MISCELLANEOUS POEMS.

ODE TO DR WILLIAM SANCROFT.

LATE LORD ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

WRITTEN IN MAY 1689, AT THE DESIRE OF THE LATE
LORD BISHOP OF ELY.

[Sancroft, Primate of England, at the Revolution, joined with his brethren in resisting the encroachments of James upon liberty and religion. But as his conscience did not permit him to take the oaths to William and Mary, he was deprived of his see, and died in retirement. That Swift should have addressed an Ode to him, under such circumstances, is a proof that, whatever were his principles in civil politics, he was uniformly a staunch high-churchman. This, with the verses to Congreve, and those on Temple's illness, were first published by Mr Nicol in 1789, from an authentic manuscript.]

I.

TRUTH is eternal, and the Son of Heav'n,
Bright effluence of th' immortal ray,
Chief cherub, and chief lamp, of that high sacred
Seven,

Which guard the throne by night, and are its light
 by day :
 First of God's darling attributes,
 Thou daily seest him face to face,
 Nor does thy essence fix'd depend on giddy circumstance
 Of time or place,
 Two foolish guides in ev'ry sublunary dance :
 How shall we find Thee then in dark disputes ?
 How shall we search Thee in a battle gain'd,
 Or a weak argument by force maintain'd ?
 In dagger contests, and th' artillery of words, (For swords are madmen's tongues, and tongues are madmen's swords),
 Contriv'd to tire all patience out,
 And not to satisfy the doubt ?

II.

But where is ev'n thy Image on our earth ?
 For of the person much I fear,
 Since Heaven will claim its residence, as well as birth,
 And God himself has said, He shall not find it here.
 For this inferior world is but Heaven's dusky shade,
 By dark reverted rays from its reflection made ;
 Whence the weak shapes wild and imperfect pass,
 Like sunbeams shot at too far distance from a glass ;
 Which all the mimick forms express,
 Though in strange uncouth postures, and uncomely dress ;
 So when Cartesian artists try
 To solve appearances of sight
 In its reception to the eye,

And catch the living landscape through a scanty light,*
 The figures all inverted shew,
 And colours of a faded hue ;
 Here a pale shape with upward footstep treads,
 And men seem walking on their heads ;
 There whole herds suspended lie,
 Ready to tumble down into the sky :
 Such are the ways ill-guided mortals go
 To judge of things above by things below.
 Disjointing shapes as in the fairy land of dreams,
 Or images that sink in streams ;
 No wonder, then, we talk amiss
 Of truth, and what, or where it is :
 Say, Muse, for thou, if any, know'st,
 Since the bright essence fled, where haunts the reverend ghost?

III.

If all that our weak knowledge titles virtue, be (High Truth) the best resemblance of exalted Thee,
 If a mind fix'd to combat fate
 With those two pow'rful swords, submission and humility,
 Sounds truly good, or truly great :
 Ill may I live, if the good Sancroft in his holy rest,
 In the divin'ty of retreat,
 Be not the brightest pattern earth can show
 Of heav'n-born Truth below :
 But foolish man still judges what is best
 In his own balance, false and light,

* The experiment of the dark chamber, to demonstrate light to be by reception of the object, and not by emission.—S.

Foll'wing opinion, dark, and blind,
 That vagrant leader of the mind,
 Till honesty and conscience are clear out of sight.

IV.

And some, to be large ciphers in a state,
 Pleas'd with an empty swelling to be counted great,
 Make their minds travel o'er infinity of space,
 Rapt through the wide expanse of thought,
 And oft in contradiction's vortex caught,
 To keep that worthless clod, the body, in one place :

Errors like this did old astronomers misguide,
 Led blindly on by gross philosophy and pride,
 Who, like hard masters, taught the sun
 Through many a needless sphere to run,
 Many an eccentric and unthrifty motion make,
 And thousand incoherent journies take,
 Whilst all th' advantage by it got,
 Was but to light earth's inconsiderable spot.
 The herd beneath, who see the weathercock of state

 Hung loosely on the church's pinnacle,
 Believe it firm, because perhaps the day is mild and still ;

But when they find it turn with the first blast of fate,
 By gazing upward giddy grow,
 And think the church itself does so :

 Thus fools, for being strong and nam'rous known,
 Suppose the truth, like all the world, their own ;
 And holy Sancroft's motion quite irregular appears,
 Because 'tis opposite to theirs.

V.

In vain then would the Muse the multitude advise,
 Whose peevish knowledge thus perversely lies

In gath'ring follies from the wise ;
 Rather put on thy anger and thy spite,
 And some kind pow'r for once dispense
 Through the dark mass, the dawn of so much sense,
 To make them understand, and feel me when I write ;
 The muse and I no more revenge desire,
 Each line shall stab, shall blast, like daggers and like fire ;
 Ah, Britain, land of angels ! which of all thy sins, (Say hapless isle, although
 It is a bloody list we know),
 Has given thee up a dwelling-place to fiends ?
 Sin and the plague ever abound
 In governments too easy, and too fruitful ground ;
 Evils which a too gentle king,
 Too flourishing a spring,
 And too warm summers bring :
 Our British soil is over rank, and breeds
 Among the noblest flow'rs a thousand pois'nous weeds,
 And ev'ry stinking weed so lofty grows,
 As if 'twould overshadow the Royal Rose,
 The Royal Rose, the glory of our morn,
 But, ah, too much without a thorn.

VI.

Forgive (original mildness) this ill-govern'd zeal,
 'Tis all the angry slighted Muse can do
 In the pollution of these days ;
 No province now is left her but to rail,
 And poetry has lost the art to praise,
 Alas, the occasions are so few :
 None e'er but you,
 And your Almighty Master, knew

With heavenly peace of mind to bear
 (Free from our tyrant passions, anger, scorn, or fear)
 The giddy turns of pop'lar rage,
 And all the contradictions of a poison'd age ;
 The Son of God pronounc'd by the same breath
 Which straight pronounc'd his death ;
 And though I should but ill be understood
 In wholly equalling our sin and theirs,
 And measuring by the scanty thread of wit
 What we call holy, and great, and just, and good,
 (Methods in talk whereof our pride and ignorance make use),
 And which our wild ambition foolishly compares
 With endless and with infinite ;
 Yet pardon, native Albion, when I say,
 Among thy stubborn sons there haunts that spirit of Jews,
 That those forsaken wretches who to-day
 Revile his great ambassador,
 Seem to discover what they would have done
 (Were his humanity on earth once more)
 To his undoubted Master, Heaven's Almighty Son.

VII.

But zeal is weak and ignorant, though wond'rous proud,
 Though very turbulent and very loud ;
 The crazy composition shows,
 Like that fantastic medley in the idol's toes,
 Made up of iron mixt with clay,
 This crumbles into dust,
 That moulders into rust,
 Or melts by the first show'r away.
 Nothing is fix'd that mortals see or know,
 Unless, perhaps, some stars above be so ;

And those, alas, do show,
 Like all transcendent excellence below ;
 In both, false mediums cheat our sight,
 And far exalted objects lessen by their height :
 Thus primitive Sancroft moves too high
 To be observ'd by vulgar eye,
 And rolls the silent year
 On his own secret regular sphere,
 And sheds, though all unseen, his sacred influence
 here.

VIII.

Kind star, still may'st thou shed thy sacred influence here,
 Or from thy private peaceful orb appear ;
 For, sure, we want some guide from Heav'n, to show
 The way which ev'ry wand'ring fool below
 Pretends so perfectly to know ;
 And which, for aught I see, and much I fear,
 The world has wholly miss'd ;
 I mean the way which leads to Christ :
 Mistaken idiots ! see how giddily they run,
 Led blindly on by avarice and pride,
 What mighty numbers follow them ;
 Each fond of erring with his guide :
 Some whom ambition drives, seek Heaven's high
 Son
 In Cæsar's court, or in Jerusalem :
 Others, ignorantly wise,
 Among proud doctors and disputing pharisees :
 What could the sages gain but unbelieving scorn ;
 Their faith was so uncourtly, when they said
 That Heaven's high Son was in a village born ;
 That the world's Saviour had been

In a vile manger laid,
And foster'd in a wretched inn?

IX.

Necessity, thou tyrant conscience of the great,
Say, why the church is still led blindfold by the state ;

Why should the first be ruin'd and laid waste,
To mend dilapidations in the last ?
And yet the world, whose eyes are on our mighty
Prince,

Thinks heav'n has cancell'd all our sins,
And that his subjects share his happy influence ;
Follow the model close, for so I'm sure they should,
But wicked kings draw more examples than the good :

And divine Sancroft, weary with the weight
Of a declining church, by faction, her worst foe,
oppress'd,

Finding the mitre almost grown
A load as heavy as the crown,
Wisely retreated to his heavenly rest.

X.

Ah ! may no unkind earthquake of the state,
Nor hurricano from the crown,
Disturb the present mitre, as that fearful storm of late,

Which, in its dusky march along the plain,
Swept up whole churches as it list,
Wrapp'd in a whirlwind and a mist ;
Like that prophetic tempest in the virgin reign,
And swallow'd them at last, or flung them down.
Such were the storms good Sancroft long has borne ;

The mitre, which his sacred head has worn,
 Was, like his Master's Crown, inwreath'd with thorn.
 Death's sting is swallow'd up in victory at last,
 The bitter cup is from him past :
 Fortune in both extremes
 Though blasts from contrariety of winds,
 Yet to firm heavenly minds,
 Is but one thing under two different names ;
 And even the sharpest eye that has the prospect seen,
 Confesses ignorance to judge between ;
 And must to human reasoning opposite conclude,
 To point out which is moderation, which is fortitude.

XI.

Thus Sancroft, in the exaltation of retreat,
 Shows lustre that was shaded in his seat ;
 Short glimm'rings of the prelate glorified ;
 Which the disguise of greatness only served to hide.
 Why should the Sun, alas ! be proud
 To lodge behind a golden cloud ;
 Though fringed with ev'ning gold the cloud appears so gay,
 'Tis but a low-born vapour kindled by a ray :
 At length 'tis overblown and past,
 Puff'd by the people's spiteful blast,
 The dazzling glory dims their prostituted sight,
 No deflowered eye can face the naked light :
 Yet does this high perfection well proceed
 From strength of its own native seed,
 This wilderness, the world, like that poetic wood of old,
 Bears one, and but one branch of gold,
 Where the bless'd spirit lodges like the dove,

And which (to heavenly soil transplanted) will improve,
 To be, as 'twas below, the brightest plant above ;
 For, whate'er theologic lev'lers dream,
 There are degrees above I know
 As well as here below,
 (The goddess Muse herself has told me so)
 Where high patrician souls, dress'd heavenly gay,
 Sit clad in lawn of purer woven day.
 There some high-spirited throne to Sancroft shall be given,
 In the metropolis of Heaven ;
 Chief of the mitred saints, and from archprelate
 here,
 Translated to archangel there.

XII.

Since, happy saint, since it has been of late
 Either our blindness or our fate,
 To lose the providence of thy cares,
 Pity a miserable church's tears,
 That begs the pow'rful blessing of thy pray'rs.
 Some angel say, what were the nation's crimes,
 That sent these wild reformers to our times :
 Say what their senseless malice meant,
 To tear religion's lovely face :
 Strip her of ev'ry ornament and grace ;
 In striving to wash off th' imaginary paint ?
 Religion now does on her death-bed lie,
 Heart-sick of a high fever and consuming atrophy ;
 How the physicians swarm to show their mortal
 skill,
 And by their college arts methodically kill :
 Reformers and physicians differ but in name,
 One end in both, and the design the same ;

- Cordials are in their talk, while all they mean
 Is but the patient's death, and gain——
 Check in thy satire, angry Muse,
 Or a more worthy subject choose :
 Let not the outcasts of this outcast age
 Provoke the honour of my Muse's rage,
 Nor be thy mighty spirit rais'd,
 Since Heaven and Cato both are pleas'd—

[The rest of the poem is lost.]

ODE TO THE HON. SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE.

WRITTEN AT MOOR-PARK IN JUNE 1689.

I.

VIRTUE, the greatest of all monarchies !
 Till, its first emperor, rebellious man,
 Depos'd from off his seat,
 It fell and broke with its own weight
 Into small states and principalities,
 By many a petty lord possess'd,
 But ne'er since seated in one single breast.
 'Tis you who must this land subdue,
 The mighty conquest's left for you,
 The conquest and discovery too:
 Search out this Utopian ground,
 Virtue's Terra Incognita,
 Where none ever led the way,
 Nor ever since but in descriptions found ;
 Like the philosopher's stone,
 With rules to search it, yet obtain'd by none.

II.

We have too long been led astray ;
 Too long have our misguided souls been taught
 With rules from musty morals brought,
 'Tis you must put us in the way ;
 Let us (for shame !) no more be fed
 With antique relics of the dead,
 The gleanings of philosophy ;
 Philosophy, the lumber of the schools,
 The roguery of alchemy ;
 And we, the bubbled fools,
 Spend all our present life, in hopes of golden rules.

III.

But what does our proud ignorance Learning call ?
 We oddly Plato's paradox make good,
 Our knowledge is but mere remembrance all ;
 Remembrance is our treasure and our food ;
 Nature's fair table-book, our tender souls,
 We scrawl all o'er with old and empty rules,
 Stale memorandums of the schools :
 For learning's mighty treasures look
 In that deep grave a book ;
 Think that she there does all her treasures hide,
 And that her troubled ghost still haunts there since she died.

Confine her walks to colleges and schools ;
 Her priest, her train, and followers show
 As if they all were spectres too !
 They purchase knowledge at th' expense
 Of common breeding, common sense,
 And grow at once scholars and fools ;
 Affect ill-manner'd pedantry,
 Rudeness, ill-nature, incivility,

And, sick with dregs and knowledge grown,
Which greedily they swallow down,
Still cast it up, and nauseate company.

IV.

Curst be the wretch! nay doubly curst!
(If it may lawful be To curse our greatest enemy)
Who learn'd himself that heresy first
(Which since has seiz'd on all the rest)
That knowledge forfeits all humanity;
Taught us, like Spaniards, to be proud and poor,
And fling our scraps before our door!
Thrice happy you have 'scap'd this general pest;
Those mighty epithets, learn'd, good, and great,
Which we ne'er join'd before, but in romances meet,
We find in you at last unfited grown.
You cannot be compar'd to one:
I must like him that painted Venus' face,
Borrow from every one a grace;
Virgil and Epicurus will not do,
Their courting a retreat like you,
Unless I put in Cæsar's learning too:
Your happy frame at once controls
This great triumvirate of souls.

V.

Let not old Rome boast Fabius's fate;
He sav'd his country by delays,
But you by peace*.
You bought it a cheaper rate;

* Sir William Temple was ambassador to the States of Holland, and had a principal share in the negotiations which preceded the treaty of Nimeguen, 1679.

Nor has it left the usual bloody scar,
 To show it cost its price in war ;
 War that mad game the world so loves to play,
 And for it does so dearly pay ;
 For, though with loss, or victory, a while
 Fortune the gamesters does beguile,
 Yet at the last the box sweeps all away.

VI.

Only the laurel got by peace
 No thunder e'er can blast :
 Th' artillery of the skies
 Shoots to the earth and dies :
 And ever green and flourishing 'twill last,
 Nor dipt in blood, nor widow's tears, nor orphan's, cries.
 About the head crown'd with these bays,
 Like lambent fire, the lightning plays ;
 Nor, its triumphal cavalcade to grace,
 Makes up its solemn train with death ;
 It melts the sword of war, yet keeps it in the sheath.

VII.

The wily shifts of state, those juggler's tricks,
 Which we call deep designs and politics,
 (As in a theatre the ignorant fry,
 Because the cords escape their eye,
 Wonder to see the motions fly)
 Methinks, when you expose the scene,
 Down the ill-organ'd engines fall ;
 Off fly the vizards, and discover all :
 How plain I see through the deceit !
 How shallow, and how gross, the cheat !
 Look where the pulley's tied above !
 Great God ! (said I) what have I seen !
 On what poor engines move

The thoughts of monarchs and designs of states ;
 What petty motives rule their fates !
 How the mouse makes the mighty mountains shake !
 The mighty mountain labours with its birth,
 Away the frighten'd peasants fly,
 Scar'd at the unheard-of prodigy,
 Expect some great gigantic son of earth ;
 Lo ! it appears !
 See how they tremble ! how they quake !
 Out starts the little mouse, and mocks their idle fears.

VIII.

Then tell, dear favourite Muse !
 What serpent's that which still resorts,
 Still lurks in palaces and courts ?
 Take thy unwonted flight,
 And on the terrace light.
 See where she lies !
 See how she rears her head,
 And rolls about her dreadful eyes,
 To drive all virtue out, or look it dead !
 'Twas sure this basilisk sent Temple thence,
 And though as some ('tis said) for their defence
 Have worn a casement o'er their skin,
 So he wore his within,
 Made up of virtue and transparent innocence ;
 And though he oft renew'd the fight,
 And almost got priority of sight,
 He ne'er could overcome her quite,
 In pieces cut, the viper still did reunite ;
 Till, at last, tir'd with loss of time and ease,
 Resolv'd to give himself, as well as country, peace. *

* Sir William Temple, disgusted with the arbitrary measures adopted in the last year of Charles II.'s reign, retired to Moor-

IX.

Sing, belov'd Muse! the pleasures of retreat,
 And in some untouch'd virgin strain,
 Show the delights thy sister Nature yields;
 Sing of thy vales, sing of thy woods, sing of thy fields;

Go, publish o'er the plain
 How mighty a proselyte you gain!
 How noble a reprisal on the great!

How is the Muse luxuriant grown!
 Whene'er she takes this flight,
 She soars clear out of sight,
 These are the paradises of her own:

Thy Pegasus, like an unruly horse,
 Though ne'r so gently led,
 To the lov'd pasture where he us'd to feed,
 Runs violent o'er his usual course.

Wake from thy wanton dreams,
 Come from thy dear-lov'd streams,
 The crooked paths of wandering Thames,
 Fain the fair nymph would stay,
 Oft she looks back in vain,
 Oft 'gainst her fountain does complain,
 And softly steals in many windings down,
 As loth to see the hated court and town!
 And murmurs as she glides away.

X.

In this new happy scene
 Are nobler subjects for your learned pen;

Park, with a resolution never again to engage in public business. Nor did the favour he enjoyed with King William, on his being solicited to be a secretary of state after the revolution, induce him to change his resolution.

Here we expect from you
 More than your predecessor Adam knew ;
 Whatever moves our wonder, or our sport,
 Whatever serves for innocent emblems of the court ;
 How that which we a kernel see,
 (Whose well-compacted forms escape the light, Unpierc'd by the blunt rays of sight)
 Shall ere long grow into a tree ;
 Whence takes it its increase, and whence its birth,
 Or from the sun, or from the air, or from the earth,
 Where all the fruitful atoms lie ;
 How some go downward to the root,
 Some more ambitiously upward fly,
 And form the leaves, the branches, and the fruit.
 You strove to cultivate a barren court in vain,
 Your garden's better worth your noble pain,
 Here mankind fell, and hence must rise again.

XI.

Shall I believe a spirit so divine
 Was cast in the same mould with mine ?
 Why then does Nature so unjustly share
 Among her elder sons the whole estate,
 And all her jewels and her plate ?
 Poor we ! cadets of Heaven, not worth her care,
 Take up at best with lumber and the leavings of a fare :
 Some she binds 'prentice to the spade,
 Some to the drudgery of a trade ;
 Some she does to Egyptian bondage draw,
 Bids us make bricks, yet sends us to look out for straw :
 Some she condemns for life to try
 To dig the leaden mines of deep philosophy ;
 Me she has to the Muse's gallies tied,

In vain I strive to cross the spacious main,
 In vain I tug and pull the oar,
 And when I almost reach the shore,
 Straight the Muse turns the helm, and I launch out again :
 And yet, to feed my pride,
 Whene'er I mourn, stops my complaining breath,
 With promise of a mad reversion after death.

XII.

Then, Sir, accept this worthless verse,
 The tribute of an humble Muse,
 'Tis all the portion of my niggard stars ;
 Nature the hidden spark did at my birth infuse,
 And kindled first with indolence and ease ;
 And since too oft debauch'd by praise,
 'Tis now grown an incurable disease :
 In vain to quench this foolish fire I try
 In wisdom and philosophy :
 In vain all wholesome herbs I sow,
 Where nought but weeds will grow :
 Whate'er I plant (like corn on barren earth)
 By an equivocal birth
 Seeds, and runs up to poetry.

ODE TO KING WILLIAM,

ON HIS SUCCESSES IN IRELAND.

[The recovery of this Ode was owing to the exertions of Mr Nichol. (See his Select Collection of Poems, 1778.) In its structure of verse, and turn of thought, there is an obvious imitation of Dryden's Eulogy upon Oliver Cromwell. This, among other circumstances, shows, that the taste of Swift's youth was formed not upon the better compositions of the end of the seventeenth century, but upon those which had been fashionable in the beginning of Charles II.'s reign. This he probably owed to his residence with Temple.]

To purchase kingdoms and to buy renown,
 Are arts peculiar to dissembling France;
 You, mighty monarch, nobler actions crown,
 And solid virtue does your name advance.

Your matchless courage with your prudence joins,
 The glorious structure of your fame to raise;
 With its own light your dazzling glory shines,
 And into adoration turns our praise.

Had you by dull succession gain'd your crown
 (Cowards are monarchs by that title made,)
 Part of your merit Chance would call her own,
 And half your virtues had been lost in shade.

But now your worth its just rewards shall have :
What trophies and what triumphs are your due !
Who could so well a dying nation save,
At once deserve a crown, and gain it too !

You saw how near we were to ruin brought,
You saw th' impetuous torrent rolling on ;
And timely on the coming danger thought,
Which we could neither obviate nor shun.

Britannia stripp'd of her sole guard, the laws,
Ready to fall Rome's bloody sacrifice ;
You straight stepp'd in, and from the monster's jaws
Did bravely snatch the lovely, helpless prize.

Nor this is all ; as glorious is the care
To preserve conquests, as at first to gain :
In this your virtue claims a double share,
Which, what is bravely won, does well maintain.

Your arm has now your rightful title show'd,
An arm on which all Europe's hopes depend,
To which they look as to some guardian God,
That must their doubtful liberty defend.

Amaz'd, thy action at the Boyne we see !
When Schomberg started at the vast design :
The boundless glory all redounds to thee,
Th' impulse, the fight, th' event, were wholly thine.

The brave attempt does all our foes disarm ;
You need but now give orders and command,
Your name shall the remaining work perform,
And spare the labour of your conquering hand.

France does in vain her feeble arts apply,
 To interrupt the fortune of your course :
 Your influence does the vain attacks defy
 Of secret malice, or of open force.

Boldly we hence the brave commencement date
 Of glorious deeds, that must all tongues employ ;
 William's the pledge and earnest given by fate,
 Of England's glory, and her lasting joy.

ODE TO THE ATHENIAN SOCIETY. *

Moor Park, Feb. 14, 1691.

[The noted John Dunton, an author and bookseller, who often afterwards encountered the edge of Swift's ridicule, about the year 1690-1, set forth a literary plan, or project, as he called it, for an association of wits, to be entitled, The Athenian Society. According to his own account, the body, thus formed, was only second to the Royal Society, which led him justly to express his admiration, why the "great Sprat did not oblige the age with a second best history of the second best institution for the promotion of learning and removing epidemic ignorance." If the knowledge of this second best institution was at all inferior to that of their great prototype, their readiness of communication made some amends; for they proposed not only to answer curious queries in divinity, physic, law, phiosophy, history, poetry, mathematics, trade, and all other questions proposed by either sex, or in any language, but also to give a complete review of all new publications; and, in case they were favoured with the communication of any curious experiment, to insert it in their Mercury, with a demonstration which the sender could not adhibit to it. This promising annunciation instantly produced a volley of queries, some grave, some gay, some in mockery, and some in sad earnest; all which the society answered in their Weekly Mercuries, with more learning, and with as much dulness as might have been expected from their assurance. The Athenian Mercuries extended at length to twenty volumes, from which were selected three octavo volumes, 1706, and a supplement in 1710, entitled the Athenian Oracle, and professing to contain an entire collection of what was valuable in the publications of the society.

That Swift should have looked up with admiration to this "Oracle, this wooden God," can only be pardoned by those who have known in what extraordinary and disproportionate respect an author who has attained, however unworthily, the attention of the public, is regarded by a young man whose instinctive talents for literature lead him to estimate the labours of such a person, less by their intrinsic merit, than by their having attained the reward of public notice, to which his own secret feelings induce him to aspire. It cannot, however, be disguised, that Swift, though he might regret having offered incense at so unworthy a shrine, had no cause to lament the value of the tribute. In point of poetical merit, the Athenian Society did not merit a more valuable eulogy than the following ode; and assuredly it does not exceed even their deserts.]

I.

As when the deluge first began to fall,
 That mighty ebb never to flow again,
 When this huge body's moisture was so great,
 It quite o'ercame the vital heat;
 That mountain which was highest first of all,
 Appear'd above the universal main,
 To bless the primitive sailor's weary sight!
 And 'twas perhaps Parnassus, if in height

It be as great as 'tis in fame,
 And nigh to Heaven as is its name;
 So, after the inundation of a war,
 When Learning's little household did embark,
 With her world's fruitful system, in her sacred ark,
 At the first ebb of noise and fear,
 Philosophy's exalted head appears;
 And the Dove-Muse will now no longer stay,
 But plumes her silver wings, and flies away;
 And now a laurel wreath she brings from far,
 To crown the happy conqueror,
 To shew the flood begins to cease,
 And brings the dear reward of victory and peace.

II.

The eager Muse took wing upon the waves' decline.
 When war her cloudy aspect just withdrew,
 When the bright sun of peace began to shine,
 And for a while in heavenly contemplation sat,
 On the high top of peaceful Ararat:
 And pluck'd a laurel branch (for laurel was the first that grew,
 The first of plants after the thunder-storm and rain)
 And thence, with joyful nimble wing,
 Flew dutifully back again,
 And made an humble chaplet for the king.*
 And the Dove-Muse is fled once more,
 (Glad of the victory, yet frighten'd at the war)
 And now discovers from afar
 A peaceful and a flourishing shore:
 No sooner did she land
 On the delightful strand,

* The Ode I writ to the king in Ireland.—SWIFT.—See this in p. 21.

Than straight she sees the country all around,
 Where fatal Neptune rul'd erewhile,
 Scatter'd with flow'ry vales, with fruitful gardens
 crown'd,
 And many a pleasant wood !
 As if the universal Nile
 Had rather water'd it than drown'd :
 It seems some floating piece of Paradise,
 Preserv'd by wonder from the flood,
 Long wandering through the deep, as we are told
 Fam'd Delos did of old ;
 And the transported Muse imagin'd it
 To be a fitter birth-place for the God of wit,
 Or the much-talk'd oracular grove ;
 When, with amazing joy, she hears
 An unknown music all around,
 Charming her greedy ears,
 With many a heavenly song,
 Of nature and of art, of deep philosophy and love ;
 While angels tune the voice, and God inspires the tongue.
 In vain she catches at the empty sound,
 In vain pursues the music with her longing eye,
 And courts the wanton echoes as they fly.

III.

Pardon, ye great unknown, and far-exalted men, *
 The wild excursions of a youthful pen ;

* I cannot help inserting one question put to these " great unknown and far-exalted men," with their sapient response. What Swift would have thought of their dulness at a future period of his life it is vain to inquire.

" Query. Since in your advertisement you make it known, that a surgeon is taken into your society, I have thought fit to propound the following question, withal assuring you the

Forgive a young and (almost) virgin Muse,
 Whom blind and eager curiosity
 (Yet curiosity, they say,
 Is in her sex a crime needs no excuse)
 Has forced to grope her uncouth way,
 After a mighty light that leads her wandering eye:
 No wonder then she quits the narrow path of sense
 For a dear ramble through impertinence ;
 Impertinence! the scurvy of mankind.
 And all we fools, who are the greater part of it,
 Though we be of two different factions still,
 Both the good-natur'd and the ill,
 Yet wheresoe'er you look, you'll always find matter of fact is true. A sailor on board the fleet, by an unlucky accident broke his leg, being in drink, and refusing the assistance of the surgeon of the ship, called for a piece of new tarpaulin that lay on the deck, which he rolled some turns about his leg, tying up all close with a few hoopsticks, and was able immediately to walk round the ship, never keeping his bed one day. I would know whether the cure is not to be attributed to the emplastic nature of the tarred cloth bound on strait with the hoopsticks, &c. or rather, whether it may not be solved according to the Cartesian philosophy?

“Answer. Des Cartes has less to do with this question than Copernicus, who, in a drunken fit, by the course of his brain, found out the great secret of the world's turning round; and so might our drunken sailor be inspired with this novel way of curing himself. But to the question, If the lesser focil was only broken, he might not be decumbent one day; the greater (his head being pretty light) being able to support his body; but if both the bones were broken, he could not stand, unless the splinters that were tied round his leg came below his heel, and rested upon his ham, which would take away that weight the leg would otherwise bear. Besides, the tarpaulin is a good catemgatic, which, with a sober and a regular diet, might succeed, though it is no rule to walk by.”—Athenian Oracle, Vol. II. p. 349.

It is hardly necessary to point out to the reader, unless qualified by nature to join the Athenian Society, that the fracture must have befallen a wooden leg.

We join, like flies and wasps, in buzzing about wit.
 In me, who am of the first sect of these,
 All merit, that transcends the humble rules
 Of my own dazzled scanty sense,
 Begets a kinder folly and impertinence
 Of admiration and of praise.
 And our good brethren of the surly sect,
 Must e'en all herd us with their kindred fools :
 For though possess'd of present vogue, they've made
 Railing, a rule of wit, and obloquy, a trade ;
 Yet the same want of brains produces each effect.
 And you, whom Pluto's helm does wisely shroud
 From us, the blind and thoughtless crowd,
 Like the fam'd hero in his mother's cloud,
 Who both our follies and impertinences see,
 Do laugh perhaps at theirs, and pity mine and me.

IV.

But censure's to be understood
 Th' authentic mark of the elect,
 Th' public stamp Heaven sets on all that's great and good,
 Our shallow search and judgment to direct.
 The war methinks, has made,
 Our wit and learning narrow as our trade ;
 Instead of boldly sailing far, to buy
 A stock of wisdom and philosophy,
 We fondly stay at home, in fear
 Of every censuring privateer ;
 Forcing a wretched trade by beating down the sale,
 And selling basely by retail.
 The wits, I mean the atheists of the age,
 Who fain would rule the pulpit, as they do the stage,
 Wond'rous refiners of philosophy,
 Of morals and divinity,

By the new modish system of reducing all to sense,
 Against all logic, and concluding laws,
 Do own th' effects of Providence,
 And yet deny the cause.

V.

This hopeful sect, now it begins to see
 How little, very little, do prevail
 Their first and chiefest force
 To censure, to cry down and rail,
 Not knowing what, or where, or who you be,
 Will quickly take another course :
 And, by their never-failing ways
 Of solving all appearances they please,
 We soon shall see them to their ancient methods fall,
 And straight deny you to be men, or any thing at all.
 I laugh at the grave answer they will make,
 Which they have always ready, general, and cheap :
 'Tis but to say, that what we daily meet,
 And by a fond mistake
 Perhaps imagine to be wond'rous wit,
 And think, alas ! to be by mortals writ,
 Is but a crowd of atoms justling in a heap :
 Which from eternal seeds begun,
 Justling some thousand years, till ripen'd by the sun :
 They're now, just now, as naturally born,
 As from the womb of earth a field of corn.

VI.

But as for poor contented me,
 Who must my weakness and my ignorance confess,
 That I believe in much I ne'er can hope to see ;
 Methinks I'm satisfy'd to guess,
 That this new, noble, and delightful scene,
 Is wonderfully mov'd by some exalted men,
 Who have well studied in the world's disease,

(That epidemic error and depravity,
 Or in our judgment or our eye)
 That what surprises us can only please.
 We often search contentedly the whole world round,
 To make some great discovery,
 And scorn it when 'tis found.
 Just so the mighty Nile has suffer'd in its fame,
 Because 'tis said (and perhaps only said)
 We've found a little inconsiderable head,
 That feeds the huge unequal stream.
 Consider human folly, and you'll quickly own,
 That all the praises it can give,
 By which some fondly boast they shall forever live,
 Won't pay th' impertinence of being known :
 Else why should the fam'd Lydian king,
 (Whom all the charms of an usurped wife and state,
 With all that power unfelt, courts mankind to be great,
 Did with new unexperienc'd glories wait)
 Still wear, still doat on his invisible ring ?

VII.

Were I to form a regular thought of Fame,
 Which is, perhaps, as hard t' imagine right,
 As to paint Echo to the sight,
 I would not draw th' idea from an empty name ;
 Because, alas ! when we all die,
 Careless and ignorant posterity,
 Although they praise the learning and the wit,
 And though the title seems to shew
 The name and man by whom the book was writ,
 Yet how shall they be brought to know,
 Whether that very name was he, or you, or I ?
 Less should I daub it o'er with transitory praise,
 And water-colours of these days :

These days ! where e'en th' extravagance of poetry
 Is at a loss for figures to express
 Men's folly, whimsies, and inconstancy,
 And by a faint description makes them less.
 Then tell us what is Fame, where shall we search for it?

Look where exalted Virtue and Religion sit,
 Enthron'd with heavenly Wit !
 Look where you see
 The greatest scorn of learned vanity !
 (And then how much a nothing is mankind !
 Whose reason is weighed down by popular air,
 Who, by that, vainly talks of baffling death ;
 And hopes to lengthen life by a transfusion of breath,
 Which yet whoe'er examines right will find
 To be an art as vain as bottling up of wind !)
 And when you find out these, believe true Fame is there,
 Far above all reward, yet to which all is due :
 And this, ye great unknown ! is only known in you.

VIII.

The juggling sea-god, when by chance trepann'd
 By some instructed querist sleeping on the sand,
 Impatient of all answers, straight became
 A stealing brook, and strove to creep away
 Into his native sea,
 Vext at their follies, murmur'd in his stream ;
 But disappointed of his fond desire,
 Would vanish in a pyramid of fire.
 This surly slippery God, when he design'd
 To furnish his escapes,
 Ne'er borrow'd more variety of shapes
 Than you to please and satisfy mankind,

And seem (almost) transform'd to water, flame, and air,
 So well you answer all phenomena there :
 Though madmen and the wits, philosophers, and fools,
 With all that factious or enthusiastic dotards dream,
 And all the incoherent jargon of the schools ;
 Though all the fumes of fear, hope, love, and shame,
 Contrive to shock your minds with many a senseless doubt ;
 Doubts where the Delphic God would grope in ignorance and night,
 The God of learning and of light
 Would want a God himself to help him out.

IX.

Philosophy, as it before us lies,
 Seems to have borrow'd some ungrateful taste
 Of doubts, impertinence, and niceties,
 From every age through which it pass'd,
 But always with a stronger relish of the last.
 This beauteous queen, by Heaven design'd
 To be the great original
 For man to dress and polish his uncourtly mind,
 In what mock habits have they put her since the fall !
 More oft in fools and madmen's hands than sages,
 She seems a medley of all ages,
 With a huge farthingale to swell her fustian stuff,
 A new commode, a topknot, and a ruff,
 Her face patch'd o'er with modern pedantry,
 With a long sweeping train
 Of comments and disputes, ridiculous and vain,
 All of old cut with a new dye :
 How soon have you restor'd her charms,

And rid her of her lumber and her books,
 Drest her again genteel and neat,
 And rather tight than great!
 How fond we are to court her to our arms?
 How much of heaven is in her naked looks!

X.

Thus the deluding Muse oft blinds me to her ways,
 And ev'n my very thoughts transfers
 And changes all to beauty and the praise
 Of that proud tyrant sex of hers.
 The rebel Muse, alas! takes part,
 But with my own rebellious heart,
 And you with fatal and immortal wit conspire
 To fan th' unhappy fire.
 Cruel unknown! what is it you intend?
 Ah! could you, could you hope a poet for your friend!
 Rather forgive what my first transport said:
 May all the blood, which shall by woman's scorn
 be shed,
 Lie upon you and on your children's head!
 For you (ah! did I think I e'er should live to see
 The fatal time when that could be!)
 Have ev'n increas'd their pride and cruelty.
 Woman seems now above all vanity grown,
 Still boasting of her great unknown
 Platonic champions, gain'd without one female wile,
 Or the vast charges of a smile;
 Which 'tis a shame to see how much of late
 You've taught the covetous wretches to o'errate,
 And which they've now the consciences to weigh
 In the same balance with our tears,
 And with such scanty wages pay
 The bondage and the slavery of years.

Let the vain sex dream on ; the empire comes from us ;
 And had they common generosity,
 They would not use thus.
 Well—though you've rais'd her to this high degree,
 Ourselves are rais'd as well as she ;
 And, spite of all that they or you can do,
 'Tis pride and happiness enough to me,
 Still to be of the same exalted sex with you.

XI.

Alas, how fleeting and how vain,
 Is ev'n the nobler man, our learning and our wit !
 I sigh whene'er I think of it :
 As at the closing of an unhappy scene
 Of some great king and conqueror's death,
 When the sad melancholy Muse
 Stays but to catch his utmost breath.
 I grieve, this nobler work most happily begun
 So quickly and so wonderfully carry'd on,
 May fall at last to interest, folly, and abuse.
 There is a noontide in our lives,
 Which still the sooner it arrives,
 Although we boast our winter sun looks bright,
 And foolishly are glad to see it at its height,
 Yet so much sooner comes the long and gloomy night.
 No conquest ever yet begun,
 And by one mighty hero carried to its height,
 E'er flourish'd under a successor or a son ;
 It lost some mighty pieces through all hands it past,
 And vanish'd to an empty title in the last.
 For, when the animating mind is fled (Which nature never can retain,
 Nor e'er call back again)
 The body, though gigantic, lies all cold and dead.

XII.

And thus undoubtedly 'twill fare
With what unhappy men shall dare
To be successors to these great unknown,
On Learning's high establish'd throne.
Censure, and Pedantry, and Pride,
Numberless nations, stretching far and wide,
Shall (I foresee it) soon with Gothic swarms come forth
From Ignorance's universal North,
And with blind rage break all this peaceful government:
Yet shall these traces of your wit remain,
Like a just map, to tell the vast extent
Of conquest in your short and happy reign:
And to all future mankind shew
How strange a paradox is true,
That men who liv'd and died without a name
Are the chief heroes in the sacred list of fame.

TO MR CONGREVE.

WRITTEN IN NOVEMBER 1693.

[As the following verses are of a consolatory turn, they would seem to have been written after the representation of Congreve's second play, the Double Dealer, which was acted in 1693-4, and appears, from some passages in the dedication, to have been less favourably treated by the critics than the Old Bachelor. Swift's attachment to Congreve continued sincerely ardent, even after politics had severed them. His intercession with the Lord-Treasurer was the means of Congreve's retaining his offices under the Tory administration. See Vol. II. p. 283.]

THRICE, with a prophet's voice, and prophet's pow'r,
The Muse was called in a poetic hour,
And insolently thrice, the slighted maid
Dared to suspend her unregarded aid ;
Then with that grief we form in spirits divine,
Pleads for her own neglect, and thus reproaches
mine :

Once highly honour'd ! false is the pretence
You make to truth, retreat, and innocence !
Who, to pollute my shades, bring'st with thee down
The most ungen'rous vices of the town ;
Ne'er sprung a youth from out this isle before
I once esteem'd, and lov'd, and favour'd more,

Nor ever maid endured such courtlike scorn,
 So much in mode, so very city-born;
 'Tis with a foul design the muse you send,
 Like a cast mistress to your wicked friend;
 But find some new address, some fresh deceit
 Nor practise such an antiquated cheat;
 These are the beaten methods of the stews,
 Stale forms of course, all mean deceivers use,
 Who barbarously think to 'scape reproach,
 By prostituting her they first debauch.

Thus did the muse severe unkindly blame
 This off'ring long design'd to Congreve's fame;
 First chid the zeal as unpoetic fire,
 Which soon his merit forced her to inspire;
 Then call this verse, that speaks her largest aid,
 The greatest compliment she ever made,
 And wisely judge, no pow'r beneath divine
 Could leap the bounds which part your world and mine;

For, youth, believe, to you unseen, is fix'd
 A mighty gulf, unpassable betwixt.

Nor tax the goddess of a mean design
 To praise your parts by publishing of mine;
 That be my thought when some large bulky writ
 Shows in the front the ambition of my wit;
 There to surmount what bears me up, and sing
 Like the victorious wren perch'd on the eagle's wing;*

This could I do, and proudly o'er him tower,
 Were my desires but heighten'd to my power.

* This absurd simile was transferred by Colley Cibber to the linnet, in the notable lines,

Perch'd on the eagle's towering wing,
 The lowly linnet loves to sing.

Godlike the force of my young Congreve's bays,
 Soft'ning the Muse's thunder into praise;
 Sent to assist an old unvanquish'd pride,
 That looks with scorn on half mankind beside;
 A pride that well suspends poor mortals' fate,
 Gets between them and my resentment's weight,
 Stands in the gap 'twixt me and wretched men,
 T' avert th' impending judgments of my pen.

Thus I look down with mercy on the age,
 By hopes my Congreve will reform the stage:
 For never did poetic mind before
 Produce a richer vein, or cleaner ore;
 The bullion stamp'd in your refining mind
 Serves by retail to furnish half mankind.
 With indignation I behold your wit
 Forced on me, crack'd, and clipp'd, and counterfeit,
 By vile pretenders, who a stock maintain
 From broken scraps and filings of your brain.
 Through native dross your share is hardly known,
 And by short views mistook for all their own;
 So small the gain those from your wit do reap,
 Who blend it into folly's larger heap,
 Like the sun's scatter'd beams which loosely pass,
 When some rough hand breaks the assembling glass.

Yet want your critics no just cause to rail,
 Since knaves are ne'er obliged for what they steal.
 These pad on wit's high road, and suits maintain
 With those they rob, by what their trade does gain.
 Thus censure seems that fiery froth which breeds
 O'er the sun's face, and from his heat proceeds,
 Crusts o'er the day, shadowing its partent beam,
 As ancient nature's modern masters dream;
 This bids some curious praters here below
 Call Titan sick, because their sight is so;
 And well, methinks, does this allusion fit
 To scribblers, and the god of light and wit;

Those who by wild delusions entertain
 A lust of rhyming for a poet's vein,
 Raise envy's clouds to leave themselves in night,
 But can no more obscure my Congreve's light
 Than swarms of gnats, that wanton in a ray
 Which gave them birth, can rob the world of day.

What northern hive pour'd out these foes to wit?
 Whence came these Goths to overrun the pit?*

* In the original dedication to the Double Dealer, as published in 1694, there are some very wrathful and contemptuous passages respecting the critics, which Congreve's better judgment omitted, or softened, in subsequent editions. Swift appears to have caught the tone of his friend from such a tirade as the following:—

“ And give me leave, without any flattery to you or vanity in myself, to tell my illiterate critics, as an answer to their impotent objections, that they have found fault with that which has been pleasing to you. This play, in relation to my concern for its reputation, succeeded before it was acted; for, through your early patronage, it had an audience of several persons of the first rank both in wit and quality; and their allowance of it was a consequence of your approbation. Therefore, if I really wish it might have had a more popular reception, it is not at all in consideration of myself, but because I wish well, and would gladly contribute to the benefit of the stage, and diversion of the town. They were (not long since) so kind to a very imperfect comedy of mine, that I thought myself justly indebted to them all my endeavours for an entertainment that might merit some little of that applause which they were so lavish of when I thought I had no title to it. But I find they are to be treated cheaply, and I have been at an unnecessary expence.

“ I have, since the acting of this play, hearkened after the objections which have been made to it: for I was conscious where a true critic might have put me upon my defence. I was prepared for their attack, and am pretty confident I could have vindicated some parts, and excused others; and where there were any plain miscarriages, I would most ingenuously have confessed them. But I have not heard any thing said sufficient to provoke an answer. Some little snarling and backbiting there has been, but I don't

How would you blush the shameful birth to hear
 Of those you so ignobly stoop to fear;
 For, ill to them, long have I travell'd since,
 Round all the circles of impertinence,
 Search'd in the nest where every worm did lie
 Before it grew a city butterfly;
 I'm sure I found them other kind of things
 Than those with backs of silk and golden wings;
 A search, no doubt, as curious and as wise
 As virtuosoes in dissecting flies:
 For, could you think? the fiercest foes you dread,
 And court in prologues, all are country bred;
 Bred in my scene, and for the poet's sins
 Adjourn'd from tops and grammar to the inns;
 Those beds of dung, where schoolboys sprout up beaux
 Far sooner than the nobler mushroom grows:
 These are the lords of the poetic schools,
 Who preach the saucy pedantry of rules;
 Those pow'rs the critics, who may boast the odds
 O'er Nile, with all its wilderness of gods;
 Nor could the nations kneel to viler shapes,
 Which worshipp'd cats, and sacrificed to apes;
 And can you think the wise forbear to laugh
 At the warm zeal that breeds this golden calf?
 Haply you judge these lines severely writ
 Against the proud usurpers of the pit;
 Stay while I tell my story, short, and true;
 To draw conclusions shall be left to you;
 Nor need I ramble far to force a rule,
 But lay the scene just here at Farnham school.

know one well-mouth'd cur that has opened at all."—Congreve's Dedication to the Right Honourable Charles Montague, prefixed to his Double Dealer. London, 1694.

Last year, a lad hence by his parents sent
 With other cattle to the city went;
 Where having cast his coat, and well pursued
 The methods most in fashion to be lewd,
 Return'd a finish'd spark this summer down,
 Stock'd with the freshest gibberish of the town;
 A jargon form'd from the lost language, wit,
 Confounded in that Babel of the pit;
 Form'd by diseased conceptions, weak and wild,
 Sick lust of souls, and an abortive child;
 Born between whores and fops, by lewd compacts,
 Before the play, or else between the acts;
 Nor wonder, if from such polluted minds
 Should spring such short and transitory kinds,
 Or crazy rules to make us wits by rote,
 Last just as long as ev'ry cuckoo's note:
 What bungling, rusty tools, are us'd by fate!
 'Twas in an evil hour to urge my hate,
 My hate, whose lash just Heaven has long decreed
 Shall on a day make sin and folly bleed:*
 When man's ill genius to my presence sent
 This wretch, to rouse my wrath, for ruin meant;
 Who in his idiom vile, with Gray's-Inn grace,
 Squander'd his noisy talents to my face;
 Nam'd every player on his fingers ends,
 Swore all the wits were his peculiar friends;
 Talk'd with that saucy and familiar ease
 Of Wycherly, and you, and Mr Bays: †
 Said, how a late report your friends had vex'd,
 Who heard you meant to write heroics next;

* Thus early in life did Swift feel the efforts of his genius struggling for birth, and prognosticate its vigorous exertions against vice and folly, when arrived at maturity.—S.

† Dryden, whom Swift never mentions with reverence.

For, tragedy, he knew, would lose you quite,
And told you so at Will's but t'other night. *

Thus are the lives of fools a sort of dreams,
Rend'ring shades, things, and substances of names;
Such high companions may delusion keep,
Lords are a footboy's cronies in his sleep.
As a fresh miss, by fancy, face, and gown,
Render'd the topping beauty of the town,
Draws ev'ry rhyming, prating, dressing sot,
To boast of favours that he never got;
Of which, whoe'er lacks confidence to prate,
Brings his good parts and breeding in debate;
And not the meanest coxcomb you can find,
But thanks his stars, that Phillis has been kind;
Thus prostitute my Congreve's name is grown
To ev'ry lewd pretender of the town.
'Troth I could pity you; but this is it,
You find, to be the fashionable wit;
These are the slaves whom reputation chains,
Whose maintenance requires no help from brains,
For, should the vilest scribbler to the pit,
Whom sin and want e'er furnish'd out a wit;
Whose name must not within my lines be shown,
Lest here it live, when perish'd with his own; †
Should such a wretch usurp my Congreve's place,
And choose out wits who ne'er have seen his face;
I'll be my life but the dull cheat would pass,
Nor need the lion's skin conceal the ass;

* There was probably some report stirring concerning the Mourning Bride, which, however, did not appear till 1697.

† To this resolution Swift ever after adhered; for of the infinite multitude of libellers who personally attacked him, there is not the name mentioned of any one of them throughout his works; and thus, together with their writings, have they been consigned to eternal oblivion.—S.

Yes, that beau's look, that vice, those critic ears,
Must needs be right, so well resembling theirs.

Perish the Muse's hour, thus vainly spent
In satire, to my Congreve's praises meant ;
In how ill season her resentments rule,
What's that to her if mankind be a fool ?
Happy beyond a private muse's fate,
In pleasing all that's good among the great, *
Where though her elder sisters crowding throng,
She still is welcome with her inn'cent song ;
Whom were my Congreve blest to see and know,
What poor regards would merit all below !
How proudly would he haste the joy to meet,
And drop his laurel at Apollo's feet.

Here by a mountain's side, a reverend cave
Gives murmuring passage to a lasting wave ;
'Tis the world's wat'ry hour-glass streaming fast,
Time is no more when th' utmost drop is past ;
Here, on a better day, some druid dwelt,
And the young muse's early favour felt ;
Druid, a name she does with pride repeat,
Confessing Albion once her darling seat ;
Far in this primitive cell might we pursue
Our predecessors' footsteps still in view ;
Here would we sing—But, ah ! you think I dream,
And the bad world may well believe the same ;
Yes : you are all malicious standers by,
While two fond lovers prate, the Muse, and I.

Since thus I wander from my first intent,
Nor am that grave adviser which I meant,
Take this short lesson from the god of bays,
And let my friend apply it as he please :

* This alludes to Sir William Temple, to whom he gives the name of Apollo in a few lines after.—S.

Beat not the dirty paths where vulgar feet have trod,

But give the vigorous fancy room.

For when like stupid alchymists you try

To fix this nimble god,

This volatile mercury,

The subtile spirit all flies up in fume ;

Nor shall the bubbled virtuoso find

More than a fade insipid mixture left behind. *

While thus I write, vast shoals of critics come,

And on my verse pronounce their saucy doom ;

The muse, like some bright country virgin, shows

Fall'n by mishap among a knot of beaux ;

They, in their lewd and fashionable prate,

Rally her dress, her language, and her gait ;

Spend their base coin before the bashful maid,

Current like copper, and as often paid :

She, who on shady banks has joy'd to sleep ;

Near better animals, her father's sheep :

Shamed and amazed, beholds the chattering throng,

To think what cattle she is got among ;

But with the odious smell and sight annoy'd,

In haste she does th' offensive herd avoid. †

'Tis time to bid my friend a long farewell,

The Muse retreats far in yon crystal cell ;

Faint inspiration sickens as she flies,

Like distant echo spent, the spirit dies.

In this descending sheet you'll haply find
Some short refreshment for your weary mind,

* Out of an Ode I writ, inscribed "The Poet." The rest of it is lost.—Original.

† Would not one imagine that Swift had at this time already conceived his idea of the Yahoos?—S.

Nought it contains is common or unclean,
And once drawn up, is ne'er let down again*.

OCCASIONED BY

SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE'S
LATE ILLNESS AND RECOVERY.

WRITTEN IN DECEMBER 1693.

STRANGE to conceive, how the same objects strike
At distant hours the mind with forms so like!
Whether in time, Deduction's broken chain
Meets, and salutes her sister link again;
Or hunted Fancy, by a circling flight,
Comes back with joy to its own seat at night;
Or whether dead Imagination's ghost
Oft hovers where alive it haunted most;
Or if Thought's rolling globe, her circle run,
Turns up old objects to the soul her sun;
Or loves the muse to walk with conscious pride
O'er the glad scene whence first she rose a bride:
Be what it will; late near yon whisp'ring stream,
Where her own Temple was her darling theme;
There first the visionary sound was heard,
When to poetic view the Muse appear'd.
Such seem'd her eyes, as when an evening ray
Gives glad farewell to a tempestuous day;
Weak is the beam to dry up nature's tears,
Still ev'ry tree the pendent sorrow wears;

* The allusion, I am afraid, is to the vision of St Paul in the Acts of the Apostles.

Such are the smiles where drops of crystal show
Approaching joy at strife with parting woe.

As when to scare th' ungrateful or the proud
Tempests long frown, and thunder threatens loud,
Till the blest sun to give kind dawn of grace
Darts weeping beams across Heaven's wat'ry face ;
When soon the peaceful bow unstring'd is shown,
A sign God's dart is shot, and wrath o'erblown ;
Such to unhallowed sight the Muse divine
Might seem, when first she rais'd her eyes to mine.

What mortal change does in thy face appear,
Lost youth, she cried, since first I met thee here !
With how undecent clouds are overcast
Thy looks, when every cause of grief is past !
Unworthy the glad tidings which I bring,
Listen while the Muse thus teaches thee to sing :

As parent earth, burst by imprison'd winds,
Scatters strange agues o'er men's sickly minds,
And shakes the atheist's knees ; such ghastly fear
Late I beheld on every face appear ;
Mild Dorothea, * peaceful, wise, and great,
Trembling beheld the doubtful hand of fate ;
Mild Dorothea, whom we both have long
Not dared to injure with our lowly song ;
Sprung from a better world, and chosen then
The best companion for the best of men :
As some fair pile, yet spared by zeal and rage
Lives pious witness of a better age ;
So men may see what once was womankind,
In the fair shrine of Dorothea's mind.

* Sister to Sir William Temple.—S. Lady Gifford, a woman of great spirit and talents, who accompanied her brother on all his embassies. Swift afterwards quarrelled with her irreconcilably, as appears from many passages in his Journal.

You that would grief describe, come here and trace

Its wat'ry footsteps in Dorinda's face : *
Grief from Dorinda's face does ne'er depart
Further than its own palace in her heart :
Ah, since our fears are fled, this insolent expel,
At least confine the tyrant to his cell.
And if so black the cloud, that Heaven's bright queen

Shrouds her still beams; how should the stars be seen ?

Thus when Dorinda wept, joy ev'ry face forsook,
And grief flung sables on each menial look ;
The humble tribe mourn'd for the quick'ning soul,
That furnish'd spirit and motion through the whole ;
So would earth's face turn pale, and life decay,
Should Heaven suspend to act but for a day ;
So nature's crazed convulsions make us dread
That time is sick, or the world's mind is dead.—
Take, youth, these thoughts, large matter to employ
The fancy furnish'd by returning joy ;
And to mistaken man these truths rehearse,
Who dare revile the integrity of verse :
Ah fav'rite youth, how happy is thy lot !——
But I'm deceiv'd, or thou regard'st me not ;
Speak, for I wait thy answer, and expect
Thy just submission for this bold neglect.

Unknown the forms we the high-priesthood use
At the divine appearance of the muse,
Which to divulge might shake profane belief,
And tell the irreligion of my grief ;

* Lady Temple, who is described as a very extraordinary and accomplished woman.

Grief that excused the tribute of my knees,
And shaped my passion in such words as these.

