

Bodleian Libraries

UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

This book is part of the collection held by the Bodleian Libraries and scanned by Google, Inc. for the Google Books Library Project.

For more information see:

<http://www.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/dbooks>

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-ShareAlike 2.0 UK: England & Wales (CC BY-NC-SA 2.0) licence.

English Reprints.

SIR THOMAS MORE.

Utopia.

Originally printed in Latin, 1516.

TRANSLATED INTO ENGLISH BY RALPH ROBINSON,
Sometime Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Oxford.

HIS SECOND AND REVISED EDITION, 1556: PRECEDED BY THE TITLE AND EPISTLE OF HIS FIRST EDITION, 1551.

CAREFULLY EDITED BY EDWARD ARBER,
Associate, King's College, London, F.R.G.S., &c.

LONDON:
ALEX. MURRAY & SON, 30, QUEEN SQUARE, W.C.
Ent. Stat. Hall.]      1 March, 1869.      [All Rights reserved.]

CONTENTS.

INTRODUCTION . . . . .	3
Circumstances connected with the earlier issues of Utopia	6
BIBLIOGRAPHY . . . . .	8
The LIFE and TRAVELS of RAPHAEL HYTHLODAY . . . . .	9
UTOPIA , First English Translation, 1551 . . . . .	11
(1) THE EPISTLE to Master W. Cecil, Esq. . . . .	12
UTOPIA , Second English Translation, 1556 . . . . .	17
(1) The Translator [Ralph Robinson] to the gentle reader . . . . .	19
(2) The Epistle 'Thomas More to Peter Giles [Ægidius] fendeth greeting' . . . . .	21
(3) THE FIRST BOOK OF THE COMMUNICATION OF RAPHAEL HYTHLODAY, CONCERNING THE BEST STATE OF A COMMONWEALTH . . . . .	27
(4) THE SECOND BOOK OF THE COMMUNICATION OF RAPHAEL HYTHLODAY, CONCERNINGE THE BEST STATE OF A COMMONWEALTH : CONTAININGE THE DESCRIPTION OF UTOPIA, WITH A LARGE DECLARATION OF THE POLITIKE GOVERNEMENT, AND OF ALL THE GOOD LAWS AND ORDER OF THE SAME ISLAND . . . . .	72
Of the cities and namely of Amaurote . . . . .	77
Of the Magistrates . . . . .	80
Of Sciences, Craftes, and Occupations . . . . .	82
Of their living and mutual converfation together . . . . .	89
Of their journeying or travalling abroad, with divers other matters cunningly reasoned, and wittily discuffed . . . . .	96
Of Bondmen, Sick Perfons, Wedlock, and divers other matters . . . . .	121
Of Warfare . . . . .	131
Of the Religions in Utopia . . . . .	143
(5) Letter from P. Giles [Ægidius] to J. Buslyde [Busleyden], dated Antwerp, 1 November 1516 . . . . .	163
(6) Utopian Poetry . . . . .	166
(7) Poems by Bronchroft and Schryver . . . . .	167
(8) The Printer [Abraham Veale] to the Reader . . . . .	168

INTRODUCTION.

UTOPIA*—probably written the second book at Antwerp about November 1515; and the first in London in the early part of 1516—was first published abroad. It was printed by Theodore Martin at Louvain, under the editorship of Erasmus, Ægidius, Paludanus and other of More's friends in Flanders, towards the end of 1516.

More then revised it, and, through Erasmus, it was sent to John Frobenius at Basle to print. This more sumptuous and, as regards authorship, second edition—probably containing the standard text—bears the date of November 1518. In the meantime however, a friend of Erasmus, the Englishman Thomas Lupset, brought out a reprint of the first edition at Paris, which was printed by Gilles de Gourmont before March 1518; and which is therefore in point of time, the second edition; the Basle one, being the third; and one at Vienna in 1519, the fourth in order of appearance. All four were in Latin, then the common familiar language of the learned.

By a strange fate, not a single copy of this work, in any language whatsoever, was printed in England in More's lifetime: or indeed prior to these English versions of Ralph Robinson. Yet—despite its original Latin garb—the work is essentially English, and will ever reckon among the treasures of our literature.

Without some acquaintance with Sir Thomas More's life, one might be apt to assume Utopia to be entirely his own work, and the persons named in it to be fictitious. He wrote the letter to Petrus Ægidius, and the two books of Raphael's communication. Erasmus' letter to Frobenius [not here translated] was printed by him in the Basle edition of 1518. The following also contributed to the earlier Latin editions.

PETRUS ÆGIDIUS, the PETER GILES of this translation, [b. 1490—d. 1555], secretary to the municipality of Antwerp. Wrote a letter translated at pp. 163-166.

JOHN CLEMENT [d. 1 July 1572] at the time More's attendant, afterwards Professor of Greek at Oxford. See p. 23.

JOHN PALUDANUS, Cassilitensis 'an ancient friend' of Erasmus, p. 7: contributed to the first edition, a letter and a poem not translated by Robinson.

JEROME BUSLEYDEN, latinized BUSLIDIUS [b. 1470—d. 27 Aug. 1517] a rich generous diplomate. Founder of the College of the three languages (Latin Greek, Hebrew), at Louvain. He wrote a letter to More, not translated by Robinson.

GERARD BRONCHROST, of Nimeguen, in Latin Noviomagus [b. 1494—d. 1570]. Sometime Mathematical Professor at Rostock, wrote a short poem, see p. 167.

CORNELIUS SCHRYVER, latinized GRAPHÆUS [b. 1482—d. 19 Dec. 1558] made in 1533 secretary to the municipality of Antwerp, also contributed a short poem, see p. 167.

WILLIAM BUDE, latinized BUDEUS or BUÆUS [b. 1467—d. 23 Aug. 1540] the most learned Frenchman of his time. His letter to Lupset first appeared in the Paris edition of 1518, not included by Robinson.

THOMAS LUPSET [b. 1498—d. 27 Dec. 1532] while studying at Paris edits second edition of Utopia. Afterwards becomes Lecturer in Rhetoric at Oxford.

Utopia is worthy of multiformed study. Not only from its reflection of the character, principles, and merry wit of its author; from its proposed solutions of such social problems, as the scarcity or overplus of population, the prevention of famines, and the like: but also from its reference of the condition of the poor, especially the 'bondmen,' the then dying out 'villenage' of England; from its allusions to the late, as well as to the present English king; from its survey of Continental politics in 1516: and on other accounts.

The furthest discovery of Amerigo Vespucci in his fourth voyage, along the coast-line of Brazil, appears to have been Cape Frio. Sir Thomas More apparently refers to Deodati's collection, in speaking of 'those iii. voyages that be nowe in printe, and abroad in euery mannes handes;' which, in Latin, was first published in 1507, under the title of Quattvor Americi Vespottii Navagationes. Near the end of this tract is the following account of what occurred on 3 April, 1504.

Relictus igitur in castello præfato Christicolis. xxiiiij. et cum illis. xij. machinis ac alijs plurimus armis / vna cum prouisione pro sexse mensibus sufficiente! . . .

On this passage More hangs his whole fiction. This is the carefully concealed starting-point of the imaginary portion of his work. Thence the Portuguese Hythlodaye wanders to the island of 'Nowhere,' which to More's mind was 'beyond the line equinoctial' between Brazil and India. There for five years and more Hythlodaye studied the laws and habits of a community (allowing the very low average of 20 persons to each of the 6000 households of the 54 cities) of 6,500,000 persons; not including their outlying 'forreyne towns.' At length, returning home from India in the Portuguese fleet, Hythlodaye is represented as introduced by Peter Ægidius to More in the doorway of Antwerp Cathedral: whence all three adjourn to the garden in Sir Thomas' house, where, on a bench 'covered with corues' they, with John Clement, listen a whole day to the story of Hythlodaye: the contents of the first book being recounted before dinner: and those of the second between dinner and supper.

Hythlodaye may well say 'that this nation tooke their beginnunge of the Grekes, bicaufe their speche . . . kepeth dyuers signes and tokens of the greke langage in the names of their cityes, and of their magistrates: '* as, for example, the following:—

ENGLISH.	LATIN.		GREEK.
Utopia	Utopia [= Nusquama]		οὐ, no ; τόπος, place .
Hythlodaye	Hythlodæus	} patro- } nymic } forms of	{ ὕθλος [= nugæ] nonsense . { ἄχορος, joyless, wretched . { μάκαρ, blest, happy .
Achoriens	Archororii
Macariens	Macarensii
Amaurot	Amaurotus		ἀμαυρός, shadowy, unknown .
Anyder	Anydrus		ἄνυδρος, waterless .
Phylarch	Phylarchus		φύλος ἀρχή, chief of the tribe .

There is an essential difference of purpose in the somewhat similar works of Plato and More. In the Republic, Plato, in the person of Socrates, endeavours 'thoroughly to investigate the real nature of justice and injustice,' by first investigating their character in cities, and afterwards by applying 'the same inquiry to the individual, looking for the counterpart of the greater as it exists in the form of the less.' † More, in the person of Hythloday, looking round the world, perceives nothing 'but a certain conspiracy of rich men procuring their own commodities under the name and title of the common wealth.' ‡ Plato endeavours to attain to an exact idea of an abstract virtue: More seeks to devise a system in which the poor shall not perish for lack, nor the rich be idle through excuse of their riches: in which every one is equally of the commonwealth, and in which the commonwealth possesses only a common wealth.

* p. 118. † The Republic of Plato. Ed. by J. L. DAVIES, M.A., and D. J. VAUGHAN, M.A. p. 52. 3rd Ed. 1866. ‡ P. 159.

Circumstances
connected with the earlier issues
of UTOPIA.

Referred to in Letters & Papers Foreign & Domestic of the reign of Henry VIII. Arranged and Catalogued by Rev. J. S. BREWER, M.A. London, 1864.

1515. [Feb. ?] [London?] MORE to ERASMUS. Letter, &c. ii. 430.
More's embassy has been successful, but tedious; has been away more than six months. . . . Has formed a close intimacy with Pet. Giles [Ægidius] of Antwerp.
1516. Oct. 31. London. MORE to ERASMUS. ii. 777.
The Epistolæ Obscurorum Virorum is popular everywhere. Is glad that Peter [Ægidius] likes his Nusquama [Utopia]. Wishes to hear if Tunstal approves of it, and other judges.
1516. Nov. 12. Louvain. GERARDUS NOVIOMAGUS (of Nimeguen) to ERASMUS. ii. 793.
His friend Theodoricus [Martin] will undertake to print the Utopia. Paludanus will show him a cut of the island by a great painter, if Erasmus desire any alterations.
1516. Nov. 18. Brussels. ERASMUS to PETER ÆGIDIUS. ii. 796.
Utopia is in the printer's hands.
1516. [?] Mechlin. JEROME BUSLIDANUS to MORE. ii. 814.
In praise of his Utopia.
1516. [?] London. MORE to PETRUS ÆGIDIUS. ii.
Letter. Translated by Robinson at pp. 21-26.
- [1516. Dec. ?] The Editio princeps appears. Libellus vere avreus nec minus salutaris quam festinus de optimo reip. statu. deque noua Insula Vtopia. . . . It has no pagination. (1) First comes the picture-chart of the island above referred to; (2) Then the Utopian alphabet, in which A to L are represented by circles or curves; M by a triangle; and N to Y by rectangles or portions thereof: dashes being used in connection with these for further diversity. (3) Then we have Anemolius' Utopian Hekastichon, see p. 167; (4) Then Ægidius' letter to Bousleyden, see pp. 163-166; (5) Then another letter to him, from John Paludanus, who also contributes a poem, neither of which were included in Robinson's translation; (6) Then a poem by Girardus Noviomagus, De Utopia, see p. 167; (7) Then the poem of Cornelius Graphæus, Ad lectorem, see p. 167; (8) Then Bousleyden's letter to Thomas More, (not included in Robinson's translation); (9) Then More's letter to Ægidius, see pp. 21-26; (10) Then the Text, in two books.]
1517. [?] MORE to TUNSTALL. ii. 1547.
His last letters were the most delightful he ever received from him, as they spoke so highly of his Republica (Utopia). Trusts they were as sincere as candid. . . . Was afraid, among his many avocations, he would not have time for such trifles, nor could he have done so except out of partiality. Is glad he is pleased with the work, and not less for his candid advice.
1517. Jan. 13. London. MORE to ERASMUS. ii. 891.
Begs Erasmus will thank Paludanus and Giles.
1517. Feb. 24. Antwerp. ERASMUS to WILLIAM COPE. ii. 953.
Begs him to send for More's Utopia, if he has not yet read it, and wishes to see the true source of all political evils. [This proves the publication of the first edition before this date.]

1517. Mar. 1. Antwerp. ERASMUS TO MORE. ii. 958.
Sends one letter to Marlianus, who imagined that the first book of Utopia was written by Erasmus. . . . As soon as More has corrected the Utopia, Erasmus will send the MS. to Basle or Paris.
1517. Mar. 8. Antwerp. ERASMUS TO MORE. ii. 963.
'Send the Utopia at your earliest opportunity.' A burgo-master at Antwerp is so pleased with it that he knows it all by heart.
1517. [?] London. MORE TO ERASMUS. ii. 913.
Sent his Utopia some time since, and is delighted to hear it will come out in a magnificent form.
1517. July 31. Paris. GULIELMUS BUDÆUS TO THOMAS LUPSET. ii. 1124.
Thanks him for a copy of More's Utopia. . . . Long commendation of the Utopia. [Printed in both editions of 1518.]
1517. Aug. 25. Louvain. ERASMUS TO JOHN FROBENIUS. ii. 1147.
Sends . . . Utopia for Frobenius to print.
1517. [?] ERASMUS TO MORE. ii. 1090.
Has sent More's Epigrams and Utopia to Basle.
1517. Aug. 28. Antwerp. FRANCIS CHIEREGATO TO ERASMUS. ii. 1151.
On his leaving England for Rome, to avoid the sweating sickness, touched at Antwerp and heard that Erasmus was staying with Petrus Ægidius, secretary to the municipality of Antwerp. On calling heard that Erasmus had started the day before for Louvain.
1517. [?] London. MORE TO ERASMUS. ii. 1155.
Is in the clouds with the dream of the government to be offered him by his Utopians; fancies himself a grand potentate, with a crown and a Franciscan cloak (paludamentum), followed by a grand procession of the Amauri. Should it please Heaven to exalt him to this high dignity, where he will be too high to think of common acquaintances, he will still keep a corner in his heart for Erasmus and Tunstall; and should they pay him a visit to Utopia, he will make all his subjects honor them as is befitting the friends of majesty. The morn has dawned and dispelled his dream, and stripped off his royalty, plunging him down into his old mill-round at the Court.
1517. Aug. 31. Louvain. ERASMUS TO TUNSTAL. ii. 1154.
Has taken up his abode at Louvain, and is on good terms with the theologians. Is staying with Paludanus his ancient friend, but wants to find more room for his books.
1517. Sept. 3. MORE TO ERASMUS. ii. 1157.
Sends his Utopia (Nusquamam nostram nusquam bene scriptam ad te mitto).
1517. Sept. 15. Paris. THOMAS LUPSET TO ERASMUS. ii. 1162.
Intends getting a new edition of More's Utopia printed.
1517. Dec. 15. London. MORE TO ERASMUS. ii. 1201.
Expects his Utopia.
1518. Mar. 5. Louvain. ERASMUS TO MORE. ii. 1238.
The printers at Basle excuse their delay in the Utopia by reason of the preface added by Budæus. [This is the third edition.] Has seen a French edition of the Utopia. [Lupset's edition, printed by Gilles de Gourmont at Paris, must therefore rank as the second in point of time, but is only a reprint of the Louvain edition of 1516.]
1518. Nov. [Date of the Basle edition, third in point of time, second as regards authorship. It omits Paludanus' letter and poem of the first edition, and has in addition the above mentioned letters from Erasmus to Frobenius, and from Budé to Lupset. This edition therefore embodying also More's corrections of the previous year, is at once the most complete and most correct published in his lifetime.]

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

Utopia.

* Editions not seen.

For the earliest Latin editions, see pp. 6, 7. Space does not permit detailing other Latin, or the French, German, Italian, and Spanish editions that have appeared.

ENGLISH EDITIONS.

(a) Issues in the Author's lifetime.

None.

(b) Issues since the Author's death.

RALPH ROBINSON'S TRANSLATION.

I. As a separate publication.

- 1 1551. London. 1 vol. 8vo. Earliest translation: see title at p. 17.
- 2 1556. London. 1 vol. 8vo. Second and revised translation: see title at p. 11.
- 3 1597. London. A most pleasant fruitfull and wittie worke, . . . of the best 1 vol. 4to. state of a publike weale, and of the new Yle called Utopia.
And now this third edition, newly corrected and amended.
- 4 1624. London. Sir T. More's Utopia . . . Now after many Impressions, 1 vol. 4to. newly corrected and purged of all errors hapned in the former edition. Printed by BER. ALSOP: who dedicates it to *Cresacre
More, of Moreplace in North Mimes in the countie of Hertford, Esquire*; next in Bloud to Sir Thomas More; . . .
- 5 1639. London. The Commonwealth of Utopia. . . . Another edition of 1 vol. 12mo. No. 4.
- 14 1808. London. Utopia . . . With copious Notes, and a Biographical and 1 vol. 4to. Literary Introduction. By the Rev. T. F. DIBDIN, F.S.A.
A reprint or the text of 1639, No. 5, which is itself a reprint of Alsop's of 1624: collated with Edition of 1551, No. 1.
- 18 1 Mar. 1869. London. 1 vol. 8vo. English Reprints: see title at p. 1.

BP. GILBERT BURNET'S TRANSLATION.

I. As a separate publication.

- 6 1684. London. Utopia . . . . translated into English.
1 vol. 8vo.
- 7 1737. Dublin. Utopia. . . . To this edition is added, a short account of 1 vol. 12mo. Sir Thomas More's Life and his Trial.
- 8 1743. Glasgow. Utopia or the Happy Republic; a Philosophical Romance, 1 vol. 8vo. in two books.
- 9 1751. Oxford. Utopia . . . . Revis'd, corrected and greatly improv'd 1 vol. 12mo. by THOMAS WILLIAMSON.
- 10 1753. Oxford. Utopia . . . The whole revis'd, corrected, and improv'd 1 vol. 12mo. by A GENTLEMAN OF OXFORD. A reprint of No. 9.
- 12 1808. London. Utopia or the Best state of a Commonwealth, Dibdin, 1 vol. 8vo. clxxix of No. 14.
- 16 *1849. London. Utopia or the Happy Republic, London Catalogue.
1 vol. 12mo.
- 17 1850. London. The Phoenix Library, selected by JOHN MINTER MOR-
1 vol. 12mo. GAN. Utopia, or The Happy Republic.

II. With other works.

- 11 1758. London. Memoirs of the Life of Sir Thomas More . . . To which 1 vol. 8vo. is added, his History of Utopia, . . . with notes historical and explanatory by F. WARNER, LL.D.
- 15 1838. London. The Masterpieces of Prose Literature. Vol. iv. Utopia:
1 vol. 8vo. or the Happy Republic, with Lord Bacon's New Atlantis.
With a preliminary discourse by J. A. ST. JOHN, Esqre.

ARTHUR CAYLEY'S (the younger) TRANSLATION.

II. With other works.

- 13 1808. London. Memoirs of Sir Thomas More, with a new translation of 2 vols. 4to. his Utopia, his History of King Richard III., and his Latin Poems. Utopia occupies ii. 1-145.

The LIFE and TRAVELS
of
RAPHAEL HYTHLODAYE.

* Probable or approximate dates.

Based chiefly—besides the present work—on Amerigo Vespucci, Son caractère, ses écrits (même les moins authentiques), sa vie et ses navigations; by F. A. DE VARNHAGEN, Brazilian Minister to Peru, Chile, and Écuador, &c. Lima, 1865, fol. See also The Life and Voyages of Americus Vesputius, by C. E. LESTER and A. FOSTER. New York, 1846, 8vo.

The same Raphael Hythlodaye (for this is his name) is very well lerned in the Latine tongue : but profounde and excellent in the Greke tongue. . . . His patrimonye that he was borne vnto, he left to his brethern (for he is a Portugal borne). p. 29. As concerning my frendes and kynsfolke (quod he) I passe not greatly for them For I thinke I haue sufficiently doone my parte towards them already. p. 33.

As concernyng this matter, I allow the ordinaunce of no nation so wel as yat which I sawe, whiles I trauailed abroade aboute the world, vsed in Persia amonge the people that comenly be called the Polylerites [Polyleritæ], p. 47. 1494. April. The King of Spain throws open the trade and navigation of the Indies to all ships taking their departure from Cadiz.

*1495. 'There [i.e. in England] I taried for the space of. iiii. or .v. monethes together, not longe after the insurrection, yat the Westernne Englishe men made agaynst their King.'

He stays with Cardinal Morton. At pp. 37-54, he gives an account of a table-talk, one day while he was in his house.

1497. May 10. The Florentine Amerigo Vespucci [b. 9 Mar. 1451—d. 22 Feb. 1512], in the employ of the King of Spain, leaves Cadiz with 4 ships. This, his first voyage, was chiefly about the Gulf of Mexico. He returns to Cadiz 15 October 1498.

1498. Oct. 15. Vespucci—again in the service of Spain—leaves Cadiz. This voyage, in part with Alonzo de Hojeda and Juan de la Cosa, brought him to the mainland of South America.

Hythlodaye, 'for the desire that he had to see, and knowe the farre Countreyes of the worlde, he ioyned himselfe in company with Amerike Vespuce, and in the. iiii. last voyages of those. iiii. . . . he continued styl in his company.' p. 29.

1500. Sept. Vespucci—entering the service of the king of Portugal—leaves Lisbon on his third voyage; in which he continues his discoveries along the coast of Brazil. He returns to Lisbon.

1501. May 14. Vespucci—still in the service of the king of Portugal—commands a ship in a squadron of 6 ships, under Gonçalo de Coelho.

1502. Sept. 7. Hythloday says, "When I was determined to entre into my. iiii. voyage, I caste into the shippe in the steade of marchandise a prety fardel of bookes, bycause I intended to come againe rather neuer than shortly."—See list at p. 119.

1503. May [June?] 10. 'Also my companion, Tricius Apinatus caried with him phisick bookes.' p. 119.

The squadron crossed the line, and on 10th Aug. saw distinctly on the horizon an island—which can be no other than Fernando de Noronha. The flag-ship, of 300 tons, was wrecked on a rock near the island, but happily the crew were

- saved. Vespucci, then 4 leagues from the island, was ordered to find in it a harbour. He missed the island and lost sight of the other ships. After 8 days, however, he saw a sail on the horizon, which on joining proved to be one of them. Both vessels then returned to the island, and found the other three ships gone; anchored, took in wood, &c., and then set out for the appointed rendezvous in case of separation; Bahia, discovered in the previous voyage. There they arrived in 18 days; and waited for 2 months and 14 days. At length tired of the delay, the two commanders determined to explore the coast ahead. Sailing southward, they at length stopped at a port, which, (according to Varnhagen), can be no other than Cape Frio. Here they found a quantity of dye-wood (brazil), with which they loaded their ships; during a stay of 5 months.
- Sept., Oct. Before returning, they left a little factory of 24 armed men in a fortress armed with 12 guns. Then setting out, in 77 days 1503. Nov. reached Lisbon on 18 June 1503; bring the earliest tidings of either themselves or their missing consorts; which on 4 Sept.
1504. Mar. 1504, Vespucci believed to be all lost. [Condensed from Varnhagen, pp. 114, 115.]
1504. April 3. Hythlodaye 'gotte the licence of mayster Americke (though it was sore against his wyll) to be one of the. xxiii. which in the ende of the laste voyage were left in the countreye of Gulike.' p. 30.
1504. June 18. After the departyng of Mayster Vespuce, when he had traiailed through and aboute many Countreyes with. v. of his companions Gulikanes [i.e. of the above 24: one of these five was the above named Tricius Apinatus, p. 119.] p. 30.
- *1505-*1510. Yf you had bene with me in Utopia, and had presentlye sene their fashions and lawes, as I dyd, whyche liued there. v. yeares, and moore, and wolde neuer haue commen thence, but only to make that newe lande knowen here. p. 69.
- Amaurote . . . wherein I liued fwe whole yeares together. p. 77.
- The ACHORIENS, whiche be situate ouer agaynste the Island of Utopia on the south easte side. p. 57.
- The MACAREINS whiche be not farre distaunt from Utopia. p. 62.
- The ZAPOLETES. This people is. 500. myles from Utopia eastwarde. p. 136.
- But because among vs foure (for no mo of vs was left aliue, two of our companye beyng dead) there was no priest, . . . at my departure. . . . p. 144.
- At the last by merueylous chaunce he [Hythlodaye] arriued in Trapobane [Ceylon] from whence he went to Caliquit [Calicut], where he chanced to fynde certayne of hys countreye shippes, wherein he retourned agayne to his Countreye, nothinge lesse then looked for. p. 30.
1515. *Nov. Sir T. More meeting Hythlodaye in the doorway of Antwerp Cathedral, describes him as 'A man well stricken in age, with a blacke sonneburned face, a longe bearde, and a cloke cast homly about his shoulders, whome, by his faouere and apparell furthwith I iudged to be a mariner.' p. 29.
1516. Nov. 1. 'Very vncertain newes' (!) subsequently of Hythlodaye. p. 165.

A fruteful /

and pleasaunt worke of the beste state of a publyque weale, and of the newe yle called Utopia: written in Latine by Syr Thomas More knyght, and translated into Englyshe
by Raphe Robynson Citizein and Goldsmythe of London, at the procurement, and earnest re= quest of George Tadlowe Citezein and Haberdassher
of the same Citie.

(.:.)

Imprinted at London
by Abraham Uele, dwelling in Pauls churcheyarde at the sygne of the Lambe. Anno,

1551.

To the right

honourable, and his verie singular good maister, maister William Cecylle esquiere, one of the two principal secretaries to the kyng his moste excellent maiestie, Kaphe Robynson wissheth continuance of health, with dayly increase of vertue, and honoure.

Upon a tyme, when tidynges came too the citie of Corinthe that kyng Philippe father to Alexander furnamed ye Great, was comming thetherwarde with an armie royall to lay siege to the citie: The Corinthians being forth with stryken with greate feare, beganne busilie, and earnestly to looke aboute them, and to falle to worke of all handes. Some to skowre and trymme vp harneis, some to carry stones, some to amende and buylde hygher the walles, some to rampiere and fortyfie the bulwarkes, and fortresses, some one thyng, and some an other for the defendinge, and strengthenyng of the citie. The whiche busie labour, and toyle of theirs when Diogenes the phylosopher sawe, hauing no profitable busines whereupon to sette himself on worke (neither any man required his labour, and helpe as expedient for the commen wealth in that necessitie) immediatly girded about him his phylosophicall cloke, and began to rolle, and tumble vp and downe hether and thether vpon the hille syde, that lieth adioyninge to the citie, his great barrel or tunne, wherein he dwelled: for other dwellynge place wold

he haue none. This feing one of his frendes, and not a litell mufynge therat, came to hym: And I praye the Diogenes (quod he) whie doeft thou thus, or what meaneft thou hereby? Forfothe I am tumblyng my tubbe to (quod he) bycaufe it where no reafon yat I only fould be ydell, where fo many be working. In femblable maner, right honorable fir, though I be, as I am in dede, of mucche leffe habilitie then Diogenes was to do any thinge, that fhall or may be for the auauancement and commoditie of the publique wealth of my natiue countrey: yet I feing euery fort, and kynde of people in their vocation, and degree bufilie occupied about the common wealthes affaires: and especially learned men dayly putting forth in writing newe inuentions, and deuifes to the furtheraunce of the fame: thought it my bounden duetie to God, and to my countrey fo to tumble my tubbe, I meane fo to occupie, and exercife mefelf in beftowing fuch spare houres, as I beinge at ye becke, and commaundement of others, cold conueniently winne to me felf: yat though no commoditie of that my labour, and trauaile to the publique weale fould arife, yet it myght by this appeare, yat myne endeuoire, and good wille hereunto was not lacking. To the accomplifhement therefore, and fullyllyng of this my mynde, and purpofe: I toke vpon me to tourne, and tranflate oute of Latine into oure Engliſhe tonge the frutefull, and profitable boke, which fir Thomas more knight compiled, and made of the new yle Utopia, conteining and fetting forth ye beft ftate, and fourme of a publique weale: A worke (as it appeareth) written almoſt fourtie yeres ago by the faid fir Thomas More ye authour therof. The whiche man, forasmuche as he was a man of late tyme, yea almoſt of thies our dayes: and for ye excellent qualities, wherewith the great goodnes of God had plentyfully endowed him, and for ye high place, and rowme, wherunto his prince had moſt graciously called him, notably wel knownen, not only among vs his countremen, but alfo in forrein countreis and nations: therefore I

haue not much to speake of him. This only I saye : yat it is much to be lamented of al, and not only of vs English men, yat a man of so incomparable witte, of so profounde knowlege, of so absolute learning, and of so fine eloquence was yet neuerthelesse so much blinded, rather with obstinacie, then with ignoraunce yat he could not or rather would not see the shining light of godes holy truthe in certein principal pointes of Christian religion : but did rather cheuse to perseuer, and continue in his wilfull and stubbourne obstinacie euen to ye very death. This I say is a thing much to be lamented. But letting this matter passe, I retourne again to Utopia. Which (as I said befor) is a work not only for ye matter yat it conteineth fruteful and profitable, but also for ye writers eloquent latine stiele pleasaunt and delectable. Which he yat readeth in latine, as ye authour himself wrote it, perfectly vnderstanding ye same : doubtles he shal take great pleasure, and delite both in ye sweete eloquence of ye writer, and also in ye wittie inuencion, and fine conueiaunce, or disposition of ye matter : but most of all in the good, and holosome lessons, which be there in great plenty, and aboundaunce. But nowe I feare greatly yat in this my simple translation through my rudenes and ignoraunce in our english tonge all the grace and pleasure of ye eloquence, wherwith ye matter in latine is finely fet forth may seme to be vtterly excluded, and lost : and therefore the frutefulnes of the matter it selfe mucche peraduenture diminished, and appayred. For who knoweth not whiche knoweth any thyng, that an eloquent stiele fetteth forth and highly commendeth a meane matter ? Where as on the other side rude, and vnlearned speche defaceth and disgraceth a very good matter. According as I harde ones a wise man say : A good tale euell tolde were better vntold, and an euell tale well tolde nedeth none other sollicitour. This thing I well pondering and wayinge with me self, and also knowing, and knowledging the barbarous rudenes of my translation was fully determined neuer

to haue put it forth in printe, had it not bene for certein frendes of myne, and especially one, whom aboue al other I regarded, a man of sage, and discret witte and in wor[l]dly matters by long vse well experienced, whoes name is George Tadowe : an honest citizein of London, and in the same citie well accepted, and of good reputation : at whoes request, and instaunce I first toke vpon my weake, and feble sholders ye heauie, and weightie bourdein of this great enterprice. This man with diuers other, but this man chiefly (for he was able to do more with me, then many other) after that I had ones rudely brought ye worke to an ende, ceassed not by al meanes possible continually to assault me, vntil he had at ye laste, what by ye force of his pitthie argumentes and strong reasons, and what by hys authority so perswaded me, that he caused me to agree and consente to the impryntyng herof. He therefore, as the chiefe perswadour, must take vpon him the daunger, whyche vpon this bolde, and rashe enterpryse shall ensue. I, as I suppose, am herin clerely acquytte, and discharged of all blame. Yet, honorable Syr for the better auoyding of enuyous and malycyous tonges, I (knowynge you to be a man, not onlye profoundly learned, and well affected towardes all fuche, as eyther canne, or wyll take paynes in ye well bestowing of that poore talente, whyche GOD hath endued them wyth : but also for youre godlye dysposytyon, and vertuous qualytyes not vnworthelye nowe placed in aucthorytye, and called to honoure) am the bolder humblye to offer and dedycate vnto youre good maystershypp thys my fymple woorke. Partly that vnder the fauffe conducte of your protection it may the better be defended from the obloquie of them, which can say well by nothing, that pleaseth not their fond, and corrupt iudgementes, though it be els both frutefull and godly : and partlye that by the meanes of this homely present I may the better renewe, and reuiue (which of late, as you know, I haue already begonne to do) yat old acquayntaunce, that was betwene you and me in the time of our childhode, being then scolefellows together. Not doubting that you for your natie goodnes, and gentelnes will accept in good parte this poore gift, as an argument, or token, that mine old good wil, and hartye affection towards you is not by reason of long tract of time, and sepearation of our bodies any thinge at all quayed and diminished, but rather (I affuer you) much augmented, and increased. This verely is ye chieffe cause, yat hath encouraged me to be so bolde with youre maistershippe. Els truelye this my poore present is of fuch simple and meane fort, that it is neyther able to recompense the least portion of your great gentelnes to me, of my part vnderferued, both in the time of our olde acquayntance, and also now lately again bountifully shewed : neither yet fitte, and mete for the very basenes of it to be offered to one so worthy, as you be. But almighty god (who therfore euer be thanked) hath auanced you to fuch fortune, and dignity, that you be of hability to accept thankfully aswell a mans good will as his gift. The same god graunte you and all yours long, and ioyfully to contynue in all godlynes

The Epistle.

and prosperytye.

(.·.)

A frutefull

pleasaunt, and wittie worke,
of the beste state of a publike
weale, and of the newe yle, called Utopia: written in Latine, by the right worthie and famous Syr Thomas More knyght, and translated into Englishe by Raphe Robynson, sometime fellowe of Corpus Christi College in Oxford, and nowe by him at this seconde edition newlie perused and corrected, and also with diuers notes in the margent
augmented.

Imprinted at London, by Abraham Uele, dwellinge in Pauls churchyarde, at the signe
of the Lambe.

The translator to the gentle reader.

Hou shalte vnderstande gentle reader that thoughe this worke of Utopia in English, come nowe the seconde tyme furth in Print, yet was it neuer my minde nor intente, that it shoulde euer haue bene Imprinted at all, as who for no such purpose toke vpon me at the firste the translation thereof: but did it onelye at the request of a frende, for his owne priuate vse, vpon hope that he wolde haue kept it secrete to hym self alone. Whom though I knew to be a man in dede, both very wittie, and also skilful, yet was I certen, that in the knowledge of the Latin tonge, he was not so well sene, as to be hable to iudge of the finenes or coursenes of my translation. Wherefore I wente the more sleightlye through with it, propoundynge to my selfe therein, rather to please my sayde frends iudgemente, then myne owne. To the meanesse of whose learning I thoughte it my part to submit, and attemper my stile. Lightlie therefore I ouer ran the whole worke, and in short tyme, with more hast, then good spede, I broughte it to an ende. But as the latin prouerbe sayeth: The hastye bitche bringeth furth blind whelpes. For when this my worke was finished, the rudenes therof shewed it to be done in poste haste. How be it, rude and base though it were, yet fortune so ruled the matter that to Imprintinge it came, and that partly against my wyll. Howebeit not beinge hable in this behalfe to resist the pitthie persuations of my frendes, and perceauing therefore none other remedy, but that furth it shoulde: I comforted myselfe for the tyme, only with this notable saying of Terence.

Ita vita est hominum, quasi quum ludas tesseriis.

Si illud, quod est maxumè opus iactu non cadit:

Illud, quod cecidit forte, id arte vt corrigas.

In which verses the Poete likeneth or compareth the life of man to a diceplaiyng or a game at the tables: Meanyng therein, if that chaunce rise not, whiche is most for the plaiers aduauntage, that then the chaunce, which fortune hathe sent, ought so connyngly to be played, as may be to the plaier least dammage. By the which worthy similitude surely the wittie Poete geueth vs to vnderstande, that though in any of our actes and doynge, (as it ofte chaunceth) we happen to faile and misse of our good pretended purpose, so that the succeffe and our intente proue thingesfarre odde: yetso we ought with wittie circumspection to handle the matter, that no euyll or incommoditie, as farre furth as may be, and as in vs lieth, do therof ensue. According to the whiche counsell, though I am in dede in comparison of an experte gamester and a conning player, but a veryebungler, yet haue I in this by chaunce, that on my side vnwares hath fallen, so (I suppose) behaued myself, that, as doubtles it might haue bene of me much more conningly handled, had I forethought so much, or doubted any such sequele at the beginninge of my plaie: so I am suer it had bene much worse then it is, if I had not in the ende loked somwhat earnestlye to my game. For though this worke came not from me so fine, so perfecte, and so exact yat at first, as surely for my smale lerning, it should haue done, yf I had then ment the publishing therof in print: yet I trust I haue now in this seconde edition taken about it such paines, yat veryefewe great faultes and notable errors are in it to be founde. Now therefore, most gentle reader, the meanesse of this simple translation, and the faultes that be therin (as I feare muche there be some) I doubt not, but thou wilt, in iust consideration of the premiffes, gentlye and fauourablye winke at them. So doynge thou shalt minister vnto me good cause to thinke my labour and paynes herein not altogether bestowed in vaine.

