most singular was, that the route which they took was found, on examining a map, to be as direct for Philadelphia as if they had taken the bearings by a mariner's compass. From others of their nation, who had been at Philadelphia at a former period, they had probably learned the exact direction of that city from their villages, and had never lost sight of it, although they had already travelled three hundred miles through the woods, and had upwards of four hundred miles more to go before they could reach the place of their destination.—Of the exactness with which they can find out a strange place to which they have been once directed by their own people, a striking example is furnished, I think, by Mr. Jefferson, in his account of the Indian graves in Virginia. These graves are nothing more than large mounds of earth in the woods, which, on being opened, are found to contain skeletons in an erect posture: the Indian mode of sepulture has been too often described to remain unknown to you. But to come to my story. A party of Indians that were passing on to some of the sea-ports on the Atlantic, just as the Creeks above mentioned were going to Philadelphia, were observed, all on a sudden, to quit the straight road by which they were proceeding, and without asking any questions to strike through the woods, in a direct line, to one of these graves, which lay at the distance of some miles from the road. Now very near a century must have passed over since the part of Virginia in which this grave was situated had been inhabited by Indians, and these Indian travellers, who were to visit it by themselves, had unquestionably never been in that part of the country before: they must have found their way to it simply from the description of its situation, that had been handed down to them by tradition.—Weld's Travels in North America, vol. ii.

The Mammoth comes,——

That I am justified in making the Indian chief allude to the mammoth as an emblem of terror and destruction, will be seen by the authority quoted below. Speaking of the mammoth or big buffalo, Mr. Jefferson states, that a tradition is preserved among the Indians of that animal still existing in the northern parts of America.

“A delegation of warriors from the Delaware tribe having visited the governor of Virginia during the revolution, on matters of business, the governor asked them some questions relative to their country, and, among others, what they knew or had heard of the animal whose bones were found at the Salt-licks, on the Ohio. Their chief speaker immediately put himself into an attitude of oratory, and with a pomp suited to what he conceived the elevation of his subject, informed him that it was a tradition handed down from their fathers, that in ancient times a herd of these tremendous animals came to the Bick-bone-licks, and began an universal destruction of the bear, deer, elk, buffalo, and other animals which had been created for the use of the Indians. That the Great Man above looking down and seeing this, was so enraged, that he seized his lightning, descended on the earth, seated himself on a neighbouring mountain, on a rock on which his seat and the prints of his feet are still to be seen, and hurled his bolts among them, till the whole were slaughtered, except the big bull, who, presenting his forehead to the shafts, shook them off as they fell, but missing one, at length it wounded him in the side, whereon, springing round, he bounded over the Ohio, over the Wabash, the Illinois, and finally over the great lakes, where he is living at this day.—Jefferson's Notes on Virginia.”

*Scorning to wield the hatchet for his bribe,
'Gainst Brandt himself I went to battle forth :*

I took the character of Brandt, in the poem of Gertrude, from the common Histories of England, all of which represented him as a bloody and bad man (even among savages), and chief agent in the horrible desolation of Wyoming. Some years after this poem appeared, the son of Brandt, a most interesting and intelligent youth, came over to England, and I formed an acquaintance with him, on which I still look back with pleasure. He appealed to my sense of honour and justice, on his own part and on that of his sister, to retract the unfair aspersions which, unconscious of their unfairness, I had cast on his father's memory.

He then referred me to documents, which completely satisfied me that the common accounts of Brandt's cruelties at Wyoming, which I had found in books of Travels and in Adolphus's and similar Histories of England, were gross errors, and that in point of fact Brandt was not even present at that scene of desolation.

It is, unhappily, to Britons and Anglo-Americans that we must refer the chief blame in this horrible business. I published a letter expressing this belief in the New Monthly Magazine, in the year 1822, to which I must refer the reader—if he has any curiosity on the subject—for an antidote to my fanciful description of Brandt. Among other expressions to young Brandt, I made use of the following words:—“Had I learnt all this of your father when I was writing my poem, he should not have figured in it as the hero of mischief.” It was but bare justice to say thus much of a Mohawk Indian, who spoke English eloquently, and was thought capable of having written a history of the Six Nations. I ascertained, also, that he often strove to mitigate the cruelty of Indian warfare. The name of Brandt, therefore, remains in my poem a pure and declared character of fiction.

*To whom nor relative nor blood remains,
No!—not a kindred drop that runs in human veins!*

Every one who recollects the specimen of Indian eloquence given in the speech of Logan, a Mingo chief, to the governor of Virginia, will perceive that I have attempted to paraphrase its concluding and most striking expression:—“There runs not a drop of my blood in the veins of any living creature.” The similar salutation of the fictitious personage in my story, and the real Indian orator, makes it surely allowable to borrow such an expression; and if it appears, as it cannot but appear, to less advantage than in the original, I beg the reader to reflect how difficult it is to transpose such exquisitely simple words, without sacrificing a portion of their effect.