Malignant goddess! bane to my repose,
Thou universal cause of all my woes;
Say whence it comes that thou art grown of late
A poor amusement for my scorn and hate;
The malice thou inspir'st I never fail
On thee to wreak the tribute when I rail;
Fool's commonplace thou art, their weak enscon-
cing fort,

Th' appeal of dulness in the last resort:
Heaven with a parent's eye regarding earth,
Deals out to man the planet of his birth:
But sees thy meteor blaze about me shine,
And passing o'er, mistakes thee still for mine:
Ah, should I tell a secret yet unknown,
That thou ne'er hadst a being of thy own,
But a wild form dependent on the brain,
Scatt'ring loose features o'er the optic vein;
Troubling the crystal fountain of the sight,
Which darts on poet's eyes a trembling light;
Kindled while reason sleeps, but quickly flies,
Like antic shapes in dreams, from waking eyes:
In sum, a glitt'ring voice, a painted name,
A walking vapour, like thy sister fame.

But if thou be'st what thy mad vot'ries prate,
A female pow'r, loose govern'd thoughts create;
Why near the dregs of youth perversely wilt thou stay,

So highly courted by the brisk and gay?
Wert thou right woman, thou shouldst scorn to look

On an abandon'd wretch by hopes forsook;
Forsook by hopes, ill fortune's last relief,
Assign'd for life to unremitting grief;

For, let Heaven's wrath enlarge these weary days,
 If hope e'er dawns the smallest of its rays. *
 Time o'er the happy takes so swift a flight,
 And treads so soft, so easy, and so light,
 That we the wretched, creeping far behind,
 Can scarce th' impression of his footsteps find;
 Smooth as that airy nymph so subtly born
 With inoffensive feet o'er standing corn;
 Which bow'd by ev'ning breeze with bending stalks,
 Salutes the weary trav'ler as he walks;
 But o'er the afflicted with a heavy pace
 Sweeps the broad scythe, and tramples on his face.
 Down falls the summer's pride, and sadly shows
 Nature's bare visage furrow'd as he mows:
 See, Muse, what havoc in these looks appear,
 These are the tyrant's trophies of a year;
 Since hope his last and greatest foe is fled,
 Despair and he lodge ever in its stead;
 March o'er the ruin'd plain with motion slow,
 Still scatt'ring desolation where they go.
 To thee I owe that fatal bent of mind,
 Still to unhappy restless thoughts inclin'd;
 To thee, what oft I vainly strive to hide,
 That scorn of fools, by fools mistook for pride;
 From thee whatever virtue takes its rise,
 Grows a misfortune, or becomes a vice;
 Such were thy rules to be poetically great,
 "Stoop not to int'rest, flattery, or deceit;
 Nor with hired thoughts be thy devotion paid;
 Learn to disdain their mercenary aid;

* What a miserable state of mind must Swift have been in when he wrote this! which was owing to the state of dependence in which he had always lived from his birth to that time, with but little prospect of his being relieved from it. How grating must this have been to such a proud and generous spirit!—S.

Be this thy sure defence, thy brazen wall,
 Know no base action, at no guilt turn pale;
 And since unhappy distance thus denies
 T' expose thy soul, clad in this poor disguise;
 Since thy few ill-presented graces seem
 To breed contempt where thou hast hoped esteem."—

Madness like this no fancy ever seized,
 Still to be cheated, never to be pleased;
 Since one false beam of joy in sickly minds
 Is all the poor content delusion finds.—
 There thy enchantment broke, and from this hour
 I here renounce thy visionary pow'r;
 And since thy essence on my breath depends,
 Thus with a puff the whole delusion ends.

WRITTEN IN A LADY'S IVORY TABLE-
 BOOK, 1698.

[This is the first of Swift's poems which displays his strong and peculiar vein of humour. His genius seems to have thrown off its encumbrances, and assumed proper and legitimate exercise, so soon as he was released from his slavish dependence upon Temple.]

PERUSE my leaves through every part,
 And think thou seest my owner's heart,
 Scrawl'd o'er with trifles thus, and quite
 As hard, as senseless, and as light;

Expos'd to every coxcomb's eyes,
 But hid with caution from the wise.
 Here you may read. "Dear charming saint;"
 Beneath "A new receipt for paint:"
 Here, in beau-spelling, "Tru tel deth;"
 There, in her own, "For an el breth:"
 Here, "Lovely nymph, pronounce my doom!"
 There, "A safe way to use perfume:"
 Here, a page fill'd with billet doux;
 On t'other side, "Laid out for shoes"—
 "Madam I die without your grace"—
 "Item, for half a yard of lace."
 Who that had wit would place it here,
 For every peeping fop to jeer?
 To think that your brains' issue is Expos'd to th' excrement of his,
 In power of spittle and a clout,
 Whene'er he please to blot it out;
 And then, to heighten the disgrace,
 Clap his own nonsense in the place.
 Whoe'er expects to hold his part
 In such a book, and such a heart,
 If he be wealthy, and a fool,
 Is in all points the fittest tool;
 Of whom it may be justly said,
 He's a gold pencil tipp'd with lead.

MRS FRANCES HARRIS'S PETITION,
1700.

[This, and the following piece of humour, which, in their own peculiar style, will probably never be equalled, were written while Swift was chaplain to Lord Berkeley in Ireland. None of his talents is more remarkable than the ease with which he could assume the character which he best pleased to occupy for the moment, and bind down his powerful genius to the thoughts, sentiments, and expressions of a chambermaid or housekeeper.]

To their excellencies the Lords Justices of Ireland, *

The humble petition of Frances Harris,
Who must starve and die a maid if it miscarries;
Humbly sheweth, that I went to warm myself in Lady Betty's † chamber, because I was cold;
And I had in a purse seven pounds, four shillings, and sixpence, besides farthings, in money and gold;
So because I had been buying things for my lady
last night,
I was resolv'd to tell my money, to see if it was right.

* The Earls of Berkeley and of Galway.—H.

† Lady Betty Berkeley, afterwards Germain.—H.

Now, you must know, because my trunk has a very bad lock,
Therefore all the money I have, which, God knows, is a very small stock,
I keep in my pocket, tied about my middle, next my smock.
So when I went to put up my purse, as God would have it, my smock was unripp'd,
And instead of putting it into my pocket, down it
slipp'd;
Then the bell rung, and I went down to put my lady to bed;
And, God knows, I thought my money was as safe as my maidenhead.
So, when I came up again, I found my pocket feel very light;
But when I search'd, and miss'd my purse, Lord!
I thought I should have sunk outright.
"Lord! madam," says Mary, "how d'ye do?"—
"Indeed," says I, "never worse:
But pray, Mary, can you tell what I have done with my purse?"
"Lord help me!" says Mary, "I never stirr'd out of this place!"
"Nay," said I, "I had it in Lady Betty's chamber, that's a plain case."
So Mary got me to bed, and cover'd me up warm:
However, she stole away my garters, that I might do myself no harm.
So I tumbled and toss'd all night, as you may very well think,
But hardly ever set my eyes together, or slept a wink.

So I was a dream'd, methought, that I went and search'd the folks round,
 And in a corner of Mrs Dukés's * box, tied in a rag,
 the money was found.
 So next morning we told Whittle †, and he fell a swearing :
 Then my dame Wadger ‡ came; and she, you know,
 is thick of hearing.
 " Dame," said I, as loud I could bawl, " do you know what a loss I have had ?"
 " Nay," said she, " my Lord Colway's § folks are all very sad :
 For my Lord Dromedary || comes a Tuesday without fail."
 " Pugh !" said I, " but that's not the business that I ail."
 Says Cary, ¶ says he, " I have been a servant this five and twenty years, come spring,
 And in all the places I liv'd I never heard of such a thing."
 " Yes," says the steward,  " I remember when I was at my Lady Shrewsbury's,
 Such a thing as this happen'd, just about the time of gooseberries."

So I went to the party suspected, and I found her full of grief :

(Now, you must know, of all things in the world, I hate a thief :)

However, I was resolv'd to bring the discourse slyly about :

"Mrs Dukes," said I, " here's an ugly accident has happen'd out :

'Tis not that I value the money three skips of a louse ;*

But the thing I stand upon is the credit of the house.

'Tis true, seven pounds, four shillings, and sixpence, makes a great hole in my wages :

Besides, as they say, service is no inheritance in these ages.

Now, Mrs Dukes, you know, and every body understands,

That though 'tis hard to judge, yet money can't go without hands."

"The devil take me !" said she (blessing herself) " if ever I saw't !"

So she roar'd like a bedlam, as though I had call'd her all to naught.

So you know, what could I say to her any more ? I e'en left her, and came away as wise as I was before.

Well ; but then they would have had me gone to the cunning man !

"No," said I, "'Tis the same thing, the CHAPLAIN † will be here anon."

* A usual saying of hers.—H.

† Swift.—H.

So the Chaplain came in. Now the servants say he is my sweetheart,

Because he's always in my chamber, and I always take his part.

So, as the devil would have it, before I was aware,
out I blunder'd,

"Parson," said I, "can you cast a nativity, when a body's plunder'd?"

(Now you must know, he hates to be call'd Parson, like the devil!)

"Truly," says he, "Mrs Nab, it might become you to be more civil ;

If your money be gone, as a learned Divine says,*
d'ye see,

You are no text for my handling ; so take that from me :

I was never taken for a Conjurer before, I'd have you to know."

"Lord!" said I, "don't be angry, I am sure I never thought you so ;

You know I honour the cloth ; I design to be a
Parson's wife ;

I never took one in your coat for a conjurer in all my life."

With that he twisted his girdle at me like a rope, as who should say,

"Now you may go hang yourself for me!" and so went away,

Well : I thought I should have swoon'd. "Lord!"
said I, "what shall I do ?

I have lost my money, and shall lose my true love too!"

* Dr Bolton, one of the chaplains.—FAULKNER.

Then my lord call'd me : " Harry, †" said my Lord,
" don't cry ;
I'll give you something toward thy loss" : " And,"
says my lady, " so will I."
Oh! but, said I, what if, after all, the Chaplain won't come to ?
For that, he said, (an't please your Excellencies,)
I must petition you.
The premises tenderly consider'd, I desire your Excellencies protection,
And that I may have a share in next Sunday's collection ;
And, over and above, that I may have your Excellencies letter,
With an order for the Chaplain aforesaid, or, instead of him a better :
And then your poor petitioner, both night and day,
Or the chaplain (for 'tis his trade,) as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

A BALLAD ON THE GAME OF TRAFFIC.

WRITTEN AT THE CASTLE OF DUBLIN, 1699.

My Lord, * to find out who must deal,
 Delivers cards about,
 But the first knave does seldom fail
 To find the doctor out.

But then his honour cry'd, gadzooks!
 And seem'd to knit his brow:
 For on a knave he never looks
 But h' thinks upon Jack How. †

My lady, though she is no player,
 Some bungling partner takes,
 And, wedg'd in corner of a chair,
 Takes snuff, and holds the stakes.

Dame Floyd looks out in grave suspense
 For pair royals and sequents;
 But, wisely cautious of her pence,
 The castle seldom frequents.

A BALLAD,

TO THE TUNE OF, THE CUT-PURSE.†

WRITTEN IN AUGUST 1702.

I.

ONCE on a time, as old stories rehearse,
 A friar would need show his talent in Latin;
 But was sorely put to't in the midst of a verse,
 Because he could find no word to come pat in:
 Then all in the place
 He left a void space,
 And so went to bed in a desperate case:

* Written by Lady Betty Berkeley, afterwards Lady Betty Germain. See the next poem.

† Lady Betty Berkeley, finding the preceding verses in the author's room unfinished, wrote under them the concluding stanza, which gave occasion to this ballad, written by the author in a counterfeit hand, as if a third person had done it.—SWIFT.

The Cut-purse is a ballad sung by Nightingale, the ballad-singer, in Ben Jonson's Bartholomew Fair. The tune seems to have been very popular, and the words the subject of many parodies. See one upon an adventure of Jonathan Wild, in Pope and Swift's Miscellanies, Vol. XIII. p. 365.

When behold the next morning a wonderful riddle !
He found it was strangely fill'd up in the middle.

CHO. Let censuring critics then think what they list on't ;
Who would not write verses with such an assistant ?

II.

This put me the friar into an amazement :
For he wisely considered it must be a sprite ;
That he came through the keyhole, or in at the casement ;
And it needs must be one that could both read and write :
Yet he did not know
If it were friend or foe,
Or whether it came from above or below :
Howe'er, it was civil, in angel or elf,
For he ne'er could have fill'd it so well of himself.

CHO. Let censuring, &c.

III.

Even so Master Doctor had puzzled his brains
In making a ballad, but was at a stand :
He had mixt little wit with a great deal of pains,
When he found a new help from invisible hand.
Then, good Doctor Swift,
Pay thanks for the gift,
For you freely must own you were at a dead lift ;
And, though some malicious young spirit did do't,
You may know by the hand it had no cloven foot.

CHO. Let censuring, &c.

THE DISCOVERY.

[In the author's life we have mentioned the disappointment which he experienced under the inefficient patronage of Lord Berkeley, chiefly from the influence of his Lordship's secretary, Mr Bush. The following lines, among other satirical effusions, were the evidence of his resentment, and probably had some share in determining the earl to get rid of so untractable a dependent, by gratifying him with a living so soon as possible.]

WHEN wise Lord Berkeley first came here, *
 Statesmen and mob expected wonders,
 Nor thought to find so great a peer
 Ere a week past committing blunders.
 Till on a day cut out by fate,
 When folks came thick to make their court,
 Out slipt a mystery of state,
 To give the town and country sport.
 Now enters Bush † with new state airs,
 His lordship's premier minister;
 And who, in all profound affairs,
 Is held as needful as his clyster. ‡
 With head reclining on his shoulder,
 He deals and hears mysterious chat,

* To Ireland, as one of the lords justices.—H.

† Bush, by some underhand insinuation, obtained the post of secretary, which had been promised to Swift.—H.

‡ Always taken before my lord went to council.—H.

While every ignorant beholder
 Asks of his neighbour, who is that ?
 With this he put up to my lord,
 The courtiers kept their distance due,
 He twitch'd his sleeve, and stole a word ;
 Then to a corner both withdrew.
 Imagine now my lord and Bush
 Whispering in junto most profound,
 Like good king Phyz and good king Ush,*
 While all the rest stood gaping round.
 At length a spark, not too well bred,
 Of forward face and ear acute,
 Advanc'd on tiptoe, lean'd his head,
 To overhear the grand dispute ;
 To learn what Northern kings design,
 Or from Whitehall some new express,
 Papists disarm'd, or fall of coin ;
 For sure (thought he) it can't be less.
 My lord, said Bush, a friend and I,
 Disguis'd in two old threadbare coats,
 Ere morning's dawn, stole out to spy
 How markets went for hay and oats.
 With that he draws two handfuls out,
 The one was oats, the other hay ;
 Puts this to's excellency's snout,
 And begs he would the other weigh.
 My lord seems pleas'd, but still directs
 By all means to bring down the rates ;
 Then, with a congée circumflex,
 Bush, smiling round on all, retreats.
 Our listener stood a while confus'd,
 But gathering spirits, wisely ran for't,
 Enrag'd to see the world abus'd,
 By two such whispering kings of Brentford.

THE PROBLEM.

“ THAT MY LORD BERKELEY STINKS WHEN HE IS IN LOVE.”

DID ever problem thus perplex,
 Or more employ the female sex ?
 So sweet a passion, who would think,
 Jove ever form'd to make a stink ?
 The ladies vow and swear, they'll try,
 Whether it be a truth or lie.
 Love's fire, it seems, like inward heat,
 Works in my lord by stool and sweat,
 Which brings a stink from every pore,
 And from behind and from before ;
 Yet what is wonderful to tell it,
 None but the favourite nymph can smell it.
 But now, to solve the natural cause
 By sober philosophic laws :
 Whether all passions, when in ferment,
 Work out as anger does in vermin ;
 So, when a weasel you torment,
 You find his passion by his scent.
 We read of kings, who, in a fright,
 Though on a throne, would fall to sh—
 Beside all this, deep scholars know,
 That the main string of Cupid's bow,
 Once on a time was an a— gut ;
 Now to a nobler office put,
 By favour or desert preferr'd
 From giving passage to a t— ;

But still, though fix'd among the stars,
 Does sympathize with human a—
 Thus, when you feel a hard-bound breech,
 Conclude love's bowstring at full stretch,
 Till the kind looseness comes, and then,
 Conclude the bow relax'd again.

And now, the ladies all are bent
 To try the great experiment,
 Ambitious of a regent's heart,
 Spread all their charms to catch a f— ;
 Watching the first unsavoury wind,
 Some ply before, and some behind.
 My lord, on fire amid the dames,
 F—ts like a laurel in the flames.
 The fair approach the speaking part,
 To try the back-way to his heart.
 For, as when we a gun discharge,
 Although the bore be ne'er so large,
 Before the flame from muzzle burst,
 Just at the breech it flashes first :
 So from my lord his passion broke,
 He f—d first, and then he spoke.

The ladies vanish in the smother,
 To confer notes with one another ;
 And now they all agreed to name
 Whom each one thought the happy dame.
 Quoth Neal, whate'er the rest may think,
 I'm sure 'twas I that smelt the stink.
 You smell the stink ! by G—d, you lie,
 Quoth Ross, for I'll be sworn 'twas I.
 Ladies, quoth Levens, pray forbear :
 Let's not fall out ; we all had share ;
 And, by the most I can discover,
 My lord's a universal lover.

THE DESCRIPTION OF A SALAMANDER.*
1705.

[At the siege of Namur, in 1695, Lord Cutts commanded a body of English employed as a storming party, and displayed such cool intrepidity amidst a most tremendous fire of artillery and musquetry, that he was complimented with the name of the Salamander, as if the scene of flame and terror had been his proper element.

Swift, no admirer of military merit, and unfriendly to Lord Cutts in particular, has employed his wit in deducing from his vices and follies, the name bestowed on him for his intrepid bravery.]

As mastiff dogs in modern phrase are Call'd Pompey, Scipio, and Cæsar ;
As pies and daws are often styl'd
With Christian nicknames, like a child ;
As we say Monsieur to an ape,
Without offence to human shape ;
So men have got, from bird and brute,
Names that would best their nature suit.
The Lion, Eagle, Fox, and Boar,
Were heroes titles heretofore,
Bestow'd as hieroglyphics fit
To shew their valour, strength, or wit :

* From Pliny, Nat. Hist. lib. x. c. 67. lib. xxix. c. 4.

For what is understood by fame,
 Beside the getting of a name?
 But, e'er since men invented guns,
 A different way their fancy runs:
 To paint a Hero, we inquire
 For something that will conquer fire.
 Would you describe Turenne or Trump?
 Think of a bucket or a pump.
 Are these too low?—then find out grander,
 Call my Lord CUTTS a Salamander.
 'Tis well;—but since we live among
 Detractors with an evil tongue,
 Who may object against the term,
 Pliny shall prove what we affirm:
 Pliny shall prove, and we'll apply,
 And I'll be judg'd by standers by,
 First, then, our author has defin'd
 This reptile of the serpent kind,
 With gaudy coat, and shining train;
 But loathsome spots his body stain:
 Out from some hole obscure he flies,
 When rains descend, and tempests rise,
 Till the sun clears the air; and then
 Crawls back neglected to his den.
 So, when the war has rais'd a storm,
 I've seen a snake in human form,
 All stain'd with infamy and vice,
 Leap from the dunghill in a trice,
 Burnish, and make a gaudy show,
 Become a general, peer, and beau,
 Till peace has made the sky serene,
 Then shrink into its hole again.
 "All this we grant—why then look yonder:
 Sure that must be a Salamander!"
 Further, we are by Pliny told,
 This serpent is extremely cold;

So cold, that put it in the fire,
 'Twill make the very flames expire :
 Besides, it spews a filthy froth
 (Whether through rage or love, or both)
 Of matter purulent and white,
 Which, happening on the skin to light,
 And there corrupting to a wound,
 Spreads leprosy and baldness round.

So have I seen a batter'd beau,
 By age and claps grown cold as snow,
 Whose breath or touch, where'er he came,
 Blew out love's torch, or chill'd the flame :
 And should some nymph, who ne'er was cruel,
 Like Carleton cheap, or fam'd Du-Ruel,
 Receive the filth which he ejects,
 She soon would find the same effects,
 Her tainted carcase to pursue,
 As from the salamander's spew ;
 A dismal shedding of her locks,
 And, if no leprosy, a pox.
 " Then I'll appeal to each bystander,
 If this be not a Salamander ? "

TO THE EARL OF PETERBOROUGH,

WHO COMMANDED THE BRITISH FORCES IN SPAIN.

MORDANTO fills the trump of fame,
 The Christian worlds his deeds proclaim,
 And prints are crowded with his name,

In journies he outrides the post,
Sits up till midnight with his host,
Talks politics, and gives the toast.

Knows every prince in Europe's face,
Flies like a squib from place to place,
And travels not, but runs a race.

From Paris gazette a-la-main,
This day's arriv'd, without his train,
Mordanto in a week from Spain.

A messenger comes all a-reek
Mordanto at Madrid to seek;
He left the town above a week.

Next day the postboy winds his horn,
And rides through Dover in the morn:
Mordanto's landed from Leghorn.

Mordanto gallops on alone,
The roads are with his followers strown,
This breaks a girth, and that a bone;

His body active as his mind,
Returning sound in limb and wind,
Except some leather lost behind.

A skeleton in outward figure,
His meagre corpse, though full of vigour,
Would halt behind him, were it bigger.

So wonderful his expedition,
When you have not the least suspicion,
He's with you like an apparition.

Shines in all climates like a star ;
 In senates bold, and fierce in war ;
 A land commander, and a tar :

Heroic actions early bred in,
 Ne'er to be match'd in modern reading,
 But by his namesake, Charles of Sweden.

ON THE UNION.

[Swift's hatred to the Scottish nation led him to look upon the Union with great resentment, as a measure degrading to England. The Scottish themselves hardly detested the idea more than he did ; and that is saying as much as possible.]

THE queen has lately lost a part
 Of her ENTIRELY-ENGLISH * heart,
 For want of which, by way of botch,
 She piec'd it up again with SCOTCH.
 Blest revolution ! which creates
 Divided hearts, united states !
 See how the double nation lies,
 Like a rich coat with skirts of frize :
 As if a man, in making posies,
 Should bundle thistles up with roses.

* The motto on Queen Anne's coronation medal.—N.

Who ever yet a union saw
 Of kingdoms without faith or law? *
 Henceloward let no statesman dare
 A kingdom to a ship compare;
 Lest he should call our commonweal,
 A vessel with a double keel:
 Which, just like ours, new rigg'd and mann'd,
 And got about a league from land,
 By change of wind to leeward side,
 The pilot knew not how to guide,
 So tossing faction will o'erwhelm
 Our crazy double-bottom'd realm.

TO MRS BIDDY FLOYD;

OR, THE RECEIPT TO FORM A BEAUTY, † 1708.

[This elegant compliment led to numerous silly imitations, which causes Swift to put a caution in Apollo's Edict to the Poets:

“ With females' compounds I am cloy'd,
 Which only pleased in Biddy Floyd.”

WHEN Cupid did his grandsire Jove entreat
 To form some Beauty by a new receipt,

* i. e. Differing in religion and law.

† The following elegant Latin version of this “Receipt” was first printed in the sixth volume of Dryden's Miscellanies:

Jove sent, and found, far in a country scene,
 Truth, innocence, good nature, look serene :
 From which ingredients first the dextrous boy
 Pick'd the demure, the awkward, and the coy.
 The Graces, from the court did next provide Breeding, and wit, and air, and decent pride :
 These Venus cleans from every spurious grain
 Of nice, coquet, affected, pert, and vain.
 Jove mix'd up all, and the best clay employ'd ;
 Then call'd the happy composition FLOYD.

IN LYDIAM.

Orabat precibus Cupido blandis,
 Ut tandem omnipotens pater deorum
 Formosam lege conderet recenti.
 Arridens citò, ruris ad recessum
 Almus misit avus, Fidemque nudam
 Illic repperit, Innocentiamque,
 Et vultum placidum, Indòlemque suàvem :
 Dextrà, quæ, facili Puer peritus
 Oris à nimio pudore purgat,
 Et morum ruditate ineleganti,
 Ac nimis timidà fugacitate.
 Sacræ Pierides parant deinde
 Ex aulâ ingenuam Institutionem,
 Acumenque acre, Gratiamque formæ,
 Cum se non nimis efferente Fastu.
 Ab his flava Venus remòvit omnem
 Procul molitiem, et malas dolosæ
 Mentis Illecebras, Ineptiasque
 Bonum pravè imitantiam, levesque
 Motus, Gloriolæque Inantatem.
 Miscet omnia Jupiter, lutoque
 Temperat meliore, Lydiàmque
 Inde appellat opus, stupens, superbum.

THE REVERSE

(TO SWIFT'S VERSES ON 'BIDDY FLOYD');

OR MRS CLUDD.

[These verses were first printed by the learned Dr Barrett, from the Whimsical Medley, a Manuscript from which he recovered several of Dr Swift's lighter pieces. It seems to be alluded to as Swift's, in a stupid imitation of the Liliputian Ode, occurring among other trash in the Gulliveriana.]

House of Van, Mother Cludd
Made the man, fond of mud.

I do not, however, pretend to deny that the line may only relate to the poem on Van's house, which begins

When Mother Cludd rose up from play.

In that case the authenticity will rest on the intrinsic evidence.]

VENUS one day, as story goes,
But for what reason no man knows,
In sullen mood and grave deport,
Trudg'd it away to Jove's high court;
And there his Godship did entreat
To look out for his best receipt:
And make a monster strange and odd,
Abhorr'd by man and every god.
Jove ever kind to all the fair,
Nor e'er refus'd a lady's prayer,

Straight ope'd 'scrutore, and forth he took
A neatly bound and well-gilt book ;
Sure sign that nothing enter'd there,
But what was very choice and rare.
Scarce had he turn'd a page or two,—
It might be more for aught I know ;
But, be the matter more or less,
'Mong friends 'twill break no squares, I guess.
Then, smiling, to the dame quoth he,
Here's one will fit you to a T.
But, as the writing doth prescribe,
'Tis fit the ingredients we provide.
Away he went, and search'd the stews,
And every street about the Mews :
Diseases, impudence, and lies,
Are found and brought him in a trice.
From Hackney then he did provide,
A clumsy air and awkward pride :
From lady's toilet next he brought
Noise, scandal, and malicious thought.
These Jove put in an old close-stool,
And with them mix'd the vain, the fool.
But now came on his greatest care,
Of what he should his paste prepare ;
For common clay or finer mould
Was much too good, such stuff to hold
At last he wisely thought on mud ;
So rais'd it up, and call'd it—Cludd.
With this, the lady well content,
Low courtesy'd, and away she went.

APOLLO OUTWITTED.

TO THE HONOURABLE MRS FINCH,*

UNDER HER NAME OF ARDELIA.

PHOEBUS, now shortening every shade,
Up to the northern tropic came,
And thence beheld a lovely maid,
Attending on a royal dame.

The god laid down his feeble rays,
Then lighted from his glittering coach;
But fenc'd his head with his own bays,
Before he durst the nymph approach.

Under those sacred leaves, secure
From common lightning of the skies,
He fondly thought he might endure
The flashes of Ardelia's eyes.

The nymph, who oft had read in books
Of that bright god whom bards invoke,
Soon knew Apollo by his looks,
And guess'd his business ere he spoke.

He, in the old celestial cant,
Confess'd his flame, and swore by Styx,
Whate'er she would desire, to grant—
But wise Ardelia knew his tricks.

* Afterwards Countess of Winchelsea.

Ovid had warn'd her, to beware
Of strolling gods, whose usual trade is,
Under pretence of taking air,
To pick up sublunary ladies.

Howe'er she gave no flat denial,
As having malice in her heart ;
And was resoly'd upon a trial,
To cheat the god in his own art.

“ Hear my request,” the virgin said ;
“ Let which I please of all the Nine
Attend, whene'er I want their aid,
Obey my call, and only mine.”

By vow oblig'd, by passion led,
The god could not refuse her prayer :
He waw'd his wreath thrice o'er her head,
Thrice mutter'd something to the air,

And now he thought to seize his due ;
But she the charm already tried :
Thalia heard the call, and flew
To wait at bright Ardelia's side.

On sight of this celestial prude,
Apollo thought it vain to stay ;
Nor in her presence durst be rude,
But made his leg and went away.

He hop'd to find some lucky hour,
When on their queen the Muses wait ;
But Pallas owns Ardelia's power :
For vows divine are kept by Fate.

Then, full of rage, Apollo spoke :
 " Deceitful nymph ! I see thy art ;
 And, though I can't my gift revoke,
 I'll disappoint its nobler part.

Let stubborn pride possess thee long,
 And be thou negligent of fame ;
 With every Muse to grace thy song,
 May'st thou despise a poet's name !

Of modest poets thou be first ;
 To silent shades repeat thy verse,
 Till Fame and Echo almost burst,
 Yet hardly dare one line rehearse.

And last, my vengeance to complete,
 May'st thou descend to take renown,
 Prevail'd on by the thing you hate,
 A whig ! and one that wears a gown !"

VANBRUGH'S HOUSE,

BUILT FROM THE RUINS OF WHITEHALL THAT WAS BURNT, 1703.

[In the preface to the Miscellanies, in which this lively satire first appeared, the authors express some compunction for having written it. It does injustice to Vanbrugh, both as a poet and architect. The comedies of that celebrated dramatist afford excellent examples of light, easy, and natural dialogues; and were, as Cibber has recorded, less troublesome to the memory of the performers than those of any other dramatist. He died at the house in Whitehall (here ridiculed), 26th March 1726.]

In times of old, when Time was young,
 And poets their own verses sung,
 A verse would draw a stone or beam,
 That now would overload a team;
 Lead them a dance of many a mile,
 Then rear them to a goodly pile.
 Each number had its different power;
 Heroic strains could build a tower;
 Sonnets, or elegies to Chloris,
 Might raise a house about two stories;
 A lyric ode would slate; a catch
 Would tile; an epigram would thatch.
 But, to their own or landlord's cost,
 Now Poets feel this art is lost.
 Not one of all our tuneful throng
 Can raise a lodging for a song.
 For Jove consider'd well the case,
 Observ'd they grew a numerous race;
 And should they build as fast as write,
 'Twould ruin undertakers quite.
 This evil therefore to prevent,
 He wisely chang'd their element:
 On earth the God of Wealth was made
 Sole patron of the building trade;
 Leaving the Wits the spacious air,
 With licence to build castles there:
 And 'tis conceiv'd, their old pretence
 To lodge in garrets comes from thence.
 Premising thus, in modern way,
 The better half we have to say;

Sing, Muse, the house of Poet Van,
In higher strains than we began.

Van (for 'tis fit the reader know it)
Is both a Herald * and a Poet;
No wonder then if nicely skill'd
In both capacities to build.
As Herald, he can in a day
Repair a house gone to decay;
Or, by achievements, arms, device,
Erect a new one in a trice;
And as a Poet, he has skill
To build in speculation still.
"Great Jove!" he cry'd, "the art restore
To build by verse as heretofore,
And make my Muse the architect;
What palaces shall we erect!
No longer shall forsaken Thames
Lament his old Whitehall in flames;
A pile shall from its ashes rise,
Fit to invade or prop the skies."

Jove smil'd, and like a gentle god,
Consenting with the usual nod,
Told Van, he knew his talent best,
And left the choice to his own breast.
So Van resolv'd to write a farce;
But, well perceiving wit was scarce,
With cunning that defect supplies:
Takes a French play as lawful prize; †
Steals thence his plot and every joke,
Not once suspecting Jove would smoke;
And (like a wag set down to write)
Would whisper to himself, "a bite."

* Sir John Vanbrugh at that time held the office of Clarencieux king of arms, which he afterwards disposed of.

† Several of Vanbrugh's plays are taken from Moliere.

Then, from this motley mingled style,
 Proceeded to erect his pile.
 So men of old, to gain renown, did
 Build Babel with their tongues confounded.
 Jove saw the cheat, but thought it best
 To turn the matter to a jest:
 Down from Olympus' top he slides,
 Laughing as if he'd burst his sides:
 Ay, thought the god, are these your tricks?
 Why then old plays deserve old bricks;
 And since you're sparing of your stuff,
 Your building shall be small enough.
 He spake, and grudging, lent his aid;
 Th' experienc'd bricks, that knew their trade,
 (As being bricks at second-hand)
 Now move, and now in order stand.

The building, as the Poet writ,
 Rose in proportion to his wit:
 And first the prologue built a wall;
 So wide as to encompass all.
 The scene, a wood, produc'd no more
 Than a few scrubby trees before.
 The plot as yet lay deep; and so
 A cellar next was dug below:
 But this a work so hard was found,
 Two acts it cost him under ground.
 Two other acts, we may presume,
 Were spent in building each a room:
 Thus far advanc'd, he made a shift
 To raise a roof with act the fifth.
 The epilogue behind did frame
 A place not decent here to name.

Now Poets from all quarters ran,
 To see the house of brother Van:
 Look'd high and low, walk'd often round;
 But no such house was to be found.

One asks the watermen hard by,
 "Where may the Poet's palace lie?"
 Another of the Thames inquires,
 If he has seen its gilded spires?
 At length they in the rubbish spy
 A thing resembling a goose-pye.
 Thither in haste the Poets throng,
 And gaze in silent wonder long.
 Till one in raptures thus began
 To praise the pile and builder Van :
 "Thrice happy Poet! who mayst trail
 Thy house about thee like a snail :
 Or, harness'd to a nag, at ease
 Take journies in it like a chaise ;
 Or in a boat whene'er thou wilt,
 Canst make it serve thee for a tilt !
 Capacious house ! 'tis own'd by all
 Thou'rt well contriv'd, though thou art small :
 For every Wit in Britain's isle
 May lodge within thy spacious pile.
 Like Bacchus thou, as Poets feign,
 Thy mother burnt, art born again,
 Born like a phoenix from the flame :
 But neither bulk nor shape the same ;
 As animals of largest size
 Corrupt to maggots, worms, and flies ;
 A type of modern wit and style,
 The rubbish of an ancient pile :
 So chemists boast they have a power,
 From the dead ashes of a flower
 Some faint resemblance to produce,
 But not the virtue, taste, or juice.
 So modern rhymers wisely blast
 The poetry of ages past ;
 Which, after they have overthrown,
 They from its ruins build their own."

THE HISTORY OF VANBRUGH'S HOUSE, 1708.

WHEN Mother Cludd * had rose from play,
And call'd to take the cards away,
Van saw, but seem'd not to regard,
How Miss pick'd every painted card,
And busy both with hand and eye,
Soon rear'd a house two stories high.
Van's genius, without thought or lecture,
Is hugely turn'd to architecture :
He view'd the edifice, and smil'd,
Vow'd it was pretty for a child :
It was so perfect in its kind,
He kept the model in his mind.

But, when he found the boys at play,
And saw them dabbling in their clay,
He stood behind a stall to lurk,
And mark the progress of their work ;
With true delight observ'd them all
Raking up mud to build a wall.
The plan he much admir'd, and took
The model in his table-book :
Thought himself now exactly skill'd,
And so resolv'd a house to build :
A real house, with rooms, and stairs,
Five times at least as big as theirs ;
Taller than Miss's by two yards ;
Not a sham thing of clay or cards :

* The same lady who is severely handled in the satire called the Reverse.

And so he did ; for, in a while,
He built up such a monstrous pile,
That no two chairmen could be found
Able to lift it from the ground.
Still at Whitehall it stands in view,
Just in the place where first it grew ;
There all the little schoolboys run,
Envyng to see themselves outdone.

From such deep rudiments as these,
Van is become, by due degrees,
For building fam'd, and justly reckon'd,
At court, Vitruvius the second : *
No wonder, since wise authors show,
That best foundations must be low :
And now the duke has wisely ta'en him
To be his architect at Blenheim.

But raillery at once apart,
If this rule holds in every art ;
Or if his grace were no more skill'd in
The art of battering walls than building,
We might expect to see next year,
A mouse-trap man chief engineer.

* Sir John Vanbrugh held the office of comptroller-general of his majesty's works.

BAUCIS AND PHILEMON.

ON THE EVER-LAMENTED LOSS OF THE TWO YEW-TREES IN THE PARISH OF CHILTHORNE, SOMERSET. 1706.

IMITATED FROM THE EIGHTH BOOK OF OVID.

IN ancient times, as story tells,
The saints would often leave their cells,
And stroll about but hide their quality
To try good people's hospitality.

It happen'd on a winter night,
As authors of the legend write,
Two brother hermits, saints by trade,
Taking their tour in masquerade,
Disguis'd in tatter'd habits, went
To a small village down in Kent;
Where, in the strollers' canting strain,
They begg'd from door to door in vain,
Tried every tone might pity win;
But not a soul would let them in.

Our wandering saints, in woful state,
Treated at this ungodly rate,
Having through all the village past,
To a small cottage came at last !
Where dwelt a good old honest ye'man,
Call'd in the neighbourhood Philemon ;
Who kindly did these saints invite
In his poor hut to pass the night ;
And then the hospitable sire
Bid goody Baucis mend the fire ;
While he from out the chimney took
A fitch of bacon off the hook,

And freely from the fattest side
 Cut out large slices to be fry'd ;
 Then stepp'd aside to fetch them drink,
 Fill'd a large jug up to the brink,
 And saw it fairly twice go round ;
 Yet (what was wonderful) they found,
 'Twas still replenish'd to the top,
 As if they ne'er had touch'd a drop.
 The good old couple were amaz'd,
 And often on each other gaz'd ;
 For both were frighten'd to the heart,
 And just began to cry, " What ar't !"
 Then softly turn'd aside, to view
 Whether the lights were burning blue.
 The gentle pilgrims, soon aware on't,
 Told them their calling and their errand :
 " Good folks, you need not be afraid,
 We are but saints," the hermits said ;
 " No hurt shall come to you or yours :
 But for that pack of churlish boors,
 Not fit to live on Christian ground,
 They and their houses shall be drown'd ;
 While you shall see your cottage rise,
 And grow a church before your eyes."
 They scarce had spoke, when fair and soft,
 The roof began to mount aloft ;
 Aloft rose every beam and rafter ;
 The heavy wall climb'd slowly after.
 The chimney widen'd, and grew higher,
 Became a steeple with a spire.
 The kettle to the top was hoist,
 And there stood fasten'd to a joist,
 But with the upside down, to show
 Its inclination for below :
 In vain ; for a superior force
 Apply'd at bottom stops its course :

Doom'd ever in suspense to dwell,
 'Tis now no kettle, but a bell.
 A wooden jack, which had almost Lost by disuse the art to roast,
 A sudden alteration feels,
 Increas'd by new intestine wheels ;
 And, what exalts the wonder more,
 The number made the motion slower.
 The fier, though it had leaden feet,
 Turn'd round so quick you scarce could see't ;
 But, slacken'd by some secret power,
 Now hardly moves an inch an hour.
 The jack and chimney, near allied,
 Had never left each other's side :
 The chimney to a steeple grown,
 The jack would not be left alone ;
 But, up against the steeple rear'd,
 Became a clock, and still adher'd ;
 And still its love to household cares,
 By a shrill voice at noon, declares,
 Warning the cookmaid not to burn
 That roast meat, which it cannot turn.

The groaning-chair began to crawl,
 Like a huge snail, along the wall ;
 There stuck aloft in public view,
 And with small change, a pulpit grew.

The porringers, that in a row
 Hung high, and made a glittering show,
 To a less noble substance chang'd,
 Were now but leathern buckets rang'd.

The ballads, pasted on the wall,
 Of Joan of France, and English Mall, *

* Probably Molly Ambree, upon whose warlike exploits in Flanders a popular ballad was composed. It is preserved in the Reliques of English Poetry, Vol. II.

Fair Rosamond, and Robinhood,
 The little Children in the Wood,
 Now seem'd to look abundance better,
 Improv'd in picture, size, and letter :
 And, high in order plac'd, describe
 The heraldry of every tribe. *

A bedstead of the antique mode,
 Compact of timber many a load,
 Such as our ancestors did use,
 Was metamorphos'd into pews ;
 Which still their ancient nature keep,
 By lodging folks dispos'd to sleep.

The cottage, by such feats as these,
 Grown to a church by just degrees,
 The hermits then desir'd their host
 To ask for what he fancy'd most.
 Philemon, having paus'd a while,
 Return'd them thanks in homely style ;
 Then said, " My house is grown so fine,
 Methinks, I still would call it mine.
 I'm old, and fain would live at ease ;
 Make me the parson if you please."

He spoke, and presently he feels
 His grazier's coat fall down his heels :
 He sees, yet hardly can believe,
 About each arm a pudding sleeve ;
 His waistcoat to a cassock grew,
 And both assum'd a sable hue ;
 But, being old, continu'd just
 As threadbare, and as full of dust.
 His talk was now of tithes and dues :
 He smok'd his pipe, and read the news ;

* The tribes of Israel are sometimes distinguished in country churches by the ensigns given to them by Jacob.—H.

Knew how to preach old sermons next,
 Vamp'd in the preface and the text ;
 At christenings well could act his part,
 And had the service all by heart ;
 Wish'd women might have children fast,
 And thought whose sow had farrow'd last ;
 Against dissenters would repine,
 And stood up firm for " right divine ;"
 Found his head fill'd with many a system ;
 But classic authors,—he ne'er miss'd 'em.

Thus having furbish'd up a parson,
 Dame Baucis next they play'd their farce on.
 Instead of homespun coifs, were seen
 Good pinners edg'd with colberteen ;
 Her petticoat, transform'd apace,
 Became black satin flounc'd with lace.
 " Plain Goody" would no longer down,
 'Twas " Madam," in her grogram gown.
 Philemon was in great surprise,
 And hardly could believe his eyes,
 Amaz'd to see her look so prim ;
 And she admir'd as much at him.

Thus happy in their change of life,
 Were several years this man and wife :
 When on a day which prov'd their last,
 Discoursing o'er old stories past,
 They went by chance, amid their talk,
 To the churchyard to take a walk ;
 When Baucis hastily cry'd out,
 " My dear, I see your forehead sprout !" —
 " Sprout !" quoth the man ; " what's this you tell us ?

I hope you don't believe me jealous !
 But yet, methinks, I feel it true ;
 And really yours is budding too—

Nay,—now I cannot stir my foot;
It feels as if 'twere taking root."

Description would but tire my muse,
In short, they both were turn'd to yews.
Old goodman Dobson of the green
Remembers he the trees has seen;
He'll talk of them from noon till night,
And goes with folks to show the sight;
On Sundays, after evening prayer,
He gathers all the parish there;
Points out the place of either yew;
Here Baucis, there Philemon, grew:
Till once a parson of our town,
To mend his barn, cut Baucis down;
At which, 'tis hard to be believ'd
How much the other tree was griev'd,
Grew scrubbed, died a-top, was stunted;
So the next parson stubb'd and burnt it.

A GRUB-STREET ELEGY

ON THE SUPPOSED DEATH OF PARTRIDGE THE ALMANACK MAKER. 1708.*

WELL; 'tis as Bickerstaff has guess'd,
Though we all took it for a jest:
Partridge is dead; nay more, he died
Ere he could prove the good 'squire lied.

* See the ludicrous controversy sustained by Swift and Yalden on the pretended death of Partridge the astrologer. Vol. IX. p. 151.

Strange, an astrologer should die
 Without one wonder in the sky :
 Not one of all his crony stars
 To pay their duty at his hearse !
 No meteor, no eclipse appear'd !
 No comet with a flaming beard !
 The sun has rose and gone to bed,
 Just as if Partridge were not dead ;
 Nor hid himself behind the moon
 To make a dreadful night at noon.
 He at fit periods walks through Aries,
 Howe'er our earthly motion varies ;
 And twice a-year he'll cut th' Equator,
 As if there had been no such matter.

Some wits have wonder'd what analogy
 There is 'twixt cobbling * and astrology ;
 How Partridge made his optics rise
 From a shoe-sole to reach the skies.

A list the cobbler's temples ties,
 To keep the hair out of his eyes ;
 From whence 'tis plain the diadem
 That princes wear derives from them :
 And therefore crowns are nowadays
 Adorn'd with golden stars and rays ;
 Which plainly shows the near alliance
 'Twixt cobbling and the planets' science.

Besides, that slow-pac'd sign Boötes,
 As 'tis miscall'd, we know not who 'tis :
 But Partridge ended all disputes ;
 He knew his trade, and call'd it boots. †

The horned moon, which heretofore
 Upon their shoes the Romans wore,

* Partridge was a cobbler.—SWIFT.

† See his Almanack.—SWIFT.

Whose wideness kept their toes from corns,
And whence we claim our shoeing-horns,
Shows how the art of cobbling bears
A near resemblance to the spheres.
A scrap of parchment hung by geometry,
(A great refiner in barometry)
Can, like the stars, foretel the weather ;
And what is parchment else but leather ?
Which an astrologer might use
Either for almanacks or shoes.

Thus Partridge, by his wit and parts,
At once did practise both these arts :
And as the boding owl (or rather
The bat, because her wings are leather)
Steals from her private cell by night,
And flies about the candle-light ;
So learned Partridge could as well
Creep in the dark from leathern cell,
And in his fancy fly as far
To peep upon a twinkling star.

Besides, he could confound the spheres,
And set the planets by the ears ;
To show his skill, he Mars could join
To Venus in aspect malign ;
Then call in Mercury for aid,
And cure the wounds that Venus made.

Great scholars have in Lucian read,
When Philip king of Greece was dead,
His soul and spirit did divide,
And each part took a different side :
One rose a star ; the other fell
Beneath, and mended shoes in Hell.

Thus Partridge still shines in each art,
The cobbling and star-gazing part,
And is install'd as good a star
As any of the Cæsars are.

Triumphant star ! some pity show
 On cobblers militant below,
 Whom roguish boys, in stormy nights,
 Torment by pissing out their lights,
 Or through a chink convey their smoke,
 Enclos'd artificers to choke.

Thou, high exalted in thy sphere,
 Mayst follow still thy calling there.
 To thee the Bull will lend his hide,
 By Phœbus newly tann'd and dry'd :
 For thee they Argo's hulk will tax,
 And scrape her pitchy sides for wax :
 Then Ariadne kindly lends
 Her braided hair to make thee ends ;
 The points of Sagittarius' dart
 Turns to an awl by heavenly art ;
 And Vulcan, wheedled by his wife,
 Will forge for thee a paring-knife.
 For want of room by Virgo's side,
 She'll strain a point, and sit * astride,
 To take thee kindly in between ;
 And then the Signs will be Thirteen.

THE EPITAPH.

HERE, five feet deep, lies on his back
 A cobbler, starrnonger, and quack ;
 Who to the stars, in pure good will,
 Does to his best look upward still.
 Weep, all you customers that use
 His pills, his almanacks, or shoes :

* " Tibi brachia contrahit ingens Scorpius," &c.

And you that did your fortunes seek,
 Step to his grave but once a-week ;
 This earth, which bears his body's print,
 You'll find has so much virtue in't,
 That I durst pawn my ears, 'twill tell,
 Whate'er concerns you full as well,
 In physic, stolen goods, or love,
 As he himself could, when above.

A DESCRIPTION OF THE MORNING.

WRITTEN IN APRIL 1709,

AND FIRST PRINTED IN THE TATLER.

Now hardly here and there a hackney-coach
 Appearing, show'd the ruddy morn's approach.
 Now Betty from her master's bed had flown,
 And softly stole to discompose her own;
 The slip-shod 'prentice from his master's door
 Had par'd the dirt, and sprinkled round the floor.
 Now Moll had whirl'd her mop with dextrous airs,
 Prepar'd to scrub the entry and the stairs.
 The youth with broomy stumps began to trace
 The kennel's edge, where wheels had worn the place. §

† A king of Spain, slain by Hercules.—H.

‡ The Archduke Charles was of the Hapsburg family.—H.

§ To find old nails.—FAULKNER.

The small-coal man was heard with cadence deep,
 Till drown'd in shriller notes of chimney-sweep :
 Duns at his lordship's gate began to meet ;
 And brickdust Moll had scream'd through half the street.

The turnkey now his flock returning sees,
 Duly let out a-nights to steal for fees :
 The watchful bailiffs take their silent stands,
 And schoolboys lag with satchels in their hands.

A DESCRIPTION OF A CITY SHOWER.

IN IMITATION OF VIRGIL'S GEORGICS.

WRITTEN IN OCTOBER 1710; AND FIRST PRINTED IN THE TATLER.

CAREFUL observers may foretel the hour,
 (By sure prognostics) when to dread a shower.
 While rain depends, the pensive cat gives o'er
 Her frolics, and pursues her tail no more.
 Returning home at night, you'll find the sink
 Strike your offended sense with double stink.
 If you be wise then go not far to dine :
 You'll spend in coach-hire more than save in wine.
 A coming shower your shooting corns presage,
 Old aches will throb, your hollow tooth will rage ;
 Sauntering in coffeehouse is Dulman seen ;
 He damns the climate, and complains of spleen.
 Meanwhile the South, rising with dabbled wings,
 A sable cloud athwart the welkin flings,
 That swill'd more liquor than it could contain,
 And, like a drunkard, gives it up again.

Brisk Susan whips her linen from the rope,
 While the first drizzling shower is borne aslope :
 Such is that sprinkling which some careless quean
 Flirts on you from her mop, but not so clean :
 You fly, invoke the gods ; then, turning, stop
 To rail ; she, singing, still whirls on her mop.
 Not yet the dust had shunn'd th' unequal strife,
 But, aided by the wind, fought still for life,
 And wafted with its foe by violent gust,
 'Twas doubtful which was rain, and which was dust.*
 Ah ! where must needy poet seek for aid,
 When dust and rain at once his coat invade ?
 † Sole coat ! where dust, cemented by the rain,
 Erects † the nap, and leaves a cloudy stain !
 Now in contiguous drops the flood comes down,
 Threatening with deluge this devoted town.
 To shops in crowds the daggled females fly,
 Pretend to cheapen goods, but nothing buy.
 The Templar spruce, while every spout's abroach,
 Stays till 'tis fair, yet seems to call a coach.
 The tuck'd-up sempstress walks with hasty strides,
 While streams run down her oil'd umbrella's sides.
 Here various kinds, by various fortunes led,
 Commence acquaintance underneath a shed.
 Triumphant Tories, and desponding Whigs, ‡
 Forget their feuds, and join to save their wigs.

* " 'Twas doubtful which was sea and which was sky."

GARTH'S Dispensary.

† Originally thus, but altered when Pope published the "Miscellanies :"

" His only coat, where dust confus'd with rain, Roughens the nap, and leaves a mingled stain."

‡ Written in the first year of the Earl of Oxford's ministry.

Box'd in a chair the Beau impatient sits,
 While spouts run clattering o'er the roof by fits,
 And ever and anon with frightful din
 The leather sounds; he trembles from within.
 So when Troy chairmen bore the wooden steed,
 Pregnant with Greeks impatient to be freed,
 (Those bully Greeks, who, as the moderns do,
 Instead of paying chairmen, ran them through)
 Laocoon struck the outside with his spear,
 And each imprison'd hero quak'd for fear.

Now from all parts the swelling kennels flow,
 And bear their trophies with them as they go:
 Filths of all hues and odour, seem to tell What street they sail'd from, by their sight and smell.

They, as each torrent drives with rapid force,
 From Smithfield to St Pulchre's shape their course,
 And in huge confluence join'd at Snowhill ridge,
 Fall from the conduit prone to Holborn bridge.
 Sweepings from butchers' stalls, dung, guts, and blood,
 Drown'd puppies, stinking sprats, all drench'd in mud,
 Dead cats, and turnip-tops come tumbling down the flood.

ON THE LITTLE HOUSE

BY

THE CHURCHYARD OF CASTLENOCK. 1710.

WHOEVER pleases to inquire
 Why yonder steeple wants a spire,

The grey old fellow, poet Joe,*
 The philosophic cause will show.
 Once on a time a western blast,
 At least twelve inches overcast,
 Reckoning roof, weathercock, and all,
 Which came with a prodigious fall ;
 And tumbling topsy-turvy round,
 Lit with its bottom on the ground :
 For, by the laws of gravitation,
 It fell into its proper station.

This is the little strutting pile
 You see just by the churchyard stile ;
 The walls in tumbling gave a knock,
 And thus the steeple got a shock ;
 From whence the neighbouring farmer calls
 The steeple, Knock ; the vicar, Walls. †

The vicar once a-week creeps in,
 Sits with his knees up to his chin ;
 Here cons his notes, and takes a whet,
 Till the small ragged flock is met.

A traveller, who by did pass,
 Observ'd the roof behind the grass ;
 On tiptoe stood, and rear'd his snout,
 And saw the parson creeping out :
 Was much surprised to see a crow
 Venture to build his nest so low.

A schoolboy ran unto't, and thought
 The crib was down, the blackbird caught.
 A third, who lost his way by night,
 Was forc'd for safety to alight,
 And stepping o'er the fabric roof,
 His horse had like to spoil his hoof.

* Mr Beaumont of Trim, remarkable, though not a very old man, for venerable white locks.

† Archdeacon Wall, a correspondent of Swift's.—F.

Warburton * took it in his noddle,
 This building was design'd a model ;
 Or of a pigeon-house or oven,
 To bake one loaf, and keep one dove in.

Then Mrs Johnson † gave her verdict,
 And every one was pleas'd that heard it ;
 All that you make this stir about
 Is but a still which wants a spout.
 The reverend Dr Raymond ‡ guess'd
 More probably than all the rest ;
 He said, but that it wanted room,
 It might have been a pigmy's tomb.

The doctor's family came by,
 And little miss began to cry,
 Give me that house in my own hand !
 Then madam bade the chariot stand,
 Call'd to the clerk, in manner mild,
 Pray, reach that thing here to the child :
 That thing, I mean, among the kale ;
 And here's to buy a pot of ale.

The clerk said to her in a heat,
 What ! sell my master's country seat,
 Where he comes every week from town !
 He would not sell it for a crown.
 Poh ! fellow, keep not such a pother ;
 In half an hour thou'lt make another.

Says Nancy, § I can make for miss
 A finer house ten times than this ;
 The dean will give me willow sticks,
 And Joe my apron-full of bricks.

A TOWN ECLOGUE. 1710.

(FIRST PRINTED IN THE TATLER.)

[Swift and Pope delighted to ridicule Philips' Pastorals, and wrote several parodies upon them, the fame of which has been swallowed up in Gay's Shepherd's Week.]

Scene, the Royal Exchange.

CORYDON.

Now the keen rigour of the winter's o'er,
No hail descends, and frost can pinch no more,
While other girls confess the genial spring,
And laugh aloud, or amorous ditties sing,
Secure from cold, their lovely necks display,
And throw each useless chaffing-dish away ;
Why sits my Phillis discontented here,
Nor feels the turn of the revolving year ?
Why on that brow dwell sorrow and dismay,
Where Loves were wont to sport, and Smiles to play ?

PHILLIS.

Ah, Corydon ! survey the 'Change around,
Through all the 'Change no wretch like me is found :
Alas ! the day, when I, poor heedless maid,
Was to your rooms in Lincoln's Inn betray'd ;
Then how you swore, how many vows you made !
Ye listening Zephyrs, that o'erheard his love,
Waft the soft accents to the gods above.

Alas! the day; for (O, eternal shame!)
I sold your handkerchiefs, and lost my fame.

CORYDON.