VALE.

U Thomas More to Peter Giles, sendeth gretynge.

Am almoſte aſhamed, righte welbeloued Peter Giles, to ſend vnto you this boke of ye Utopian commen wealth, welniegh after a yeres ſpace, whiche I am ſure you looked for within a moneth and a halfe.

And no marueil. For you knewe well ynough, that I was alreadye diſbourdened of all the labour and ſtudye belongynge to the inuention in this worke, and that I had no nede at al to trouble my braines about the diſpoſition, or conueiaunce of the matter: and therefore had herein nothing els to do, but only to rehearſe thoſe thinges, whiche you and I togethers hard maifter Raphael tel and declare. Wherefore there was no cauſe why I ſhuld ſtudy to ſetforth the matter with eloquence: for aſmuch as his talke could not be fine and eloquent, beyng firſte not ſtudied for, but ſuddein and vnpremeditate, and then, as you know, of a man better ſene in the Greke language, then in the latin tonge. And my writynge, the niegher it ſhould approche to his homely plaine, and ſimple ſpeche, ſomuche the niegher ſhuld it go to the trueth: which is the onely marke, wherunto I do and ought to directe all my trauail and ſtudy herin. I graunte and confeſſe, frende Peter, myſelfe diſcharged of ſo mûche labour, hauinge all theſe thinges ready done to my hande, that almooſte there was nothinge left for me to do. Elles either the inuention, or the diſpoſition of this matter myghte haue required of a witte neither baſe, neither at all vnlearned, both ſome time and leaſure, and alſo ſome ſtudie. But if it were requiſite, and neceſſarie, that the matter

Trueth loueth
ſimplicite and playnes.

shoulde also haue bene wrytten eloquentlie, and not alone truelye : of a fueretie that thyngc coulde I haue perfourmed by no tyme nor studye. But now feynge all these cares, stayes, and lettes were taken awaye, wherin elles so muche laboure and studye shoulde haue bene employed, and that there remayned no other thyngc for me to do, but onelye to write playnelie the matter as I hard it spoken: that in deede was a thyngc lighte and eafye to be done. Howbeit to the dispatchyngc of thys so lytle busynesse, my other cares and troubles did leaue almost lesse, then no leasure.

The authors
bussines and lettes,

Whiles I doo dayelie bestowe my time aboute lawe matters: some to pleade, some to heare, some as an arbitratoure with myne awarde to determine, some as an vmpier or a Iudge, with my sentence finallye to discuffe. Whiles I go one waye to see and visite my frende: an other waye about myne owne priuat affaires. Whiles I spende almost al the day abrode emonges other, and the residue at home among mine owne; I leaue to my self, I meane to my booke no time For when I am come home, I muste comen with my wife, chatte with my children, and talke wyth my seruantes. All the whiche thinges I reckon and accompte amonge busynesse, forasmuche as they muste of necessitie be done: and done muste they nedes be, onelesse a man wyll be straunger in his owne houle. And in any wyse a man muste so fashyon and order hys conditions, and so appoint and dispose him selfe, that he be merie, iocunde, and pleasaunt amonge them, whom eyther nature hath prouided, or chaunce hath made, or he hym selfe hath chosyn to be the felowes, and companyons of hys life: so that with to muche gentle behaioure and familiaritie, he do not marre them, and by to muche sufferaunce of his seruantes, make them his maysters. Emonge these thynges now rehearsed, stealeth awaye the daye, the moneth, the yeare. When do I write then? And all this while haue I spoken no word of slepe, neyther yet of meate, which emong a great number doth wast no lesse tyme, then doeth flepe, wherein almoste halfe the life tyme of man crepeth awaye. I therefore do wynde Meate and slepe great wasters of time. and get onelye that tyme, whiche I steale from slepe and meate. Whiche tyme because it is very litle, and yet somewhat it is, therefore haue I ones at the laste, though it be longe first, finished Utopia; and haue sent it to you, frende Peter, to reade and peruse: to the intente that yf anye thyng haue escaped me, you might put me in remembraunce of it. For though in this behalfe I do not greatlye mistruste my selfe (whiche woulde God I were somewhat in wit and learninge, as I am not all of the worste and dullest memorye) yet haue I not so great truste and confidence in it, that I thinke nothinge coulde fall out of my mynde. For Iohn Clement my boye, who Iohn Clement. as you know was there presente with vs, whome I suffer to be awaye frome no talke, wherein maye be anye profyte or goodnes (for oute of this yonge bladed and new shotte vp corne, whiche hathe alreadye begon to spring vp both in Latin and Greke learnyng, I loke for plentifull increase at length of goodly rype grayne) he I saye hathe broughte me into a greate doubt. For wheras Hythlodaye (onelesse my memorye fayle me) sayde that the bridge of Amaurote, whyche goethe ouer the riuer of Anyder is fyue hundreth pafeis, that is to say, halfe a myle in lengthe: my Iohn sayeth that two hundred of those pafeis muste be plucked away, for that the ryuer conteyneth there not aboue three hundreth pafeis in breadthe, I praye you hartelye call the matter to youre remembraunce. For yf you agree wyth hym, I also wyll saye as you saye, and confesse my selfe deceaued. But if you cannot remember the thing, then surelye I wyll write as I haue done, and as myne owne remembraunce serueth me. For as I wyll take good hede, that there be in my booke nothinge false, so yf there be anye thyng doubtfull, I wyll rather tell a lye, then make a A diuersitie betwene making a lye, and telling a lie. lie: bycause I had rather be good, then wilie. Howebeit thys matter maye easelye be remedied, yf you wyll take the paynes to aske the question of Raphael him selfe by woorde of mouthe, if he be nowe with you, or elles by youre letters. Whiche you muste nedes do for an other doubte also, that hathe chaunced, throughe whose faulte I cannot tel: whether through mine, or yours, or Raphaels. For neyther we remembred to enquire of him, nor he to tel vs in what part of the newe world Utopia is situate. The whiche thinge, I had rather haue spent no small somme of money, then that it should thus haue escaped vs: aswell for that I am ashamed to be ignoraunt in what sea that ylande standeth, wherof I write so long a treatise, as also because there be with vs certen men, and especiallie

In what parte of the worlde Utopia standeth it is vnknown.

It is thoughte of some that here is vnfaignedly ment the late famous vicare of Croydon in Surrey.

one vertuous and godly man, and a professour of diuinitie, who is excedyng desierous to go vnto Utopia: not for a vayne and curious desyre to see newes, but to the intente he maye further and increase oure religion, whiche is there alreadye luckelye begonne. And that he maye the better accomplyshe and perfourme this hys good intente, he is mynded to procure that he maye be sente thether by the hieghe Byshoppe: yea, and that he himselfe may be made Bishoppe of Utopia, beyng nothyng scrupulous herein, that he muste obteyne this Byshopricke with suete.

A godly suete.

counteth that a godly suete, which procedeth not of the desire of honoure or lucre, but onelie of a godlie zeale. Wherefore I moste earnestly desire you, frende Peter, to talke with Hythlodaye, yf you can, face to face, or els to wryte youre letters to hym, and so to woorke in thys matter, that in this my booke there maye neyther anye thinge be founde, whyche is vntrue, neyther any thinge be lacking, whiche is true. And I thynke verelye it shalbe well done, that you shewe vnto him the book it selfe. For yf I haue myssed or fayled in anye poynte, or if anye faulte haue escaped me, no man can so well correcte and amende it, as he can: and yet that can he not do, oneles he peruse, and reade ouer my booke written. Moreouer by this meanes shall you perceauē, whether he be well wyllynge and content, that I shoulde vnder- take to put this woorke in wrytyng. For if he be mynded to publyshe, and put forth his owne laboures, and trauayles himselfe, perchaunce he woulde be lothe, and so woulde I also, that in publishynge the Utopiane weale publyque, I shoulde preuent him, and take frome him the flower and grace of the noueltie of this his historie. Howbeit, to saye the verye trueth, I am not yet fullye determind with my selfe, whether I will put furth my booke or no. For the natures of men be so diuers, the phantasies of some so waywarde, their The vnkynde iudgementes of men. myndes so vnkynde, their iudgementes so corrupte, that they which leade a merie and a iocunde lyfe, folowynge their owne sensuall pleasures and carnall lustes, maye seme to be in a muche better state or case, then they that vexe and vnquiete themselves with cares and studie for the puttinge forthe and publishynge of some thyng, that maye be either profite or pleasure to others: whiche others neuertheles will disdainfully, scornefully, and vnkindly accepte the same. The moost part of al be vnlearned. And a greate number hathe learning in contempte. The rude and barbarous alloweth nothing, but that which is verie barbarous in dede. If it be one that hath a little smacke of learnynge, he reiecteth as homely geare and commen ware, whatsoeuer is not stuffed full of olde moughteaten termes, and that be worne out of vse. Some there be that haue pleasure onelye in olde rustie antiquities. And some onelie in their owne doynge. One is so fowre, so crabbed, and so vnpleasaunte, that he can away with no myrthe nor sporte. An other is so narrowe betwene ye shulders, that he can beare no iestes nor tauntes. Some felo poore foules be so afearde that at euerye snappishe woorde their nose shall be bitten of, that they stande in no lesse drede of euerye quicke and sharpe woorde, than he that is bitten of a madde dogge feareth water. Some be so mutable and wauerynge, that euery houre they be in a newe mynde, sayinge one thinge fyttinge, and an other thyng standyng. An other sorte fytteth vpon their allebencheis, and there amonge their cuppes they geue iudgement of the wittes of writers, and with greate authoritie they condempne euen as pleafeth them, euerye writer accordyng to his writinge, in moſte ſpitefull maner mockyng, lowtyng, and flowtyng them ; beyng them ſelues in the meane ſeaſon fauffe, and as ſayeth the prouerbe, oute of all daunger of gonneſhotte. For why, they be ſo ſmugge and ſmothe, that they haue not ſo much as one hearre of an honeſte man, wherby one may take holde of them. There be moreouer ſome ſo vnkynde and vngentle, that though they take great pleaſure, and delectation in the worke, yet for all that, they can not fynde in their hertes to loue the Author therof, nor to aforde him a good woorde : beyng much like vncourteous, vnthankfull, and chourliſh geſtes. Whiche when they haue with good and daintie meates well fylled their bellyes, departe home, geuyng no thanks to the feaſte maker. Go your wayes now, and make a coſtlye feaſte at youre owne charges for geſtes ſo dayntie mouthed, ſo diuers in taſte, and beſides that of ſo vnkynde and vnthankfull natures. But neuertheles (frende Peter) doo, I pray you, with Hithlo-day, as I willed you before. And as for this matter I ſhall be at my libertie, afterwardes to take newe aduiſement. Howbeit, ſeeyng I haue taken great paynes and labour in wrytyng the matter, if it may ſtande with his mynde and pleaſure, I wyll as touchyng the edition or publiſhyng of the booke, followe the counſell and aduiſe of my frendes, and ſpeciallye yours, Thus fare you well right heretely beloued frende Peter, with your gentle wife : and loue me as you haue euer done, for I loue you better then euer I dyd.

A fitte Similitude.

I The first

Booke of the communication of Raphael Hythloday, concernyng
the best state of a commen welth.

He moſte victorious and triumphant Kyng of Englande Henrye the eyght of that name, in al roial vertues, a Prince moſt pereleſſe, hadde of late in controuerſie with Charles, the right highe and mightye Kyng of Caſtell, weighty matters, and of great importaunce. For the debatement and final determination wherof, the kinges Maieſty ſent me Ambaſſadour into Flaunders, ioyned in Commiſſion with Cuthbert Tunſtall, a man doutleſſe out of compariſon, and whom the Kynges Maieſtie of late, to the great reioyfyng of all men, dyd preferre to the office of Maifter of the Rolles.

Cuthbert
Tunſtall.

But of this mannes prayſes I wyll ſaye nothyng, not bicauſe I doo feare that ſmall credence ſhalbe geuen to the teſtimonye that cometh out of a frendes mouthe: but bicauſe his vertue and lernyng be greater, and of more excellency, then that I am able to praiſe them: and alſo in all places ſo famous and ſo perfectly well knowne, that they neede not, nor oughte not of me to bee prayſed, vnleſſe I woulde ſeeme to ſhew, and fet-furth the brightnes of the ſonne with a candell, as the Prouerbe faieth. There mette vs at Bruges (for thus it was before agreed) thei whom their Prince hadde for that matter appoynted Commiſſioners: excellent men

all. The chiefe and the head of theym was the Maregraue (as thei call him) of Bruges, a right honorable man: but the wifest and the best spoken of them was George Temfice, prouost of Casselles, a man, not only by lernyng, but also by nature of singular eloquence, and in the lawes profoundly learned: but in reásonyng, and debatyng of matters what by his naturall witte, and what by daily exercife, furely he hadde few fellowes. After that we had once or twife mette, and vpon certayne poyntes or articles coude not fully and throughly agree, they for a certayne space tooke their leaue of vs, and departed to Bruxelle, there to know their Princes pleasure. I in the meane tyme (for so my bufines laye) wente streighte thence to Antwerpe. Whiles I was there abidyng, often times amonge other, but whiche to me was more welcome then annye other, dyd visite me one Peter Giles, a Citifien of Antwerpe, a man there in his countrey of honest reputation, and also preferred to high promotions, worthy truly of the hyghest. For it is hard to say, whether the yong man be in learnyng, or in honestye more excellent. For he is bothe of wonderfull vertuous conditions, and also singularly wel learned, and towards all sortes of people excedyng gentyll: But towards his frendes so kynde herted, so louyng, so faithfull, so trustye, and of so earnest affection, that it were verye harde in any place to fynde a man, that with him in all poyntes of frendshippe maye be compared. No man can be more lowlye or courteous. No man vfeth lesse simulation or diffimulation, in no man is more prudent simplicitie. Besides this, he is in his talke and communication so merye and pleasaunte, yea and that withoute harme, that throughe his gentyll intertaynement, and his sweete and delectable communication, in me was greatly abated, and diminished the feruente desyre, that I had to see my natiue countrey, my wyfe and my chyl-dren, whom then I dyd muche longe and couete to see, because that at that tyme I had been more then. iiii. Monethes from them. Vpon a certayne daye when I hadde herde the diuine seruice in our Ladies Church, which is the fayrest, the most gorgeous and curious Church of buyldyng in all the Citie, and also most frequented of people, and the seruice beyng doone, was readye to go home to my lodgyng, I chaunced to espye this foresayde Peter talkyng with a certayne Straunger, a man well stricken in age, with a blacke sonneburned face, a longe bearde, and a cloke cast homly about his shoulders, whome, by his fauoure and apparell furthwith I iudged to bee a mariner. But the sayde Peter feyng me, came vnto me, and saluted me.

And as I was aboute to answere him: see you this man, sayth he (and therewith he poynted to the man, that I sawe hym talkyng with before) I was mynded, quod he, to bryng him strayghte home to you.

He should haue ben very welcome to me, sayd I, for your sake.

Nay (quod he) for his owne sake, if you knewe him: for there is no man thys day liuyng, that can tell you of so manye straunge and vnknown peoples, and Countreyes, as this man can. And I know wel that you be very desirous to heare of suche newes.

Then I coniectured not farre a misse (quod I) for euen at the first fyght, I iudged him to be a mariner.

Naye (quod he) there ye were greatly deceyued: he hath failed in deede, not as the mariner Palinure, but as the experte and prudent prince Vliffes: Yea, rather as the auncient and sage Philosopher Plato. For this fame <sup>Raphaell</sup> Raphaell Hythlodaye (for this is his name) is <sup>Hithlodaye</sup> very well lerned in the Latine tongue: but profounde and excellent in the Greke language. Wherin he euer bestowed more studye then in the Latine, bycause he had geuen himselfe wholly to the study of Philosophy. Wherof he knew that ther is nothyng extante in Latine, that is to anye purpose, sauynge a fewe of Senecaes, and Ciceroes dooynges. His patrimonye that he was borne vnto, he lefte to his brethern (for he is a Portugall borne) and for the desire that he had to see, and knowe the farre Countreyes of the worlde, he ioyned himselfe in company with Amerike Vespuce, and in the. iii. last voyages of those. iiii. that be nowe in printe, and abrode in euery mannes handes, he continued styll in his company, fauyng that in the last voyage he came not home agayne with him. For he made suche meanes and shift, what by intretaunce, and what by importune sute, that he gotte licence of mayster Americke (though it were fore against his wyll) to be one of the. xxiiii whiche in the ende of the last voyage were left in the countrey of Gulike. He was therefore lefte behynde for hys mynde sake, as one that tooke more thoughte and care for trauailyng, then dyenge: hauyng customably in his mouth these faiynges. He that hathe no graue, is couered with the skye: and, the way to heauen out of all places is of like length and distaunce. Which fantasy of his. (if God had not ben his better frende) he had surely bought full deare. But after the departyng of Mayster Vespuce, when he had trauailed thorough and aboute many Countreyes with. v. of his companions Gulikianes, at the last by merueylous chaunce he arriued in Taprobane, from whence he went to Caliquit, where he chaunced to fynde certayne of hys Countreye shippes, wherein he retourned agayne into his Countreye, nothyng leffe then looked for.

All this when Peter hadde told me: I thanked him for his gentle kindnesse, that he had vouchsafed to bryng me to the speache of that man, whose communication: he thoughte should be to me pleasaunte, and acceptable. And therewith I tourned me to Raphaell. And when wee hadde haylfed eche other: and had spoken these commune wordes, that bee customablye spoken at the first meting, and acquaintaunce of straungers, we went thence to my house, and there in my gardaine vpon a bench couered with greene corues, we satte downe talkyng together. There he tolde vs, how that after the departyng of Vespuce, he and his fellowes that taried behynde in Gulicke, began by litle and litle, throughe fayre and gentle speache, to wyne the loue and faouere of the people of that countreye, infomuche that within shorte space, they dyd dwell amonges them, not only harmlesse, but also occupieng with them verye familiarly. He tolde vs also, that they were in high reputation and fauour with a certayne great man (whose name and Countreye is nowe quite out of my remembraunce) which of his mere liberalitie dyd beare the costes and charges of him and his fyue companions. And besides that gaue them a trustye guyde to conducte them in their iourney (which by water was in botes, and by land in wagons) and to brynge them to other Princes with verye frendlye commendations. Thus after manye dayes iourneys, he sayd, they founde townes, and Cities, and weale publiques, full of people, gouerned by good and holsome lawes. For vnder the line equinoctiall, and on bothe fydes of the same, as farre as the Sonne doth extende his course, lyeth (quod he) great, and wyde desertes and wilderneffes, parched, burned, and dried vp with continuall and intollerable heate. All thynges bee hideous, terrible, lothesome, and vnpleasaunt to beholde: All thynges out of fasyon, and comelineffe, inhabited withe wylde Beastes, and Serpentes, or at the leaste wyfe, with people, that be no lesse sauage, wylde, and noysome, then the verye beastes them selues be. But a little farther beyonde that, all thynges beginne by litle and lytle to waxe pleasaunte. The ayre softe, temperate and, gentle. The grounde couered with grene graffe. Lesse wildnesse in the beastes. At the last shall ye come agayne to people, cities and townes wherein is continuall entercourse and occupieng of merchaundise and chaffare, not only among themselues, and with their Borderers, but also with Merchauntes of farre Countreyes, bothe by lande and water. There I had occasion (sayd he) to go to many countreyes on euey fyde. For there was no shippe ready to any voyage or iourney, but I and my fellowes were into it very gladly receyued. Shippes of The shippes that thei founde first were straunge fassions made playn, flatte, and broade in the botome, trough wise. The sayles were made of great ruffhes, or of wickers, and in some places of lether. Afterwarde thei founde shippes with ridged kyeles: and fayles of canuasse, yea, and shortly after hauyng all thynges lyke oures. The shipmen also very experte and cunnyng, bothe in the sea, and in the wether. But he saide, that he founde great fauoure and frendship amonge them, The lode stone. for teachyng them the feate and the vse of the lode stone. Whiche to them before that time was vnknowne. And therefore they were wonte to be verye timorous and fearfull vpon the sea: Nor to venter vpon it, but only in the somer time. But nowe they haue suche a confidence in that stone, that they feare not stormy winter: in so dooyng farther from care then daunger, In so muche, that it is greatly to be doubted, lest that thyng, throughe their owne folish hardinesse, shall tourne them to euyll and harme, which at the first was supposed shoulde be to them good and commodious.

But what he tolde vs that he sawe in euerye countreye where he came, it were very longe to declare. Neither it is my purpose at this time to make reherfall therof. But peradventure in an other place I wyll speake of it, chiefly suche thynges as shall be profitable too bee knowen, as in speciall be those decrees and ordinaunces, that he marked to be well and wittely prouided and enacted amonge suche peoples, as do liue together in a ciuile policie, and good ordre. For of suche thynges dyd wee buselye enquire, and demaunde of him, and he likewise very willingly tolde vs of the same. But as for monsters, bycause they be no newes, of them we were nothyng inquisitiue. For nothyng is more easye to bee founde. then bee barkynge Scyllaes, rauenyng Celenes, and Lestrigones deuourers of people, and suche lyke great, and incredible monsters. But to fynde Citifens ruled by good and holsome lawes, that is an exceding rare, and harde thyng. But as he marked many fonde, and folishe lawes in those newe founde landes, so he reherfed diuers actes, and constitutions, whereby these oure Cities, Nations, Countreis, and Kyngdomes may take example to amende their faultes, enormities and errours. Wherof in another place (as I fayde) I wyll intreate.

Now at this time I am determind to reherse only that he tolde vs of the maners, customes, lawes, and ordinaunces of the Utopians. But first I wyll repete oure former communication by th[e] occasion, and (as I might faye) the drifte wherof, he was brought into the mention of that weale publique.

For, when Raphael had very prudentlye touched diuers thynges, that be amisse, some here, and some there, yea, very many on bothe partes, and againe had spoken of fuche wise lawes, and prudente decrees, as be establihed, and vsed, bothe here amonge vs, and also there amonge theym, as a man so perfecte, and experte in the lawes, and customes of euery feuerall Countrey, as though into what place soeuer he came geastwise, there he had ledde al his life: then Peter muche meruailyng at the man: Surely maister Raphael (quod he) I wondre greatly, why you gette you not into some kinges courte. For I am sure, there is no Prince liuyng, that wold not be very glad of you, as a man not only hable highly to delite him with your profounde learnyng, and this your knowlege of countreis, and peoples, but also mete to instructe him with examples, and helpe him with counsell. And thus doyng, you shall bryng your selfe in a very good case, and also be of habilitie to helpe all your frendes and kinffolke.

As concernyng my frendes and kynffolke (quod he) I passe not greatly for them. For I thinke I haue sufficiently doone my parte towards them already. For these thynges, that other men doo not departe from, vntyl they be olde and fycke, yea, whiche they be then verye lothe to leaue, when they canne no longer keepe, those very fame thynges dyd I beyng not only lustye, and in good helth, but also in the floure of my youth, diuide among my frendes and kynffolkes. Which I thynke with this my liberalitie oughte to holde them contented, and not to require nor to loke that beydes this, I shoulde for their fakes geue myselfe in bondage vnto Kinges.

Nay, God forbyd that (quod Peter) it is notte mymynde that you shoulde be in bondage to Kynges, but as a retainour to them at your pleasure. Whiche furely I thinke is the nighest waye that you can deuise howe to bestowe your time frutefully, not onlye for the priuate commoditie of your frendes, and for the generall profite of all fortes of people, but also for th[e] aduauncement of your self to a much welthier state, and condition, then you be nowe in.

To a welthier condition (quod Raphael) by that meanes, that my mynde standeth cleane agaynst? Now I lyue at libertie after myne owne mynde and pleasure, whiche I thynke verye fewe of these great states, and pieres of realmes can faye. Yea, and there be ynow of them that sue for great mens frendeshippes: and therefore thinke it no great hurte, if they haue not me, nor. iii. or. iiii. suche other as I am.

Well, I perceiue playnly frende Raphael (quod I) that you be desirous neither of richesse, nor of power. And truly I haue in no lesse reuerence and estimation a man of your mynde, then anye of them all that bee so high in power and authoritie. But you shall doo as it becometh you: yea, and accordyng to this wisdome, to this high and free courage of yours, if you can finde in your herte so to appoynt and dispose your selfe, that you mai applye your witte and diligence to the profite of the weale publique, thoughe it be somewhat to youre owne payne and hyndraunce. And this shall you neuer so wel doe, nor wyth so greate proffitte perfourme, as yf you be of some greate princes counfel, and put into his heade (as I doubt not but you wyl) honeste opinions, and vertuous perswasions. For from the prince, as from a perpetual wel sprynge, commethe amonge the people the floode of al that is good or euell. But in you is so perfitte lernynge, that wythoute anye experience, and agayne so greate experience, that wythoute anye lernynge you maye well be any kinges counfellow.

You be twyse deceaued maister More (quod he) fyrste in me, and agayne in the thinge it selfe. For neither is in me the habilitie that you force vpon me, and yf it were euer so much, yet in disquieting myne owne quietnes I should nothing further the weale publique. For first of all, the moste parte of all princes haue more delyte in warlike matters, and feates of chiuallrie (ye knowlege wherof I neither haue nor desire) than in the good feates of peace: and employe muche more study, how by right or by wrong to enlarge their dominions, than howe wel, and peaceable to rule, and gouerne that they haue alredie. Moreouer, they that be counsellours to kinges, euery one of them eyther is of him selfe so wise in dede, that he nedeth not, or elles he thinketh himself so wise, yat he wil not allowe an other mans counfel, fauing that they do shamefully, and flatteringly geue assent to the fond and folishe sayinges of certeyn great men. Whose fauours, bicause they be in high authoritie with their prince, by assentation and flatterie they labour to obteyne. And verily it is naturally geuen to all men to esteeme their owne inuentions best. So both the Rauen and the Ape thincke their owne yonge ones fairest. Than if a man in such a company, where some disdayne and haue despite at other mens inuentions, and some counte their owne best, if among suche menne (I say) a man should bringe furth any thinge, that he hath redde done in tymes paste, or that he hath sene done in other places: there the hearers, fare as though the whole existimation of their wisdome were in ieoperdye to be ouerthrowen, and that euer after thei shoulde be counted for verye disorderdes, vnles they could in other mens inuentions pycke out matter to reprehend, and find fault at.

If all other poore helpes fayle: then this is Triptakers. their extreame refuge. These thinges (say they) pleased our forefathers and auncestours: wolde God we coulde be so wise as thei were: and as though thei had wittely concluded the matter, and with this answere stopped euery mans mouth, thei fitte downe againe. As who should sai, it were a very daungerous matter, if a man in any pointe should be founde wiser, then his forefathers were. And yet bee we content to suffre the best and wittiest of their decrees to lye vnexecuted: but if in any thing a better ordre might haue ben taken, then by them was, there we take fast hold, findyng therin many faultes. Manye tymes haue I chaunced vpon such proude, leude, ouerthwarte, and wayward iudgements, yea, and once in England:

I prai you Syr (quod I) haue you ben in our countrey?

Yea forsoth (quod he) and there I taried for the space of. iiii. or. v. monethes together, not longe after the infurrection, yat the Westerne English men made agaynst their Kyng, which by their owne miserable and pitiful slaughte was suppressed and ended. In the meane feason I was muche bounde and beholdyng to the righte reuerende father, Ihon Morton, Archebishop and Cardinal of Canterbury, and at that time also lorde Chauncelloure of Englande: a man Mayster Peter (for Mayster More knoweth already that I wyll faye) not more honorable for his authoritie, then for his prudence and vertue. He was of a meane stature, and though stricken in age, yet bare he his bodye vpright. In his face did shine such an amiable reuerence, as was pleasaunte to beholde, Gentill in communication, yet earnest, and sage. He had great delite manye times with roughe speache to his sewters, to proue, but withoute harme, what prompte witte, and what bolde spirite were in euery man. In the which as in a vertue much agreinge with his nature, so that therewith were not ioyned impudency, he toke greate delectatyon. And the same person, as apte and mete to haue an administratyon in the weale publique, he dyd louingly embrace. In his speche he was fyne, eloquent, and pytthye. In the lawe he had profounde knowledge, in witte he was incomparable, and in memory wonderful excellent. These qualityes, which in hym were by nature singular, he by learnyng and vse had made perfecte. The Kyng put muche truste in his counfel, the weale publyque also in a maner leaned vnto hym, when I was there. For euen in the chiefe of his youth he was taken from schole into the Courte, and there passed

all his tyme in much trouble and busines, beyng continually tumbled and tossed in the waues of dyuers misfortunes and aduersities. And so by many and greate daungers he lerned the experience of the worlde, whiche so beinge learned can not easely be forgotten. It chaunced on a certayne daye, when I fate at his table, there was also a certayne laye man cunnyng in the lawes of youre Realme. Who, I can not tell wherof takynge occasion, began diligently and earnestly to prayse that stryete and rygorous iustice, which at that tyme was there executed vpon fellones, who as he sayde, were for the most parte. xx. hanged together vpon one gallowes. And, seyng so fewe escaped punyshment, he sayde he coulde not chuse, but greatly wonder and maruel, howe and by what euil lucke it shold so come to passe, that theues neuertheles were in euery place so ryffe and so rancke. Naye Syr quod I (for I durst boldely speake my minde before the Cardinal) maruel nothinge here at: for this punyshment of theues Of lawes not made according to equitie. passeth the limites of Iustice, and is also very hurtefull to the weale publique. For it is to extreame and cruel a punyshment for thefte, and yet not sufficient to refrayne and withhold men from thefte. For simple thefte is not so great an offense, that it owght to be punished with death: Neither ther is any punyshment so horrible, that it can kepe them from stealyng, which haue no other craft, wherby to get their liuing. Therefore in this poynte, not you onely, but also the most part of the world, be like euyll scholemaisters, which be readyer to beate, then to teache, their scholers. For great and horrible punyshmentes be appointed for theues. By what meanes ther might be fewer theues and robbers. whereas much rather prouision should haue ben made, that ther were some meanes, whereby they myght get their liuyng, so that no man shoulde be dryuen to this extreme necessitie. firste to steale, and then to dye. Yes (quod he) this matter is wel ynough prouided for already. There be handy craftes, there is husbandrye to gette their liuyng by, if they would not willingly be nought.

Nay, quod I, you shall not skape so: for first of all, I wyll speake nothyng of them, that come home oute of the warres, maymed and lame, as not longe ago, oute of Blacke heath felde, and a litell before that, out of the warres in Fraunce: fuche, I faye, as put their liues in ieoperdye for the weale publiques or the kynges sake, and by reason of weakenesse and lameness be not hable to occupye their olde craftes, and be to aged to lerne newe: of them I wyll speake nothing, forasmuch as warres haue their ordinarie recourse. But let vs con-

Idlenesse the mother of theues.

fidre those thinges that chaunce daily before our eyes. First there is a great nombre of gentlemen, which can not be content to liue idle themselves, lyke dorres, of yat whiche other haue laboured for: their tenautes I meane, whom they polle

Landlordes by the way check-ed for Rent-
raisynge.

and shaue to the quicke, by reisyng their rentes (for this onlye poynte of frugalitie do they vse, men els through their lauasse and prodigall spendynge, hable to brynge theymselves to verye beggerye) these gentlemen, I say, do not only liue in idleness themselves, but also carrye about

Of Idle seruyng men come
theues.

with them at their tailes a great flocke or traine of idle and loyteryng seruynge men, which neuer learned any craft wherby to gette their liuynges. These men as sone as their mayster is dead, or be sicke themselves, be incontinent thrust out of dores. For gentlemen hadde rather keepe idle perones, then sicke men, and many times the dead mans heyre is not hable to mainteine so great a house, and kepe so many seruing men as his father dyd. Then in the meane season they that be thus destitute of seruice, either starue for honger, or manfullye playe the theues. For what would you haue them to do? When they haue wandred abrode so longe, vntyl they haue worne threde bare their apparell, and also appaired their helth, then gentlemen because of their pale and sickely faces, and patched cotes, wil not take them into seruice. And husbandmen dare not set them a worke: Knowynge wel ynoughe that he is nothing mete to doe trewe and faythful seruice to a poore man wyth a fpade and a mattoke for fmall wages and hard fare, whyche beyng deyntely and tenderly pampered vp in ydilnes and pleasure, was wont with a fworde and a buckler by hys fyde to iette through the ftrete with a bragginge loke, and to thynke hym felfe to good to be anye mans mate. Naye by faynt Mary fir (quod the lawier) not fo. For this kinde of men muſte we make moſte of. For in them as men of ſtowler ſtomackes, bolder ſpirites, and manlyer courages then handycraftes men and plowemen be, doth conſiſte the whole powre, ſtrength, and uiſſaunce of oure army, when we muſte fight in battayle. Forſothe fir as well you myghte faye (quod I) yat for warres fake you muſte cheryſhe theues. For fuerly you ſhall neuer lacke theues, whyles you haue them. No nor theues be not the moſt falſe and faynt harted ſoldiers, nor ſouldiours be not the cowardleſte theues : fo wel thees. ii. craftes agree together. But this faulte, though it be much vſed amonge you, yet is it not peculiar to you only, but comen alſo almoſte to all nations. Yet Fraunce beſides this is troubled and infected with a much forer plage. The whole royalme is fylled and beſieged with hiered ſouldiours in peace tyme (yf that bee peace) whyche be brought in vnder the ſame colour and pretenſe, that hath perſuaded you to kepe theſe ydell ſeruyng men. For thies wyſefooles and very archdoltes thought the wealthe: of the whole cuntry herin to conſiſt, if there were euer in a redineſſe a ſtronge and ſure garrifon, ſpecially of old practiſed ſouldiours, for they put no truſt at all in men vnexerciſed. And therefore they muſt be forced to ſeke for warre, to the ende thei may euer haue practiſed ſouldiours, and cunnyng manſleiers, leſt that (as it is pretely fayde of Saluſt) their handes and their mindes through idlenes or lacke of exerciſe, ſhould waxe dul. But howe pernitiouſ and peſtilenet a thyng it is to maintayne ſuche beaſtes, the Frenche men, by their owne harmes haue learned, and the examples of the Romaynes, Carthaginiens, Syriens, and of man-

Betwene ſoldiers and theues ſmal diuerſitie.

ye other countreyes doo manifestly declare. For not onlye the Empire, but also the fieldes and Cities of all these, by diuers occasions haue been ouerrunnd and destroyed of their ownearmies before hande had in a redinesse.

What incon-ueniencies com-
 eth by continuall gari-
 sons of souldiours.

Now how vnneccessary a thinge this is,
 hereby it maye appeare: that the Frenche souldiours,
 which from their youth haue ben practised and inured
 in feates of armes, do not cracke nor aduaunce themselves to haue very often gotte the vpper hand and maistry of your new made and vnpractised souldiours.
 But in this poynte I wyll not vse many woordes, leste perchaunce I maye seeme to flatter you. No nor those fame handy crafte men of yours in Cities, nor yet the rude and vplandish plowmen of the countreye, are not supposed to be greatly affrayde of your gentlemens idle feruyngmen, vnlesse it be fuche as be not of body or stature correspondent to their strength and courage,
 orels whose bolde stomakes be discouraged throughe pouertie. Thus you may see, that it is not to be feared lest they shoulde be effeminated, if thei were brought vp in good craftes and labourfome woorkes, whereby to gette their liuynges, whose stout and sturdye bodyes (for gentlemen vouchsafe to corrupte and spill none but picked and chofen men) now either by reason of rest and idlenesse be brought to weakenesse: orels by easy and womanly exercises be made feble, and vnhable to endure hardnesse. Truly howe so euer the case standeth, thys me thinketh nothing auayleable to the weale publique, for warre sake, whiche you neuer haue, but when you wyl your selves, to keepe and main-teyn an vnnumerable flocke of that fort of men, that be so troublesome and noyous in peace. Wherof you ought to haue a thousand times more regarde, then of warre. But yet this is not only the necessary cause of stealing. There is an other, whych, as I suppose, is p[ro]per and peculiar to you Englishmen alone. What is that, quod the Cardinal? forsoth my lorde (quod I) your shepe that were wont to be so meke and tame, and so smal eaters, now, as I heare saye, be become so great deuowerers and so wylde, that they eate vp, English shepe deuourers of men. and swallow downe the very men them selves. They consume, destroye, and deuoure whole fieldes, howses, and cities. For looke in what partes of the realme doth growe the fynest, and therefore dearest woll, there noble men, and gentlemen: yea and certeyn Abbottes, holy men no doubt, not contenting them selves with the yearely reuenues and profytes, that were wont to grow to theyr forefathers and predeceffours of their landes, nor beyng content that they liue in rest and pleasure nothinge profiting, yea much noyinge the weale publique: leaue no grounde for tillage, thei inclose al into pastures: thei throw doune houses: they plucke downe townes, and leaue nothing standyng, but only the churche to be made a shepewyse. And as thoughe you losse no small quantity of grounde by forestes, chases, laundes, and parkes, those good holy men turne all dwellinge places and all glebeland into defolation and wildernes. Therefore that on couetous and vnfatiable cormaraunte Shepe maisters decayers of husbandrye. and very plage of his natyue contrey maye compasse aboute and inclose many thousand akers of grounde to gether within one pale or hedge, the husbandmen be thrust owte of their owne, or els either by coueyne and fraude, or by violent oppression they be put beydes it, or by wronges and iniuries thei be so weryed, that they be compelled to sell all: by one meanes therefore or by other, either by hooke or crooke they muste needes departe awaye, poore, felye, wretched soules, men, women, husbands, wiues, fatherlesse children, widowes, wofull mothers, with their yonge babes, and their whole houfhold smal in substance, and muche in numbere, as husbandrye requireth manye handes. Awaye thei trudge, I say, out of their knowen and accustomed houses, fyndyng no place to reste in. All their houfholde stufte, whiche is verrye litle woorth, thoughe it myght well abide the sale: yet beeyng sodainely thruste oute, they be con-

The decaye of husbandry causeth beggery, which is the mother of vagaboundes and theues.

strayned to sell it for a thing of nought. And when they haue wandered abrode tyll that be spent, what can they then els doo but steale, and then iustly pardy be hanged, or els go about a beggyng. And yet then also they be caste in prifon as vagaboundes, because they go aboute and worke not: whom no man wyl set a worke, though thei neuer so willyngly profre themselves therto. For one Shepheard or Heardman is ynoughe to eate vp that grounde with cattel, to the occupieng wherof aboute husbandrye manye handes

The cause of dearta of victuales.

were requisite. And this is also the cause why victualles be now in many places dearer. Yea, besides this the price of wolle is so ryfen, that poore folkes, which were wont to worke it, and make cloth therof, be nowe hable to bye none at all. And by thys meanes verye manye be forced to forsake worke, and to geue them selves to idelnesse. For after that so much grounde was inclosed for pasture, an infinite multitude of shepe dyed of the rotte, fuche vengeaunce God toke of their inordinate and vnfaciable couetousnes, sendinge amonge the shepe that pestiferous morrein, whiche much more iustly shoulde haue fallen on the shepemaisters owne heades. And though the number of shepe increase neuer so faste, yet the price falleth not one myte, because there be so fewe

What inconuenience commeth of dearth of wolle.