In the spring of 1774, a robbery and murder were committed on an inhabitant of the frontiers of Virginia, by two Indians of the Shawanee tribe. The neighbouring whites, according to their custom, undertook to punish this outrage in a summary manner. Colonel Cresap, a man infamous for the many murders he had committed on those much injured people, collected a party and proceeded down the Kanaway in quest of vengeance; unfortunately, a canoe with women and children, with one man only, was seen coming from the opposite shore unarmed, and unsuspecting an attack from the whites. Cresap and his party concealed themselves on the bank of the river, and the moment the canoe reached the shore, singled out their objects, and at one fire killed every person in it. This happened to be the family of Logan, who had long been distinguished as a friend to the whites. This unworthy return provoked his vengeance: he accordingly signalled himself in the war which ensued. In the autumn of the same year a decisive battle was fought at the mouth of the great Kanaway, in which the collected forces of the Shawanees, Mingo, and Delawares, were defeated by a detachment of the Virginian militia. The Indians sued for peace. Logan, however, disdained to be seen among the suppliants; but lest the sincerity of a treaty should be disturbed, from which so distinguished a chief abstracted himself, he sent, by a messenger, the following speech to be delivered to Lord Dunmore:—

“I appeal to any white man if ever he entered Logan’s cabin hungry, and he gave him not to eat; if ever he came cold and hungry, and he clothed him not. During the course of the last long and bloody war, Logan remained idle in his cabin, an advocate for peace. Such was my love for the whites, that my countrymen pointed as they passed, and said, Logan is the friend of the white men. I have even thought to have lived with you, but for the injuries of one man. Colonel Cresap, the last spring, in cold blood, murdered all the relations of Logan, even my women and children.

“There runs not a drop of my blood in the veins of any living creature:—this called on me for revenge. I have fought for it. I have killed many. I have fully glutted my vengeance.—For my country I rejoice at the beams of peace;—but do not harbour a thought that mine is the joy of fear. Logan never felt fear. He will not turn on his heel to save his life.—Who is there to mourn for Logan? not one!”—Jefferson's Notes on Virginia.

The dark-attired Culdee.

The Culdees were the primitive clergy of Scotland, and apparently her only clergy from the sixth to the eleventh century. They were of Irish origin, and their monastery on the island of Iona, or Icolmkill, was the seminary of Christianity in North Britain. Presbyterian writers have wished to prove them to have been a sort of Presbyters, strangers to the Roman Church and Episcopacy. It seems to be established that they were not enemies to Episcopacy;—but that they were not slavishly subjected to Rome, like the clergy of later periods, appears by their resisting the Papal ordinances respecting the celibacy of religious men, on which account they were ultimately displaced by the Scottish sovereigns to make way for more Popish canons.

The tradition which forms the substance of these stanzas is still preserved in Germany. An ancient tower on a height, called the Rolandseck, a few miles above Bonn on the Rhine, is shown as the habitation which Roland built in sight of a nunnery, into which his mistress had retired, on having heard an unfounded account of his death. Whatever may be thought of the credibility of the legend, its scenery must be recollected with pleasure by every one who has visited the romantic landscape of the Drachenfels, the Rolandseck, and the beautiful adjacent islet of the Rhine, where a nunnery still stands.

The fact ought to be universally known, that France is at this moment indebted to Poland for not being invaded by Russia. Regret the lark that gladdens England's morn,

Mr. P. Cunningham, in his interesting work on New South Wales, gives the following account of its song-birds:—"We are not moved here with the deep mellow note of the blackbird, poured out from beneath some low stunted bush, nor thrilled with the wild warblings of the thrush perched on the top of some tall sapling, nor charmed with the blithe carol of the lark as we proceed early a-field; none of our birds rivalling those divine songsters in realising the poetical idea of 'the music of the grove:' while 'parrots' chattering' must supply the place of 'nightingales' singing' in the future amorous lays of our sighing Celadons. We have our lark, certainly; but both his appearance and note are a most wretched parody upon the bird about which our English Poets have made so many fine similes. He will mount from the ground and rise, fluttering upwards in the same manner, and with a few of the starting notes of the English lark; but, on reaching the height of thirty feet or so, down he drops suddenly and mutely, diving into concealment among the long grass, as if ashamed of his pitiful attempt. For the pert frisky robin, pecking and pattering against the windows in the dull days of winter, we have the lively 'superb warbler,' with his blue shining plumage and his long tapering tail, picking up the crumbs at our doors; while the pretty red-bills, of the size and form of the goldfinch, constitute the sparrow of our clime, flying in flocks about our houses, and building their soft downy pigmy nests in the orange, peach, and lemon-trees surrounding them."—Cunningham's Two Years in New South Wales, vol. ii. p. 216.

Oh, feeble statesmen—ignominious times,

There is not upon record a more disgusting scene of Russian hypocrisy, and (woe that it must be written!) of British humiliation, than that which passed on board the Talavera, when British sailors accepted money from the Emperor Nicholas, and gave him cheers. It will require the Talavera to fight well with the first Russian ship that she may have to encounter, to make us forget that day.

A palsy-stroke of Nature shook Oran,

In the year 1790, Oran, the most western city in the Algerine Regency, which had been possessed by Spain for more than a hundred years, and fortified at an immense expense, was destroyed by an earthquake; six thousand of its inhabitants were buried under the ruins.
