WILLIAM III., OF NASSAU, Prince of Orange, and King of England, was born at the Hague, in 1650. He was the son of William, Prince of Orange, and of Henrietta Maria, daughter of Charles I. He married the Princess Mary, daughter of James I, Duke of York, and succeeded to the stadtholdership in 1672. In 1688, the arbitrary measures of James II induced many disaffected nobles and others to invite over the Prince of Orange; who gladly embraced the occasion, and landed, without opposition, in Torbay, Nov. 5, the same year, and was crowned April 11, 1689. The year following William went to Ireland, where he defeated James at the Battle of the Boyne. In 1691 he headed the confederated army in the Netherlands; took Namur in 1695; and in 1697 he was acknowledged King of England by the treaty of Rhswick. On the death of Mary, in 1693, the Parliament confirmed to him the royal title. His death, which occurred March 8, 1703, was accelerated by an injury he had sustained in a fall from his horse.