The cause of dearth of wol.

fellers. For they be almooste all comen in- to a fewe riche mennes handes, whome no neade forceth to sell before they lust, and they luste not before they maye sell as deare as they luste. Now the same

Dearth of cattel with the cause therof.

cause bringeth in like dearth of the other kindes of cattell, yea and that so much ye more, bicause that after fermes plucked downe, and husbandry decaied, there is no man that passethe for the breadynge of younge stoore. For these riche men brynge not vp the yonge ones of greate cattel as they do lambes. But first they bie them abrode verie chepe, and afterward when they be fatted in their pastures, they sell them agayne excedyng deare. And therefore (as I suppose) the whole incommoditie hereof is not yet felte. For yet they make dearth onely in those places, where they sell. But when they shall fetch them away from thence wheare they be bredde faster then they can be broughte vp: then shall there also be felte greate dearth, floore beginning there to faile, where the ware is boughte. Thus the vnreasonable couetousnes of a few hath turned yat thing to the vtter vndoing of your ylande, in the whiche thyng the cheife felicitie of your realme did consist. For this greate dearth of victualles causeth men to kepe as litle houses, and as smale hospitalitie as they possible maye, and to put away their seruantes: whether, I pray you, but a beggyng: or elles (whyche thes gentell bloudes, and stoute stomackes, wyll sooner set their myndes vnto) a stealing? Nowe to amende the matter, to this wretched beggerie, and miserable pouertie is ioyned greate wantonnes, importunate superfluitie, and exceffiue riote. For not only gentle mennes seruantes, but also handicrafe men: yea and almooste the ploughmen of the countrey, with al other sortes of people, vse muche straunge and proude newfanglenes in their apparell, and to muche prodigall riotte, and sumptuous fare at their table. Nowe bawdes, queines, whoores, harlottes, strumpettes, brothelhouses, stewes, and yet an other stewes wynetauernes, ale houses, and tiplinge houses, with so manye noughtie, lewde, and vnlawfull games, as dyce, cardes, tables, tennis, boules, coytes, do not all these sende the haunters of them streyghte a stealyng when theyr money is gone? Caste oute these pernicious abominations, make a lawe, that they, whiche plucked downe fermes, and townes of husbandrie, shal reedifie them, or els yelde, and vprender the possession therof to fuche, as wil go to the cost of buylding them anewe. Suffer not these riche men

Dearth of victuales is the decay of house keeping; whereof ensueth beggery and thefte.

Excesse in apparell and diet a mainteiner of beggery and thefte.

Bawdes, whoores, wynetauernes, alehouses, and vnlawfull games be very mothers of theues.

to bievpal, to ingrosse, and forstalle, and with their monopolie to kepe the market alone as please them.

Rich men in-grossers and forestallers. Let not so many be brought vp in idelnes, let husbandry and tillage be restored, let clothe-working be renewed, that ther may be honest labours for this idell fort to passe their tyme in profitablye, whiche hitherto either pouertie hath caused to be theues, or elles nowe be either vagabondes, or idel feruing men, and shortelye wilbe theues. Doubtles onles you finde a remedy for these enormities, you shall in vaine aduance your selues of executing iustice vpon fellows. For this iustice is more beautiful in apperaunce, and more florishynge to the shewe, then either iuste or profitable. For by suffring your youthe wantonlie, and viciously to be brought vp, and to be infected, euen frome their tender age, by litle and litle with vice: then a goddes name to be punished, when they commit the same faultes after being come to mans state, which from their youthe they were euer like to do: In this pointe, I praye you, what other thing do you, then make theues, and then punish them? Now as I was thus speakinge, the Lawier began to make hym selfe readie to answere, and was determined with him selfe to vse the common fashion, and trade of disputers, whiche be more diligent in reherfinge, then answering, as thinking the memorie worthy of the chief praise. In dede sir, quod he, you haue said wel, being but a straunger, and one that myghte rather heare some thing of these matters, then haue any exacte or perfecte knowledge of the same, as I wil incontinent by open proffe make manifest and plaine. For firste I will reherse in order all that you haue sayde: then I wyll declare wherein you be deceaued, through lacke of knowledge, in all oure fashions, maners and customes: and last of all I will aunswere youre argumentes, and confute them every one. Firste therefore I wyll begynne where I promysed. Foure thynges you semed to me. Holde youre peace, quod the Cardinall: for it appeareth that you will make no shorte aunswere, which make such a beginnyng. Wherefore at this time you shall not take the paynes to make youre aun[s]were, but kepe it to youre nexte meatynge, which I woulde be righte glad, that it mighte be euen to morrowe next, onles either you or mayster Raphael haue any earnest let. But nowe mayster Raphael, I woulde very gladlye heare of you, why you thinke thefte not worthye to be punished with deathe, or what other punishmente you can deuise more expedient to the weale publique. For I am sure you are not of that minde, that you woulde haue thefte escape vnpunished. For yf nowe the extreme punishmente of deathe can not cause them to leaue stealinge, then yf ruffians and robbers shoulde be fuer of their lyues: what violence, what feare were hable to holde their handes from robbinge, whiche woulde take the mitigation of the punishmente, as a a verye prouocation to the mischiefe?

Suerlye my lorde, quod I, I thinke it not ryght nor iustice, that ye losse of money should cause the losse of mans life. For myne opinion is, that all the goodes in the worlde are not hable to counteruayle mans life. But if they would thus say: that the breakynge of iustice, and the transgression of the lawes is recompensed with this punishment, and not the losse of the money. then why maye not this extreme and rigorous iustice wel be called plaine iniurie? For so cruell gouernaunce, so streite rules, and vnmerciful lawes be not allowable, that if a small offense be committed, by and by the sword should be drawen: Nor so stoical ordinaunces are to be borne withall, as to counte al offenses of suche equalitie, that the killing of a man, or the takyng of his money from him were both a matter, and the one no more heinous offense then the other: betwene the whyche two, yf we haue anye respecte to equitie, no similitude or equalitie consisteth. God commaundeth vs that we shall not kill. And be we

He is worthe-
 lie put to silence
 that is to full
 of wordes.

That thefte ought not to be punished by death.

Straite lawes
 not allowable.

then so hastie to kill a man for takinge a litle money? And if any man woulde vnderstande killing by this commaundement of God, to be forbidden after no larger wife, then mans constitutions define killynge to be law-

That mans law ought not to be preiudicial to gods law.

full, then whye maye it not lykewise by mans constitutions be determined after what fort whordome, fornication, and periurie may be lawfull? For where as by the permission of God, no man hath power to kil neither himself, nor yet anye other man: then yf a lawe made by the consent of men, concerninge slaughter of men: oughte to be of suche strengthe, force, and vertue, that they which contrarie to the commaundement of God haue killed those, whom this constitution of man commaunded to be killed, be cleane quite and exempte out of the bondes and daunger to Gods commaundement: shall it not then by this reason follow, that the power of Gods commaundement shall extende no further, then mans lawe doeth define, and permitte? And so shall it come to passe, that in like maner mans constitutions in al thinges shal determine how farre the obseruation of all Gods commaundementes shall extende. To be shorte Moyfes law, though it were vngentle and sharpe, as a law that was geuen to bondmen, yea; and them very obstinate, stubborne, and styfnecked: yet it punished theste

Theste in the olde lawe not punished by death.

by the purse, and not wyth death. And let vs not thinke that God in the newe law of clemencie and mercye, vnder the whiche he ruleth vs with fatherlie gentlenes, as his deare children hathe geuen vs greater scoupe and licence to the execution of cruelte, one vpon another. Nowe ye haue heard the reasons whereby, I am perswaded that this punishment is vnlawful. Furthermore I thinke

What inconuenience ensueth of punishynge theft with death.

ther is no body that knoweth not, how vnreasonable, yea: how pernicious a thinge it is to the weale publike, that a theste and an homicide or murderer, shoulde suffer equall and like punishment. For the theste feynge that man, that is condempned for thefte in no leffe ieoperdie, nor iudged to no leffe punifhment, then him that is conuicte of manflaughter: throughe this cogitation onelye he is ftrongly and forciblye provoked, and in a maner conftreined to kill him, whome els he would haue but robbed.

Punifhing of theft by death causeth the thefe to be a murtherer.

For the murder beyng ones done, he is in leffe feare, and in more hoope that the deede fhall not be bewrayed or knowen, feyng the partye is nowe deade, and rydde oute of the waye, which onelye mighte haue vttered and difclofed it. But if he chaunce to be taken and difcriued: yet he is in no more daunger and ieoperdie, then if he had committed but fingle felonye.

Therefore whiles we go about with fuche crueltie to make theues aferd, we prouoke them to kil good men. Now as touchinge this queftion, what punifhement were more commodious and better: that truelye in my iudgemente is eafier to be founde, then what punifhment might be wurse. For why fhould we doubt that to be a good and a profytable waye for the punifhement of offendours, whiche we knowe did in tymes pafte fo longe please the Romaines, men in the adminiftration of a weale publique moofte experte, politique, and cunnyng?

What lawfull punifhment may be deuifed for theft.

Such as amonge them were conuicte of great and heynous trespaces, them they condempned into ftone quarries, and into mienes to digge mettalle, there to be kepte in cheynes all the dayes of their life.

Howe the Romaines punifhed theft.

But as concernyng this matter, I allow the ordinaunce of no nation fo wel as yat which I fawe, whiles I trauailed abroad aboute the worlde, vfed in Perfia amonge the people that commenly be called the Polylerites. Whofe land is both large and ample, and alfo well and wittelye gouerned: and the people in all conditions free and ruled by their owne lawes, fauinge that they paye a yearelye tribute to the great king of Perfia. But bicaufe they be farre from the fea, compaffed and inclofed, almoft rounde aboute with hyghe moun-

A worthy and commendable punifhment of theues in the weale publique of the Polylerites in Perfia.

taines, and do content them felues with the fruites of their owne land, whiche is of it felfe verye fertile and frutfull: for this cause neither they go to other countreis, nor other come to them. And accordynge to the olde custome of the land, they desire not to enlarge the boundes of their dominions: and those that they haue by reason of the highe hilles be easely defended: and the tribute whiche they paye to their chiefe lord and kinge, setteth them quite and free from warfare. Thus their life is commodious rather then gallante, and may better be called happie: or welthy, then notable or famous. For they be not knowen asmuch, as by name, I suppose sauing only to theyr next neighbours and borderes. They that in his lande be atteinted and conuict of felony, make restitution of that which they stole, to the righte owner: and not (as they do in other landes) to the kinge: whome they thinke to haue no more righte to the thieftolen thinge, then the thiefe him felfe hathe. But if the thing be losse or made away, then the value of it is payde of the goodes of such offenders, which els remaineth all whole to their wiues, and children. And they them felues be condempned to be common laborers, and, oneles the thefte be very heinous, they be neyther locked in prifon, nor fettered in giues, but be vntied and go at large, laboring in the common workes. They that refuse labour, or go slowly and slacklye to their worke, be not onelye tied in cheynes, but also pricked forward with stripes. But beinge diligente aboute theyr worke they liue without checke or rebuke. Euery night they be called in by name: and be locked in theyr chambers. Beside their dayly labour, their life is nothing hard or incommodious. Their fare is indifferent good, borne at the charges of the weale publike, bicause they be commen seruantes to the commen wealth. But their charges in all places of the lande is not borne alike. For in some partes that which is bestowed vpon them is gathered of almes. And thoughe that waye be vncertain, yet for them that do otherwise.

A priuie nippe

Theues condempned to be commen labourers.

the people be so full of mercy and pitie, that none is found more profitable or plentiful. In some places certain landes be appointed hereunto: of the reuenues whereof they be maintained. And in some places euerye man geueth a certain tribute for ye same vse and purpose. Againe in some partes of the land these seruing men (for so be these Seruing men. dampned persons called) do no common worke, but as euerye priuate man nedeth laborours, so he commeth into the markette place, and there hierethe some of them for meate and drinke, and a certaine limited waiges by the daye, sumwhat cheper then he shoulde hire a free man. It is also lawefull for them to chastice the slouth of these seruinge men with stripes. By this meanes they neuer lacke worke, and besides the gayninge of their meate and drinke, euerye one of them bringeth dailie some thing into the common treasourie. All and euery one of them be apparailled in one coloure. Their heades be not polled or shauen, but rounded a lytle aboute the eares. And the tpye of the one eare is cut of. Euery one of them maye take meate and drinke of their frendes, and also a coate of their owne colloure: but to receiue money is deathe, aswell to the geuer, as to the receiuoure. And no lesse iopardie it is for a free man to receiue moneye of a seruyng manne for anye maner of cause: and lykewise for seruinge men to touche weapons. The seruinge men of euerye seuerall shire be distincte and knowne frome other by their seuerall and distincte badges: whiche to caste awaye is death: as it is also to be sene oute of the precincte of their owne shire, or to talke with a seruinge man of another shyre. And it is lesse daunger to them, for to intende to An euell intent esteemed as the dede. runne awaye, then to do it in dede. Yea and to conceal suche an enterpries in a seruinge man it is deathe, in a free man seruitude. Of the contrarie parte, to him that openeth and vttereth suche counselles, be decreed large giftes: to a free man a great some of money, to a seruing man freedome:

and to them bothe forgeuenes and pardone of that they were of counfell in that pretence. So that it can neuer be so good for them to go forewarde in their euyl purpose, as by repentaunce to tourne backe. This is the lawe and order in this behalfe, as I have shewed you. Wherein what humanitie is vsed, howe farre it is frome

The right end
and intent of punishment.

crueltie, and howe commodious it is, you do playnelye perceauē: For asmuche as the ende of their wrath and punyshemente intendeth nothyng elles, but the destruction of vices, and fauyng of menne: wyth so vsyng, and ordering them, that they can not chuse but be good, and what harme so euer they did before, in the refidewe of theyr life to make amendes for the same. Moreouer it is so litle feared, that they shoulde tourne againe to their vicious conditions, that wayefaringe men wyl for their sauegarde chuse them to theyr guydes before any other, in euery thei chaunging and taking new. For if they woulde committe robbery, they haue nothyng aboute them meate for that purpose. They may touch no weapons: money founde aboute them shoulde betraie the robbery. They shoulde be no sooner taken with the maner, but furthwith they shoulde be punished. Neither they can haue any hope at all to skape away by flienge. For howe shoulde a man, that in no parte of his apparell is like other men, flye preuelie and vnknown, onles he woulde runne away naked? Howebeit so also flyng he shoulde be discried by the roundyng of his heade, and his eare marke. But it is a thinge to be doubted, that they will laye theyr heddes together, and conspire againste the weale publique. No no I warrante you. For the seruyng men of one sheire alone coulde neuer hoope to bringe to passe suche an enterprise, without sollicitinge, entyng, and alluryng the seruinge men of manye other shieres to take their partes. Whiche thinge is to them so impossible, that they maye not asmuch as speake or talke together, or salute one another. No it is not to be thoughte that they woulde

make theyr owne countrey men and companions of their counsell in suche a matter, whiche they knowe well should be ieopardie to the concealour thereof, and great commoditie and goodnes to the opener and detectour of the same. Whereas on the other parte, there is none of them all hopeles or in dispaire to recouer againe his former estate of fredome, by humble obedience, by paciente suffringe, and by geuing good tokens and likelyhoode of himselfe, that he wyll euer after that, lyue like a trewe, and an honest-man. For euerye yeare diuers of them be restored to their fredome: throughe the commendation of their patience. Whan I had thus spoken, sayinge moreouer that I coulde see no cause why this ordre might not be had in Englande with muche more profyte, then the Iustice which the lawyer so heighly prayfed: Naye, quod the lawier, this coulde neuer be so stablyshed in Englande, but that it must nedes bringe the weale publike into great ieoperdie and hafarde. And as he was thus sayinge, he shaked his heade, and made made a wrie mouthe, and so he helde his peace. And all that were there present, with one assent agreed to his sayinge. Well, quod the Cardinall, yet it were harde to iudge withoute a proffe, whether this order would do wel here or no. But when the sentence of death is geuen, if than the kinge shoulde commaunde execution to be defferred and spared, and would proue this order and fassion: takinge awaye the priuiliges of all faintuaries: if then the profe shoulde declare the thinge to be good and profitable, than it were wel done that it were stablyshed: Els the condempned and reprimed persons may aswel and as iustly be put to death after this profe, as when they were first cast. Neither any ieoperdie can in the meane space growe herof. Yea, and me thynketh that these vagaboundes may very wel be ordered after <sup>Vagaboundes.</sup> the same fassion, against whom we haue hitherto made so many lawes, and so litle preuailed. When the Cardinall had thus faide, than euery man gaue greate praise to my sayinges, whiche a litle before they had disallowed. But moost of al was esteemed that which was spoken of vagaboundes, bicause

 it was the cardinalles owne addition. I can not tell whether it were best to reherse the communication that folowed, for it was not very sad. But yet you shall heare it, for there was no euil in it, and partlye
 it pertained to the matter before saide. There chaunced to stand by a certein iesting parasite, or scoffer, which wold seme to resemble and counterfeit ye foole. But he did in suche wise counterfeit, that he was almost ye verye same in dede that he labored to represent: he so studied with wordes and sayinges brought furth so out of time and place to make sporte and moue laughter, that he himselfe was oftener laughed at then his iestes were. Yet the foolishe fellowe brought out now and then such indifferent and reasonable stufte,
 that he made the prouerbe true, which saieth: he that shoteth oft, at the last shal hit the mark. So that when one of the company sayd, that throughe my communication a good order was founde for theues, and that the Cardinal also had wel prouided for vagaboundes,
 so that only remained some good prouision
 to be made for them that through sicknes
 and age were fallen into pouertie, and were become so impotent and vnweldie, that they were not hable to worke for their liuinge: Tufhe (quod he) let me alone with them: you shall se me do well ynough with them. For I had rather then any good, that this kinde of people were driuen sumwher oute of my sight, they haue so fore troubled me manye times and ofte, when they haue wyth their lamentable teares begged money
 of me: and yet they coulde neuer to my mynde so tune their songe, that thereby they euer got of me one farthinge. For euer more the one of these two chaunced:
 either that I would not, or els that I could not, bicause
 I had it not. Therefore now they be waxed wise. For when they see me go by, bicause they will not leese theyr labour, they let me passe and faye not one worde

The wauering iudgementes
 of flatterers.

Sicke, aged,
 impotent persons and beg-
 gers.

to me. So they loke for nothings of me, no in good sothe no more, then yf I were a priest, or a monke. But I will make a lawe, that all these beggers shall be distributed, and bestowed into houses of religion. The men shall be made laye brethren, as they call them, and the women nunnnes. Hereat the Cardinal smiled, and allowed it in iest, yea and all the residue in good earnest. But a certeine freare graduate in diuinitie, toke such pleasure and delite in this ieste of priestes and monkes, that he also beyngel elles a man of grislie and sterne grauitie, began merilie and wantonlye to ieste and taunt. Naye, quod he, you shall not so be ridde and dispatched of beggers, oneles you make some prouision also for vs frears. Why, quod the iester, that is done alreadie, for my lord him selfe set a verie good order for you, when he decreed that vagaboundes should be kept strait, and set to worke: for you be the greatest and veriest vagaboundes that be. This iest also, when they sawe the Cardinall not disproue it, every man toke it gladly, sauynge onelye the Frear. For he (and that no marueile) beyngel thus touched on the quicke, and hit on the gaule, so fret, so fumed, and chafed at it, and was in such a rage, that he could not refraine himselfe from chidinge, skolding, railing, and reuiling. He called the fellow ribbalde, villaine, iauel, backbiter, sclaunderer, and the childe of perdition: cingel therwith terrible threateninges out of holie Scripture. Then the iestyngel scoffer beganne to playe the scoffer in dede, and verely he was good at yt, for he could play a part in that play no man better. Patient youre selfe good maister Freare, quod he, and be not angrie, for scripture saieth: in youre patience you shall saue your soules. Then the Freare (for I will rehearse his own verie woordes) No gallous wretche, I am not angrie (quod he) or at the leaste wife, I do not sinne: for the Psalme saith, be you angrie, and sinne not. Then the Cardinal spake gently to the freare, and desired him to quiete him-

A comen proverbe amonge beggers.

A mery talke betwene a Frere and a foole.

Talke qualified according to the person that speaketh.

selfe. No my lord, quod he, I speake not but of a good zeale as I oughte: for holie men had a good zeale. Wherefore it is sayd: the zeale of thy house hath eaten me. And it is songe in the church The skorners of Helizeus, whiles he went vp into the house of God, felte the zeale of the bald, as peradventure the skorning vilaine ribaulde shall feele. You do it (quod the Cardinall) perchaunce of a good mynde and affection: but me thinketh you should do, I can not tell whether more holilie, certes more wisely, yf you woulde not fet youre witte to a fooles witte, and with a foole take in hande a foolishe contention. No forsoeth my lorde (quod he) I shoulde not do more wyfelye. For Salomon the wyfe faieth: Answere a foole accordinge to his folye, like as I do nowe, and do shew him the pit that he shall fall into, yf he take not hede. For if many skorners of Helizeus, whiche was but one bald man, felte the zeale of the balde, how muche more shall one skorne of many frears feele, amonge whom be manye balde men? And we haue also the popes bulles, whereby all that mocke and skorne vs be excommunicate, fuspended, and acursed. The cardinal, seing that none ende would be made, sent awaie the iester by a preuy becke, and turned the communication to an other matter. Shortly after, when he was risen from the table, he went to heare his sueters, and so dimiffed vs. Looke maister More wyth how longe and tedious a tale I haue kept you, which surely I woulde haue bene ashamed to haue done, but that you so earnestly desired me, and did after such a sorte geue eare vnto it, as though you would not that any parcel of that communication should be left out. Whiche thoughe I haue done sumwhat briefly, yet could I not chuse but rehearse it, for the iudgemente of them, whyche when they had improued and disallowed my sayinges, yet incontinent hearynge the Cardinall allowe them, dyd themselues also approue the same: so impudently flattering him, that they wer nothing ashamed to admitte, yea almoste in good earnest, his iesters folish inuentions: bicause that he him selfe by smiling at them did seme not to disproue them. So that hereby you may right wel perceauē how litle the courtiers woulde regarde and esteeme me and my fayinges.

I enfore you maister Raphael, quod I, I toke greate delectacion in hearing you: all thinges that you saide were spoken so wittilye and so pleasauntly. And me thought me selfe to be in the meane time, not onelye at home in my countrei, but also through the pleasaunt remembraunce of the Cardinal, in whose house I was broughte vp of a childe, to waxe a child againe. And frend Raphael, though I did beare verye greate loue towardes you before, yet feynge you do so earnestlye fauoure this man, you wyll not beleue howe muche my loue towardes you is nowe increased. But yet, all this notwithstandinge, I can by no meanes chaunge my mind, but that I must nedes beleue, that you, if you be disposed, and can fynde in youre hearte to follow some Princes courte, shall with your good counselles greatlye helpe and further the commen wealthe. Wherefore there is nothyng more apperteyning to youre dewty, that is to saye, to the dewtie of a good man. For where as your Plato iudgeth that weale publiques shall by this meanes atteyne perfecte felicitie, eyther if philosophers be kynges, or elles yf kynges geue themselues to the studie of Philosophie, how farre I praye you, shall commen wealthes then be frome thys felicitie, yf Philosophers wyll vouchsaufe to enstruct kinges with their good counsell?

They be not so vnkinde (quod he) but they woulde gladlye do it, yea, manye haue done it alreadye in bokes that they haue putfurthe, if kynges and princes would be willyng and readye to folowe good counsell. But Plato doubtlesse dyd well foresee, onelesse kynges themselues woulde applye their mindes to the studye of Philosophie, that elles they woulde neuer thoroughlye allowe the counsell of Philosophers, beyng themselues before euen from their tender age infected, and corrupt with peruerse, and euill opinions. Whiche thyng Plato hymselfe proued trewe in kinge Dionyse. If I shoulde propose to any kyng wholfome decrees, doynge my endeuoure to plucke out of hys mynde the pernicious originall caufes of vice and noughtines, thinke you not that I shoulde furthewith either be driuen away, or elles made a laughyng stocke? Well fuppose I were with the Frenche kynge, and there fyttinge in his counfell, whiles in that mooste fecrete confultation, the kynge him felfe there beyng prefente in hys owne perfonne they beate their braynes, and ferche the verye bottomes of their wittes to discuffe by

The Frenche-
men priutlie he counfeled from
the desire of Italie.

what crafte and meanes the kynge maye ftyl kepe Myllayne, and drawe to him againe fugitiue Naples, And then howe to conquere the Venetians, and how to bringe vnder his iurifdiction all Italie, then howe to win the dominion of Flaunders, Brabant, and of all Burgundie: with diuers other landes, whose kingdomes he hath longe ago in mind and purpofe inuaded. Here whiles one counfelleth to conclude a legue of peace with the Venetians, fo longe to endure, as fhall be thought mete and expedient for their purpofe, and to make them alfo of their counfell, yea, and besides that to geue them part of the pray, whiche afterwarde, when they haue brought theyr purpofe about after their owne myndes, they maye require and clayme againe. An other thinketh beft to hiere the Germaines. An other woulde haue the fauoure of the Swychers wonne with money. An others aduyfe is to appeafe the puiffaunte power of the Emperoures maieftie wyth golde, as with a mofte pleafaunte, and acceptable facrifice. Whiles an other gyueth counfell to make peace wyth the kynge of Arragone, and to reftoore vnto him hys owne kyngedome of Nauarra, as a full affurance of peace. An other commeth in with his fue egges, and aduifeth to hooke in the kynge of Caftell with fome hope of affinitie or allyaunce, and to bringe to their parte certeine Pieers of his courte for greate penfions. Whiles they all ftaye at the chiefefte doubte of all, what to do in the meane time with Englande, and yet agree all in this to make peace with the Launce knightes.

Englishmen, and with mooste fuer and stronge bandes to bynde that weake and feable frendeshippe, so that they muste be called frendes, and hadde in suspicion as enemyes. And that therefore the Skottes muste be hadde in a readines, as it were in a standynge, readie at all occasions, in aunter the Englishmen shoulde sturre neuer so lytle, incontinent to set vpon them. And moreouer preuilie and secretye (for openlie it maye not be done by the truce that is taken) priuelie therefore I saye to make muche of some Piere of Englande, that is bannished hys countrey, whiche muste cleime title to the crowne of the realme, and affirme hym selfe iuste inherytoure thereof, that by this subtill meanes they maye holde to them the kinge, in whome elles they haue but small truste and affiaunce. Here I saye, where so greate and heyghe matters be in consultation, where so manye noble and wyse menne counsell theyr kynge onelie to warre, here yf I felie man shoulde rise vp and will them to tourne ouer the leafe, and learne a newe leesson, sayinge that my counsell is not to medle with Italy, but to tarye styll at home, and that the kyngedome of Fraunce alone is almooste greater, then that it maye well be gouerned of one man: so that the kynge shoulde not nede to studye howe to gette more: And then shoulde propose vnto them the decrees of the people that be called the Achoriens, whiche be situate ouer agaynste the Ilande of Utopia on the southeaste side. These Achoriens ones made warre in their kinges quarrell for to gette him another kingdome, whiche he laide claime vnto, and auauced hymselfe ryghte inheritoure to the crowne thereof, by the tittle of an olde aliaunce. At the last when they had gotten it, an[d] fawe that they hadde euen as muche vexation and trouble in keypyng it, as they had in gettyng it, and that either their newe conquered subiectes by fundrye occasions were makynge daylye infurrections to rebell againste them, or els that other countries were continuallie with diuers inrodes and forragynge inuadyng them: so that they were

A notable example, and worthy to be followed.

euere fighting either for them, or agaynste them, and neuer coulde breake vp theyr campes: Seynge them felues in the meane seafon pyllled and impouerished: their money caried out of the realme: their own men killed to maintaine the glorye of an other nation: when they had no warre, peace nothyng better then warre, by reason that their people in war had so inured themselves to corrupte and wicked maners: that they had taken a delite and pleafure in robbinge and stealing: that through manslaughter they had gathered boldnes to mischief: that their lawes were had in contempte, and nothing fet by or regarded: that their king beyng troubled with the charge and gouernaunce of two kingdomes, could not nor was not hable perfectlie to discharge his office towardses them both: feing againe that all these euellles and troubles were endles: at the laste layde their heades together, and like faithfull and louinge subiectes gaue to their kynge free choise and libertie to kepe styll the one of these two kingdomes whether he would: alleginge that he was not hable to kepe both, and that they were mo then might well be gouerned of halfe a king: forasmuche as no man woulde be content to take him for his mulettour, that kepeth an other mans moyles beydes his. So this good prince was constreyned to be content with his olde kyngedome, and to geue ouer the newe to one of his frendes. Who shortelye after was violentlie driuen out. Furthermore if I shoulde declare vnto them, that all this busie preparaunce to warre, wherby so many nations for his sake should be broughte into a troublesome hurlei-burley when all his coffers were emptied, his treasures wasted, and his people destroyed, should at the length through some mischance be in vaine and to none effect: and that therefore it were best for him to content him selfe with his owne kingedome of fraunce, as his forfathers and predeceffours did before him: to make much of it, to enrich it, and to make it as flourishing as he could, to endeuoure him selfe to loue his subiectes, and againe to be beloued of them, willingly to liue with them, peaceably to gouerne them, and with other kyngdomes not to medle, feinge that whiche he hath all reddy is euen ynoughe for him, yea and more then he can wel turne hym to: this myne aduyse maister More, how thinke you it would be harde and taken? So God helpe me not very thankfully, quod I,. Wel let vs procede then, quod he. Suppose that some kyng and his counfel were together whettinge their wittes and deuifinge, what fubtell crafte they myght inuente to enryche the kinge with great treasures of money. First one counfelleth to rayse and enhaunce the valuation of money when the kinge must paye anye: and agayne to calle downe the value of coyne to lesse then it is worthe, when he muste receiue or gather any. For thus great fomme shalbe payde wyth a lytyl money, and where lytle is due muche shalbe receaued. An other counfelleth to fayne warre, that when vnder this coloure and pretence the kyng hath gathered greate aboundance of money, he maye, when it shall please him, make peace with greate solemnitie and holye ceremonies, to blinde the eyes of the poore communitie, as taking pitie and compassion forsothe vpon mans bloude, lyke a louing and a mercifull prince. An other putteth the kyng in remembrance of certeine olde and moughteaten lawes, that of longe tyme haue not bene put in execution, whych because no man can remembre that they were made, euerie man hath transgressed. The fynes of these lawes he counfelleth the kyng to require: for there is no waye so proffitable, nor more honorable, as the whyche hathe a shewe and coloure of iustice. An other aduyfeth him to forbidde manye thinges vnder greate penalties and fines, specially suche thinges as is for the peoples profit not be vsed, and afterwarde to dispence for money with them, whyche by this prohibition substeyne losse and dammage. For by this meanes the fauour of the people is wonne, and profite riseth two wayes. First by tak-

Enhauncyng
and imbasyng
of coynes.

Counterfayte
warres.

The renewing
of olde lawes.

Restrayntes.

inge forfaytes of them whome couetousnes of gaynes Sellyng of li- hath brought in daunger of this statute, and cences. also by felling priuileges and licences, whyche the better that the prince is forsothe, the deerer
 he felleth them: as one that is lothe to graunte to any priuate persone anye thinge that is againste the proffite of his people. And therefore maye sel none but at an exceding dere pryce. An other giueth the kynge counsel to endaunger vnto his grace the iudges of the Realme, that he maye haue them euer on his side, and that they maye in euerye matter despute and reason for the kynges right. Yea and further to call them into his palace and to require them there to argue and discusse his matters in his owne prefence. So there shalbe no matter of his so openlye wronge and vniuste, wherein one or other of them, either because he wyl haue sumthinge to allege and obiecte or that he is ashamed to saye that whiche is sayde alreadye, or els to pike a thanke with his prince, wil not fynde some hole open to set a snare in, wherewith to take the contrarie parte in a trippe. Thus whiles the iudges cannot agree amonges them selves, reasoninge and arguing of that which is playne enough, and bringinge the manifest trewth in dowte: in the meane season the Kinge maye take a fyt occasion to vnderstand the lawe as shal moſte
 make for his aduantage, wherevnto all other for shame, or for feare wil agree. Then the Iudges may be bolde to pronounce on the kynges side. For he that geueth sentence for the king, cannot be without a good excuſe. For it shalbe sufficient for him to haue equitie on his part, or the bare wordes of the lawe, or a wry-
 then and wrested vnderstandinge of the same (or els, whiche with good and iust Iudges is of greater force then all lawes be) the Kynges indisputable prerogative. To The sayng of conclude, al the counsellours agre and conriche Crassus. sent together with the ryche Crassus, that no abundance of gold can be sufficient for a prince,
 which muste kepe and maynteyne an armie: furthermore that a kynge, though he would, can do nothinge

vniustlye. For all that all men haue, yea also the men them selves be all his. And that euery man hath so much of his owne, as ye kynges gentilnes hath not taken from hym. And that it shalbe moſte for the kynges aduantage, that his ſubiectes haue very lytle or nothings in their poſſeſſion, as whoſe ſauegarde doth herein conſiſte, that his people doe not waxe wanton and wealthie through riches and libertie, becauſe where theſe thinges be, there men be not wonte patiently to obeye harde, vniuſte, and vnlawfull commaundementes. Where as on the other part neade and pouertie doth holde downe and kepe under ſlowte courages, and maketh them patient perforce, takynge from them bolde and rebellynge ſtomakes. Here agayne if I ſhoulde ryſe vp, and boldelye affirme that all theſe counſelles be to the kynges diſhonoure and reproche, whoſe honoure and ſafetye is more and rather ſupported and vpholden by the wealth and ryches of his people, then by hys owne treaſures: and if I ſhould declare that the comminalltie chuefeth their kyng for their owne ſake, and not for his ſake: to the intent, that through his laboure and ſtudie they might al liue wealthily ſauffe from wronges and iniuries: and that therfore the kyng ought to take more care for the wealthe of his people, then for his owne wealthe. euen as the office and dewtie of a ſhepehearde is in that he is a ſhepherde, to feede his ſhepe rather then himſelfe. For as towchinge this, that they thinke the defence and mayntenaunce of peace to conſiſte in the pouertie of the people, the thing it ſelfe ſheweth that they be farre out of the waye. For where ſhal a man finde more wrangling, quarrelling, brawling, and chiding, then among beggers? Who be more deſierous of newe mutations and alterations, then they that be not content with the preſent ſtate of their lyfe? Or finallye who be bolder ſtomaked to bringe all in a hurlieburlye (therby truſtinge to get ſome windfal) then they that haue nowe nothings to leeſe? And yf any Kyng were ſo ſmally regarded, and ſo lightly eſtemed, yea ſo behated of his ſubiectes, that mother of debate and decai

Pouertye the
of realmes.

other wayes he could not kepe them in awe, but onely by open wronges, by pollinge and shauinge, and by bringinge them to beggerie, fewerly it were better for him to forsake his kingedome, then to holde it by this meanes: whereby though the name of a king be kepte, yet the maiestie is lost. For it is againste the dignitie of a kynge to haue rule ouer beggers, but rather ouer

A worthy saying of Fabrice. ryche and welthie men, Of this mynde was the hardie and couragius Fabrice, when he sayde, that he had rather be a ruler of riche men, then be ryche himselfe. And verelye one man to liue in pleasure and wealth, whyles all other wepe and smarte for it, that is the parte, not of a kynge, but of a iayler. To be shorte as he is a folysh phisition, that cannot cure his patientes disease, onles he caste him in an other syckenes, so he that cannot amend the liues of his subiectes, but be taking from them the wealthe and commoditie of lyfe, he muste nedes graunte that, he knoweth not the feate how to gouerne men. But let him rather amende his owne lyfe, renounce vnhonest pleasures, and forsake pride. For these be the chiefe vices that cause hym to runne in the contempte or hatred of his people. Let him lyue of hys owne, hurtinge no man. Let him doe cost not aboue his power. Let hym restreyne wyckednes. Let him preuente vices, and take awaye the occasions of offenses by well orderynge hys subiectes, and not by sufferynge wickednes to increase afterward to be punyshed. Let hym not be to hastie in callynge agayne lawes, whyche a custome hath abrogated: specially suche as haue bene longe forgotten, and neuer lacked nor neaded. And let hym neuer vnder the cloke and pretence of transgression take suche fynes and forfaytes, as no Iudge wyll suffre a priuate persone to take, as vniuste and ful of gile.