When I forget the favour you bestow'd,
Red herrings shall be spawn'd in Tyburn Road:
Fleet-Street, transform'd, become a flowery green,
And mass be sung where operas are seen.
The wealthy cit, and the St James's beau,
Shall change their quarters, and their joys forego;
Stock-jobbing, this, to Jonathan's shall come,
At the Groom Porter's, that play off his plum.

PHILLIS.

But what to me does all that love avail,
If, while I dose at home o'er porter's ale,
Each night with wine and wenches, you regale? }
My livelong hours in anxious cares are past,
And raging hunger lays my beauty waste.
On templars spruce in vain I glances throw,
And with shrill voice invite them as they go.
Expos'd in vain my glossy ribbands shine,
And unregarded wave upon the twine.
The week flies round, and when my profit's known,
I hardly clear enough to change a crown.

CORYDON.

Hard fate of virtue, thus to be distrest,
Thou fairest of thy trade, and far the best;
As fruitmen's stalls the summer market grace,
And ruddy peaches them; as first in place
Plumcake is seen o'er smaller pastry ware,
And ice on that: so Phillis does appear
In playhouse and in Park, above the rest
Of belles mechanic, elegantly drest.

PHILLIS.

And yet Crepundia, that conceited fair,
Amid her toys, affects a saucy air,
And views me hourly with a scornful eye.

CORYDON.

She might as well with bright Cleora vie.

PHILLIS.

With this large petticoat I strive in vain
To hide my folly past, and coming pain ;
'Tis now no secret ; she, and fifty more,
Observe the symptoms I had once before :
A second babe at Wapping must be plac'd,
When I scarce bear the charges of the last.

CORYDON.

What I could raise I sent ; a pound of plums,
Five shillings, and a coral for his gums ;
To-morrow I intend him something more.

PHILLIS.

I sent a frock and pair of shoes before.

CORYDON.

However, you shall home with me to-night,
Forget your cares, and revel in delight.
I have in store a pint or two of wine,
Some cracknels, and the remnant of a chine,

And now on either side, and all around,
The weighty shop-boards fall, and bars resound ;
Each ready sempstress slips her pattens on,
And ties her hood, preparing to begone.

A CONFERENCE

BETWEEN

SIR H. P—CE'S CHARIOT, AND MRS D. ST—D'S CHAIR.

[This dialogue, which bears strong internal marks of Swift's humour, was among those published by Dr Barrett, from the Whimsical Medley. The lady so severely handled was Miss Dorothy Stopford, afterwards Countess of Meath, and termed by Swift, in his Journal to Stella, "that owl Doll, Countess of Meath." She married General Gorges on the death of Lord Meath; and as her second husband and she died within a few days of each other, the circumstance occasioned a second satirical effusion of Swift's humour, entitled Dicky and Dolly.]

CHARIOT.

My pretty dear Cuz, tho' I've rov'd the town o'er,
 To dispatch in an hour some visits a score;
 Tho', since first on the wheels, I've been every day
 At the 'Change, at a raffling, at church, or a play;
 And the fops of the town are pleas'd with the notion
 Of calling your slave the perpetual motion;—
 Tho' oft at your door I have whin'd [out] my love,
 As my Knight does grin his at your Lady above;
 Yet ne'er before this, tho' I used all my care,
 I e'er was so happy to meet my dear Chair;
 And since we're so near, like birds of a feather,
 Let's e'en, as they say, set our horses together.

CHAIR.

By your awkward address, you're that thing which should carry,
 With one footman behind, our lover Sir Harry.
 By your language, I judge, you think me a wench;
 He that makes love to me, must make it in French.
 Thou that's drawn by two beasts, and carry'st a brute,
 Canst thou vainly e'er hope, I'll answer thy suit?
 Tho' sometimes you pretend to appear with your six,
 No regard to their colour, their sexes you mix:
 Then on the grand-paw you'd look very great,
 With your new-fashion'd glasses, and nasty old seat.
 Thus a beau I have seen strut with a cock'd hat,
 And newly rigg'd out, with a dirty cravat.
 You may think that you make a figure most shining,
 But its plain that you have an old cloak for a lining.
 Are those double-gilt nails? Where's the lustre of Kerry,
 To set off the Knight, and to finish the Jerry?
 If you hope I'll be kind, you must tell me what's due
 In George's-lane for you, ere I'll buckle to.

CHARIOT.

Why, how now, Doll Diamond, you're very alert;
 Is it your French breeding has made you so pert?
 Because I was civil, here's a stir with a pox:
 Who is it that values your — or your fox?
 Sure 'tis to her honour, he ever should bed
 His bloody red hand to her bloody red head.
 You're proud of your gilding; but I tell you, each nail
 Is only just ting'd with a rub at her tail:
 And although it may pass for gold on a ninny,
 Sure we know a Bath shilling soon from a guinea.

Nay, her foretop's a cheat ; each morn she does black it,

Yet, ere it be night, it's the same with her placket.

I'll ne'er be run down any more with your cant ;

Your velvet was wore before in a mant,

On the back of her mother ; but now 'tis much dul-
ler,—

The fire she carries hath changed its colour.

Those creatures that draw me you never would mind,

If you'd but look on your own Pharaoh's lean kine ;

They're taken for spectres, they're so meagre and spare,

Drawn damnably low by your sorrel mare.

We know how your lady was in you befriended ;

You're not to be paid for 'till the lawsuit is ended :

But her bond it is good, he need not to doubt ;

She is two or three years above being out.

Could my Knight be advis'd, he should ne'er spend his vigour

On one he can't hope of e'er making bigger.

A DIALOGUE

BETWEEN

SIR WILLIAM HANDCOCK AND THADY FITZPATRICK,
IN THE DEVIL'S ANTICHAMBER.

Also from the Whimsical Miscellany.

THADY.

YOU'RE welcome Sir William; by my shoul and salvation,

I rejoice for to see one from my own nation:

We have long wanted news: was it growing wealthy,
Has made all my brothers so damnable healthy?

When I think of their number, I look for them faster;

Sure they are not grown honest, and quitted their Master.

Come, never look squeamish, nor be out of order,
We're here on a level, good Master Recorder.

Let me know what has pass'd, and you'll find I'll be civil,

And speak a good word for you here to the Devil.

SIR WILLIAM.

Oh, thank you, dear Thady, and must own for my part,

It's much more your goodness than it is my desert;

But, to speak for his fee, you know 'twas our calling;

Which because I could not, I then fell a-bawling.

I never stuck out to quote a false case:

And to back it, I e'er had an impudent face;

Or on my right hand I had always my brother,

To vouch, which we still did, the one for the other.

To be sure, to be rich was always my guide ;
 To take, when I could, a fee on each side.
 All this you well know. But pr'ythee now tell
 If I have any more acquaintance in hell.
 Is not that Tullamore ? *

THADY.

You see how he trudges
 At the head of a shoal of unrighteous judges.
 By oppression and cheating, by rapine and lust,
 We shall in good time have the rest of the Trust.
 But our Master, the Devil, has solemnly swore,
 Till they're out of commission, not to admit more.
 If you speak me but fair, you shall not go far
 To meet with your friends of the Bench or the Bar :
 Look at Reynolds, and Lyndon, and Whitshed, and Keating,
 The four rogues are all got together a prating.

SIR WILLIAM.

Pr'ythee, where is fat Hely ? I durst lay my life,
 That he's got to heaven, by help of his wife.

THADY.

You'll ever be urging a reason that's faint ;
 If that would have done, we might each be a saint.
 But what is become of Sir Toby and Stephen ? †
 There's neither of them, I am sure, gone to heaven.

* John Moore, of Croghan, in the King's County ; created in 1715, Baron Moore of Tullamore : in 1716, and again in Feb. 1722-3, appointed one of the Lords Commissioners for holding the Great Seal during the absence of Lord Chancellor Middleton.

—BARRETT.

† Probably Sir Theobald Butler, and Sir Stephen Rice. The latter was Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer.—BARRETT.

Does your brother as yet speak law in a cause ;
 And has Pauca left off making use of his claws ?
 Does the Bar from the Bench with patience still pocket
 The calling them rogue, and rascal, and blockhead ?

SIR WILLIAM.

Faith, Thady, our Judges are grown very humble ;
 And one is suspicious, he'll soon have a tumble.
 The new ones they keep the old ones in awe,
 And have taught them civility, prudence, and law.

THADY.

Pox take me, Sir William, why was not I asking,
 All this time you've been here, for poor Clara Gas-coyne ?
 The woman that lay so long by my side ;—
 But I show'd I forgot her before that I died.
 I believe she's unmarried, for I think I took care
 To leave her but little, and much to my heir.

SIR WILLIAM.

She still is thy widow, thou barbarous teague ;
 Both living and dead, thous't to her been a plague :
 It's not for that sin, that I am come here,
 Having left all the wealth I had to my dear.

THADY.

That thou e'er wert a blockhead, you need not now
 own,
 But this thy last action all others does crown :
 Thou scarce wert got hither, thou pitiful cully,
 Before she had gotten a lusty young bully :
 I have of our Master a proverb to tell you ;
 What's got o'er his back, is spent under his belly.

* This Dialogue is taken from the same MS. ; and ascribed to Swift on conjecture. It must have been written about 1703 ; about which time Sir William Handcock, Recorder of Dublin, died, and was succeeded in that office by Mr John Förster. Thady Fitzpatrick represented the town of Maryborough in King James's Parliament.—BARRETT.

TO LORD HARLEY, ON HIS MARRIAGE,
OCTOBER 31, 1713.

[Lord Harley married Lady Henrietta Cavendish Holles, the daughter and sole heiress of John Duke of Newcastle. Bolingbroke malignantly called this match "the ultimate end of a certain administration." It was certainly the only advantage which the Earl of Oxford's family derived from his possession of ministerial power.]

AMONG the numbers who employ
Their tongues and pens to give you joy,
Dear Harley ! generous youth, admit
What friendship dictates more than wit.
Forgive me, when I fondly thought
(By frequent observations taught)
A spirit so inform'd as yours
Could never prosper in amours.
The God of Wit, and Light, and Arts,
With all acquir'd and natural parts,
Whose harp could savage beasts enchant,
Was an unfortunate gallant.

Had Bacchus after Daphne reel'd,
The nymph had soon been brought to yield:
Or, had embroider'd Mars pursued,
The nymph would ne'er have been a prude.
Ten thousand footsteps, full in view,
Mark out the way where Daphne flew:
For such is all the sex's flight,
They fly from learning, wit, and light:
They fly, and none can overtake
But some gay coxcomb, or a rake.

How then, dear Harley, could I guess
That you should meet, in love, success?
For, if those ancient tales be true,
Phœbus was beautiful as you:
Yet Daphne never slack'd her pace,
For wit and learning spoil'd his face.
And since the same resemblance held
In gifts wherein you both excell'd,
I fancy'd every nymph would run
From you, as from Latona's son.
Then where, said I, shall Harley find
A virgin of superior mind,
With wit and virtue to discover,
And pay the merit of her lover?

This character shall Ca'endish claim,
Born to retrieve her sex's fame.
The chief among the glittering crowd,
Of titles, birth, and fortune proud,
(As fools are insolent and vain)
Madly aspir'd to wear her chain:
But Pallas, guardian of the maid,
Descending to her charge's aid,
Held out Medusa's snaky locks,
Which stupify'd them all to stocks.
The nymph with indignation view'd
The dull, the noisy, and the lewd:

For Pallas, with celestial light,
Had purify'd her mortal sight ;
Show'd her the virtues all combin'd,
Fresh blooming, in young Harley's mind.
Terrestrial nymphs, by formal arts,
Display their various nets for hearts :
Their looks are all by method set,
When to be prude, and when coquette ;
Yet, wanting skill and power to choose,
Their only pride is to refuse.
But, when a goddess would bestow
Her love on some bright youth below,
Round all the earth she casts her eyes ;
And then, descending from the skies,
Makes choice of him she fancies best,
And bids the ravish'd youth be bless'd.
Thus the bright empress of the morn
Chose for her spouse a mortal born :
The goddess made advances first ;
Else what aspiring hero durst ?
Though, like a virgin of fifteen,
She blushes when by mortals seen ;
Still blushes, and with speed retires,
When Sol pursues her with his fires.

Diana thus, Heaven's chastest queen,
Struck with Endymion's graceful mien,
Down from her silver chariot came,
And to the shepherd own'd her flame.

Thus Ca'endish, as Aurora bright,
And chaster than the Queen of Night,
Descended from her sphere to find
A mortal of superior kind.

PHYLLIS ;

OR, THE PROGRESS OF LOVE, 1716.

DESPONDING Phyllis was endued
 With every talent of a prude :
 She trembled when a man drew near ;
 Salute her, and she turn'd her ear :
 If o'er against her you were plac'd,
 She durst not look above your waist :
 She'd rather take you to her bed,
 Than let you see her dress her head ;
 In church you hear her, through the crowd,
 Repeat the absolution loud :
 In church, secure behind her fan,
 She durst behold that monster man :
 There practis'd how to place her head,
 And bite her lips to make them red ;
 Or, on the mat devoutly kneeling,
 Would lift her eyes up to the ceiling,
 And heave her bosom unaware,
 For neighbouring beaux to see it bare.
 At length a lucky lover came,
 And found admittance to the dame.
 Suppose all parties now agreed,
 The writings drawn, the lawyer fee'd,
 The vicar and the ring bespoke :
 Guess, how could such a match be broke ?
 See then what mortals place their bliss in !
 Next morn by times the bride was missing :
 The mother scream'd, the father chid ;
 Where can this idle wench be hid ?
 No news of Phyl ! the bridegroom came,
 And thought his bride had skulk'd for shame ;

Because her father us'd to say,
 The girl had such a bashful way !
 Now John the butler must be sent
 To learn the road that Phyllis went :
 The groom was wish'd to saddle crop ;
 For John must neither light nor stop,
 But find her, wheresoe'er she fled,
 And bring her back alive or dead.

See here again the devil to do !
 For truly John was missing too :
 The horse and pillion both were gone
 Phyllis, it seems, was fled with John.

Old Madam, who went up to find
 What papers Phyl had left behind,
 A letter on the toilet sees,

“ To my much honour'd father—these—”
 ('Tis always done, romances tell us,
 When daughters run away with fellows)
 Fill'd with the choicest common-places,
 By others us'd in the like cases.

“ That long ago a fortune-teller
 Exactly said what now befel her ;
 And in a glass had made her see
 A servant man of low degree.
 It was her fate, must be forgiven ;
 For marriages were made in Heaven :
 His pardon begg'd : but, to be plain,
 She'd do't if 'twere to do again :
 Thank'd God, 'twas neither shame nor sin ;
 For John was come of honest kin.

Love never thinks of rich and poor ;
 She'd beg with John from door to door.
 Forgive her, if it be a crime ;
 She'll never do't another time.
 She ne'er before in all her life
 Once disobey'd him, maid nor wife.”

One argument she summ'd up all in,
 "The thing was done and past recalling;
 And therefore hop'd she should recover
 His favour when his passion's over.
 She valued not what others thought her,
 And was—his most obedient daughter."
 Fair maidens all attend the Muse,
 Who now the wandering pair pursues:
 Away they rode in homely sort,
 Their journey long, their money short;
 The loving couple well bemir'd;
 The horse and both the riders tir'd:
 Their victuals bad, their lodgings worse;
 Phyl cried! and John began to curse:
 Phyl wish'd that she had strain'd a limb,
 When first she ventur'd out with him;
 John wish'd, that he had broke a leg,
 When first for her he quitted Peg.

But what adventures more befel them,
 The Muse has now no time to tell them;
 How Johnny wheedled, threaten'd, fawn'd,
 Till Phyllis all her trinkets pawn'd:
 How oft she broke her marriage vows,
 In kindness to maintain her spouse,
 Till swains unwholesome spoil'd the trade;
 For now the surgeons must be paid,
 To whom those perquisites are gone,
 In Christian justice due to John.

When food and raiment now grew scarce,
 Fate put a period to the farce,
 And with exact poetic justice;
 For John was landlord, Phyllis hostess;
 They keep, at Staines, the Old Blue Boar,
 Are cat and dog, and rogue and whore.

HORACE, BOOK IV. ODE IX.

ADDRESSED TO ARCHBISHOP KING, 1718.

[With Archbishop King, Swift preserved a sort of dubious friendship, the nature of which is best illustrated by reference to the correspondence between them and the corresponding passages in the Journal to Stella.]

VIRTUE conceal'd within our breast
Is inactivity at best :
But never shall the Muse endure
To let your virtues lie obscure ;
Or suffer Envy to conceal
Your labours for the public weal.
Within your breast all wisdom lies,
Either to govern or advise ;
Your steady soul preserves her frame,
In good and evil time's the same.
Pale Avarice and lurking Fraud,
Stand in your sacred presence aw'd ;
Your hand alone from gold abstains,
Which drags the slavish world in chains.
Him for a happy man I own,
Whose fortune is not overgrown ;
And happy he who wisely knows
To use the gifts that Heaven bestows ;
Or if it please the powers divine,
Can suffer want and not repine.

The man who infamy to shun
 Into the arms of death to run;
 That man is ready to defend,
 With life his country or his friend.

TO MR DELANY, Nov. 10, 1718.

[The Rev. Patrick Delany, an excellent and learned divine, had been greatly patronized by Sir Constantine Phipps, who was chancellor of Ireland under Harley's administration. Being in a corresponding degree discountenanced by the Whig ministry, he was recommended to Swift as much by similarity of situation as by learning, wit, and social talents. He was at this time a tutor in Trinity college, Dublin. The following piece has relation to the playful exercises of fancy, which Sheridan, Delany, the Grattans, and other friends of the Dean, were wont to indulge, and which they sometimes drove to the verge of extravagance.]

To you whose virtues, I must own
 With shame, I have too lately known;
 To you by art and nature taught
 To be the man I long have sought,
 Had not ill Fate, perverse and blind,
 Plac'd you in life too far behind:
 Or, what I should repine at more,
 Plac'd me in life too far before:
 To you the Muse this verse bestows,
 Which might as well have been in prose;
 No thought, no fancy, no sublime,
 But simple topics told in rhyme.

Talents for conversation fit
 Are humour, breeding, sense, and wit:
 The last, as boundless as the wind,
 Is well conceiv'd, though not defin'd:
 For, sure by wit is chiefly meant
 Applying well what we invent.
 What humour is, not all the tribe
 Of logic-mongers can describe;
 Here nature only acts her part,
 Unhelp'd by practice, books, or art:
 For wit and humour differ quite;
 That gives surprise, and this delight.
 Humour is odd, grotesque, and wild,
 Only by affectation spoil'd:
 'Tis never by invention got,
 Men have it when they know it not.

Our conversation to refine,
 Humour and wit must both combine:
 From both we learn to rally well,
 Wherein sometimes the French excel;
 Voiture, in various lights, displays
 That irony which turns to praise:
 His genius first found out the rule
 For an obliging ridicule:
 He flatters with peculiar air
 The brave, the witty, and the fair:
 And fools would fancy he intends
 A satire where he most commends.*

* These lines are perfectly characteristic of Voiture, who was famous for introducing new and easy graces into the French language, and giving a more agreeable turn to many trite and familiar modes of expression, by a happiness peculiar to himself. His irony has been particularly admired for its singularity and address. He, as well as the courtly Waller, was the poet of the fair;

But as a poor pretending beau,
 Because he fain would make a show,
 Nor can arrive at silver lace,
 Takes up with copper in the place:
 So the pert dunces of mankind,
 Whene'er they would be thought refin'd,
 As if the difference lay abstruse
 'Twixt raillery and gross abuse;
 To show their parts, will scold and rail,
 Like porters o'er a pot of ale.

Such is that clan of boisterous bears,
 Always together by the ears;
 Shrewd fellows and arch wags, a tribe
 That meet for nothing but a gibe;
 Who first run one another down,
 And then fall foul on all the town;
 Skill'd in the horse-laugh and dry rub,
 And call'd by excellence The Club.
 I mean your Butler, Dawson, Car,
 All special friends, and always jar.

The mettled and the vicious steed
 Differ as little in their breed!
 Nay, Voiture is as like Tom Leigh,
 As rudeness is to repartee.

If what you said I wish unspoke,
 'Twill not suffice it was a joke;
 Reproach not, though in jest, a friend
 For those defects he cannot mend;

and both have celebrated the charming Countess of Carlisle. * It has been observed, that few authors have suffered so much by translation as Voiture. His native beauties are of too delicate a kind to be copied in a foreign language.

* It appears, by Voiture's Letters, that he was in England in 1633.

His lineage, calling, shape, or sense,
If nam'd with scorn, gives just offence.

What use in life to make men fret,
Part in worse humour than they met?
Thus all society is lost,
Men laugh at one another's cost;
And half the company is teas'd
That came together to be pleas'd:
For all buffoons have most in view
To please themselves, by vexing you.

You wonder now to see me write
So gravely on a subject light;
Some part of what I here design
Regards a friend * of yours and mine;
Who neither void of sense nor wit,
Yet seldom judges what is fit,
But sallies oft beyond his bounds,
And takes unmeasurable rounds.

When jests are carried on too far,
And the loud laugh begins the war,
You keep your countenance for shame,
Yet still you think your friend to blame:
For though men cry they love a jest,
'Tis but when others stand the test;
And (would you have their meaning known)
They love a jest that is their own.
You must, although the point be nice,
Bestow your friend some good advice;
One hint from you will set him right,
And teach him how to be polite.
Bid him like you observe with care,
Whom to be hard on, whom to spare;

* Dr Sheridan.—H.

Nor indistinctly to suppose
 All subjects like Dan Jackson's nose. *
 To study the obliging jest,
 By reading those who teach it best;
 For prose I recommend Voiture's, †
 For verse (I speak my judgment) yours.
 He'll find the secret out from thence,
 To rhyme all day without offence;
 And I no more shall then accuse
 The flirts of his ill-manner'd muse.
 If he be guilty, you must mend him?
 If he be innocent, defend him.

* Which was afterward the subject of several poems by Dr Swift and others.—H.

† Sa prose, dit Pelisson, est ce qu'il y a de plus châtié, et de plus exact; elle a un certain air de galanterie, qui ne se trouve point ailleurs, et quelque chose de si naturel, et de si fin tout ensemble, que la lecture, en est infiniment agréable. Ses vers ne sont peut-être guères moins beaux, encore qu'ils soient plus négligés; mais quand il méprise les règles, c'est en maître."—MORERI, VIII. 167.

AN ELEGY

ON THE DEATH OF DEMAR, THE USURER :

WHO DIED THE SIXTH OF JULY, 1720.

[My late regretted friend, Mr Cooper Walker, favoured me with the following notices concerning this elegy : “ The subject was John Demar, a great merchant in Dublin, who died 6th July 1720. Swift, with some of his usual party, happened to be in Mr Sheridan’s, in Capel Street, when the news of Demar’s death was brought to them ; and the elegy was the joint composition of the company.”]

Know all men by these presents, Death, the tamer,
By mortgage has secur’d the corpse of Demar :
Nor can four hundred thousand sterling pound
Redeem him from his prison under ground.
His heirs might well, of all his wealth possess’d,
Bestow to bury him one iron chest.
Plutus, the god of wealth, will joy to know
His faithful steward in the shades below.
He walk’d the streets and wore a threadbare cloak ;
He din’d and supp’d at charge of other folk :
And by his looks, had he held out his palms,
He might be thought an object fit for alms.
So, to the poor if he refus’d his pelf,
He us’d them full as kindly as himself.

Where'er he went, he never saw his betters ;
Lords, knights, and squires, were all his humble
debtors ;

And under hand and seal, the Irish nation
Were forc'd to own to him their obligation.

He that could once have half a kingdom bought,
In half a minute is not worth a groat.

His coffers from the coffin could not save,
Nor all his interest keep him from the grave.

A golden monument would not be right,
Because we wish the earth upon him light.

Oh London Tavern ! * thou hast lost a friend,
Though in thy walls he ne'er did farthing spend :
He touch'd the pence when others touch'd the pot ;
The hand that sign'd the mortgage paid the shot.

Old as he was, no vulgar known disease
On him could ever boast a power to seize ;
“ † But as he weigh'd his gold, grim Death in spite
Cast in his dart, which made three moidores light ;
And, as he saw his darling money fail,
Blew his last breath to sink the lighter scale.”
He who so long was current, 'twould be strange
If he should now be cry'd down since his change.

The sexton shall green sods on thee bestow ;
Alas, the sexton is thy banker now !
A dismal banker must that banker be,
Who gives no bills but of mortality !

* A tavern in Dublin, where Demar kept his office.—F.

Mr Walker found this note in the diary of a deceased friend :
“ As I passed through Smithfield (Dublin), I saw the house,
No. 34, in which the remarkable John Demar, the usurer, lived and died. He was buried in the S. W. corner of St Paul's churchyard.—No tombstone for many years.”

† These four lines were written by Stella.—F.

EPITAPH ON THE SAME.

BENEATH this verdant hillock lies
Demar, the wealthy and the wise,
His heirs, that he might safely rest,
Have put his carcase in a chest ;
The very chest in which, they say,
His other self, his money, lay.
And, if his heirs continue kind
To that dear self he left behind,
I dare believe, that four in five
Will think his better half alive.

TO MRS HOUGHTON OF BOURMONT,

ON PRAISING HER HUSBAND TO DR SWIFT.

You always are making a God of your Spouse ;
But this neither Reason nor Conscience allows :
Perhaps you will say, 'tis in gratitude due,
And you adore him, because he adores you.
Your argument's weak, and so you will find ;
For you, by this rule, must adore all mankind.

VERSES,

WRITTEN ON A WINDOW, AT THE DEANERY HOUSE, ST PATRICK'S.

ARE the guests of this house still doom'd to be cheated?

Sure the Fates have decreed they by halves should be treated.

In the days of good John, * if you came here to dine,
You had choice of good meat, but no choice of good wine.

In Jonathan's reign, if you came here to eat,
You have choice of good wine, but no choice of good meat.

O Jove! then how fully might all sides be blest,
Would'st thou but agree to this humble request!
Put both deans in one; or, if that's too much trouble,

Instead of the deans, make the deanery double.

ON ANOTHER WINDOW. †

A BARD, on whom Phœbus his spirit bestow'd,
Resolving t' acknowledge the bounty he ow'd,

* Dr Sterne, the predecessor of Swift in the deanery of St Patrick's, and afterward bishop of Clogher, was distinguished for his hospitality.—F.

† Written by Dr Delany, in conjunction with Stella, as appears from the verses which follow.

Found out a new method at once of confessing,
 And making the most of so mighty a blessing :
 To the God he'd be grateful ; but mortals he'd chouse,
 By making his patron preside in his house ;
 And wisely foresaw this advantage from thence,
 That the God would in honour bear most of th'
 expence ;
 So the bard he finds drink, and leaves Phœbus to treat
 With the thoughts he inspires, regardless of meat.
 Hence they that come hither expecting to dine,
 Are always fobb'd off with sheer wit and sheer wine.

APOLLO TO THE DEAN. 1720.

[This was written by Swift, in reply to the verses on the windows.]

RIGHT trusty, and so forth— we let you to know
 We are very ill us'd by you mortals below.
 For, first, I have often by chemists been told,
 Though I know nothing on't, it is I that make gold ;
 Which when you have got, you so carefully hide it,
 That, since I was born, I hardly have spy'd it.
 Then it must be allow'd, that, whenever I shine,
 I forward the grass, and I ripen the vine ;

To me the good fellows apply for relief,
Without whom they could get neither claret nor beef:

Yet their wine and their victuals those curmudgeon
lubbards

Lock up from my sight in cellars and cupboards.

That I have an ill eye, they wickedly think,

And taint all their meat, and sour all their drink:

But, thirdly and lastly, it must be allow'd,

I alone can inspire the poetical crowd:

This is gratefully own'd by each boy in the college,

Whom if I inspire, it is not to my knowledge.

This every pretender to rhyme will admit,

Without troubling his head about judgment or wit.

These gentlemen use me with kindness and freedom,

And as for their works, when I please I may read
'em.

They lie open on purpose on counters and stalls,

And the titles I view, when I shine on the walls.

But a comrade of yours, that traitor Delany,
Whom I for your sake love better than any:

And, of my mere motion, and special good grace,

Intended in time to succeed in your place,

On Tuesday the tenth seditiously came

With a certain false trait'ress, one Stella by name,

To the deanery house, and on the north glass,

Where for fear of the cold I never can pass,

Then and there, vi et armis, with a certain utensil,

Of value five shillings, in English a pencil,

Did maliciously, falsely, and traitorously write,

While Stella aforesaid stood by with a light.

My sister had lately depos'd upon oath,

That she stopt in her course to look at them both;

That Stella was helping, abetting and aiding;

And still, as he writ, stood smiling and reading:

That her eyes were as bright as myself at noon-day,
 But her graceful black locks were all mingled with grey :

And by the description I certainly know,
 'Tis the nymph that I courted some ten years ago ;
 Whom when I with the best of my talents endued
 On her promise of yielding, she acted the prude :
 That some verses were writ with felonious intent,
 Direct to the north, where I never yet went :
 That the letters appear'd revers'd through the pane,
 But in Stella's bright eyes they were plac'd right
 again :

Wherein she distinctly could read every line,
 And presently guess'd that the fancy was mine,
 She can swear to the person, whom oft she has seen
 At night between Cavan Street and College Green.
 Now you see why his verses so seldom are shown ;
 The reason is plain, they are none of his own :
 And observe while you live that no man is shy
 To discover the goods he came honestly by.
 If I light on a thought, he will certainly steal it,
 And when he has got it, find ways to conceal it :
 Of all the fine things he keeps in the dark,
 There's scarce one in ten but what has my mark ;
 And let them be seen by the world if he dare,
 I'll make it appear they are all stolen ware.
 But as for the poem he writ on your sash,
 I think I have now got him under my lash ;
 My sister transcrib'd it last night to his sorrow,
 And the public shall see't, if I live till to-morrow.
 Through the zodiac around, it shall quickly be spread
 In all parts of the globe where your language is read.

He knows very well, I ne'er gave a refusal,
 When he ask'd for my aid in the forms that are usual :

But the secret is this ; I did lately intend
 To write a few verses on you as my friend :
 I studied a fortnight, before I could find,
 As I rode in my chariot, a thought to my mind,
 And resolv'd the next winter (for that is my time,
 When the days are at shortest) to get it in rhyme ;
 Till then it was lock'd in my box at Parnassus ;
 When that subtle companion, in hopes to surpass
 us,

Conveys out my paper of hints by a trick,
 (For I think in my conscience he deals with Old Nick)

And from my own stock provided with topics,
 He gets to a window beyond both the tropics,
 There out of my sight, just against the north zone,
 Writes down my conceits, and then calls them his
 own ;

And you, like a booby, the bubble can swallow :
 Now who but Delany can write like Apollo ?
 High treason by statute ! yet here you object,
 He only stole hints, but the verse is correct ;
 Though the thought be Apollo's 'tis finely ex-
 press'd ;

So a thief steals my horse, and has him well dress'd.
 Now whereas the said criminal seems past repentance,

We Phœbus think fit to proceed to the sentence.
 Since Delany has dar'd, like Prometheus his sire,
 To clime to our region, and thence to steal fire ;
 We order a vulture in shape of the spleen,
 To prey on his liver, but not to be seen.
 And we order our subjects of every degree
 To believe all his verses were written by me :
 And under the pain of our highest displeasure,
 To call nothing his but the rhyme and the measure.

And lastly, for Stella, just out of her prime,
 I'm too much revenged already by time.
 In return to her scorn, I sent her diseases,
 But will now be her friend whenever she pleases :
 And the gifts I bestow'd her will find her a lover,
 Though she lives till she's grey as a badger all over.

NEWS FROM PARNASSUS.

BY DR DELANY.

OCCASIONED BY " APOLLO TO THE DEAN."

1720.

PARNASSUS, February the twenty-seventh.
 The Poets assembled here on the eleventh,
 Convened by Apollo, who gave them to know,
 He'd have a vicegerent in his empire below ;
 But declared that no bard should this honour inhe-
 rit,
 Till the rest had agreed he surpass'd them in merit :
 Now this, you'll allow, was a difficult case,
 For each bard believ'd he'd a right to the place ;
 So, finding the assembly grow warm in debate,
 He put them in mind of his Phaeton's fate :

'Twas urg'd to no purpose; disputes higher rose,
Scarce Phœbus himself could their quarrels compose;

Till at length he determined that every bard
Should (each in his turn) be patiently heard.

First, one who believ'd he excell'd in translation* ,

Founds his claim on the doctrine of man's transmi-gration;

"Since the soul of great Milton was given to me,
I hope the Convention will quickly agree."

"Agree!" quoth Apollo: "from whence is this fool?"

Is he just come from reading Pythagoras at school?
Begone, sir, you've got your subscriptions in time,
And given in return neither reason nor rhyme."

To the next says the God, "Though now I won't choose you,

I'll tell you the reason for which I refuse you:
Love's Goddess has oft to her parents complain'd,
Of my favouring a bard who her empire disdain'd;
That at my instigation, a poem you writ,
Which to beauty and youth preferr'd judgment and wit;

That, to make you a Laureat, I gave the first voice,
Inspiring the Britons t'approve of my choice.

Jove sent her to me, her power to try;
The Goddess of beauty what God can deny?
She forbids your preferment; I grant her desire.

Appease the fair Goddess: you then may rise higher."

* Dr Trapp, of whom Swift talks contemptuously in his Journal.

The next * that appear'd had good hopes of succeeding;
 For he merited much for his wit and his breeding.
 'Twas wise in the Britons no favour to show him.
 He else might expect they should pay what they owe him.

And therefore they prudently chose to discard
 The Patriot, whose merits they would not reward :
 The God, with a smile, bade his favourite advance,
 " You were sent by Astræa her envoy to France :
 You bend your ambition to rise in the state ;
 I refuse you, because you could stoop to be great."

Then a bard who had been a successful translator, †

" The convention allows me a versificator."
 Says Apollo, " You mention the least of your merit ;

By your works, it appears you have much of my spirit.

I esteem you so well, that to tell you the truth,
 The greatest objection against you's your youth :
 Then be not concern'd you are now laid aside ;
 If you live you shall certainly one day preside."

Another, low bending, Apollo thus greets,
 " 'Twas I taught your subjects to walk through the streets." ‡

" You taught them to walk ! why, they knew it before :

But give me the bard that can teach them to soar.
 Whenever he claims, 'tis his right, I'll confess,
 Who lately attempted my style with success ;

* Mr Prior.—N.

† Mr Pope was probably here meant.—N.

‡ Mr Gay ; alluding to his " Trivia."—N.

Who writes like Apollo has most of his spirit,
 And therefore 'tis just I distinguish his merit ;
 Who makes it appear, by all he has writ,
 His judgment alone can set bounds to his wit ;
 Like Virgil correct, with his own native ease,
 But excels even Virgil in elegant praise :
 Who admires the ancients, and knows 'tis their due,
 Yet writes in a manner entirely new ;
 Though none with more ease their depths can explore,
 Yet whatever he wants he takes from my store ;
 Though I'm fond of his virtues, his pride I can see,
 In scorning to borrow from any but me :
 It is owing to this, that, like Cynthia, his lays Enlighten the world by reflecting my rays."
 This said, the whole audience soon found out his drift :
 The convention was summon'd in favour of SWIFT.

APOLLO'S EDICT.

OCCASIONED BY "NEWS FROM PARNASSUS."

IRELAND is now our royal care,
 We lately fix'd our viceroy there :
 How near was she to be undone,
 Till pious love inspired her son !
 What cannot our vicegerent do,
 As poet and as patriot too ?

Let his success our subjects sway,
 Our inspirations to obey,
 And follow where he leads the way :
 Then study to correct your taste ;
 Nor beaten paths be longer trac'd.

No simile shall be begun,
 With rising or with setting sun ;
 And let the secret head of Nile
 Be ever banish'd from your isle.

When wretched lovers live on air,
 I beg you'll the chameleon spare ;
 And when you'd make a hero grander,
 Forget he's like a salamander. *

No son of mine shall dare to say,
 Aurora usher'd in the day,
 Or ever name the milky-way.

You all agree, I make no doubt,
 Elijah's mantle is worn out.

The bird of Jove shall toil no more
 To teach the humble wren to soar.
 Your tragic heroes shall not rant,
 Nor shepherds use poetic cant.
 Simplicity alone can grace
 The manners of the rural race.
 Theocritus and Philips be
 Your guides to true simplicity.

When Damon's soul shall take its flight,
 Though poets have the second-sight,
 They shall not see a trail of light.
 Nor shall the vapours upwards rise,
 Nor a new star adorn the skies :
 For who can hope to place one there,
 As glorious as Belinda's hair ?

* See the Verses to Lord Cutts.

Yet, if his name you'd eternize,
And must exalt him to the skies ;
Without a star this may be done :
So Tickell mourn'd his Addison.

If Anna's happy reign you praise,
Pray, not a word of halcyon days :
Nor let my votaries show their skill
In aping lines from Cooper's Hill ;
For know I cannot bear to hear
The mimicry of deep, yet clear.

Whene'er my viceroy is address'd,
Against the phœnix I protest.
When poets soar in youthful strains,
No Phaeton to hold the reins.

When you describe a lovely girl,
No lips of coral, teeth of pearl,

Cupid shall ne'er mistake another,
However beauteous, for his mother ;
Nor shall his darts at random fly
From magazine in Celia's eye.
With woman compounds I am cloy'd,
Which only pleas'd in Biddy Floyd.
For foreign aid what need they roam,
Whom fate has amply blest at home ?

Unerring Heaven, with bounteous hand,
Has form'd a model for your land,
Whom Jove endow'd with every grace ;
The glory of the Granard race ;
Now destin'd by the powers divine
The blessing of another line.
Then, would you paint a matchless dame,
Whom you'd consign to endless fame ?
Invoke not Cytherea's aid,
Nor borrow from the blue-ey'd maid ;

Nor need you on the Graces call;
Take qualities from Donegal.*

THE DESCRIPTION OF AN IRISH FEAST.

TRANSLATED ALMOST LITERALLY OUT OF THE ORIGINAL IRISH.

1720.

[O'Rourke, a powerful chieftain of Ulster in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, was induced to make a visit to the court of that sovereign; and, in order to take leave of his neighbours with becoming splendour, he assembled them in the great hall of his castle, which was situated in the county of Leitrim, and still exists as a ruin. He entertained his numerous guests with such a profusion of the rude hospitality of the period, that the memory of his feast long survived in tradition; the longer perhaps on account of the tragical fate of O'Rourke himself, who was put to death in England. Hugh Mac Guaran, Esq. of Leitrim, a contemporary of the celebrated Carolan, composed, upon this traditionary foundation, the celebrated song of Plearaca na Ruarcah. The fame of the ditty having reached Dean Swift, he was supplied, at his own request, with a literal version, from which he executed the following very spirited translation. It was afterwards translated by Mr Charles Wilson, who published Irish poems in 1782, from whose scarce and forgotten, though very curious collection, I have transferred the original Irish words, for the benefit of the curious in Hibernian antiquities.]

* Lady Catharine Forbes, daughter of the first Earl of Grarnard, and second wife of Arthur third Earl of Donegal.

O'Rourke's noble fare
 Will ne'er be forgöt,
 By those who were there,
 Or those who were not.

His revels to keep,
 We sup and we dine
 On seven score sheep,
 Fat bullocks, and swine.

Usquebaugh to our feast
 In pails was brought up,
 An hundred at least,
 And a madder* our cup.

O there is the sport!
 We rise with the light
 In disorderly sort,
 From snoring all night.

Come, harper, strike up ;
 But, first, by your favour,

 Ne'er dream't of the matter,

THE PROGRESS OF BEAUTY. 1720.

WHEN first Diana leaves her bed,
Vapours and steams her look disgrace.
A frowzy dirty-colour'd red
Sits on her cloudy wrinkled face :

But by degrees, when mounted high,
Her artificial face appears
Down from her window in the sky,
Her spots are gone, her visage clears.

'Twixt earthly females and the moon,
All parallels exactly run :
If Celia should appear too soon,
Alas, the nymph would be undone !

He brought no holy water,
The riot to charm ;
But a switch, for the matter
Scarce so thick as his arm.

While he deem'd them all quell'd,
This churchman so able,
By a back-stroke was fell'd,
Like a log on the table.

Next up got a friar
To appease these rude members ;
But was pitched cross the fire
With his breech on the embers.

While loudly he hollowed,
" Would you match you with me,
Who my studies have followed
At Rome beyond sea."

While you thrum'd old ballads,
Sitting squat like a boor ;
With potatoes for sallads,
In the bog of Shiemoor.

To see her from her pillow rise,
All reeking in a cloudy steam,
Crack'd lips, foul teeth, and gummy eyes,
Poor Strephon! how would he blaspheme!

Three colours, black, and red, and white,
So graceful in their proper place,
Remove them to a different site,
They form a frightful hideous face:

For instance, when the lily skips
Into the precincts of the rose,
And takes possession of the lips,
Leaving the purple to the nose:

So Celia went entire to bed,
All her complexion safe and sound;
But, when she rose, white, black, and red,
Though still in sight, had chang'd their ground.

The black, which would not be confin'd,
A more inferior station seeks,
Leaving the fiery red behind,
And mingles in her muddy cheeks.

But Celia can with ease reduce,
By help of pencil, paint, and brush,
Each colour to its place and use,
And teach her cheeks again to blush.

She knows her early self no more,
But fill'd with admiration stands;
As other painters oft adore
The workmanship of their own hands.

Thus, after four important hours,
Celia's the wonder of her sex :
Say, which among the heavenly powers
Could cause such marvellous effects?

Venus, indulgent to her kind,
Gave women all their hearts could wish,
When first she taught them where to find
White lead and Lusitanian * dish.

Love with white lead cements his wings :
White lead was sent us to repair
Two brightest, brittlest, earthly things,
A lady's face, and China-ware.

She ventures now to lift the sash ;
The window is her proper sphere :
Ah, lovely nymph ! be not too rash,
Nor let the beaux approach too near.

Take pattern by your sister star :
Delude at once and bless our sight ;
When you are seen, be seen from far,
And chiefly choose to shine by night.

But art no longer can prevail,
When the materials all are gone ;
The best mechanic hand must fail,
Where nothing's left to work upon.

Matter, as wise logicians say,
Cannot without a form subsist ;
And form, say I, as well as they,
Must fail, if matter brings no grist.

* Portugal.—H.

And this is fair Diana's case ;
 For all astrologers maintain,
 Each night a bit drops off her face,
 When mortals say she's in her wane :

While Partridge * wisely shows the cause,
 Efficient of the moon's decay,
 That Cancer with his poisonous claws
 Attacks her in the milky way :

But Gadbury, * in art profound,
 From her pale cheeks pretends to show,
 That swain Endymion is not found,
 Or else that Mercury's her foe,

But let the cause be what it will,
 In half a month she looks so thin,
 That Flamsteed † can, with all his skill,
 See but her forehead and her chin.

Yet, as she wastes, she grows discreet,
 Till midnight never shows her head :
 So rotting Celia strolls the street,
 When sober folks are all a-bed :

For sure, if this be Luna's fate,
 Poor Celia, but of mortal race,
 In vain expects a longer date
 To the materials of her face.

* Partridge and Gadbury wrote each an ephemeris.—H.

† John Flamsteed, the celebrated astronomer-royal, died in 1719, aged 73.—N.

When Mercury her tresses mows,
To think of black-lead combs is vain :
No painting can restore a nose,
Nor will her teeth return again.

Ye powers who over love preside !
Since mortal beauties drop so soon,
If ye would have us well supplied,
Send us new nymphs with each new moon !

THE PROGRESS OF POETRY.

THE farmer's goose, who in the stubble
Has fed without restraint or trouble,
Grown fat with corn and sitting still,
Can scarce get o'er the barn-door sill ;
And hardly waddles forth to cool
Her belly in the neighbouring pool !
Nor loudly cackles at the door ;
For cackling shows the goose is poor.

But, when she must be turn'd to graze,
And round the barren common strays,
Hard exercise, and harder fare,
Soon make my dame grow lank and spare,
Her body light, she tries her wings,
And scorns the ground, and upward springs ;
While all the parish, as she flies,
Hear sounds harmonious from the skies.

Such is the poet fresh in pay,
The third night's profits of his play ;

His morning draughts till noon can swill,
Among his brethren of the quill :
With good roast beef his belly full,
Grown lazy, foggy, fat, and dull,
Deep sunk in plenty and delight,
What poet e'er could take his flight ?
Or stuff'd with phlegm up to the throat,
What poet e'er could sing a note ?
Nor Pegasus could bear the load
Along the high celestial road ;
The steed, oppress'd, would break his girth,
To raise the lumber from the earth.

But view him in another scene,
When all his drink is Hippocrene.
His money spent, his patrons fail,
His credit out for cheese and ale ;
His two-years coat so smooth and bare,
Through every thread it lets in air ;
With hungry meals his body pin'd,
His guts and belly full of wind ;
And like a jockey for a race,
His flesh brought down to flying case :
Now his exalted spirit loathes
Encumbrances of food and clothes ;
And up he rises like a vapour,
Supported high on wings of paper.
He singing flies, and flying sings,
While from below all Grub-Street rings.

THE SOUTH-SEA PROJECT. 1721.

“ Apparent rari nantes in gurgite vasto,
Arma virum, tabulæque, et Troia gaza per undas.”—VIRG.

[When the deluded people of England awoke from their golden dream of South Sea wealth, their wrath rose to the brim against the directors by whom that ruinous project had been conducted. The parliamentary proceedings instituted against them were carried on with unusual violence. Gibbon, the historian, descended from one of these directors, complains grievously of the injustice with which they were treated.

“ The legislature restrained the persons of the directors, imposed an exorbitant security for their appearance, and marked their characters with a previous note of ignominy. They were compelled to deliver, upon oath, the strict value of their estates, and were disabled from making any transfer or alienation of any part of their property. Against a bill of pains and penalties, it is the common right of every subject to be heard by his counsel at the bar: they prayed to be heard; their prayer was refused; and their oppressors, who required no evidence, would listen to no defence. It had been at first proposed, that one-eighth of their respective estates should be allowed for the future support of the directors; but it was speciously urged, that, in the various shades of opulence and guilt, such a proportion would be too light for many, and for some might possibly be too heavy. All were condemned, absent and unheard, in arbitrary fines and forfeitures, which swept away the greater part of their substance.”—GIBBON’S Miscellaneous Works, I. 11.]

YE wise philosophers explain
What magic makes our money rise,
When dropt into the Southern main:
Or do these jugglers cheat our eyes?

Put in your money fairly told ;
 Presto ! be gone—'Tis here again :
Ladies and gentlemen, behold,
 Here's every piece as big as ten.

Thus in a bason drop a shilling,
 Then fill the vessel to the brim ;
You shall observe, as you are filling,
 The ponderous metal seems to swim :

It rises both in bulk and height,
 Behold it swelling like a sop ;
The liquid medium cheats your sight :
 Behold it mounted to the top !

In stock three hundred thousand pounds,
 I have in view a lord's estate ;
My manors all contiguous round !
 A coach and six, and serv'd in plate !

Thus the deluded bankrupt raves ;
 Puts all upon a desperate bet ;
Then plunges in the Southern waves,
 Dipt over head and ears—in debt.

So, by a calenture misled,
 The mariner with rapture sees,
On the smooth ocean's azure bed,
 Enamell'd fields and verdant trees :

With eager haste he longs to rove
 In that fantastic scene, and thinks
It must be some enchanted grove ;
 And in he leaps, and down he sinks.

Five hundred chariots just bespoke,
Are sunk in these devouring waves,
The horses drown'd, the harness broke,
And here the owners find their graves.

Like Pharaoh, by directors led,
They with their spoils went safe before :
His chariots, tumbling out the dead,
Lay shatter'd on the Red Sea shore.

Rais'd up on Hope's aspiring plumes,
The young adventurer o'er the deep
An eagle's flight and state assumes,
And scorns the middle way to keep.

On paper wings he takes his flight,
With wax the father bound them fast ;
The wax is melted by the height,
And down the towering boy is cast.

A moralist might here explain
The rashness of the Cretan youth ;
Describe his fall into the main,
And from a fable form a truth.

His wings are his paternal rent,
He melts the wax at every flame ;
His credit sunk, his money spent,
In Southern Seas he leaves his name.

Inform us, you that best can tell,
Why in that dangerous gulf profound,
Where hundreds and where thousands fell,
Fools chiefly float, the wise are drown'd ?

So have I seen from Severn's brink
A flock of geese jump down together;
Swim, where the bird of Jove would sink,
And, swimming, never wet a feather.

But, I affirm, 'tis false in fact,
Directors better knew their tools;
We see the nation's credit crack'd,
Each knave has made a thousand fools.

One fool may from another win,
And then get off with money stor'd,
But, if a sharper once comes in,
He throws at all, and sweeps the board.

As fishes on each other prey,
The great ones swallowing up the small,
So fares it in the Southern Sea;
The whale directors eat up all.

When stock is high, they come between,
Making by second-hand their offers;
Then cunningly retire unseen,
With each a million in his coffers.

So, when upon a moonshine night,
An ass was drinking at a stream,
A cloud arose, and stopt the light,
By intercepting every beam:

The day of judgment will be soon,
Cries out a sage among the crowd;
An ass has swallow'd up the moon!
The moon lay safe behind the cloud.

Each poor subscriber to the sea
Sinks down at once, and there he lies ;
Directors fall as well as they,
Their fall is but a trick to rise.

So fishes, rising from the main,
Can soar with moisten'd wings on high ;
The moisture dry'd, they sink again,
And dip their fins again to fly.

Undone at play, the female troops
Come here their losses to retrieve ;
Ride o'er the waves in spacious hoops,
Like Lapland witches in a sieve.

Thus Venus to the sea descends,
As poets feign ; but where's the moral ?
It shows the Queen of Love intends
To search the deep for pearl and coral.

The sea is richer than the land,
I heard it from my grannam's mouth,
Which now I clearly understand ;
For by the sea she meant the South.

Thus, by directors we are told,
" Pray, gentlemen, believe your eyes ;
Our ocean's cover'd o'er with gold,
Look round, and see how thick it lies :

" We, gentlemen, are your assisters,
We'll come, and hold you by the chin.—"
Alas ! all is not gold that glisters.
Ten thousand sink by leaping in.

O! would those patriots be so kind,
Here in the deep to wash their hands,
Then, like Pactolus, we should find
The sea indeed had golden sands.

A shilling in the bath you fling,
The silver takes a nobler hue,
By magic virtue in the spring,
And seems a guinea to your view.

But, as a guinea will not pass
At market for a farthing more,
Shown through a multiplying glass,
Than what it always did before :

So cast it in the Southern seas,
Or view it through a jobber's bill ;
Put on what spectacles you please,
Your guinea's but a guinea still.

One night a fool into a brook
Thus from a hillock looking down,
The golden stars for guineas took,
And silver Cynthia for a crown.

The point he could no longer doubt ;
He ran, he leapt into the flood ;
There sprawl'd a while, and scarce got out,
All cover'd o'er with slime and mud.

“ Upon the water cast thy bread,
And after many days thou'lt find it ;”
But gold, upon this ocean spread,
Shall sink, and leave no mark behind it :

There is a gulf, where thousands fell,
 Here all the bold adventurers came,
 A narrow sound, though deep as Hell—
 'Change Alley is the dreadful name.

Nine times a-day it ebbs and flows,
 Yet he that on the surface lies,
 Without a pilot seldom knows
 The time it falls, or when 'twill rise.

Subscribers here by thousands float,
 And jostle one another down ;
 Each paddling in his leaky boat,
 And here they fish for gold, and drown.

“ * Now bury'd in the depth below,
 Now mounted up to Heaven again,
 They reel and stagger to and fro,
 At their wits end, like drunken men.”

Meantime, secure on Garraway † cliffs,
 A savage race, by shipwrecks fed,
 Lie waiting for the founder'd skiffs,
 And strip the bodies of the dead.

But these, you say, are factious lies,
 From some malicious tory's brain ;
 For, where directors get a prize,
 The Swiss and Dutch whole millions drain.

Thus, when by rooks a lord is ply'd,
 Some cully often wins a bet,
 By venturing on the cheating side,
 Though not into the secret let.

* Psalm cvii.

† A coffeehouse in 'Change Alley.—H.

While some build castles in the air,
Directors build them in the seas ;
Subscribers plainly see them there,
For fools will see as wise men please.

Thus oft by mariners are shown
(Unless the men of Kent are liars)
Earl Godwin's castles overflown,
And palace roofs, and steeple spires.

Mark where the sly directors creep,
Nor to the shore approach too nigh !
The monsters nestle in the deep,
To seize you in your passing by.

Then, like the dogs of Nile, be wise,
Who, taught by instinct how to shun
The crocodile, that lurking lies,
Run as they drink, and drink and run.

Antæus could, by magic charms,
Recover strength whene'er he fell ;
Alcides held him in his arms,
And sent him up in air to Hell.

Directors, thrown into the sea,
Recover strength and vigour there ;
But may be tam'd another way,
Suspended for a while in air.

Directors ! for 'tis you I warn,
By long experience we have found
What planet rul'd when you were born ;
We see you never can be drown'd.

Beware, nor overbulky grow,
Nor come within your cully's reach;
For, if the sea should sink so low
To leave you dry upon the beach,

You'll owe your ruin to your bulk:
Your foes already waiting stand,
To tear you like a founder'd hulk,
While you lie helpless on the sand.

Thus, when a whale has lost the tide,
The coasters crowd to seize the spoil;
The monster into parts divide,
And strip the bones, and melt the oil.

O! may some western tempest sweep
These locusts whom our fruits have fed,
That plague, directors, to the deep,
Driv'n from the South Sea to the Red.

May he, whom Nature's laws obey,
Who lifts the poor, and sinks the proud,
"Quiet the raging of the sea,
And still the madness of the crowd!"

But never shall our isle have rest,
Till those devouring swine run down,
(The devils leaving the possess)
And headlong in the waters drown.

The nation then too late will find,
Computing all their cost and trouble,
Directors' promises but wind,
South Sea, at best, a mighty bubble.

A PROLOGUE.

[BILLET TO A COMPANY OF PLAYERS.

SENT WITH THE PROLOGUE.

The enclosed prologue is formed upon the story of the secretary's not allowing you to act, unless you would pay him 300l. per annum; upon which you got a licence from the lord mayor to act as strollers.

The prologue supposes, that, upon your being forbidden to act, a company of country strollers came and hired the playhouse, and your clothes, &c. to act in.]

OUR set of strollers, wandering up and down,
Hearing the house was empty, came to town ;

And, with a licence from our good lord mayor,
Went to one Griffith, formerly a player :
Him we persuaded, with a moderate bribe,
To speak to Elrington and all the tribe,
To let our company supply their places,
And hire us out their scenes, and clothes, and faces.
Is not the truth the truth? Look full on me ;
I am not Elrington, nor Griffith he.
When we perform, look sharp among our crew,
There's not a creature here you ever knew.
The former folks were servants to the king ;
We, humble strollers, always on the wing.
Now, for my part, I think, upon the whole,
Rather than starve, a better man would stroll.