A fleasinge and notable lawe of the Macariens.

Here if I should brynge forth before them the lawe of the Macariens, whiche be not farre distaunt from Utopia: whose Kynge the daye of hys coronation is bounde by a solempne othe, that he shall neuer at anye time haue in hys treasure aboue a thousande pounce of golde or syluer. They saye a verye good kynge, whiche toke more care for the wealthe and commoditie of his countrey, then for th[e] enriching of him selfe, made this lawe to be a stop and a barre to kinges from heaping and hording vp so muche money as might impoueryshe their people. For he forfawe that this som of treasure woulde suffice to supporte the kynge in battaile against his owne people, if they shoulde chaunce to rebell: and also to maintein his warres againste the inuasions of his forreyn enemies. Againe he perceiued the same stocke of money to be to litle and vnsufficient to encourage and enhable him wrongfullye to take away other mens goodes: whyche was the chiefe cause whie the lawe was made. An other cause was this. He thought that by this prouision his people shoulde not lacke money, wherewith to mayneteyne their dayly occupieng and chaffayre. And seyng the kynge could not chewse but laye out and bestowe al that came in aboue the prescript some of his stocke, he thought he woulde seke no occasions to doe his subiectes iniurie. Suche a kynge shalbe feared of euel men, and loued of good men. These, and suche other informations, yf I shoulde vse among men wholye inclined and geuen to the contrarye part, how deaffe hearers thinke you shoulde I haue?

Deaffe hearers douteles (quod I) And in good faith no marueyle. And to be plaine with you, truelye I can not allowe that suche communication shalbe vsed, or suche counsell geuen, as you be suere shall neuer be regarded nor receaued. For howe can so straunge informations be profitable, or how can they be beaten into their headdes, whose myndes be allredye preuented: with cleane contrarye perswasions? This schole philosophie is not vnpleasaunte amonge frendes in familiare communication, but in the counselles of kinges, where greate matters be debated and reasoned with greate authoritye, these thinges haue no place.

Schole philosophie in the consultations of Princes hath no place.

That is it whiche I mente (quod he) when I sayde philosophie hadde no place amonge kinges.

In dede (quod I) this fchole philosophie hath not: whiche thinketh all thinges mete for euery place. But there is an other philosophye more ciuile, whyche knoweth, as ye wolde fay, her owne ftage, and thereafter orderynge and behauinge here- selfe in the playe that she hathe in hande, playethe her parte accordinglye with comlyenes, vtteringe nothinge oute of dewe ordre and fassyon. And this is the philosophye that you muste vse. Or els whyles a commodye of Plautus is playinge, and the
A fine and a fitte similitude. vyle bondemen skoffynge and tryffeling amonge them selves, yf you shoulde sodenlye come vpon the ftage in a Philosophers apparrell, and reherse oute of Octauia the place wherein Seneca disputeth
A dumme plaier. with Nero: had it not bene better for you to haue played the domme persone, then by reherfynge that, whych serued neither for the tyme nor place to haue made suche a tragycall comedye or gallymalfreye? For by bryngynge in other stufte that nothinge apperteynethe to the presente matter, you muste nedes marre and peruert the play that is in hand, thoughe the stufte that you bringe be muche better. What part foeuer you haue taken vpon you, playe that as wel as you can and make the best of it: And doe not therefore disturbe and brynge oute of ordre the whole matter, bycause that an other, whyche is meryer and better cummethe to your remembraunce. So the case standeth in a common wealthe, and so it is in the consultations of Kynges and prynces. Yf euel opinions and noughty persuations can not be vtterly and quyte plucked out of their hartes, if you can not euen as you wolde remedy vices, which vse and custome hath confirmed: yet for this cause you must not leaue and forsake the common wealthe: you muste not forsake the shippe in a tempeste, because you can not rule and kepe downe the wyndes. No nor you muste not laboure to dryue into their heades newe and straunge informations, whyche you knowe wel shalbe nothinge regarded wyth them that be of cleane contrary mindes. But you must with a crafty wile and a subtell trayne study and endeouore youre selfe, asmuche as in you lyethe, to handle the matter wyttelye and handefomelye for the purpose, and that whyche you can not turne to good, so to order it that it be not uerye badde. For it is not possible for al thinges to be well, onles all men were good. Whych I thinke wil not be yet thies good many yeares. By this meanes (quod he) nothinge elles wyl be brought to passe, but whyles that I goe aboute to remedye the madnes of others, I shoulde be euen as madde as they. For if I wolde speake suche thinges that be trewe I must neades speake suche thinges: but as for to speake false thinges, whether that be a philosophers parte or no I can not tel, truelye it is not my part. Howebeit this communication of mine, thoughe peraduenture it maye seme vnplefaunte to them, yet can I not see why it shoulde seme straunge, or folishelye newfangled. If so be that I should speake those thinges that Plato faynethe in his weale publique: or that the Utopians doe in theirs, these things thoughe they were (as they be in dede) better, yet they myghte seme spoken oute of place. Forasmuche as here amonges vs, euerye man hathe his possessions feuerall to him selfe, and there all thinges be common. But what was in my communication conteyned, that mighte not, and oughte not in anye place to be spoken? Sauynge that to them whyche haue throughlye decreed and determined with them selves to runne hedlonges the contrary waye it can not be acceptable and pleasaunt, because it calleth them backe, and sheweth them the ieopardies, Verilye yf all thynges that euel and vitiousse maners haue caused to seme inconueniente and noughte should be refused, as thinges vnmete and reprochefull, then we must among Christen people wynke at the moste parte of al those thinges, whych Christ taught vs, and so strenghtly forbad them to be winked at, yat those thinges also whiche he whispered in ye eares of his disciples he commaunded to be proclaimed in open houses. And yet ye most parte of them is more diffident from the maners of the worlde nowe a dayes, then my communication was. But preachers flie and wilie men followynge youre counfel (as I suppose) bicause they saw men euell willing to frame theyr manners to Christes rule, they haue wrested and wriede his doctryne, and like a rule of leade haue applyed it to mennes manners: that by some meanes at the leaste waye, they myghte agree together. Whereby I can not see what good they haue done: but that men may more sickerlye be euell. And I truelye shoulde preuaile euen as litle in kinges counselles. For either I muste saye otherwayes then they saye, and then I were as good to saye nothinge, or els I muste saye the same that they saye, and (as Mitio faieth in Terence) helpe to further their madnes. For that craftye wyle, and subtil traine of yours. I can not perceauē to what purpose it serueth, wherewith you wolde haue me to study and endeuoure my selfe, yf all thinges can not be made good, yet to handle them wittily and handsomely for the purpose, yat as farre forth as is possible they, may not be very euell. For there is no place to diffemble in, nor to wincke in. Noughtye counselles muste be openlye allowed and verye pestilent decrees muste be approued. He shalbe counted worfe then a spye, yea almoste as euell as a traytour, that with a faynte harte doth prayse euell and noyesome decrees. Moreouer a man canne haue no occasion to doe good, chaunfinge into the company of them, whych wyl soner peruerte a good man, then be made good them selves: through whose euell company he shalbe marred, or els if he remayne good and innocent, yet the wickednes and follye of others shalbe imputed to hym, and layde in his necke. So that it is impossible with that craftye wyle, and subtel trayne to turne anye thinge to better. Wherefore Plato by a goodlye similitude declareth, why wise men refraine to medle in the common wealthe. For when they see the people swarme into the stretes, and daily wet to the skinne with rayne, and yet can not persuaade them to goe out of the rayne, and to take their houses, knowynge wel, that if they shoulde goe out to them, they should nothinge preuayle, nor wyne ought by it, but with them be wette also in the raine, they do kepe them selves within their houses, being content that they be faffe them selues, feinge they cannot remedye the follye of the people. Howe be it doubtlesse maister More (to speke truelye as my mynde geueth me) where possessions be priuate, where money beareth all the stroke, it is harde and almoste impossible that there the weale publique maye iustelye be gouerned, and prosperouslye floryshe. Onles you thinke thus: that Iustyce is there executed, where all thinges come into the handes of euell men, or that prosperytye there floryssheth, where all is diuided amonge a fewe: whyche fewe neuerthelesse doe not leade their liues very wealthely, and the resydewe lyue myserablye, wretchedlye, and beggerlye. Wherefore when I confyder with my selfe and weye in my mynde the wyse, and godlye ordinaunces of the Utopians, amonge whome with verye fewe lawes all thinges be so wel and wealthelye ordered, that vertue is had in pryce and estimation, and yet all thinges beinge there common, euerye man hath aboundaunce of euerye thinge. Againe on the other part, when I compare with them so manye nations euer makinge newe lawes, yet none of them all well and sufficientlye, furnysshed with lawes: where euerye man calleth that he hathe gotten, his owne proper and priuate goodes, where so many newe lawes daylye made be not sufficiente for euerye man to enioye, defend, and knowe from an other mans that whych he calleth his owne: which thinge the infinite controuerfies in the lawe, dayle ryfyng, neuer to be ended, playnly declare to be trewe. These thinges (I say) when I confider with me selfe, I holde wel with Plato, and doe nothinge marueille, that he woulde make no lawes for them, that refused those lawes, whereby all men shoulde haue and enioye equall portions of welthes and commodities. For the wise man did easely foresee, this to bee the

Plato wylled
al things in a common wealth
to be commen.

one and onely waye to the wealth of a communaltye, yf equalitye of all thinges should be broughte in and stablyshed. Whyche I thinke is not possible to be obserued, where euerye mans gooddes be proper and peculiare to him selfe. For where euerye man vnder certeyne tytles and pretences draweth and plucketh to himselfe asmuch as he can, so that a fewe deuide among them selves all the whole riches, be there neuer so muche abundaunce and floore, there to the residewe is leste lacke and pouertye. And for the moste parte it chaunceth, that this latter sorte is more worthy to enioye that state of wealth, then the other be: bycause the ryche men be couetous, craftye, and vnprofitable. On the other parte the poore be lowly, simple, and by their daylye labour more profitable to the common welthe then to them selves. Thus I doe fullye persuade me selfe, that no equall and iuste distribution of thinges can be made, nor that perfecte wealth shall euer be among men, onles this propriety be exiled and bannished. But so long as it shal continew, so long shal remaine among the most and best part of men the heuy, and ineuitable burden of pouerty and wretchednes. Whiche, as I graunte that it maye be sumwhat eased, so I vtterly denye that it can wholly be taken away. For if there were a statute made, that no man should possesse aboue a certeine measure of grounde, and that no man shoulde haue in his stocke aboue a prescripte and appointed some of money: if it were by certain lawes decreed, that neither the Kinge shoulde be of to greate power, neither the people to haute and wealthy, and that offices shoulde not be obtained by inordinate suite, or by brybes and gyftes: that they shoulde neither be bought nor sold, nor that it shoulde be nedeful for the officers, to be at any cost or charge in their offices: for so occasion is geuen to theym by fraude and rauin to gather vp their money againe, and by reason of gyftes and bribes the offices be geuen to rich men, which shoulde rather haue bene executed of wise men: by such lawes I say, like as sicke bodies that be desperat and past cure, be wont with continual good cherishing to be kept and botched vp for a time: so these euels also might be lightened and mitigated. But yat the may be perfectly cured, and brought to a good and vpryght state, it is not to be hoped for, whiles euery man is maister of his owne to him felse. Yea and whyles you goe aboute to doe youre cure of one parte, you shall make bygger the fore of an other parte, so the healpe of one causeth anothers harme: forasmuche as nothings can be geuen to annye one, onles it be taken from an other.

But I am of a contrary opinion (quod I) for me thinketh that men shal neuer there liue wealthelye, where all thinges be commen. For howe can there be abundance of gooddes, or of any thing, where euery man withdraweth his hande from labour? Whome the regard of his owne gaines driueth not to worke, but the hope that he hath in other mens trauayles maketh him flowthfull. Then when they be pricked with pouertye, and yet no man can by any lawe or right defend that for his owne, which he hath gotten with the laboure of his owne handes, shal not there of necessitie be continual sedition and blodeshed? Speciallye the authoritye and reuerence of magistrates beinge taken awaye, whiche, what place it maye haue with such men amonge whom is no difference, I cannot deuise.

I maruel not (quod he) that you be of this opinion. For you conceaue in youre minde either none at al, or els a verye false Image and similitude of this thing. But yf you had bene with me in Utopia, and had presentelye sene their fashions and lawes, as I dyd, whyche liued there. v. yeares, and moore, and wolde neuer haue commen thence, but onlye to make that newe lande knowen here: Then doubtles you wolde graunt, that you neuer sawe people wel ordered, but onlye there.

Surely (quod maister Peter) it shalbe harde for you to make me beleue, that there is better order in that newe lande, then is here in these cuntryes, that wee knowe. For good wittes be aswel here as there: and I thinke oure commen wealthes be auncienter than theirs: wherin long vse and experience hath found out many thinges commodious for mannes lyfe, besides that manye thinges heare amonge vs haue bene founde by chaunce, which no wytte colde euer haue deuysed.

As touchinge the auncientnes (quod he) of common wealthes, than you might better iudge, if you had red the histories and cronicles of that land, which if we may beleue, cities were there, before men were here. Nowe what thinge foer hetherto by witte hath bene deuysed, or found by chaunce, that myght be aswel there as here. But I thinke verily, though it were so that we did passe them in witte: yet in study, in trauaile, and in laboursome endeuoure they farre passe vs. For (as their Chronicles testifie) before our arriual there, they neuer hard any thing of vs, whome they cal the vltraequinoctialles: fauing that ones about. M.CC. [twelve hundred] yeares ago, a certeine shyppe was lost by the Ile of Utopia whiche was driuen thether by tempest. Certeine Romaines and Egyptians were cast on lande. Whyche after that neuer wente thence. Marke nowe what profite they tooke of this one occasion through delygence and earnest trauaile. There was no crafte nor scyence within the impire of Rome wherof any profite could rise, but they either lerned it of these straungers, or els of them taking occasion to searche for it, founde it oute. So greate proffite was it to them that euer anye wente thither from hence. But yf annye like chaunce before this hath brought anye man from thence hether, that is as quyte out of remembraunce, as this also perchaunce in time to come shalbe forgotten, that euer I was there. And like as they quickelye, almoste at the first meting, made their owne, what foer is amonge vs wealthelye deuysed: so I suppose it wolde be long before we wolde receaue anythinge, that amonge them is better instituted then amonge vs. And this I suppose is the chiefe cause whie their common wealthes be wyfelyer gouerned, and doe flowrish in more wealth, then ours, though we neither in wytte nor riches be their inferiours.

Therefore gentle Maister Raphael (quod I) I praye you and beseeche you describe vnto vs the Ilande. And study not to be shorte: but declare largely in order their groundes, their riuers, their cities, their people, their manners, their ordinaunces, their lawes, and to be short al thinges, that you shal thinke vs desierous to knowe. And you shal thinke vs desierous to know what foeuer we knowe not yet.

There is nothing (quod he) that I wil doe gladlier. For all these thinges I haue freshe in mind. But ye matter requireth leasure.

Let vs go in therfore (quod I) to dinner, afterward we wil bestowe the time at our pleasure.

Content (quod he) be it.

So we went in and dyned. When dinner was done, we came into the same place again, and fate vs downe vpon the same benche, commaunding oure seruauntes that no man should trouble vs. Then I and Maister Peter Giles desiered maister Raphael to performe his promise. He therefore seing vs desirous and willing to hearken to him, when he had sit stil and paused a litle while, musing and bethinkinge himselfe, thus he began to speake.

The end of the Firste booke.

The seconde

booke of the communication of Raphael Hythlodaye, concer-
nyng the best state of a common wealthe conteyninge the discription of Utopia,
with a large declaration of the politike gouernement, and of all the good lawes and orders of the same Ilande.

The sice and fashion of the newe lande
Utopia.

The Iland of Utopia, conteynethe in breadthe in the middel parte of it (for there it is brodest)
CC. [two hundred] miles. Which bredthe continueth throughe
the moſte parte of the lande Sauing that by litle and litle it commeth in, and waxeth narrower towards both the endes. Which fetching about a circuite or compaſſe of V.C. [five hundred] Miles, do faſſion ye whole Iland like to ye new mone.
Betwene theſe two corners the ſea runneth in, diuidyng
them a ſonder by the diſtaunce. of. xi miles or there aboutes, and there ſurmoutethe into a large and wyde ſea, which by reaſon that the land on euey ſide compaſſethe it about, and ſhiltreth it from the windes, is not roughe, nor mounteth not with great waues, but almoſt floweth quietlye, not muche vnlike a greate ſtandinge powle : and maketh welnieghe all the ſpace within the bellye of the lande in manner of a hauen : and to the greate commoditie of the inhabitauntes receaueth in shyppes towardes euerye parte of the lande. The forefrontes or frontiers of the. ii. corners, what with fordes and shelues, and what with rockes be verye ieoperdous and daungerous. In the middle distaunce betwene them bothe standeth vp aboute the water a greate rocke, which therefore is nothing perilous bycause it is in sight. Vpon the top of this rocke is a faire and strong tower builded, which they holde with a garrison of men. Other rockes there be lyinge hidde vnder the water, which therefore be daungerous. The chanelles be knowen onely to themselves. And therefore it seldome chaunceth that anye straunger oneles he be guided by an Utopian can come in to this hauen. In so muche that they themselves could ska[r]felye entre withoute ieoperdie, but that their way is directed and ruled by certaine lande markes standinge on the shore. By turninge, translatinge, and remouinge thies markes into other places they maye destroye their enemies nauies, be they neuer so many. The out side or vtter circuite of ye land is also ful of hauens, but the landing is so fuerly fenced, what by nature, and what by workemanshyp of mans hand, that a fewe defenders maye dryue backe many armies. Howbeit as they saye, and as the fassion of the place it selfe dothe partely shewe, it was not euer compassed about with the sea. But kyng Utopus, whose name, as conquerour the Iland beareth (For before his tyme it was called Abraxa) which also broughte the rude and wild people to that excellent perfection in al good fassions, humanitie, and ciuile gentilnes, wherin they nowe got beyond al ye people of the world: euen at his firste arriuinge and enteringe vpon the lande, furthwith obteynynge the victory, caused. xv. myles space of vplandysh grounde, where the sea had no passage, to be cut and dygged vp.

A place naturally fenced wth the but one garrison.

A politike deuise in the chaunging of land markes.

The Ilande of Utopia so named of king Utopus.

And so brought the sea rounde about the lande. He set to this worke not only the inhabitauntes of the Ilande (becaufe they should not thinke it done in contumelye and despyte) but also all his owne foldiours. Thus the worke beyng diuided into so greate a nombre of workemen, was with excedinge maruelous spede dyspatched. In so muche that the borderers, whiche at the firste began to mocke, and to ieste at this vaine enterpryse, then turned their derision to marueyle at the successe, and to feare.

Many handes make light worke. There be in the Ilande. liiii. [fifty four] large and faire cities, or shiere townes, agreying all together in one tonge, in lyke maners, institucions, and lawes. They be all set and situate a lyke, and in al poyntes fashioned alyke, as far forthe as the place or plotte sufferethe.

Cities in Utopia. Of these cities they that be nigheste together be. xxiiii. [twenty four] myles a fonder. Again there is none of them distaunte from the nexte aboute one dayes iorneye a fote. There com yearly to Amaurote out of euery cytie. iii old men wyse and well experienced, there to entreate and debate, of the common matters of the land: For this citie (becaufe it standeth iuste in the middes of the Ilande, and is therefore moste mete for the ambassadours of all partes of the realme) is taken for the chiefe and heade citie. The precinctes and boundes of the shieres be so commodiouslye appoynted oute, and set

Similitude causeth concord. fourthe for the cities, that none of them all hath of anye fyde lesse then xx. [twenty] myles of grounde, and of some fyde also muche more, as of that part where the cities be of farther distaunce a fonder.

A meane distaunce betwene citie and citie. None of the cities desire to enlarge the boundes and limites of their shieres. For they counte them selves rather the good husbandes, then the owners of their landes. They haue in the countrey in all partes of the shiere houses or fermes builded, wel appointed and furnyshed with all sortes of instrumentes and tooles belongynge to husbandrye.

The distribution of landes. These houses be inhabited of the citezens, whyche come

But this nowadaies is the grounde of all mischeife.

Husbandrie and tillage cheifly and principally regarded and aduanced.

thether to dwelle by course. No howsholde or ferme in the countrey hath fewer then. xl. perfonen men and women, besydes two bondmen, whyche be all vnder the rule and order of the good man, and the good wyfe of the houle, beinge bothe verye sage, discrete, and aunciente perfonen. And euery. xxx. fermes or families haue one heade ruler, whyche is called a Philarche, being as it were a head baylyffe. Out of euery one of these families or fermes commeth euerye yeare into the citie. xx. perfonen whiche haue continewed. ii. yeres before in the countrey. In their place so manye freshe be sent thether oute of the citie, whoe, of them that haue bene there a yeare all readye, and be therefore expert and conninge in husbandry, shalbe instructed and taughte. And they the nexte yeare shall teache other. This order is vsed for feare that either skarfenes of victualles, or some other like incommoditie should chaunce, throughe lacke of knowledge: yf they should be altogether newe, and freshe, and vnexperte in husbandrie. This maner and fassion of yearelye chaunginge and renewinge the occupiers of husbandrye, though it be folempne and customablye vsed, to th[e] intent that no man shall be constraigned againste his wil to contynewe longe in that harde and sharpe kynde of lyfe, yet manye of them haue fuche a pleasure and delyte in husbandrye, that they obteyne a longer space of yeares. These husbandmen plowe and til the ground, and breede vp cattel, and prouide and make readye woode, whyche they carrye to the citie either by lande, or by water, as they maye moste conueniently. They brynge vp a greate multitude of pulleyne, and that by a meruaylouse policye. For the hennes dooe not fyttte vpon the egges: but by keepynge them in a certayne equall heate they brynge lyfe into them, and hatche them. The chykens, affone as they be come oute of the shel, follow men and women in steade of the hennes. They brynge vp verye fewe horses: nor none, but verye fearce ones: and that for none other vse or purpose, but onlye to

The dueties of men of husbandrye.

A straunge fassion in hatchinge and bringing vp of pulleyne.

The vse of horses.

exercyse their youthe in rydyng and feates of armes.

The vse of Oxen. For oxen be put to all the laboure of plow-yng and drawinge. Whiche they graunte to be not so good as horses at a sodeyne brunte, and (as we faye) at a deade lifte, but yet they holde opinion,
that oxen wil abide and suffre muche more laboure,
payne and hardnes, then horses wil. And they thinke that oxen be not in daunger and subiect vnto so many diseases, and that they be kepte and mainteined with muche lesse coste and charge: and finallye that they be good for meate, when they be past laboure. They sowe

Bread and drink. corne onelye for breade. For their drinke is eyther wyne made of grapes, or els of apples, or peares, or els it is cleare water. And many times meathe made of honey or licouresse fodde[n] in water, for thereof they haue great store. And though they knowe certeynlie (for they knowe it perfectly in dede) how muche vitales the citie wyth the whole countreye or shiere rounde aboute it doeth

A great discretion in sowing
of corne. spende: Yet they sowe muche more corne,
and bryed vp muche more cattell, then ferueth for their owne vse, partyng the ouer
plus among their borderers. What soeuer necessarie thinges be lacking in the countrey, all suche stufte they fetche out of the citie: where without any exchange
they easelye obteyne it of the magistrates of the citie.

For euery moneth manie of them go into the citie on the holye daye. When their haruest day draweth neare, and is at hande, then the Philarches, which be the head officers and bailifes of husbandrie, send

Mutual helpe
quiclye dispat-
cheth. worde to the magistrates of the citie what nombre of haruest men is nedefull to be sent to them oute of the citie. The whiche companye of haruest men

beyng readye at the daye appoynted, almost in one fayre daye dispacheth
all the haruest
woorke.

‘ , ’

Of the cities and namely of Amaurote.

AS for their cities, who so knoweth one of them, knoweth them all : they be al so like one to an other, as farfurthe as the nature of the place permitteth. I will describe therefore to you one or other of them, for it skilleth not greatly which : but which rather then Amaurote ? Of them all this is the worthiest and of most dignitie. For the resideu knowledge it for the head citie, because there is the counfell house. Nor to me anye of them all is better beloued, as wherein I liued fise whole yeares together. The citie of Amaurote standeth vpon the side of a lowe hill in fashyon almost foure square. For the breadth of it beginneth a litle beneth the toppe of the hill, and still continueth by ye space of two miles, vntill it come to the ryuer of Anyder. The length of it, which lieth by the ryuers fyde, is sumwhat more. The riuer of Anyder riseth four and twentie myles aboue Amaurote out of a little springe. But beyng increased by other smale riuers and broukes that runne into it, and amonge other two sumwhat bygge ons, before the citie it is half a mile broade, and farther broader. And fortie myles beyond the citie it falleth into the Ocean sea. By all that space that liethe betwene the sea and the citie, and cer- ten myles also aboue the citie the water ebbeth and floweth fixe houres together with a swift tide. Whan the sea floweth in, for the length of thirtie miles it filleth all the Anyder with salte water, and driueth backe the freshe water of the ryuer. And sumwhat further it chaungeth the fwetenes of the freshe water with saltnes. But a litle beyonde that the riuer waxeth fwete, and

The description of Amaurote the chiefe Citie in Utopia.

The description of the riuer
of Anyder.

The verie like in England in the riuer of Thamys.

runneth foreby the citie freshe and pleasaunt. And when the sea ebbeth, and goeth backe againe, the freshe water foloweth it almooste euen to the verie fal into the

Herein also doeth London agre with Amaurote.

fea. Ther goeth a bridge ouer the riuier made not of piles or of timber, but of stonewarke with gorgious and substancial arches at that part of the citie that is farthest from the sea: to the intent that shippes maye passe alonge forbie all the side of the citie without let. They haue also an other riuier which in dede is not verie great. But it runneth gentely and pleasauntly. For it riseth euen oute of the same hill that the citie standeth vpon, and runneth downe a slope through the middes of the citie into Anyder. And because it riseth a litle withoute the citie, the Amaurotians haue inclosed the head springe of it, with stronge fences and bulwarkes, and so haue ioyned it to the citie. This is done to the intente that the water shoulde not be stopped nor turned away, or poysoned, if their enemies should chaunce to come vpon them. From thence the water is deriued and conueed downe in cannels of bricke diuers wayes into the lower partes of the citie. Where that cannot be done, by reason that the place wyll not suffer it, there they gather ye raine water in great cisternes, whiche doeth

The vse of freshe water.

The defence of towne walles.

them as good seruice. The citie is compassed aboute with a heighe and thicke stone walle full of turrets and bulwarkes. A drie dicke, but deape, and brode, and ouergrowen with bushes, briers, and thornes, goeth aboute thre sides or quarters of the city. To the fourth side the riuier it

Stretes.

selfe serueth for a ditche. The stretes be appointed and fet furth very commodious and handsome, both for carriage, and also againste the Buildinges and houses.

windes. The houses be of faire and gorgious building, and on the strete side they stande ioyned together in a long rowe through the whole streate without any partition or separation. The stretes be twentie foote brode. On the backe side of the houfes through the whole length of the ftreete, lye large gardens inclofed rounde aboute wyth the backe part of the ftreetes. Euerye houfe hathe two doores, one into the ftreete, and a pofterne doore on the backfyde into the garden. Thefe doores be made with two leaues, neuer locked nor bolted, fo eafie to be opened, that they wil followe the leaft drawing of a fynger, and fhutte againe alone. Whofo will, may go in, for there is nothinge within the houfes that is priuate, or anie mans owne. And euery tenth yeare they chaunge their houfes by lot. They fet great ftore by their gardeins. In them they haue vineyardes, all maner of fruite, herbes, and flowres, fo pleafaunt, fo well furnished, and fo fynely kepte, that I neuer fawe thyng more frutefull, nor better trimmed in anye place. Their studie and deligence herein commeth not onely of pleafure, but alfo of a certen ftife and contention that is betwene ftrete and ftrete, concerning the trimming, husbanding, and furnifhing of their gardens : euerye man for his owne parte. And verelye you fhall not lightelye finde in all the citie anythinge, that is more commodious, eyther for the profite of the Citizens, or for pleafure. And therefore it maye feme that the firft founder of the citie mynded nothing fo much, as thefe gardens. For they faye that Kinge Utopus him felfe, euen at the firft beginning appointed, and drewe furthe the platte fourme of the citie into this fafhion and figure that it hath nowe, but the gallant garnifhing, and the beautifull fettinge furth of it, wherunto he fawe that one mannes age would not fuffice : that he left to his pofteritie. For their cronicles, whiche they kepe written with all diligente circumfpection, conteynge the hiftorie of. M. vii. C. lx. [one thoufand feven hundred and fixty] yeares, euen from the firfte conqueft of the Ilande, recorde and witneffe that the houfes in the beginning were very low, and like homely cottages or poore fheppard houfes, made at all aduen-

To euery dwelling houfe a garden platte adioyninge.

This geere smelleth of Plato his communitie.

The commo- ditie of gardens is commended alfo of Vergile.

tures of euery rude pece of tymber, that came firſte to hande, with mudde walles, and ridged roofes, thatched ouer with ſtrawe. But nowe the houſes be curiouſlye buylded after a gorgious and gallante forte, with three ſtoryes one ouer another. The outſides of the walles be made either of harde flynte, or of plaſter, or els of bricke, and the inner fydes be well ſtrengthened with tymber work. The roofes be plaine and flat, couered with a certen kinde of plaſter that is of no coſte, and yet ſo tempered that no fyre can hurt or periſhe it, and withſtandeth the violence of the wether better then any leade. They kepe the winde oute of their windowes with glaſſe, for it is ther much vſed, and ſomhere alſo with fine linnen cloth dipped in oyle or ambre, and that for two commodities.

Glazed or can-uased win-
dowes.

For by thys meanes more lighte commeth in, and the winde is better
kepte oute.

¶ Of the magiſtrates.

A tranibore in the Utopiane
tonge ſignifieth
a head or chief peere.

A maruelous
ſtraunge faſſi-
on in chuſinge
magiſtrates.

Verie thirtie families or fermes, chueſe them yerely an officer, which in their olde language is called the Syphograunte, and by a newer name the Philarche. Euery ten Syphograuntes, with al their thirtie families be vnder an officer which was ones called the Tranibore, nowe the chiefe Philarche. Moreouer as concerninge the election of the Prince, all the Syphograuntes, which be in number. 200. firſt be ſworne to chueſe, him whom they thinke mooſte mete and expediente. Then by a ſecrete election, they name prince one of thoſe. iiij. whome the people before named vnto them. For oute of the. iiij. quarters of the citie there be. iiij choſen, oute of every quarter one, to stande for the election : Whiche be put vp to the counsell. The princes office continueth all his life tyme, oneles he be depofed or put downe for fufpition of tyrannie. They chuefe the Tranibores yearly, but lightlie they chaunge them not. All the other officers be but for one yeare. The Trani-bores euerye thyrde daye, and fومتimes, yf nede be, oftener come into the counsell houfe with the prince. Their counsell is concerninge the common wealthe. If there be any controuerfies amonge the commoners, whiche be verye fewe, they difpatch and ende them by and by. They take euer. ij. Siphograuntes to them in counfel, and eueri dai a new couple. And it is prouided, that nothinge touchinge the common wealthe fhall be confirmed and ratified, onleffe it haue bene reasoned of and debated thre daies in the counsell, before it be decreed. It is deathe to haue anye confultation for the common wealthe oute of the counsell, or the place of the common election. This ftatue, they faye, was made to the entente, that the prince and Tranibores might not eafilye confpire together to opprefse the people by tyrannie, and to chaunge the ftate of the weale publik. Therefore matters of great weight and importance be broughte to the election houfe of the Siphograuntes, which open the matter to their families. And afterwarde, when they haue confulted amonge themfelues, they fhew their deuife to the counsell. Somtime the matter is broughte before the counfel of the whole Ilande. Furthermore this custome alfo the counfel vfeth, to difpute or reason of no matter the fame daye that it is firfte propofed or put furthe, but to defferre it to the nexte fyttinge of the counsell. Because that no man when he hath rashely there fpoken that commeth to his tonges ende, fhall then afterwarde rather ftudye for Tyranny in a wel ordered weale publique vtterlie to be abhorred.

Sutes and controuerfies betwene partie and partie furthwith to be ended which now a daies of a set purpose be vnreasonably delaied.

Against hasty and rash decrees or statutes.

A custome worthy to be vfed these daies in our counsels and parliaments.

reasons wherewith to defende and mainteine his first folish sentence, than for the commoditie of ye common wealth: as one rather willing thé harme or hindraunce of the weale publike then any losse or diminution of his owne existimation. And as one that would be afhamed (which is a very folishe shame) to be counted anye thing at the first ouersene in the matter.

Who at the first ought to haue spoken rather wyfelye, then hastely, or rashlye.

¶ Of Sciences, Craftes and Occupations.

Husbandrie or tillage practised of all estates, which now a dayes is reiect vnto a fewe of the basest sort.

Husbandrie is a Science common to them all ingenerall, bothe men and women, wherein they be all experte and cunning. In this they be all instructed euen from their youth: partelie in their scholes with traditions and precepts, and partelie in the countrey nighe the citie, brought vp as it were in playinge, not onely beholding the vse of it, but by occasion of exercising their bodies practising it also. Besides husbandrie, whiche (as I faide) is common to them all, euerye one of them learneth one or other feueral and particular science, as his owne proper craft. That is most commonly either clothworking in wol or flaxe, or masonrie, or the smithes craft, or the carpenters science. For there is none other occupation that any number to speake of doth vse there. For their garmentes, which throughoute all the Ilande be of one fashion, (fauyng that there is a difference betwene the mans garmente and the womans, betwene the married and the vnmarried) and this one continueth for Sciences or occupations should be learned for necessities sake, and not for the mayntenaunce of riotous excesse and wanton pleasure.

Similitude in apparrell.

euermore vnchaunged, femely and comelie to the eye, no lette to the mouynge and weldyng of the bodye, also fytte both for wynter and summer: as for these garmentes (I faye) euery familie maketh their owne. But of the other foresaide craftes euerye man learneth one. And not onely the men, but also the women. But the women, as the weaker fort, be put to the easier craftes: as to worke wolle and flaxe. The more laborfome sciences be committed to the men. For the mooste part euery man is broughte vp in his fathers crafte. For mooste commonlye they be naturallie therto bente and inclined. But yf a mans minde stande to anye other, he is by adoption put into a familie of that occupation, which he doth most fantasy. Whome not onely his father, but also the magistrates do diligently loke to, that he be put to a discrete and an honest householder. Yea, and if anye person, when he hath learned one crafte, be desierous to learne also another, he is likewyse suffred and permitted.

No citizein without a science.

To what occupation eueryone is naturalie inclined that let him learne.

When he hathe learned bothe, he occupieth whether he wyll: onelesse the citie haue more neade of the one, then of the other. The chiefe and almooste the onelye offyce of the Sypograuntes is, to see and take hede, that no manne sit idle: but that euerye one applye hys owne craft with earnest diligence. And yet for all that, not to be wearied from earlie in the morninge, to late in the euenninge, with continuall worke, like labouringe and toylinge beastes.

Idel persones to be driuen out of the weale publique.

For this is worfe then the miserable and wretched condition of bondemen. Whiche neuertheles is almooste euerye where the lyfe of workemen and artificers, sauing in Utopia. For they diuidyng the daye and the nyghte into xxiiii. iuste houres, appointe and asigne onelye fixe of those houres to woorke before noone, vpon the whiche they go streighte to diner: and after diner, when they haue rested two houres,

A moderation in the labour and toyle of artificers.

then they worke iii. houres and vpon that they go to supper. Aboute eyghte of the cloke in the eueninge (countinge one of the cloke at the firste houre after noone) they go to bedde : eyght houres they geue to slepe. All the voide time, that is betwene the houres of worke, slepe, and meate, that they suffered to bestowe, euery man as he liketh best him selfe. Not to th[e] intent that they shold mispend this time in riote or slouthfulnes : but beyng then licensed from the laboure of their owne occupations, to bestow the time well and thrifte-lye vpon some other science, as shall please them. For it is a solempne custome there, to haue lectures daylye early in the morning, where to be presente they onely be constrained that be namelye chofen and appoynted to

The studie of
good literature. learninge. Howbeit a greate multitude of euery fort of people, both men and women go to heare lectures, some one and some an other, as euerye mans nature is inclined. Yet, this notwithstanding, if any man had rather bestowe this time vpon his owne occupation, (as it chaunceth in manye, whose mindes rise not in the contemplation of any science liberall) he is not letted, nor prohibited, but is also prayfed and commended, as profitable to the common supper. wealth. After supper they bestow one hour in playe : in summer in their gardens :

Playing after

in winter in their commen halles : where they dine and suppe. There they exercise themselues in musike, or els in honest and wholsome communication. Diceplaye, and fuche other folishe and pernicious games they

But now adaies diceplay
is the pastime
of princes. know not. But they vse ij. games not much vnlike the chesse. The one is the battell of numbers, wherein one numbre stealethe awaye another. The other is wherin vices

fyghte with vertues, as it were in battel array, or a fet Plaies or games also profitable. fyld. In the which game is verye properlye shewed, both the striffe and discorde that vices haue amonge themselves, and agayne their vnitye and concorde againste vertues : And also what vices be repugnaunt to what vertues :

with what powre and strength they assaile them open-lye: by what wieses and subtely they assaulte them secretelye: with what helpe and aide the vertues resiste, and ouercome the puiffaunce of the vices: by what craft they frustrate their purposes: and finally by what sleight or meanes the one getteth the victory. But here leaft you be deceaued, one thinge you muste looke more narrowly vpon. For feinge they bestowe but. vi. houres in woorke, perchaunce you maye thinke that the lacke of some necessarye thinges hereof maye enfewe. But this is nothinge so. For that smal time is not only enough but also to muche for the floore and abundaunce of all thinges, that be requisite, either for the necessitie, or commoditie of life. The which thinge you also shall perceauē, if you weye and consider with your selves how great a parte of the people in other contreis lyueth ydle. First almost all women, whyche be the halfe of the whole numbre: or els if the women be somewhere occupied, there most commonlye in their steade the men be ydle. Besydes this how greate, and how ydle a companye is there of preystes, and relygious men, as they cal them? put thereto al ryche men, speciallye all landed men, which comonlye be called gentilmen, and noble men. Take into this numbre also their seruantes: I meane all that flocke of stoute bragging ruffhe bucklers. Ioyne to them also sturdy and valiaunte beggers, clokinge their idle lyfe vnder the coloure of some disease or sickenes. And trulye you shal find them much fewer then you thought, by whose labour all these thinges are wrought, that in mens affaires are now daylye vsed and frequented. Nowe confyder with youre selfe, of these fewe that doe woorke, how fewe be occupied, in necessarye woorkes. For where money beareth all the swinge, there many vayne and superfluous occupations must nedes be vsed, to serue only for ryotous superfluite, and vnhonest

The kyndes
and sortes of ydel people.

Women.

Priestes and religious men.
Riche men and landed men.

Seruyngmen.

lyfe vnder

Sturdy and valiaunt
beggers.

Wonderfull
wittely spoken.

pleasure. For the same multitude that now is occupied in woork, if they were deuided into so fewe occupations as the necessarye vse of nature requyreth: in so greate plentye of thinges as then of necessity woulde ensue, doubtles the prices wolde be to lytle for the artifcyers to maynteyne their liuinges. But yf all these that be nowe busied about vnprofitable occupations, with all the whole flocke of them that lyue ydellye and slouthfullye, whyche consume and waste euery one of them more of these thinges that come by other mens laboure, then. ij. of the workemen themselves doo: yf all these (I saye) were sette to profytable occupatyons: you easelye perceauē howe lytle tyme would be enoughe, yea and to muche to floore vs with all thinges that maye be requisite either for necessitie, or for commoditie, yea or for pleasure, so that the same pleasure be trewe and natural. And this in Utopia the thinge it selfe makethe manifeste and playne. For there in all the citye, with the whole contreye, or shiere adioyning to it sca[r]selye. 500. persons of al ye whole numbere of men and women, that be neither to olde, nor to weake to worke, be licensed and discharged from laboure. Amonge them be the Siphograuntes (whoe thoughte they be by the lawes exempte and priuiledged from labour) yet they exempte not themselves: to the intent that they maye the rather by their example prouoke other to worke. The same vacation from labour do they also enioye, to whome the people perswaded by the commendation of the priestes, and secrete election of the Siphograuntes, haue geuen a perpetual licence from laboure to learninge. But if any one of them proue not accordinge to the expectation and hoope of him conceaued, he is forthwith plucked backe to the company of artificers. And contrarye wise, often it chaunceth that a handicraftes man doth so earnestly bestowe his vacaunte and spare houres in learninge, and throughe diligence so profyteth therin, that he is taken from his handy occupation, and promoted to the company of the learned. Oute of this

Not asmuche as the magistrates liue
idelly.

ordre of the learned be chosen ambassadours, priestes, Tranibores, and finallye the prince him selfe. Whome they in their olde tonge call Barzanes, and by a newer name, Adamus. The residewe of the people being neither ydle, nor yet occupied about vnprofitable exercises, it may be easely iudged in how fewe houres how muche good worke by them may be doone and dispatched, towardes those thinges yat I haue spoken of. This commodity they haue also aboute other, yat in the most part of necessarye occupations they neade not so much work, as other nations doe. For first of all ye buildinge or repayinge of houses asketh euerye where so manye mens continual labour, bicause yat the vnthrifty heire suffereth ye houses that his father buylded in contyneaunce of tyme to fall in decay. So that which he myghte haue vpholden wyth lytle coste, hys successoure is constreyned to buylde it agayne a newe, to his great charge. Yea manye tymes also the howse that floode one man in muche moneye, another is of so nyce and soo delycate a mynde, that he setteth nothinge by it. And it beyng neglected, and therefore shortelye fallynge into ruyne, he buyldeth vpe another in an other place with no lesse coste and chardge. But amonge the Utopians, where all thinges be sett in a good ordre, and the common wealthe in a good stayer, it very seldom chaunceth, that they cheuse a newe plotte to buyld an house vpon. And they doo not only finde speedy and quicke remedies for present faultes: but also preuent them that be like to fall. And by this meanes their houses continewe and laste very longe with litle labour and smal reparations: in so much that this kind of workmen somtimes haue almost nothinge to doo. But that they be commaunded to hewe timbre at home, and to square and trimme vp stones, to the intente that if anye worke chaunce, it may the speedelie rise. Now Syr in their apparell, marke (I praye you) howe fewe workmen they neade. Fyrste of al, whyles they be at

Onely learned men called to offices.

How to auoyd excessiue cost in building.

How to lessen the charge in apparel.

woorke, they be couered homely with leather or skinnes, that will last. vii. yeares. When they go furthe abrode they caste vpon them a cloke, whych hydeth the other homelye apparel. These clookes through out the whole Iland be all of one coloure, and that is the natural coloure of the wul. They therefore do not only spend much lesse wullen clothe then is spent in other contreis, but also the same standeth them in muche lesse coste. But lymen clothe is made with lesse labour, and is therefore hadde more in vse. But in lymen cloth onely whytenesse, in wullen only clenlynes is regarded. As for the smalnesse or finenesse of ye threde, that is no thinge passed for. And this is the cause wherfore in other places. iiii. or v clothe gownes of dyuers coloures, and as manye filke cootes be not enoughe for one man. Yea and yf he be of the delicate and nyse sorte. x. [ten] be to fewe: whereas there one garment wyl serue a man mooste comenlye. ij. yeares. For whie shoulde he desyre moore? seinge yf he had them, he should not be the better hapt or couered from colde, neither in his apparel anye whitte the comlyer. Wherefore, seinge they be all exercysed in profitable occupations, and that fewe artificers in the same craftes be sufficiente, this is the cause that plentye of all thinges beinge among them, they doo sometymes bringe forthe an innumerable companye of people to amend the hyghe wayes, yf anye be broken. Many times also, when they haue no suche woorke to be occupied aboute, an open proclamation is made, that they shall bestowe fewer houres in worke. For the magistrates doe not exercise their citizens againste their willes in vnneadefull laboures. For whie in the institution of that weale publique, this ende is onely and chiefly pretended and mynded, that what time maye possibly be spared from the necessarye occupacions and affayres of the comen wealth, all yat the citizeins shoulde withdrawe from the bodely seruice to the free libertye of the minde, and garnishinge of the same. For herein they suppose the felicitye of this liffe to consist.

Of their liuinge and mutual conuersation together.

BVt nowe wil I declare how the citizens vse them felves one towards another: what familiar occupieng and enterteynement, there is amonge the people, and what fasion they vse in the distribution of euery thing. Firste the city consisteth of families, the families most commonlye be made of kinredes. For the women when they be maryed at a lawefull age, they goo into their husbandes houses. But the male children, with al the whole male offpringe continewe still in their owne family and be gouerned of the eldest and auncientest father, onles he dote for age: for then the next to him in age, is placed in his rowme. But to The numbre of citizens. th[e] intent ye prescript number of the citezens shoulde neither decrease, nor aboue measure increase, it is ordeined that no familie which in euery citie be. vi. thousand in the whole, besydes them of the contrey, shall at ones haue fewer children of the age of. xiiii. yeares or there about then. x. or mo then. xvi. for of children vnder this age no numbre can be prescribed or appointed. This measure or numbre is easely obserued and kept, by putting them that in fuller families be aboue the number into families of smaller increase. But if chaunce be that in ye whole citie the stoore increase aboue the iust number, therewith they fil vp ye lacke of other cities. But if so be yat the multitude throughout the whole Ilande passe and excede the dewe number, then they chuese out of euery citie certein citezens, and build vp a towne vnder their owne lawes in the next land where the inhabitautes haue muche waste and vnooccupied ground, receauing also of the same countrey people to them, if they wil ioyne and dwel with them. They thus ioyning and dwelling together do easelye agre in one fassion of liuing, and that to the great wealth of both the peoples. For they so bringe the matter about by their lawes, that the ground which before was neither good nor profitable for the one nor for the other, is nowe sufficiente and fruteful enoughe for them both. But if the inhabitantes of that lande wyl not dwell with them to be ordered by their lawes, then they dryue them out of those boundes which they haue limited, and apointed out for them selues. And if they resiste and rebel, then they make warre agaynst them. For they counte this the moeste iuste cause of warre, when anye people holdethe a piece of grounde voyde and vacaunt to no good nor profitable vse, kepyng other from the vse and possession of it, whiche notwithstanding by the lawe of nature ought thereof to be nourished and relieued. Yf anye chaunce do so muche diminishe the number of any of their cities, that it cannot be fylled vp agayne, without the diminishyng of the iust numbere of the other cyties (whiche they say chaunced but twyse synce the begynnyng of the lande throughe a greate pestilente plage) then they fulfyll and make vp the numbere with cytezens fetched out of their owne forreyne townes, for they had rather suffer their forreyne townes to decaye and peryshe, then any cytie of their owne Ilande to be diminished. But nowe agayne to the conuersation of

So might we
well be discharged
and eased
of the ydle company
of seruyngmen.

the cytezens amonge themselves. The eldeste (as I sayde) rulethe the familye. The wyfes bee ministers to their husbandes, the children to their parentes, and to bee shorte the yonger to their elders. Euery Cytie is deuided into foure equall partes or quarters. In the myddes of euery quarter there is a market place of all maner of thinges. Thether the workes of euery familie be brought into certeyne houses. And euery kynde of thing is layde vp feuerall in barnes or store houses. From hence the father of euery familye, or euery housholder fetchethe whatfoeuer he and his haue neade of, and carieth it away with him without money, without exchange, without any gage, pawne, or pledge. For whye shoulde any thing be denyed vnto him? seyng there is abundaunce of all thinges, and that it is not to bee feared, lest anye man wyll aske more then he needeth. For whie should it be thoughte that that man woulde aske more then anough, which is fewer neuer to lacke? Certeynely in all kyndes of lyuing creatures either feare of lacke dothe cause couetousnes and rauyne, or in man only pryde, which counteth it a glorious thinge to passe and excel other in the superfluous and vayne ostentation of thinges. The whyche kynde of vice amonge the Utopians can haue no place. Nexte to the market places that I spake of, stande meate markettes: whether be brought not only all sortes of herbes, and the fruites of trees, with breade, but also fishe, and all maner of. iiii. footed beastes, and wilde foule that be mans meate. But first the fylthynes and ordure therof is clene washed awaye in the renninge ryuer without the cytie in places appoynted mete for the same purpose. From thence the beastes be brought in kylled, and cleane wasshed by the handes of their bondemen For they permitte not their frie citezens to accustomme them selves to the killing of beastes, through the vse whereof they thinke, clemencye the gentleste affection of oure nature by lytle and lytle to decaye and peryshe. Neither they suffer anye thinge that is fylthye, lothesom, or vnclenlye, to be broughte into the cytie, least the ayre by the stench therof infected and corrupte, shoulde cause pestilente diseases. Moreouer euerye strete hath certeyne great large halles set in equal distaunce one from another, euerye one knowen by a feuerall name. In these halles dwell the Syphograuntes. And to euerye one of the same halles be apoynted. xxx. [thirty] families, on either side. xv [fifteen] The stewardes of euerye halle at a certayne houre come in to the meate markettes, where they receyue meate accordinge to the number of their halles.

The cause of coueteus and extortion.

Of the slaughter of beastes
we haue learned manslaughter.

Fylth and ordure bring the infection of pestilence into Cyties.

Care, diligence
and attendance
about the sicke.

But first and chieflie of all respect is had to the fycke, that be cured in the hospitalles. For in the circuite of the citie, a litle without ye walles, they haue. iiii. hospitalles, so bigge so wyde, so ample, and so large, that they may seme. iiii. litle townes, which were deuised of yat bignes partely to th[e] intent the fycke, be they neuer so many in numbre, shuld not lye to thronge or strayte, and therefore vneafely, and incommodiously: and partely that they which were taken and holden with contagious diseafes, fuche as be wonte by infection to crepe from one to an other, myght be layde apart farre from the company of ye residue. These hospitalles be so wel appointed, and with al thinges necessary to health so furnished, and more ouer so diligent attendaunce through the continual presence of cunning phisitians is geuen, that though no man be sent thether against his will, yet notwithstandinge there is no sicke persone in al the citie, that had not rather lye there, then at home in his owne houle. When the steward of the sicke hath receiued fuche meates as the phisitians haue prescribed, then the beste is equallye deuided among the halles, according to the company of euery one, fauing that there is had a respect to the prince, the byshop, the tranibours, and to ambassadours and all straungers, if there be any, which be verye fewe and feldome. But they also when they be there, haue certeyne feuerall houfes apointed and prepared for them. To these halles at ye fet houres of dinner and supper commeth all the whole Siphograuntie or warde, warned by ye noyse of a brafen trumpet: except fuche as be sicke in ye hospitalles, or els in their owne houfes. Howbeit no man is prohibited or forbid, after the halles be serued, to fetch home meate out of ye market to his own houle, For they knowe that no man wyl doe it without a cause reasonable. For thoughe no man be prohibited to dyne at home, yet no man doth it willyngly: because it is counted a pointe of smal honestie. And also it were a follye to

Euery man is
at his libertie
so that nothing is done by compulsion.

take the payne to dresse a badde diner at home, when they may be welcome to good and fyne fare so neighe hande at the hall. In this hal al vile seruice, all flauery, and drudgerie, with all labourfome toyle, and base busines is done by bondemen. But the women of euery family by course haue the office and charge of cookerie for fethinge and dresse the meate, and orderinge all thinges therto belongyng. They sit at three tables or moe, accordinge to the nombre of their company. The men fitte vpon the bench next the wall, and the women againste them on the other side of the table, that yf anye sodeyne euill should chaunce to them, as many tymes happeneth to women with chylde, they maye rise wythoute trouble or disturbaunce of anye bodie, and go thence into the nurserie. The nurceis fitte feuerall alone with theyr younge suckelinges in a certaine parloure appointed and deputed to the same purpose, neuer withoute fire and cleane water, nor yet without cradels, that when they wyll they maye laye downe the younge infantes, and at theyr pleasure take them oute of their swathyng clothes, and holde them to the fire, and refreshe them with playe. Euery mother is nource to her owne childe, onles either death, or fycknes be the let. When that chaunceth, the wiues of the Syphograuntes quyckelye prouyde a nource. And that is not harde to be done. For they that can doo it, profer themselues to no seruice so gladlye as to that. Because that there thys kinde of pitie is muche prayfed: and the chylde that is nourished, euer after taketh his nource for his owne naturall mother. Also amonge the nourceis, fytted all the children that be vnder the age of v. yeares. All the other chylde of bothe kyndes, aswell boyes as girles, that be vnder the age of maryage, do eyther serue at the tables, or els if they be to yonge therto, yet they stand by with maruailous silence. That whiche is geuen to them from the table they eate, and other feuerall

Women bothe dresse and serue the meate.

Nourceis.

Nothing soner prouoketh men to well doying then praise and commendation.

The education of yonge children.

dynner tyme they haue none. The Siphograunte and his wife fitte in the myddes of the high table, forasmuch as that is counted the honorablest place, and because from thence all the whole companie is in their sight. For that table standeth ouer<sup>t</sup>wharte the ouer ende of the hall. To them be ioyned two of the auncientest and eldest. For at euerye table they sit foure at a meesse. But yf there be a church standing in yat Syphograuntie or warde, then the priest and his wife sitteth with the Siphograunt, as chiefe in the company. On both fydes of them sit yonge men, and nexte vnto

The yong mixed with their elders. them againe olde men. And thus through out all the house equall of age be fette together, and yet be mixt and matched with vnequal ages. This, they fay, was ordeyned, to the intent that the sage grautie and reuerence of the elders should kepe the yongers from wanton licence of wordes and behauioure. Forasmuch as nothyng can be so secretlye spoken or done at the table, but either they that sit on the one side or on the other muste nedes perceauē it. The dishes be not set down in order from

Olde men regarded and reuerenced. the first place but all the olde men (whose places be marked with some speciall token to be knowen) be first serued of their meate, and then the residue equally. The olde men deuide their deinties as they think best to the yonger on eche fyde of them.

Thus the elders be not defrauded of their dewe honoure, and neuerthelesse equall commoditie commeth to

This nowe a daies is obserued in oure vniuersities. euery one. They begin euerye dinner and supper of redinge sumthing yat perteneth to good maners and vertue. But it is shorte, because no man shalbe greued therwith. Hereof th[e] elders take occasion of honest communication, but neither sadde nor vnpleasaunt.

Talke at the table. Howbeit they do not spende all the whole dinertime themselues with longe and tedious talkes: but they gladly heare also the yonge men: yea, and purpofelye prouoke them to talke, to th[e] intent that they may haue a profe of euery mans wit, and towardnes, or disposition to vertue, which commonlie in the libertie of feasting doth shew and vtter it self. Their diners be verie short: but their suppers be sumwhat longer, because that after dyner foloweth labour, after supper slepe and natural rest, whiche they thinke to be of more strength and efficacie to wholsome and healthfull digestion. No supper is passed without musicke. Nor their bankettes lacke no conceytes nor ionketes. They burne fwete gummes and spices or perfumes, and pleasaunt smelles, and sprinckle aboute fwete oyntementes and waters, yea, they leaue nothing vndone that maketh for the cheringe of the companye. For they be muche enclined to this opinion: to thinke no kinde of pleasure forbydden, whereof commeth no harme. Thus therfore and after this sort they liue together in the citie, but in the countrey they that dwell alone farre from any neighbour, do dyne and suppe at home in their owne houses. For no familie there lacketh any kinde of victualles, as from whom commeth all that the citezens eate and lyue by.

This is repugnant to the opinion of our phisitions.

Musick at the table.

Pleasure without harme not discommendable

Of their iourneyng or trauayling abroad, with diuers
other matters cunninglye reasoned, and wyttilye Discussed.

BVt if any be desierous to visite either theyr frendes dwelling in an other citie, or to see the place it selfe : they easelie obteyne licence of their Siphograuntes and Trani-bores, onlesse there be some profitable let.

No man goeth out alone but a companie is sente furth together with their princes letters, which do testifie that they haue licence to go that iourney, and prescribeth also the day of their retourne. They haue a wageyn geuen them, with a common bondman, which driueth the oxen, and taketh charge of them. But onles they haue women in their companie, they sende home the wageyn againe, as an impediment and a let. And thoughe they carye nothyng furth with them, yet in all their iorney they lack nothing. For wherfoeuer they come, they be at home. If they tary in a place longer then one daye, than there euery one of them talleth to his owne occupation, and be very gentilly entertained of the workemen and companies of the same craftes. If any man of his owne heade and without leaue, walke out of his precint and boundes, taken without the princes letters, he is broughte againe for a fugitiue or a runaway with great shame and rebuke, and is sharply punished. If he be taken in that fault againe, he is punished with bondage. If anye be desirous to walke abroad into the felde, or into the cuntrye yat belongeth to the same citie that he dwelleth in, obtaininge the good wil of his father, and the consente of his wife, he is not prohibited. But into what part of ye contrei foeuer he commeth he hath no meat geuen him vntil he haue wrought out his forenones taske, or dispatched so muche work, as there is wont to be wrought before supper. Obseruing this law and condition, he may go whether he wil within the boundes of his own citie. For he shalbe no les profitable to ye citie, then if he were within it. Now you se how litle libertie they haue to loiter: howe they can haue no cloke or pretence to ydlenes.

There be neither winetauernes, nor ale houfes, nor stewes, nor anye occasion of vice or wickednes, no lurking corners,
 no places of wycked counsels or vnlawfull assemblies.
 But they be in the presente fighte, and vnder the eies of euery man. So that of necessitie they must either apply their accustomed labours, or els recreate themselues with honest and laudable pastimes.

O holy common wealth, and of Christians to be folowed.

This fashion and trade of life, being vsed amonge
 the people, it cannot be chofen, but that they muste of necessitie haue store and plentie of all thinges. And feyng they be all therof parteners equallie, therefore can no man there be poore or nedie. In the counsell of Amaurot, whether, as I said, euery citie sendeth three men a pece yearly, affone as it is perfectly knowen of what thinges there is in euery place plentie, and againe what thinges be skant in any place: incontinent the lacke of the one is perfourmed and filled vp with the aboundaunce of the other. And this they do frely without anye benefite, taking nothing againe of them, to whom ye thinges is giuen, but those cities that haue geuen of their store to any other citie that lacketh, requiring nothing againe of ye same citie, do take suche thinges as they lacke of an other citie, to the which they gaue nothinge. So the whole ylande is as it were one familie, or houfholde. But when they haue made sufficient prouision
 of store for themfelues (which they thinke
 not done, vntil they haue prouided for two yeres folow-inge, because of the vncertentie of the next yeares

Equalitie is the cause that euery man hath enoughe.

A common
 wealthe is nothing elles but a great household.

proffe) then of those thinges, wherof they haue abun-daunce, they carie furth into other countreis great

The traffique
and marchaun-dise of the Uto-pians.

plentie : as grayne, honnie, wulle, flaxe,
woode, madder, purple died felles, waxe, tallowe, lether, and lyuinge beastes. And the feuenth parte of all these thynges they geue franckelye and frelie to the pore of that countrey.

The residewe they sell at a reasonable and meane price.
By this trade of traffique or marchaundise, they bring into their own contrey, not only great plenty of golde
and siluer, but also all suche thynges as they lacke at home, whiche is almoste nothinge but Iron. And by reason they haue longe vsed this trade, nowe they haue
more aboundaunce of these thinges, then anye man wyl beleue. Nowe therefore they care not whether they sell for readye money, or els vpon truste to be payed
at a daye, and to haue the mooste parte in debtes.

In all thinges
and aboue all thinges to their communitie thei
haue an eye.

But in so doynge they neuer followe the credence of priuat men: but the assuraunce
or warrauntise of the whole citie, by instrumentes aud writinges made in that behalfe accordingly. When the daye of paiement is come and expired, the citie gathereth vp the debte of the priuate debtoures, and putteth it into the common boxe, and so longe hath the vse and profite of it, vntill the Vtopians their creditours demaunde it. The mooste parte

By what pollicie money may be in lesse estimation.

of it they neuer aske. For that thyng whiche is to them no profite to take it from other, to whom it is profitable : they thinke it no righte nor conscience. But if the case so stand, that they must lende part of that money to an other people, then they require theyr debte : or when they haue warre. For the whiche purpose onelye they kepe at home all the treasure, whiche they haue, to be holpen and focoured by it either in extreame ieopardyes, or in suddeine daungers. But especiallye and chiefelie to hierer therewith, and that for vnreasonable greate wayges, straunge soldiours. For they hadde rather put straungers in ieopardie, then theyr owne countreyemen: knowynge that for money ynoughe, their enemyes themfelues many times may be boughte or folde, or elles throughe treason be fette together by the eares amonge themfelues. For this cause they kepe an inestimable treasure. But yet not as a treasure: but so they haue it, and vse it, as in good faythe I am ashamed to shewe: fearinge that my woordes shall not be beleued. And this I haue more cause too feare, for that I knowe howe difficultlie and hardelye I myselfe would haue beleued an other man tellinge the same, if I hadde not presentlye sene it with mine owne eyes.

It is better either with money or by pollicie to avoyde warre, then with muche losse of mans bloud to fight.

O fine wytte.

For it muste needes be, that howe farre a thyng is diffonaunt and disagreing from the guise and trade of the hearers, so farre shall it be out of their belefe. Howebeit, a wise and indifferent estimer of thynges, will not greatlye marueill perchaunce, seyng all theyr other lawes and customes do so muche differre from oures, yf the vse also of gold and syluer amonge them be applied, rather to their owne fashyons, than to oures. I meane in that they occupie not money themfelues, but kepe it for that chaunce, whiche as it maye happen, so it maye be, that it shall neuer come to passe. In the meane time golde and syluer, whereof money is made, they do so vse, as none of them doethe more esteeme it, then the verye nature of the thing deserueth. And then who doeth not playnelye se howe farre it is vnder Iron: as without the whiche men can no better lyue then without fiere and water. Whereas to golde and siluer nature hath geuen no vse, that we may not well lacke: if that the follye of men hadde not fette it in higher estimation for the rarenesse sake. But of the contrarie parte, nature as a mooste tender and louynge mother, hathe placed the beste and mooste necessarie thinges open abroade: as the ayere, the water, and the yearth it selfe. And hathe remoued and hyd far-

Golde worse then yron as touchynge the necessarie vse therof.

theft from vs vayne and vnprofitable thinges. Therefore if these metalles amonge them shoulde be faste locked vp in some tower, it might be suspected, that the prince and the counsell (as the people is euer foolishhelie ymagininge) intended by some subtiltie to deceaue the commons, and to take some profite of it to themselues. Furthermore if they shold make therof plate and such other finelie and cunninglie wroughte stufte: if at anye time they should haue occasion to breake it: and melte it againe, therewith to paye their souldiers wages, they see and perceaue verye well, that men woulde be lothe to parte from those thinges, that they ones begonne to haue pleasure and delite in. To remedie all this they haue founde oute a meanes, whiche, as it is agreable to all their other lawes and customes, so it is from ours, where golde is so much set by, and so diligently kept, very farre discripant and repugnant: and therefore vncredible, but onelye to them that be wise. For where as they eate and drinke in earthen and glasse vesselles, whiche indede be curiouslye and properlye made, and yet be of very smal value: O wonderfull contumelie of golde. of golde and syluer they make commonly chamber pottes, and other vesselles, that serue for mooste vile vses, not onely in their common halles, but in euery mans priuate house. Furthermore of the same mettalles they make greate chaines, fetters, and gieues wherin the[y] tie their bondmen. Finally whosoouer for anye offense be infamed, by their eares hange rynges of golde: vpon their fingers they weare rynges of golde, and aboute their neckes chaines of golde: and in conclusion their heades be tied aboute with gold. Thus by al meanes possible thei procure to haue golde and siluer among them in reproche and infamie. And these metalles, which other nations do as greuoufly and sorowfullye forgo, as in a manner their owne liues: if they should altogether at ones be taken from the Utopians, no man there would thinke that he had lost the worth of one farthing. They ga-

O wonderfull
contumelie of golde.

Golde the reprochful badge
of infamed persons.

ther also pearles by the sea side, and Diamondes and carbuncles vpon certen rockes, and yet they feke not for them: but by chaunce finding them, they cut and polifh them. And therwith thei deck their yonge infautes. Whiche like as in the first yeres of their childhod, they make muche and be fonde and proude of fuch ornamentes, fo when they be a litle more growen in yeares and difcretion, perceiuing that none but children do weare fuch toies and trifels: they lay them awaye euen of their owne shamefafteneffe, wythoute anye byddyng of their parentes: euen as oure chyl dren, when they waxe bygge, doo cafte awaye nuttes, brouches, and puppettes. Therefore thefe lawes and customes, whiche be fo farre differente from al other nations, howe diuers fantasies alfo and myndes they doo caufe, dydde I neuer fo playnelie perceauē, as in the Ambaffadoures of the Anemolians.

Gemmes and precious stones, toyes for yonge children to playe withall.

These Ambaffadoures came to Amaurote whiles I was there. And because they came to entreate of great and weightie matters, thofe three citizens a pece oute of euerie citie were comen thether before them. But all the Ambaffadours of the nexte countreis, whiche had bene there before, and knewe the fashions and maners of the Utopians, amonge whom they perceaued no honoure geuen to fumptuous apparell, filkes to be contemned, golde alfo to be infamed and reprochful, were wont to come thether in verie homelye and fimple araie. But the Anemolians because they dwell farre thence, and had verie litle acquaintance with them: hearinge that they were all apparelled a like, and that verie rudely and homely: thinkinge them not to haue the thinges whiche they did not weare: being therefore more proude, then wife: determyned in the gorgioufnes of their apparel to represente verie goddes, and wyth the brighte fhyninge and glifteryng of their gay clothing to dafell the eyes of the filie poore Vtopians. So there came in. iii. Ambaffadours with. c. [an hundred] feruauntes all apparelled in changeable colours : the moſte of them in filkes : the Ambaſſadours themſelves (for at home in their owne countrey they were noble men) in cloth of gold, with great cheines of gold, with golde hanginge at their eares, with gold ringes vpon their fingers with brouches and aglettes of gold vpon their cappes, which glistered ful of peerles and precious ſtones : to be ſhort trimmed, and adourned with al thoſe thinges, which among the vtopians were either the puniſhment of bondmen, or the reproche of infamed perſones, or elles trifels for yonge children to playe withal. Therefore it wolde haue done a man good at his harte to haue ſene howe proudelye they diſplayed their peacockes fethers, howe muche they made of their paynted ſheathes, and howe loftely they ſet forth and aduaunced them ſelves, when they compared their gallaunte apparrell with the poore rayment of the vtopians. For al the people were ſwarmed forth into the ſtretes. And on the other ſide it was no leſſe pleaſure to conſider howe muche they were deceaued, and how farre they miſſed of their purpoſe being contrary wayes taken, then they thought they ſhou!d haue bene. For to the eyes of all the vtopians, excepte very fewe, which had bene in other countreys for ſome reſonable cauſe, al that gorgeouſnes of apparel ſemed ſhamefull and reprocheful. In ſo muche that they moſt reuerently ſaluted the vileſt and moſt abiect of them for lordes : paſſing ouer the Ambaſſadours themſelves without any honour : iudging them by their wearing of golden cheynes to be bondmen. Yea you ſhou!de haue ſene children alſo, that had caſte away their peerles and pretious ſtones, when they ſawe the like ſticking vpon the Ambaſſadours cappes : digge and puſhe their mothers vnder the ſides, ſainge thus to them. Loke mother O wittie head, how great a lubbor doth yet were peerles and precious ſtoones, as though he were a litel child ſtil. But the mother, yea and that alſo in good earneſt : peace ſone, ſaith ſhe : I thinke he be ſome of the Ambaſſadours fooles. Some founde faulte at their golden cheines, as to no vse nor purpose, being so smal and weake, that a bondeman might easely breake them, and agayne so wyde and large, that when it pleased him, he myght cast them of, and runne awaye at libertye whether he woulde. But when the Ambassadors hadde bene there a daye or. ii. and sawe so greate abundaunce of gold so lyghtely esteimed, yea in no lesse reproche, then it was with them in honour: and besides that more golde in the cheines and gieues of one fugitiue bondman, then all the costelye ornamentes of them. iii. was worth: they beganne to abate their courage, and for very shame layde away that goryouse arraye, whereof they were so proud. And specially when they had talked familiarlye with the Utopians, and had learned al their fassions and opinions.

A very pleasaunt tale.

For they marueyle that any men be so folyse, as to haue delite and pleasure in the doubteful glisteringe of a lytle tryffelynge stone, whiche maye beholde annye of the starres, or elles the sonne it selfe. Or that anye man is so madde, as to count him selfe the nobler for the smaller or fyner threde of wolle, which selfe same wol (be it now in neuer so fyne a sponne threde) a shepe did ones weare: and yet was she all that time no other thing then a shepe. They marueile also that golde, whych of the owne nature is a thinge so vnprofytable, is nowe amonge all people in so hyghe estimation, that man him selfe, by whome, yea and for the vse of whome it is so much set by, is in mucche lesse estimation, then the golde it selfe. In so mucche that a lumpyse blockehedded churle, and whyche hathe no more wytte then an asse, yea and as ful of noughtynes as of follye, shall haue neuertheles manye wyse and good men in subiectyon and bondage, only for this, bycause he hath a greate heape of golde. Whyche yf it shoulde be taken from hym by anye fortune, or by some subtyll wyle and cautele of the lawe, (whyche no lesse then fortune dothe bothe raise vp the lowe, and plucke

Doubtful he calleth it, either in consideration and respecte of counterfeite stones, or elles he calleth doubtful very littel worthe.

A true saing and a wittie.

downe the highe) and be geuen to the moſte vile ſlaue and abiect dryuell of all his houſholde, then ſhortely after he ſhal goo into the ſeruiſe of his ſeruaunt, as an augmentation nor ouerplus beſide his money. But they

Howe muche
more witte is in the heades
of the Utopi-anes then of the common ſorte
of chriſtians.

muche more maruell at and deteſt the madnes of them, whyche to thoſe riche men, in whoſe debte and daunger they be not, do giue almoſt diuine honoures, for none other conſideration, but bicauſe they be riche: and yet knowing them to bee ſuche nigheſte penny fathers, that they be ſure as longe as they liue, not the worthe of one farthinge of that heape of gold ſhal come to them.

Theſe and ſuch like opinions haue they conceaued, partely by education, beinge brought vp in that common wealth, whoſe lawes and cuſtomes be farre different from theſe kindes of folly, and partely by good literature and learning. For though there be not many in euery citie, which be exempte and diſcharged of all other laboures, and appointed only to learning, that is to ſaye: ſuche in whome euen from their very childhode they haue perceaued a ſingular towardnes, a fyne witte, and a minde apte to good learning: yet all in their childhode be inſtructe in learninge. And the better parte of the people, bothe men and women throughe oute all their whole lyffe doo beſtowe in learninge thoſe ſpare houres, which we ſayde

The ſtudies
and literature
amonge the Utopians.

they haue vacante from bodelye laboures. They be taughte learninge in their owne naytyue tong. For it is bothe copious in woordes, and alſo pleaſaunte to the eare: and for the vtteraunce of a mans minde very perfecte and ſure. The moſte parte of all that fynde of the worlde vſeth the ſame langage, ſauinge that amonge the Utopians it is fyneſte and pureſte, and accordinge to the diuerſytye of the countreys it is dyuerſlye alterede. Of all theſe Philoſophers, whoſe names be heare famous in this parte of the worlde to vs knowen, before oure cummyng thether not aſmuch as the fame of annye of them was cumen amonge them. And yet in Musike, Logike, Arythmetyke, and Geometrye they haue founde oute in a manner all that oure auncient Philosophers haue tawghte. But as they in all thinges be almoste equal to oure olde auncyente clerkes, so oure newe Logiciens in subtyl inuentions haue farre passed and gone beyonde them. For they haue not deuyfed one of all those rules of restrictions, amplifications and suppositions, verye wittelye inuented in the smal Logicales, whyche heare oure children in euery place do learne. Furthermore they were neuer yet hable to fynde out the seconde intentions: infomuche that none of them all coulde euer see man himselfe in comen, as they cal him, thoughe he be (as you knowe) bygger then euer was annye gyaunte, yea and poynted to of vs euen wyth our fynger. But they be in the course of the starres, and the mouynges of the heauenly spheres verye expert and cunynge. They haue also wittely excogitated and diuifed instrumentes of diuers fassions: wherein is exactly comprehended and conteyned the mouynges and situations of the sonne, the mone, and of al the other starres, which appere in their horizon. But as for the amities and diffentions of the planettes, and all that deceytfeful diuination by the starres, they neuer asmuch as dreamed thereof. Raynes, windes, and other courses of tempestes they knowe before by certeine tokens, which they haue learned by long vse and obseruation. But of the causes of al these thinges and of the ebbinge, flowinge, and saltenes of the sea, and finallye of the original begynnyng and nature of heauen and of the worlde, they holde partelye the same opinions that oure olde Philosophers hold, and partely, as our Philosophers varye among themselves, so they also, whiles they bringe newe reasons of thinges, do disagree from all them, and yet among themselves in all poyntes they doe not accorde. In that part of Phi-

Musike
Logike.
Arithemetike Geometrie.