Stay ! let me see—Three hundred pounds a-year,
For leave to act in town !—'Tis plaguy dear.
Now, here's a warrant ; gallants, please to mark,
For three thirteens, and sixpence to the clerk.
Three hundred pounds ! Were I the price to fix,
The public should bestow the actors six ;
A score of guineas, given underhand,
For a good word or so, we understand.
To help an honest lad that's out of place,
May cost a crown or so ; a common case :
And, in a crew, 'tis no injustice thought
To ship a rogue, and pay him not a groat.
But, in the chronicles of former ages,
Who ever heard of servants paying wages ?
I pity Elrington with all my heart ;
Would he were here this night, to act my part !
I told him what it was to be a stroller ;
How free we acted, and had no comptroller :
In every town we wait on Mr May'r,
First get a licence, then produce our ware ;
We sound a trumpet, or we beat a drum :
Huzza ! (the schoolboys roar) the play'rs are come !

And then we cry, to spur the bumpkins on,
 Gallants, by Tuesday next we must be gone.
 I told him, in the smoothest way I could,
 All this, and more, yet it would do no good.
 But Elrington, tears falling from his cheeks,
 He that has shone with Betterton and Wilks,
 To whom our country has been always dear,
 Who chose to leave his dearest pledges here,
 Owns all your favours, here intends to stay,
 And, as a stroller, act in every play :
 And the whole crew this resolution takes,
 To live and die all strollers, for your sakes ;
 Not frightened with an ignominious name,
 For your displeasure is their only shame.

A pox on Elrington's majestic tone !
 Now to a word of business in our own.

Gallants, next Thursday night will be our last :
 Then without fail we pack up for Belfast.
 Lose not your time, nor our diversion miss,
 The next we act shall be as good as this.

EPILOGUE

TO

MR HOPPY'S BENEFIT-NIGHT, AT SMOCK-ALLEY.

[This piece, which relates, like the former, to the avaricious demands which the Irish secretary of state made upon the company of players, is said, in the collection called "Gulliveriana," to have been composed by Swift, and delivered by him at Gaulstown House. But it is more likely to have been written by some other among the joyous guests of the Lord Chief Baron, since it does not exhibit Swift's accuracy of numbers.]

HOLD ! hold, my good friends ; for one moment, pray stop ye,
 I return ye my thanks, in the name of poor Hoppy.
 He's not the first person who never did write,
 And yet has been fed by a benefit-night.
 The custom is frequent, on my word I assure ye,
 In our fam'd elder house, of the Hundreds of Drury.
 But then you must know, those players still act on
 Some very good reasons, for such benefaction.

A deceas'd poet's widow, if pretty, can't fail ;
 From Cibber she holds, as a tenant in tail.
 Your emerited actors, and actresses too,
 For what they have done (tho' no more they can do)
 And sitters, and songsters, and Chetwood and G—,
 And sometimes a poor sufferer in the South Sea ;
 A machine-man, a tire-woman, a mute and a spright,
 Have been all kept from starving by a benefit-night.

Thus, for Hoppy's bright merits, at length we have found
 That he must have of us ninety-nine and one pound,
 Paid to him clear money once every year :
 And however some think it a little too dear,
 Yet, for reasons of state this sum we'll allow,
 Tho' we pay the good man with the sweat of our brow.

First, because by the king to us he was sent,
 To guide the whole session of this parliament.
 To preside in our councils, both public and private,
 And so learn, by the bye, what both houses do drive at.

When bold B— roars, and meek M— raves,
 When Ash prates by wholesale, or Be—h by halves,
 When Whigs become Whims, or join with the Tories;
 And to himself constant, when a member, no more is,
 But changes his sides, and votes and unvotes;
 As S—t is dull, and with S—d, who dotes;
 Then up must get Hoppy, and with voice very low,
 And with eloquent bow, the house he must show,
 That that worthy member, who spoke last, must give

The freedom to him, humbly, most to conceive,
 That his sentiment, on this affair, isn't right;
 That he mightily wonders which way he came by't:
 That, for his part, God knows, he does such things
 disown;
 And so, having convinced him, he most humbly sits down.

For these, and more reasons, which perhaps you may hear,
 Pounds hundred this night, and one hundred this year,

And so on we are forc'd, tho' we sweat out our blood,
 To make these walls pay for poor Hoppy's good;
 To supply with rare diet his pot and his spit;
 And with richest Margoux to wash down a tit bit.
 To wash oft his fine linen, so clean and so neat,
 And to buy him much linen, to fence against sweat:
 All which he deserves; for altho' all the day,
 He oft times is heavy, yet all night he's gay;
 And if he rise early to watch for the state,
 To keep up his spouts he'll sit up as late.

Thus, for these and more reasons, as before I did say,
 Hop has got all the money for our acting this play,
 Which makes us poor actors look je ne sçai quoy.

EPIGRAM.

GREAT folks are of a finer mould ;
Lord ! how politely they can scold !
While a coarse English tongue will itch,
For whore and rogue, and dog and bitch.

PROLOGUE

TO A PLAY FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE DISTRESSED WEAVERS.

BY DR SHERIDAN.

SPOKEN BY MR ELRINGTON. 1721.

GREAT cry, and little wool—is now become
The plague and proverb of the weaver's loom :
No wool to work on, neither weft nor warp ;
Their pockets empty, and their stomachs sharp.
Provok'd, in loud complaints to you they cry :
Ladies, relieve the weavers ; or they die !
Forsake your silks for stuffs ; nor think it strange,
To shift your clothes, since you delight in change.
One thing with freedom I'll presume to tell—
The men will like you every bit as well.

See I am dress'd from top to toe in stuff,
And by my troth, I think I'm fine enough ;

My wife admires me more, and swears she never,
In any dress, beheld me look so clever.
And if a man be better in such ware,
What great advantage must it give the fair !
Our wool from lambs of innocence proceeds :
Silks come from maggots, calicoes from weeds :
Hence 'tis by sad experience that we find
Ladies in silks to vapours much inclin'd—
And what are they but maggots in the mind ?
For which I think it reason to conclude,
That clothes may change our temper like our food.
Chintzes are gawdy, and engage our eyes
Too much about the party-colour'd dyes :
Although the lustre is from you begun,
We see the rainbow, and neglect the sun.

How sweet and innocent's the country maid,
With small expense in native wool array'd ;
Who copies from the fields her homely green,
While by her shepherd with delight she's seen !
Should our fair ladies dress like her, in wool,
How much more lovely, and how beautiful,
Without their Indian drapery, they'd prove !
While wool would help to warm us into love !
Then, like the famous Argonauts of Greece,
We'll all contend to gain the Golden Fleece !

EPILOGUE,

TO A BENEFIT PLAY, GIVEN IN BEHALF OF THE DISTRESSED WEAVERS.

BY THE DEAN.

SPOKEN BY MR GRIFFITH.

Who dares affirm this is no pious age,
When charity begins to tread the stage?
When actors, who at best are hardly savers,
Will give a night of benefit to weavers?
Stay—let me see, how finely will it sound!
Imprimis, From his grace* a hundred pound.
Peers, clergy, gentry, all are benefactors;
And then comes in the item of the actors.
Item, The actors freely give a day—
The poet had no more who made the play.
But whence this wond'rous charity in players?
They learn it not at sermons, or at prayers:
Under the rose, since here are none but friends,
(To own the truth) we have some private ends.
Since waiting-women, like exacting jades,
Hold up the prices of their old brocades;
We'll dress in manufactures made at home;
Equip our kings and generals at the Comb. †
We'll rig from Meath Street Ægypt's haughty queen,
And Antony shall court her in ratteen.
In blue shalloon shall Hannibal be clad,
And Scipio trail an Irish purple plaid.
In drugget drest, of thirteenpence a-yard,
See Philip's son amidst his Persian guard;

* Archbishop King.—F.

† A street famous for woollen manufactures.—F.

And proud Roxana, fir'd with jealous rage,
With fifty yards of crape shall sweep the stage.
In short, our kings and princesses within
Are all resolv'd this project to begin ;
And you, our subjects, when you here resort,
Must imitate the fashion of the court.

O ! could I see this audience clad in stuff,
Though money's scarce, we should have trade enough :

But chints, brocades, and lace, take all away,
And scarce a crown is left to see the play.
Perhaps you wonder whence this friendship springs
Between the weavers and us playhouse kings ;
But wit and weaving had the same beginning ;
Pallas first taught us poetry and spinning :
And, next, observe how this alliance fits,
For weavers now are just as poor as wits :
Their brother quillmen, workers for the stage,
For sorry stuff can get a crown a page ;
But weavers will be kinder to the players,
And sell for twenty pence a yard of theirs..
And, to your knowledge, there is often less in
The poet's wit, than in the player's dressing.

ANSWER

TO

DR SHERIDAN'S PROLOGUE, AND TO
DR SWIFT'S EPILOGUE,

IN BEHALF OF THE DISTRESSED WEAVERS.

BY DR DELANY.

Fœmineo generi tribuantur.

THE Muses, whom the richest silks array,
Refuse to fling their shining gowns away ;
The pencil clothes the nine in bright brocades,
And gives each colour to the pictured maids ;
Far above mortal dress the sisters shine,
Pride in their Indian robes, and must be fine.
And shall two bards in consort rhyme and huff,
And fret these Muses with their playhouse stuff ?

The player in mimic piety may storm,
Deplore the Comb, and bid her heroes arm :
The arbitrary mob, in paltry rage,
May curse the belles and chintzes of the age :
Yet still the artist worm her silk shall share,
And spin her thread of life in service of the fair.

The cotton plant, whom satire cannot blast,
Shall bloom the favourite of these realms, and last ;
Like yours, ye fair, her fame from censure grows,
Prevails in charms, and glares above her foes :
Your injured plant shall meet a loud defence,
And be the emblem of your innocence.

Some bard, perhaps, whose landlord was a weaver,
Penn'd the low prologue to return a favour :

Some neighbour wit, that would be in the vogue,
 Work'd with his friend, and wove the epilogue.
 Who weaves the chaplet, or provides the bays,
 For such wool-gathering sonneteers as these ?

Hence then, ye homespun wittings, that persuade
 Miss Chloe to the fashion of her maid.

Shall the wide hoop, that standard of the town,
 Thus act subservient to a poplin gown ?

Who'd smell of wool all over ? 'Tis enough
 The under petticoat be made of stuff.

Lord ! to be wrapt in flannel just in May,
 When the fields dress'd in flowers appear so gay ! }
 And shall not miss be flower'd as well as they ? }

In what weak colours would the plaid appear,
 Work'd to a quilt, or studded in a chair !
 The skin, that vies with silk, would fret with stuff ;
 Or who could bear in bed a thing so rough ?
 Ye knowing fair, how eminent that bed,
 Where the chintz diamonds with the silken thread,
 Where rustling curtains call the curious eye,
 And boast the streaks and paintings of the sky !
 Of flocks they'd have your milky ticking full ;
 And all this for the benefit of wool !

“ But where,” say they, “ shall we bestow these weavers,

That spread our streets, and are such piteous
 cravers ?”

The silk-worms (brittle beings !) prone to fate,
 Demand their care, to make their webs complete :
 These may they tend, their promises receive ;
 We cannot pay too much for what they give !

ON GAULSTOWN HOUSE,

THE SEAT OF GEORGE ROCHFORD, ESQ.

BY DR DELANY.

'Tis so old and so ugly, and yet so convenient,
You're sometimes in pleasure, though often in pain
in't,
'Tis so large you may lodge a few friends with ease
in't.
You may turn and stretch at your length if you please in't ;
'Tis so little, the family live in a press in't,
And poor Lady Betty * has scarce room to dress in't ;
'Tis so cold in the winter, you can't bear to lie in't,
And so hot in the summer, you're ready to fry in't ;
'Tis so brittle 'twould scarce bear the weight of a tun,
Yet so staunch, that it keeps out a great deal of sun ;
'Tis so crazy, the weather with ease beats quite through it,
And you're forced every year in some part to renew
it ;
'Tis so ugly, so useful, so big, and so little,
'Tis so staunch, and so crazy, so strong and so brittle,

* Daughter of the Earl of Drogheda, and married to George Rochfort, Esq.—F.

'Tis at one time so hot, and another so cold,
 It is part of the new, and part of the old ;
 It is just half a blessing, and just half a curse—
 I wish then, dear George, it were better or worse.

THE COUNTRY LIFE.

PART OF A SUMMER SPENT AT GAULSTOWN HOUSE,
 THE SEAT OF GEORGE ROCHFORD, ESQ.

[These verses were first published in the Whitehall Journal, with the following prefatory letter, in which the writer, with stupid malignity, represents a lively and humorous jeu d'esprit as a serious and ungrateful attack upon the hospitality of Gaulstown.

To Sir James Baker, Knight, Chief Journalist of Great Britain.

SIR,

The inclosed being handed about, privately here, in print, I thought the post which you now so worthily fill entitled you to a perusal of it.

It is a true and real Irish journal.

All men consent, here, that it was written by the famous Dr Celer, dean to the tutelary saint of this kingdom.

The malevolents amongst us cast invidious reflections on the Dean for writing this poem; and say that it was odd in him, after the kindest entertainment for some months together at Mr Rochford's house, who was Lord Chief Baron in this kingdom, in the last reign, to vanish away one morning sans ceremonie; and that it was ungrateful, after having sucked all the sweets of Gaulstown, to leave the following sting behind him.

If you give this packet a place in your Journal, you will oblige a vast number of your admirers in this kingdom, who are impatient to see the Dean's satire upon the hospitable Baron and the rest of his friends and messmates for almost a whole summer.

I am,

Your constant reader and most humble servant,

DUBLIN, New-Year's Day, 1723.

PHILOXENUS.

From the foregoing absurd charge, the Dean condescended to vindicate himself, in a letter to Mr Cope, dated 9th October 1722.]

THALIA, tell in sober lays,
 How George, * Nim, †, Dan, ‡ Dean, § pass their days ;
 And, should our Gaulstown's art grow fallow,
 Yet Neget quis carmina Gallo ?
 Here (by the way) by Gallus mean I
 Not Sheridan, but friend Delany.
 Begin, my Muse. First from our bowers
 We sally forth at different hours ;
 At seven the Dean, in night-gown drest,
 Goes round the house to wake the rest ;
 At nine, grave Nim and George facetious
 Go to the Dean, to read Lucretius ;
 At ten, my Lady comes and hectors,
 And kisses George, and ends our lectures ;

* Mr Rochfort.—F.

† His brother, Mr John Rochfort ; who was called Nimrod, from his great attachment to the chase.—F.

‡ Rev. Daniel Jackson.—F.

§ Dr Swift.—F.

And when she has him by the neck fast,
 Hauls him, and scolds us down to breakfast.
 We squander there an hour or more,
 And then all hands, boys, to the oar;
 All, heteroclite Dan except,
 Who neither time nor order kept,
 But by peculiar whimsies drawn,
 Peeps in the ponds to look for spawn;
 O'ersees the work, or Dragon * rows,
 Or mars a text, or mends his hose;
 Or—but proceed we in our journal—
 At two, or after, we return all:
 From the four elements assembling,
 Warn'd by the bell, all folks come trembling †
 From airy garrets some descend,
 Some from the lake's remotest end;
 My lord ‡ and dean the fire forsake,
 Dan leaves the earthy spade and rake:
 The loiterers quake, no corner hides them.
 And Lady Betty soundly chides them,
 Now water's brought, and dinner's done:
 With "Church and King" the ladies gone:

* A small boat so called.—F.

† The Dean has been censured, on an idle supposition of this passage being an allusion to the day of judgment. So says Mr Faulkner, in corroboration of which I observe, that, in "Gulliveriana," the passage is printed in Italics, with an index placed opposite to call the attention. In the Whitehall Journal, the Editor refuses to believe that the piece is Swift's, "because so pious a person as the Dean could not possibly forget all respect and reverence for things sacred, as to turn the day of judgment so openly into ridicule, as the author of this lampoon most manifestly does in this burlesque piece."

‡ Mr Rochfort's father was Lord Chief Baron of the exchequer in Ireland.—F.

Not reckoning half an hour we pass
 In talking o'er a moderate glass.
 Dan, growing drowsy, like a thief
 Steals off to dose away his beef;
 And this must pass for reading Hammond—
 While George and Dean go to backgammon.
 George, Nim, and Dean, set out at four,
 And then, again, boys, to the oar.
 But when the sun goes to the deep
 (Not to disturb him in his sleep,
 Or make a rumbling o'er his head,
 His candle out, and he a-bed)
 We watch his motions to a minute,
 And leave the flood when he goes in it.
 Now stinted in the shortening day,
 We go to prayers, and then to play,
 Till supper comes; and after that
 We sit an hour to drink and chat.
 'Tis late—the old and younger pairs,
 By Adam * lighted, walk up stairs.
 The weary Dean goes to his chamber;
 And Nim and Dan to garret clamber.
 So when the circle we have run,
 The curtain falls and all is done.

I might have mention'd several facts.
 Like episodes between the acts;
 And tell who loses and who wins,
 Who gets a cold, who breaks his shins;
 How Dan caught nothing in his net,
 And how the boat was overset.
 For brevity I have retrench'd
 How in the lake the Dean was drench'd:
 It would be an exploit to brag on,
 How valiant George rode o'er the Dragon;

* The butler.—F.

How steady in the storm he sat,
 And sav'd his oar, but lost his hat :
 How Nim (no hunter e'er could match him)
 Still brings us hares, when he can catch 'em ;
 How skilfully Dan mends his nets ;
 How fortune fails him when he sets ;
 Or how the Dean delights to vex
 The ladies, and lampoon their sex :
 I might have told how oft Dean Perceval *
 Displays his pedantry unmerciful,
 How haughtily he cocks his nose,
 To tell what every schoolboy knows :
 And with his finger and his thumb,
 Explaining, strikes opposers dumb :
 But now there needs no more be said on't,
 Nor how his wife, that female pedant,
 Shows all her secrets of housekeeping ;
 For candles how she trucks her dripping ;
 Was forced to send three miles for yeast,
 To brew her ale, and raise her paste ;
 Tells every thing that you can think of,
 How she cur'd Charly of the chincough ;
 What gave her brats and pigs the measles,
 And how her doves were killed by weasles ;
 How Jowler howl'd, and what a fright
 She had with dreams the other night.

But now, since I have gone so far on,
 A word or two of Lord Chief Baron ;
 And tell how little weight he sets
 On all whig papers and gazettes ;
 But for the politics of Pue, †
 Thinks every syllable is true.

* A friend of the Lord Chief Baron.

† A Tory news-writer.—F.

And since he owns the king of Sweden
 Is dead at last, without evading,
 Now all his hopes are in the czar :
 " Why, Muscovy is not so far :
 Down the Black Sea, and up the Straits,
 And in a month he's at your gates ;
 Perhaps from what the packet brings,
 By Christmas we shall see strange things."
 Why should I tell of ponds and drains,
 What carps we met with for our pains ;
 Of sparrows tam'd, and nuts innumerable
 To choke the girls, and to consume a rabble ?
 But you, who are a scholar, know
 How transient all things are below,
 How prone to change is human life !
 Last night arriv'd Clem * and his wife—
 This grand event has broke our measures :
 Their reign began with cruel seizures :
 The Dean must with his quilt supply
 The bed in which those tyrants lie :
 Nim lost his wig-block, Dan his jordan,
 (My lady says, she can't afford one)
 George is half scar'd out of his wits,
 For Clem gets all the dainty bits.
 Henceforth expect a different survey,
 This house will soon turn topsyturvy :
 They talk of further alterations,
 Which causes many speculations.

* Mr Clement Barry, called, in the notes appended to "Gul-liveriana," chief favourite and governor of Gaulstown.

A SATIRICAL ELEGY,

ON THE DEATH OF A LATE FAMOUS GENERAL:

1722.

His Grace ! impossible ! what, dead !
 Of old age too, and in his bed !
 And could that mighty warrior fall,
 And so inglorious, after all ?
 Well, since he's gone, no matter how,
 The last loud trump must wake him now :
 And, trust me, as the noise grows stronger,
 He'd wish to sleep a little longer.
 And could he be indeed so old
 As by the newspapers we're told ?
 Threescore, I think, is pretty high ;
 'Twas time in conscience he should die !
 This world he cumber'd long enough ;
 He burnt his candle to the snuff ;
 And that's the reason, some folks think,
 He left behind so great a stink.
 Behold his funeral appears,
 Nor widow's sighs, nor orphans tears,
 Wont at such times each heart to pierce,
 Attend the progress of his hearse.
 But what of that ? his friends may say,
 He had those honours in his day.
 True to his profit and his pride,
 He made them weep before he died.
 Come hither, all ye empty things !
 Ye bubbles rais'd by breath of kings !

Who float upon the tide of state ;
 Come hither, and behold your fate !
 Let Pride be taught by this rebuke,
 How very mean a thing's a duke ;
 From all his ill-got honours flung,
 Turn'd to that dirt from whence he sprung.

DR DELANY'S VILLA. *

WOULD you that Delville I describe ?
 Believe me, Sir, I will not gibe :
 For who would be satirical
 Upon a thing so very small ?
 You scarce upon the borders enter,
 Before you're at the very centre.
 A single crow can make it night,
 When o'er your farm she takes her flight :
 Yet, in this narrow compass, we Observe a vast variety ;
 Both walks, walls, meadows, and parterres,
 Windows and doors, and rooms and stairs,
 And hills and dales, and woods and fields,
 And hay, and grass, and corn, it yields ;
 All to your haggard brought so cheap in,
 Without the mowing or the reaping :
 A razor, though to say't I'm loth,
 Would shave you and your meadows both.

* This was not Swift's, but written by Dr Sheridan.—S.

Though small's the farm, yet here's a house
Full large to entertain a mouse ;
But where a rat is dreaded more
Than savage Caledonian boar ;
For, if it's enter'd by a rat,
There is no room to bring a cat.

A little rivulet seems to steal
Down through a thing you call a vale,
Like tears adown a wrinkled cheek,
Like rain along a blade of leek :
And this you call your sweet meander,
Which might be suck'd up by a gander,
Could he but force his nether bill
To scoop the channel of the rill.
For sure you'd make a mighty clutter,
Were it as big as city gutter.

Next come I to your kitchen garden,
Where one poor mouse would fare but hard in ;
And round this garden is a walk,
No longer than a tailor's chalk ;
Thus I compare what space is in it,
A snail creeps round it in a minute.
One lettuce makes a shift to squeeze
Up through a tuft you call your trees :
And, once a year, a single rose
Peeps from the bud, but never blows ;
In vain then you expect its bloom !
It cannot blow for want of room.

In short, in all your boasted seat,
There's nothing but yourself that's GREAT.

ON

ONE OF THE WINDOWS

AT DELVILLE.

A BARD, grown desirous of saving his pelf, Built a house he was sure would hold none but himself.

This enrag'd god Apollo, who Mercury sent,
And bid him go ask what his votary meant ?
"Some foe to my empire has been his adviser :
'Tis of dreadful portent when a poet turns miser !
Tell him, Hermes, from me, tell that subject of mine,
I have sworn by the Styx, to defeat his design ;
For wherever he lives, the Muses shall reign ;
And the Muses, he knows, have a numerous train."

CARBERIÆ RUPES.

IN COMITATU CORGAGENSI.

Scripsit Jun. Ann. Dom. 1723.

Eccę ingens fragmen scopuli, quod vertice summo
Desuper, impendet, nullo fundamine nixum
Decidit in fluctus : maria undique et undique saxa
Horrisono stridore tonant, et ad æthera murmur
Erigitur ; trepidatque suis Neptunus in undis.
Nam, longâ venti rabie, atque aspergine crebrâ

Æquorei laticis, specus imâ rupe cavatur :
 Jam fultura ruit, jam summa cacumina nutant ;
 Jam cadit in præceps moles, et verberat undas.
 Attonitus credas, hinc dejecisse Tonantem
 Montibus impositos montes, et Pelion altum
 In capita anguipedum cœlo jaculasse gigantum.

Sæpe etiam spelunca immani aperitur hiatu
 Exesa è scopulis et utrinque foramina pandit,
 Hinc atque hinc a ponto ad pontum pervia Phœbo.
 Cautibus enormè junctis laquearia tecti
 Formantur ; moles olim ruitura supernè.
 Fornice sublimi nidos posuere palumbes,
 Inque imo stagni posuere cubilia phocæ.

Sed, cum sævit hyems, et venti, carcere rupto,
 Immensos volvunt fluctus ad culmina montis ;
 Non obsessæ arces, non fulmina vindice dextrâ
 Missa Jovis, quoties inimicas sævit in urbes,
 Exæquant sonitum undarum, veniente procellâ :
 Littora littoribus reboant ; vicinia latè,
 Gens assueta mari, et pedibus percurrere rupes,
 Terretur tamen, et longè fugit, arva relinquens.

Gramina dum carpunt pendentes rupe capellæ,
 Vi salientis aquæ de summo præcipitantur,
 Et dulces animas imo sub gurgite linqunt.

Piscator terrâ non audet vellere funem ;
 Sed latet in portu tremebundus, et aëre sudum
 Haud sperans, Nereum precibus votisque fatigat.

CARBERY ROCKS.

TRANSLATED BY DR DUNKIN.

Lo ! from the top of yonder cliff, that shrouds
 Its airy head amid the azure clouds,
 Hangs a huge fragment; destitute of props,
 Prone on the wave the rocky ruin drops ;
 With hoarse rebuff the swelling seas rebound,
 From shore to shore the rocks return the sound :
 The dreadful murmur Heaven's high convex cleaves,
 And Neptune shrinks beneath his subject waves :
 For, long the whirling winds and beating tides
 Had scoop'd a vault into its nether sides.
 Now yields the base, the summits nod, now urge
 Their headlong course, and lash the sounding surge.
 Not louder noise could shake the guilty world,
 When Jove heap'd mountains upon mountains hurl'd ;

Retorting Pelion from his dread abode,
 To crush Earth's rebel sons beneath the load.

Oft too with hideous yawn the cavern wide
 Presents an orifice on either side.

A dismal orifice, from sea to sea
 Extended pervious to the God of Day :
 Uncouthly join'd, the rocks stupendous form
 An arch, the ruin of a future storm :
 High on the cliff their nests the woodquests make,
 And sea-calves stable in the oozy lake.

But when bleak Winter with his sullen train
 Awakes the winds to vex the watery plain ;
 When o'er the craggy steep without control,
 Big with the blast, the raging billows roll ;

Not towns beleaguer'd, not the flaming brand,
 Darted from Heaven by Jove's avenging hand,
 Oft as on impious men his wrath he pours,
 Humbles their pride and blasts their gilded towers,
 Equal the tumult of this wild uproar :
 Waves rush o'er waves, rebellows shore to shore.
 The neighbouring race, though wont to brave the shocks
 Of angry seas, and run along the rocks,
 Now pale with terror, while the ocean foams,
 Fly far and wide, nor trust their native homes.
 The goats, while pendent from the mountain top,
 The wither'd herb improvident they crop,
 Wash'd down the precipice with sudden sweep,
 Leave their sweet lives beneath th' unfathom'd deep.
 The frighted fisher, with desponding eyes,
 Though safe, yet trembling in the harbour lies,
 Nor hoping to behold the skies serene,
 Wearies with vows the monarch of the main.

COPY OF THE BIRTH-DAY VERSES

ON MR FORD. *

COME, be content, since out it must,
 For Stella has betray'd her trust ;

* Dr Swift had been used to celebrate the birth-day of his friend Charles Ford, Esq. which was on the first day of January. See also the poem, "Stella at Wood Park."—Dr Delany mentions also, among the Dean's intimate friends, "Matthew Ford, Esq. a man of family and fortune, a fine gentleman, and the best lay scholar of his time and nation."—N.

And, whispering, charg'd me not to say
That Mr Ford was born to-day ;
Or, if at last I needs must blab it,
According to my usual habit,
She bid me, with a serious face,
Be sure conceal the time and place ;
And not my compliment to spoil,
By calling this your native soil ;
Or vex the ladies, when they knew
That you are turning forty-two :
But, if these topics shall appear
Strong arguments to keep you here,
I think, though you judge hardly of it,
Good manners must give place to profit.

The nymphs, with whom you first began,
Are each become a harridan ;
And Montague so far decay'd,
Her lovers now must all be paid ;
And every belle that since arose,
Has her contemporary beaux.
Your former comrades, once so bright,
With whom you toasted half the night,
Of rheumatism and pox complain,
And bid adieu to dear champaign.
Your great protectors, once in power,
Are now in exile or the Tower.
Your foes triumphant o'er the laws,
Who hate your person and your cause,
If once they get you on the spot,
You must be guilty of the plot :
For, true or false, they'll ne'er inquire,
But use you ten times worse than Prior.

In London ! what would you do there ?
Can you, my friend, with patience bear
(Nay, would it not your passion raise Worse than a pun, or Irish phrase ?)

To see a scoundrel strut and hector,
 A footboy to some rogue director,
 To look on vice triumphant round,
 And virtue trampled on the ground?
 Observe where bloody  stands
 With torturing engines in his hands,
 Hear him blaspheme, and swear, and rail,
 Threatening the pillory and jail:
 If this you think a pleasing scene,
 To London straight return again;
 Where, you have told us from experience,
 Are swarms of bugs and presbyterians.

I thought my very spleen would burst,
 When fortune hither drove me first;
 Was full as hard to please as you,
 Nor persons names nor places knew:
 But now I act as other folk,
 Like prisoners when their gaol is broke.

If you have London still at heart,
 We'll make a small one here by art;
 The difference is not much between
 St James's Park and Stephen's Green;
 And Dawson Street will serve as well
 To lead you thither as Pall-Mall.
 Nor want a passage through the palace,
 To choke your sight, and raise your malice.
 The Deanery-house may well be match'd,
 Under correction, with the Thatch'd.*

 To see with Robert Grattan's eyes !
 Robin adores that spot of earth,
 That literal spot which gave him birth ;

 As fine as Hampton-court at least."

 We cannot think it worth your while ;

 The difference but amounts to this,

ON DREAMS.

AN IMITATION OF PETRONIUS.

“ Somnia quæ mentes ludunt volitantibus umbris,” &c.

THOSE dreams, that on the silent night intrude,
 And with false flitting shades our minds delude,
 Jove never sends us downward from the skies ;
 Nor can they from infernal mansions rise ;
 But are all mere productions of the brain,
 And fools consult interpreters in vain.

For, when in bed we rest our weary limbs,
The mind unburden'd sports in various whims;
The busy head with mimic art runs o'er
The scenes and actions of the day before.

The drowsy tyrant, by his minions led,
To regal rage devotes some patriot's head.
With equal terrors, not with equal guilt,
The murderer dreams of all the blood he spilt.

The soldier smiling hears the widow's cries,
And stabs the son before the mother's eyes.
With like remorse his brother of the trade,
The butcher, fells the lamb beneath his blade.

The statesman rakes the town to find a plot,
And dreams of forfeitures by treason got.

SENT BY DR DELANY TO DR SWIFT,

IN ORDER TO BE ADMITTED TO SPEAK TO HIM WHEN HE WAS DEAF. 1724.

DEAR Sir, I think, 'tis doubly hard,
 Your ears and doors should both be barr'd.
 Can any thing be more unkind?
 Must I not see, 'cause you are blind?
 Methinks a friend at night should cheer you.
 A friend that loves to see and hear you.
 Why am I robb'd of that delight,
 When you can be no loser by't?
 Nay, when 'tis plain (for what is plainer?)
 That, if you heard, you'd be no gainer?
 For sure you are not yet to learn,
 That hearing is not your concern.
 Then be your doors no longer barr'd:
 Your business, sir, is to be heard.

THE ANSWER.

THE wise pretend to make it clear,
 'Tis no great loss to lose an ear.
 Why are we then so fond of two,
 When by experience one would do ?
 'Tis true, say they, cut off the head,
 And there's an end ; the man is dead ;
 Because, among all human race,
 None e'er was known to have a brace :
 But confidently they maintain,
 That where we find the members twain,
 The loss of one is no such trouble,
 Since t'other will in strength be double.
 The limb surviving, you may swear,
 Becomes his brother's lawful heir :
 Thus, for a trial, let me beg of
 Your reverence but to cut one leg off,
 And you shall find, by this device,
 The other will be stronger twice ;
 For every day you shall be gaining
 New vigour to the leg remaining.
 So, when an eye has lost its brother,
 You see the better with the other.
 Cut off your hand, and you may do
 With t'other hand the work of two :
 Because the soul her power contracts,
 And on the brother limb reacts.
 But yet the point is not so clear in Another case, the sense of hearing :
 For, though the place of either ear
 Be distant, as one head can bear ?

Yet Galen most acutely shows you,
(Consult his book de partium usu)
That from each ear, as he observes,
There creep two auditory nerves,
Not to be seen without a glass,
Which near the os petrosum pass ;
Thence to the neck ; and moving thorough there,
One goes to this, and one to t'other ear ;
Which made my grandam always stuff her ears
Both right and left, as fellow-sufferers.
You see my learning ; but, to shorten it,
When my left ear was deaf a fortnight,
To t'other ear I felt it coming on :
And thus I solve this hard phenomenon.
'Tis true, a glass will bring supplies
To weak, or old, or clouded eyes :
Your arms, though both your eyes were lost,
Would guard your nose against a post :
Without your legs, two legs of wood
Are stronger, and almost as good :
And as for hands, there have been those
Who, wanting both, have used their toes. *
But no contrivance yet appears
To furnish artificial ears.

* There have been instances of a man's writing with his foot.

A QUIET LIFE AND A GOOD NAME.

TO A FRIEND WHO MARRIED A SHREW.

1724.

NELL scolded in so loud a din,
 That Will durst hardly venture in :
 He marked the conjugal dispute ;
 Nell roar'd incessant, Dick sat mute ;
 But, when he saw his friend appear,
 Cry'd bravely, " Patience, good my dear !"
 At sight of Will, she bawl'd no more,
 But hurry'd out and clapt the door.

Why Dick ! the Devil's in thy Nell,
 (Quoth Will) thy house is worse than Hell :
 Why what a peal the jade has rung !
 D—n her, why don't you slit her tongue ?
 For nothing else will make it cease.
 Dear Will I suffer this for peace :
 I never quarrel with my wife ;
 I bear it for a quiet life.
 Scripture you know, exhorts us to it ;
 Bids us to seek peace, and ensue it.

Will went again to visit Dick ;
 And entering in the very nick,
 He saw virago Nell belabour,
 With Dick's own staff, his peaceful neighbour :
 Poor Will, who needs must interpose,
 Received a brace or two of blows.
 But now, to make my story short,
 Will drew out Dick to take a quart.
 Why Dick, thy wife has devilish whims ;
 Ods-buds ! why don't you break her limbs ?

If she were mine, and had such tricks,
 I'd teach her how to handle sticks :
 Z—ds ! I would ship her to Jamaica,
 Or truck the carrion for tobacco :
 I'd send her far enough away—
 Dear Will ; but what would people say ?
 Lord ! I should get so ill a name,
 The neighbours round would cry out shame.
 Dick suffer'd for his peace and credit ;
 But who believ'd him when he said it ?
 Can he, who makes himself a slave,
 Consult his peace, or credit save ?
 Dick found it by his ill success,
 His quiet small, his credit less.
 She serv'd him at the usual rate ;
 She stunn'd, and then she broke his pate :
 And what he thought the hardest case,
 The parish jeer'd him to his face ;
 Those men, who wore the breeches least,
 Call'd him a cuckold, fool, and beast.
 At home he was pursu'd with noise ;
 Abroad was pester'd by the boys :
 Within, his wife would break his bones ;
 Without they pelted him with stones ;
 The 'prentices procur'd a riding, *
 To act his patience and her chiding.
 False patience and mistaken pride !
 There are ten thousand Dicks beside ;
 Slaves to their quiet and good name,
 Are us'd like Dick, and bear the blame.

A PASTORAL DIALOGUE;

WRITTEN AFTER THE NEWS OF THE KING'S DEATH. *

[This poem was written when George II. succeeded his father, and bore the following explanatory introduction.

“Richmond Lodge is a house with a small park belonging to the crown. It was usually granted by the crown for a lease of years. The duke of Ormond was the last who had it. After his exile, it was given to the Prince of Wales by the King. The Prince and Princess usually passed their summer there. It is within a mile of Richmond.

“Marble Hill is a house built by Mrs Howard, then of the bed-chamber, afterward Countess of Suffolk, and groom of the stole to the Queen. It is on the Middlesex side, near Twickenham, where Mr Pope lived, and about two miles from Richmond Lodge. Mr Pope was the contriver of the gardens, Lord Herbert the architect, the Dean of St Patrick's chief butler, and keeper of the Ice-house. Upon King George's death, these two houses met, and had the following dialogue.”

These verses were part of the flattery with which Swift and Pope were wont to assail Mrs Howard, whose influence with George II. when Prince of Wales, they deemed omnipotent. How sadly they missed their aim in paying court to the favourite, instead of the Princess of Wales, has been of late completely developed in Coxe's Life of Sir Robert Walpole, and in the works of the late Horace Earl of Orford. It is, however, but justice to the memory of these distinguished men to say, that their adulation was not used for selfish ends, but for the benefit of their friend Gay; an end which may, in a certain degree, excuse the means. The opportunity of serving him through Mrs Howard's influence, seemed to be now opened by the king's death, for who could have guessed that the obnoxious favourite of the deceased monarch was only obscured for a few days, to shine forth with double lustre. These verses, therefore, were written with the purpose of keeping awake the recollection of the prince, now king, and Mrs Howard, to the connections they had formed in their comparative state of privacy, with the little band of literary and poetical friends.]

IN spite of Pope, in spite of Gay,
 And all that he or they can say;
 Sing on I must, and sing I will
 Of Richmond Lodge and Marble Hill.

Last Friday night, as neighbours use,
 This couple met to talk of news:
 For, by old proverbs it appears,
 That walls have tongues, and hedges ears.

MARBLE HILL.

Quoth Marble Hill, right well I ween,
 Your mistress now is grown a queen:
 You'll find it soon by woful proof;
 She'll come no more beneath your roof.

RICHMOND LODGE.

The kingly prophet well evinces,
 That we should put no trust in princes:
 My royal master promis'd me
 To raise me to a high degree;
 But now he's grown a king, God wot,
 I fear I shall be soon forgot.
 You see, when folks have got their ends,
 How quickly they neglect their friends;

Yet I may say, 'twixt me and you,
Pray God, they now may find as true !

MARBLE HILL.

My house was built but for a show,
My lady's empty pockets know ;
And now she will not have a shilling,
To raise the stairs, or build the ceiling ;
For all the courtly madams round
Now pay four shillings in the pound ;
'Tis come to what I always thought :
My dame is hardly worth a groat. *
Had you and I been courtiers born,
We should not thus have lain forlorn :
For those we dextrous courtiers call,
Can rise upon their masters' fall :
But we, unlucky and unwise,
Must fall because our masters rise.

RICHMOND LODGE.

My master, scarce a fortnight since,
Was grown as wealthy as a prince ;
But now it will be no such thing,
For he'll be poor as any king :

* Many a true word, according to an ancient proverb, is spoken in jest. Swift was not aware how nearly he described the narrowed situation of Mrs Howard's finances. Lord Orford, in a letter written shortly after her death, describes her affairs as so far from being easy, that the utmost economy could by no means prevent her exceeding her income considerably ; and elsewhere informs us, in his Reminiscences, that, besides Marble Hill, which cost the king ten or twelve thousand pounds, she did not leave above 20,000*l.* to her family.—Lord Orford's Works, Vol. IV. p. 304. V. p. 456.

And by his crown will nothing get,
But like a king to run in debt.

MARBLE HILL.

No more the Dean, that grave divine,
Shall keep the key of my no—wine;
My ice-house rob, as heretofore,
And steal my artichokes no more;
Poor Patty Blount no more be seen
Bedraggled in my walks so green:
Plump Johnny Gay will now elope;
And here no more will dangle Pope.

RICHMOND LODGE.

Here went the Dean, when he's to seek,
To sponge a breakfast once a-week;
To cry the bread was stale, and mutter
Complaints against the royal butter.
But now I fear it will be said,
No butter sticks upon his bread.*
We soon shall find him full of spleen,
For want of tattling to the queen;
Stunning her royal ears with talking;
His reverence and her highness walking:
While Lady Charlotte, † like a stroller,
Sits mounted on the garden-roller.
A goodly sight to see her ride,
With ancient Mirmont ‡ at her side.

* This also proved a prophecy more true than the Dean suspected.

† Lady Charlotte de Roussy, a French lady.—H.

‡ Marquis de Mirmont, a Frenchman of quality, who had emigrated from his country, in consequence of the revocation of the Edict of Nantz.

In velvet cap his head lies warm,
His hat, for show, beneath his arm.

MARBLE HILL.

Some South-Sea broker from the city
Will purchase me, the more's the pity;
Lay all my fine plantations waste,
To fit them to his vulgar taste;
Chang'd for the worse in every part,
My master Pope will break his heart.

RICHMOND LODGE.

In my own Thames may I be drowned,
If e'er I stoop beneath a crown'd head;
Except her majesty prevails
To place me with the Prince of Wales;
And then I shall be free from fears,
For he'll be prince these fifty years.
I then will turn a courtier too,
And serve the times, as others do.
Plain loyalty, not built on hope,
I leave to your contriver, Pope:
None loves his king and country better,
Yet none was ever less their debtor.

MARBLE HILL.

Then let him come and take a nap
In summer on my verdant lap;
Prefer our villas, where the Thames is,
To Kensington, or hot St James's:
Nor shall I dull in silence sit:
For 'tis to me he owes his wit;
My groves, my echoes, and my birds,
Have taught him his poetic words.
We gardens, and you wildernesses,
Assist all poets in distresses.

Him twice a-week I here expect,
 To rattle Moody* for neglect;
 An idle rogue, who spends his quartridge
 In tipping at the Dog and Partridge;
 And I can hardly get him down
 Three times a-week to brush my gown.

RICHMOND LODGE.

I pity you, dear Marble Hill;
 But hope to see you flourish still.
 All happiness—and so adieu.

MARBLE HILL.

Kind Richmond Lodge, the same to you.

DESIRE AND POSSESSION. 1727.

'Tis strange what different thoughts inspire
 In men, Possession, and Desire!
 Think what they wish so great a blessing;
 So disappointed when possessing!

A moralist profoundly sage
 (I know not in what book or page,
 Or whether o'er a pot of ale)
 Related thus the following tale.

Possession, and Desire, his brother,
 But still at variance with each other,
 Were seen contending in a race;
 And kept at first an equal pace:

* The gardener.—H.

'Tis said, their course continued long,
 For this was active, that was strong :
 Till Envy, Slander, Sloth, and Doubt,
 Misled them many a league about ;
 Seduc'd by some deceiving light,
 They take the wrong way for the right ;
 Through slippery by-roads, dark and deep,
 They often climb, and often creep.

Desire, the swifter of the two,
 Along the plain like lightning flew :
 Till, entering on a broad highway,
 Where power and titles scatter'd lay,
 He strove to pick up all he found,
 And by excursions lost his ground :
 No sooner got, than with disdain
 He threw them on the ground again ;
 And hasted forward to pursue
 Fresh objects, fairer to his view ;
 In hope to spring some nobler game ;
 But all he took was just the same :
 Too scornful now to stop his pace,
 He spurn'd them in his rival's face.

Possession kept the beaten road,
 And gather'd all his brother strow'd ;
 But overcharg'd, and out of wind,
 Though strong in limbs, he lagg'd behind.

Desire had now the goal in sight :
 It was a tower of monstrous height ;
 Where on the summit Fortune stands,
 A crown and sceptre in her hands ;
 Beneath a chasm as deep as Hell,
 Where many a bold adventurer fell.
 Desire, in rapture, gaz'd a while,
 And saw the treacherous goddess smile ;
 But, as he climb'd to grasp the crown,
 She knock'd him with the sceptre down !

He tumbled in the gulf profound;
There doom'd to whirl an endless round.

Possession's load was grown so great,
He sunk beneath the cumbrous weight;
And, as he now expiring lay,
Flocks every ominous bird of prey;
The raven, vulture, owl, and kite,
At once upon his carcase light,
And strip his hide, and pick his bones,
Regardless of his dying groans.

ON CENSURE. 1727.

YE wise, instruct me to endure
An evil, which admits no cure;
Or, how this evil can be borne,
Which breeds at once both hate and scorn.
Bare innocence is no support,
When you are try'd in Scandal's court.
Stand high in honour, wealth, or wit;
All others, who inferior sit,
Conceive themselves in conscience bound
To join, and drag you to the ground.
Your altitude offends the eyes
Of those who want the power to rise.
The world, a willing stander-by,
Inclines to aid a specious lie:
Alas! they would not do you wrong;
But all appearances are strong!
Yet whence proceeds this weight we lay
On what detracting people say?

For let mankind discharge their tongues
 In venom, till they burst their lungs,
 Their utmost malice cannot make
 Your head, or tooth, or finger ake ;
 Nor spoil your shape, distort your face,
 Or put one feature out of place ;
 Nor will you find your fortune sink
 By what they speak or what they think ;
 Nor can ten hundred thousand lies
 Make you less virtuous, learn'd, or wise.
 The most effectual way to baulk
 Their malice, is—to let them talk.

THE FURNITURE OF A WOMAN'S MIND.

1727.

A SET of phrases learn'd by rote ;
 A passion for a scarlet coat ;
 When at a play, to laugh, or cry,
 Yet cannot tell the reason why ;
 Never to hold her tongue a minute,
 While all she prates has nothing in it ;
 Whole hours can with a coxcomb sit,
 And take his nonsense all for wit ;
 Her learning mounts to read a song,
 But half the words pronouncing wrong ;
 Has every repartee in store
 She spoke ten thousand times before ;
 Can ready compliments supply
 On all occasions, cut and dry ;

Such hatred to a parson's gown,
The sight will put her in a swoon ;
For conversation well endued,
She calls it witty to be rude ;
And, placing raillery in railing,
Will tell aloud your greatest failing ;
Nor make a scruple to expose
Your bandy leg, or crooked nose ;
Can at her morning tea run o'er
The scandal of the day before ;
Improving hourly in her skill,
To cheat and wrangle at quadrille.

In choosing lace, a critic nice,
Knows to a groat the lowest price ;
Can in her female clubs dispute,
What linen best the silk will suit,
What colours each complexion match,
And where with art to place a patch.

If chance a mouse creeps in her sight,
Can finely counterfeit a fright ;
So sweetly screams, if it comes near her,
She ravishes all hearts to hear her.
Can dextrously her husband tease,
By taking fits when'er she please ;
By frequent practice learns the trick
At proper seasons to be sick ;
Thinks nothing gives one airs so pretty,
At once creating love and pity ;
If Molly happens to be careless,
And but neglects to warm her hair-lace,
She gets a cold as sure as death,
And vows she scarce can fetch her breath ;
Admires how modest women can
Be so robustious, like a man.

In party, furious to her power ;
A bitter whig, or tory sour ;

Her arguments directly tend Against the side she would defend ;
 Will prove herself a tory plain,
 From principles the whigs maintain ;
 And, to defend the whiggish cause,
 Her topics from the tories draws.

O yes ! if any man can find
 More virtues in a woman's mind,
 Let them be sent to Mrs Harding ;*
 She'll pay the charges to a farthing ;
 Take notice, she has my commission
 To add them in the next edition ;
 They may outsell a better thing :
 So, holloo, boys ; God save the king !

CLEVER TOM CLINCH,

GOING TO BE HANGED.

1727.

As clever Tom Clinch, while the rabble was bawling,
 Rode stately through Holborn to die in his calling,
 He stopt at the George for a bottle of sack,
 And promis'd to pay for it when he came back.
 His waistcoat, and stockings, and breeches, were white ;
 His cap had a new cherry riband to tye't.

* Widow of John Harding, the Drapier's printer.—F.

The maids to the doors and the balconies ran,
 And said, "Lack-a-day, he's a proper young man!"
 But, as from the windows the ladies he spy'd,
 Like a beau in the box, he bow'd low on each side!
 And when his last speech the loud hawkers did cry,
 He swore from his cart, "It was all a damn'd lie!"
 The hangman for pardon fell down on his knee;
 Tom gave him a kick in the guts for his fee:
 Then said, I must speak to the people a little;
 But I'll see you all damn'd before I will whittle.*
 My honest friend Wild† (may he long hold his place)

He lengthen'd my life with a whole year of grace.
 Take courage, dear comrades, and be not afraid,
 Nor slip this occasion to follow your trade;
 My conscience is clear, and my spirits are calm,
 And thus I go off, without prayer-book or psalm;
 Then follow the practice of clever Tom Clinch,
 Who hung like a hero, and never would flinch.

ADVICE

TO

THE GRUB-STREET VERSE WRITERS.

1726.

Ye poets ragged and forlorn,
Down from your garrets haste ;
Ye rhymers dead as soon as born,
Not yet consign'd to paste ;

I know a trick to make you thrive ;
O, 'tis a quaint device :
Your still-born poems shall revive,
And scorn to wrap up spice.

Get all your verses printed fair,
Then let them well be dried ;
And Curll must have a special care
To leave the margin wide.

Send these to paper-sparing * Pope ;
And when he sets to write,
No letter with an envelope
Could give him more delight.

* The original copy of Pope's celebrated translation of Homer (preserved in the British Museum) is almost entirely written on the covers of letters, and sometimes between the lines of the letters themselves.

When Pope has fill'd the margins round,
Why then recal your loan ;
Sell them to Curl for fifty pound,
And swear they are your own.

DR SWIFT TO MR POPE,

WHILE HE WAS WRITING THE DUNCIAD.

1727.

POPE has the talent well to speak,
But not to reach the ear ;
His loudest voice is low and weak,
The Dean too deaf to hear.

A while they on each other look,
Then different studies choose ;
The Dean sits plodding on a book ;
Pope walks, and courts the Muse.

Now backs of letters *, though design'd
For those who more will need 'em,
Are fill'd with hints, and interlin'd,
Himself can hardly read 'em.

Each atom by some other struck,
All turns and motions tries ;
Till in a lump together stuck,
Behold a poem rise :

* See the former poem.

Yet to the Dean his share allot;
 He claims it by a canon;
 That without which a thing is not,
 Is, causa sine quâ non.

Thus, Pope, in vain you boast your wit;
 For, had our deaf divine
 Been for your conversation fit,
 You had not writ a line.

Of Sherlock *, thus, for preaching fam'd,
 The sexton reason'd well;
 And justly half the merit claim'd,
 Because he rang the bell.

A LOVE POEM,

FROM A PHYSICIAN TO HIS MISTRESS.

WRITTEN AT LONDON.

By poets we are well assur'd
 That love, alas! can ne'er be cur'd;
 A complicated heap of ills,
 Despising boluses and pills.
 Ah! Chloe, this I find is true,
 Since first I gave my heart to you.
 Now, by your cruelty hard bound,
 I strain my guts, my colon wound.

* The Dean of St Paul's, father to the bishop.—H.

Now jealousy my grumbling tripe
Assaults with grating, grinding gripes.
When pity in those eyes I view,
My bowels wambling make me spew.
When I an amorous kiss design'd,
I belch'd a hurricane of wind.
Once you a gentle sigh let fall;
Remember how I suck'd it all:
What cholic pangs from thence I felt,
Had you but known, your heart would melt,
Like ruffling winds in cavern pent,
Till Nature pointed out a vent.
How have you torn my heart to pieces
With maggots, humours, and caprices!
By which I got the hemorrhoids;
And loathsome worms my anus voids.
Whene'er I hear a rival nam'd,
I feel my body all inflam'd;
Which, breaking out in boils and blains,
With yellow filth my linen stains;
Or, parch'd with unextinguish'd thirst,
Small-beer I guzzle till I burst;
And then I drag a bloated corpus,
Swell'd with a dropsy, like a porpoise;
When, if I cannot purge or stale,
I must be tapp'd to fill a pail.

BOUTS RIMEZ.

ON SIGNORA DOMITILLA.

Our schoolmaster may roar i' th' fit,
Of classic beauty, hæc et illa;
Not all his birch inspires such art
As th' ogling beams of Domitilla.

Let nobles toast, in bright champaign,
Nymphs higher born than Domitilla ;
I'll drink her health, again, again,
In Berkeley's tar, or sars'parilla.

At Goodman's Fields I've much admired
The postures strange of Monsieur Brilla ;
But what are they to the soft step,
The gliding air of Domitilla ?

Virgil has eterniz'd in song
The flying footsteps of Camilla ;
Sure, as a prophet, he was wrong ;
He might have dream'd of Domitilla.

Great Theodose condemn'd a town
For thinking ill of his Placilla :
And deuce take London ! if some knight
O' th' city wed not Domitilla.

Wheeler, Sir George, in travels wise,
Gives us a medal of Plantilla ;
But O ! the empress has not eyes,
Nor lips, nor breast like Domitilla.

Not all the wealth of plunder'd Italy,
 Piled on the mules of king At-tila,
 Is worth one glove (I'll not tell a bit a lie)
 Or garter, snatch'd from Domitilla.

Five years a nymph at certain hamlet,
 Y-cleped Harrow of the Hill, a-—bus'd much my heart, and was a damn'd let
 To verse—but now for Domitilla.

Dan Pope consigns Belinda's watch
 To the fair sylphid Momentilla,
 And thus I offer up my catch
 To the snow-white hands of Domitilla.

HELTER SKELTER;

OR,

THE HUE AND CRY AFTER THE ATTORNIES, UPON THEIR RIDING THE CIRCUIT,

[In ridicule of the easy strains of poor Ambrose Phillips, so often doomed to undergo the satire of Swift and Pope. There is also some resemblance between the following verses and a poem of Davenant, entitled the "Long Vacation, in Verse Burlesque."]

Now the active young attornies
 Briskly travel on their journies,

Looking big as any giants,
 On the horses of their clients ;
 Like so many little Mars's
 With their tilters at their a—s,
 Brazen hilted, lately burnish'd,
 And with harness-buckles furnish'd,
 And with whips and spurs so neat,
 And with jockey-coats complete,
 And with boots so very greasy,
 And with saddles eke so easy,
 And with bridles fine and gay,
 Bridles borrow'd for a day ;
 Bridles destin'd far to roam,
 Ah ! never, never to come home.
 And with hats so very big, sir,
 And with powder'd caps and wigs, sir,
 And with ruffles to be shown,
 Cambric ruffles not their own ;
 And with Holland shirts so white,
 Shirts becoming to the sight,
 Shirts bewrought with different letters,
 As belonging to their betters.
 With their pretty tinsel'd boxes,
 Gotten from their dainty doxies,
 And with rings so very trim,
 Lately taken out of lim—*
 And with very little pence,
 And as very little sense ;
 With some law, but little justice,
 Having stolen from my hostess,
 From the barber and the cutler,
 Like the soldier from the sutler ;

* A cant word for pawning.—H.

From the vintner and the tailor,
Like the felon from the jailor ;
Into this and t'other county,
Living on the public bounty ;
Thorough town and thorough village,
All to plunder, all to pillage :
Thorough mountains, thorough vallies,
Thorough stinking lanes and alleys,
Some to — kiss with farmers spouses,
And make merry in their houses ;
Some to tumble country wenches
On their rushy beds and benches ;
And if they begin a fray,
Draw their swords, and ——— run away ;
All to murder equity,
And to take a double fee ;
Till the people are all quiet,
And forget to broil and riot,
Low in pocket, cow'd in courage,
Safely glad to sup their porridge,
And vacation's over—then,
Hey, for London town again.

THE PUPPET-SHOW.