In this place semethe to be a nipping taunte.

Astronomie.

Yet amonge christians this geere is highli estemed this daies.

they haue Naturall philosophie is a knowledge
most vncertein.

Moral philosophie, which intreateth of manners and vertue, their reasons and opinions agree with ours. They dispute of the good qualities of the soule, of the body, and of fortune. And whether the name of goodnes maye be applied to all these, or onely to the endowments and giftes of the soule.

The order of good thinges. They reason of vertue and pleasure. But the chiefe and principall question is in what thinge, be it one or moe, the felicitye of man consisteth. But in this poynte they seme almoste to muche geuen and enclined to the opinion of them, which defende pleasure, wherein they determine either all or the chiefe parte of mans felicitye to rest. And (whyche is more to be marueled at) the defense of this soo deyntye and delicate an opinion, they fetche euen from their graue, sharpe, bytter, and rygorous religion. For they neuer dispute of felicity or blessednes, but they ioine vnto the reasons of Philosophie certeyne principles taken oute of religion: wythoute the whyche to the inuestigation of trewe felicitye they thynke reason of it selfe weake and vnperfecte. Those principles be these and such lyke. That the soule is immortal: and by ye bountifull goodnes of God ordeined to felicitie. That to our vertues and good deades rewardes be appointed after this life, and to our euill deades punishmentes. Though these be perteyning to religion, yet they thincke it mete that they shoulde be beleued and graunted by profes of reason. But yf these principles were condempned and dyfanulled, then without anye delaye they pronounce no man to be so foolish, whiche woulde not do all his diligence and endeouore to obteyne pleasure be ryght or wronge, onely auoydunge this inconuenience, that the lesse pleasure should not be a let or hinderance to the bigger: or that he laboured not for that Moral philosophie.

The order of good thinges.

The Utopians holde opinion that felicitye consisteth in honest pleasure.

The principles of philosophie grounded vpon religion.

The theologie of the Utopians.

The immortalitie of the soule, wherof these dayes certeyne Christians be in doubt.

pleasure, whiche would bringe after it displeasure, greefe, and sorrow. For they iudge it extreame madnes to folowe sharpe and painful vertue, and not only to bannishe ye pleasure of life, but also willingly to suffer grieffe, without anye hope of proffit thereof ensuinge. For what proffit can there be, if a man, when he hath passed ouer all his lyfe vnpleasantly, that is to say, miserablye, shall haue no rewarde after his death? But nowe syr they thinke not felicitie to rest in all pleasure, but only in that pleasure that is good and honeste, and that hereto, as to perfet blessednes our nature is allured and drawn euen of vertue, whereto onlye they that be of the contrary opinion do attribute felicitie. For they define vertue to be life ordered according to nature, and that we be here vnto ordeined of god. And that he dothe followe the course of nature, which in desiring and refusinge things is ruled by reason. Furthermore that reason doth chiefly and principallye kundle in men the loue and veneration of the deuine maiestie. Of whose goodnes it is that we be, and that we be in possibilitie to attayne felicitie. And that secondarely it bothe stirreth and prouoketh vs to leade our lyfe oute of care in ioy and mirth, and also moueth vs to helpe and further all other in respecte of ye societe of nature to obteine and enioye ye same. For there was neuer man so earnest and painefull a follower of vertue and hater of pleasure, yat wold so inioyne you laboures, watchinges, and fastinges, but he would also exhort you to ease, lighten, and relieue, to your powre, ye lack and misery of others, praying the same as a dede of humanitie and pitie. Then if it be a poynte of humanitie for man to bring health and comforte to man, and speciallye (which is a vertue moste peculiarlye belonging to man) to mitigate and assuage the greife of others, and by takyng from them the sorowe and heynes of lyfe, to restore them to ioye, that is to faye to pleasure: whie maye it not then be sayd, that nature

As euery pleasure ought not to be inhauced so greife is not to be pursued but for vertues sake.

In this definition of vertue they agre with the Stoicians.

The worke and effecte of reason in man.

doth prouoke euerye man to doo the same to himfelfe?

But nowe a daies some ther bee that wyl-linglye procure vnto themsel-ues painefull griefes, as though therin rested some hiege pointe of religion, whereas rather the religiously disposed person, yf they happen to him either by chaunce or elles by naturall necessitie, ought pacientlye to receaue and suffer them.

For a ioyfull lyfe, that is to say, a pleasaunt lyfe is either euel: and if it be so, then thou shouldest not onlye helpe no man therto, but rather, as much as in the lieth, withdrawe all men frome it, as noysome and hurteful, or els if thou not only mayste, but also of dewty art bound to procure it to others, why not chieflye to the felfe? To whome thou art bound to shew asmuch fauoure and gentelnes as to other. For when nature biddeth the to be good and gentle to other she commaundeth the not to be cruell and vngentle to the felfe. Therefore euen very nature (faye they) prescribeth to vs a ioyful lyfe, that is to say, pleasure as the ende of all oure operations. And they define vertue to be lyfe ordered accordynge to the prescripte of nature. But in that that nature dothe allure and prouoke men one to healpe another to lyue merily (whiche suerly she doth not without a good cause: for no man is so farre aboue the lotte of mans state or condicion, that nature dothe carke and care for hym onlye, whiche equallye fauourethe all, that be comprehended vnder the communion of one shape forme and fassion) verely she commaundeth the to vse diligent circumspection, that thou do not so seke for thine owne commodities that thou procure others incommodities. Wherefore their opinion is, that not only couenauntes and bargaynes made amonge priuate men ought to be well and faythefullye fulfilled, obserued, and kepte, but also common lawes, whiche either a good prince hathe iustlye published, or els the people neither oppressed with tyranye, neither deceaued by fraude and gyell, hath by their common consent constituted and ratified, concerninge the particion of the commodities of lyfe, that is to say, the matter of pleasure. These lawes not offended, it is wyfdome, that thou looke to thine own wealthe. And to doe the same for the common wealth is no lesse then thy duetie, if thou bearest any reuerent loue, or any naturall zeale and affection to thy natie countreye. But to go about to let an other man of his pleasure, whiles thou procurest thine owne, that is open wrong. Contrary wyse to withdrawe somethinge from the selfe to geue to other, that is a pointe of humanitie and gentilnes: whiche neuer taketh awaye so muche commoditie, as it bringethe agayne. For it is recompensed with the retourne of benefytes, and the conscience of the good dede, with the remembraunce of the thankefull loue and beneuolence of them to whom thou hast done it, doth bringe more pleasure to thy mynde, then that whiche thou hast withholden from thy selfe could haue brought to thy bodye. Finallye (which to a godly disposed and a religious mind is easy to be perswaded) God recompenseth the gifte of a short and smal pleasure with great and euerlastinge ioye. Therefore the matter diligently weyede and considered, thus they thinke, that all our actions, and in them the vertues themselves be referred at the last to pleasure, as their ende and felicitie. Pleasure they call euery motion and state of the bodie or mynde, wherin man hath naturally delectation. Appetite they ioyne to nature, and that not without a good cause. For like as, not, only the senses, but also right reason coueteth whatsoever is naturally pleasaunt, for yat it may be gotten without wrong or iniurie, not letting or debarring a greater pleasure, nor causing painful labour, euen to those thinges that men by vaine ymagination do fayne against nature to be pleasaunt (as though it laye in their power to chaunge ye thinges, as they do ye names of thinges) al suche pleasures they beleue to be of so small helpe and furtheraunce to felicitie, that they counte them a great let and hinderance. Because that in whom they haue ones taken place, all his mynde they possesse with a false opinion of pleasure. So that there is no place left for true and

The mutual recourse of kind-
nes.

The definition of Pleasure.

False and coun-terfeate pleasures.

naturall delectations. For there be many thinges, which of their owne nature conteyne no plesauntnes: yea the moſte parte of them muche grieſe and forrowe. And yet throughe the peruerſe and malicyous flickeringe inticementes of lewde and vnhoneſte deſyres, be taken not only for ſpeciall and ſouereigne pleaſures, but alſo be counted amonge the chiefe cauſes of life. In this counterfeat kinde of pleaſure they put them that

I ſpake of before. Whiche the better gownes they haue on, the better men they thinke them ſelfes. In the which thing they doo twyſe erre. For they be no leſſe deceaued in that they thinke their gowne the better, than they be, in that they thinke themſelves the better. For if you conſider the profitable uſe of the garmente, whye ſhould wulle of a finer ſponne threde, be thought better, than the wull of a coarſe ſponne threde? Yet they, as though the one did paſſe the other by nature, and not by their miſtakynge, auance themſelves, and thinke the price of their owne perſones thereby greatly encreaſed. And therefore the honour, which in a coarſe gowne they durſt not haue looked for, they require as it were of dewtie, for their finer gownes ſake. And if they be paſſed by without reuerence, they take it diſpleaſantly and diſdainfullye.

The error of them that eſteme themſelves the more for apparels ſake.

And agayne is it not lyke madnes to take a pryde in vayne and vnprofitable honours?

For what naturall or trewe pleaſure doeſt thou take of an other mans bare hede, or bowed knees? Will this eaſe the paine of thy knees, or remedie the phrenſie of thy hede? In this ymage of counterfeite pleaſure, they be of a maruelous madneſſe, whiche for the opinion of nobilitie, reioyſe muche in their owne conceyte. Be-

Vaine nobilitie.

cauſe it was their fortune to come of ſuche auncetoures, whoſe ſtocke of longe tyme hath bene counted ryche (for nowe nobilitie is nothing elles) ſpeciallye ryche in landes. And though their auncetours left them not one foote of lande, or els they themſelues haue pyſſed it agaynſt the walles, yet they thinke themfelues not the leffe noble therefore of one heare. In this number also they counte them that take pleasure and delite (as I faid) in gemmes and precious stones, and thynke themfelues almoſte goddes, if they chaunce to gette an excellent one, ſpeciallye of that kynde, whiche in that tyme of their own cowntre men, is had in hygheſt eſtimation. For one kynde of ſtone kepeth not his pryce ſtyll in all cowntreis, and at all times. Nor they bye them not, but taken out of the golde, and bare: no nor ſo neither, vntyll they haue made the feller to ſweare, that he will warraunte and aſſure it to be a true ſtone, and no counterfeit gemme. Suche care they take leſt a counterfeite ſtone ſhould deceaue their eyes in ſteade of a ryghte ſtone. But why ſhouldeſt thou not take euen aſmuche pleaſure in beholdynge a counterfeite ſtone, whiche thine eye cannot diſcerne from a righte ſtone? They ſhoulde bothe be of lyke value to thee, euen as to the blynde man. What ſhall I ſaye of them, that kepe ſuperfluous riches, to take delectation only in the beholdinge, and not in the uſe or occupiynge thereof? Do they take trew pleaſure, or elles be thei deceaued with falſe pleaſure? Or of them that be in a contrarie vice, hidinge the gold whiche they ſhall neuer occupye, nor peraduenture neuer ſe more? And whiles they take care leaſte they ſhall leeſe it, do leeſe it in dede. For what is it elles, when they hyde it in the ground, takynge it bothe from their owne uſe, and perchaunce frome all other mennes alſo? And yet thou, when thou haſte hydde thy treaſure, as one out of all care, hoppeſt for ioye. The whiche treaſure, yf it ſhoulde chaunce to bee ſtolen. and thou ignoraunt of the theſte ſhouldeſt dye tenne years after: all that tenne yeares ſpace that thou lyuedeſt after thy money was ſtoolen, what matter was it to thee, whether it hadde bene taken awaye or elles faſe as thou leſteſt

Pleasure in
precious stones
most foliſh.

The opinion and
faſie of people
doeth augment
and diminiſhe
the price and eſtimation of
precious stones.

Beholders of treasure, not occupiynge the ſame.

Hyders of treasure.

A prettie fiction
and a wittie.

it? Trewlye both wayes like profytte came to thee. To these so foolyshe pleasures they ioyne dicers, whose Dice playe. madnesse they knowe by hearfay, and not by vse. Hunters also, and hawkers. For what pleasure is there (say they) in castinge the dice vpon a table. Which thou hast done so often, that if there wer any pleasure in it, yet the oft vse might make thee werie thereof? Or what delite can Huntynge and hawkynge. there be, and not rather dyspleasure in hearynge the barkynge and howlynge of dogges? Or what greater pleasure is there to be felte, when a dogge followeth an hare, then when a dogge followeth a dogge? for one thinge is done in bothe, that is to saye, runnyng, yf thou haste pleasure therin. But yf the hope of slaughter, and the expectation of tearynge in peces the beaste doth please thee: thou shouldest rather be moued with pitie to see a selye innocente hare murdered of a dogge: the weake of the stronger, the fearefull of the fearece, the innocente of the cruell and vnmercyfull.

Hunting the basest parte of bouchers among the Utopians, and yet this is nowe the exercise of most noble men. Therefore all thys exercyse of huntynge, as a thyng vnworthy to be vsed of free men, the Utopians haue reiected to their bouchers to the whiche crafte (as we sayde before) they appointe their bondemen. For they counte huntynge the lowest, the vyldest, and mooste abiecte part of boucherie, and the other partes of it more profitable, and more honeste, as bryngynge muche more commoditie, in that they kyll beastes onely for necessitie. Where as the hunter seketh nothinge but pleasure of the feelye and wofull beastes slaughter and murder. The whiche pleasure in beholdinge deathe, they thinke doeth rise in the very beastes, either of a cruel affection of mind, or els to be chaunged in continuance of time into crueltie, by longe vse of so cruell a pleasure. These therefore and all suche like, whiche be innumerable, though the common sorte of people doth take them for pleasures, yet they, seing there is no natural pleasauntnes in them, do playnly determine them to haue no affinitie with trew and right pleasure. For as touchinge that they do commonlye moue the sense with delectation (whiche semeth to be a worke of pleasure) this doeth nothyng diminishe their opinion. For not the nature of the thing, but their peruerse and lewde custome is the cause hereof. Whiche causeth them to accept bitter or fowre thynges for swete thynges. Euen as women with child in their viciate and corrupte taste, thynke pytche and tallowe sweter then any honey. Howbeit no mannes iudgemente depraued and corrupte, either by fyckenes, or by custome, can change the nature of pleasure, more then it can do the nature of other thynges. They make diuers kindes of pleasures. For some The kindes of trew pleasures. they attribute to the soule, and some to the body. To the soule they geue intelligence, and that delectation, that commeth of the contemplation of trewth. Hereunto is ioyned the pleasaunte remembraunce of the good lyfe paste. The The pleasures of the bodye. pleasure of the bodye they deuide into ii. partes. The first is when delectation is sensibly felt and perceaued. Whiche many times chaunceth by the renewing and refreshing of those partes, whiche oure naturall heate drieth vp. This commeth by meate and drynke. And sometymes whyles those thynges be expulsed, and voyded, wherof is in the body ouer great abundaunce. This pleasure is felt, when we do our natural easement, or when we be doying the acte of generation, or when the ytching of any part is eased with rubbyng or scratchyng. Sometimes pleasure riseth exhibitinge to any membre nothyng that it desireth, nor takyng from it any paine that it feeleth, which neuerthelesse tikleth and moueth oure senses wyth a certeine secrete efficacie, but with a manifest motion turnethe them to it. As is that whiche commeth of musicke. The seconde parte of bodely pleasure they say, is that which consisteth and resteth in the quiete, and vpryghte state Bodily health. of the bodye. And that trewlye is euerye mannes owne propre health entermingled and disturbed with no griefe. For this, yf it be not letted nor assaulted with no greif, is delectable of it selfe, though it be moued with no externall or outwarde pleasure. For though it be not so plain and manyfeste to the sense, as the gredye luste of eatynge and drynkynge, yet neuerthelesse manye take it for the chiefeste pleasure. All the Utopians graunt it to be a right souereigne pleasure, and as you woulde saye the foundation and grounde of all pleasures, as whiche euen alone is hable to make the state and condition of life delectable and pleasaunt. And it beyng once taken awaye, there is no place lefte for any pleasure. For to be without greife not hauinge health, that they call vnfenibilitie, and not pleasure. The Utopians haue long ago reiected and condempned the opinion of them, whiche sayde that stedfaste and quiete healthe (for this question also hath bene diligently debated amonge them) oughte not therefore to be counted a pleasure, bycause they saye it can not be presentlye and sensiblye perceaued and felte by some outwarde motion. But of the contrarie parte nowe they agree almooste all in this, that healthe is a moost soueraigne pleasure. For seyng that in sycknesse (saye they) is greiffe, which is a mortal enemie to pleasure, euen as sicknes is to health, why should not then pleasure be in the quietnes of health? For they say it maketh nothing to this matter, whether you saye that sycknesse is a griefe, or that in sickenes is griefe, for all commethe to one purpose. For whether health be a pleasure it selfe, or a necessary cause of pleasure, as fier is of heate, truelye bothe waye it foloweth, that they cannot be withoute pleasure, that be in perfect helth. Furthermore whiles we eat (saye they) then healthe, whiche beganne to be appayred, fighteth by the helpe of foode againste hunger. In the which fight, whiles health by litle and litle getteth the vpper hande, that same procedyng, and (as ye would say) that onwardnes to the wonte strenght ministreth that pleasure, whereby we be so refreshed. Health therefore, whiche in the conflict is ioyefull, shall it not be mery, when it hath gootten the victorie? But as soone as it hath recovered the pristinate strength, which thing onely in all the fight it coueted, shal it incontinent be astonied? Nor shal it not know nor imbrace the owne wealthe and goodnes? For where it is said, health can not be felt: this, they thinke, is nothing trew. For what man wakyng, say they, felethe not himselfe in health: but he that is not? Is there anye man so possessed with stonishe infensibilitie, or with lethargie, that is to say, the sleping sicknes, that he will not graunt health to be acceptable to him, and delectable?

Delectation.

But what other thinge is delectation, than that whiche by an other name is called pleasure?

They imbrace chieflie the pleasures of the mind. For them they counte the chiefest The pleasures of the mynde.

and most principall of all. The chiefe parte of them they thinke doth come of the exercise of vertue, and conscience of good life. Of these pleasures that the body ministreth, they geue ye preeminence to helth. For the delite of eating and drinking, and whatfoeuer hath any like pleasauntnes, they determyne to be pleasures muche to be desired, but no other wayes than for healthes sake. For suche thinges of their own proper nature be not so pleasaunt, but in that they resiste sicknesse priuelie stealing on. Therefore like as it is a wise mans part, rather to auoid sicknes, then to wishe for medicines, and rather to driue away and put to flight carefull griefes, then to call for comfort: so it is muche better not to neade this kinde of pleasure, then thereby to be eased of the contrarie grieve. The whiche kinde of pleasure, yf anye man take for his felicitie, that man must nedes graunt, that then he shalbe in most felicitie, if he liue that life, which is led in continuall hunger, thurst, itching, eating, drynkyng, scratching, and rubbing. The which life how not only foule, and vnhonest, but also howe miserable, and wretched it is, who perceueth not? These doubtles be the basest pleasures of al, as vnpure and vnperfect. For they neuer come, but accompanied with their contrarie griefes. As with the pleasure of eating is ioyned with hunger, and yat after no very egal fort. For of these. ii. ye grieffe is both the more vehement, and also of longer continuaunce. For it beginneth before the pleasure, and endeth not vntil the pleasure die with it. Wherefore fuche pleasures they thinke not greatlye to be fet by, but in yat thei be necessari. Howbeit they haue delite also in these, and thankfulli knowledge ye tender loue of mother nature, which with most pleasaunt delectation allureth her children to that, to the necessarie vse wherof they must from time to time continually be forced and driuen. For how wretched and miserable should our life be, if these dailie greffes of hunger and thurst coulde not be driuen awaye, but with bitter potions, and sower medicines, as the other

The giftes of nature. diseases be, wherewith we be seldomer troubled? But beutie, strengthe, nimblenes, these as peculiar and pleasaunt giftes of nature they make muche of. But those pleasures that be receaued by the eares, the eyes, and the nose, whiche nature willeth to be proper and peculiar to man (for no other liuinge creature doth behold the fairenes and the bewtie of the worlde, or is moued with any respecte of fauours, but onely for the diuersitie of meates, neither perceaueth the concordante and discordant distaunces of foundes, and tunes) these pleasures, I say, they accept and alowe as certen pleasaunte reioynges of life. But in all thinges this cautel they vse, that a lesse pleasure hinder not a bigger, and that the pleasure be no cause of displeasure, whiche they thinke to folow of necessitie, if the pleasure be vnhoneste. But yet to dispise the comlines of bewtie, to wast the bodelie strengthe, to turne nimblenes into sloughishnesse, to consume and make feble the bodie with fastinge, to do iniurie to healthe, and to reiecte the pleasaunte motions of nature, onles a man neglecte these commodities, whiles he dothe with a feruent zeale procure the wealth of others, or the comen profite, for the whiche pleasure forborne, he is in hoope of a greater pleasure at goddes hande, elles for a vaine shaddow of vertue, for the wealth and profite of no man, to punish himselfe, or to the intente he maye be hable couragiously to suffer aduersitie: which perchaunce shall neuer come to him, this to do they thinke it a point of extreame madnes, and a token of a man cruelly minded towards himselfe, and vnkind towards nature, as one so disdainyng to be in her daunger, that he renounceth and refuseth all her benefites.

This is their sentence and opinion of vertue and pleasure. And they beleue that by mans reason none can be found trewer then this, onles any Marke this well. godlyer be inspired into man from heuen.

Wherin whether they beleue well or no neither the time doth suffer vs to discusse neither it is nowe necessarie. For we haue taken vpon vs to shewe and declare their lores and ordinaunces, and not to defende them. But this thyng 'I beleue verely: howe soeuer these decrees be, that there is in no place of the world, neyther a more excellent people, neither a more flourishyng commen wealth. They be lyghte and quicke of bodie, full of actiuitie and nimblenes, and of more strength then a man The wealth and description of the Utopians. woulde iudge them by their stature, which for all that is not lowe. And thoughe theyr foyle be not veri frutefull, nor their aier very wholsome, yet againste the ayer they so defende them with temperate diete, and so order and husbände their grounde with diligente trauaile, that in no countrey is greater increase, and plentye of corne and cattell, nor mens bodies of longer lyfe, and subiect or apte to fewer diseases. There therefore a man maye see well, and diligently exploited and furnished, not onely those thinges whiche husbandemen do commenly in other countreis, as by craft and cunnynge to remedie the barrennes of the grounde: but also a whole wood by the handes of the people plucked vp the rootes in one place, and set againe in an other place. Wherein was had regard and consideration, not of plenty, but of commodious carriage, that wood and timber might be nigher to the sea, or the riuers, or, ye cities. For it is lesse labour and businesse to carri grayne farre by land, than wood. The people be gentle, merie, quicke, and fyne witted, delitinge in quietnes, and when nede requireth, hable to abide and suffer much bodelie labour. Els they be not greatly desirous and fond of it: but in the exercise and studie of the mind they be neuer wery. When they had heard me speke of ye greke literature or lerning (for in latin there was nothing that I thought they would greatly alow, besides historiens and Poetes) they made wonderfull earnest and importunate sute vnto me that I would teach and instructe them in that tonge and learninge. I beganne therefore to reade vnto them, at the first truelie more bicause I would not seme to refuse the labour, then that I hooped that they would any thing profite therein. But when I had gone forward a litle, I perceaued in-

The vtilltie of the greke tonge. continente by their diligence, that my labour should not be bestowed in vaine. For they began so easelie to fashon their letters, so plainlie to pronounce the woordes, so quickelie to learne by hearte, and so fuerlie to rehearse the same, that I maruailed at it, sauinge that the moste parte of them were fine, and chofen wittes and of ripe age, piked oute of the companie of the learned men, whiche not onelie of their owne free and voluntarie will, but also by the commaundemente of the counsell, vndertoke to learne this langage. Therefore in lesse then thre yeres space there was nothing in the Greke tonge that they lacked. They were hable to rede good authors withoute anie staye, if the booke were not false. This kynde of learninge, as I suppose, they toke so muche the sooner, bycause, it is sumwhat allyaunte to them. For I thinke that this nation tooke their beginninge of the Grekes, bicause their speche, which in al other poyntes is not much vnlyke the Persian tonge, kepeth dyuers signes and tokens of the

A wonderfull aptnes to learninge in the Utopians.

But now most blockheded asses be sette to learninge, and most pregraunt wittes corrupt with pleasures greke langage in the names of their cityes, and of their magistrates. They haue of me (for when I was determyned to entre into my. iiii. voyage, I caste into the shippe in the steade of marchandise a prety fardel of bookes, bycause I intended to come againe rather neuer, than shortly) they haue, I faye, of me the moste parte of Platoes workes, more of Aristotles, also Theophrastus of plantes, but in diuers places (which I am sorye for) vnperfecte. For whiles we were a shipborde, a marmoset chaunced vpon the booke, as it was negligentlye layde by, which wantonlye playinge therewith plucked oute certeyne leaues, and toore them in pieces. Of them that haue wrytten the grammer, they haue onelye Lascaris. For Theodorus I cariëd not wyth me, nor neuer a dictionayre, but Hesichius, and Dioscorides. They sett greate store by Plutarches bookes. And they be deliyted wyth Lucianes mery conceytes and iestes. Of the Poetes they haue Aristophanes, Homer, Euripides, and Sophocles in Aldus small prynte. Of the Historians they haue Thucidides, Herodotus, and Herodian. Also my companion, Tricius Apinatus caried with him phisick bookes, certein smal woorkes of Hippocrates and Galenes Microtechne. The whyche boke they haue in greate estimation. For thoughe there be almost no nation vnder heauen that hath lesse nede of Phisicke then they, yet this notwithstanding, Phisicke is no where in greater honour.

Phisicke
hieghly regarded.

Bycause they counte the knowledge of it among the goodlyeste, and most profytable partes of Philosophie. For whyles they by the helpe of this Phosophie searche oute the secrete mysteryes of nature, they thinke themselves to receaue therby not onelye wonderfull greate pleasure, but also to obteine great thankes and fauour of the autour and maker therof. Whome they thinke according to ye fassion of other artificers, to haue set furth the maruelous and gorgeous frame of the world for man with great affection intentiuely to beholde. Whom only he hath

The contem-
placion of nature.

made of witte and capacitie to confidre and vnderstand the excellencie of fo great a woork. And therefore he beareth (say they) more goodwil and loue to the curious and diligent beholder and vewer of his woork and maruelour at the fame, then he doth to him, which like a very brute beaste without witte and reason, or as one without fenfe or mouing, hath no regarde to foo greate and foo wonderfull a fpectacle. The wittes therefore of the Utopians inured and exercised in learnynge, be marueilous quycke in the inuention of feates helpinge annye thinge to the aduantage and wealthe of lyffe. Howbeit. ii. feates they maye thanke vs for. That is, the fcyence of imprinting, and the crafte of makinge paper. And yet not onelye vs but chieflye and principallye themfelves.

For when we shewed to them Aldus his print in bookes of paper, and told them of the fluffe wherof paper is made, and of the feate of grauing letters, fpeaking fumwhat more, then we colde plainlye declare (for there was none of vs, that knewe perfectlye either the one or the other) they furthwith very wittely coniectured the thinge. And where as before they wrote onely in skinnes, in barkes of tryes, and in rides, nowe they haue attempted to make paper, and to imprint letters. And thoughe at the firft yt proued not all of the befte, yet by often affayinge the fame they fhortelye got the feate of bothe. And haue fo broughte the matter aboute, that yf they had copyes of Greeke authores, they coulde lacke no bookes. But nowe they haue no moore, then I rehearfed before, fauinge that by pryntyng of bookes they haue multiplyed and increafed the fame into manye thoufandes of copies. Whofoeuer cummethether to fee the lande, beinge excellent in anye gifte of wytte, or throug[h]e muche and longe iournieng wel experienfed and fene in the knoweledg[e] of many countreies (for the whyche caufe wee were very welcome to them) him they receyue and interteyne wonders gentilly, and louinglye. For they haue delite to heare what is done in euerye lande, howbeit veye fewe merchaunte men come thether. For what shoulde they bring thether, onles it were Iron, or els gold and siluer, whiche they hadde rather carrye home agayne? Also such thinges as are to be caryed oute of theire lande, they thinke it more wysedome to carry that gere furthe themselves, then that other shoulde come thether to fetch it, to the entente they maye the better knowe the out landes on euerye fyde of them, and kepe in vre the feate and knowledge of failinge.

Of Bondemen, sicke persons, wedlocke, and diuers other matters.

They neither make bondemen of prisoners taken in battayle, oneles it be in battaylle that they foughte them selfes, nor of bondmens children, nor to be short, of anye fuche as they canne gette oute of forreine countries, though he were theire a bondman. But either fuche, as amonge themselves for heinous offences be punyshed with bondage, or elles fuche, as in the Cities of other landes for great trespasses be condempned to deathe. And of this sort of bondemen they haue mooste floore.

A maruelous equitie of this nation.

For manye of them they bringe home sumtimes paynge very litle for them, yea mooste commonlye gettinge them for gramercye. These fortes of bondemen they kepe not onely in continual woorke and labour, but also in bandes. But their oune men they handle hardest, whom they Iudge more desperate, and to haue deserued greater puniffhemente, bycause they being so godlye broughte vp to vertue in soo excelente a common wealth, could not for all that be refrained from misdoing. An other kinde of bondemen they haue, when a vile drudge being a poore laborer in an other countrey doth chuese of his owne free wyll to be a bondman among them. These they intreate and order honestly, and enterteine almoste as gentellye, as their owne free cytyzeins, sauynge that they put them to a lyttle more labour, as thereto accustomed. Yf annye siche, be disposed to departe thens (whiche seldome is seene) they neither holde him againste his wyll, neither sende him away with emptye handes. The fycke (as I sayde) they see to with great affection, and lette nothing at al passe concerninge Phisycke or good diete, whereby they may be restored againe to their health. Such as be sicke of incurable diseases they comforte with fittinge by them, with talkinge with them, and to be shorte with all maner of helpes that may be. But yf the disease be not onelye vncurable, but also full of continuall payne and anguyshe: then the priestes and the magistrates exhort the man, seinge he is not hable to doo anye dewtye of lyffe, and by ouerlyuinge his owne deathe is noysome and irkesome to other, and greuous to himselfe: that he wyl determine with himselfe no longer to cheryshe that pestilent and peyneful disease. And seinge his lyfe is to him but a tormente, that he wyl not bee vnwillinge to dye, but rather take a good hope to him, and either dispatche himselfe out of that payneful lyffe, as out of a prision, or a racke of tormente, or elles suffer himselfe wyllinglye to be rydde oute of it by other. And in so doinge they tell him he shall doo wysely, seing by his deathe he shall lose no commoditye, but ende his payne. And bycause in that acte he shall followe the counsel of the pryestes, that is to saye, of the interpreters of goddes wyll and pleasure, they shewe him that he shall do lyke a godly and a vertuous man. They that be thus persuaded, finyshe their liues willynglye, either with hunger, or elles dye in their sleape without anye fealing of deathe. But they cause none siche to dye

Of them that
be sicke.

Voluntarye
deathe.

agaynste his wyll, nor they vse no lesse dilygence and attendaunce aboute him: beleuinge this to be an honorable deathe. Elles he that killeth himself before that the pryestes and the counsel haue allowed the cause of his deathe, him as vnworthy either to be buried, or with fier to be consumed, they caste vnburied into some stinkinge marrish. The woman is not maried before she be xviii. yeres olde. The man iiij yeres elder before he marye. If either the man or the woman be proued to haue actually offended before their marriage, with an other, the partye that so hathe trespassed is sharpely punished. And bothe the offenders be forbidden euer after in al their lyfe to marrye: oneles the faulte be forgeuen by the princes pardone. But bothe the good man and the good wyfe of the house, where that offense was committed as beinge slacke and neglygent in lokinge to their chardge, be in daunger of greate reproche and infamy. That offense is so sharpely punyshed, bicause they perceauē, that onles they be diligentely kepte from the libertye of this vice, fewe wyll ioyne together in the loue of marriage, wherein all the lyfe must be led with one, and also all the griefes and displeasures coming therewith paciently be taken and borne. Furthermore in chuefinge wyfes and husbandes they obserue earnestly and straytelye a custome, whiche semed to vs very fonde and folyshē. For a sad and an honest matrone sheweth the woman, be she mayde or widdowe, naked to the wower. And lykewyse a fage and discrete man exhibyteth the wower naked to the woman. At this custome we laughed, and disallowed it as foolishe. But they on the other parte doo greatlye wonder at the follye of al other nations, whyche in byinge a colte, whereas a lytle money is in hafarde, be so charye and circumspecte, that thoughē he be almoste all bare, yet they wyll not bye hym, oneles the saddel and all the harneies be taken of, leaste vnder those couerynges be hydde, fom galle or foore. And yet in chuefinge a wyfe,

Of wedlocke.

Thoughē not
verie honestly,
yet not vn-
wiselye.

whyche shalbe either pleasure, or displeasure to them all their lyfe after, they be so recheles, that al the refydewe of the woomans bodye beinge couered with cloothes, they esteeme her scaselye be one handebredeth (for they can se no more but her face) and so to ioyne her to them not without greate ieoperdye of euel agreinge together, yf any thing in her body afterward should chaunce of offend and myflyke them.

For all men be not so wyfe, as to haue respecte to the vertuous conditions of the partie. And the endowmentes of the bodye cause the vertues of the minde more to be esteemed and regarded: yea euen in the mariages of wyfe men. Verely so foule deformitie maye be hydde vnder those coueringes, that it maye quite alienate and take awaye the mans mynde from his wyfe, when it shal not be lawful for their bodies to be separate agayne. If suche deformitie happen by any chaunce after the mariage is consummate and finyshed, wel, there is no remedie but patience. Euery man muste take his fortune wel a worthe. But it were wel done that a lawe were made wherebye all suche deceytes myghte be eschewed, and aduoyded before hande.

And this were they constreyned more earnestlye to looke vpon, because they onlye of the nations in that parte of the worlde bee contente euerye man with one wyfe a piece. And matrymoneie is there neuer broken, but by death: excepte adulterye breake the bonde, or els the intollerable wayewarde maners of either partye. For if either of them finde Diuorcement.      themselfe for any such cause greued: they maye by the license of the counsel chaunge and take another. But the other partie lyueth euer after in infamy, and out of wedlocke. Howbeit the husbände to put away his wife for no other faulte, but for that some myshappe is fallen to her bodye, this by no meanes they wyll suffre. For they iudge it a great poynt of crueltie, that anye body in their moste nede of helpe and comforte, shoulde be caste of and forsaken, and that olde age, whych both bringeth sicknes with it, and is a syckenes it felfe, should vnkindly and vn-faythfullye be delte withall. But nowe and then it chaunfeth, where as the man and the woman cannot well agree betw[e]ne themfelves, both of them fyndinge other, with whome they hope to lyue more quietlye and merylye, that they by the full confente of them bothe be diuorfed a fonder and maried againe to other. But that not without the authoritie of the counfell. Whiche agreeth to no diuorfes, before they and their wyfes haue diligently tried and examyned the matter. Yea and then also they be lothe to consent to it, bycause they know this to be the next way to break loue betwene man and wyfe, to be in easye hope of a new mariage. Breakers of wedlocke be punyshed with mooste greuouse bondage. And if both the offenders were maried, then the parties whiche in that behalfe haue sufferede wrong, beinge diuorfed from the auoutrers, be maried together, if they wille, or els to whom they lust. But if either of them both do styl continewe in loue towarde so vnkinde a bedfellowe, the vse of wedlocke is not to them forbidden, if the partye faultles be disposed to followe in toylinge and drudgerye the person, which for that offence is condempned to bondage. And very ofte it chaunceth that the repentaunce of the one, and the earnest diligence of the other, dothe moue the prince with pytie and compassion, that he restoreth the bonde persone from seruitude to libertie and fredom again. But if the same partie be taken estsones in that fault, there is no other waye but death. To other trespases no prescript punishmente is appoynted by anye lawe. But accordinge to the heynousenes of the offense, or contrarye, so the punishmente is moderated by the discretion of the counsell. The husbandes chastice their wyfes: and the parentes their children, oneles they haue done anye so horryble an offense, that the open punyshment thereof maketh muche for the aduauncement

The decerning
of punishment
putte to the discretion of the magistrates.

of honeste maners. But moſte commenlye the moſte heynous faultes be punyſhed with the incommoditie of bondage. For that they ſuppoſe to be to the offenders no leſſe grieſe, and to the common wealth more profit, then yf they ſhould haſtely put them to death, and ſo make them quite out of the waye. For there cummeth more profit of their labour, then of their death, and by their example they feare other the longer from lyke offenses. But if they beinge thus vſed, doo rebell and kicke againe, then forſothe they be ſlayne as deſperate and wilde beaſtes, whom neither priſon nor chaine coulde reſtraine and kepe vnder. But they, whiche take their bondage pacientlye, be not leſte all hopeles. For after they haue bene broken and tamed with long miſeries, if then they ſhewe ſuch repentaunce, as therebye it maye bee perceaued that they be foryer for their offense then for their punyſhement: ſumtymes by the Prynces prerogatyue, and ſumtymes by the voyce and conſent. of the people, their bondage either is mitigated, or els cleane releaſed and forgeuen. He that moueth to aduoutrye is in no leſſe daunger and ieopardie, then yf he hadde committed aduoutrye in dede. For in all offenses they counte the intente and pretended purpoſe as euil, as the acte or dede it ſelfe, thinking that no lette oughte to excuſe him, that did his beſte to haue no lette. They haue ſingular delite and pleaſure in ſoles. And as it is a pleaſure of fooles.

Motion to aduoutrye puniſhed.

greate reproche to do annye of them hurte or iniury, ſo they prohibite not to take pleaſure of foolyſhnes. For that, they thinke, dothe muche good to the fooles. And if any man be ſo ſadde, and ſterne, that he cannot laughe neither at their wordes, nor at their dedes, none of them be committed to his tuition: for feare leaſt he would not intreate them gentilly and fauorably enough: to whom they ſhould brynge no delectation (for other goodnes in them is none) muche leſſe anye proffite ſhoulde they yelde him. To mocke a man for his deformitie, or for that he lacketh anye parte or lymme of his bodye, is counted greate dishonestye and reproche, not to him that is mocked, but to him that mocketh. Which vnwyfely doth imbrayde anye man of that as a vice, that was not in his powre to eschewe. Also as they counte and reken verye little witte to be in him, that regardeth not naturall bewtie and comlineffe, so to helpe the fame with payntinges, is taken for a vaine and a wanton pride, not withoute greate infamie. For they knowe euen by very experience, that no comelineffe of bewtye doethe so hyghelye commende and auauce the wiues in the conceite of their husbandes, as honest conditions and lowlines. For as loue is oftentimes wonne with bewty, so it is not kept, preferued, and continued, but by vertue and obedience. They do not onely feare their people from doying euil by punishmentes, but also allure them to vertue with rewardes of honoure. Therefore they set vp in the markette place the ymages of notable men, and of such as haue bene great and bounteful benefactors to the commen wealth, for ye perpetual memorie of their good actes: and also that the glory and renowme of the auncetors maye styrre and prouoke their posteritie to vertue. He that inordinatly and ambitioufly desfireth promotions, is left al hopeles for euer attaining any promotion as long as he liueth. They lyue together louinglye. For no magistrate is eyther hawte or fearfull. Fathers they be called, and lyke fathers they vse themselues. The citezens (as it is their dewtie) willynglye exhibite vnto them dew honour without any compulsion. Nor the prince himselfe is not knowen from the other by princely apparell, or a robe of state, nor by a crown or diademe roial, or cap of maintenance, but by a litle sheffe of corne caried before him. And so a taper of wax is borne before ye bishop, wherby onely he is knowen. They haue but few bewtie.

Counterfeite

Sinne punished and ver-
tue rewarded.

The inordinate desire of honours condemned.

Magistrates
honoured.

Fewe lawes. lawes. For to people fo instructe and institute very fewe do suffice. Yea this thing they chiefly reprove among other nations, that innumerable bokes of lawes and expositions vpon the same be not sufficient. But they think it against all right and iustice that men shoulde be bound to those lawes, which either be in number mo then be hable to be read, or els blinder and darker, then that anye man can well vnderstande them. Furthermore

The multitude of lawyers
superfluous.

they vtterlie exclude and banishe all attorneis, proctours, and fergeauntes at the lawe: whiche craftelye handell matters, and subtelly dispute of the lawes. For they thinke it moste meete, that euery man should pleade his own matter, and tel the same tale before the iudge that he wold tell to his man of law. So shal there be lesse circumstaunce of wordes, and the trueth shall foner come to light, whiles the iudge with a discrete iudgement doeth waye the woordes of him, whom no lawyer hath instructe with deceit, and whiles he helpeth and beareth out simple wittes against the false and malicious circumuentions of craftie children. This is harde to be obserued in other countreis, in so infinitie a number of blinde and intricate lawes. But in Utopia euery man is a cunning lawier. For (as I said) they haue very few lawes: and the plainer and grosser that anye interpretation is: that they allowe as most iuste. For all

The intent of lawes.

lawes (saie they) be made and publyshed onely to the intente, that by them euery man shoulde be put in remembraunce of his dewtie. But the craftye and subtill interpretation of them (forasmuche as few can atteyne thereto) canne put verye fewe in that remembraunce, where as the simple, the plaine, and grosse meaninge of the lawes is open to euerye man.

Elles as touchinge the vulgare fort of the people, whiche be bothe mooste in number, and haue moste nede to knowe their dewties, were it not as good for them, that no law were made at all, as when it is made, to bringe so blynde an interpretation vpon it, that without greate witte and longe arguyng no man can discusse it? To the fyndyng oute whereof neyther the grosse iudgement of the people can attaine, neither the whole life of them that be occupied in woorkinge for their liuynges, canne suffice thereto. These vertues of the Utopians haue caused their nexte neiboures and borderers, whiche liue fre and vnder no subiection (for the Utopians longe ago, haue deliuered manye of them from tirannie) to take magistrates of them, some for a yeare, and some for fve yeares space. Which when the tyme of their office is expired, they bringe home againe with honoure and praife, and take new againe with them into their countrey. These nations haue vndoubtedlye very well and holsomely prouided for their common wealthes. For seyng that bothe the makinge and marringe of the weale publique, doeth depende and hange vpon the maners of the rulers and magistrates, what officers coulde they more wyselye haue chofen, then those which can not be ledde from honestye by bribes (for to them that shortly after shal depart thens into their own countrey money should be vnprofitable) nor yet be moued eyther with faouore, or malice towards any man, as beyng straungers, and vnaquainted with the people? The whiche two vices of affection and auarice, where they take place in iudgements, incontinente they breake iustice, the strongest and suerest bonde of a common wealth. These peoples whiche fetch their officers and rulers from them, the Utopians cal their fellowes. And other to whome they haue bene beneficiall, they call their frendes. As touching leagues, which in other places betwene countrey and countrey Of leagues. be so ofte concluded, broken, and renewed, they neuer make none with anie nation. For to what purpose serue leagues, say they? As thoughe nature had not set sufficient loue betwene man and man. And who so regardeth not nature, thinke you that he will passe for wordes? They be brought into this opinion chieflye, because that in those partes of the worlde, leagues be-twene princes be wont to be kepte and obserued very sklenderly. For here in Europa, and especiallye in these partes where the faith and religion of Christe reigneth, the maiestie of leagues is euerye where esteemed holy and inuiolable: partlie through the iustice and goodnes of princes, and partly at the reuerence and motion of the head Bishops. Which like as they make no promisse themselues, but they do verye religiouslye perfourme the same, so they exhorte all princes in any wise to abide by their promisses, and them that refuse or denye so to do, by their pontificall powre, and authoritie they compell thereto. And surely they thinke well that it might seme a verye reprochefull thing, yf in the leagues of them which by a peculiare name be called faithful, faith should haue no place. But in that newe founde parte of the world, which is scaslie so farre frome vs beyond the line equinoctiall, as our life and maners be dissident from theirs, no trust nor confidence is in leagues. But the mo and holier ceremonies the league is knitte vp with, the soner it is broken by some caillation founde in the wordes, which many times of purpose be so craftelie put in, and placed, that the bandes can neuer be so sure nor so stronge, but they will find some hole open to crepe oute at, and to breake both league and trueth. The whiche craftye dealing, yea the whiche fraude and deceite, if they should know it to be practised among priuate men in their bargaines and contractes, they would incontinent crie out at it with an open mouth, and a sower countenance, as an offense mozte detestable, and worthy to be punnyshed with a shamefull deathe: yea euen very they that auance themselues authours of lyke counsell geuen to princes. Wherefore it may wel be thought, either that al iustice is but a basse and a low vertue, and which aualeth it self farre vnder the highe dignitie of kynges: Or at the least wise, that there be two iustices, the one meete for the inferiour sorte of the people, goynge a fote and crepyng lowe by the grounde, and bounde down on euery side with many bandes, bycause it shall not run atrouers. The other a princelye vertue, which like as it is of much hygher maiestie, then the other pore iustice, so also it is of much more libertie, as to the which nothing is vnlawfull that it lusteth after. These maners of princes (as I said) whiche be there so euell keepers of leagues, cause the Utopians, as I suppose, to make no leagues at al, which perchaunce would chaunge their minde if they liued here. Howbeit they thinke that thoughe leagues be neuer so faithfullye obserued and kepte, yet the custome of makynge leagues was very euell begon. For this causeth men (as though nations which be seperat a fondre, by ye space of a litle hil or a riuer, were coupled together by no societie or bonde of nature) to thinke themselues borne aduerfaries and enemies one to an other, and that it were lawfull for the one to feke the death and destruction of the other, if leagues were not : yea, and that after ye leagues be accorded, frendship doth not grow and encrese : But the licence of robbing and stealing doth styll remaine, as farfurth as for lack of foresight and aduifement in writing the wordes of the league, any sentence or claufe to the contrarie is not therin sufficientlie comprehended. But they be of a contrarye opinion. That is, that no man oughte to be counted an enemye, whiche hath done no iniurye. And that the felowshippe of nature is a stronge league : and that men be better and more surely knit together by loue and beneuolence, then by couenauntes of leagues : by hartie affection of minde, then by wordes.

Of warfare.

Warre or battel as a thing very beastly, and yet to no kinde of beastes in so muche vse as to man, they do detest and abhorre. And contrarie to the custome almooste of all other nations, they counte nothyng fo muche against glorie, as glory gotten in warre. And therefore though they do daylie practife and exercise themfelues in the discipline of warre, and not onelie the men, but also the women vpon certen appointed daies, lest they should be to feke in the feate of armes, if nede should require, yet they neuer go to battell, but either in the defence of their owne countrey, or to driue out of their frendes lande the enemies that haue inuaded it, or by their power to deliuer from the yocke and bondage of tirannye some people, that be therewith oppressed. Which thing they do of meere pitie and compaffion. Howbeit they sende helpe to their frendes, not euer in their defence. But sometymes also to requite and reuenge iniuries before to them done. But this they do not onlesse their counsell and aduise in the matter be asked, whiles it is yet newe and freshe. For if they finde the cause probable, and if the contrarie part wil not restooore agayne suche thynges as be of them iustelye demaunded, then they be the chiefe autours and makers of the warre. Whiche they do not onlie as ofte as by inrodes and inuasions of soldiours praies and booties be driuen away, but then also muche more mortally, when their frendes marchauntes in anie lande, either vnder the pretence of vniuste lawes, or elles by the wrestinge and wronge vnderstandinge of good lawes, do susteine an vniust accusation vnder the colour of iustice. Neither the battell whiche the Utopians fought for the Nephelogetes against the Alaopolitanes a litle before oure time was made for any other cause, but that the Nephelogete marchaunt men, as the Utopians thought, suffred wrong of the Alaopolitanes, vnder the pretence of righte. But whether it were righte or wronge, it was with so cruel and mortal warre reuenged, the countreis rounde about ioyninge their helpe and powre to the pursaunce and malice of bothe parties, that moste flourishing and wealthy peoples, being some of them shrewedley shaken, and some of them sharpely beaten, the mischeues wer not finished nor ended, vn-

til the Alaopolitanes, at the last were yelded vp as bondemen into the iurisdiction of the Nephelogetes. For the Utopians fought not this war for themselues. And yet the Nephelogetes before the warre, when the Alaopolitanes flourished in wealth, wer nothing to be compared with them. So egerlye the Utopians prosequete the iniuries done to their frendes: yea, in money matters, and not their owne likewise. For if they by coueyne or gile be wiped beside their goodes, so that no violence be done to their bodies, they wreake their anger by absteininge from occupieng with that nation, vntil they haue made satisfaction. Not forbicause they set lesse stoore by their owne citizeins, then by their frendes: but that they take the losse of their frendes money more heuelie then ye losse of their own. Bicause that their frendes marchaunte men, forasmuche as that they leise is their own priuate goods, susteine great dammage by the losse. But their owne citizeyns leise nothing but of the commen goods, and of that whiche was at home plentifull and almost superfluous, els had it not bene sent furth. Therefore no man feleth the losse. And for this cause they thinke it to cruell an acte, to reuenge that losse with the deathe of manie, the incommoditie of the which losse no man feeleth neither in his lyfe, nor yet in his liuing. But if it chaunce that any of their men in any other countrey be maimed or killed, whether it be done by a commen or a priuate counsel, knowyng and trying out the trueth of the matter by their ambassadours, onlesse the offenders be rendered vnto them in recompence of the iniurie, they will not be appeased: but incontinent they proclaime warre against them. The offenders yelded, they punish the either with death, or with bondage. They be not only sory, but also ashamed to atchieue the victorie with bloodshed, counting it greate folie to be Victorie deare bought. precious wares to dere. They reioyse and bought. auaunt themselues, if they vanquishe and oppresse their enemies by crafte and deceite. And for that act they make a generall triumph, and as yf the matter were manfullye handeled, they set by a pyller of stone in the place where they so vanquished their enemies, in token of the victorie. For then they glorie, then they boaste, and cracke that they haue plained the men in deede, when they haue so ouercommen, as no other liuing creature but onely man could: that is to saye, by the by the mighte and puifauce of wit. For with bodily strength (say they) beares, lions, boores, wulfes, dogges, and other wild beastes do fight. And as the moste part of them do passe vs in strength and fierce courage, so in wit and reason we be much stronger then they all. Their chief and principall purpose in warre, is to obtaine that thyng, whiche if they had before obtained, they woulde not haue moued battell. But if that be not possible, they take so cruell vengeance of them whiche be in the faulte, that euer after they be aferde to do the like. This is their chiefe and principall intent, whiche they immediatlie and first of al prosequete, and setforwarde. But yet so, that they be more circumspecte, in auoidinge and eschewynge ieopardies, then they be desierous of prayse and renowne. Therefore immediatlye after that warre is ones solemnelie denounced, they procure many proclamations signed with their owne commen seale to be set vp priuile at one time in their enemies lande, in places moste frequented. In these proclamations they promisse greate rewardes to hym that will kill their enemies prince, and some what lesse giftes, but them verye greate also, for euerye heade of them, whose names be in the faide proclamations conteyned. They be those whom they count their chiefe aduerfaries, next vnto the prince. Whafoeuer is prescribed vnto him that killeth any of the proclaimed persons, that is dabled to him that bringeth any of the same to them aliue: yea, and to the proclaimed persones themselues, if they wil chaunge their mindes, and come into them, taking their partes, they profer the same greate rewardes with pardone, and fuertie of their liues. Therefore it quickly commeth to passe that their enemies haue all other men in suspicion, and be vnfaithfull, and mistrusting among themselues one to another, liuing in great feare, and in no lesse ieopardie. For it is well knowen, that diuers times the most part of them (and speciallie the prince him selfe) hathe bene betrayed of them, in whom they put their moste hope and trust. So that there is no maner of act nor dede that giftes and rewardes do not enforce men vnto. And in rewardes they kepe no measure. But remembring and considering into how greate hafarde and ieopardie they cal them, endeouore themselues to recompence the greatnes of the daunger with like great benefites. And therefore they promise not only wonderful greate abundance of golde, but also landes of greate reuenues lieng in most fatte places among their frendes. And their promises they perfourme faythfully withoute annye fraude or couyne. This custome of byinge and fellynge aduersaryes among other people is dysallowed, as a cruel acte of a basse and a cowardyshe mynde. But they in this behalfe thinke themselves muche prayse woorthy, as who lyke wyfe men by this meanes dispatche greate warres withoute anny battell or skyrmyshe. Yea they counte it also a dede of pytye and mercye, bicause that by the deathe of a fewe offenders the lyues of a greate nombre of innocentes, aswel of their owne men as also of their enemies be raunfomed and faued, which in fighting shoulde haue bene fleane. For they doo no lesse pytye the basse and common forte of their enemies people, then they doo their owne: knowing yat they be driuen and enforced to warre againste their willes by the furyous madnes of their princes and heades. Yf by none of these meanes the matter goo forwarde, as they woulde haue it, then they procure occayfons of debate, and diffention to be spredde amonge their enemies. As by bringinge the princes brother, or some of the noble men in hoope to obtayne the kingedome. Yf this waye preuayle not, then they reyse vp the people that be nexte neyghebores and borderers to their enemyes, and them they fette in their neckes vnder the coloure of some olde tytyle of ryghte, fuch as kynges doo neuer lacke. To them they promyffe their helpe and ayde in their warre. And as for moneye they gyue them abundance. But of their owne cytyzeins they fende to them fewe or none. Whome they make so much of, and loue so intierlye, that they would not be willing to chaunge anye of them for their aduerfaries prince. But their gold and filuer, bycause they kepe it all for thys only purpose, they laye it owte frankly and frely: as who shoulde lyue euen as wealthely, if they hadde bestowed it euerye penny. Yea and besydes their ryches, whyche they kepe at home, thei haue also an infinite treafure abrode, by reason that (as I fayde before) manye nations be in their debte. Therefore they hieere soldiours oute of all countreis and fende them to battayle, but cheifly of the zapoletes. This people is. 500. myles from Utopia eastwarde. They be hideous, fauage, and fyerce, dwellynge in wild woodes and high mountaines, where they were bredde and brought vp. They be of an harde nature, hable to abide and fusteine heate, colde, and labour, abhorrynge from all delicate deintyes, occupyenge no husbandrye nor tyllage of the ground, homelye and rude both in buildinge of their houfes and in their apparrel, geuen vnto no goodnes, but onely to the breedinge and bringyng vp of cattel. The moste parte of their lyuinge is by huntynge and stealyng. They be borne onelye to warre, whyche they diligently and earnestely feke for. And when they haue gotten it, they be wonders glad thereof. They goo furthe of their countreye in greate companyes together, and who soeuer lackethe souldyours, there they proffer their seruice for small wages. This is onelye the crafte they haue to gette their liuyng by. They maynteyne their lyfe, by sekynge their deathe. For them whomewyth they be wayges they fyghte hardelye, fyerflye, and faythefullye. But they bynde themselves for no certeyne tyme. But vpon this condition they entre into bondes, that they nexte daye they wyll take parte with the other fyde for greater wayges, and the nexte daye after that, they wyll be readye to come backe agayne for a lytle more moneye. There be fewe warres thereawaye, wherein is not a greate nombre of them in bothe partyes. Therefore it dayelye chauncethe that nye kynsefolke whyche were hiered together on one parte, and there verye frendelye and familiarlye vsed themselves one wyth another, shortly after beinge separate in contrarye partes, runne one againste another enuyouflye and fyerceleye: and forgettinge bothe kindred and frendeshyppe, thruste their swordes one in another. And that for none other cause, but that they be hyered of contrarye prynces for a lytle moneye. Whyche they doo so hyghlye regarde and esteame, that they will easelye be prouoked to chaunge partes for a halfe-penny more wayges by the daye. So quyckelye they haue taken a smacke in couetysenes. Whyche for all that is to them no proffyte. For that they gette by fyghtyng, immediatlye they spende vnthryftelye and wretchedlye in ryotte. This people fighteth for the Utopians agaynste all nations, bycause they geue them greater wayges, then annye other nation wyll. For the Utopians lyke as they seke good men to vse wel, so they seke these euell and vicious men to abuse. Whome, when neade requirethe, with promisses of greate rewardes they putte forthe into great ieopardyes. From whens the mooste parte of them neuer cummeth againe to aske their rewardes. But to them that remaine aliue they paye yat which they promissed faithfully, that they maye be the more willinge to put themselves in like daunger another time. Nor ye Utopians passe not how many of them they bring to destruction. For they beleue yat they should doo a verye good deade for all mankind, if they could ridde out of ye worlde all that fowle stinking denne of that most wicked and cursed people. Next vnto thies they vse ye soldiours of them for whom they fighte. And then the helpe of their other frendes. And laste of all, they ioyne to theire oune citizens. Emong whome they giue to one of tried vertue and prowes the reule, gouernaunce, and conduction of the whole armye. Vnder him they appoynte ij. other, whyche, whyles he is fauffe, be bothe priuate and oute of offyce. But yf he be taken or flayne, the one of the other. ij. fuccedeth hym, as it were by inherytaunce. And if the feconde miscarrye, then the thirde taketh his rowme, leaſte that (as the chaunce of battell is vncerteine and doubtful) the ieopardye or deathe of the capitaine ſhoulde brynge the whole armye in hafarde. They chuefe ſoldyours out of euery citey thoſe, whych putte furthe themſelfes wyllingelye. For they thruſte no man forthe into warre agaynſte his wyll. Bycauſe they beleue, yf annye man be fearefull and fainte harted of nature, he wyll not onelye doo no manfull and hardy acte hym ſelfe, but alſo be occayſon of cowardenes to his fellowes. But if annye battell be made agaynſte theire owne countreye, then they putt theſe cowardes (ſo that they be ſtronge bodyed) in ſhyppes amonge other bolde harted men. Or elles they dyſpoſe them vpon the walles, from whens they maye not flye. Thus what for ſhame that theire enemies be at hande, and what for bycauſe they be without hope of runninge awaye, they forgette all feere. And manye times extreame neceſſitye turnethe cowardnes into prowes and manlynnes. But as none of them is thruſt forthe of his countrey into warre agaynſte his wyll, ſo women that be wyllynge to accompany theire husbandes in times of warre be not prohibited or letted. Yea they prouoke and exhorte them to it with prayſes. And in ſet fylde the wyues doo ſtande euerye one by theire owne husbandes ſyde. Alſo euery man is compaſſed next aboute with his owne children, kinffolkes, and aliaunce. That they, whom nature chiefly moueth to mutual ſuccoure, thus ſtandyng together, maye healpe one another. It is a great reproche, and diſhoneſty for the husband to come home without his wiffe, or the wyffe withoute her husbände, or the ſonne without his father.

And therefore if the other part sticke so harde by it, that the battel come to their handes, it is fought with great slaughter and blodshed, euen to the vtter destruction of both partes. For as they make all the meanes and shyftes that maye be to kepe themselves from the necessitie of fyghtinge, or that they may dispatche the battell by their hiered foldyours: so when there is no remedy, but that they muste needes fight themselves, they they do as corragiouslye fall to it, as before, whyles they myght, they did wiselye auoyde and refuse it. Nor they be not most fierce at the first bront. But in continuance by litle and lytle their fierce courage encreaseth, with so stubborne and obstynate myndes, that they wyll rather dye then gyue back an ynche. For that fuertye of lyuinge, whiche euerye man hath at home beinge ioyned with noo carefull anxietye or remembraunce how their posteritie shall lyue after them (for his pensifnes oftentimes breakethe and abateth couragious stomakes) maketh them stowte and hardye, and disdaineiful to be conquered. Moreouer their knowledge in cheualrye and feates of armes putteth them in a good hope. Finally the wholesome and vertuous opinions, wherin they were brought vp euen from their childhode, partely through learnynge, and partlye throughe the good ordinaunces and lawes of their weale publique augmente and encrease their manfull courage. By reason whereof they neither fet so litle store by their liues, that they will raffhelye and vnaduisedlye caste them away: nor they be not so farre in lewde and fond loue therewith, that they will shamefullye couete to kepe them, when honestie biddeth leaue them. When the battel is hottest and in al places most fierce and feruent, a bende of chofen and picked yong men, whiche be sworne to liue and dye together, take vpon them to destroye their aduerfaries capitaine. Whome they inuade now with priuy wieles, now by open strength. At him they strike both nere and farre of. He is affayled with a long and a continuall affaulte freshe men styll commynge in the weries mens places. And feldome it chaunceth (onles he he faue hymselfe by flying) that he is not either flayne, or els taken prifoner, and yelded to his enemies aliue. If they wyne the fylde, they perfecute not their enemies with the violent rage of slaughter. For they had rather take them aliue, then kyl them. Neither they do so follow the chafe and pursute of their enemies, but they leaue behinde them one parte of their hoste in battaile arraye vnder their standardes. In so muche that if al their whole armie be discumfeted and ouercum fauing the rerewarde, and that they therewith atchieue the victory, then they had rather lette al their enemies scape, then to followe them out of array. For they remembre, it hath chaunced vnto themselves more then ones: the whole powre and strength of their hoste being vanquished and put to flight, whiles their enemies reioysing in the victory haue perfecuted them flying some one way and some another, a small companie of their men lying in an ambushe, there redy at all occasions, haue sodainelye ryfen vpon them thus disperfed and scattered oute of arraye, and through presumption of safety vnaduisedly pursuing the chafe: and haue incontinent changed the fortune of the whole battayll: and spite of their tethes wrestinge oute of their handes the sure and vndouted victorye, being a litle before conquered, haue for their parte conquered the conquerers. It is hard to say whether they be craftier in layinge an ambushe, or wittier in auoydinge the same. You would thinke they intende to flye, when they meane nothing lesse. And contrarye wyse when they go about that purpose, you wold beleue it were the leaste parte of their thought. For if they perceauē themselves either ouermatched in numbre, or closed in too narrowe a place, then they remoue their campe either in the night feason with silence, or by some pollicie they deceauē their enemies, or in the day time they retiere backe so softelye, that it is no lesse ieoperdie to medle with them when they geue backe, then when they preese on. They fence and fortifie their campe fewerlye with a deape and a brode trenche. The earth therof is cast inward. Nor they do not fet drudgeis and flaues a worke about it. It is doone by the handes of the fouldiours them felfes. All the whole armye worketh vpon it : excepte them that kepe watche and warde in harneis before the trenche for fodeine auentures. Therefore by the labour of fo manye a large trenche closinge in a greate compasse of grounde is made in lesse tyme then anye man woulde beleue. Their armour or harneys, whiche they Their armour. weare, is sure and strong to receaue strokes, and handsome for all mouinges and gestures of the bodye, infomuche that it is not vnweldye to swimme in. For in the discipline of their warefare amonge other feates thei learne to swimme in harnes. Their weapons be arrowes aloufe : whyche they shote both strongly and surelye, not onelye fotemen, but also horsmen. At hande strokes they vse not swordes but pollaxes, whiche be mortall, aswel in sharpenes, as in weyghte, both for foynes and downe strokes. Engines for warre they deuyse and inuent wonders wittelye. Whiche when they be made they kepe verye secrete, leaste yf they shoulde be knowen before neade requyre, they should be but laughed at and serue to no purpose. Bnt in makynge them hereunto they haue chiefe respecte, that they both easy to be caried, and handsome to be moued, and turned about. Of truces. Truce taken with their enemies for a shorte time they do so firmlye and faythfullye keape, that they wyll not breake it : no not though they be thereunto prouoked. They doe not waste nor destroye their enemies lande with forraginges, nor they burne not vp their corne. Yea, they saue it as muche as may be from being ouerrunne and troden downe either with men or horses, thinkinge that it growethe for their owne vse and proffit. They hurt no man that is vnarmed, onles he be an espiall. All cities that be yelded vnto them, they defende. And suche as they wyne by force of assaulte, they neither dispoyle nor sacke, but them that withstode and dyffuaded the yeldyng vpon of the same, they put to death, the other fouldiours they punnysh with bondage. All the weake multitude they leaue vntouched. If they knowe that annye citezeins counfelled to yealde and rendre vpon the citie, to them they gyue parte of the condemned mens goods. The refydewe they distribute and giue frelye amonge them, whose helpe they had in same warre. For none of them selfes taketh any portion of the praye. But when the battaile is finished and ended, they put their frendes to neuer a penny coste of al the charges that they were at, but laye it vpon their neckes that be conquered. Then they burdeine with the whole charge their expenfeis, whiche they demaunde of them partelye in moneie to be kept for like vse of battayll, and partelye in landes of greate reuenues to be payde vnto them yearelye for euer. Suche reuenues they haue now in manye countreis. Whiche by litle and litle ryfinge of dyuers and fondry causes be increased aboue. vij. [seven] hundreth thousand ducates by the yere. Thether they sende forth some of their citezeins as Lieuetenautes, to liue there sumptuously like men of honoure and renowe. And yet this notwithstandinge muche moneye is faued, which commeth to the comen treasury: onles it so chaunce, that they had rather trust ye countrey with the money. Which many times they do so long, vntil they haue nede to occupie it. And it seldome happeneth, that they demaund al. Of these landes they assigne parte vnto them, which at their request and exhortacion put themselves in such ieoperdies, as I spake of before. If anye prince stirre vpon warre agaynst them, intending to inuade their lande, they mete hym incontinent oute of their owne borders with greate powre and strengthe. For they neuer lyghtely make warre in their owne countrei. Nor they be neuer broughte into so extreme necessitie as to take helpe out of forreyne landes into their owne Ilande.

The capitane is chieflye to be pursued to th[e]intente the battell maye the soner be ended.

Of the religions in Utopia.

Here be diuers kindes of religion not only in sondrie partes of the Ilande, but also in diuers places of euery citie. Some worship for God the sonne: some the mone: some, some other of the planettes. There be that giue worship to a man that was ones of excellent vertue or of famous glory, not only as God, but also as the chiefe and hyghest God. But the moſte and the wyfeſt parte (reiectyng al theſe) beleue, that there is a certayne Godlie powre vnknown, euerlaſtinge, incomprehenſible, inexplicable, farre aboue the capacitie and retche of mans witte, diſperſed throughout all the worlde, not in bignes, but in vertue and power. Him they call the father of al. To him alone they attribute the beginniges, the encreaſinges, the proceedinges, the chaunges, and the endes of al thinges. Neither they geue any diuine honours to any other then to him. Yea al ye other alſo, though they be in diuers opinions, yet in this pointe they agree all together with the wiſeſt forte, in beleuing that there is one chiefe and principall God, the maker and ruler of the whole worlde: whome they all commonlye in their countrey language call Mythra. But in this they diſagree, that among ſome he is counted one, and amonge ſome an other. For euery one of them, whatſoeuer yat is whiche he taketh for the chief god, thinketh it to be the very ſame nature, to whoſe only diuine mighte and maieſtie, the ſumme and ſoueraintie of al thinges by the conſent of al people is attributed and geuen. Howbeit they all begyn by litle and litle to forſake and fall from this varietie of ſuperſtitious, and to agre together in that religion whiche ſemethe by reaſon to paſſe and excell the reſidewe. And it is not to be doubted, but all the other would long agoo haue bene abolifhed, but that whatſoeuer vnprosperous thyng happened to anie of them, as he was mynded to chaunge his religion, the fearefulnesse of people did take it, not as a thinge comminge by chaunce, but as sente from GOD out of heauen. As thoughe the God, whose honoure he was forsakyng, woulde reuenge that wicked purpose against him. But after they hearde vs speake of the name of Christe, of his doctrine, lawes, myracles, and of thee no lesse wonderful constancie of so manye martyrs, whose bloude wyllinglye shedde broughte a great nombre of nations throughoute all partes of the worlde into their sect: you will not beleue with howe gladde mindes, they agreed vnto the same: whether it were by the secrete inspiration of GOD, or elles for that they thought it nieghest vnto that opinion, which among them is counted the chieft. Howbeit I thinke this was no smale helpe and furtheraunce in the matter, that they harde vs say, that Christe instituted among his, al thinges commen: and that the same Religious houses. communitie doth yet remaine amongest the rightest Christian companies. Verely howsoever it came to passe, manye of them consented togethers in our religion, and were wasshed in ye holy water of baptisme. But because among vs foure (for no mo of vs was left a liue, two of our companie beyng dead) there was no priest, which I am right sorie for: they beyng entered and instructed in al other pointes of our religion, lacke only those sacramentes, whiche here none but priestes do minister. Howbeit they vnderstand and perceiue them, and be very desierous of ye same. Yea, they reason and dispute ye matter earnestly among themselues, whether without ye sending of a christian bishop, one chofen out of their own people may receaue the ordre of priesthod. And truely they were minded to chuese one. But at my departure from them they had chofen none. They also which do not agree to Christes religion, feare no man from it, nor speake against any man that hath receiued it. Sauing that one of our company in my presence was sharply punished. He as soone as he was baptised, began against our willes, with more earnest affection, then wisdom, to reason of Christes religion: and began to waxe so hote in his matter, that he did not onely preferre our religion before al other, but also did vtterly despise and condempne all other, calling them prophane, and the folowers of them wicked and deuelish, and the children of euerlasting dampnation. When he had thus longe reasoned the matter, they laide holde on him, accused him, and condempned him into exile, not as a despiser of religion, but as a sedicious person, and a raiser vp of diffention amonge the people. For this is one of the auncientest lawes amonge them: that no man shall be blamed for refoninge in the maintenaunce of his owne religion. For kyng Utopus, euen at the firste beginning, hearing yat the inhabitauntes of the land wer before his comming thether, at continuall diffention and strife amonge themselues for their religions: perceyuing also that this common diffention (whiles euery feuerall secte tooke feuerall partes in fighting for their countrey) was the only occasion of his conquest ouer them al, affone as he had gotten the victory: Firste of all he made a decree, that it should be lawfull for euerie man to faouere and folow what religion he would, and that he mighte do the best he could to bring other to his opinion, so that he did it peaceablie, gentelie, quietly, and soberlie, without hastie and contentious rebuking and inuehing against other. If he could not by faire and gentle speche induce them vnto his opinion yet he should vse no kinde of violence, and refraine from displeasaunte and seditious woordes. To him that would vehemently and feruentlye in this cause striue and contende was decreed, Sedicious reasoners punished. banishment or bondage. This lawe did kyng Utopus make not only for the maintenaunce of peace, which he saw through continuall contention and mortal hatred vtterly extinguished: but also because he thought this decree should make for the furtheraunce of religion. Wherof he durst define and determine nothing vnad-uifedlie, as douting whether god defiering manifolde and diuerfe fortes of honour, would inspire fondry men with fondrie kindes of religion, And this fuerly he thought a very vnmete and folish thing, and a point of arrogant prefumption, to compell all other by violence and threateninges to agre to the fame, that thou beleueft to be trew. Furthermore thoughe there be one religion, whiche alone is trew, and al other vaine and fuperftitious, yet did he wel forefee (fo that the matter were handeled with reafon, and fober modestie) that the trueth of the own powre would at the laft iffue out and come to lyghte. But if contention and debate in that behalfe fhould continuallye be vfed, as the woorfte men be moofte obftinate and ftubbourne, and in their euyll opinion moofte conftante: he perceaued that then the befte and holyeft religion woulde be troden vnderfote and deftroyed by moft vaine fuperfticions, euen as good corne is by thornes and weedes ouergrown and chooked. Therefore all this matter he left vndiffcuffed, and gaue to euerye man free libertie and choife to beleue what he woulde. Sauinge that he earnestelye and ftraitelye charged them, that no man fhould conceaue fo vile and baafe an opinion of the dignitie of mans nature, as to think that the foules do die and perifhe with the bodye: or that the world runneth at al auentures gouerned by no diuine prouidence. And therefore thei beleue that after this life vices be extreamelye punished and vertues bountifully rewarded. Hym that is of a contrary opinion they counte not in the nombre of men, as one that hathe aualed the heighe nature of hys foule to the vielnes of brute beaftes bodies: muche leffe in the nombre of their citiziens, whose lawes and ordenaunces, if it were not for feare, he wold nothing at al esteeme. For you maye be fuer that he will ftudie either with craft priuely to mocke, or els violently to breake the commen lawes of his countrey, in whom remaineth no further feare then of the lawes, nor no further hope then of the

No vile opinion to be conceaued of mans
worthy nature.

bodye. Wherefore he that is thus minded is deprived of all honours, excluded from all common administrations in the weale publique. And thus he is of all fortes despised, as of an vnprofitable, and of a base and vile nature. Howbeit they put him to no punishment, because they be perswaded, that it is in no mans power to beleue what he list. No nor they constraine hym not with threatninges to dissemble his minde, and shew countenance contrarie to his thought. For deceit and falschod and all maners of lies, as nexte vnto fraude, they do maruelouffie deteste and abhorre. But they suffer him not to dispute in his opinion, and that onelye amonge the comen people. For els aparte amonge the priestes and men of grautie they do not onelye suffer, but also exhorte him to dispute and argue: hoping that at the last, that madnes will geue place to reason. There be also other, and of them no small numbre, which be not forbidden to speake theyr mindes, as grounding their opinion vpon some reason, beyng in their liuing neither euell nor vicious. Their heresie is much contrarie to the other. For they beleue that the foules of brute beastes be immortall and euerlasting. But nothyng to be compared with oures in dignitie, neither ordeined nor predestinate to like felicitie. For al they beleue certainly and sewerly that mans bleffe shal be so great, that they do mourne and lament euery mans sicknes, but no mans death, oneles it be one whome they see depart from his life carefullie, and agaynst his will. For this they take for a very euel token, as thoughe the soule beyng in dispaire, and vexed in conscience, through some priuie and secreet forefeiling of the punishment now at hande were aferde to depart. And they thinke he shall not be welcome to God, which when he is called, runneth not to him gladlye, but is drawn by force and fore against his will. They therefore that see this kinde of deathe, do abhorre it,

Irreligious
people secluded from all honours.