THE life of man to represent,
And turn it all to ridicule,
Wit did a puppet-show invent,
Where the chief actor is a fool.

The gods of old were logs of wood,
And worship was to puppets paid ;

In antick dress the idol stood,
And priest and people bow'd the head.

No wonder then, if art began
The simple votaries to frame,
To shape in timber foolish man,
And consecrate the block to fame.

From hence poetic fancy learn'd
That trees might rise from human forms ;
The body to a trunk be turn'd,
And branches issue from the arms.

Thus Dædalus and Ovid too,
That man's a blockhead, have confest :
Powel * and Stretch * the hint pursue ;
Life is a farce, the world a jest.

The same great truth South Sea has prov'd
On that fam'd theatre, the alley ;
Where thousands, by directors mov'd,
Are now sad monuments of folly.

What Momus was of old to Jove,
The same a Harlequin is now ;
The former was buffoon above,
The latter as a Punch below.

This fleeting scene is but a stage,
Where various images appear ;
In different parts of youth and age,
Alike the prince and peasant share.

* Two famous puppet-show men.

Some draw our eyes by being great,
False pomp conceals mere wood within;
And legislators rang'd in state,
Are oft but wisdom in machine.

A stock may chance to wear a crown,
And timber as a lord take place;
A statue may put on a frown,
And cheat us with a thinking face.

Others are blindly led away,
And made to act for ends unknown;
By the mere spring of wires they play,
And speak in language not their own.

Too oft, alas! a scolding wife
Usurps a jolly fellow's throne;
And many drink the cup of life,
Mix'd and embitter'd by a Joan.

In short, whatever men pursue,
Of pleasure, folly, war, or love;
This mimic race brings all to view:
Alike they dress, they talk, they move.

Go on, great Stretch, with artful hand,
Mortals to please and to deride;
And, when death breaks thy vital band,
Thou shalt put on a puppet's pride.

Thou shalt in puny wood be shown,
Thy image shalt preserve thy fame;
Ages to come thy worth shall own,
Point at thy limbs, and tell thy name.

Tell Tom, * he draws a farce in vain,
 Before he looks in nature's glass;
 Puns cannot form a witty scene,
 Nor pedantry for humour pass.

To make men act as senseless wood,
 And chatter in a mystic strain,
 Is a mere force on flesh and blood,
 And shows some error in the brain.

He that would thus refine on thee,
 And turn thy stage into a school,
 The jest of Punch will ever be,
 And stand confest the greater fool.

THE

JOURNAL OF A MODERN LADY.

IN A LETTER TO A PERSON OF QUALITY. 1728.

SIR, 'twas a most unfriendly part
 In you, who ought to know my heart,
 Are well acquainted with my zeal
 For all the female commonweal—
 How could it come into your mind
 To pitch on me, of all mankind,
 Against the sex to write a satire,
 And brand me for a woman-hater?

* Sheridan.

On me, who think them all so fair,
 They rival Venus to a hair;
 Their virtues never ceas'd to sing,
 Since first I learn'd to tune a string?
 Methinks I hear the ladies cry,
 Will he his character belie?
 Must never our misfortunes end?
 And have we lost our only friend?
 Ah, lovely nymphs! remove your fears,
 No more let fall those precious tears.
 Sooner shall, &c.

[Here several verses are omitted.]

The hound be hunted by the hare,
 Than I turn rebel to the fair.
 'Twas you engag'd me first to write,
 Then gave the subject out of spite:
 The journal of a modern dame,
 Is, by my promise, what you claim.
 My word is past, I must submit;
 And yet perhaps you may be bit.
 I but transcribe; for not a line
 Of all the satire shall be mine.
 Compell'd by you to tag in rhymes
 The common slanders of the times,
 Of modern times, the guilt is yours,
 And me my innocence secures.
 Unwilling Muse, begin thy lay,
 The annals of a female day.
 By nature turn'd to play the rake well,
 (As we shall show you in the sequel)
 The modern dame is wak'd by noon,
 (Some authors say not quite so soon)
 Because, though sore against her will,
 She sat all night up at quadrille.

She stretches, gapes, unglues her eyes,
And asks, if it be time to rise ;
Of headach and the spleen complains ;
And then, to cool her heated brains,
Her night-gown and her slippers brought her,
Takes a large dram of citron water.
Then to her glass ; and, " Betty, pray
Don't I look frightfully to-day ?
But was it not confounded hard ?
Well, if I ever touch a card !
Four matadores, and lose codille !
Depend upon't, I never will.
But run to Tom, and bid him fix
The ladies here to-night by six."
" Madam, the goldsmith waits below ;
He says, his business is to know
If you'll redeem the silver cup
He keeps in pawn ?"—" Why, show him up."
" Your dressing-plate he'll be content
To take, for interest cent. per cent.
And, madam, there's my Lady Spade
Has sent this letter by her maid."
" Well, I remember what she won ;
And has she sent so soon to dun ?
Here, carry down these ten pistoles
My husband left to pay for coals :
I thank my stars, they all are light ;
And I may have revenge to-night."
Now, loitering o'er her tea and cream,
She enters on her usual theme ;
Her last night's ill-success repeats,
Calls Lady Spade a hundred cheats :
" She slipt spadillo in her breast,
Then thought to turn it to a jest :
There's Mrs Cut and she combine,
And to each other give the sign."

Through every game pursues her tale,
Like hunters o'er their evening ale.

Now to another scene give place:
Enter the folks with silks and lace;
Fresh matter for a world of chat,
Right Indian this, right Mechlin that:
"Observe this pattern; there's a stuff;
I can have customers enough,
Dear madam, you are grown so hard—
This lace is worth twelve pounds a-yard:
Madam, if there be truth in man,
I never sold so cheap a fan."

This business of importance o'er,
And madam almost dress'd by four,
The footman in his usual phrase,
Comes up with, "Madam, dinner stays."
She answers, in her usual style,
"The cook must keep it back a while,
I never can have time to dress,
No woman breathing takes up less;
I'm hurried so, it makes me sick,
I wish the dinner at Old Nick."
At table now she acts her part,
Has all the dinner cant by heart:
"I thought we were to dine alone,
My dear; for sure, if I had known
This company would come to-day—
But really 'tis my spouse's way!
He's so unkind, he never sends
To tell when he invites his friends:
I wish ye may but have enough!"
And while with all this paltry stuff
She sits tormenting every guest,
Nor gives her tongue one moment's rest,
In phrases batter'd, stale, and trite,
Which modern ladies call polite;

You see the booby husband sit
In admiration at her wit!

But let me now a while survey
Our madam o'er her evening tea;
Surrounded with her noisy clans
Of prudes, coquettes, and harridans;
When, frightened at the clamorous crew,
Away the God of Silence flew,
And fair Discretion left the place,
And Modesty with blushing face;
Now enters overweening Pride,
And Scandal, ever gaping wide,
Hypocrisy with frown severe,
Scurrility with gibing air;
Rude Laughter seeming like to burst,
And Malice always judging worst;
And Vanity with pocket glass,
And Impudence with front of brass;
And studied Affectation came,
Each limb and feature out of frame;
While Ignorance, with brain of lead,
Flew hovering o'er each female head.

Why should I ask of thee, my Muse,
A hundred tongues, as poets use,
When, to give every dame her due,
A hundred thousand were too few?
Or how should I, alas! relate
The sum of all their senseless prate,
Their inuendoes, hints, and slanders,
Their meaning lewd, and double entendres?
Now comes the general scandal charge;
What some invent, the rest enlarge;
And, "Madam, if it be a lie,
You have the tale as cheap as I;
I must conceal my author's name:
But now, 'tis known to common fame."

Say, foolish females, bold and blind,
 Say, by what fatal turn of mind,
 Are you on vices most severe,
 Wherein yourselves have greatest share ?
 Thus every fool herself deludes ;
 The prudes condemn the absent prudes :
 Mopsa, who stinks her spouse to death,
 Accuses Chloe's tainted breath ;
 Hircina, rank with sweat, presumes
 To censure Phyllis for perfumes ;
 While crooked Cynthia, sneering, says,
 That Florinel wears iron stays :
 Chloe, of every coxcomb jealous,
 Admires how girls can talk with fellows ;
 And, full of indignation, frets,
 That women should be such coquettes :
 Iris, for scandal most notorious,
 Cries, " Lord, the world is so censorious !"
 And Rufa, with her combs of lead,
 Whispers that Sappho's hair is red :
 Aura, whose tongue you hear a mile hence,
 Talks half a day in praise of silence ;
 And Sylvia, full of inward guilt,
 Calls Amoret an arrant jilt.

Now voices over voices rise,
 While each to be the loudest vies :
 They contradict, affirm, dispute,
 No single tongue one moment mute ;
 All mad to speak, and none to hearken,
 They set the very lap-dog barking ;
 Their chattering makes a louder din
 Than fishwives o'er a cup of gin ;
 Not schoolboys at a barring out
 Rais'd ever such incessant rout :
 The jumbling particles of matter
 In chaos made not such a clatter ;

Far less the rabble roar and rail,
When drunk with sour election ale.

Nor do they trust their tongues alone,
But speak a language of their own;
Can read a nod, a shrug, a look,
Far better than a printed book;
Convey a libel in a frown,
And wink a reputation down:
Or, by the tossing of the fan,
Describe the lady and the man.

But see, the female club disbands,
Each twenty visits on her hands.
Now all alone poor madam sits
In vapours and hysteric fits:
"And was not Tom this morning sent?
I'd lay my life he never went:
Past six, and not a living soul!
I might by this have won a vole."
A dreadful interval of spleen!
How shall we pass the time between?
"Here, Betty, let me take my drops;
And feel my pulse, I know it stops:
This head of mine, lord, how it swims!
And such a pain in all my limbs!"
"Dear madam, try to take a nap"—
But now they hear a footman's rap:
"Go, run, and light the ladies up:
It must be one before we sup."

The table, cards, and counters, set,
And all the gamester ladies met,
Her spleen and fits recover'd quite,
Our madam can sit up all night;
"Whoever comes, I'm not within."—
Quadrille's the word, and so begin.

How can the Muse her aid impart,
Unskill'd in all the terms of art?

Or in harmonious numbers put
 The deal, the shuffle, and the cut?
 The superstitious whims relate,
 That fill a female gamester's pate?
 What agony of soul she feels
 To see a knave's inverted heels!
 She draws up card by card, to find
 Good fortune peeping from behind;
 With panting heart, and earnest eyes,
 In hope to see spadillo rise;
 In vain, alas! her hope is fed;
 She draws an ace, and sees it red;
 In ready counters never pays,
 But pawns her snuff-box, rings, and keys;
 Ever with some new fancy struck,
 Tries twenty charms to mend her luck.
 "This morning, when the parson came,
 I said I should not win a game.
 This odious chair, how came I stuck in't?
 I think I never had good luck in't.
 I'm so uneasy in my stays;
 Your fan, a moment, if you please.
 Stand farther, girl, or get you gone;
 I always lose when you look on."
 "Lord! madam, you have lost codille:
 I never saw you play so ill."
 "Nay, madam, give me leave to say,
 'Twas you that threw the game away!
 When Lady Tricksey play'd a four,
 You took it with a matadore;
 I saw you touch your wedding-ring
 Before my lady call'd a king;
 You spoke a word began with H,
 And I know whom you mean to teach,
 Because you held the king of hearts;
 Fie, madam, leave these little arts."

“ That’s not so bad as one that rubs
Her chair to call the king of clubs ;
And makes her partner understand
A matadore is in her hand.”

“ Madam, you have no cause to flounce,
I swear I saw you thrice renounce.”

“ And truly, madam, I know when Instead of five you scor’d me ten.
Spadillo here has got a mark ;
A child may know it in the dark :
I guess’d the hand : it seldom fails :
I wish some folks would pair their nails.”

While thus they rail, and scold; and storm,
It passes but for common form :
But, conscious that they all speak true,
And give each other but their due,
It never interrupts the game,
Or makes them sensible of shame.

The time too precious now to waste,
The supper gobbled up in haste ;
Again afresh to cards they run,
As if they had but just begun.
But I shall not again repeat,
How oft they squabble, snarl, and cheat.
At last they hear the watchman knock,
“ A frosty morn—past four o’clock.”
The chairmen are not to be found,
“ Come, let us play the other round.”

Now all in haste they huddle on
Their hoods, their cloaks, and get them gone ;
But, first, the winner must invite
The company to-morrow night.

Unlucky madam, left in tears,
(Who now again quadrille forswears)
With empty purse, and aching head,
Steals to her sleeping spouse to bed.

THE LOGICIANS REFUTED.

LOGICIANS have but ill defin'd
 As rational, the human kind ;
 Reason, they say, belongs to man,
 But let them prove it if they can.
 Wise Aristotle and Smiglesius,
 By ratiocinations specious,
 Have strove to prove, with great precision,
 With definition and division,
Homo est ratione præditum ;
 But for my soul I cannot credit 'em,
 And must, in spite of them, maintain,
 That man and all his ways are vain ;
 And that this boasted lord of nature
 Is both a weak and erring creature ;
 That instinct is a surer guide
 Than reason, boasting mortals' pride ;
 And that brute beasts are far before 'em.
Deus est anima brutorum.
 Whoever knew an honest brute
 At law his neighbour prosecute,
 Bring action for assault or battery,
 Or friend beguile with lies and flattery ?
 O'er plains they ramble unconfin'd,
 No politics disturb their mind ;
 They eat their meals, and take their sport,
 Nor know who's in or out at court.
 They never to the levee go
 To treat, as dearest friend, a foe :
 They never importune his grace,
 Nor ever cringe to men in place ;

Nor undertake a dirty job,
Nor draw the quill to write for Bob.
Fraught with invective, they ne'er go
To folks at Paternoster Row.
No judges, fiddlers, dancing-masters,
No pickpockets, or poetasters,
Are known to honest quadrupeds :
No single brute his fellow leads.
Brutes never meet in bloody fray,
Nor cut each other's throats for pay.
Of beasts, it is confess'd, the ape
Comes nearest us in human shape ;
Like man, he imitates each fashion,
And malice is his lurking passion :
But, both in malice and grimaces,
A courtier any ape surpasses.
Behold him, humbly cringing, wait
Upon the minister of state ;
View him soon after to inferiors
Aping the conduct of superiors :
He promises with equal air,
And to perform takes equal care.
He in his turn finds imitators,
At court, the porters, lacqueys, waiters,
Their masters' manner still contract,
And footmen, lords and dukes can act.
Thus, at the court, both great and small
Behave alike, for all ape all.

THE ELEPHANT;

OR,

THE PARLIAMENT MAN.

WRITTEN MANY YEARS SINCE; AND TAKEN FROM COKE'S INSTITUTES.

ERE bribes convince you whom to choose,
The precepts of Lord Coke peruse.
Observe an elephant, says he,
And let him like your member be:
First take a man that's free from Gaul,
For elephants have none at all;
In flocks or parties he must keep;
For elephants live just like sheep.
Stubborn in honour he must be;
For elephants ne'er bend the knee.
Last, let his memory be sound,
In which your elephant's profound;
That old examples from the wise
May prompt him in his noes and ayes.
Thus the Lord Coke hath gravely writ,
In all the form of lawyer's wit:
And then, with Latin and all that,
Shews the comparison is pat.
Yet in some points my lord is wrong,
One's teeth are sold, and t'other's tongue:
Now, men of parliament, God knows,
Are more like elephants of shows;
Whose docile memory and sense
Are turn'd to trick, to gather pence;

To get their master half-a-crown,
 They spread the flag, or lay it down :
 Those who bore bulwarks on their backs,
 And guarded nations from attacks,
 Now practise every pliant gesture,
 Opening their trunk for every tester.
 Siam, for elephants so famed,
 Is not with England to be named :
 Their elephants by men are sold ;
 Ours sell themselves, and take the gold.

PAULUS: AN EPIGRAM.

BY MR LINDSAY*.

DUBLIN, Sept. 7. 1728.

“ A SLAVE to crowds, scorch'd with the summer's heats,
 In courts the wretched lawyer toils and sweats ;
 While smiling Nature, in her best attire,
 Regales each sense, and vernal joys inspire.
 Can he, who knows that real good should please,
 Barter for gold his liberty and ease ?” —
 Thus Paulus preach'd :—When, entering at the door,
 Upon his board the client pours the ore :
 He grasps the shining gift, pores o'er the cause,
 Forgets the sun, and dozes on the laws.

* A polite and elegant scholar ; at that time an eminent pleader at the bar in Dublin, and afterward advanced to be one of the Justices of the Common Pleas.—H.

THE ANSWER.

BY DR SWIFT.

LINDSAY mistakes the matter quite,
 And honest Paulus judges right.
 Then, why these quarrels to the sun,
 Without whose aid you're all undone?
 Did Paulus e'er complain of sweat?
 Did Paulus e'er the sun forget;
 The influence of whose golden beams
 Soon licks up all unsavoury steams?
 The sun, you say, his face has kiss'd:
 It has; but then it greas'd his fist.
 True lawyers, for the wisest ends,
 Have always been Apollo's friends.
 Not for his superficial powers
 Of ripening fruits, and gilding flowers;
 Not for inspiring poets' brains
 With pennyless and starveling strains;
 Not for his boasted healing art;
 Not for his skill to shoot the dart;
 Nor yet because he sweetly fiddles;
 Nor for his prophecies in riddles:
 But for a more substantial cause—
Apollo's patron of the laws;
 Whom Paulus ever must adore,
 As parent of the golden ore,
 By Phœbus, an incestuous birth,
 Begot upon his grandam Earth;
 By Phœbus first produc'd to light:
 By Vulcan form'd so round and bright:

Then offer'd at the shrine of Justice,
 By clients to her priests and trustees.
 Nor, when we see Astræa stand
 With even balance in her hand,
 Must we suppose she has in view,
 How to give every man his due ;
 Her scales you see her only hold,
 To weigh her priests' the lawyers' gold.

Now, should I own your case was grievous,
 Poor sweaty Paulus, who'd believe us?
 'Tis very true, and none denies,
 At least, that such complaints are wise :
 'Tis wise, no doubt, as clients fat you more,
 To cry, like statesmen, Quanta patimur!
 But, since the truth must needs be stretched
 To prove that lawyers are so wretched,
 This paradox I'll undertake,
 For Paulus' and for Lindsay's sake ;
 By topics, which, though I abomine 'em,
 May serve as argument, ad hominem :
 Yet I disdain to offer those
 Made use of by detracting foes.

I own the curses of mankind
 Sit light upon a lawyer's mind :
 The clamours of ten thousand tongues
 Break not his rest, nor hurt his lungs :
 I own, his conscience always free,
 (Provided he has got his fee)
 Secure of constant peace within,
 He knows no guilt, who knows no sin.

Yet well they merit to be pitied,
 By clients always overwitted.
 And though the Gospel seems to say,
 What heavy burdens lawyers lay
 Upon the shoulders of their neighbour,
 Nor lend a finger to their labour,

Always for saving their own bacon ;
 No doubt, the text is here mistaken :
 The copy's false, the sense is rack'd :
 To prove it, I appeal to fact ;
 And thus by demonstration show
 What burdens lawyers undergo.

With early clients at his door,
 Though he was drunk the night before,
 And crop-sick with unclubb'd-for wine,
 The wretch must be at court by nine ;
 Half sunk beneath his briefs and bag,
 As ridden by a midnight hag ;
 Then, from the bar, harangues the bench,
 In English vile, and viler French,
 And Latin, vilest of the three ;
 And all for poor ten moidores fee !
 Of paper how is he profuse,
 With periods long, in terms abstruse !
 What pains he takes to be prolix !
 A thousand lines to stand for six !
 Of common sense without a word in !
 And is not this a grievous burden ?

The lawyer is a common drudge,
 To fight our cause before the judge :
 And, what is yet a greater curse,
 Condemn'd to bear his client's purse :
 While he at ease, secure and light,
 Walks boldly home at dead of night ;
 When term is ended, leaves the town,
 Trots to his country mansion down ;
 And, disencumber'd of his load,
 No danger dreads upon the road ;
 Despises rapparees, and rides
 Safe through the Newry mountains sides.

Lindsay, 'tis you have set me on,
 To state this question pro and con.

My satire may offend, 'tis true ;
However, it concerns not you.
I own, there may, in every clan,
Perhaps, be found one honest man ;
Yet, link them close, in this they jump,
To be but rascals in the lump.
Imagine Lindsay at the bar,
He's much the same his brethren are ;
Well taught by practice to imbibe
The fundamentals of his tribe :
And in his client's just defence,
Must deviate oft from common sense ;
And make his ignorance discerned,
To get the name of council learned,
(As lucus comes a non lucendo,)
And wisely do as other men do :
But shift him to a better scene,
Among his crew of rogues in grain ;
Surrounded with companions fit,
To taste his humour, sense, and wit ;
You'd swear he never took a fee,
Nor knew in law his A, B, C.

'Tis hard, where dulness overrules,
To keep good sense in crowds of fools.
And we admire the man, who saves
His honesty in crowds of knaves ;
Nor yields up virtue at discretion,
To villains of his own profession.
Lindsay, you know what pains you take
In both, yet hardly save your stake ;
And will you venture both anew,
To sit among that venal crew,
That pack of mimic legislators,
Abandon'd, stupid, slavish praters ;
For, as the rabble daub and rifle
The fool who scrambles for a trifle ;

Who for his pains is cuff'd and kick'd,
 Drawn through the dirt, his pockets pick'd;
 You must expect the like disgrace,
 Scrambling with rogues to get a place;
 Must lose the honour you have gain'd,
 Your numerous virtues foully stain'd;
 Disclaim for ever all pretence
 To common honesty and sense;
 And join'd in friendship with a strict tie,
 To M—l, C—y, and Dick Tighe*.

A DIALOGUE

BETWEEN

AN EMINENT LAWYER † AND DR JONATHAN SWIFT,
 D. S. P. D.

IN ALLUSION TO HORACE, BOOK II. SATIRE I.

“Sunt quibus in Satirâ,” &c.

WRITTEN BY MR LINDSAY, IN 1729.

DR SWIFT.

SINCE there are persons who complain
 There's too much satire in my vein;
 That I am often found exceeding
 The rules of raillery and breeding;

* Richard Tighe, Esq., of whom more hereafter. He was a member of the Irish Parliament, and held by Dean Swift in utter abomination.

† Mr Lindsay.—F.

With too much freedom treat my betters,
 Not sparing even men of letters :
 You, who are skill'd in lawyers' lore,
 What's your advice ? Shall I give o'er ?
 Nor ever fools or knaves expose,
 Either in verse or humorous prose ;
 And to avoid all future ill,
 In my scrutoire lock up my quill ?

LAWYER.

Since you are pleas'd to condescend
 To ask the judgment of a friend,
 Your case consider'd, I must think
 You should withdraw from pen and ink,
 Forbear your poetry and jokes,
 And live like other Christian folks ;
 Or, if the Muses must inspire
 Your fancy with their pleasing fire,
 Take subjects safer for your wit
 Than those on which you lately writ.
 Commend the times, your thoughts correct,
 And follow the prevailing sect ;
 Assert that Hyde, in writing story,
 Shows all the malice of a tory ;
 While Burnet, in his deathless page,
 Discovers freedom without rage.
 To Woolston * recommend our youth,
 For learning, probity, and truth ;
 That noble genius, who unbinds
 The chains which fetter freeborn minds ;
 Redeems us from the slavish fears
 Which lasted near two thousand years ;

* A degraded clergyman of the church of England, who wrote against the miracles of our Saviour.—F.

He can alone the priesthood humble,
 Make gilded spires and altars tumble.

DR SWIFT.

Must I commend against my conscience
 Such stupid blasphemy and nonsense;
 To such a subject tune my lyre,
 And sing like one of Milton's choir,
 Where devils to a vale retreat,
 And call the laws of Wisdom, Fate;
 Lament upon their hapless fall,
 That Force free Virtue should enthrall?
 Or shall the charms of Wealth and Power
 Make me pollute the Muses' bower?

LAWYER.

As from the tripod of Apollo,
 Hear from my desk the words that follow:
 "Some, by philosophers misled,
 Must honour you alive and dead;
 And such as know what Greece has writ,
 Must taste your irony and wit;
 While most that are, or would be great,
 Must dread your pen, your person hate;
 And you on Drapier's hill* must lie,
 And there without a mitre die."

ON BURNING A DULL POEM.

1729.

AN ass's hoof alone can hold
 That poisonous juice, which kills by cold.
 Methought, when I this poem read,
 No vessel but an ass's head
 Such frigid fustian could contain ;
 I mean, the head without the brain.
 The cold conceits, the chilling thoughts,
 Went down like stupifying draughts :
 I found my head begin to swim,
 A numbness crept through every limb.
 In haste, with imprecations dire,
 I threw the volume in the fire :
 When (who could think?) though cold as ice,
 It burnt to ashes in a trice.
 How could I more enhance its fame ?
 Though born in snow, it dy'd in flame.

THE PROGRESS OF MARRIAGE.

ÆTATIS SUÆ fifty-two,
 A rich divine began to woo
 A handsome, young, imperious girl,
 Nearly related to an earl.

Her parents and her friends consent ;
 The couple to the temple went :
 They first invite the Cyprian queen ;
 'Twas answer'd, " She would not be seen ;"
 The Graces next, and all the Muses,
 Were bid in form, but sent excuses.
 Juno attended at the porch,
 With farthing candle for a torch ;
 While mistress Iris held her train,
 The faded bow distilling rain.
 Then Hebe came, and took her place,
 But show'd no more than half her face.

Whate'er those dire forebodings meant,
 In mirth the wedding-day was spent ;
 The wedding-day, you take me right,
 I promise nothing for the night.
 The bridegroom, drest to make a figure,
 Assumes an artificial vigour ;
 A flourish'd nightcap on, to grace
 His ruddy, wrinkled, smiling face :
 Like the faint red upon a pippin,
 Half wither'd by a winter's keeping.

And thus set out this happy pair,
 The swain is rich, the nymph is fair ;
 But, what I gladly would forget,
 The swain is old, the nymph coquette.
 Both from the goal together start ;
 Scarce run a step before they part ;
 No common ligament that binds
 The various textures of their minds :
 Their thoughts and actions, hopes and fears,
 Less corresponding than their years.
 Her spouse desires his coffee soon,
 She rises to her tea at noon.
 While he goes out to cheapen books,
 She at the glass consults her looks :

While Betty's buzzing in her ear,
Lord, what a dress these parsons wear !
So odd a choice how could she make !
Wish'd him a colonel for her sake.
Then, on her fingers ends, she counts,
Exact, to what his age amounts.
The Dean, she heard her uncle say,
Is sixty, if he be a day ;
His ruddy cheeks are no disguise ;
You see the crow's feet round his eyes.

At one she rambles to the shops,
To cheapen tea, and talk with fops ;
Or calls a council of her maids,
And tradesmen, to compare brocades.
Her weighty morning business o'er,
Sits down to dinner just at four ;
Minds nothing that is done or said,
Her evening work so fills her head.
The Dean, who us'd to dine at one,
Is mawkish, and his stomach's gone ;
In threadbare gown, would scarce a louse hold,
Looks like the chaplain of his household ;
Beholds her, from the chaplain's place,
In French brocades, and Flanders lace ;
He wonders what employs her brain,
But never asks, or asks in vain ;
His mind is full of other cares,
And, in the sneaking parson's airs,
Computes, that half a parish dues
Will hardly find his wife in shoes.

Canst thou imagine, dull divine,
'Twill gain her love, to make her fine ;
Hath she no other wants beside ?
You raise desire as well as pride,
Enticing coxcombs to adore,
And teach her to despise thee more.

If in her coach she'll condescend
 To place him at the hinder end,
 Her hoop is hoist above his nose,
 His odious gown would soil her clothes,
 And drops him at the church, to pray,
 While she drives on to see the play,
 He, like an orderly divine,
 Comes home a quarter after nine,
 And meets her hasting to the ball :
 Her chairmen push him from the wall.
 He enters in, and walks up stairs,
 And calls the family to prayers ;
 Then goes alone to take his rest :
 In bed, where he can spare her best,
 At five the footmen make a din,
 Her ladyship is just come in ;
 The masquerade began at two,
 She stole away with much ado ;
 And shall be chid this afternoon,
 For leaving company so soon :
 She'll say, and she may truly say't,
 She can't abide to stay out late.

But now, tho' scarce a twelvemonth married,
 Poor Lady Jane has thrice miscarried :
 The cause, alas ! is quickly guest ;
 The town has whisper'd round the jest.
 Think on some remedy in time,
 You find his reverence past his prime,
 Already dwindled to a lath :
 No other way but try the bath.

For Venus, rising from the ocean,
 Infus'd a strong prolific potion,
 That mix'd with Achelous spring,
 The horned flood, as poets sing,
 Who, with an English beauty smitten,
 Ran under ground from Greece to Britain ;

The genial virtue with him brought,
And gave the nymph a plenteous draught ;
Then fled, and left his horn behind,
For husbands past their youth to find :
The nymph, who still with passion burn'd,
Was to a boiling fountain turn'd,
Where childless wives crowd every morn,
To drink in Acheloüs' horn.

And here the father often gains
That title by another's pains.

Hither, though much against the grain,
The Dean has carry'd Lady Jane.
He, for a while, would not consent,
But vow'd his money all was spent :
His money spent ! a clownish reason !
And must my lady slip her season ?
The doctor, with a double fee,
Was brib'd to make the Dean agree.

Here all diversions of the place
Are proper in my lady's case :
With which she patiently complies,
Merely because her friends advise :
His money and her time employs
In music, raffling-rooms, and toys ;
Or in the Cross-bath seeks an heir,
Since others oft have found one there :
Where if the Dean by chance appears,
It shames his cassock and his years.
He keeps his distance in the gallery
Till banish'd by some coxcomb's raillery ;
For 'twould his character expose
To bathe among the belles and beaux.

So have I seen, within a pen,
Young ducklings foster'd by a hen ;
But, when let out, they run and muddle,
As instinct leads them, in a puddle :

The sober hen, not born to swim,
With mournful note clucks round the brim.

The Dean, with all his best endeavour,
Gets not an heir, but gets a fever.

A victim to the last essays
Of vigour in declining days,
He dies, and leaves his mourning mate
(What could he less?) his whole estate.

The widow goes through all her forms :
New lovers now will come in swarms.

O, may I see her soon dispensing
Her favours to some broken ensign !
Him let her marry, for his face,
And only coat of tarnish'd lace ;
To turn her naked out of doors,
And spend her jointure on his whores ;
But, for a parting present, leave her
A rooted pox to last for ever !

AN EXCELLENT NEW BALLAD;

OR,

THE TRUE ENGLISH DEAN * TO BE HANGED FOR A
RAPE. 1730.

I.

OUR brethren of England, who love us so dear,
And in all they do for us so kindly do mean,
(A blessing upon them !) have sent us this year,
For the good of our church, a true English dean.
A holier priest ne'er was wrapt up in crape,
The worst you can say, he committed a rape.

II.

In his journey to Dublin, he lighted at Chester,
And there he grew fond of another man's wife;

* "DUBLIN, June 6. The Rev. Dean Sawbridge, having surrendered himself on his indictment for a rape, was arraigned at the bar of the Court of King's Bench, and is to be tried next Monday."—London Evening Post, June 16, 1730.—"DUBLIN, June 13. The Rev. Thomas Sawbridge, Dean of Fernes, who was indicted for ravishing Susanna Runkard, and whose trial was put off for some time past, on motion of the King's Counsel on behalf of the said Susanna, was yesterday tried in the Court of King's Bench, and acquitted. It is reported, that the Dean intends to indict her for perjury, he being in the county of Wexford when she swore the rape was committed against her in the city of Dublin."—Daily Post-Boy, June 23, 1730.—NICOL.

Burst into her chamber and would have caress'd her ;
 But she valued her honour much more than her life.
 She bustled, and struggled, and made her escape
 To a room full of guests, for fear of a rape.

III.

The Dean he pursued, to recover his game ;
 And now to attack her again he prepares :
 But the company stood in defence of the dame,
 They cudgell'd, and cuf't him, and kick'd him down stairs.
 His deanship was now in a damnable scrape,
 And this was no time for committing a rape.

IV.

To Dublin he comes, to the bagnio he goes,
 And orders the landlord to bring him a whore ;
 No scruple came on him his gown to expose,
 'Twas what all his life he had practis'd before.
 He had made himself drunk with the juice of the grape,
 And got a good clap, but committed no rape.

V.

The Dean, and his landlord, a jolly comrade,
 Resolv'd for a fortnight to swim in delight ;
 For why, they had both been brought up to the trade
 Of drinking all day, and of whoring all night.
 His landlord was ready his deanship to ape
 In every debauch, but committing a rape.

VI.

This Protestant zealot, this English divine,
 In church and in state was of principles sound;
 Was truer than Steele to the Hanover line,
 And griev'd that a Tory should live above ground.
 Shall a subject so loyal be hang'd by the nape,
 For no other crime but committing a rape?

VII.

By old Popish canons, as wise men have penn'd
 'em,
 Each priest had a concubine, jure ecclesiae;
 Who'd be dean of Fernes without a commendam?
 And precedents we can produce, if it please ye:
 Then why should the Dean, when whores are so cheap,
 Be put to the peril and toil of a rape!

VIII.

If fortune should please but to take such a crotchet
 (To thee I apply, great Smedley's successor)
 To give thee lawn sleeves, a mitre, and rochet, Whom wouldst thou resemble? I leave thee a guesser.
 But I only behold thee in Atherton's * shape,
 For sodomy hang'd; as thou for a rape.

* A bishop of Waterford, sent from England an hundred years ago, who was hanged at Arbor-hill, near Dublin.—See “The penitent death of a woful sinner, or the penitent death of John Atherton, executed at Dublin the 5th of December, 1640. With some annotations upon several passages in it. As also the Sermon, with some further enlargements, preached at his burial. By Nicholas Barnard, Dean of Ardagh in Ireland.

Quis in seculo peccavit enormius Paulo? Quis in religione gravius Petro? illi tamen pœnitentiam assequuti sunt non solum

IX.

Ah! dost thou not envy the brave Colonel Chartres,
 Condemn'd for thy crime at threescore and ten?
 To hang him, all England would lend him their garters,
 Yet he lives, and is ready to ravish again.*
 Then throttle thyself with an ell of strong tape,
 For thou hast not a groat to atone for a rape.

X.

The Dean he was vex'd that his whores were so willing:
 He long'd for a girl that would struggle and squall;
 He ravish'd her fairly, and sav'd a good shilling;
 But here was to pay the devil and all.
 His trouble and sorrows now come in a heap,
 And hang'd he must be for committing a rape.

XI.

If maidens are ravish'd, it is their own choice:
 Why are they so wilful to struggle with men?
 If they would but lie quiet, and stifle their voice,
 No devil nor Dean could ravish them then.
 Nor would there be need of a strong hempen cape
 Tied round the Dean's neck for committing a rape.

ministerium sed magisterium sanctitatis. Nolite ergo ante tempus judicare, quia fortasse quos vos laudatis, Deus reprehendit, et quos vos reprehenditis, ille laudabit, primi novissimi, et novissimi primi. Petr. Chrysolog. Dublin, Printed by the Society of Stationers, 1641."

* This trial took place in 1723; but being only found guilty of an assault, with intent to commit the crime, the worthy colonel was fined 300l. to the private party prosecuting.

XII.

Our church and our state dear England maintains,
 For which all true Protestant hearts should be glad :

She sends us our bishops, our judges and deans,
 And better would give us, if better she had.
 But, lord! how the rabble will stare and will gape,
 When the good English Dean is hang'd up for a rape.

 ON STEPHEN DUCK,

THE THRESHER, AND FAVOURITE POET.

A QUIBBLING EPIGRAM. 1730.

THE thresher Duck could o'er the queen prevail,
 The proverb says, "no fence against a flail."
 From threshing corn he turns to thresh his brains;
 For which her majesty allows him grains:
 Though 'tis confest, that those, who ever saw
 His poems, think them all not worth a straw!
 Thrice happy Duck, employed in threshing stubble,
 Thy toil is lessen'd, and thy profits double.

THE LADY'S DRESSING-ROOM.*

1730.

FIVE hours (and who can do it less in?)
 By haughty Celia spent in dressing ;
 The goddess from her chamber issues,
 Array'd in lace, brocades, and tissues.

Strephon, who found the room was void,
 And Betty otherwise employ'd,
 Stole in, and took a strict survey
 Of all the litter as it lay :
 Whereof, to make the matter clear,
 An inventory follows here.

And, first, a dirty smock appear'd,
 Beneath the arm-pits well besmear'd ;
 Strephon, the rogue, display'd it wide,
 And turn'd it round on every side :
 On such a point, few words are best,
 And Strephon bids us guess the rest ;
 But swears, how damnably the men lie
 In calling Celia sweet and cleanly.

Now listen, while he next produces
 The various combs for various uses ;
 Fill'd up with dirt so closely fixt,
 No brush could force a way betwixt ;

* A defence of "The Lady's Dressing-Room," by some facetious friend of our author, is printed in Faulkner's edition; which, after a humorous travestie of ten lines only of Horace's "Art of Poetry," decides clearly that there are ten times more slovenly expressions in those ten lines of Horace, than in the whole poem of Dr Swift.—N.

A paste of composition rare,
Sweat, dandriff, powder, lead, and hair :
A fore-head cloth with oil upon't,
To smooth the wrinkles on her front :
Here alum-flour, to stop the steams
Exhal'd from sour unsavoury streams ;
There night-gloves made of Tripsey's hide,
Bequeath'd by Tripsey when she died ;
With puppy-water, beauty's help,
Distill'd from Tripsey's darling whelp.
Here gallipots and vials plac'd,
Some fill'd with washes, some with paste ;
Some with pomatums, paints, and slops,
And ointments good for scabby chops.
Hard by a filthy basin stands,
Foul'd with the scouring of her hands :
The basin takes whatever comes,
Ths scrapings from her teeth and gums,
A nasty compound of all hues,
For here she spits, and here she spews.

But, oh ! it turn'd poor Strephon's bowels,
When he beheld and smelt the towels,
Begumm'd, bematter'd, and beslim'd,
With dirt, and sweat, and ear-wax grim'd ;
No object Strephon's eye escapes ;
Her petticoats in frowzy heaps ;
Nor be the handkerchiefs forgot,
All varnish'd o'er with snuff and snot.
The stockings why should I expose,
Stain'd with the moisture of her toes, *
Or greasy coifs, or pinner's reeking,
Which Celia slept at least a week in ?

* Var. " marks of stinking toes."—H.

A pair of tweezers next he found,
 To pluck her brows in arches round ;
 Or hairs that sink the forehead low,
 Or on her chin like bristles grow.

The virtues we must not let pass
 Of Celia's magnifying glass ;
 When frighted Strephon cast his eye on't,
 It show'd the visage of a giant :
 A glass that can to sight disclose
 The smallest worm in Celia's nose,
 And faithfully direct her nail
 To squeeze it out from head to tail ;
 For, catch it nicely by the head,
 It must come out, alive or dead.

Why, Strephon, will you tell the rest ?
 And must you needs describe the chest ?
 That careless wench ! no creature warn her
 To move it out from yonder corner !
 But leave it standing full in sight,
 For you to exercise your spite ?
 In vain the workman show'd his wit,
 With rings and hinges counterfeit,
 To make it seem in this disguise
 A cabinet to vulgar eyes :
 Which Strephon ventur'd to look in,
 Resolv'd to go through thick and thin,
 He lifts the lid : there needs no more,
 He smelt it all the time before.

As, from within Pandora's box,
 When Epimetheus op'd the locks,
 A sudden universal crew
 Of human evils upward flew.
 He still was comforted to find
 That hope at last remain'd behind :
 So Strephon, lifting up the lid,
 To view what in the chest was hid,

The vapours flew from out the vent ;
 But Strephon, cautious, never meant
 The bottom of the pan to grope,
 And foul his hands in search of hope.

O ! ne'er may such a vile machine
 Be once in Celia's chamber seen !
 O ! may she better learn to keep
 Those " secrets of the hoary deep." *

As mutton-cutlets, † prime of meat,
 Which, though with art you salt and beat,
 As laws of cookery require,
 And roast them at the clearest fire ;
 If from adown the hopeful chops
 The fat upon the cinder drops,
 To stinking smoke it turns the flame,
 Poisoning the flesh from whence it came,
 And up exhales a greasy stench, ‡
 For which you curse the careless wench :
 So things which must not be exprest,
 When plump'd into the reeking chest,
 Send up an excremental smell
 To taint the parts from whence they fell :
 The petticoats and gown perfume,
 And waft a stink round every room.

Thus finishing his grand survey,
 Disgusted Strephon stole away ;
 Repeating in his amorous fits,
 " Oh ! Celia, Celia, Celia sh— !"
 But Vengeance, goddess never sleeping,
 Soon punish'd Strephon for his peeping :

* Milton. † Prima Virorum.—Ed. Dublin, 1772.

‡ Vide D—n D—l's Works, and A. P—l—ps's.—Ed. Dublin, 1772.

His foul imagination links
Each dame he sees with all her stinks ;
And, if unsavoury odours fly,
Conceives a lady standing by.
All women his description fits,
And both ideas jump like wits ;
By vicious fancy coupled fast,
And still appearing in contrast.

I pity wretched Strephon, blind
To all the charms of woman kind.
Should I the Queen of Love refuse,
Because she rose from stinking ooze ?
To him that looks behind the scene,
Statira's but some pocky quean.

When Celia all her glory shows,
If Strephon would but stop his nose,
(Who now so impiously blasphemes
Her ointments, daubs, and paints, and creams,
Her washes, slops, and every clout,
With which he makes so foul a rout ;)
He soon will learn to think like me,
And bless his ravish'd eyes to see
Such order from confusion sprung,
Such gaudy tulips rais'd from dung.

THE POWER OF TIME.

1730.

IF neither brass nor marble can withstand
The mortal force of Time's destructive hand ;
If mountains sink to vales, if cities die,
And lessening rivers mourn their fountains dry ;
When my old cassock (said a Welsh divine)
Is out at elbows ; why should I repine ?

CASSINUS AND PETER.

A TRAGICAL ELEGY.

1731.

Two college sophs of Cambridge growth,
Both special wits, and lovers both,
Conferring as they us'd to meet
On love, and books, and rapture sweet ;
(Muse, find me names to fit my metre, Cassinus this, and t'other Peter.)
Friend Peter to Cassinus goes,
To chat a while, and warm his nose :
But such a sight was never seen,
The lad lay swallow'd up in spleen.
He seem'd as just crept out of bed ;
One greasy stocking round his head,

The other he sat down to darn,
 With threads of different colour'd yarn ;
 His breeches torn, exposing wide
 A ragged shirt and tawny hide.
 Scorch'd were his shins, his legs were bare,
 But well embrown'd with dirt and hair.
 A rug was o'er his shoulders thrown,
 (A rug, for nightgown he had none)
 His jordan stood in manner fitting
 Between his legs, to spew or spit in ;
 His ancient pipe, in sable dy'd,
 And half unsmok'd, lay by his side.

Him thus accoutred Peter found,
 With eyes in smoke and weeping drown'd ;
 The leavings of his last night's pot
 On embers plac'd, to drink it hot.

Why, Cassy, thou wilt dose thy pate :
 What makes thee lie a-bed so late ?
 The finch, the linnet, and the thrush,
 Their matins chant in every bush ;
 And I have heard thee oft salute
 Aurora with thy early flute.
 Heaven send thou hast not got the hyps !
 How ! not a word come from thy lips ?

Then gave him some familiar thumps ;
 A college joke to cure the dumps.

The swain at last, with grief opprest,
 Cry'd, Celia ! thrice, and sigh'd the rest.

Dear Cassy, though to ask I dread,
 Yet ask I must—is Celia dead ?

How happy I, were that the worst,
 But I was fated to be curst ?

Come, tell us, has she play'd the whore ?

O, Peter, would it were no more !

Why, plague confound her sandy locks !
 Say, has the small or greater pox

Sunk down her nose, or seam'd her face?
Be easy, 'tis a common case.

O, Peter! beauty's but a varnish,
Which time and accidents will tarnish:
But Celia has contriv'd to blast
Those beauties that might ever last.
Nor can imagination guess,
Nor eloquence divine express,
How that ungrateful charming maid
My purest passion has betray'd:
Conceive the most envenom'd dart
To pierce an injur'd lover's heart.

Why, hang her; though she seem so coy,
I know she loves the barber's boy.

Friend Peter, this I could excuse,
For every nymph has leave to choose;
Nor have I reason to complain,
She loves a more deserving swain.
But, oh! how ill hast thou divin'd
A crime, that shocks all human kind;
A deed unknown to female race,
At which the sun should hide his face:
Advice in vain you would apply—
Then leave me to despair and die.
Ye kind Arcadians, on my urn
These elegies and sonnets burn;
And on the marble grave these rhymes,
A monument to after-times—
“ Here Cassy lies, by Celia slain,
And dying never told his pain.”

Vain empty world, farewell. But hark,
The loud Cerberian triple bark:
And there—behold Alecto stand,
A whip of scorpions in her hand:
Lo, Charon, from his leaky wherry
Beckoning to waft me o'er the ferry.

I come ! I come ! Medusa see
 Her serpent's hiss direct at me.
 Begone ; unhand me, hellish fry :
 "Avaunt—ye cannot say 'twas I." *
 Dear Cassy, thou must purge and bleed ;
 I fear thou wilt be mad indeed.
 But now, by friendship's sacred laws,
 I here conjure thee, tell the cause ;
 And Celia's horrid fact relate :
 Thy friend would gladly share thy fate.
 To force it out, my heart must rend ;
 Yet when conjur'd by such a friend—
 Think, Peter, how my soul is rack'd !
 These eyes, these eyes, beheld the fact.
 Now bend thine ear, since out it must ;
 But, when thou seest me laid in dust,
 The secret thou shalt ne'er impart,
 Not to the nymph that keeps thy heart ;
 (How would her virgin soul bemoan
 A crime to all her sex unknown !)
 Nor whisper to the tattling reeds
 The blackest of all female deeds ;
 Nor blab it on the lonely rocks,
 Where Echo sits, and listening mocks ;
 Nor let the Zephyr's treacherous gale
 Through Cambridge waft the direful tale ;
 Nor to the chattering feather'd race
 Discover Celia's foul disgrace.
 But, if you fail, my spectre dread,
 Attending nightly round your bed—
 And yet I dare confide in you ;
 So take my secret, and adieu.
 No wonder how I lost my wits :
 Oh ! Celia, Celia, Celia, sh— !

* Macbeth.—H.

A BEAUTIFUL YOUNG NYMPH
GOING TO BED.

WRITTEN FOR THE HONOUR OF THE FAIR SEX.

CORINNA, pride of Drury-lane,
For whom no shepherd sighs in vain ;
Never did Covent-Garden boast
So bright a batter'd strolling toast !
No drunken rake to pick her up ;
No cellar where on tick to sup ;
Returning at the midnight hour,
Four stories climbing to her bower ;
Then, seated on a three-legg'd chair,
Takes off her artificial hair ;
Now picking out a crystal eye,
She wipes it clean, and lays it by.
Her eyebrows from a mouse's hide
Stuck on with art on either side,
Pulls off with care, and first displays 'em,
Then in a play-book smoothly lays 'em.
Now dextrously her plumpers draws,
That serve to fill her hollow jaws,
Untwists a wire, and from her gums
A set of teeth completely comes ;
Pulls out the rags contriv'd to prop
Her flabby dugs, and down they drop.
Proceeding on, the lovely goddess
Unlaces next her steel-ribb'd bodice,
Which, by the operator's skill,
Press down the lumps, the hollows fill.

Up goes her hand, and off she slips
 The bolsters that supply her hips ;
 With gentlest touch she next explores
 Her chancres, issues, running sores ;
 Effects of many a sad disaster,
 And then to each applies a plaster :
 But must, before she goes to bed,
 Rub off the daubs of white and red,
 And smooth the furrows in her front
 With greasy paper stuck upon't.
 She takes a bolus ere she sleeps ;
 And then between two blankets creeps.
 With pains of love tormented lies ;
 Or, if she chance to close her eyes,
 Of Bridewell and the Compter dreams,
 And feels the lash, and faintly screams ;
 Or, by a faithless bully drawn,
 At some hedge-tavern lies in pawn ;
 Or to Jamaica seems transported
 * Alone, and by no planter courted ;
 Or, near Fleet-ditch's oozy brinks,
 Surrounded with a hundred stinks,
 Belated, seems on watch to lie,
 And snap some cully passing by ;
 Or, struck with fear, her fancy runs
 On watchmen, constables, and duns,
 From whom she meets with frequent rubs ;
 But never from religious clubs.
 Whose favour she is sure to find,
 Because she pays them all in kind.
 Corinna wakes. A dreadful sight !

* — Et longam incommittata videtur
 Ire viam.—Ed. 1772.

Behold the ruins of the night !
 A wicked rat her plaster stole,
 Half eat, and dragg'd it to his hole.
 The crystal eye, alas ! was miss'd ;
 And puss had on her plumpers p—ss'd.
 A pigeon pick'd her issue-peas :
 And Shock her tresses fill'd with fleas.

The nymph, though in this mangled plight,
 Must every morn her limbs unite.
 But how shall I describe her arts
 To re-collect the scatter'd parts ?
 Or show the anguish, toil, and pain,
 Of gathering up herself again ?
 The bashful Muse will never bear
 In such a scene to interfere.
 Corinna, in the morning dizen'd,
 Who sees, will spew ; who smells, be poison'd.

 STREPHON AND CHLOE.

1731.

Of Chloe all the town has rung,
 By every size of poets sung :
 So beautiful a nymph appears
 But once in twenty thousand years ;
 By Nature form'd with nicest care,
 And faultless to a single hair.
 Her graceful mien, her shape, and face,
 Confess'd her of no mortal race :
 And then so nice, and so genteel ;
 Such cleanliness from head to heel ;

No humours gross, or frouzy steams,
 No noisome whiffs, or sweaty streams,
 Before, behind, above, below,
 Could from her taintless body flow :
 Would so discreetly things dispose,
 None ever saw her pluck a rose.
 Her dearest comrades never caught her
 Squat on her hams to make maid's water :
 You'd swear that so divine a creature
 Felt no necessities of nature.
 In summer had she walk'd the town,
 Her armpits would not stain her gown :
 At country-dances, not a nose
 Could in the dog-days smell her toes.
 Her milk-white hands, both palms and backs,
 Like ivory dry, and soft as wax.
 Her hands, the softest ever felt,
 * Tho' cold would burn, though dry would melt.
 Dear Venus, hide this wondrous maid,
 Nor let her loose to spoil your trade.
 While she engrosses every swain,
 You but o'er half the world can reign.
 Think what a case all men are now in,
 What ogling, sighing, toasting, vowing !
 What powder'd wigs ! what flames and darts !
 What hampers full of bleeding hearts !
 What sword-knots ! what poetic strains !
 What billet-doux, and clouded canes !
 But Strephon sigh'd so loud and strong,
 He blew a settlement along ;
 And bravely drove his rivals down,
 With coach and six, and house in town.
 The bashful nymph no more withstands,
 Because her dear papa commands.

Proceed we to the marriage rites.

Imprimis, at the temple porch
Stood Hymen with a flaming torch :
The smiling Cyprian Goddess brings
Her infant loves with purple wings :
And pigeons billing, sparrows treading,
Fair emblems of a fruitful wedding.
The Muses next in order follow,
Conducted by their squire, Apollo :
Then Mercury with silver tongue ;
And Hebe, goddess ever young.
Behold, the bridegroom and his bride,
Walk hand in hand, and side by side ;
She, by the tender Graces drest,
But he, by Mars, in scarlet vest.
The nymph was cover'd with her flammeum,
And Phœbus sung th' epithalamium.
And last, to make the matter sure,
Dame Juno brought a priest demure.
Luna was absent, on pretence
Her time was not till nine months hence.
The rites perform'd, the parson paid,
In state return'd the grand parade ;
With loud huzzas from all the boys,
That now the pair must crown their joys.

But still the hardest part remains :
Strephon had long perplex'd his brains,
How with so high a nymph he might
Demean himself the wedding-night :
For, as he view'd his person round,
Mere mortal flesh was all he found :
His hand, his neck, his mouth, and feet,
Were duly wash'd, to keep them sweet ;
With other parts, that shall be nameless,
The ladies else might think me shameless.

The weather and his love were hot ;
 And, should he struggle, I know what—
 Why, let it go, if I must tell it—
 He'll sweat, and then the nymph may smell it ;
 While she, a goddess dy'd in grain,
 Was unsusceptible of stain,
 And, Venus-like, her fragrant skin
 Exhal'd ambrosia from within.

Can such a deity endure
 A mortal human touch impure ?
 How did the humbled swain detest
 His prickly beard, and hairy breast ;
 His nightcap, border'd round with lace,
 Could give no softness to his face.

Yet, if the goddess could be kind,
 What endless raptures must he find !
 And goddesses have now and then
 Come down to visit mortal men ;
 To visit and to court them too :
 A certain goddess, God knows who,
 (As in a book he heard it read)
 Took Colonel Peleus to her bed.
 But what if he should lose his life
 By venturing on his heavenly wife !
 (For Strephon could remember well,
 That once he heard a school-boy tell,
 How Semele, of mortal race,
 By thunder died in Jove's embrace.)
 And what if daring Strephon dies
 By lightning shot from Chloe's eyes !

While these reflections fill'd his head,
 The bride was put in form to bed :
 He follow'd, stript, and in he crept,
 But awfully his distance kept.

Now " ponder well, ye parents dear ;"
 Forbid your daughters guzzling beer ;

And make them every afternoon
Forbear their tea, or drink it soon ;
That, ere to bed they venture up,
They may discharge it every sup ;
If not, they must in evil plight
Be often forc'd to rise at night.
Keep them to wholesome food confin'd,
Nor let them taste what causes wind :
'Tis this the sage of Samos means,
Forbidding his disciples beans.
O ! think what evils must ensue ;
Miss Moll the jade will burn it blue :
And, when she once has got the art,
She cannot help it for her heart ;
But out it flies, ev'n when she meets
Her bridegroom in the wedding-sheets.
Carminative and diuretic
Will damp all passion sympathetic :
And Love such nicety requires,
One blast will put out all his fires.
Since husbands get behind the scene,
The wife should study to be clean ;
Nor give the smallest room to guess
The time when wants of nature press ;
But after marriage practise more
Decorum than she did before ;
To keep her spouse deluded still,
And make him fancy what she will.
In bed we left the married pair ;
'Tis time to show how things went there.
Strephon, who had been often told
That fortune still assists the bold,
Resolv'd to make the first attack ;
But Chloe drove him fiercely back.
How could a nymph so chaste as Chloe,
With constitution cold and snowy,

Permit a brutish man to touch her?
 Even lambs by instinct fly the butcher:
 Resistance on the wedding-night
 Is what our maidens claim by right:
 And Chloe, 'tis by all agreed,
 Was maid in thought, in word, and deed.
 Yet some assign a different reason;
 That Strephon chose no proper season.

Say, fair ones, must I make a pause,
 Or freely tell the secret cause?

Twelve cups of tea (with grief I speak)
 Had now constrain'd the nymph to leak.
 This point must needs be settled first:
 The bride must either void or burst.
 Then see the dire effects of pease;
 Think what can give the cholic ease.
 The nymph oppress'd before, behind,
 As ships are toss'd by waves and wind,
 Steals out her hand, by nature led,
 And brings a vessel into bed;
 Fair utensil, as smooth and white
 As Chloe's skin, almost as bright.

Strephon, who heard the fuming rill
 As from a mossy cliff distil,
 Cry'd out, Ye Gods! what sound is this?
 Can Chloe, heavenly Chloe, ——?
 But when he smelt a noisome steam,
 Which oft attends that lukewarm stream;
 (Salerno both together joins*,
 As sov'reign medicines for the loins;)

* Vide Schol. Salern. Rules of Health, written by the School of Salernum.

Mingere cum bumbis res est saluberrima lumbis.

And though contriv'd, we may suppose,
To slip his ears, yet struck his nose :
He found her while the scent increas'd,
As mortal as himself at least.
But soon, with like occasions press'd,
He boldly sent his hand in quest.
(Inspir'd with courage from his bride)
To reach the pot on t'other side :
And, as he fill'd the reeking vase,
Let fly a rouser in her face.

The little Cupids hovering round,
(As pictures prove) with garlands crown'd,
Abash'd at what they saw and heard,
Flew off, nor ever more appear'd.

Adieu to ravishing delights,
High raptures, and romantic flights ;
To goddesses so heavenly sweet,
Expiring shepherds at their feet ;
To silver meads and shady bowers,
Dress'd up with amaranthine flowers.

How great a change ! how quickly made !
They learn to call a spade a spade.
They soon from all constraint are freed ;
Can see each other do their need.
On box of cedar sits the wife,
And makes it warm for dearest life ;
And, by the beastly way of thinking,
Find great society in stinking.
Now Strephon daily entertains
His Chloe in the homeliest strains ;
And Chloe, more experienc'd grown,
With interest pays him back his own.
No maid at court is less asham'd,
Howe'er for selling bargains fam'd,
Than she to name her parts behind,
Or when a-bed to let out wind.

Fair Decency, celestial maid !
 Descend from Heaven to Beauty's aid !
 Though Beauty may beget desire,
 'Tis thou must fan the Lover's fire :
 For Beauty, like supreme dominion,
 Is best supported by Opinion :
 If Decency bring no supplies,
 Opinion falls, and Beauty dies.

To see some radiant nymph appear
 In all her glittering birth-day gear,
 You think some goddess from the sky
 Descended, ready cut and dry :
 But, ere you sell yourself to laughter,
 Consider well what may come after ;
 For fine ideas vanish fast,
 While all the gross and filthy last.

O Strephon, ere that fatal day
 When Chloe stole your heart away,
 Had you but through a cranny spy'd
 On house of ease your future bride,
 In all the postures of her face,
 Which nature gives in such a case ;
 Distortions, groanings, strainings, heavings,
 'Twere better you had lick'd her leavings,
 Than from experience find too late
 Your goddess grown a filthy mate.
 Your fancy then had always dwelt
 On what you saw, and what you smelt ;
 Would still the same ideas give ye,
 As when you spy'd her on the privy ;
 And, spite of Chloe's charms divine,
 Your heart had been as whole as mine.

Authorities, both old and recent,
 Direct that women must be decent ;
 And from the spouse each blemish hide,
 More than from all the world beside.

Unjustly all our nymphs complain
Their empire holds so short a reign ;
Is, after marriage, lost so soon,
It hardly lasts the honey-moon :
For, if they keep not what they caught,
It is entirely their own fault.
They take possession of the crown,
And then throw all their weapons down :
Though, by the politician's scheme,
Whoe'er arrives at power supreme,
Those arts, by which at first they gain it,
They still must practise to maintain it.

What various ways our females take
To pass for wits before a rake !
And in the fruitless search pursue
All other methods but the true !

Some try to learn polite behaviour
By reading books against their Saviour ;
Some call it witty to reflect
On every natural defect ;
Some show they never want explaining
To comprehend a double meaning.
But sure a tell-tale out of school
Is of all wits the greatest fool ;
Whose rank imagination fills
Her heart, and from her lips distils ;
You'd think she utter'd from behind,
Or at her mouth was breaking wind.

Why is a handsome wife ador'd
By every coxcomb but her lord ?
From yonder puppet-man inquire,
Who wisely hides his wood and wire !
Shows Sheba's queen completely drest,
And Solomon in royal vest :
But view them litter'd on the floor,
Or strung on pegs behind the door ;

Punch is exactly of a piece
 With Lorrain's duke, and prince of Greece,
 A prudent builder should forecast
 How long the stuff is like to last ;
 And carefully observe the ground,
 To build on some foundation sound.
 What house, when its materials crumble,
 Must not inevitably tumble ?
 What edifice can long endure
 Rais'd on a basis unsecure ?
 Rash mortals, ere you take a wife,
 Contrive your pile to last for life :
 Since beauty scarce endures a day,
 And youth so swiftly glides away ;
 Why will you make yourself a bubble,
 To build on sand with hay and stubble ?
 On sense and wit your passion found,
 By decency cemented round ;
 Let prudence with good nature strive,
 To keep esteem and love alive.
 Then, come old age whene'er it will,
 Your friendship shall continue still ;
 And thus a mutual gentle fire
 Shall never but with life expire.

APOLLO ;

OR,

A PROBLEM SOLVED.

1731.

APOLLO, god of light and wit,
 Could verse inspire, but seldom writ,

Refin'd all metals with his looks,
As well as chemists by their books ;
As handsome as my lady's page ;
Sweet five-and-twenty was his age.
His wig was made of sunny rays,
He crown'd his youthful head with bays ;
Not all the court of Heaven could show
So nice and so complete a beau.
No heir upon his first appearance,
With twenty thousand pounds a-year rents,
E'er drove, before he sold his land,
So fine a coach along the Strand ;
The spokes, we are by Ovid told,
Were silver, and the axle gold :
I own, 'twas but a coach and four,
For Jupiter allows no more.

Yet, with his beauty, wealth, and parts,
Enough to win ten thousand hearts,
No vulgar deity above
Was so unfortunate in love.

Three weighty causes were assign'd,
That mov'd the nymphs to be unkind.
Nine Muses always waiting round him,
He left them virgins as he found them.
His singing was another fault ;
For he could reach to B in alt :
And, by the sentiments of Pliny,
Such singers are like Nicolini.
At last, the point was fully clear'd ;
In short, Apollo had no beard.

THE PLACE OF THE DAMNED.

1731.

ALL folks, who pretend to religion and grace,
 Allow there's a HELL, but dispute of the place :
 But, if HELL may by logical rules be defin'd
 The place of the damn'd—I'll tell you my mind.
 Wherever the damn'd do chiefly abound,
 Most certainly there is HELL to be found :
 Damn'd poets, damn'd critics, damn'd blockheads,
 damn'd knaves,
 Damn'd senators brib'd, damn'd prostitute slaves ;
 Damn'd lawyers and judges, damn'd lords, and damn'd squires ;
 Damn'd spies and informers, damn'd friends, and damn'd liars ;
 Damn'd villains, corrupted in every station ;
 Damn'd time-serving priests all over the nation ;
 And into the bargain I'll readily give you
 Damn'd ignorant prelates, and counsellors privy.
 Then let us no longer by parsons be flamm'd,
 For we know by these marks the place of the damn'd :
 And HELL to be sure is at Paris or Rome.
 How happy for us that it is not at home !

THE DAY OF JUDGMENT. *

WITH a whirl of thought oppress'd,
 I sunk from reverie to rest.
 A horrid vision seiz'd my head,
 I saw the graves give up their dead !
 Jove, arm'd with terrors, bursts the skies,
 And thunder roars and lightning flies !
 Amaz'd, confus'd, its fate unknown,
 The world stands trembling at his throne !
 While each pale sinner hung his head,
 Jove, nodding, shook the heavens, and said :
 " Offending race of human kind,
 By nature, reason, learning, blind ;
 You who, through frailty, stepp'd aside ;
 And you, who never fell from pride :
 You who in different sects were shamm'd,
 And come to see each other damn'd :
 (So some folk told you, but they knew
 No more of Jove's designs than you)
 —The world's mad business now is o'er,
 And I resent these pranks no more.
 —I to such blockheads set my wit !
 I damn such fools !—Go, go, you're bit."

* This Poem was first printed (from the Dean's MS.) in a letter from Lord Chesterfield addressed to Mr Voltaire, dated Aug. 27, 1752.—N.

JUDAS. 1731.

[This seems to have been written when the majority of the Irish bishops were meditating what Swift considered as encroachments upon the rights of their clergy.]

By the just vengeance of incensed skies,
 Poor Bishop Judas late repenting dies.
 The Jews engag'd him with a paltry bribe,
 Amounting hardly to a crown a tribe ;
 Which though his conscience forc'd him to restore,
 (And, parsons tell us, no man can do more)
 Yet, through despair of God and man accurst,
 He lost his bishopric, and hang'd or burst.
 Those former ages differ'd much from this ;
 Judas betray'd his master with a kiss :
 But some have kiss'd the Gospel fifty times,
 Whose perjury's the least of all their crimes ;
 Some who can perjure through a two inch-board,
 Yet keep their bishoprics, and 'scape the cord :
 Like hemp, which, by a skilful spinster drawn
 To slender threads, may sometimes pass for lawn.
 As ancient Judas by transgression fell,
 And burst asunder ere he went to Hell ;
 So could we see a set of new Iscariots
 Come headlong tumbling from their mitred chariots ;
 Each modern Judas perish like the first,
 Drop from the tree, with all his bowels burst ;

Who could forbear, that view'd each guilty face,
 To cry, "Lo! Judas gone to his own place,
 His habitation let all men forsake,
 And let his bishopric another take!"

AN EPISTLE TO MR GAY. *

1731.

How could you, Gay, disgrace the Muse's train,
 To serve a tasteless court twelve years in vain! †
 Fain would I think our female friend ‡ sincere,
 Till Bob, § the poet's foe, possess'd her ear. ||

* The dean having been told by an intimate friend, that the Duke of Queensberry had employed Mr Gay to inspect the accounts and management of his grace's receivers and stewards (which however proved to be a mistake) wrote this Epistle to his friend.—H. Through the whole piece, under the pretext of instructing Gay in his duty as the duke's auditor of accounts, he satirizes the conduct of Sir Robert Walpole, then prime minister.

† See the libel on Dr Delany and Lord Carteret.—H.

‡ The Countess of Suffolk.—H.

§ Sir Robert Walpole.—FAULKNER.

|| We have had repeated occasion to remark, that, in courting Mrs Howard, Pope, Swift, and Gay, never perceived that they were offering incense at the shrine of an inefficient, rather than an unpropitious deity; and that George II., entirely guided by the councils of Queen Caroline, disregarded all advances made to him through the channel of Mrs Howard. It was the queen, not the favourite, over whom Sir Robert Walpole, here termed the poet's foe, "obtained an ascendancy, through which he not only preserved, but even augmented, during the reign of George II., the influence he had possessed under George I."

Did female virtue e'er so high ascend,
To lose an inch of favour for a friend ?

Say, had the court no better place to choose
For thee, than make a dry-nurse of thy Muse ?
How cheaply had thy liberty been sold,
To squire a royal girl of two years old :
In leading strings her infant steps to guide,
Or with her go-cart amble side by side ! *

But princely Douglas, † and his glorious dame,
Advanc'd thy fortune, and preserv'd thy fame.
Nor will your nobler gifts be misapplied,
When o'er your patron's treasure you preside :
The world shall own, his choice was wise and just,
For sons of Phœbus never break their trust.

Not love of beauty less the heart inflames
Of guardian eunuchs to the sultan's dames,
Their passions not more impotent and cold,
Than those of poets to the lust of gold.
With Pæan's purest fire his favourites glow,
The dregs will serve to ripen ore below ;
His meanest work : for, had he thought it fit,
That wealth should be the appanage of wit,
The god of light could ne'er have been so blind
To deal it to the worst of human kind.

But let me now, for I can do it well,
Your conduct in this new employ foretel.

And first : to make my observation right,
I place a statesman full before my sight,
A bloated minister in all his gear,
With shameless visage and perfidious leer ;

* The post of gentleman-usher to the Princess Louisa was offered to Gay, which he and his friends considered as a great indignity, her Royal Highness being a mere infant.

† The Duke of Queensberry.—FAULKNER.

Two rows of teeth arm each devouring jaw,
 And ostrich-like his all-digesting maw.
 My fancy drags this monster to my view,
 To show the world his chief reverse in you.
 Of loud unmeaning sounds a rapid flood
 Rolls from his mouth in plenteous streams of mud ;
 With these the court and senate-house he plies,
 Made up of noise, and impudence, and lies.

Now let me shew how Bob and you agree :
 You serve a potent prince, * as well as he.
 The ducal coffers trusted to your charge,
 Your honest care may fill, perhaps enlarge :
 His vassals easy, and the owner blest ;
 They pay a trifle, and enjoy the rest.
 Not so a nation's revenues are paid :
 The servant's faults are on the master laid.
 The people with a sigh their taxes bring,
 And, cursing Bob, forget to bless the king.

Next hearken, Gay, to what thy charge requires,
 With servants, tenants, and the neighbouring squires,
 Let all domestics feel your gentle sway ;
 Nor bribe, insult, nor flatter, nor betray.
 Let due reward to merit be allow'd ;
 Nor with your kindred half the palace crowd ;
 Nor think yourself secure in doing wrong,
 By telling noses with a party strong.

Be rich ; but of your wealth make no parade ;
 At least, before your master's debts are paid ;
 Nor in a palace, built with charge immense,
 Presume to treat him at his own expense †.

* A title given to every duke by the heralds.—FAULKNER.

† Alluding maliciously to the magnificence of Houghton, Sir Robert Walpole's seat, in which he had more than once the honour to receive a royal visit.

Each farmer in the neighbourhood can count
 To what your lawful perquisites amount.
 The tenants poor, the hardness of the times,
 Are ill excuses for a servant's crimes.
 With interest, and a premium paid beside,
 The master's pressing wants must be supplied ;
 With hasty zeal behold the steward come
 By his own credit to advance the sum ;
 Who, while th' unrighteous Mammon is his friend,
 May well conclude his power will never end.
 A faithful treasurer ! what could he do more ?
 He lends my lord what was my lord's before.

The law so strictly guards the monarch's health,
 That no physician dares prescribe by stealth :
 The council sit ; approve the doctor's skill ;
 And give advice, before he gives the pill.
 But the state empiric acts a safer part ;
 And, while he poisons, wins the royal heart.

But how can I describe the ravenous breed ?
 Then let me now by negatives proceed.

Suppose your lord a trusty servant send
 On weighty business to some neighbouring friend :
 Presume not, Gay, unless you serve a drone,
 To countermand his orders by your own. iii
 Should some imperious neighbour sink the boats,
 And drain the fish-ponds, while your master dotes :
 Shall he upon the ducal rights intrench,
 Because he brib'd you with a brace of tench ?

Nor from your lord his bad condition hide,
 To feed his luxury, or sooth his pride.
 Nor at an under rate his timber sell,
 And with an oath assure him, all is well ;
 Or swear it rotten, and with humble airs *
 Request it of him, to complete your stairs ;

* These lines are thought to allude to some story concerning

Nor, when a mortgage lies on half his lands,
Come with a purse of guineas in your hands.

Have Peter Waters * always in your mind;
That rogue, of genuine ministerial kind,
Can half the peerage by his arts bewitch,
Starve twenty lords to make one scoundrel rich:
And, when he gravely has undone a score,
Is humbly pray'd to ruin twenty more.

A dextrous steward, when his tricks are found,
Hush-money sends to all the neighbours round;
His master, unsuspecting of his pranks,
Pays all the cost, and gives the villain thanks.
And, should a friend attempt to set him right,
His lordship would impute it all to spite;
Would love his favourite better than before,
And trust his honesty just so much more.
Thus families, like realms, with equal fate,
Are sunk by premier ministers of state.

Some, when an heir succeeds, go boldly on,
And, as they robb'd the father, rob the son. †
A knave, who deep embroils his lord's affairs,
Will soon grow necessary to his heirs.
His policy consists in setting traps,
In finding ways and means, and stopping gaps;
He knows a thousand tricks whene'er he please,
Though not to cure, yet palliate each disease.

a vast quantity of mahogany declared rotten, and then applied by somebody to wainscots, stairs, door-cases, &c.—Dublin edit.

* He hath practised this trade for many years, and still continues it with success; and after he hath ruined one lord, is earnestly solicited to take another.—Ibid.

† Alluding to Sir Robert Walpole's unexpectedly obtaining the same lead in the councils of George II. which he enjoyed in those of his father's.

In either case, an equal chance is run;
 For, keep or turn him out, my lord's undone.
 You want a hand to clear a filthy sink;
 No cleanly workman can endure the stink.
 A strong dilemma in a desperate case!
 To act with infamy, or quit the place.

A bungler thus, who scarce the nail can hit,
 With driving wrong will make the pannel split;
 Nor dares an abler workman undertake
 To drive a second, lest the whole should break.

In every court the parallel will hold;
 And kings, like private folks, are bought and sold.
 The ruling rogue, who dreads to be cashier'd,
 Contrives, as he is hated, to be fear'd;
 Confounds accounts, perplexes all affairs:
 For vengeance more embroils, than skill repairs.
 So robbers (and their ends are just the same)
 To 'scape inquiries, leave the house in flame.

I knew a brazen minister of state,*
 Who bore for twice ten years the public hate.
 In every mouth the question most in vogue
 Was, when will they turn out this odious rogue
 A juncture happen'd in his highest pride:
 While he went robbing on, his master died. †
 We thought there now remain'd no room to doubt;
 The work is done, the minister must out.
 The court invited more than one or two:
 Will you, Sir Spencer? ‡ or will you, or you?

But not a soul his office durst accept ;
 The subtle knave had all the plunder swept :
 And, such was then the temper of the times,
 He ow'd his preservation to his crimes.
 The candidate observ'd his dirty paws ;
 Nor found it difficult to guess the cause :
 But, when they smelt such foul corruptions round him,
 Away they fled, and left him as they found him.

TO A LADY,

WHO DESIRED THE AUTHOR TO WRITE SOME VERSES
 UPON HER IN THE HEROIC STYLE.

AFTER venting all my spite,
 Tell me, what have I to write ?
 Every error I could find
 Through the mazes of your mind,
 Have my busy Muse employ'd,
 Till the company was cloy'd.
 Are you positive and fretful,
 Heedless, ignorant, forgetful ?

sary for such a high charge, Queen Caroline prevailed on his majesty, contrary to the expectation of every one, to retain in his service the proved experience of Walpole.

Those, and twenty follies more,
I have often told before.

Hearken what my lady says :
Have I nothing then to praise ?
Ill it fits you to be witty,
Where a fault should move your pity.
If you think me too conceited,
Or to passion quickly heated ;
If my wandering head be less
Set on reading than on dress ;
If I always seem too dull t'ye ;
I can solve the diffi—culty.

You would teach me to be wise :
Truth and honour how to prize ;
How to shine in conversation,
And with credit fill my station ;
How to relish notions high ;
How to live, and how to die.

But it was decreed by Fate—
Mr Dean, you come too late.
Well I know, you can discern,
I am now too old to learn :
Follies, from my youth instill'd,
Have my soul entirely fill'd ;
In my head and heart they centre,
Nor will let your lessons enter.

Bred a fondling and an heiress ;
Drest like any lady mayoress :
Cocker'd by the servants round,
Was too good to touch the ground ;
Thought the life of every lady
Should be one continued play-day—
Balls, and masquerades, and shows,
Visits, plays, and powder'd beaux.

Thus you have my case at large,
And may now perform your charge.

Those materials I have furnish'd,
When by you refin'd and burnish'd,
Must, that all the world may know 'em,
Be reduc'd into a poem.

But, I beg, suspend a while
That same paltry, burlesque style ;
Drop for once your constant rule,
Turning all to ridicule ;
Teaching others how to ape you ;
Court nor parliament can 'scape you ;
Treat the public and your friends
Both alike, while neither mends.

Sing my praise in strain sublime :
Treat me not with doggrel rhyme.
'Tis but just, you should produce,
With each fault, each fault's excuse ;
Not to publish every trifle,
And my few perfections stifle.
With some gifts at least endow me,
Which my very foes allow me.
Am I spiteful, proud, unjust ?
Did I ever break my trust ?
Which of all our modern dames
Censures less, or less defames ?
In good manners am I faulty ?
Can you call me rude or haughty ?
Did I e'er my mite withhold
From the impotent and old ?
When did ever I omit
Due regard for men of wit ?
When have I esteem express'd
For a coxcomb gaily dress'd ?
Do I, like the female tribe,
Think it wit to fleer and gibe ?
Who with less designing ends
Kindlier entertains her friends ;

With good words and countenance sprightly;
Strives to treat them more politely? *

Think not cards my chief diversion :
'Tis a wrong, unjust aspersion :
Never knew I any good in 'em.
But to dose my head like laudanum.
We, by play, as men, by drinking,
Pass our nights, to drive out thinking.
From my ailments give me leisure,
I shall read and think with pleasure ;
Conversation learn to relish,
And with books my mind embellish.

Now, methinks, I hear you cry,
Mr Dean, you must reply.

Madam, I allow 'tis true :
All these praises are your due.
You, like some acute philosopher,
Every fault have drawn a gloss over ;
Placing in the strongest light
All your virtues to my sight.

Though you lead a blameless life,
Are an humble prudent wife,
Answer all domestic ends :
What is this to us your friends ?
Though your children by a nod
Stand in awe without a rod ;
Though, by your obliging sway,
Servants love you, and obey ;
Though you treat us with a smile ;
Clear your looks, and smooth your style ;
Load our plates from every dish ;
This is not the thing we wish.

* In some editions, this couplet is wanting.—N.

Colonel  may be your debtor ;
 We expect employment better.
 You must learn, if you would gain us,
 With good sense to entertain us.

Scholars, when good sense describing,
 Call it tasting and imbibing :
 Metaphoric meat and drink
 Is to understand and think :
 We may carve for others thus ;
 And let others carve for us ;
 To discourse, and to attend,
 Is, to help yourself, and friend.
 Conversation is but carving ;
 Carve for all, yourself is starving :
 Give no more to every guest,
 Than he's able to digest ;
 Give him always of the prime ;
 And but little at a time.

Carve to all but just enough :
 Let them neither starve nor stuff :
 And, that you may have your due,
 Let your neighbours carve for you.
 This comparison will hold,
 Could it well in rhyme be told,
 How conversing, listening, thinking,
 Justly may resemble drinking ;
 For a friend a glass you fill,
 What is this but to instil ?

To conclude this long essay ;
 Pardon if I disobey ;
 Nor against my natural vein,
 Treat you in heroic strain.
 I, as all the parish knows,
 Hardly can be grave in prose :
 Still to lash, and lashing smile,
 Ill befits a lofty style.

From the planet of my birth
I encounter vice with mirth.
Wicked ministers of state
I can easier scorn than hate ;
And I find it answers right :
Scorn torments them more than spite.
All the vices of a court
Do but serve to make me sport.
Were I in some foreign realm,
Which all vices overwhelm ;
Should a monkey wear a crown,
Must I tremble at his frown ?
Could I not, through all his ermine,
'Spy the strutting chattering vermin ;
Safely write a smart lampoon,
To expose the brisk baboon ?

When my muse officious ventures
On the nation's representers :
Teaching by what golden rules
Into knaves they turn their fools :
How the helm is rul'd by Walpole,
At whose oars, like slaves, they all pull ;
Let the vessel split on shelves ;
With the freight enrich themselves :
Safe within my little wherry,
All their madness makes me merry :
Like the watermen of Thames,
I row by, and call them names ;
Like the ever-laughing sage,
In a jest I spend my rage :
(Though it must be understood,
I would hang them if I could)
If I can but fill my niche,
I attempt no higher pitch ;
Leave to d'Anvers and his mate
Maxims wise to rule the state.

Pulteney deep, accomplish'd St Johns,
 Scourge the villains with a vengeance :
 Let me, though the smell be noisome,
 Strip their bums ; let Caleb* hoise 'em ;
 Then apply Alecto's whip,
 Till they wriggle, howl, and skip.

Deuce is in you, Mr Dean :
 What can all this passion mean ;
 Mention courts ! you'll ne'er be quiet
 On corruptions running riot.
 End as it befits your station :
 Come to use and application :
 Nor with senates keep a fuss.
 I submit ; and answer thus :

If the machinations brewing,
 To complete the public ruin,
 Never once could have the power
 To affect me half an hour ;
 Sooner would I write in buskins,
 Mournful elegies on Blueskins. †
 If I laugh at whig and tory ;
 I conclude à fortiori,
 All your eloquence will scarce
 Drive me from my favourite farce.
 This I must insist on : for, as
 It is well observ'd by Horace, ‡
 Ridicule has greater power
 To reform the world than sour.

* Caleb d'Anvers was the name assumed by Amhurst, the ostensible writer of the Craftsman. This unfortunate man was neglected by his noble patrons, and died in want and obscurity.—ANDERSON.

† The famous thief, who, while on his trial at the Old Bailey, stabbed Jonathan Wild.—See Vol. XIII. p. 365.

‡ "Ridiculum acri," &c.—H.

Horses thus, let jockies judge else,
 Switches better guide than cudgels.
 Bastings heavy, dry, obtuse,
 Only dulness can produce ;
 While a little gentle jerking
 Sets the spirits all a-working.

Thus, I find it by experiment,
 Scolding moves you less than merriment.
 I may storm and rage in vain ;
 It but stupifies your brain.
 But with raillery to nettle,
 Sets your thoughts upon their mettle ;
 Gives imagination scope ;
 Never lets your mind elope ;
 Drives out brangling and contention,
 Brings in reason and invention.,
 For your sake, as well as mine,
 I the lofty style decline.
 I should make a figure scurvy,
 And your head turn topsy-turvy. *

I, who love to have a fling
 Both at senate-house and king :
 That they might some better way tread,
 To avoid the public hatred ;
 Thought no method more commodious,
 Than to show their vices odious ;
 Which I chose to make appear,
 Not by anger, but by sneer.
 As my method of reforming,
 Is by laughing, not by storming,
 (For my friends have always thought Tenderness my greatest fault)

* This couplet is wanting in some editions.—N.

Would you have me change my style?
 On your faults no longer smile;
 But, to patch up all our quarrels,
 Quote you texts from Plutarch's Morals:
 Or from Solomon produce
 Maxims teaching Wisdom's use?

If I treat you like a crown'd head,
 You have cheap enough compounded;
 Can you put in higher claims,
 Than the owners of St James?
 You are not so great a grievance,
 As the hirelings of St Stephen's.
 You are of a lower class
 Than my friend Sir Robert Brass.
 None of these have mercy found:
 I have laugh'd, and lash'd them round.

Have you seen a rocket fly?
 You would swear it pierc'd the sky;
 It but reach'd the middle air,
 Bursting into pieces there;
 Thousand sparkles falling down
 Light on many a coxcomb's crown.
 See what mirth the sport creates!
 Singes hair, but breaks no pates.
 Thus, should I attempt to climb,
 Treat you in a style sublime,
 Such a rocket is my Muse:
 Should I lofty numbers choose,
 Ere I reach'd Parnassus' top,
 I should burst, and bursting drop;
 All my fire would fall in scraps,
 Give your head some gentle raps;
 Only make it smart a while;
 Then could I forbear to smile,
 When I found the tingling pain
 Entering warm your frigid brain;

Make you able upon sight
 To decide of wrong and right;
 Talk with sense whate'er you please on;
 Learn to relish truth and reason!
 Thus we both shall gain our prize;
 I to laugh, and you grow wise.

EPIGRAM

ON THE BUSTS * IN RICHMOND HERMITAGE.

1732.

“ Sic siti lætantur docti.”

With honour thus by Carolina plac'd,
 How are these venerable bustoes grac'd!
 O queen, with more than regal title crown'd,
 For love of arts and piety renown'd!
 How do the friends of virtue joy to see
 Her darling sons exalted thus by thee!
 Nought to their fame can now be added more,
 Rever'd by her whom all mankind adore †.

* Newton, Locke, Clarke, and Woolaston.—H.

† Queen Caroline's regard for learned men was chiefly directed to those who had signalized themselves by philosophical research. Walpole alludes to this her peculiar taste, in his fable called the Funeral of the Lioness, where the royal shade is made to say,

Where Elysian waters glide,
 With Clarke and Newton by her side,
 She pores o'er metaphysic page.

ANOTHER.

LEWIS the living learned fed,
And rais'd the scientific head :
Our frugal queen, to save her meat,
Exalts the heads that cannot eat.

A CONCLUSION DRAWN FROM THE ABOVE EPIGRAMS, AND SENT TO THE DRAPIER.

SINCE Anna, whose bounty thy merits had fed,
Ere her own was laid low, had exalted thy head :
And since our good queen to the wise is so just,
To raise heads for such as are humbled in dust,
I wonder, good man, that you are not envaulted ;
Prithee go, and be dead, and be doubly exalted.

DR SWIFT'S ANSWER.

HER majesty never shall be my exalter ;
And yet she would raise me, I know, by a halter !

TO THE REVEREND DR SWIFT,

WITH A PRESENT OF A PAPER-BOOK, FINELY BOUND,
ON HIS BIRTH-DAY, NOV. 30, 1732. *

BY JOHN EARL OF ORRERY.

To thee, dear Swift, these spotless leaves I send;
Small is the present, but sincere the friend.
Think not so poor a book below thy care;
Who knows the price that thou canst make it bear?
Though tawdry now, and, like Tyrilla's face,
The specious front shines out with borrowed grace;
Though pasteboards, glittering like a tinsell'd coat,
A rasa tabula within denote:
Yet, if a venal and corrupted age,
And modern vices, should provoke thy rage;
If, warn'd once more by their impending fate,
A sinking country and an injur'd state,
Thy great assistance should again demand,
And call forth reason to defend the land;
Then shall we view these sheets with glad surprise,
Inspir'd with thought, and speaking to our eyes;
Each vacant space shall then, enrich'd, dispense
True force of eloquence, and nervous sense;
Inform the judgment, animate the heart,
And sacred rules of policy impart.

* It was occasioned by an annual custom, which I found pursued among his friends, of making him a present on his birthday.—ORRERY.

The spangled covering, bright with splendid ore,
 Shall cheat the sight with empty show no more :
 But lead us inward to those golden mines,
 Where all thy soul in native lustre shines.
 So when the eye surveys some lovely fair,
 With bloom of beauty grac'd, with shape and air ;
 How is the rapture heighten'd, when we find
 Her form excell'd by her celestial mind !

LEFT WITH A SILVER STANDISH ON THE DEAN OF ST PATRICK'S DESK, ON HIS BIRTH-DAY.

BY DR DELANY.

HITHER from Mexico I came,
 To serve a proud Iernian dame :
 Was long submitted to her will ;
 At length she lost me at quadrille.
 Through various shapes I often pass'd,
 Still hoping to have rest at last ;
 And still ambitious to obtain
 Admittance to the patriot Dean ;
 And sometimes got within his door,
 But soon turn'd out to serve the poor ; *
 Not strolling Idleness to aid,
 But honest Industry decay'd.

* Alluding to five hundred pounds lent by the Dean, without interest, to poor tradesmen.—F.

At length an artist purchas'd me,
 And wrought me to the shape you see.
 This done, to Hermes I apply'd :
 " O Hermes! gratify my pride ;
 Be it my fate to serve a sage,
 The greatest genius of his age ;
 That matchless pen let me supply,
 Whose living lines will never die !"
 " I grant your suit ;" the God replied,
 And here he left me to reside.

OCCASIONED BY THE FOREGOING PRESENTS.

A PAPER BOOK is sent by Boyle,
 Too neatly gilt for me to soil.
 Delany sends a silver standish,
 When I no more a pen can brandish.
 Let both around my tomb be plac'd :
 As trophies of a Muse deceas'd :
 And let the friendly lines they writ,
 In praise of long-departed wit,
 Be grav'd on either side in columns,
 More to my praise than all my volumes,
 To burst with envy, spite, and rage,
 The Vandals of the present age.

SHALL then my kindred all my glory claim,
And boldly rob me of eternal fame?
To ev'ry art my gen'rous aid I lend,
To music, painting, poetry, a friend.
'Tis I celestial harmony inspire,
When fix'd to strike the sweetly warbling wire. †
I to the faithful canvas have consign'd
Each bright idea of the painter's mind;
Behold from Raphael's skydipt pencils rise
Such heav'nly scenes as charm the gazer's eyes.
O let me now aspire to higher praise!
Ambitious to transcribe your deathless lays:
Nor thou, immortal bard, my aid refuse,
Accept me as the servant of your Muse,
Then shall the world my wondrous worth declare,
And all mankind your matchless pen revere.

THE BEASTS' CONFESSION TO THE PRIEST,

ON OBSERVING

HOW MOST MEN MISTAKE THEIR OWN TALENTS.

1732.

PREFACE.

I HAVE been long of opinion, that there is not a more general and greater mistake, or of worse consequences through the commerce of mankind, than the wrong judgments they are apt to entertain of their own talents. I knew a stuttering alderman in London, a great frequenter of coffeehouses, who, when a fresh newspaper was brought in, constantly seized it first, and read it aloud to his brother citizens; but in a manner as little intelligible to the standers-by as to himself. How many pretenders to learning expose themselves, by choosing to discourse on those very parts of science wherewith they are least acquainted! It is the same case in every other qualification. By the multitude of those who deal in rhymes, from half a sheet to twenty, which come out every minute, there must be at least five hundred poets in the city and suburbs of London; half as many coffeehouse orators, exclusive of the clergy; forty thousand politicians, and four thousand five hundred profound scholars; not to mention the wits, the railers, the smart-fellows, and critics; all as illiterate and impudent as a suburb whore. What are we to think of the fine-dressed sparks, proud of their own personal deformities, which appear the more hideous by the contrast of wearing scarlet and gold, with what they call toupets * on their heads, and all the frippery of a modern beau, to make a figure before women; some of them with hump-backs, others hardly five feet high, and every feature of their faces distorted: I have seen many of these insipid pretenders entering into conversation with persons of learning, constantly making the grossest blunders in every sentence, without conveying one single idea fit for a rational creature to spend a thought on; perpetually confounding all chronology, and geography, even of present times, compute, that London hath eleven native fools of the beau and puppy kind, for one among us in Dublin; beside two-thirds of ours transplanted thither, who are now naturalized: whereby that overgrown capital exceeds ours in the articles of dunces by forty to one; and what is more to our further mortification, there is not one distinguished fool of Irish birth or education, who makes any noise in that famous metropolis, unless the London prints be very partial or defective; whereas London is seldom without a dozen of their own educating, who engross the vogue for half a winter together, and are never heard of more, but give place to a new set. This has been the constant progress for at least thirty years past, only allowing for the change of breed and fashion.

The poem is grounded upon the universal folly in mankind of mistaking their talents; by which the

* Wigs with long black tails, at that time very much in fashion. It was very common also to call the wearers of them by the same name.—F.

author does a great honour to his own species, almost equalling them with certain brutes; wherein, indeed, he is too partial, as he freely confesses: and yet he has gone as low as he well could, by specifying four animals; the wolf, the ass, the swine, and the ape; all equally mischievous, except the last, who outdoes them in the article of cunning: so great is the pride of man!

WHEN beasts could speak (the learned say
 They still can do so every day),
 It seems, they had religion then,
 As much as now we find in men.
 It happen'd, when a plague broke out,
 (Which therefore made them more devout)
 The king of brutes (to make it plain,
 Of quadrupeds I only mean)
 By proclamation gave command,
 That every subject in the land
 Should to the priest confess their sins;
 And thus the pious Wolf begins:
 Good father, I must own with shame,
 That often I have been to blame:
 I must confess, on Friday last,
 Wretch that I was! I broke my fast:
 But I defy the basest tongue
 To prove I did my neighbour wrong;
 Or ever went to seek my food
 By rapine, theft, or thirst of blood.

The Ass approaching next, confess'd,
 That in his heart he lov'd a jest:
 A wag he was, he needs must own,
 And could not let a dunce alone:
 Sometimes his friend he would not spare,
 And might perhaps be too severe:

But yet the worst that could be said,
 He was a wit both born and bred ;
 And, if it be a sin and shame,
 Nature alone must bear the blame :
 One fault he has, is sorry for't,
 His ears are half a foot too short ;
 Which could he to the standard bring,
 He'd show his face before the king :
 Then for his voice, there's none disputes
 That he's the nightingale of brutes.

The Swine with contrite heart allow'd,
 His shape and beauty made him proud :
 In diet was perhaps too nice,
 But gluttony was ne'er his vice :
 In every turn of life content,
 And meekly took what fortune sent :
 Inquire through all the parish round,
 A better neighbour ne'er was found ;
 His vigilance might some displease ;
 'Tis true, he hated sloth like pease.

The mimic Ape began his chatter,
 How evil tongues his life bespatter ;
 Much of the censuring world complain'd,
 Who said, his gravity was feign'd :
 Indeed, the strictness of his morals
 Engag'd him in a hundred quarrels ;
 He saw, and he was griev'd to see't,
 His zeal was sometimes indiscreet :
 He found his virtues too severe
 For our corrupted times to bear ;
 Yet such a lewd licentious age
 Might well excuse a stoic's rage.

The Goat advanc'd with decent pace ;
 And first excus'd his youthful face ;
 Forgiveness begg'd that he appear'd
 ('Twas Nature's fault) without a beard.

'Tis true, he was not much inclin'd
To fondness for the female kind :
Not, as his enemies object,
From chance, or natural defect ;
Not by his frigid constitution ;
But through a pious resolution :
For he had made a holy vow
Of Chastity, as monks do now :
Which he resolv'd to keep for ever hence,
And strictly too, as doth his reverence. *

Apply the tale, and you shall find,
How just it suits with human kind.
Some faults we own ; but can you guess ?
Why virtues carried to excess,
Wherewith our vanity endows us,
Though neither foe nor friend allows us.

The Lawyer swears (you may rely on't)
He never squeez'd a needy client ;
And this he makes his constant rule ;
For which his brethren call him fool ;
His conscience always was so nice,
He freely gave the poor advice ;
By which he lost, he may affirm,
A hundred fees last Easter term ;
While others of the learned robe
Would break the patience of a Job.
No pleader at the bar could match
His diligence and quick dispatch ;
Ne'er kept a cause, he well may boast,
Above a term or two at most.

The cringing Knave, who seeks a place
Without success, thus tells his case :

* The priest, his confessor.—F.

Why should he longer mince the matter?
 He fail'd, because he could not flatter;
 He had not learn'd to turn his coat,
 Nor for a party give his vote:
 His crime he quickly understood;
 Too zealous for the nation's good:
 He found the ministers resent it,
 Yet could not for his heart repent it.

The Chaplain vows, he cannot fawn,
 Though it would raise him to the lawn:
 He pass'd his hours among his books;
 You find it in his meagre looks:
 He might, if he were worldly wise,
 Preferment get, and spare his eyes:
 But owns, he had a stubborn spirit,
 That made him trust alone to merit;
 Would rise by merit to promotion;
 Alas! a mere chimeric notion.

The Doctor, if you will believe him,
 Confess'd a sin; (and God forgive him!)
 Call'd up at midnight, ran to save
 A blind old beggar from the grave:
 But see how Satan spreads his snares;
 He quite forgot to say his prayers.
 He cannot help it for his heart
 Sometimes to act the parson's part:
 Quotes from the Bible many a sentence,
 That moves his patients to repentance;
 And, when his medicines do no good,
 Supports their minds with heavenly food:
 At which, however well intended,
 He hears the clergy are offended;
 And grown so bold behind his back,
 To call him hypocrite and quack.
 In his own church he keeps a seat;
 Says grace before and after meat;

And calls, without affecting airs,
His household twice a-day to prayers.
He shuns apothecaries shops,
And hates to cram the sick with slops:
He scorns to make his art a trade;
Nor bribes my lady's favourite maid.
Old nurse-keepers would never hire,
To recommend him to the squire;
Which others, whom he will not name,
Have often practis'd to their shame.

The Statesman tells you, with a sneer,
His fault is to be too sincere;
And having no sinister ends,
Is apt to disoblige his friends.
The nation's good, his master's glory,
Without regard to whig or tory,
Were all the schemes he had in view;
Yet he was seconded by few:
Though some had spread a thousand lies,
'Twas he defeated the excise.*
'Twas known, though he had borne aspersion,
That standing troops were his aversion:
His practice was, in every station,
To serve the king, and please the nation.
Though hard to find in every case
The fittest man to fill a place:
His promises he ne'er forgot,
But took memorials on the spot;
His enemies, for want of charity,
Said, he affected popularity:
'Tis true, the people understood,
That all he did was for their good;

* A bill was brought into the House of Commons of England, in the year 1732, for laying an excise on wines, tobacco, &c. which, after many debates, was dropped.—F.

Their kind affections he has tried ;
No love is lost on either side.
He came to court with fortune clear,
Which now he runs out every year :
Must, at the rate that he goes on,
Inevitably be undone ;
O ! if his majesty would please
To give him but a writ of ease,
Would grant him license to retire,
And it has long been his desire,
By fair accounts it would be found,
He's poorer by ten thousand pound.
He owns, and hopes it is no sin,
He ne'er was partial to his kin ;
He thought it base for men in stations
To crowd the court with their relations :
His country was his dearest mother,
And every virtuous man his brother :
Through modesty or awkward shame,
(For which he owns himself to blame)
He found the wisest man he could,
Without respect to friends or blood ;
Nor ever acts on private views,
When he has liberty to choose.

The Sharper swore, he hated play,
Except to pass an hour away :
And well he might ; for, to his cost,
By want of skill, he always lost ;
He heard there was a club of cheats,
Who had contriv'd a thousand feats,
Could change the stock, or cog a die,
And thus deceive the sharpest eye :
Nor wonder how his fortune sunk,
His brothers fleece him when he's drunk.

I own the moral not exact ;
Besides, the tale is false in fact ;

And so absurd, that I could raise up
 From fields Elysian, fabling Æsop,
 I would accuse him to his face
 For libelling the four-foot race.
 Creatures of every kind but ours
 Well comprehend their natural powers,
 While we, whom reason ought to sway,
 Mistake our talents every day.
 The Ass was never known so stupid,
 To act the part of Tray or Cupid;
 Nor leaps upon his master's lap,
 There to be strok'd, and fed with pap,
 As Æsop would the world persuade;
 He better understands his trade:
 Nor comes whene'er his lady whistles;
 But carries loads, and feeds on thistles.
 Our author's meaning, I presume, is
 A creature bipes et implumis;
 Wherein the moralist design'd
 A compliment on human kind:
 For here he owns, that now and then
 Beasts may degenerate into men. †

* A definition of man disapproved by all logicians: Homo est animal bipes, implume, erecto vultu.—F.

† Vide Gulliver, in his account of the Houyhnhnms.—F.

THE PARSON'S CASE.

THAT you, friend Marcus, like a stoic,
 Can wish to die in strains heroic,
 No real fortitude implies :
 Yet, all must own, thy wish is wise.
 Thy curate's place, thy fruitful wife,
 Thy busy, drudging scene of life,
 Thy insolent, illiterate vicar,
 Thy want of all-consoling liquor,
 Thy threadbare gown, thy cassock rent,
 Thy credit sunk, thy money spent,
 Thy week made up of fasting-days,
 Thy grate unconscious of a blaze,
 And, to complete thy other curses,
 The quarterly demands of nurses,
 Are ills you wisely wish to leave,
 And fly for refuge to the grave ;
 And, O, what virtue you express,
 In wishing such afflictions less !
 But, now, should Fortune shift the scene,
 And make thy curateship a dean ;
 Or some rich benefice provide,
 To pamper luxury and pride ;
 With labour small, and income great ;
 With chariot less for use than state ;
 With swelling scarf, and glossy gown,
 And license to reside in town :
 To shine where all the gay resort,
 At concerts, coffeehouse, or court :
 And weekly persecute his grace
 With visits, or to beg a place :

With underlings thy flock to teach,
With no desire to pray or preach ;
With haughty spouse in vesture fine,
With plenteous meals and generous wine ;
Wouldst thou not wish, in so much ease,
Thy years as numerous as thy days?

THE HARDSHIP UPON THE LADIES.

1733.

Poor ladies! though their business be to play,
'Tis hard they must be busy night and day :
Why should they want the privilege of men,
Nor take some small diversions now and then?
Had women been the makers of our laws,
(And why they were not, I can see no cause)
The men should slave at cards from morn to night ;
And female pleasures be to read and write.

A LOVE SONG,

IN THE MODERN TASTE.

1733.

I.

FLUTTERING spread thy purple pinions,
Gentle Cupid, o'er my heart :
I, a slave in thy dominions ;
Nature must give way to art.

II.

Mild Arcadians, ever blooming,
Nightly nodding o'er your flocks,
See my weary days consuming
All beneath yon flowery rocks.

III.

Thus the Cyprian goddess weeping
Mourn'd Adonis, darling youth :
Him the boar, in silence creeping,
Gor'd with unrelenting tooth.

IV.

Cynthia, tune harmonious numbers ;
Fair Discretion, string the lyre ;
Sooth my ever-waking slumbers :
Bright Apollo, lend thy choir.

V.

Gloomy Pluto, king of terrors,
Arm'd in adamantine chains,
Lead me to the crystal mirrors,
Watering soft Elysian plains.

VI.

Mournful cypress, verdant willow,
Gilding my Aurelia's brows,
Morpheus, hovering o'er my pillow,
Hear me pay my dying vows.

VII.

Melancholy smooth Meander,
Swiftly purling in a round,
On thy margin lovers wander,
With thy flowery chaplets crown'd.

VIII.

Thus when Philomela drooping
Softly seeks her silent mate,
See the bird of Juno stooping ;
Melody resigns to fate.

THE STORM :

MINERVA'S PETITION.

PALLAS, a goddess chaste and wise,
Descending lately from the skies,
To Neptune went, and begg'd in form
He'd give his orders for a storm ;
A storm, to drown that rascal Horte,
And she would kindly thank him for't :

A wretch ! whom English rogues, to spite her,
Had lately honour'd with a mitre.

The god, who favour'd her request,
Assur'd her he would do his best :
But Venus had been there before,
Pleaded the bishop lov'd a whore,
And had enlarg'd her empire wide ;
He own'd no deity beside.

At sea or land, if e'er you found him
Without a mistress, hang or drown him
Since Burnet's death, the bishops' bench,
Till Horte arriv'd, ne'er kept a wench ;
If Horte must sink, she grieves to tell it,
She'll not have left one single prelate ;
For, to say truth, she did intend him,
Elect of Cyprus in commendam.

And, since her birth the ocean gave her,
She could not doubt her uncle's favour.

Then Proteus urg'd the same request,
But half in earnest, half in jest ;
Said he—" Great sovereign of the main,
To drown him all attempts are vain.
Horte can assume more forms than I,
A rake, a bully, pimp, or spy ;
Can creep, or run, or fly or swim ;
All motions are alike to him :
Turn him adrift, and you shall find
He knows to sail with every wind ;
Or, throw him overboard, he'll ride
As well against as with the tide.

But, Pallas, you've applied too late ;
For, 'tis decreed, by Jove and Fate,
That Ireland must be soon destroy'd,
And who but Horte can be employ'd ?

You need not then have been so pert,
 In sending Bolton * to Clonfert,
 I found you did it, by your grinning;
 Your business is to mind your spinning.
 But how you came to interpose
 In making bishops, no one knows:
 Or who regarded your report;
 For never were you seen at court.
 And if you must have your petition,
 There's Berkeley † in the same condition;
 Look, there he stands, and 'tis but just,
 If one must drown the other must;
 But, if you'll leave us Bishop Judas,
 We'll give you Berkeley for Bermudas. ‡
 Now, if 'twill gratify your spite,
 To put him in a plaguy fright,
 Although 'tis hardly worth the cost,
 You soon shall see him soundly tost.
 You'll find him swear, blaspheme, and damn
 (And every moment take a dram)
 His ghastly visage with an air
 Of reprobation and despair:
 Or else some hiding-hole he seeks,
 For fear the rest should say he squeaks;
 Or, as Fitzpatrick § did before,
 Resolve to perish with his whore;

Or else he raves, and roars, and swears,
 And, but for shame, would say his prayers.

 To Neptune speak, and he'll consent;
 But he'll come back the knave he went.

ODE ON SCIENCE. *

O, HEAVENLY born! in deepest dells
 If fairest science ever dwells
 Beneath the mossy cave;
 Indulge the verdure of the woods,
 With azure beauty gild the floods,
 And flowery carpets lave.

For, melancholy ever reigns
 Delighted in the sylvan scenes
 With scientific light;

* This is written in the same style, and with the same design, as his "Love Song in the modern Taste."—H.

While Dian, huntress of the vales,
Seeks lulling sounds and fanning gales,
Though wrapt from mortal sight.

Yet, goddess, yet the way explore
With magic rites and heathen lore
Obstructed and depress'd :
Till Wisdom give the sacred Nine,
Untaught, not uninspir'd, to shine,
By Reason's power redress'd.

When Solon and Lycurgus taught,
To moralize the human thought
Of mad opinion's maze,
To erring zeal they gave new laws,
Thy charms, O Liberty, the cause
That blends congenial rays.

Bid bright Astræa gild the morn,
Or bid a hundred suns be born,
To hecatomb the year ;
Without thy aid, in vain the poles,
In vain the zodiac system rolls,
In vain the lunar sphere.

Come, fairest princess of the throng,
Bring sweet philosophy along,
In metaphysic dreams ;
While raptur'd bards no more behold
A vernal age of purer gold,
In Heliconian streams.

Drive Thralldom with malignant hand,
To curse some other destin'd land,
By Folly led astray :

Ierne bear on azure wing;
 Energic let her soar, and sing
 Thy universal sway.

So when Amphion bade the lyre
 To more majestic sound aspire,
 Behold the madding throng,
 In wonder and oblivion-drown'd,
 To sculpture turn'd by magic sound,
 And petrifying song.

YOUNG LADY'S COMPLAINT,

FOR THE STAY OF THE DEAN IN ENGLAND.

[These verses seem to be written on the same plan with the preceding, in order to ridicule the common-places of poetry.]

Blow, ye zephyrs, gentle gales;
 Gently fill the swelling sails.
 Neptune, with thy trident long,
 Trident three-fork'd, trident strong:
 And ye Nereids fair and gay,
 Fairer than the rose in May,
 Nereids living in deep caves,
 Gently wash'd with gentle waves;
 Nereids, Neptune, lull asleep
 Ruffling storms, and ruffled deep;

All around, in pompous state,
On this richer Argo wait :
Argo, bring my golden fleece,
Argo, bring him to his Greece.
Will Cadenus longer stay ?
Come, Cadenus, come away ;
Come with all the haste of love,
Come unto thy turtle-dove.
The ripen'd cherry on the tree
Hangs, and only hangs for thee,
Luscious peaches, mellow pears,
Ceres with her yellow ears,
And the grape, both red and white,
Grape inspiring just delight ;
All are ripe, and courting sue,
To be pluck'd and press'd by you.
Pinks have lost their blooming red.
Mourning hang their drooping head,
Every flower languid seems,
Wants the colour of thy beams,
Beams of wond'rous force and power,
Beams reviving every flower.
Come, Cadenus, bless once more,
Bless again thy native shore,
Bless again this drooping isle,
Make its weeping beauties smile,
Beauties that thine absence mourn,
Beauties wishing thy return :
Come, Cadenus, come with haste,
Come before the winter's blast ;
Swifter than the lightning fly,
Or I, like Vanessa, die.

ON POETRY.

A RHAPSODY. 1733.

ALL human race would fain be wits,
 And millions miss for one that hits.
 Young's universal passion, pride,
 Was never known to spread so wide.
 Say, Britain, could you ever boast
 Three poets in an age at most ?
 Our chilling climate hardly bears
 A sprig of bays in fifty years ;
 While every fool his claim alleges,
 As if it grew in common hedges.
 What reason can there be assign'd
 For this perverseness in the mind ?
 Brutes find out where their talents lie :
 A bear will not attempt to fly ;
 A founder'd horse will oft debate,
 Before he tries a five-barr'd gate ;
 A dog by instinct turns aside,
 Who sees the ditch too deep and wide.
 But man we find the only creature
 Who, led by folly, combats Nature ;
 Who, when she loudly cries, Forbear,
 With obstinacy fixes there ;
 And, where his genius least inclines,
 Absurdly bends his whole designs.
 Not empire to the rising sun
 By valour, conduct, fortune won ;
 Not highest wisdom in debates
 For framing laws to govern states ;

Not skill in sciences profound
 So large to grasp the circle round ;
 Such heavenly influence require,
 As how to strike the Muse's lyre.

Not beggar's brat on bulk begot ;
 Not bastard of a pedlar Scot ;
 Not boy brought up to cleaning shoes,
 The spawn of Bridewell or the stews ;
 Not infants dropp'd, the spurious pledges
 Of gypsies littering under hedges ;
 Are so disqualified by fate
 To rise in church, or law, or state,
 As he whom Phœbus in his ire
 Has blasted with poetic fire.

What hope of custom in the fair,
 While not a soul demands your ware ?
 Where you have nothing to produce
 For private life, or public use ?
 Court, city, country, want you not ;
 You cannot bribe, betray, or plot,
 For poets, law makes no provision ;
 The wealthy have you in derision :
 Of state affairs you cannot smatter ;
 Are awkward when you try to flatter ;
 Your portion, taking Britain round,
 Was just one annual hundred pound ;
 Now not so much as in remainder,
 Since Cibber brought in an attainder ;
 For ever fix'd by right divine
 (A monarch's right) on Grub Street line.

Poor starv'ling bard, how small thy gains !
 How unproportion'd to thy pains !
 And here a simile comes pat in ;
 Though chickens take a month to fatten,
 The guests in less than half an hour
 Will more than half a score devour.

So, after toiling twenty days
 To earn a stock of pence and praise,
 Thy labours, grown the critic's prey,
 Are swallow'd o'er a dish of tea :
 Gone to be never heard of more,
 Gone where the chickens went before.
 How shall a new attempter learn
 Of different spirits to discern,
 And how distinguish which is which,
 The poet's vein, or scribbling itch ?
 Then hear an old experienc'd sinner,
 Instructing thus a young beginner.

Consult yourself ; and if you find
 A powerful impulse urge your mind,
 Impartial judge within your breast
 What subject you can manage best ;
 Whether your genius most inclines
 To satire, praise, or humorous lines,
 To elegies in mournful tone,
 Or prologue sent from hand unknown.
 Then, rising with Aurora's light,
 The Muse invok'd, sit down to write ;
 Blot out, correct, insert, refine,
 Enlarge, diminish, interline ;
 Be mindful, when invention fails,
 To scratch your head, and bite your nails.

Your poem finish'd, next your care
 Is needful to transcribe it fair.
 In modern wit all printed trash is Set off with numerous breaks and dashes.

To statesmen would you give a wipe,
 You print it in Italic type.
 When letters are in vulgar shapes,
 'Tis ten to one the wit escapes :
 But, when in capitals express'd,
 The dullest reader smokes the jest :

Or else perhaps he may invent
 A better than the poet meant ;
 As learned commentators view
 In Homer more than Homer knew.