A very straung
sayinge.

Deceit and falshod detested.

A maruelous
straunge opinion touching
the soules of brute beastes.

To die vnwil-lyngly an euel
token.

and them that fo die, they burie with forow and filence. And when they haue praied God to be mercifull to the foule, and mercifully to pardon the infirmities therof, they couer the dead coorse with earth. Contrariewise all that departe merely and full of good hope, for them no man mourneth, but followeth the heerse with ioyfull fyinging, commending the foules to God with great affection. And at the last, not with mourning sorrow, but with a great reuerence they bourne the bodies. And in the fame place they fette vp a pillar of ftone, with the dead mans titles therin graued. When they be come home they reherse his vertuous maners and his good dedes. But no part of his life is fo oft or gladly talked of, as his merideth. They thinke that this remembraunce of the vertue and goodnes of the dead doeth vehemently pro-
 uoke and enforce the liuing to vertue. And that nothing can be more pleasaunt and acceptable to the deade. Whom they fuppofe to be present among them, when they talke of them, though to the dull and feble eiefight of mortall men they be inuifible. For it were an vnconuenient thinge, that the blessed fhoulde not be at libertie to goo whether they woulde. And it were a pointe of greate vnkindnes in them to haue vtterly caft awaye the defire of vifitinge and feing their frendes, to whome they were in their life time ioyned by mutuall loue and amitie. Whiche in good men after their deathe they counte to be rather increased then diminished. They beleue therefore that the deade be presentlye conuerfaunt amonge the quicke, as beholders and witneffes of all their wordes and dedes. Therefore they go more corragiously to their bufines as hauing a trust and affiaunce in fuch ouerfeers. And this fame belefe of the present conuerfation of their forefathers and aunce-Sothsayers not regarded nor credited. tours among them, feareth them from all fecrete difhoneftie. They vtterly despife and mocke sothfayinges and diuinations of things to come by the flighte or voices of birdes, and all other diuinations of vaine superstition, whiche in other countreis be in greate obseruation. But they highlye esteeme and worshyppe miracles that come by no healpe of nature, as woorkes and witnesses of the presente power of God. And suche they saye do chaunce there verye often. And sometimes in great and doubtfull matters, by commen intercession and prayers, they procure and obteine them with a sure hope and confidence, and a steadfast belefe.

Miracles.

The life contemplatiue.

They thinke that the contemplation of nature, and the prayse thereof comminge, is to God a very acceptable honoure. Yet there be many so earnestly bent and affectioned to religion, that they passe no thing for lerning, nor geue their mindes to any knowledge of thinges. But ydelnes they vtterly forsake and eschue, thinking felicitie after this life to be gotten and obtained by busie labors and good exercises. Some therefore of them attende vpon the sicke, some amende high waies, clenfe ditches, repaire bridges, digge turfes, grauell, and stones, fel and cleaue wood, bring wood, corne and other thinges into the cities in cartes, and serue not onelye in commen woorkes, but also in priuate laboures as seruauntes, yea, more then bondmen. For what so euer vnpleasaunt, harde, and vile worke is anye where, from the whiche labour, lothsomnes, and desperation doth fray other, al that they take vpon them willingly and gladly, procuring quiete and rest to other, remaininge in continual woork and labour themselues, not embraidinge others therewith. They neither reprove other mens liues, nor glorie in their owne. These men the more seruiceable they behaue themselues, the more they be honoured of all men. Yet they be diuided into two sectes. The one is of them that liue single and chaste, absteyning not onely from the companie of women, but also from eating of fleshe, and some of them from all maner of beastes. Whiche vtterly reiecting the pleasures of this present life as hurtfull, be all wholye set vpon the desier of the lyfe to come by watchynge, and sweatynge, hoop-

The life actiue.

inge shortly to obtaine it, being in the meane feason merie and lustie. The other secte is no lesse desirous of laboure, but they embrace matrimonye, not despisyng the solace therof, thinking that they can not be discharged of their bounden duties towards nature without labour and toyle, nor towards their native countrey without procreation of children. They abstaine from no pleasure that doeth nothinge hinder them from laboure. They loue the flesh of foure footed beastes, bicause they beleue that by yat meate they be made hardier and stronger to worke.

It is not all one to be wise and good. The Utopians counte this secte the wiser, but the other the holier. Which in that they preferre single life before matrimony, and that sharplife before an easier life, if herein they grounded vpon reason they would mock them. But now forasmuch as they say they be led to it by religion, they honor and worship them. And these be they whom in their language by a peculiar name, they cal Buthrefcas, the which word by interpretation signifieth to vs men of religion or religious men. They haue priestes of exceeding holines, and therefore very few.

Priestes. For there be but xiiij. in euery citie accordinge to the number of their churches, sauyng when they go furthe to battell. For than. vij. of them goo furth with the armie: in whose steades so manie newe be made at home. But the other at their retourne home again reentre euery one into his owne place, they that be aboute the numbre, vntill suche time as they succede into the places of the other at their dyinge, be in the meane feason continuallie in companie with the bishoppe. For he is the chiefe heade of them al. They be chofen of the people, as the other magistrates be by secrete voices for the auoydinge of strife. After their election they be consecrate of their own companie. They be ouerseers of al diuine matters, orderers of religions, and as it wer iudges and maisters of maners. And it is a great dishonestie and shame to be rebuked or spoken to by any of them for diffolute and incont-ent liuing. But as it is their office to geue good exhortations and counfel, fo is it ye dutie of the prince and the other magistrates to correct and punifhe offenders, fauing that the prieftes, whome they find exceeding vicious liuers, them they excommuni- Excommunication.

 cate from hauing anye intereft in diuine matters. And there is almoſte no punifhement amonge them more feared. For they runne in verye great infamie, and be inwardly tormented with a ſecret feare of religion, and ſhall not long ſcape free with their bodies. For vnleſſe they by quicke repentaunce approue the amendement of their liues to the prieftes, they be taken and punifhed of the counfel, as wicked and irreligious. Both childhode and youth is instructed, and taught of them. Nor they be not diligente to instructe them in learning, then in vertue and good maners. For they vſe with verie great endeouour and diligence to put into the heades of their children, whiles they be yet tender and pliaunte, good opinions and profitable for the conſeruation of their weale publique. Which when they be once rooted in children, do remayne with them al their life after, and be wonders profitable for the defence and maintenaunce of the ſtate of the commewelth. Whiche neuer decaieth but throughe vices riſing of euill opinions. The prieftes, onles Women prie-ſtes.
 they be women (for that kinde is not excluded from prieſthoode, howbeit fewe be choſen, and none but widdowes and old women) the men prieftes, I ſaye, take to their wiſes the chiefeſt women in all their countreye. For to no office among the Utopians is more honour and preeminence geuen. In ſo much that if they commit any offence, they be vnder no commen iudgement, but be left only to god and The maiestie and preeminence of
prieſtes.
 themſelves. For thei thinke it not lawful to touch him with mannes hande, be he neuer ſo vitious, which after ſo ſingular a fort was dedicate and conſecrate to god, as a holly offering. This maner may they eaſelye obſerue, bicauſe they haue ſo fewe prieftes, and do chuſe them with ſuch circumſpec-

tion. For it scascely euer chaunceth, that the moſte vertuous amonge vertuous, which in reſpect only of his vertue is auanced to ſo high a dignity, can fall to vice and wickednes. And if it ſhould chaunce in dede (as mans nature is mutable and fraile) yet by reaſon they be ſo fewe, and promoted to no might nor powre, but only to honoure, it were not to be feared yat anye great dammage by them ſhould happen and enſue to the common wealthe. They haue ſo rare and fewe prieſtes, leaſt if the honoure were communicated to many, ye digniti of the ordre, which among them now is ſo highly eſtimated, ſhould rone in contempt. Speciallye bicauſe they thincke it hard to find many ſo good, as to be meet for that dignity, to the execution and diſcharge whereof it is not ſufficiente to be endued with meane vertues. Furthermore theſe prieſtes be not more eſtimated of their owne countrey men, then they be of forrein and ſtraunge countreis. Which thinge maye hereby plainly appere. And I thinke alſo yat this is the cauſe of it. For whiles ye armies be fighting together in open feld they a litle beſide not farre of knele vpon their knees in their hallowed veſtimentes, holding vp their handes to heauen: praing firſt of all for peace, nexte for vycory of their owne parte, but to neyther part a bluddy victory. If their hoſt gette the vpper hand, they runne in to the mayne battayle, and reſtrayne their owne men from ſleying and cruelly purſuinge their vanquyſhed enemies. Whyche enemyes, yf they doo but ſee them and ſpeake to them, it is ynoughe for the ſauegarde of their lyues. And the touching of their clothes defendeth and ſaueth al their gooddes from rauine and ſpoyle. This thinge hathe auanced them to ſo greate wourſhip and trewe maieſty among al nations, that manye times they haue aſwel preferued their own citizens from ye cruel force of their enemies, as they haue their enemies from the furyous rage of their owne men. For it is well knowen, tha twhen their owne army hathe reculed, and in dyſpayre turned backe, and runne away, their ennemies fyerflye purſuing with slaughter and spoyle, then the priestes cumming betwene haue stayed the murder, and parted bothe the hostes. So that peace hath bene made and concluded betwene bothe partes vpon equall and indifferent conditions. For there was neuer any nation, so fierce, so cruell, and rude, but they hadde them in such reuerence, that they counted their bodyes hallowed and sanctified, and therefore not to be violently and vnreuerently touched.

They kepe hollye the firste and the laste daye of euery moneth and yeare, diuidinge the

The obseruacion of holy daies amonge
the Utopians

yeare into monethes, whyche they measure by the course of the moone, as they doo the yeare by the course of the sonne. The fyrste dayes they call in their language Lynemernes, and the laste Trapemernes, the whyche woordes may be interpreted, primifeste and finifest, or els in our speache, first feaste and last feast. Their churches be

Their churches

verye gorgious, and not onelye of fine and curious workemanship, but also (which in the fewenes of them was necessary) very wide and large, and hable to receaue a great company of people. But they be al sumwhat darke. Howbeit that was not

Churches of dimme light
and a reason why

done through ignoraunce in buildinge, but as they say, by the counfel of the priestes. Bicause they thought that ouer much light doth disperse mens cogitations, whereas in dimme and doubtful lighte they be gathered together, and more earnestly fixed vpon religion and deuotion: which bicause it is not there of one sort among all men, and yet all the kindes and fassions of it, thoughe they be sondry and manifold, agre together in the honour of the diuine nature, as goyng diuers wayes to one ende: therefore nothing is sene nor heard in ye churches, but that semeth to agre indifferently with them all. If there be a distinct kind of sacrifice peculiar to anye seueral secte, that they execute at home in their owne houfes. The common sacrifices be so ordered, that they be no derogation nor preiudice to anye of the priuate sacrifices and religions. Therefore no ymage of anye god is seene in the church, to the intente it maye bee free for euery man to conceiue god by their religion after what likenes and fimilitude they will. They call vpon no peculiar name of god, but only Mithra In the which word they all agree together in one nature of the diuine maiefti whatfoeuer it be. No prayers bee vfed but fuche as euerye man maye boldelie pronounce withoute the offendinge of anny fecte. They come therefore to the church, the lafte day of euerye moneth and yeare in the euenynge yet fasting, there to gyue thanks to GOD for that they haue prosperouflye paffed ouer the yeare or monethe, wherof that hollye daye is the lafte daye. The nexte daye they come to the church earlye in the mornynge, to praye to GOD that they maye haue good fortune and fucceffe all the newe yeare or monethe whych they doo begynne of that fame hollye daye. But in the hollye dayes that be the lafte dayes of the monethes and yeares, before they come to the church, the wiues fall downe prostrat before their husbandes

The confessi-
on of the Uto-
pians.

feet at home, and the children before the feete of their parentes, confeffinge and acknowledginge themfelves offenders either by some actuall dede, or by omiffion of their deuty, and desire pardon for their offense. Thus yf anye cloude of priuy displeafure was rifen at home, by this fatiffaction it is ouerblowen, that they may be prefente at the facrifices with pure and charitable mindes. For they be aferd to come there with troubled consciences. Therefore if they knowe themfelves to beare anye hatred or grudge towards anye man, they prefume not to come to ye facrifices, before they haue reconciled themfelves and purged their consciences, for feare of greate vengeaunce and punyfmente for their offense. When they come thether, the men goo into

An order for places in the Church.

the ryghte fyde of the church, and the women into the lefte fyde. There they place themfelves in fuche ordre, that all they whyche be of the male kinde in euery houghold fitte before the goodman of ye hough, and they of the female kinde before the goodwyfe. Thus it is forfene that all their geftures and behauiours be marked and obferued abrode of them by whose authority and difcipline they be gouerned at home. This alfo they diligently fee vnto, that the younger euermore be coupled with his elder, left children beinge ioyned together, they fhould paffe ouer yat time in childifh wantonnes, wherin they ought principally to conceaue a religious and deuoute feare towardes god : which is the chiefe and almoft ye only incitation to vertu. They kill no liuing beaft in facrifice, nor they thinke not that the merciful clemencye of god hath delite in bloude and slaughter, which hath geuen liffe to beaftes to the intent they fhould liue. They burne frankincence, and other fweet fauours, and light alfo a greate numbere of waxe candelles and tapers, not fupposinge this geare to be any thing auaylable to the diuine nature, as neither ye prayers of men. But this vnhurtful and harmeles kind of worfhip pleafeth them. And by thies fweet faoures and lightes, and other fuch ceremonies men feele themfelfes fecretlye lifted vp, and encouraged to deuotion with more willynge and feruent hartes. The people wearethe in the churche white apparell, The priest is clothed in changeable colours. Whiche in workemanshipe bee excellent, but in ftuffe not verye pretious. For their veftimentes be neither embraudered with gold, nor fet with precious ftones. But they be wrought fo fynely and conningelye with diuers fethers of foules, that the eftimation of no costely ftuffe is hable to counteruaile the price of the worke. Furthermore in thefe birdes fethers, and in the dewe ordre of them, whiche is obferued in their fetting, they faye, is conteyned certaine diuine mifteries. The interpretation whereof knowen, whiche is diligentlye taught by the priestes, they be put in remembraunce of the bountifull benefites of God towarde them : and of the loue and honoure whiche of their behalfe is dewe to God : and alfo of their duties one towarde another. When the priest first commeth out of the vestry thus apparelled, they fall downe incontinent euerye one reuerentlye to the ground, with so still silence on euerye part, that the very fassion of the thinge striketh into them a certayne feare of God, as though he were there personally presente. When they haue lien a litle space on the ground, the priest geueth them a signe for to ryse. Then they sing prayfes vnto God, whiche they intermixt with instruments of musicke, for the moste parte of other fassions then these that we vse in this parte of the worlde. And like as some of ours bee muche sweter then theirs, so some of theirs doo farre passe ours. But in one thinge doubtles they goo exceeding farre beyonde vs. For all their musike bothe that they playe vpon instrumentes, and that they singe with mannes voyce dothe so resemble and expresse naturall affections, the sound and tune is so applied and made agreable to the thinge, that whether it bee a prayer, or els a dytty of gladnes, of patience, of trouble, of mournynge, or of anger; the fassion of the melodye dothe so represente the meaning of the thing, that it doth wonderfullye moue, stirre, pearce, and enflame the hearers myndes. At the laste the people and the priest together rehearse solempne prayers in woordes, expreslye pronounced, so made that euerye man maye priuatelye applye to hymselfe that which is commonlye spoken of all. In these prayers euerye man recognisethe and knowledgethe God to be hys maker, hys gouernoure, and the principal cause of all other goodnes, thankynge him for so many benefites receaued at his hande. But namelye that throughe the fauoure of God he hath chaunced into that publyque weale, whiche is moste happye and welthye, and hathe chofen that religion, whyche he hopeth to be moste true. In the whyche thinge if he doo anye thinge erre, or yf there be any other better then eyther of them is, being more acceptable to God, he desierethe him that he wyl of his goodnes let him haue knowledge thereof, as one that

Ceremonies.

Theire church
musike.

Prayers.

is ready too followe what way foeuer he wyll leade hym. But yf this fourme and fassion of a commen wealth bee beste, and his owne relygion most true and perfecte, then he desyrethe GOD to gyue hym a constaunte stedefastnes in the same, and too brynge all other people to the same ordre of lyuynge, and to the same opinion of God onles there bee annye thinge that in this diuerfitye of religions dothe delite his vnfercheable pleasure. To be shorte he prayeth hym, that after his deathe he maye come to hym. But how soone or late that he dare not affynge or determine. Howebeit, if it myght stande with his maiesties pleasure, he woulde be mucche gladder to dye a paynefull deathe and so to goo to God, then by longe lyuing in worldlye prosperitye to bee awaye from him. Whan this prayer is said they fal doune to the ground again and a lytle after they ryse vp and go to dinner. And the refydewe of the daye they passe ouer in playes, and exercife of cheualrye.

Nowe I haue declared and described vnto you, as truely as I coulde the fourme and ordre of that commen wealth, which verely in my iudgment is not only the beste, but also that which alone of good right maye claime and take vpon it the name of a commen wealth or publique weale. For in other places they speake stil of the commen wealth. But euery man procureth his owne priuate gaine. Here where nothings is priuate, the commen affaires bee earnestlye loked vpon. And truely on both partes they haue good cause so to do as they do. For in other countreys who knoweth not that he shall sterue for hunger, onles he make some feuerall prouision for himselfe, though the commen wealth floryshe neuer so mucche in ryches? And therefore he is compelled euen of verry necessitie to haue regarde to him selfe, rather then to the people, that is to saye, to other. Contrarywyse there where all thinges be commen to euery man, it is not to be doubted that any man shal lacke anye thinge necessary for his priuate vses: so that the commen store houses and bernes be sufficientlye stored.

For there nothinge is distributed after a nyggyſhe forte, neither there is anye poore man or begger. And thoughe no man haue anye thinge, yet euerye man is ryche. For what can be more riche, then to liue ioyfully and merely, without al grieſe and penſifenes: Not caring for his owne lyuing, nor vexed or troubled with his wiſes importunate complayntes, nor dreadynge pouertie to his ſonne, nor ſorrowng for his daughters dowrey? Yea they take no care at all for the lyuing and wealthe of themſelves and al theirs, of their wyfes, their chyldren, their nephewes, their childrens chyldren, and all the ſucceſſion that euer ſhall followe in their poſteritie. And yet beſydes this there is no leſſe prouiſion for them that were ones labourers, and be nowe weake and impotent, then for them that do nowe labour and take payne. Here nowe woulde I ſee, yf anye man dare bee ſo bolde as to compare with this equitye, the iuſtice of other nations. Among whom, I forſake God, if I can fynde any ſigne or token of equitye and iuſtice. For what iuſtice is this, that a ryche goldeſmythe, or an vſurer, or to bee ſhorte anye of them, which either doo nothing at all, or els that whyche they doo is ſuch, that it is not very neceſſary to the common wealth, ſhould haue a pleaſaunte and and a welthie lyuinge, either by Idlenes, or by vnneceſſarye buſines: When in the meane tyme poore labourers, carters, yronſmythes, carpenters, and plowmen, by ſo greate and continual toyle, as drawing and bearinge beaſtes be ſkant hable to ſuſteine, and againe ſo neceſſary toyle, that without it no common wealth were hable to continewe and endure one yere, ſhould yet get ſo harde and poore a lyuing, and lyue ſo wretched and miſerable a lyfe, that the ſtate and condition of the labouringe beaſtes maye ſeme muche better and welthier? For they be not put to ſoo continuall labour, nor their lyuinge is not muche worſe, yea to them muche pleaſaunter, takynge no thoughte in the meane ſeaſon for the tyme to come. But theſe feilye poore wretches be preſently tormented with barreyne and vnfrutefull labour. And the remembrance of their poore indigent and beggerlye olde age kylleth them vp. For their dayly wages is so lytle, that it will not suffice for the same daye, muche lesse it yeldeth any ouerplus, that may daylye be layde vp for the relyefe of olde age. Is not this an vniust and an vnkynde publyque weale, whyche gyueth great fees and rewardes to gentlemen, as they call them, and to goldfmythes, and to fuche other, whiche be either ydle persones, or els onlye flatterers, and deuyfers of vayne pleasures: And of the contrary parte maketh no gentle prouision for poore plowmen, coliaris, laborers, carters, yronfmythes, and carpenters: without whome no commen wealth can continewe? But after it hath abused the labours of their lusty and flowringe age, at the laste when they be oppressed with olde age and fyckenes: being nedye, poore, and indigent of all thinges, then forgettyng their so manye paynefull watchinges, not remembring their so manye and so greate benefites, recompenseth and acquyteth them mooste vnkyndly with myserable death. And yet besides this the riche men not only by priuate fraud, but also by commen lawes do euery day pluck and snatche away from the poore some parte of their daily liuing. So where as it semed before vniuste to recompense with vnkindnes their paynes that haue bene beneficiall to the publyque weale, nowe they haue to this their wrong and vniuste dealinge (which is yet a muche worse pointe) geuen the name of iustice, yea and that by force of a law. Therefore when I consider and way in my mind all these commen wealthes, which now a dayes any where do flourish, so good helpe me, I can perceauie nothing but a certain conspiracy of riche men procuringe their owne commodities vnder the name and title of the commen wealth. They inuent and deuise all meanes and craftes, first how to kepe safely, without feare of lesing, that they haue vniustly gathered together, and next how to hire and abuse the worke and laboure of the poore for as litle money as may be. These deuises, when the

riche men haue decreed to be kept and obserued vnder coloure of the comminaltie, that is to saye, also of the pore people, then they be made lawes. But these most wicked and vicious men, when they haue by their vnfatiable couetousnes deuided among them felues al those thinges, whiche woulde haue sufficed all men, yet how farre be they from the wealth and felicitie of the Utopian commen wealth? Out of the which, Contempte of Money. in that all the desire of money with the vse thereof and vtterly secluded and banished, howe greate a heape of cares is cut away? How great an occasion of wickednes and mischief is plucked vp by ye rotes? For who knoweth not, that fraud, theft, rauine, brauling, quarelling, brabbling, striffe, chiding, contention, murder, treason, poisoning, which by daily punishmentes are rather reuenged then refrained, do dye when money dieth. And also that feare, grieffe, care, laboures, and watchinges do perish euen the very same moment that money perisheth? Yea pouerty it selfe, which only femed to lacke money, if money were gone, it also would decrease and vanishe away. And that you may perceauie this more plainly, consider with your selves some barein and vnfruteful yeare, wherin manye thousandes of people haue starued for honger: I dare be bolde to say, yat in the end of that penury so much corne or graine might haue bene found in the rich mens barnes, if they had bene searched, as being diuided among them whome famine and pestilence then consumed, no man at al should haue felt that plague and penuri. So easely might men gette their liuing, if that same worthye princeffe lady money did not alone stop vp the waye betwene vs and our lyuing, which a goddes name was very excellently deuised and inuented, that by her the way therto should be opened. I am fewer the ryche men perceauie this, nor they be not ignoraunte how much better it were too lacke noo necessarye thing, then to abunde with ouermuche superfluite: to be ryd oute of innumerable cares and troubles, then to be be-

feigned and encombred with great ryches. And I dowte not that either the respecte of euery mans priuate commoditie, or els the authority of oure sauoure Christe (which for his great wisdom could not but know what were best, and for his inestimable goodnes could not but counsel to that which he knew to be best) wold haue brought all the worlde longe agoo into the laws of this weale publique, if it wer not yat one only beast, ye princeffe and mother of all mischiefe Pride, doth withstande and let it. She measurethe not wealth and prosperity by her owne commodities, but by the miserie and incommodities of other, she would not by her good will be made a goddesse, yf there were no wretches left, ouer whom she might like a scorneful ladie rule and triumph, ouer whose miseries her felicities mighte shyne, whose pouertie she myghte vexe, tormente, and encrease by gorgiouslye settinge furthe her richeffe. Thys hell hounde creapeth into mens hartes: and plucketh them backe from entering the right pathe of life, and is so depely roted in mens brestes, that she can not be plucked out. This fourme and fashon of a weale publique, which I would gladly wish vnto al nations: I am glad yet that it hath chaunced to the Utopians, which haue folowed those institutions of life, whereby they haue laid such foundations of their common wealth, as shal continew and last not only wealthely, but also as far as mans wit may iudge and coniecture, shall endure for euer. For, seyng the chiefe causes of ambition and sedition, with other vices be plucked vp by the rootes, and abandoned at home, there can be no ieopardie of domesticall dissention, whiche alone hathe caste vnder foote and brought to noughte the well fort[i]fied and stronglie defenced wealthe and riches of many cities. But forasmuch as perfect concorde remaineth, and wholsome lawes be executed at home, the enuie of al forein princes be not hable to shake or moue the empire, though they haue many tymes long ago gone about to do it, beyng euermore driuen backe.

Thus when Raphaell hadde made an ende of his tale, though many thinges came to my mind, which in the maners and lawes of that people femed to be instituted and founded of no good reason, not onely in the fashion of their cheualry, and in their facrifices and religions, and in other of their lawes, but also, yea and chiefly, in that which is the principal foundation of al their ordinances, that is to say, in the communitie of their life and liuyng, withoute anye occupieng of money, by the whiche thinge onelye all nobilitie, magnificence, wourshippe, honour, and maiestie, the true ornamentes and honoures, as the common opinion is, of a common wealth, vtterlye beouerthrowen and destroid: yet because I knew that he was wery of talking, and was not sure whether he coule abyde that anye thyng shoulde be fayde agaynste hys mynde: speciallye remembryng that he had reprehended this faulte in other, which be aferde lest they shoulde seme not to be wise enough, onles they could find some fault in other mens inuentions: therfore I praising both their institutions and hys communication, toke him by the hand, and led him into supper: sayyng that we woulde chuese an other time to waye and examine the same matters, and to talke with him moore at large therin. Whiche woulde God it might ones come to passe. In the meane time as I can not agree and consent to all thinges that he faide, beyng els without doubt a man singularly well learned, and also in all worldelye matters exactly and profoundly experienced: so must I nedes confesse and graunt that many thinges be in the Utopian weale publique, whiche in our cities I maye rather wishe for, then hope after.

¶ Thus endeth the afternoones talke of Raphael Hythlodage concerning the lawes and institutions of the Ilande of Utopia.

¶ To the right honourable Hierome Buslyde, prouost Arienn, and counselloure to the catholike kinge Charles, Peter Gyles, Citizein of Antwerpe, wisheth health and felicitie.

Thomas More the singlar ornamente of this our age, as you your self (right honourable Buslyde) can witnesse, to whome he is perfectly wel knownen, sent vnto me this other day the ylande of Utopia, to very few as yet knownen, but most worthy, which as farre excelling Platoes commen wealthe, all people shoulde be willinge to know: specially of a man most eloquent so finely set furth, so conningly painted out, and so euidently subiect to the eye, that as oft as I reade it, me thinketh that I see somwhat more, then when I heard Raphael Hythloday himselfe (for I was present at that talke aswell as master More) vtteryng and pronouncing his owne woordes: Yea, though the same man, accordinge to his pure eloquence, did so open and declare the matter, that he might plainely enough appeare, to reporte not thinges, which he had learned of others onelye by hearefay, but which he had with his own eyes presently sene, and throughly vewed, and wherin he had no smal time bene conuersant and abiding: a man true, in mine opinion, as touching the knowledge of regions, peoples, and worldly experience, mucche passinge, yea euen they very famous and renowned trauailer Vlysses: and in dede suche a one, as for the space of these viij. c. [eight hundred] yeres past I think nature into the worlde brought not furth hislike: in comparison of whome Vespuce maye be thought to haue sene nothing. Moreover, wheras we be wont more effectually and pitthely to declare and expresse thinges that we haue sene, then whiche we haue but onelye hearde, there was besides that in this man a certen peculiar grace, and singlar dexteritie to discrieue and set furth a matter withall. Yet the selfe same thinges as ofte as I beholde and consider them drawn and painted oute with master Mores penfille, I am therwith fo moued, fo delited, fo inflamed, and fo rapt, that sometime me think I am presently conuerfaunt, euen in the ylande of Utopia. And I promise you, I can skante beleue that Raphael himfelfe by al that fise yeres space that he was in Utopia abiding, faw there fomuch, as here in master Mores description is to be fene and perceaued. Whiche description with fo manye wonders, and miraculous thinges is replenished, that I ftande in great doubt wherat firft and chieflie to mufe or marueile: whether at the excellencie of his perfect and furer memorie, which could welniegh worde by woorde rehearfe fo manye thinges once onely heard: or elles at his fingular prudence, who fo well and wittyly marked and bare away al the originall caufes and fountaynes (to the vulgare people commenly moft vnknownen) wherof both yffueth and fpringeth the mortall confufion and vtter decaye of a comen wealth, and alfo the auauancement and wealthy ftate of the fame may riefte and growe: or elles at the efficacie and pitthe of his woordes, which in fo fine a latin ftile, with fuche forte of eloquence hath couched together and comprised fo many and diuers matters, speciallie beinge a man continuallie encombred with fo manye bufye and troublefome cares: both publique, and priuate, as he is. Howbeit all thefe thinges caufe you litle to maruell (righte honourable Buflid) for that you are familiarly and throughly acquainted with the notable, yea almoft diuine witte of the man. But nowe to procede to other matters, I fuerly know nothing nedeful or requisite to be adioyned vnto his writings: Onely a meter of. iiij. verfes written in the Utopian tongue, whiche after master Mores departure Hythloday by chaunce fhewed me, that haue I caufed to be added thereto, with the Alphabete of the fame nation, and haue alfo garnished the margent of the boke with certen notes. For, as touchinge the fituation of the ylande, that is to faye, in what parte of the worlde Utopia ftandeth, the ignoraunce and lacke whereof not a litle troubleth and greueth master More, in dede Raphael left not that vnspoken of. Howbeit with verie fewe wordes he lightly touched it, incidentlye by ye way passing it ouer, as meanyng of likelihod to kepe and referue that to an other place. And the fame, I wot not how, by a certen euell and vnluckie chaunce escaped vs bothe. For when Raphael was speaking therof, one of master Mores seruantes came to him, and whispered in his eare. Wherefore I beyng then of purpose more earnestly addiēt to heare, one of the company, by reason of cold taken, I thinke, a shippeborde, coughed out so loude, that he toke from my hearinge certen of his wordes. But I wil neuer flynte, nor rest, vntil I haue gotte the full and exacte knowledge hereof: infomuche that I will be hable perfectly to instructe you, not onely in the longitude or true meridian of the ylande, but also in the iust latitude therof, that is to say, in the subleuation or height of the pole in that region, if our frende Hythloday be in safetie, and aliue. For we heare very vncerten newes of him. Some reporte, that he died in his iorney homeward. Some agayne affirme, that he returned into his countrey, but partly, for that he coulde not away with the fashions of his countrey folk, and partly for that his minde and affection was altogether fet and fixed vpon Utopia, they say that he hath taken his voyage thetherwarde agayne. Now as touching this, that the name of this yland is nowhere founde amonge the olde and auncient cosmographers, this doubtte Hythloday himselfe verie well dissolued. For why it is possible enoughe (quod he) that the name, whiche it had in olde time, was afterwarde chaunged, or elles that they neuer had knowledge of this iland: forasmuch as now in our time diuers landes be found, which to the olde Geographers were vnknown. Howbeit, what nedeth it in this behalfe to fortifie the matter with argumentes, feynge master More is author hereof sufficient? But whereas he doubteth of the edition or imprinting of the booke, indeede herein I both commende, and also knowledge the mannes modestie. Howbeit vnto me it seemeth a worke most vnworthie to be long suppressed, and most worthy to go abroad into the hands of men, yea, and vnder the title of your name to be published to the worlde: either because the singular endowments and qualities of master More be to no man better known then to you, or els because no man is more fitte and meete, then you with good counsellors to further, and auance the common wealth, wherein you haue many yeares already continued and trauailed with great glory and commendation, bothe of wisdom and knowledge, and also of integritie and vprightnes. Thus o liberall supporter of good learninge, and floure of this our time

I byd you moste hartely well to fare. At Antwerpe .1516. the first daye of Nouember.

A meter of .iiij. verses in the Utopian
tongue, briefely touchinge aswell the straunge
beginning, as also the happie and wealthie continuance of the same common wealth.

V Topos ha Boccas peula chama polta chamaan.
Bargol he maglomi Baccan foma g ymnosophaon.
Agrama g ymnosophon labarem bacha bodamilomin.
Voluala barchin heman la lauoluala dramme pagloni.

¶ Whiche verses the translator, accordinge to his simple knowledge, and meane vnderstanding in the Utopian tongue, hath thus rudely englished.

MY kinge and conquerour Vtopus by name
A prince of much renowne and immortall fame
Hath made me an yle that earst no ylande was,
Ful fraught with worldly welth with pleasure and solas.
I one of all other without philosophie
Haue shaped for man a philosophicall citie.
As myne I am nothings dangerous to imparte,
So better to receaue I am readie with al my harte.

¶ A shorte meter of Utopia, written by Anemolius poete laureate, and nephewe to Mythlodaye by his sister.

ME Utopie cleped Antiquitie, Voyde of haunte and herboroughe,
 Nowe am I like to Platoes citie,
 Whose fame flieth the worlde throughe :
 Yea like, or rather more likely Platoes platte to excell and passe.
 For what Platoes penne hathe platted briefly
 In naked wordes, as in a glasse,
 The same haue I perfourmed fully,
 With lawes, with men, and treasure fyttely.
 Wherefore not Utopie, but rather rightely
 My name is Eutopie : A place of felicitie.

Gerarde Nouiomage of Utopia.

DOth pleasure please? then place the here, and well the rest,
 Most pleasaunt pleasures thou shalt finde here.
 Doeth profit ease? then here arriue, this yle is best.
 For passinge profettes do here appeare.
 Doeth bothe thee tempte, and woldest thou gripe both gaine and pleasure?
 This yle is fraight with both bounteously.
 To still thy gredie intent, reape here incomparable treas-
 Bothe minde and tongue to garnishe richelie. [ure
 The hid welles and fountaines both of vice and vertue
 Thou hast them here subiect vnto thine eye.
 Be thankful now, and thankes where thankes be due Geue to Thomas More Londons immortal glorye.

Cornelius Graphey to Reader.

Vilt thou knowe what wonders straunge be in the lande that late was founde? [godly be?
Wilte thou learne thy life to leade, by diuers ways that Wilt thou of vertue and of vice, vnderstande the very grounde? [vanitie?
Wilt thou see this wretched world, how ful it is of

Then reade, and marke, and beare in mind, for thy behoufe, as thou maie best.
 All thinges that in this present worke, that worthie
 clerke fir Thomas More,
 With witte diuine ful learnedly, vnto the worlde hath plaine exprest,
 In whom London well glory maye, for wisedome and for godly lore.

The Printer to the Reader.

He Vtopian Alphabete, good Reader, whiche
 in the aboue written Epistle is promised, hereunto I haue not now adioyned, because I haue not as yet the true characters or four-mes of the Utopiane letters. And no mar-ueill: seyng it is a tongue to vs muche straunger then the Indian, the Perfian, the Syrian, the Arabicke, the Eryptian, the Macedonian, the Sclauonian, the ciprian, the Scythian etc. Which tongues though they be nothing so straunge among vs, as the Utopian is, yet their characters
 we haue not. But I trust, God willing, at the next impression hereof, to perfourme that, whiche nowe I can not: that is to faye: to exhibite perfectly vnto thee, the Utopian Alphabete. In the meane time accept my good
 wyl. And so fare well.

T Imprinted at London in Paules Churche yerde, at the sygne of the Lambe, by Abraham Weale.

M.D.LVI.

---

Muir & Paterson, Printers, Edinburgh.