Your poem in its modish dress,
 Correctly fitted for the press,
 Convey by penny-post to Lintot,
 But let no friend alive look into't.
 If Lintot thinks 'twill quit the cost,
 You need not fear your labour lost :
 And how agreeably surpris'd
 Are you to see it advertis'd !
 The hawker shows you one in print,
 As fresh as farthings from the mint :
 The product of your toil and sweating ;
 A bastard of your own begetting.

Be sure at Will's, the following day,
 Lie snug, and hear what critics say ;
 And, if you find the general vogue
 Pronounces you a stupid rogue,
 Damns all your thoughts as low and little,
 Sit still, and swallow down your spittle.

Be silent as a politician,
 For talking may beget suspicion ;
 Or praise the judgment of the town,
 And help yourself to run it down.
 Give up your fond paternal pride,
 Nor argue on the weaker side :
 For, poems read without a name
 We justly praise, or justly blame ;
 And critics have no partial views,
 Except they know whom they abuse :
 And since you ne'er provoke their spite,
 Depend upon't their judgment's right.
 But if you blab, you are undone :
 Consider what a risk you run :

You lose your credit all at once ;
 The town will mark you for a dunce ;
 The vilest doggrel, Grub Street sends,
 Will pass for yours with foes and friends ;
 And you must bear the whole disgrace,
 Till some fresh blockhead takes your place.

Your secret kept, your poem sunk,
 And sent in quires to line a trunk,
 If still you be dispos'd to rhyme,
 Go try your hand a second time.
 Again you fail : yet Safe's the word ;
 Take courage, and attempt a third.
 But first with care employ your thoughts
 Where critics mark'd your former faults ;
 The trivial turns, the borrow'd wit,
 The similes that nothing fit ;
 The cant which every fool repeats,
 Town jests and coffee-house conceits,
 Descriptions tedious, flat and dry,
 And introduc'd the Lord knows why :
 Or where we find your fury set
 Against the harmless alphabet ;
 On A's and Be's your malice vent,
 While readers wonder whom you meant ;
 A public or a private robber,
 A statesman, or a South-Sea jobber ;
 A prelate, who no God believes ;
 A parliament, or den of thieves ;
 A pickpurse at the bar or bench,
 A duchess, or a suburb wench :
 Or oft, when epithets you link
 In gaping lines to fill a chink ;
 Like stepping-stones, to save a stride,
 In streets where kennels are too wide ;
 Or like a heel-piece, to support
 A cripple with one foot too short ;

Or like a bridge, that joins a marish
To moorlands of a different parish.
So have I seen ill-coupled hounds
Drag different ways in miry grounds.
So geographers, in Afric maps,
With savage pictures fill their gaps,
And o'er unhabitable downs
Place elephants for want of towns.

But, though you miss your third essay,
You need not throw your pen away.
Lay now aside all thoughts of fame,
To spring more profitable game.
From party merit seek support ;
The vilest verse thrives best at court.
A pamphlet in Sir Bob's defence
Will never fail to bring in pence :
Nor be concern'd about the sale,
He pays his workmen on the nail.

A prince, the moment he is crown'd,
Inherits every virtue round,
As emblems of the sovereign power,
Like other baubles in the Tower :
Is generous, valiant, just, and wise,
And so continues till he dies :
His humble senate this professes,
In all their speeches, votes, addresses.
But once you fix him in a tomb,
His virtues fade, his vices bloom ;
And each perfection, wrong imputed,
Is fully at his death confuted.
The loads of poems in his praise,
Ascending, make one funeral blaze :
As soon as you can hear his knell,
This god on earth turns devil in Hell :
And lo ! his ministers of state,
Transform'd to imps, his levee wait ;

Where, in the scenes of endless woe,
 They ply their former arts below ;
 And as they sail in Charon's boat,
 Contrive to bribe the judge's vote ;
 To Cerberus they give a sop,
 His triple barking mouth to stop ;
 Or, in the ivory gate of dreams *
 Project excise and South-Sea schemes ;
 Or hire their party pamphleteers
 To set Elysium by the ears.

Then, poet, if you mean to thrive,
 Employ your Muse on kings alive ;
 With prudence gathering up a cluster
 Of all the virtues you can muster,
 Which, form'd into a garland sweet,
 Lay humbly at your monarch's feet ;
 Who, as the odours reach his throne,
 Will smile, and think them all his own ;
 For law and Gospel both determine
 All virtues lodge in royal ermine :
 I mean the oracles of both,
 Who shall depose it upon oath.
 Your garland, in the following reign,
 Change but the names, will do again.

But, if you think this trade too base,
 (Which seldom is the dunce's case)
 Put on the critic's brow, and sit
 At Will's, the puny judge of wit.
 A nod, a shrug, a scornful smile,
 With caution us'd, may serve a while.
 Proceed no further in your part,
 Before you learn the terms of art ;

* Sunt geminæ Somni portæ—a
Altera candenti perfecta nitens elephanta.—VIRG. l. 6.

For you can never be too far gone
 In all our modern critics jargon :
 Then talk with more authentic face
 Of unities, in time and place ;
 Get scraps of Horace from your friends,
 And have them at your fingers ends ;
 Learn Aristotle's rules by rote,
 And at all hazards holdly quote ;
 Judicious Rymer oft review,
 Wise Dennis, and profound Bossu,
 Read all the prefaces of Dryden,
 For these our critics much confide in ;
 Though merely writ at first for filling,
 To raise the volume's price a shilling.

A forward critic often dupes us
 With sham quotations peri hupsous : *
 And if we have not read Longinus,
 Will magisterially outshine us.
 Then, lest with Greek he overrun ye,
 Procure the book for love or money,
 Translated from Boileau's translation, †
 And quote quotation on quotation.

At Will's you hear a poem read,
 Where Battas from the table head,
 Reclining on his elbow-chair,
 Gives judgment with decisive air ;
 To whom the tribe of circling wits
 As to an oracle submits.
 He gives directions to the town,
 To cry it up, or run it down ;
 Like courtiers, when they send a note,
 Instructing members how to vote.

* A famous treatise of Longinus.—Dubl. ed.

† By Mr Welsted.—Ibid.

He sets the stamp of bad and good,
 Though not a word be understood.
 Your lesson learn'd, you'll be secure
 To get the name of connoisseur :
 And, when your merits once are known,
 Procure disciples of your own.
 For poets (you can never want them)
 Spread through Augusta Trinobantum,*
 Computing by their pecks of coals,
 Amount to just nine thousand souls :
 These o'er their proper districts govern,
 Of wit and humour judges sovereign.
 In every street a city bard
 Rules, like an alderman, his ward ;
 His undisputed rights extend
 Through all the lane, from end to end ;
 The neighbours round admire his shrewdness
 For songs of loyalty and lewdness ;
 Outdone by none in rhyming well,
 Although he never learn'd to spell.
 Two bordering wits contend for glory ;
 And one is whig, and one is tory :
 And this, for epics claims the bays,
 And that, for elegiac lays :
 Some fam'd for numbers soft and smooth,
 By lovers spoke in Punch's booth ;
 And some as justly fame extols
 For lofty lines in Smithfield drolls.
 Bavius in Wapping gains renown,
 And Mævius reigns o'er Kentish town :
 Tigellius plac'd in Phœbus' car
 From Ludgate shines to Temple-bar :

* The ancient name of London.—Dubl. ed.

Harmonious Cibber entertains
 The court with annual birth-day strains;
 Whence Gay was banish'd in disgrace;
 Where Pope will never show his face;
 Where Young must torture his invention
 To flatter knaves or lose his pension.

But these are not a thousandth part
 Of jobbers in the poet's art,
 Attending each his proper station,
 And all in due subordination,
 Through every alley to be found,
 In garrets high, or under ground;
 And when they join their pericranies,
 Out skips a book of miscellanies.
 Hobbes clearly proves, that every creature
 Lives in a state of war by nature.
 The greater for the smaller watch,
 But meddle seldom with their match.
 A whale of moderate size will draw
 A shoal of herrings down his maw;
 A fox with geese his belly crams;
 A wolf destroys a thousand lambs;
 But search among the rhyming race,
 The brave are worried by the base.
 If on Parnassus' top you sit,
 You rarely bite, are always bit:
 Each poet of inferior size
 On you shall rail and criticize,
 And strive to tear you limb from limb;
 While others do as much for him.

The vermin only teaze and pinch
 Their foes superior by an inch.
 So, naturalists observe, a flea
 Has smaller fleas that on him prey;
 And these have smaller still to bite 'em,
 And so proceed ad infinitum.

Thus every poet, in his kind,
 Is bit by him that comes behind :
 Who, though too little to be seen,
 Can tease, and gall, and give the spleen ;
 Call dunces, fools, and sons of whores,
 Lay Grub Street at each other's doors ;
 Extol the Greek and Roman masters,
 And curse our modern poetasters ;
 Complain, as many an ancient bard did,
 How genius is no more rewarded ;
 How wrong a taste prevails among us ;
 How much our ancestors outsung us ;
 Can personate an awkward scorn
 For those who are not poets born ;
 And all their brother dunces lash,
 Who crowd the press with hourly trash.

O Grub Street ! how do I bemoan thee,
 Whose graceless children scorn to own thee !
 Their filial piety forgot,
 Deny their country, like a Scot ;
 Though, by their idiom and grimace,
 They soon betray their native place :
 Yet thou hast greater cause to be
 Asham'd of them, than they of thee,
 Degenerate from their ancient brood
 Since first the court allow'd them food.

Remains a difficulty still,
 To purchase fame by writing ill.
 From Flecknoe down to Howard's * time,
 How few have reach'd the low sublime !

* Hon. Edward Howard, author of four indifferent plays, and of two books of poetry, one called "The British Princess," the other "Poems and Essays," with a paraphrase on Cicero's "Lælitus."—N.

For when our high-born Howard died,
 Blackmore alone his place supplied :
 And, lest a chasm should intervene,
 When death had finish'd Blackmore's reign,
 The leaden crown devolv'd to thee,
 Great poet * of the hollow tree.
 But ah! how unsecure thy throne !
 A thousand bards thy right disown ;
 They plot to turn, in factious zeal,
 Duncenia to a common weal ;
 And with rebellious arms pretend
 An equal privilege to descend.

In bulk there are not more degrees
 From elephants to mites in cheese,
 Than what a curious eye may trace
 In creatures of the rhyming race.
 From bad to worse, and worse they fall ;
 But who can reach the worst of all ?
 For though, in nature, depth, and height
 Are equally held infinite :
 In poetry, the height we know ;
 'Tis only infinite below.
 For instance : when you rashly think,
 No rhymer can like Welsted † sink,

* Lord Grimston was the author of this celebrated performance, of which he was afterwards so much ashamed, as to buy up all the copies. The malignity of the Duchess of Marlborough disconcerted his purpose, by reprinting it. Some specimens of "Love in a Hollow Tree," (quite enough to satisfy any reader's curiosity) may be found in the notes on Dr King's poem called "The Art of Cookery."

† Mr Welsted's poems were reprinted in 1787, and contain specimens of the most stupifying mediocrity.

His merits balanc'd, you shall find
 The Laureate * leaves him far behind.
 Concannen, more aspiring bard,
 Soars downward deeper by a yard.
 Smart Jemmy Moore † with vigour drops;
 The rest pursue as thick as hops:
 With heads to point the gulf they enter,
 Link'd perpendicular to the centre;
 And as their heels elated rise,
 Their heads attempt the nether skies.

O, what indignity and shame,
 To prostitute the Muses' name!
 By flattering kings, whom Heaven design'd
 The plagues and scourges of mankind;
 Bred up in ignorance and sloth,
 And every vice that nurses both.

Fair Britain, in thy monarch blest,
 Whose virtues bear the strictest test;
 Whom never faction could bespatter,
 Nor minister nor poet flatter;
 What justice in rewarding merit!
 What magnanimity of spirit;
 What lineaments divine we trace
 Through all his figure, mien, and face!

* In some editions, instead of the Laureate, was maliciously inserted the name of Mr Fielding; for whose ingenious writings the supposed author manifested a great esteem.—Dubl. edit.—“Little,” says Dr Warton, “did Swift imagine, that Fielding would hereafter equal him in works of humour, and excel him in drawing and supporting characters, and in the artful conduct and plan of a comic epopée.”

† James Moore Smith, Esq. author of “The Rival Modes,” an unsuccessful comedy, was chiefly remarkable for a consummate assurance as a plagiarist, See his character at large, in the Dunciad, II. 50.

Though peace with olive bind his hands,
 Confess'd the conquering hero stands.
 Hydaspes, * Indus, and the Ganges,
 Dread from his hand impending changes.
 From him the Tartar and Chinese,
 Short by the knees, † entreat for peace.
 The consort of his throne and bed,
 A perfect goddess born and bred,
 Appointed sovereign judge to sit
 On learning, eloquence, and wit.
 Our eldest hope, divine Iulus,
 (Late, very late, O may he rule us!)
 What early manhood has he shown,
 Before his downy beard was grown!
 Then think, what wonders will be done
 By going on as he begun,
 An heir for Britain to secure
 As long as sun and moon endure.

The remnant of the royal blood
 Comes pouring on me like a flood.
 Bright goddesses, in number five;
 Duke William, sweetest prince alive.
 Now sing the minister of state,
 Who shines alone without a mate.
 Observe with what majestic port
 This Atlas stands to prop the court:
 Intent the public debts to pay,
 Like prudent Fabius, ‡ by delay.

‡ Unus homo nobis cunctando restituit rem.

Thou great vicegerent of the king,
 Thy praises every Muse shall sing !
 In all affairs thou sole director,
 Of wit and learning chief protector ;
 Though small the time thou hast to spare,
 The church is thy peculiar care.
 Of pious prelates what a stock
 You choose to rule the sable flock !
 You raise the honour of the peerage,
 Proud to attend you at the steerage.
 You dignify the noble race,
 Content yourself with humbler place.
 Now learning, valour, virtue, sense,
 To titles give the sole pretence.
 St George beheld thee with delight,
 Vouchsafè to be an azure knight,
 When on thy breast and sides Herculean,
 He fix'd the star and string cerulean.

Say, poet, in what other nation
 Shone ever such a constellation !
 Attend, ye Popes, and Youngs, and Gays,
 And tune your harps, and strew your bays :
 Your panegyrics here provide ;
 You cannot err on flattery's side.
 Above the stars exalt your style,
 You still are low ten thousand mile.
 On Lewis all his bards bestow'd
 Of incense many a thousand load ;
 But Europe mortified his pride,
 And swore the fawning rascals lied.
 Yet what the world refus'd to Lewis,
 Apply'd to George, exactly true is.
 Exactly true ! invidious poet !
 'Tis fifty thousand times below it.

Translate me now some lines, if you can,
 From Virgil, Martial, Ovid, Lucan.

They could all power in Heaven divide,
And do no wrong on either side ;
They teach you how to split a hair,
Give George and Jove an equal share. *
Yet why should we be lac'd so strait ?
I'll give my monarch butter-weight.
And reason good ; for many a year
Jove never intermeddled here :
Nor, though his priests be duly paid,
Did ever we desire his aid ;
We now can better do without him,
Since Woolston gave us arms to rout him.

Cætera desiderantur.

ON THE DEATH OF DR SWIFT.*

WRITTEN IN NOVEMBER,

1731. †

Occasioned by reading the following MAXIM in ROCHEFOUCAULT, " Dans l'adversité de nos meil-leurs amis, nous trouvons toujours quelque chose, qui ne nous déplaît pas."

" In the adversity of our best friends, we always find something that does not displease us."

As Rochefoucault his maxims drew
From nature, I believe them true :
They argue no corrupted mind
In him ; the fault is in mankind.

* The Verses on his own Death, and the Rhapsody on Poetry, are the best of Swift's poetical productions, though they cannot be called true poetry.—Dr WARTON.

† These verses have undergone, perhaps, a stranger revolution than any other part of the Dean's writings. A manifestly spurious copy, containing 201 lines, under the title of " The Life and Character of Dr SWIFT," appeared at London, in April 1733 ; of which the Dean complained heavily, in a letter to Mr Pope, dated May 1st ; and, notwithstanding Swift acknowledged in that letter he had written " a poem of near 500 lines upon the same maxim of Rochefoucault, and was a long time about it," many readers have supposed (not attending to the circumstance of there being two poems on the subject) that the Dean disclaimed the Verses on his own Death. The genuine verses having

This maxim more than all the rest
 Is thought too base for human breast :
 " In all distresses of our friends,
 We first consult our private ends ;
 While Nature, kindly bent to ease us,
 Points out some circumstance to please us."

If this perhaps your patience move,
 Let reason and experience prove.
 We all behold with envious eyes
 Our equals rais'd above our size.
 Who would not at a crowded show
 Stand high himself, keep others low ?
 I love my friend as well as you :
 But why should he obstruct my view !
 Then let me have the higher post :
 Suppose it but an inch at most.
 If in a battle you should find
 One whom you love of all mankind,
 Had some heroic action done,
 A champion kill'd, or trophy won ;
 Rather than thus be overtopp'd,
 Would you not wish his laurels cropp'd ?
 Dear honest Ned is in the gout,
 Lies rack'd with pain, and you without :
 How patiently you hear him groan !
 How glad, the case is not your own !

been committed to the care of the celebrated author of " The Toast," an edition was printed, in 1738-9, in which more than 100 lines were omitted. Dr King assigned many judicious reasons (though some of them were merely temporary and prudential) for the mutilations : but they were so far from satisfying Dr Swift, that a complete edition was immediately printed by Faulkner, with the Dean's express permission. The poem, as it now stands in this collection, is agreeable to Mr Faulkner's copy.—NICOL.

What poet would not grieve to see
His brother write as well as he ?
But rather than they should excel,
Would wish his rivals all in Hell ?

Her end when Emulation misses,
She turns to Envy, stings and hisses :
The strongest friendship yields to pride,
Unless the odds be on our side.
Vain human kind ! fantastic race !
Thy various follies who can trace ?
Self-love, ambition, envy, pride,
Their empire in our hearts divide.
Give others riches, power, and station,
'Tis all on me a usurpation.

I have no title to aspire ;
Yet, when you sink, I seem the higher.
In Pope I cannot read a line,
But with a sigh I wish it mine ;
When he can in one couplet fix
More sense than I can do in six ;
It gives me such a jealous fit,
I cry, " Pox take him and his wit !"
I grieve to be outdone by Gay,
In my own humorous biting way.
Arbuthnot is no more my friend,
Who dares to irony pretend,
Which I was born to introduce,
Refin'd it first, and shew'd its use.
St John, as well as Pultney, knows
That I had some repute for prose ;
And, till they drove me out of date,
Could maul a minister of state.
If they have mortified my pride,
And made me throw my pen aside ;
If with such talents Heaven has bless'd 'em,
Have I not reason to detest 'em ?

To all my foes, dear Fortune, send
 Thy gifts; but never to my friend:
 I tamely can endure the first;
 But this with envy makes me burst.

Thus much may serve by way of proem;
 Proceed we therefore to our poem.

The time is not remote, when I
 Must by the course of nature die;
 When, I foresee, my special friends
 Will try to find their private ends:
 And, though 'tis hardly understood
 Which way my death can do them good,
 Yet thus, methinks, I hear them speak:

“ See, how the Dean begins to break!

Poor gentleman, he droops apace!

You plainly find it in his face.

That old vertigo in his head

Will never leave him till he's dead.

Besides, his memory decays:

He recollects not what he says;

He cannot call his friends to mind:

Forgets the place where last he din'd;

Plies you with stories o'er and o'er;

He told them fifty times before.

How does he fancy we can sit

To hear his out-of-fashion wit?

But he takes up with younger folks,

Who for his wine will bear his jokes.

Faith! he must make his stories shorter,

Or change his comrades once a quarter:

In half the time he talks them round,

There must another set be found.

“ For poetry he's past his prime:

He takes an hour to find a rhyme;

His fire is out, his wit decay'd,

His fancy sunk, his Muse a jade.

I'd have him throw away his pen ;—
But there's no talking to some men !”

And then their tenderness appears,
By adding largely to my years ;
“ He's older than he would be reckon'd,
And well remembers Charles the Second.
He hardly drinks a pint of wine ;
And that, I doubt, is no good sign.
His stomach too begins to fail :
Last year we thought him strong and hale ;
But now he's quite another thing :
I wish he may hold out till spring !”
They hug themselves, and reason thus :
“ It is not yet so bad with us !”

In such a case, they talk in tropes,
And by their fears express their hopes.
Some great misfortune to portend,
No enemy can match a friend.
With all the kindness they profess,
The merit of a lucky guess
(When daily howd'ye's come of course,
And servants answer, “ Worse and worse !”)
Would please them better, than to tell,
That, “ God be prais'd, the Dean is well.”
Then he, who prophesied the best,
Approves his foresight to the rest :
“ You know I always fear'd the worst,
And often told you so at first.”
He'd rather choose that I should die,
Than his prediction prove a lie.
Not one foretells I shall recover ;
But all agree to give me over.

Yet, should some neighbour feel a pain
Just in the parts where I complain ;

How *many a message would he send!
 What hearty prayers that I should mend!
 Inquire what regimen I kept;
 What gave me ease, and how I slept?
 And more lament when I was dead,
 Than all the snivellers round my bed.

My good companions, never fear;
 For though you may mistake a year,
 Though your prognostics run too fast,
 They must be verified at last.

Behold the fatal day arrive!

"How is the Dean?"—"He's just alive."

Now the departing prayer is read;

"He hardly breathes."—"The Dean is dead."

Before the passing bell begun,

The news through half the town is run.

"O! may we all for death prepare!

What has he left? and who's his heir?"—

"I know no more than what the news is;

'Tis all bequeath'd to public uses."—

"To public uses! there's a whim!

What had the public done for him?

Mere envy, avarice, and pride:

He gave it all—but first he died.

And had the Dean, in all the nation,

No worthy friend, no poor relation?

So ready to do strangers good,

Forgetting his own flesh and blood!"

Now Grub Street wits are all employ'd;

With elegies the town is cloy'd:

* He would send many a message is right: but the question how, seems to destroy the unity or collective nature of the idea; and therefore it ought to have been expressed, if the measure would have allowed it, without the article, in the plural number, how many messages.—LOWTH.

Some paragraph in every paper
To curse the Dean, or bless the Drapier.*

The doctors, tender of their fame,
Wisely on me lay all the blame.

“ We must confess, his case was nice;
But he would never take advice.

Had he been rul'd, for aught appears,
He might have liv'd these twenty years ;
For, when we open'd him, we found,
That all his vital parts were sound.”

From Dublin soon to London spread,
'Tis told at court, † “ the Dean is dead.”
And Lady Suffolk, ‡ in the spleen,
Runs laughing up to tell the queen.

* The author imagines that the scribblers of the prevailing party, which he always opposed, will libel him after his death ; but that others will remember him with gratitude, who can consider the service he had done to Ireland, under the name of M. B. Drapier, by utterly defeating the destructive project of Wood's halfpence, in five letters to the people in Ireland, at that time read universally, and convincing to every reader.—Dubl. ed.

† The Dean supposed himself to die in Ireland, where he was born.—Ibid.

‡ Mrs Howard, at one time a favourite with the Dean.—F.

Mrs Howard, afterwards Countess of Suffolk, then of the bed-chamber to the queen, professed much friendship for the Dean. The queen, then princess, sent a dozen times to the Dean (then in London), with her commands to attend her ; which at last he did, by advice of all his friends. She often sent for him afterwards, and always treated him very graciously. He taxed her with a present worth ten pounds, which she promised before he should return to Ireland ; but on his taking leave the medals were not ready.—Dubl. ed.

The medals were to be sent to the Dean in four months ;
but * * * *

The queen, so gracious, mild, and good,
 Cries, "is he gone! 'tis time he should.
 He's dead, you say; then let him rot,
 I'm glad the medals* were forgot.
 I promis'd him, I own; but when?
 I only was the princess then:
 But now, as consort of the king,
 You know, 'tis quite another thing."
 Now Chartres, † at Sir Robert's levee,
 Tells with a sneer the tidings heavy:
 "Why, if he died without his shoes,"
 Cries Bob, ‡ "I'm sorry for the news:
 O, were the wretch but living still,
 And in his place my good friend Will! §

† Chartres is a most infamous vile scoundrel, grown from a foot-boy, or worse, to a prodigious fortune, both in England and Scotland. He had a way of insinuating himself into all ministers, under every change, either as pimp, flatterer, or informer. He was tried at seventy for a rape, and came off by sacrificing a great part of his fortune. He is since dead; but this poem still preserves the scene and time it was written in.—Dubl. ed.

‡ Sir Robert Walpole, chief minister of state, treated the Dean in 1726 with great distinction; invited him to dinner at Chelsea, with the Dean's friends chosen on purpose; appointed an hour to talk with him on Ireland, to which kingdom and people the Dean found him no great friend; for he defended Wood's project of halfpence, &c. for which the Dean would see him no more: and upon his next year's return to England, Sir Robert, on an accidental meeting, made him a civil compliment; but the Dean never made him another visit.—Ibid.

§ Mr William Pultney, from being Sir Robert's intimate friend, detesting his administration, opposed his measures, and joined with my Lord Bolingbroke, to represent his conduct, in an excellent paper called the Craftsman, which is still continued.—Ibid.

Or had a mitre on his head,
 Provided Bolingbroke* were dead!"
 Now Curll † his shop from rubbish drains:
 Three genuine tomes of Swift's remains!
 And then, to make them pass the glibber,
 Revis'd by Tibbalds, Moore, and Cibber. ‡
 He'll treat me as he does my betters,
 Publish my will, my life, my letters; §
 Revive the libels born to die;
 Which Pope must bear, as well as I.
 Here shift the scene, to represent
 How those I love my death lament.

* Henry St John, Lord Viscount Bolingbroke, secretary of state to Queen Anne, of blessed memory. He is reckoned the most universal genius in Europe. Walpole, dreading his abilities, treated him most injuriously, working with King George I., who forgot his promises of restoring the said lord, upon the restless importunities of the said Walpole.—Dubl. ed.

† Curll hath been the most infamous bookseller of any age or country. His character, in part, may be found in Mr Pope's Dunciad. He published three volumes, all charged on the Dean, who never writ three pages of them. He hath used many of the Dean's friends in almost as vile a manner.—Ibid.

‡ Three stupid verse writers in London; the last, to the shame of the court, and the highest disgrace to wit and learning, was made laureat. Moore, commonly called Jemmy Moore, son of Arthur Moore, whose father was jailor of Monaghan, in Ireland. See the character of Jemmy Moore, and Tibbalds, Theobald in the Dunciad.—Ibid.

§ Curll is notoriously infamous for publishing the lives, letters, and last wills and testaments of the nobility and ministers of state, as well as of all the rogues who are hanged at Tyburn. He hath been in custody of the House of Lords, for publishing or forging the letters of many peers, which made the Lords enter a resolution in their journal-book, that no life nor writings of any lord should be published, without the consent of the next heir, or license from their House.—Ibid.

Poor Pope will grieve a month, and Gay
A week, and Arbuthnot a day.

St John himself will scarce forbear
To bite his pen, and drop a tear.

The rest will give a shrug, and cry,
“ I’m sorry—but we all must die !”

Indifference, clad in Wisdom’s guise,
All fortitude of mind supplies :
For how can stony bowels melt
In those who never pity felt !
When we are lash’d, they kiss the rod,
Resigning to the will of God.

The fools, my juniors by a year,
Are tortur’d with suspense and fear ;
Who wisely thought my age a screen,
When death approach’d, to stand between :
The screen remov’d, their hearts are trembling ;
They mourn for me without dissembling.

My female friends, whose tender hearts
Have better learn’d to act their parts,
Receive the news in doleful dumps :
“ The Dean is dead : (Pray what is trumps ?)
Then, Lord have mercy on his soul !
(Ladies, I’ll venture for the vole.)
Six deans, they say, must bear the pall :
(I wish I knew what king to call.)
Madam, your husband will attend
The funeral of so good a friend.
No, madam, ’tis a shocking sight :
And he’s engag’d to-morrow night :
My Lady Club will take it ill,
If he should fail her at quadrille.
He lov’d the Dean—(I lead a heart),
But dearest friends, they say, must part.
His time was come : he ran his race ;
We hope he’s in a better place.”

Why do we grieve that friends should die?
 No loss more easy to supply.
 One year is past; a different scene!
 No further mention of the Dean;
 Who now, alas! no more is miss'd,
 Than if he never did exist.
 Where's now this favourite of Apollo!
 Departed:—and his works must follow;
 Must undergo the common fate;
 His kind of wit is out of date.

Some country squire to Lintot goes,
 Inquires for "Swift in Verse and Prose."
 Says Lintot, "I have heard the name;
 He died a year ago."—"The same."
 He searches all the shop in vain.
 "Sir, you may find them in Duck-lane;*"
 I sent them, with a load of books,
 Last Monday to the pastry-cook's.
 To fancy they could live a year!
 I find you're but a stranger here.
 The Dean was famous in his time,
 And had a kind of knack at rhyme.
 His way of writing now is past;
 The town has got a better taste;
 I keep no antiquated stuff,
 But spick and span I have enough.
 Pray, do but give me leave to show 'em;
 Here's Colley Cibber's birth-day poem.
 This ode you never yet have seen,
 By Stephen Duck, upon the queen.
 Then here's a letter finely penn'd
 Against the Craftsman and his friend:

* A place in London, where old books are sold.—Dubl. ed.

It clearly shows that all reflection
 On ministers is disaffection.
 Next, here's Sir Robert's vindication,*
 And Mr Henley's last oration. †
 The hawkers have not got them yet:
 Your honour please to buy a set?
 "Here's Wolston's ‡ tracts, the twelfth edition;
 'Tis read by every politician:
 The country members, when in town,
 To all their boroughs send them down;
 You never met a thing so smart;
 The courtiers have them all by heart:
 Those maids of honour, who can read,
 Are taught to use them for their creed.
 The reverend author's good intention
 Has been rewarded with a pension. §
 He does an honour to his gown,
 By bravely running priestcraft down:
 He shows, as sure as God's in Gloucester,
 That Moses was a grand impostor;
 That all his miracles were cheats,
 Perform'd as jugglers do their feats:

* Walpole hath a set of party scribblers, who do nothing but write in his defence.—Dubl. ed.

† Henley is a clergyman, who, wanting both merit and luck to get preferment, or even to keep his curacy in the established church, formed a new conventicle, which he calleth an Oratory. There, at set times, he delivereth strange speeches, compiled by himself and his associates, who share the profit with him. Every hearer payeth a shilling each day for admittance. He is an absolute dunce, but generally reported crazy.—Ibid.

‡ Wolston was a clergyman, but for want of bread hath, in several treatises, in the most blasphemous manner, attempted to turn our Saviour's miracles into ridicule. He is much caressed by many great courtiers, and by all the infidels, and his books read generally by the court ladies.—Ibid.

§ Wolston is here confounded with Woolaston.—H.

The church had never such a writer :
 A shame he has not got a mitre !”

Suppose me dead ; and then suppose
 A club assembled at the Rose ;
 Where, from discourse of this and that,
 I grow the subject of their chat.
 And while they toss my name about,
 With favour some, and some without,
 One, quite indifferent in the cause,
 My character impartial draws :

“ The Dean, if we believe report,
 Was never ill-received at court.
 As for his works in verse and prose,
 I own myself no judge of those :
 Nor can I tell what critics thought ’em ;
 But this I know, all people bought ’em ;
 As with a moral view design’d
 To cure the vices of mankind :
 His vein, ironically grave,
 Expos’d the fool, and lash’d the knave.
 To steal a hint was never known,
 But what he writ was all his own.

“ He never thought an honour done him,
 Because a duke was proud to own him ;
 Would rather slip aside, and choose
 To talk with wits in dirty shoes ;
 Despis’d the fools with stars and garters,
 So often seen caressing Chartres.
 He never courted men in station,
 Nor persons held in admiration ;
 Of no man’s greatness was afraid,
 Because he sought for no man’s aid.
 Though trusted long in great affairs,
 He gave himself no haughty airs :
 Without regarding private ends,
 Spent all his credit for his friends :

And only chose the wise and good ;
 No flatterers ; no allies in blood ;
 But succour'd virtue in distress,
 And seldom fail'd of good success ;
 As numbers in their hearts must own,
 Who, but for him, had been unknown. *
 " With princes kept a due decorum ;
 But never stood in awe before 'em.
 He follow'd David's lesson just ;
 In princes never put thy trust :
 And would you make him truly sour,
 Provoke him with a slave in power.
 The Irish senate if you nam'd,
 With what impatience he declaim'd !
 Fair LIBERTY was all his cry ;
 For her he stood prepar'd to die ;
 For her he boldly stood alone ;
 For her he oft expos'd his own.
 Two kingdoms, † just as faction led,
 Had set a price upon his head ;
 But not a traitor could be found,
 To sell him for six hundred pound.

* Dr Delany, in the close of his eighth letter, after having enumerated the friends with whom the Dean lived in the greatest intimacy, very handsomely applies this passage to himself.—H.

† In 1713, the queen was prevailed with, by an address from the House of Lords in England, to publish a proclamation, promising three hundred pounds to discover the author of a pamphlet, called, "The Public Spirit of the Whigs;" and in Ireland, in the year 1724, Lord Carteret, at his first coming into the government, was prevailed on to issue a proclamation for promising the like reward of three hundred pounds to any person who would discover the author of a pamphlet, called, "The Drapier's Fourth Letter," &c. written against that destructive project of coining halfpence for Ireland ; but in neither kingdom was the Dean discovered.—H.

“ Had he but spar’d his tongue and pen,
 He might have rose like other men :
 But power was never in his thought,
 And wealth he valu’d not a groat :
 Ingratitude he often found,
 And pitied those who meant the wound :
 But kept the tenor of his mind,
 To merit well of human kind :
 Nor made a sacrifice of those
 Who still were true, to please his foes.
 He labour’d many a fruitless hour,
 To reconcile his friends in power ;
 Saw mischief by a faction brewing,
 While they pursu’d each other’s ruin.
 But finding vain was all his care,
 He left the court in mere despair. *

“ And, oh ! how short are human schemes !
 Here ended all our golden dreams.
 What St John’s skill in state affairs,
 What Ormond’s valour, Oxford’s cares,
 To save their sinking country lent,
 Was all destroy’d by one event.
 Too soon that precious life was ended,
 On which alone our weal depended. †

* Queen Anne’s ministry fell to variance from the first year after its commencement : Harcourt the chancellor, and the secretary Bolingbroke, were discontented with the treasurer Oxford, for his too great mildness to the whigs ; this quarrel grew higher every day until the queen’s death. The Dean, who was the only person that endeavoured to reconcile them, found it impossible ; and thereupon retired into Berkshire, about ten weeks before that event.—H.

† In the height of the quarrel between the ministers, the queen died, Aug. 1, 1714.—H.

When up a dangerous faction starts,*
 With wrath and vengeance in their hearts;
 By solemn league and covenant bound,
 To ruin, slaughter, and confound;
 To turn religion to a fable,
 And make the government a Babel;
 Pervert the laws, disgrace the gown,
 Corrupt the senate, rob the crown;
 To sacrifice Old England's glory,
 And make her infamous in story:
 When such a tempest shook the land,
 How could unguarded Virtue stand!
 With horror, grief, despair, the Dean
 Beheld the dire destructive scene:
 His friends in exile, or the Tower,
 Himself † within the frown of power;
 Pursu'd by base envenom'd pens,
 Far to the land of saints and fens;
 A servile race in folly nurs'd,
 Who truckle most, when treated worst.

“ By innocence and resolution,
 He bore continual persecution;
 While numbers to preferment rose,
 Whose merits were, to be his foes;
 When even his own familiar friends,
 Intent upon their private ends,

* On the queen's demise, the whigs were restored to power, which they exercised with the utmost rage and revenge; impeached and banished the chief leaders of the church party, and stripped all their adherents of what employments they had.—H.

† Upon the queen's death, the Dean returned to Dublin: yet numberless libels were written against him in England; he was insulted in the street, and at night was forced to be attended by his servants armed.—H.

Like renegadoes now he feels,
 Against him lifting up their heels.
 " The Dean did, by his pen, defeat
 An infamous destructive cheat ; *
 Taught fools their interest how to know,
 And gave them arms to ward the blow.
 Envy has own'd it was his doing,
 To save that hapless land from ruin ;
 While they who at the steerage stood,
 And reap'd the profit, sought his blood.
 " To save them from their evil fate,
 In him was held a crime of state.
 A wicked monster on the bench, †
 Whose fury blood could never quench ;

* Wood, a hardware-man from England, had a patent for coining copper halfpence for Ireland, to the sum of 108,000*l.* which, in the consequence, must have left that kingdom without gold or silver.—H.

† Whitshed was then chief justice. He had some years before prosecuted a printer for a pamphlet written by the Dean, to persuade the people of Ireland to wear their own manufactures. Whitshed sent the jury down eleven times, and kept them nine hours, until they were forced to bring in a special verdict. He sat afterward on the trial of the printer of the Drapier's fourth letter ; but the jury, against all he could say or swear, threw out the bill. All the kingdom took the Drapier's part, except the courtiers, or those who expected places. Whitshed died August 26, 1727, (having a few months before exchanged his place in the king's bench, which he had held ten or twelve years, for the same office in the common pleas) : and Archbishop Boulter says, his uneasiness upon some affronts he met with helped to shorten his days. These affronts were certainly the satires of the Dean and his friends.—H.

As vile and profligate a villain,
 As modern Scroggs, or old Tresilian ; *
 Who long all justice has discarded,
 Nor fear'd he God, nor man regarded ;
 Vow'd on the Dean his rage to vent,
 And make him of his zeal repent :
 But Heaven his innocence defends,
 The grateful people stand his friends ;
 Not strains of law, nor judge's frown,
 Nor topics brought to please the crown,
 Nor witness hir'd, nor jury pick'd,
 Prevail to bring him in convict.

“ In exile, † with a steady heart,
 He spent his life's declining part ;
 Where folly, pride, and faction sway,
 Remote from St John, Pope, and Gay.
 His friendships there, to few confin'd, ‡
 Were always of the middling kind ;
 No fools of rank, a mongrel breed,
 Who fain would pass for lords indeed :
 Where titles give no right, or power, §
 And peerage is a wither'd flower ;

* Sir William Scroggs, chief justice of the King's Bench in the reign of King Charles II., and Sir Robert Tresilian, chief justice of England in the time of Richard II., both infamous for encroachments on the liberties and property of the people of England.

† In Ireland, which he had reason to call a place of exile : to which country nothing could have driven him but the queen's death, who had determined to fix him in England, in spite of the Duchess of Somerset, &c.—H.

‡ In Ireland the Dean was not acquainted with one single lord, spiritual or temporal. He only conversed with private gentlemen of the clergy or laity, and but a small number of either.—Dubl. ed.

§ The peers of Ireland lost great part of their jurisdiction by one single act, — — — — —Ibid.

He would have held it a disgrace,
 If such a wretch had known his face.
 On rural squires, that kingdom's bane,
 He vented oft' his wrath in vain :
  squires to market brought ;
 Who sell their souls and  for nought.
 The  go joyful back,
 To  the church their tenants rack,
 Go snacks with *****
 And keep the peace, to pick up fees ;
 In every job to have a share,
 A gaol or turnpike to repair ;
 And turn the tax for public roads,
 Commodious to their own abodes.

" Perhaps I may allow the Dean
 Had too much satire in his vein ;
 And seem'd determin'd not to starve it,
 Because no age could more deserve it.
 Yet malice never was his aim ;
 He lash'd the vice, but spar'd the name :
 No individual could resent,
 Where thousands equally were meant ;
 His satire points at no defect,
 But what all mortals may correct ;
 For he abhorr'd that senseless tribe
 Who call it humour when they gibe :
 He spar'd a hump, or crooked nose,
 Whose owners set not up for beaux.
 True genuine dulness mov'd his pity,
 Unless it offer'd to be witty.
 Those who their ignorance confest,
 He ne'er offended with a jest ;
 But laugh'd to hear an idiot quote
 A verse from Horace learn'd by rote.

" He knew a hundred pleasing stories,
 With all the turns of whigs and tories :

Was cheerful to his dying day ;
And friends would let him have his way.

“ He gave the little wealth he had
To build a house for fools and mad ;
And show'd by one satiric touch,
No nation wanted it so much.
That kingdom he hath left his debtor,
I wish it soon may have a better.”

VERSES SENT TO THE DEAN ON HIS BIRTH-DAY,

WITH PINE'S HORACE, FINELY BOUND.

BY DR J. SICAN. *

(Horace speaking.)

You've read, sir, in poetic strain,
How Varus and the Mantuan swain
Have on my birth-day been invited,
(But I was forc'd in verse to write it)
Upon a plain repast to dine,
And taste my old Campanian wine ;
But I, who all punctilios hate,
Though long familiar with the great,

* This ingenious young gentleman was unfortunately murdered in Italy.

Nor glory in my reputation,
Am come without an invitation ;
And, though I'm us'd to right Falernian,
I'll deign for once to taste Iernian ;
But fearing that you might dispute
(Had I put on my common suit)
My breeding and my politesse,
I visit in my birth-day dress ;
My coat of purest Turkey red,
With gold embroidery richly spread ;
To which I've sure as good pretensions,
As Irish lords who starve on pensions.
What though proud ministers of state
Did at your antichamber wait ;
What though your Oxfords and your St Johns,
Have at your levee paid attendance ;
And Peterborrow and great Ormond,
With many chiefs who now are dormant,
Have laid aside the general's staff,
And public cares, with you to laugh ;
Yet I some friends as good can name,
Nor less the darling sons of fame ;
For sure my Pollio and Mæcenas
Were as good statesmen, Mr Dean, as Either your Bolingbroke or Harley,
Though they made Lewis beg a parley ;
And as for Mordaunt, your lov'd hero,
I'll match him with my Drusus Nero.
You'll boast, perhaps, your favourite Pope ;
But Virgil is as good, I hope.
I own indeed I can't get any
To equal Helsham and Delany ;
Since Athens brought forth Socrates,
A Grecian isle Hippocrates ;
Since Tully liv'd before my time,
And Galen bless'd another clime.

You'll plead, perhaps, at my request,
 To be admitted as a guest,
 "Your hearing's bad!"—But why such fears?
 I speak to eyes, and not to ears;
 And for that reason wisely took
 The form you see me in, a book.
 Attack'd by slow devouring moths,
 By rage of barbarous Huns and Goths;
 By Bentley's notes, my deadliest foes,
 By Creech's rhymes, and Dunster's prose;
 I found my boasted wit and fire
 In their rude hands almost expire:
 Yet still they but in vain assail'd;
 For, had their violence prevail'd,
 And in a blast destroy'd my frame,
 They would have partly miss'd their aim;
 Since all my spirit in thy page
 Defies the Vandals of this age.
 'Tis yours to save these small remains
 From future pedant's muddy brains,
 And fix my long uncertain fate,
 You best know how—"which way?"—TRANS-

INTENDED TO BE PLACED UNDER THE HEAD OF GULLIVER.

1733.

"HERE learn from moral truth and wit refin'd,
 How vice and folly have debas'd mankind;

Strong sense and humour arm in virtue's cause ;
 Thus her great votary vindicates her laws :
 While bold and free the glowing colours strike ;
 Blame not the picture, if the picture's like."

ON PSYCHE. *

At two afternoon for our Psyche inquire,
 Her tea-kettle's on, and her smock at the fire :
 So loitering, so active ; so busy, so idle ;
 Which has she most need of, a spur or a bridle ?
 Thus a greyhound outruns the whole pack in a race,
 Yet would rather be hang'd than he'd leave a warm
 place.

She gives you such plenty, it puts you in pain ;
 But ever with prudence takes care of the main.
 To please you, she knows how to choose a nice bit ;
 For her taste is almost as refin'd as her wit.
 To oblige a good friend, she will trace every market,
 It would do your heart good, to see how she will cark it.

Yet beware of her arts ; for, it plainly appears,
 She saves half her victuals, by feeding your ears.

THE DEAN AND DUKE.

1734.

JAMES BRYDGES * and the Dean had long been friends ;

James is beduk'd ; of course their friendship ends :

But sure the Dean deserves a sharp rebuke,

For knowing James, to boast he knows the duke.

Yet, since just Heaven the duke's ambition mocks,

Since all he got by fraud is lost by stocks,

His wings are clipp'd : he tries no more in vain

With bands of fiddlers to extend his train.

Since he no more can build, and plant, and revel,

The duke and dean seem near upon a level.

O ! wert thou not a duke, my good Duke Humphry,

From bailiff's claws thou scarce could'st keep thy bum free.

A duke to know a dean ! go, smooth thy crown :

Thy brother † (far thy better) wore a gown.

Well, but a duke thou art ; so pleas'd the king :

O ! would his majesty but add a string !

* James Brydges was created Duke of Chandos, April 30, 1719.—N.

WRITTEN BY DR SWIFT,

ON HIS OWN DEAFNESS, IN SEPTEMBER 1734.

VERTIGINOSUS, inops, surdus, male gratus amicis ;
Non campana sonans, tonitru non ab Jove missum,
Quod mage mirandum, saltem si credere fas est,
Non clamosa meas mulier jam percutit aures.

THE DEAN'S COMPLAINT, TRANSLATED AND ANSWERED.

DOCTOR.

DEAF, giddy, helpless, left alone.

ANSWER.

Except the first, the fault's your own.

DOCTOR.

To all my friends a burden grown.

ANSWER.

Because to few you will be shown.
Give them good wine, and meat to stuff.
You may have company enough.

DOCTOR.

No more I hear my church's bell,
Than if it rang out for my knell.

ANSWER.

Then write and read, 'twill do as well.

DOCTOR.

At thunder now no more I start,
Than at the rumbling of a cart.

ANSWER.

Think then of thunder when you f—t.

DOCTOR.

Nay, what's incredible, alack !
No more I hear a woman's clack.

ANSWER.

A woman's clack, if I have skill,
Sounds somewhat like a throwster's mill ;
But louder than a bell, or thunder ;
That does, I own, increase my wonder.

EPIGRAM BY MR BOWYER.

‘ IN SYLLABAM LONGAM IN VOCE VERTIGINOSUS
A. D. SWIFT CORREPTAM.’

MUSARUM antistes, Phœbi numerosus alumnus,
Vix omnes numeros Vertiginosus habet.
Intentat charo capiti vertigo ruinam :
Oh ! servet cerebro nata Minerva caput.
Vertigo nimium longa est, divina poeta ;
Dent tibi Pierides, donet Apollo, brevem.

THE DEAN'S MANNER OF LIVING *.

ON rainy days alone I dine
Upon a chick and pint of wine.

* It is singular to observe how nearly the Dean's account of his housekeeping agrees with the following lines in a satire against him.

Or is he settling schemes of life?
Money, besure ; besure, no wife.
I' th' morning fixing water-gruel,
Tea is damn'd dear, and will not do well.
At noon, no dishes ; no ! a chop,
Stole in by John, from neighbouring shop,
Where diet, ready-dressed, is sold.
A grisken hot, or sliver cold ;
And for the night, a crust of bread,
A pint of wine, and so to bed.

On rainy days I dine alone,
And pick my chicken to the bone :
But this my servants much enrages,
No scraps remain to save board-wages.
In weather fine I nothing spend,
But often sponge upon a friend :
Yet, where he's not so rich as I,
I pay my club, and so good b'ye.

Unless, when winds have blown full east,
And packets bring a rebel guest,
Full fraught with news ; then every door
Being shut, to chat their treason o'er,
And o'er again ; full bowls go round,
With sprightly mirth and faction crown'd ;
And John is bid to cut, and cut on,
Till a whole yard of neck of mutton
He into chops dissects, to cloy
Th' admiring family with joy.

But if no newsmonger appears,
Or if h' advise from adverse stars,
Thinly at home the Dean is fed,
Or visits for his daily bread ;
And John and Nell, with whey-like beer,
Brown loaf and cheese (most hearty fare),
Having indulg'd, may take their ease,
Love, snore, or sing, or what they please.

GULLIVERIANA, Lond. 1728, p. 42.

VERSES MADE FOR FRUIT-WOMEN, &c.

APPLES.

COME buy my fine wares,
Plumbs, apples, and pears.
A hundred a penny,
In conscience too many :
Come, will you have any ?
My children are seven,
I wish them in Heaven ;
My husband a sot,
With his pipe and his pot,
Not a farthing will gain them,
And I must maintain them.

ASPARAGUS.

Ripe 'sparagras
Fit for lad or lass,
To make their water pass :
O, 'tis pretty picking
With a tender chicken !

ONIONS.

Come, follow me by the smell,
Here are delicate onions to sell,
I promise to use you well.
They make the blood warmer,
You'll feed like a farmer ;

For this is every cook's opinion,
No savoury dish without an onion ;
But, lest your kissing should be spoil'd,
Your onions must be thoroughly boil'd :
Or else you may spare
Your mistress a share,
The secret will never be known :
She cannot discover
The breath of her lover,
But think it as sweet as her own.

OYSTERS.

CHARMING oysters I cry :
My masters come buy,
So plump and so fresh,
So sweet is their flesh,
No Colchester oyster
Is sweeter and moister :
Your stomach they settle,
And rouse up your mettle :
They'll make you a dad
Of a lass or a lad ;
And madam your wife
They'll please to the life ;
Be she barren, be she old,
Be she slut, or be she scold,
Eat my oysters, and lie near her,
She'll be fruitful, never fear her.

HERRINGS.

BE not sparing,
Leave off swearing.
Buy my herring
Fresh from Malahide, *
Better never was try'd.

Come, eat them with pure fresh butter and mustard,
Their bellies are soft, and as white as a custard.
Come, sixpence a dozen, to get me some bread,
Or, like my own herrings, I soon shall be dead.

ORANGES.

COME buy my fine oranges, sauce for your veal,
And charming, when squeez'd in a pot of brown ale ;
Well roasted, with sugar and wine in a cup,
They'll make a sweet bishop when gentlefolks sup.

* Malahide, a village five miles from Dublin, famous for oysters.—F.

ON ROVER. A LADY'S SPANIEL.

INSTRUCTIONS TO A PAINTER. *

HAPPIEST of the spaniel race,
 Painter, with thy colours grace :
 Draw his forehead large and high,
 Draw his blue and humid eye ;
 Draw his neck so smooth and round,
 Little neck with ribands bound !
 And the muscly swelling breast,
 Where the Loves and Graces rest ;
 And the spreading even back,
 Soft, and sleek, and glossy black ;
 And the tail that gently twines,
 Like the tendrils of the vines ;
 And the silky twisted hair,
 Shadowing thick the velvet ear ;
 Velvet ears, which, hanging low,
 O'er the veiny temples flow.

With a proper light and shade,
 Let the winding hoop be laid ;
 And within that arching bower
 (Secret circle, mystic power)
 In a downy slumber place
 Happiest of the spaniel race ;
 While the soft respiring dame,
 Glowing with the softest flame,

* In ridicule of Phillips's poem on Miss Carteret ; and written, it has been said, " to affront the lady of Archbishop Boulter."—ANDERSON.

On the ravish'd favourite pours
Balmy dews, ambrosial showers !
With thy utmost skill express
Nature in her richest dress,
Limpid rivers smoothly flowing,
Orchards by those rivers blowing ;
Curling woodbine, myrtle shade,
And the gay enamell'd mead ;
Where the linnets sit and sing,
Little sportlings of the spring ;
Where the breathing field and grove
Sooth the heart, and kindle love.
Here for me, and for the Muse,
Colours of resemblance choose,
Make of lineaments divine,
Daply female spaniels shine,
Pretty fondlings of the fair,
Gentle damsels' gentle care ;
But to one alone impart
All the flattery of thy art.
Crowd each feature, crowd each grace,
Which complete the desperate face ;
Let the spotted wanton dame
Feel a new resistless flame !
Let the happiest of his race
Win the fair to his embrace.
But in shade the rest conceal,
Nor to sight their joys reveal,
Lest the pencil and the Muse
Loose desires and thoughts infuse.

EPIGRAMS ON WINDOWS.

SEVERAL OF THEM WRITTEN IN 1726.

I. ON A WINDOW AT AN INN.

WE fly from luxury and wealth,
To hardships, in pursuit of health;
From generous wines, and costly fare,
And dozing in an easy chair;
Pursue the goddess Health in vain,
To find her in a country scene,
And everywhere her footsteps trace,
And see her marks in every face;
And still her favourites we meet,
Crowding the roads with naked feet.
But, oh! so faintly we pursue,
We ne'er can have her full in view.

II. AT AN INN IN ENGLAND.

THE glass, by lovers' nonsense blurr'd
Dims and obscures our sight;
So, when our passions Love has stirr'd
It darkens Reason's light.

III. ON A WINDOW AT THE FOUR CROSSES IN THE WATLING-STREET ROAD, WARWICKSHIRE.

Fool, to put up four Crosses at your door,
Put up your Wife, she's crosser than all four.

IV. ANOTHER, AT CHESTER.

THE church and clergy here, no doubt,
Are very near akin ;
Both weather-beaten are without,
And empty both within.

V. ANOTHER, AT CHESTER.

My landlord is civil,
But dear as the d—l :
Your pockets grow empty
With nothing to tempt ye :
The wine is so sour,
'Twill give you a scour :
The beer and the ale
Are mingled with stale.
The veal is such carrion,
A dog would be weary on.
All this I have felt,
For I live on a smelt.

VI. ANOTHER, AT CHESTER.

THE walls of this town
Are full of renown,
And strangers delight to walk round 'em :
But as for the dwellers,
Both buyers and sellers,
For me, you may hang 'em, or drown 'em.

VII. ANOTHER, AT HOLYHEAD. *

O NEPTUNE ! Neptune ! must I still
Be here detain'd against my will ?
Is this your justice, when I'm come
Above two hundred miles from home ;
O'er mountains steep, o'er dusty plains,
Half chok'd with dust, half drown'd with rains,
Only your Godship to implore,
To let me kiss your other shore ?
A boon so small ! but I may weep,
While you're like Baal, fast asleep.

* These verses are signed J—— K—— ; but written, as it is presumed, in Dr Swift's hand.—D. S.

VIII. ANOTHER, WRITTEN UPON A WINDOW WHERE THERE WAS NO WRITING BEFORE.

THANKS to my stars, I once can see
A window here from scribbling free !
Here no conceited coxcombs pass,
To scratch their paltry drabs on glass ;
Nor party fool is calling names,
Or dealing crowns to George and James.

IX. ON SEEING VERSES WRITTEN UPON WINDOWS
AT INNS.

THE sage, who said he should be proud
Of windows in his breast,
Because he ne'er a thought allow'd
That might not be confest ;
His window scawl'd by every rake,
His breast again would cover,
And fairly bid the Devil take
The diamond and the lover.

X. ANOTHER.

By Satan taught, all conjurors know
Your mistress in a glass to show,
And you can do as much :
In this the Devil and you agree :
None e'er made verses worse than he,
And thine, I swear, are such.

XI. ANOTHER.

THAT love is the Devil, I'll prove when requir'd;
 Those rhymers abundantly show it:
 They swear that they all by love are inspir'd,
 And the Devil's a damnable poet. *

* To these Verses, inscribed on the Windows of Inns, may be added the following inscription, copied from the Spiritual Quixote of the Rev. Mr Greaves, and said to have been found by his hero, at the George in the Tree, a public house near Meriden, on the Chester road.

“ As he was examining the parlour windows in this little hotel (which, affording entertainment for horse as well as men, might be called an inn), he observed the following remarkable inscription :

J. S. D. S. P. D. Hospes Ignotus,
 Patriæ (ut nunc est) plusquam vellet
 notus, tempestate pulsus
 hic pernoctavit
 A. D. M, DCC, XXVI.

“ Jonathan Swift, Dean of St Patrick's in Dublin, here a stranger unknown, but in his own country (such as it now is) better known than he would wish to be, being driven by a storm, lodged here all night, in the year of our Lord 1726.

“ Mr Wildgoose having at present little curiosity of that kind, did not take out the pane, as he probably might have done for three-halfpence, and as was done soon after by some more curious traveller.”—Spiritual Quixote, Lond. 1774. Vol. III. p. 218.

TO JANUS, ON NEW-YEARS DAY, 1726.*

Two-fac'd Janus, god of Time !
 Be my Phœbus while I rhyme ;
 To oblige your crony Swift,
 Bring our dame a new-year's gift ;
 She has got but half a face ;
 Janus, since thou hast a brace,
 To my lady once be kind ;
 Give her half thy face behind.

God of Time, if you be wise,
 Look not with your future eyes ;
 What imports thy forward sight ?
 Well, if you could lose it quite.
 Can you take delight in viewing
 This poor Isle's † approaching ruin,
 When thy retrospection vast
 Sees the glorious ages past.
 Happy nation, were we blind,
 Or had only eyes behind !

Drown your morals, madam cries,
 I'll have none but forward eyes ;
 Prudes decay'd about may tack,
 Strain their necks with looking back.
 Give me time when coming on ;
 Who regards him when he's gone ?
 By the Dean though gravely told,
 New-years help to make me old ;
 Yet I find a new-year's lace
 Burnishes an old-year's face.
 Give me velvet and quadrille,
 I'll have youth and beauty still.

A MOTTO FOR MR JASON HASARD,

WOOLLEN-DRAPER IN DUBLIN,

WHOSE SIGN WAS THE GOLDEN FLEECE.

JASON, the valiant prince of Greece,
From Colchis brought the Golden Fleece :
We comb the wool, refine the stuff,
For modern Jasons, that's enough.
Oh ! could we tame yon watchful dragon,*
Old Jason would have less to brag on.

THE DOG AND SHADOW.

ORE cibum portans catulus dum spectat in undis,
Apparet liquido præde melioris imago :
Dum speciosa diu damna admiratur, et altè
Ad latices inhiat, cadit imo vortice præceps
Ore cibus, nec non simulacrum corripit una.
Occupat ille avidus deceptis faucibus umbram ;
Illudit species, ac dentibus aëra mordet.

* England....H.

TO A FRIEND

WHO HAD BEEN MUCH ABUSED IN MANY DIFFERENT
LIBELS.

THE greatest monarch may be stabb'd by night,
And fortune help the murderer in his flight ;
The vilest ruffian may commit a rape,
Yet safe from injur'd innocence escape ;
And calumny, by working under ground,
Can, unreveng'd, the greatest merit wound.

What's to be done ? Shall wit and learning choose
To live obscure, and have no fame to lose ?
By Censure frighted out of Honour's road,
Nor dare to use the gifts by Heaven bestow'd ?
Or fearless enter in through Virtue's gate,
And buy distinction at the dearest rate.

CATULLUS DE LESBIA.*

LESBIA for ever on me rails,
To talk of me she never fails.

* *Lesbia mī dicit semper male ; nec tacet unquam
De me. Lesbia me, dispeream, nisi amat.
Quo signo ? quia sunt totidem mea : deprecor illam
Assiduè ; verum, dispeream, nisi amo.*

Now, hang me but for all her art,
I find, that I have gain'd her heart.
My proof is this : I plainly see,
The case is just the same with me ;
I curse her every hour sincerely,
Yet hang me but I love her dearly.

ON A

CURATE'S COMPLAINT OF HARD DUTY.

I MARCH'D three miles through scorching sand,
With zeal in heart, and notes in hand :
I rode four more to Great St Mary,
Using four legs, when two were weary :
To three fair virgins I did tie men,
In the close bands of pleasing Hymen :
I dipp'd two babes in holy water,
And purify'd their mother after.
Within an hour and eke a half,
I preach'd three congregations deaf ;
Where thundering out, with lungs long-winded,
I chopp'd so fast, that few there minded.
My emblem, the laborious sun,
Saw all these mighty labours done
Before one race of his was run.
All this perform'd by Robert Hewit :
What mortal else could e'er go through it !

TO BETTY,

THE GRISETTE.

QUEEN of wit and beauty, Betty,
Never may the muse forget ye,
How thy face charms every shepherd,
Spotted over like a leopard !
And thy freckled neck, display'd,
Envy breeds in every maid ;
Like a flyblown cake of tallow,
Or on parchment ink turn'd yellow ;
Or a tawny speckled pippin,
Shrivell'd with a winter's keeping.
And, thy beauty thus dispatch'd,
Let me praise thy wit unmatch'd.
Sets of phrases, cut and dry,
Ever more thy tongue supply,
And thy memory is loaded
With old scraps from plays exploded :
Stock'd with repartees and jokes,
Suited to all Christian folks :
Shreds of wit, and senseless rhymes,
Blundered out a thousand times ;
Nor wilt thou of gifts be sparing,
Which can ne'er be worse for wearing.
Picking wit among collegians,
In the playhouse upper regions ;
Where, in the eighteen-penny gallery,
Irish nymphs learn Irish raillery.
But thy merit is thy failing,
And thy raillery is railing.

Thus with talents well endued
 To be scurrilous and rude ;
 When you pertly raise your snout,
 Flee and gibe, and laugh and flout ;
 This among Hibernian asses
 For sheer wit and humour passes.
 Thus indulgent Chloe, bit,
 Swears you have a world of wit.

 EPIGRAM.

FROM THE FRENCH. *

Who can believe with common sense,
 A bacon slice gives God offence ;
 Or, how a herring has a charm
 Almighty vengeance to disarm ?
 Wrapp'd up in Majesty divine,
 Does he regard on what we dine ?

* A French gentleman dining with some company on a fast-day, called for some bacon and eggs. The rest were very angry, and reproved him for so heinous a sin : whereupon he wrote the following lines ; which are translated above :

Peut on croire avec bon sens
 Qu'un lardon le mit en colère,
 Ou, que manger un hareng,
 C'est un secret pour lui plaire ?
 En sa gloire envelopé,
 Songe-t-il bien de nos soupés ?—H.

EPIGRAM.

As Thomas was cudgelled one day by his wife,
He took to the street, and fled for his life :
Tom's three dearest friends came by in the squabble,
And sav'd him at once from the shrew and the rabble ;
Then ventur'd to give him some sober advice—
But Tom is a person of honour so nice,
Too wise to take counsel, too proud to take warning,
That he sent to all three a challenge next morning.
Three duels he fought, thrice ventur'd his life ;
Went home and was cudgell'd again by his wife.

JOAN CUDGELS NED.

JOAN cudgels Ned, yet Ned's a bully ;
Will cudgels Bess, yet Will's a cully.
Die Ned and Bess ; give Will to Joan,
She dares not say her life's her own.
Die Joan and Will ; give Bess to Ned,
And every day she combs his head.

VERSES

ON TWO CELEBRATED MODERN POETS.

BEHOLD, those monarch oaks, that rise,
 With lofty branches to the skies,
 Have large proportion'd roots that grow
 With equal longitude below :
 Two bards that now in fashion reign,
 Most aptly this device explain :
 If this to clouds and stars will venture,
 That creeps as far to reach the centre ;
 Or, more to shew the thing I mean,
 Have you not o'er a saw-pit seen
 A skill'd mechanic, that has stood
 High on a length of prostrate wood,
 Who hir'd a subterraneous friend
 To take his iron by the end :
 But which excell'd was never found,
 The man above or under ground.
 The moral is so plain to hit,
 That, had I been the god of wit,
 Then, in a saw-pit and wet weather,
 Should Young and Philips drudge together.

UPON CARTHY'S* THREATENING TO TRANSLATE PINDAR.

You have undone Horace,—what should hinder
Thy Muse from falling upon Pindar ?
But ere you mount his fiery steed,
Beware, O Bard, how you proceed :—
For should you give him once the reins,
High up in air he'll turn your brains ;
And if you should his fury check,
'Tis ten to one he breaks your neck.

DR SWIFT

WROTE THE FOLLOWING EPIGRAM ON ONE DELACOURT'S COMPLI-MENTING GARTHY, A SCHOOLMASTER, ON HIS POETRY.

EPIGRAM.

CARTHY, you say, writes well—his genius true,
You pawn your word for him—he'll vouch for you.
So two poor knaves, who find their credit fail,
To cheat the world, become each other's bail.

* Carthy, a scribbling schoolmaster, wrote some severe lines on Dr Swift and his Friends.—F.

EPITAPH,

ON GENERAL GORGES, * AND LADY MEATH. †

UNDER this stone lies Dick and Dolly.
Doll dying first, Dick grew melancholy ;
For Dick without Doll thought living a folly.

Dick lost in Doll a wife tender and dear :
But Dick lost by Doll twelve hundred a-year ;
A loss that Dick thought no mortal could bear.

Dick sigh'd for his Doll, and his mournful arms cross'd ;
Thought much of his Doll, and the jointure he lost ;
The first vex'd him much, the other vex'd most.

Thus loaded with grief, Dick sigh'd and he cried :
To live without both full three days he tried ;
But liked neither loss, and so quietly died.

Dick left a pattern few will copy after :
Then, reader, pray shed some tears of salt water ;
For so sad a tale is no subject of laughter.

* Of Kilbrue, in the county of Meath.—F.

† Dorothy, dowager of Edward, Earl of Meath. She was married to the General in 1716 ; and died April 10, 1728. Her husband survived her but two days.—F.

The Dolly of this Epigram, is the same lady whom Swift treated so severely in his juvenile Dialogue between Sir Harry Pierce's Chariot and Miss Dorothy Stopford's Chair.

Meath smiles for the jointure, though gotten so late ;
 The son laughs, that got the hard-gotten estate ;
 And Cuffe * grins, for getting the Alicant plate.

Here quiet they lie, in hopes to rise one day,
 Both solemnly put in this hole on a Sunday,
 And here rest—sic transit gloria mundi!

VERSES ON I KNOW NOT WHAT.

My latest tribute here I send,
 With this let your collection end.
 Thus I consign you down to fame
 A character to praise or blame :
 And if the whole may pass for true,
 Contented rest, you have your due,
 Give future time the satisfaction,
 To leave one handle for detraction.

DR SWIFT TO HIMSELF,

ON SAINT CECILIA'S DAY.

GRAVE Dean of St Patrick's, how comes it to pass,
 That you, who know music no more than an ass ;

* John Cuffe, of Desart, Esq. married the General's eldest daughter.—F.

That you who so lately were writing of drapiers,
 Should lend your cathedral to players and scrapers?
 To act such an opera once in a year,
 So offensive to every true protestant ear,
 With trumpets, and fiddles, and organs, and singing,
 Will sure the pretender and popery bring in,
 No protestant prelate, his lordship or grace,
 Durst there show his right, or most reverend face:
 How would it pollute their crosiers and rochets,
 To listen to minims, and quavers, and crotchets!
 [The rest is wanting.]

AN ANSWER TO A FRIEND'S QUESTION.

THE furniture that best doth please
 St Patrick's Dean, good Sir, are these:
 The knife and fork with which I eat;
 And next the pot that boils the meat;
 The next to be preferr'd, I think,
 Is the glass in which I drink;
 The shelves on which my books I keep,
 And the bed on which I sleep;
 An antique elbow-chair between,
 Big enough to hold the Dean;
 And the stove that gives delight
 In the cold bleak wintry night:
 To these we add a thing below,
 More for use reserved than show:
 These are what the Dean do please;
 All superfluous are but these.

EPIGRAM.*

BEHOLD ! a proof of Irish sense ;
Here Irish wit is seen !
When nothing's left that's worth defence,
We build a magazine.

* The Dean, in his lunacy, had some intervals of sense ; at which his guardians or physicians took him out for the air. On one of these days, when they came to the Park, Swift remarked a new building, which he had never seen, and asked what it was designed for ? To which Dr Kingsbury answered, " That, Mr Dean, is the magazine for arms and powder for the security of the city." " Oh ! oh !" says the Dean, pulling out his pocket-book, " let me take an item of that. This is worth remarking : ' My tablets,' as Hamlet says, ' my tablets—memory put down that !'" Which produced the above lines, said to be the last he ever wrote.

VERSES

WRITTEN DURING

LORD CARTERET'S ADMINISTRATION

OF IRELAND.

As Lord Carteret's residence in Ireland as Viceroy was a series of cabals against the authority of the prime minister, he failed not, as well from his love of literature as from his hatred to Walpole, to attach to himself as much as possible the distinguished author of the Drapier Letters. By the interest which Swift soon gained with the Lord-Lieutenant, he was enabled to recommend several friends, whose High Church or Tory principles had hitherto obstructed their preferment. The task of forwarding the views of Delany, in particular, led to several of Swift's liveliest poetical effusions, while, on the other hand, he was equally active in galling, by his satire, Smedley, and other Whig beaux esprits, who, during this amphibious administration, sought the favour of a literary Lord-Lieutenant, by literary offerings and poetical adulation. These pieces, with one or two connected with the same subject, are here thrown together, as they seem to reflect light upon each other.

AN

APOLOGY TO LADY CARTERET.

A LADY, wise as well as fair,
 Whose conscience always was her care,
 Thoughtful upon a point of moment,
 Would have the text as well as comment :
 So hearing of a grave divine,
 She sent to bid him come to dine.
 But, you must know he was not quite
 So grave as to be unpolite :
 Thought human learning would not lessen
 The dignity of his profession :
 And if you'd heard the man discourse,
 Or preach, you'd like him scarce the worse.
 He long had bid the court farewell,
 Retreating silent to his cell ;
 Suspected for the love he bore
 To one who sway'd some time before ;
 Which made it more surprising how
 He should be sent for thither now.

The message told, he gapes, and stares,
 And scarce believes his eyes or ears :
 Could not conceive what it should mean,
 And fain would hear it told again.
 But then the squire so trim and nice,
 'Twere rude to make him tell it twice ;
 So bow'd, was thankful for the honour ;
 And would not fail to wait upon her.
 His beaver brush'd, his shoes, and gown,
 Away he trudges into town ;

Passes the lower castle yard,
 And now advancing to the guard,
 He trembles at the thoughts of state ;
 For, conscious of his sheepish gait,
 His spirits of a sudden fail'd him ;
 He stopp'd, and could not tell what ail'd him.

What was the message I receiv'd ?
 Why certainly the captain rav'd ?
 To dine with her ! and come at three !
 Impossible ! it can't be me.

Or may be I mistook the word ;
 My lady—it must be my lord.

My lord's abroad ; my lady too :
 What must the unhappy doctor do ?
 " Is Captain Cracherode * here, pray ? " — " No. "
 " Nay, then 'tis time for me to go. "

Am I awake, or do I dream ?
 I'm sure he call'd me by my name ;
 Nam'd me as plain as he could speak ;
 And yet there must be some mistake.
 Why, what a jest should I have been,
 Had now my lady been within !
 What could I've said ? I'm mighty glad
 She went abroad—she'd thought me mad.
 The hour of dining now is past :
 Well then, I'll e'en go home and fast ;
 And, since I 'scap'd being made a scoff,
 I think I'm very fairly off.

My lady now returning home,
 Calls, " Cracherode, is the Doctor come ? "
 He had not heard of him—" Pray see,
 'Tis now a quarter after three. "

* The gentleman who brought the message.

The Captain walks about, and searches
Through all the rooms, and courts, and arches ;
Examines all the servants round,
In vain—no doctor's to be found.
My lady could not choose but wonder ;
“ Captain, I fear you've made some blunder :
But pray, to-morrow go at ten ;
I'll try his manners once again ;
If rudeness be th' effect of knowledge,
My son shall never see a college.”

The Captain was a man of reading,
And much good sense, as well as breeding ;
Who, loath to blame, or to incense,
Said little in his own defence.
Next day another message brought :
The Doctor, frighten'd at his fault,
Is dress'd, and stealing through the crowd,
Now pale as death, then blush'd and bow'd,
Panting—and faltering—humm'd and ha'd,
“ Her ladyship was gone abroad ;
The Captain too—he did not know
Whether he ought to stay or go ;”
Begg'd she'd forgive him. In conclusion,
My lady, pitying his confusion,
Call'd her good nature to relieve him ;
Told him, she thought she might believe him ;
And would not only grant his suit,
But visit him, and eat some fruit,
Provided, at a proper time
He told the real truth in rhyme ;
'Twas to no purpose to oppose,
She'd hear of no excuse in prose.
The Doctor stood not to debate,
Glad to compound at any rate ;
So, bowing, seemingly complied ;
Though, if he durst, he had denied.

But first, resolv'd to show his taste,
Was too refin'd to give a feast :
He'd treat with nothing that was rare,
But winding walks and purer air ;
Would entertain without expence,
Or pride or vain magnificence :
For well he knew, to such a guest
The plainest meals must be the best.
To stomachs clogg'd with costly fare
Simplicity alone is rare ;
While high, and nice, and curious meats
Are really but vulgar treats.
Instead of spoils of Persian looms,
The costly boast of regal rooms.
Thought it more courtly and discreet
To scatter roses at her feet ;
Roses of richest die, that shone
With native lustre, like her own ;
Beauty that needs no aid of art
Through every sense to reach the heart.
The gracious dame, though well she knew
All this was much beneath her due,
Lik'd every thing—at least thought fit
To praise it par manière d'acquit.
Yet she, though seeming pleas'd, can't bear
The scorching sun, or chilling air ;
Disturb'd alike at both extremes,
Whether he shows or hides his beams :
Though seeming pleas'd at all she sees,
Starts at the ruffling of the trees,
And scarce can speak for want of breath,
In half a walk fatigued to death.
The Doctor takes his hint from hence,
T' apologize his late offence :
“ Madam, the mighty power of use
Now strangely pleads in my excuse :

If you unus'd have scarcely strength
To gain this walk's untoward length ;
If, frighten'd at a scene so rude,
Through long disuse of solitude ;
If, long confin'd to fires and screens,
You dread the waving of these greens ;
If you, who long have breath'd the fumes
Of city fogs and crowded rooms,
Do now solicitously shun
The cooler air and dazzling sun ;
If his majestic eye you flee,
Learn hence t' excuse and pity me.
Consider what it is to bear
The powder'd courtier's witty sneer ;
To see th' important man of dress
Scoffing my college awkwardness ;
To be the strutting cornet's sport,
To run the gauntlet of the court,
Winning my way by slow approaches,
Through crowds of coxcombs and of coaches,
From the first fierce cockaded sentry,
Quite through the tribe of waiting gentry ;
To pass so many crowded stages,
And stand the staring of your pages ;
And after all, to crown my spleen,
Be told—' You are not to be seen :'
Or, if you are, be forc'd to bear
The awe of your majestic air.
And can I then be faulty found,
In dreading this vexatious round ?
Can it be strange, if I eschew
A scene so glorious and so new ?
Or is he criminal that flies
The living lustre of your eyes ?"

THE BIRTH OF MANLY VIRTUE.

INSCRIBED TO LORD CARTERET. 1724.

Gratior et pulchro veniens in corpore Virtus. VIRG.

ONCE on a time, a righteous sage,
 Griev'd with the vices of the age,
 Applied to Jove with fervent prayer
 —“ O Jove, if Virtue be so fair
 As it was deem'd in former days,
 By Plato and by Socrates,
 Whose beauties mortal eyes escape,
 Only for want of outward shape :
 Make then its real excellence,
 For once, the theme of human sense ;
 So shall the eye, by form confin'd,
 Direct and fix the wandering mind ;
 And long-deluded mortals see,
 With rapture, what they us'd to flee !”

Jove grants the prayer, gives Virtue birth,
 And bids him bless and mend the earth.
 Behold him blooming fresh and fair,
 Now made—ye gods—a son and heir :
 An heir : and, stranger yet to hear,
 An heir, an orphan of a peer ; *
 But prodigies are wrought, to prove
 Nothing impossible to Jove.

* George, the first Lord Carteret, father of the Lord-Lieutenant, died when his son was between four and five years of age.

Virtue was for this sex design'd,
In mild reproof to womankind ;
In manly form to let them see
The loveliness of modesty,
The thousand decencies that shone
With lessen'd lustre in their own ;
Which few had learn'd enough to prize,
And some thought modish to despise.

To make his merit more discern'd,
He goes to school—he reads—is learn'd ;
Rais'd high above his birth, by knowledge,
He shines distinguish'd in a college ;
Resolv'd nor honour, nor estate,
Himself alone should make him great.
Here soon for every art renown'd,
His influence is diffus'd around ;
Th' inferior youth to learning led,
Less to be fam'd than to be fed,
Behold the glory he has won,
And blush to see themselves outdone ;
And now, inflam'd with rival rage,
In scientific strife engage,
Engage ; and, in the glorious strife,
The arts new kindle into life.

Here would our hero ever dwell,
Fix'd in a lonely learned cell ;
Contented to be truly great,
In Virtue's best belov'd retreat ;
Contented he—but Fate ordains,
He now shall shine in nobler scenes,
Rais'd high, like some celestial fire,
To shine the more, still rising higher ;
Completely form'd in every part,
To win the soul, and glad the heart.
The powerful voice, the graceful mien,
Lovely alike, or heard, or seen ;

The outward form and inward vie,
 His soul bright beaming from his eye,
 Ennobling every act and air,
 With just, and generous, and sincere.

Accomplish'd thus, his next resort
 Is to the council and the court,
 Where Virtue is in least repute,
 And interest the one pursuit;
 Where right and wrong are bought and sold,
 Barter'd for beauty, and for gold;
 Here Manly Virtue, even here,
 Pleas'd in the person of a peer,
 A peer; a scarcely bearded youth,
 Who talk'd of justice and of truth,
 Of innocence the surest guard,
 Tales here forgot, or yet unheard;
 That he alone deserv'd esteem,
 Who was the man he wish'd to seem;
 Call'd it unmanly and unwise,
 To lurk behind a mean disguise;
 (Give fraudulent Vice the mask and screen,
 'Tis Virtue's interest to be seen;)
 Call'd want of shame a want of sense,
 And found, in blushes, eloquence.

Thus acting what he taught so well,
 He drew dumb Merit from her cell,
 Led with amazing art along
 The bashful dame, and loos'd her tongue;
 And, while he made her value known,
 Yet more display'd and rais'd his own.

Thus young, thus proof to all temptations,
 He rises to the highest stations;
 For where high honour is the prize,
 True Virtue has a right to rise:
 Let courtly slaves low bend the knee
 To Wealth and Vice in high degree:

Exalted Worth disdains to owe
Its grandeur to its greatest foe.

Now rais'd on high, see Virtue shows
The godlike ends for which he rose ;
For him, let proud Ambition know
The height of glory here below,
Grandeur, by goodness made complete !
To bless, is truly to be great !
He taught how men to honour rise,
Like gilded vapours to the skies,
Which, howsoever they display
Their glory from the god of day,
Their noblest use is to abate
His dangerous excess of heat,
To shield the infant fruits and flowers,
And bless the earth with genial showers.

Now change the scene ; a nobler care
Demands him in a higher sphere : *
Distress of nations calls him hence,
Permitted so by Providence ;
For models, made to mend our kind,
To no one clime should be confin'd ;
And Manly Virtue, like the sun,
His course of glorious toils should run :
Alike diffusing in his flight
Congenial joy, and life, and light.
Pale Envy sickens, Error flies,
And Discord in his presence dies ;
Oppression hides with guilty dread,
And Merit rears her drooping head ;
The arts revive, the vallies sing,
And winter softens into spring :

* Lord Carteret had the honour of mediating peace for Sweden with Denmark and with the Czar.—H.

The wondering world, where'er he moves,
 With new delight looks up, and loves ;
 One sex consenting to admire,
 Nor less the other to desire ;
 While he, though seated on a throne,
 Confines his love to one alone ;
 The rest condemn'd with rival voice
 Repining, do applaud his choice.

Fame now reports, the Western Isle
 Is made his mansion for a while,
 Whose anxious natives, night and day,
 (Happy beneath his righteous sway)
 Weary the gods with ceaseless prayer,
 To bless him, and to keep him there ;
 And claim it as a debt from Fate,
 Too lately found, to lose him late.

ON

PADDY'S CHARACTER OF THE INTELLIGENCER. * 1729.

As a thorn bush, or oaken bough,
 Stuck in an Irish cabin's brow,
 Above the door, on country fair,
 Betokens entertainment there ;

* Dr Sheridan was publisher of the "Intelligencer," a weekly paper, written principally by himself ; but Dr Swift occasionally supplied him with a letter. Dr Delany, piqued at the approba-

So bays on poets brows have been Set, for a sign of wit within.
And as ill neighbours in the night
Pull down an alehouse bush for spite ;
The laurel so, by poets worn,
Is by the teeth of Envy torn ;
Envy, a canker-worm, which tears
Those sacred leaves that lightning spares.

And now, t'exemplify this moral :
Tom having earn'd a twig of laurel,
(Which, measur'd on his head, was found
Not long enough to reach half round,
But, like a girl's cockade, was ty'd,
A trophy, on his temple-side),
Paddy repin'd to see him wear
This badge of honour in his hair ;
And, thinking this cockade of wit
Would his own temples better fit,
Forming his Muse by Smedley's model,
Lets drive at Tom's devoted noddle,
Pelts him by turns with verse and prose,
Hums like a hornet at his nose.
At length presumes to vent his satire on
The Dean, Tom's honour'd friend and patron.
The eagle in the tale, ye know,
Teas'd by a buzzing wasp below,

tion those papers received, attacked them violently, both in conversation and in print ; but unfortunately stumbled on some of the numbers which the Dean had written, and all the world admired, which gave rise to these verses.—H.

This is one of the little satirical effusions from which the Dean's intimates were never insured. It is retained in this place on account of the frequent mention of Delany in the subsequent poems.

Took wing to Jove, and hop'd to rest
 Securely in the thunderer's breast ;
 In vain ; even there, to spoil his nod,
 The spiteful insect stung the god.

AN EPISTLE TO HIS EXCELLENCY

JOHN, LORD CARTERET.

BY DR DELANY. 1729.

“ Credis ob hoc, me, Pastor, opes fortasse rogare, Propter quod, vulgus, crassaque turba rogat.”
 MART. Epig. Lib. ix.

[Delany, by the patronage of Carteret, and probably through the intercession of Swift, had obtained a small living in the north of Ireland, worth about one hundred pounds a-year, with the chancellorship of Christ Church, and a prebend's stall in St Patrick's, neither of which exceeded the same annual amount. yet a clamour was raised among the Whigs, on account of the multiplication of his preferments ; and a charge was founded against the Lord-Lieutenant, of extravagant favour to a Tory divine, which Swift judged worthy of an admirable ironical confutation, in his vindication of Lord Carteret. It appears from the following verses, that Delany was far from being of the same opinion with those who thought he was too amply provided for.]

Thou wise and learned ruler of our isle,
 Whose guardian care can all her griefs beguile ;

When next your generous soul shall condescend
 T' instruct or entertain your humble friend ;
 Whether, retiring from your weighty charge,
 On some high theme you learnedly enlarge ;
 Of all the ways of wisdom reason well,
 How Richlieu rose, and how Sejanus fell :
 Or, when your brow less thoughtfully unbends,
 Circled with Swift and some delighted friends ;
 When, mixing mirth and wisdom with your wine,
 Like that your wit shall flow, your genius shine :
 Nor with less praise the conversation guide,
 Than in the public councils you decide :
 Or when the Dean, long privileg'd to rail,
 Asserts his friend with more impetuous zeal ;
 You hear (whilst I sit by abash'd and mute)
 With soft concessions shortening the dispute ;
 Then close with kind inquiries of my state,
 " How are your tithes, and have they rose of late ?
 Why, Christ Church is a pretty situation,
 There are not many better in the nation !
 This, with your other things, must yield you clear
 Some six—at least five hundred pounds a-year."

Suppose, at such a time, I took the freedom
 To speak these truths as plainly as you read 'em :
 You shall rejoin, my Lord, when I've replied,
 And, if you please, my Lady shall decide.

" My Lord, I'm satisfied you meant me well :
 And that I'm thankful, all the world can tell :
 But you'll forgive me, if I own the event
 Is short, is very short, of your intent :
 At least, I feel some ills unfelt before,
 My income less, and my expences more."

" How, Doctor ! double vicar ! double rector !
 A dignitary ! with a city lecture !

What glebes—what dues—what tithes—what fines
—what rent!

Why, Doctor!—will you never be content?"

“ Would my good Lord but cast up the account,
And see to what my revenues amount; *

My titles ample; but my gain so small,

That one good vicarage is worth them all :

And very wretched, sure, is he, that's double

In nothing but his titles and his trouble.

Add to this crying grievance, if you please,

My horses founder'd on Fermanah ways ;

Ways of well-polish'd and well-pointed stone,

Where every step endangers every bone ;

And, more to raise your pity and your wonder,

Two churches—twelve Hibernian miles asunder :

With complicated cures, I labour hard in,

Beside whole summers absent from—my garden!

But that the world would think I play'd the fool,

I'd change with Charley Grattan for his school. †—

What fine cascades, what vistles, might I make,

Fixt in the centre of th' Iernian lake!

There might I sail delighted, smooth and safe,

Beneath the conduct of my good Sir Ralph: ‡

There's not a better steerer in the realm;

I hope, my Lord, you'll call him to the helm.”—

“ Doctor—a glorious scheme to ease your grief!

When cures are cross, a school's a sure relief.

You cannot fail of being happy there,

The lake will be the Lethe of your care:

* Which calculation, according to Dr Swift, in his vindication of Lord Carteret, scarcely exceeded 300l. a-year.

† A free school at Inniskillen, founded by Erasmus Smith, Esq.

‡ Sir Ralph Gore, who had a villa in the lake of Erin.—F.

The scheme is for your honour and your ease ;
 And, Doctor, I'll promote it when you please.
 Meanwhile, allowing things below your merit,
 Yet, Doctor, you've a philosophic spirit ;
 Your wants are few, and, like your income, small,
 And you've enough to gratify them all :
 You've trees, and fruits, and roots, enough in store :
 And what could a philosopher have more ?
 You cannot wish for coaches, kitchens, cooks" —
 " My Lord, I've not enough to buy me books—
 Or pray, suppose my wants were all supplied,
 Are there no wants I should regard beside ?
 Whose breast is so unmann'd, as not to grieve,
 Compass'd with miseries he can't relieve ?
 Who can be happy—who should wish to live,
 And want the godlike happiness to give ?
 That I'm a judge of this, you must allow :
 I had it once—and I'm debarr'd it now.
 Ask your own heart, my Lord; if this be true,
 Then how unblest am I! how blest are you !"
 " 'Tis true—but, Doctor, let us wave all that—Say, if you had your wish, what you'd be at ?"
 " Excuse me good my Lord—I won't be sounded,
 Nor shall your favour by my wants be bounded.
 My Lord I challenge nothing as my due,
 Nor is it fit I should prescribe to you.
 Yet this might Symmachus himself avow,
 (Whose rigid rules* are antiquated now)—
 My lord ! I'd wish to pay the debts I owe—
 I'd wish besides—to build, and to bestow."

* Symmachus, Bishop of Rome, 499, made a decree, that no man should solicit for ecclesiastical preferment before the death of the incumbent.—H.

AN EPISTLE

UPON AN EPISTLE FROM A CERTAIN DOCTOR TO A CERTAIN GREAT LORD.

BEING A CHRISTMAS-BOX FOR DR DELANY.

As Jove will not attend on less,
When things of more importance press :
You can't, grave Sir, believe it hard,
That you, a low Hiberinan bard,
Should cool your heels a while, and wait
Unanswer'd at your patron's gate ;
And would my Lord vouchsafe to grant
This one, poor, humble boon I want,
Free leave to play his secretary,
As Falstaff acted old king Harry ;
I'd tell of yours in rhyme and print ;
Folks shrug, and cry, " There's nothing in't."
And, after several readings over,
It shines most in the marble cover.

How could so fine a taste dispense
With mean degrees of wit and sense ?
Nor will my lord so far beguile
The wise and learned of our isle ;
To make it pass upon the nation,
By dint of his sole approbation.

The task is arduous, patrons find,
To warp the sense of all mankind :
Who think your Muse must first aspire,
Ere he advance the doctor higher.

You've cause to say he meant you well :
That you are thankful, who can tell ?

For still you're short (which grieves your spirit)
Of his intent: you mean, your merit.

Ah! quanto rectius, tu adeptè,
Qui nil moliris tam inepte?

Smedley * thou Jonathan of Clogher,
"When thou thy humble lay dost offer
To Grafton's grace, with grateful heart,
Thy thanks and verse devoid of art:
Content with what his bounty gave,
No larger income dost thou crave."

But you must have cascades, and all
Iërne's lake, for your canal,
Your vistles, barges, and (a pox on All pride!) our speaker for your coxon:†
It's pity that he can't bestow you
Twelve commoners in caps to row you.
Thus Edgar proud, in days of yore,
Held monarchs labouring at the oar;
And, as he pass'd, so swell'd the Dee,
Enrag'd, as Ern would do at thee.

How different is this from Smedley!
(His name is up, he may in bed lie)
"Who only asks some pretty cure,
In wholesome soil and ether pure:
The garden stor'd with artless flowers,
In either angle shady bowers:
No gay parterre with costly green
Must in the ambient hedge be seen;
But nature freely takes her course,
Nor fears from him ungrateful force:
No sheers to check her sprouting vigour,
Or shape the yews to antic figure."

* See the Petition to the Duke of Grafton.—N.

† Alluding to Dr Delany's ambitious choice of fixing in the island of the Lake of Erin, where Sir Ralph Gore had a villa.

But you forsooth your all must squander
 On that poor spot, call'd Dell-ville, yonder
 And when you've been at vast expences
 In whims, parterres, canals, and fences,
 Your assets fail, and cash is wanting ;
 Nor farther buildings, farther planting :
 No wonder, when you raise and level,
 Think this wall low, and that wall bevel.
 Here a convenient box you found,
 Which you demolish'd to the ground :
 Then built, then took up with your arbour,
 And set the house to Rupert Barber.
 You sprang an arch which in a scurvy
 Humour, you tumbled topsy-turvy.
 You change a circle to a square,
 Then to a circle as you were :
 Who can imagine whence the fund is,
 That you quadrata change rotundis ?
 To fame a temple you erect,
 A Flora does the dome protect ;
 Mounts, walks, on high ; and in a hollow
 You place the Muses and Apollo ;
 There shining 'midst his train, to grace
 Your whimsical poetic place.
 These stories were of old design'd
 As fables : but you have refin'd
 The poets mythologic dreams,
 To real Muses, gods, and streams,
 Who would not swear, when you contrive thus,
 That you're Don Quixote redivivus ?
 Beneath, a dry canal there lies,
 Which only Winter's rain supplies.
 O ! couldst thou, by some magic spell,
 Hither convey St Patrick's well !*

* Which had suddenly dried up.

Here may it reassume its stream,
 And take a greater Patrick's name !
 If your expences rise so high ;
 What income can your wants supply ?
 Yet still your fancy you inherit
 A fund of such superior merit,
 That you can't fail of more provision,
 All by my lady's kind decision.
 For, the more livings you can fish up,
 You think you'll sooner be a bishop ;
 That could not be my lord's intent,
 Nor can it answer the event.
 Most think what has been heap'd on you
 To other sort of folk was due :
 Rewards too great for your flim-flams,
 Epistles, riddles, epigrams.

Though now your depth must not be sounded,
 The time was, when you'd have compounded
 For less than Charley Grattan's school !
 Five hundred pound a-year's no fool !
 Take this advice then from your friend,
 To your ambition put an end,
 Be frugal, Pat.: pay what you owe,
 Before you build and you bestow.
 Be modest ; nor address your betters
 With begging, vain, familiar letters.

A passage may be found, † I've heard,
 In some old Greek or Latian bard,
 Which says, " Would crows in silence eat
 Their offals, or their better meat,
 Their generous feeders not provoking
 By loud and inharmonious croaking,
 They might unhurt by Envy's claws,
 Live on, and stuff to boot their maws."

* Hor. Lib. I. Ep. xvii.

A LIBEL

ON THE REVEREND DR DELANY, AND HIS EXCELLENCY
 JOHN LORD CARTERET.
 1729.

DELUDED mortals, whom the great
 Choose for companions tête-à-tête ;
 Who at their dinners, en famille,
 Get leave to sit whene'er you will ;
 Then boasting tell us where you din'd,
 And how his lordship was so kind ;
 How many pleasant things he spoke ;
 And how you laugh'd at every joke :
 Swear he's a most facetious man ;
 That you and he are cup and can ;
 You travel with a heavy load,
 And quite mistake preferment's road.

Suppose my Lord and you alone ;
 Hint the least interest of your own,
 His visage drops, he knits his brow,
 He cannot talk of business now :
 Or, mention but a vacant post,
 He'll turn it off with " Name your toast :"
 Nor could the nicest artist paint
 A countenance with more constraint.

For, as their appetites to quench,
 Lords keep a pimp to bring a wench ;
 So men of wit, are but a kind
 Of pandars in a vicious mind ;
 Who proper objects must provide
 To gratify their lust of pride,

When, wearied with intrigues of state,
 They find an idle hour to prate.
 Then, shall you dare to ask a place,
 You forfeit all your patron's grace,
 And disappoint the sole design,
 For which he summon'd you to dine.

Thus Congreve spent in writing plays,
 And one poor office, half his days :
 While Montague, who claim'd the station
 To be Mæcenas of the nation,
 For poets open table kept,
 But ne'er consider'd where they slept :
 Himself as rich as fifty Jews,
 Was easy, though they wanted shoes ;
 And crazy Congreve scarce could spare
 A shilling to discharge his chair :
 Till prudence taught him to appeal
 From Pæan's fire to party zeal ;
 Not owing to his happy vein
 The fortunes of his later scene,
 Took proper principles to thrive :
 And so might every dunce alive. *

Thus Steele, who own'd what others writ,
 And flourish'd by imputed wit,
 From perils of a hundred jails,
 Withdrew to starve, and die in Wales.

Thus Gay, the hare with many friends,
 Twice seven long years the court attends :

* This picture is unfair and overcharged ; for the honour of Government, Congreve had several good places conferred on him, and, in the latter part of his days, enjoyed an affluent fortune ; but it was when he had disclaimed authorship, and chose to be considered as a private gentleman, as he told Voltaire.—H.

Who, under tales conveying truth,
 To virtue form'd a princely youth :*
 Who paid his courtship with the crowd,
 As far as modest pride allow'd ;
 Rejects a servile usher's place,
 And leaves St James's in disgrace.

Thus Addison, by lords carest,
 Was left in foreign lands distress ;
 Forgot at home, became for hire
 A travelling tutor to a squire :
 But wisely left the Muses hill,
 To business shap'd the poet's quill,
 Let all his barren laurels fade,
 Took up himself the courtier's trade,
 And, grown a minister of state,
 Saw poets at his levee wait.

Hail, happy Pope ! whose generous mind
 Detesting all the statesman kind,
 Contemning courts, at courts unseen,
 Refus'd the visits of a queen.
 A soul with every virtue fraught,
 By sages, priests, or poets taught ;
 Whose filial piety excels
 Whatever Grecian story tells ;
 A genius for all stations fit,
 Whose meanest talent is his wit :
 His heart too great, though fortune little,
 To lick a rascal statesman's spittle ;
 Appealing to the nation's taste,
 Above the reach of want is plac'd :
 By Homer dead was taught to thrive,
 Which Homer never could alive ;
 And sits aloft on Pindus' head,
 Despising slaves that cringe for bread.

* William Duke of Cumberland, son to George II.—H.

True politicians only pay
 For solid work, but not for play :
 Nor ever choose to work with tools
 Forg'd up in colleges and schools,
 Consider how much more is due
 To all their journeymen than you :
 At table you can Horace quote ;
 They at a pinch can bribe a vote :
 You show your skill in Grecian story ;
 But they can manage whig and tory :
 You, as a critic, are so curious
 To find a verse in Virgil spurious ;
 But they can smoke the deep designs,
 When Bolingbroke with Pulteney dines.

Besides, your patron may upbraid ye,
 That you have got a place already ;
 An office for your talents fit,
 To flatter, carve, and show your wit ;
 To snuff the lights and stir the fire,
 And get a dinner for your hire.
 What claim have you to place or pension ?
 He overpays in condescension.

But, reverend Doctor, you we know
 Could never condescend so low ;
 The viceroy, whom you now attend,
 Would, if he durst, be more your friend ;
 Nor will in you those gifts despise,
 By which himself was taught to rise :
 When he has virtue to retire,
 He'll grieve he did not raise you higher,
 And place you in a better station,
 Although it might have pleas'd the nation.

This may be true—submitting still
 To Walpole's more than royal will ;
 And what condition can be worse ?
 He comes to drain a beggar's purse ;

He comes to tie our chains on faster,
 And show us England is our master :
 Caressing knaves, and dunces wooing,
 To make them work their own undoing.
 What has he else to bait his traps,
 Or bring his vermin in, but scraps ?
 The offals of a church distress ;
 A hungry vicarage at best ;
 Or some remote inferior post,
 With forty pounds a-year at most ?

But here again you interpose—
 Your favourite lord is none of those
 Who owe their virtues to their stations,
 And characters to dedications :
 For, keep him in, or turn him out,
 His learning none will call in doubt ;
 His learning, though a poet said it
 Before a play, would lose no credit ;
 Nor Pope would dare deny him wit,
 Although to praise it Philips writ.
 I own, he hates an action base,
 His virtues battling with his place ;
 Nor wants a nice discerning spirit
 Betwixt a true and spurious merit ;
 Can sometimes drop a voter's claim,
 And give up party to his fame.
 I do the most that friendship can ;
 I hate the viceroy, love the man

But you, who, till your fortune's made,
 Must be a sweetener by your trade,
 Should swear he never meant us ill ;
 We suffer sore against his will ;
 That, if we could but see his heart,
 He would have chose a milder part :
 We rather should lament his case,
 Who must obey, or lose his place.

Since this reflection slipt your pen,
 Insert it when you write again ;
 And, to illustrate it, produce
 This simile for his excuse :

“ So to destroy a guilty land
 An* angel sent by Heaven’s command,
 While he obeys Almighty will,
 Perhaps may feel compassion still ;
 And wish the task had been assign’d
 To spirits of less gentle kind.”

But I, in politics grown old,
 Whose thoughts are of a different mould,
 Who from my soul sincerely hate
 Both kings and ministers of state ;
 Who look on courts with stricter eyes
 To see the seeds of vice arise ;
 Can lend you an allusion fitter,
 Though flattering knaves may call it bitter ;
 Which, if you durst but give it place,
 Would show you many a statesman’s face :
 Fresh from the tripod of Apollo,
 I had it in the words that follow ;
 Take notice, to avoid offence,
 I here except his excellence :

“ So, to effect his monarch’s ends,
 From hell a viceroy devil ascends ;
 His budget with corruptions cramm’d,
 The contributions of the damn’d ;
 Which with unsparing hand he strows
 Through courts and senates as he goes ;
 And then at Beelzebub’s black hall,
 Complains his budget was too small.”

* “ So when an angel by divine command,” &c.
 ADDISON’S Campaign.

Your simile may better shine
 In verse, but there is truth in mine.
 For no imaginable things
 Can differ more than gods and kings :
 And statesmen, by ten thousand odds,
 Are angels, just as kings are gods.

TO DR DELANY,

ON THE LIBELS WRITTEN AGAINST HIM.
 1729.

“ — Tanti tibi non sit opaci
 Omnis arena Tagi.”—JUV.

As some raw youth in country bred,
 To arms by thirst of honour led,
 When at a skirmish first he hears
 The bullets whistling round his ears,
 Will duck his head aside, will start,
 And feel a trembling at his heart,
 Till 'scaping oft without a wound
 Lessens the terror of the sound ;
 Fly bullets now as thick as hops,
 He runs into a cannon's chops.
 An author thus, who pants for fame,
 Begins the world with fear and shame ;
 When first in print you see him dread
 Each pop-gun levell'd at his head :
 The lead yon critic's quill contains,
 Is destin'd to beat out his brains :
 As if he heard loud thunders roll,
 Cries, Lord have mercy on his soul !

Concluding, that another shot
Will strike him dead upon the spot.
But, when with squibbing, flashing, popping,
He cannot see one creature dropping ;
That, missing fire, or missing aim,
His life is safe, I mean his fame ;
The danger past, takes heart of grace,
And looks a critic in the face,

Though splendour gives the fairest mark
To poison'd arrows in the dark,
Yet, in yourself when smooth and round,
They glance aside without a wound.

'Tis said, the gods try'd all their art,
How pain they might from pleasure part :
But little could their strength avail ;
Both still are fasten'd by the tail ;
Thus fame and censure, with a tether
By fate are always link'd together.

Why will you aim to be preferr'd
In wit before the common herd ;
And yet grow mortify'd and vex'd,
To pay the penalty annex'd ?

'Tis eminence makes envy rise :
As fairest fruits attract the flies.
Should stupid libels grieve your mind,
You soon a remedy may find ;
Lie down obscure like other folks
Below the lash of snarlers jokes.
Their faction is five hundred odds ;
For every coxcomb lends them rods,
And sneers as learnedly as they,
Like females o'er their morning tea.

You say the Muse will not contain,
And write you must, or break a vein.
Then, if you find the terms too hard,
No longer my advice regard :

But raise your fancy on the wing ;
 The Irish senate's praises sing ;
 How jealous of the nation's freedom,
 And for corruptions how they weed 'em ;
 How each the public good pursues,
 How far their hearts from private views ;
 Make all true patriots, up to shoe-boys,
 Huzza their brethren at the Blue-boys* ;
 Thus grown a member of the club,
 No longer dread the rage of Grub.

How oft am I for rhyme to seek !
 To dress a thought, may toil a week ;
 And then how thankful to the town,
 If all my pains will earn a crown !
 While every critic can devour
 My work and me in half an hour.
 Would men of genius cease to write,
 The rogues must die for want and spite ;
 Must die for want of food and raiment,
 If scandal did not find them payment.
 How cheerfully the hawkers cry
 A satire, and the gentry buy !
 While my hard-labour'd poem pines
 Unsold upon the printer's lines.

A genius in the reverend gown
 Must ever keep its owner down ;
 'Tis an unnatural conjunction,
 And spoils the credit of the function.
 Round all your brethren cast your eyes,
 Point out the surest men to rise ;
 That club of candidates in black,
 The least deserving of the pack,
 Aspiring, factious, fierce, and loud,
 With grace and learning unendow'd,

* The Irish Parliament sat at the Blue-boys Hospital, while the new parliament-house was fitting up.—F.

Can turn their hands to every job,
 The fittest tools to work for Bob* ;
 Will sooner coin a thousand lies,
 Than suffer men of parts to rise ;
 They crowd about preferment's gate,
 And press you down with all their weight ;
 For, as of old mathematicians
 Were by the vulgar thought magicians ;
 So academic dull ale-drinkers,
 Pronounce all men of wit freethinkers.

Wit, as the chief of virtue's friends,
 Disdains to serve ignoble ends.
 Observe what loads of stupid rhymes
 Oppress us in corrupted times ;
 What pamphlets in a court's defence
 Show reason, grammar, truth, or sense ?
 For though the Muse delights in fiction,
 She ne'er inspires against conviction.
 Then keep your virtue still unmixt,
 And let not faction come betwixt :
 By party-steps no grandeur climb at,
 Though it would make you England's primate :
 First learn the science to be dull,
 You then may soon your conscience lull ;
 If not, however seated high,
 Your genius in your face will fly.

When Jove was from his teeming head
 Of Wit's fair goddess brought to-bed,
 There follow'd at his lying-in
 For afterbirth a sooterkin ;
 Which, as the nurse pursued to kill,
 Attain'd by flight the Muses hill,
 There in the soil began to root,
 And litter'd at Parnassus' foot,

* Sir Robert Walpole.—F.

From hence the critic vermin sprung,
With harpy claws and poisonous tongue :
Who fatten on poetic scraps,
Too cunning to be caught in traps.
Dame Nature, as the learned show,
Provides each animal its foe :
Hounds hunt the hare, the wily fox
Devours your geese, the wolf your flocks.
Thus Envy pleads a natural claim
To persecute the Muse's fame ;
On poets in all times abusive,
From Homer down to Pope inclusive.

Yet what avails it to complain ?
You try to take revenge in vain.
A rat your utmost rage defies,
That safe behind the wainscot lies.
Say, did you ever know by sight
In cheese an individual mite !
Show me the same numeric flea,
That bit your neck but yesterday :
You then may boldly go in quest
To find the Grub Street poet's nest ;
What spunging-house, in dread of jail,
Receives them, while they wait for bail
What alley they are nestled in,
To flourish o'er a cup of gin ;
Find the last garret where they lay.
Or cellar where they starve to-day.
Suppose you have them all trepann'd,
With each a libel in his hand,
What punishment would you inflict ?
Or call them rogues, or get them kickt ?
These they have often try'd before ;
You but oblige them so much more :
Themselves would be the first to tell,
To make their trash the better sell.

You have been libell'd—Let us know,
 What fool officious told you so ?
 Will you regard the hawker's cries,
 Who in his titles always lies ?
 Whate'er the noisy scoundrel says,
 It might be something in your praise :
 And praise bestow'd in Grub Street rhymes,
 Would vex one more a thousand times.
 Till critics blame, and judges praise,
 The poet cannot claim his bays.
 On me when dunces are satiric,
 I take it for a panegyric.
 Hated by fools, and fools to hate,
 Be that my motto, and my fate.

DIRECTIONS FOR MAKING A BIRTH-DAY
SONG. 1729.

To form a just and finish'd piece,
 Take twenty gods of Rome or Greece,
 Whose godships are in chief request,
 And fit your present subject best :
 And, should it be your hero's case,
 To have both male and female race,
 Your business must be to provide
 A score of goddesses beside.
 Some call their monarchs sons of Saturn,
 For which they bring a modern pattern ;
 Because they might have heard of one,*
 Who often long'd to eat his son :
 But this I think will not go down,
 For here the father kept his crown.

* Alluding to the disputes between George I. and his son, while the latter was Prince of Wales.

Why, then, appoint him son of Jove,
 Who met his mother in a grove :
 To this we freely shall consent,
 Well knowing what the poets meant ;
 And in their sense, 'twixt me and you,
 It may be literally true.*

Next, as the laws of verse require,
 He must be greater than his sire ;
 For Jove, as every schoolboy knows,
 Was able Saturn to depose ;
 And sure no Christian poet breathing
 Would be more scrupulous than a Heathen ;
 Or, if to blasphemy it tends,
 That's but a trifle among friends.

Your hero now another Mars is,
 Makes mighty armies turn their a—s.
 Behold his glittering faulchion mow
 Whole squadrons at a single blow ;
 While Victory, with wings outspread,
 Flies, like an eagle, o'er his head ;
 His milk-white steed upon its haunches,
 Or pawing into dead men's paunches :
 As Overton has drawn his sire,
 Still seen o'er many an alehouse fire.
 Then from his arms hoarse thunder rolls,
 As loud as fifty mustard bowls :
 For thunder still his arm supplies,
 And lightning always in his eyes.
 They both are cheap enough in conscience,
 And serve to echo rattling nonsense.
 The rumbling words march fierce along,
 Made trebly-dreadful in your song.

Sweet poet, hir'd for birth-day rhymes,
 To sing of wars, choose peaceful times.

* The Electress Sophia, mother of George II. was supposed to have had an intrigue with Count Konigsmark.

What though, for fifteen years and more,
 Janus has lock'd his temple door ;
 Though not a coffeehouse we read in
 Has mention'd arms on this side Sweden ;
 Nor London Journals, nor the Postmen,
 Though fond of warlike lies as most men ;
 Thou still with battles stuff thy headful :
 For, must thy hero not be dreadful ?
 Dismissing Mars, it next must follow
 Your conqueror is become Apollo :
 That he's Apollo is as plain as
 That Robin Walpole is Mæcenas ;
 But that he struts, and that he squints,
 You'd know him by Apollo's prints.
 Old Phœbus is but half as bright,
 For yours can shine both day and night.
 The first, perhaps, may once an age
 Inspire you with poetic rage ;
 Your Phœbus Royal, every day,
 Not only can inspire, but pay.

Then make this new Apollo sit
 Sole patron, judge, and god of wit.
 " How from his altitude he stoops
 To raise up Virtue when she droops ;
 On Learning how his bounty flows,
 And with what justice he bestows :
 Fair Isis, and ye banks of Cam !
 Be witness if I tell a flam,
 What prodigies in arts we drain,
 From both your streams, in George's reign.
 As from the flowery bed of Nile"—
 But here's enough to shew your style.
 Broad inuendoes, such as this,
 If well applied, can hardly miss :
 For, when you bring your song in print,
 He'll get it read, and take the hint,

(It must be read before 'tis warbled,
The paper gilt and cover marbled)
And will be so much more your debtor,
Because he never knew a letter.

And, as he hears his wit and sense
(To which he never made pretence)
Set out in hyperbolic strains,

A guinea shall reward your pains :

For patrons never pay so well,

As when they scarce have learn'd to spell.

Next call him Neptune : with his trident

He rules the sea ; you see him ride in't ;

And, if provok'd, he soundly firks his Rebellious waves with rods, like Xerxes.

He would have seiz'd the Spanish plate,

Had not the fleet gone out too late ;

And in their very ports besiege them,

But that he would not disoblige them,

And make the rascals pay him dearly

For those affronts they give him yearly.

'Tis not deny'd, that, when we write,

Our ink is black, our paper white :

And, when we scrawl our paper o'er,

We blacken what was white before :

I think this practice only fit

For dealers in satiric wit.

But you some white-lead ink must get,

And write on paper black as jet ;

Your interest lies to learn the knack

Of whitening what before was black.

Thus your encomium, to be strong,

Must be applied directly wrong.

A tyrant for his mercy praise,

And crown a royal dunce with bays :

A squinting monkey load with charms,

And paint a coward fierce in arms.

Is he to avarice inclin'd?
 Extol him for his generous mind:
 And, when we starve for want of corn,
 Come out with Amalthea's horn:
 For all experience this evinces
 The only art of pleasing princes:
 For princes love you should descant
 On virtues which they know they want.
 One compliment I had forgot,
 But songsters must omit it not;
 I freely grant the thought is old:
 Why, then, your hero must be told,
 In him such virtues lie inherent,
 To qualify him God's vicegerent;
 That, with no title to inherit,
 He must have been a king by merit.
 Yet, be the fancy old or new,
 'Tis partly false, and partly true:
 And, take it right, it means no more
 Than George and William claim'd before.

Should some obscure inferior fellow,
 Like Julius, or the youth of Pella,
 When all your list of Gods is out,
 Presume to show his mortal snout,
 And as a Deity intrude,
 Because he had the world subdu'd;
 O, let him not debase your thoughts,
 Or name him but to tell his faults.—

Of Gods I only quote the best,
 But you may hook in all the rest.

Now, birth-day bard, with joy proceed
 To praise your empress and her breed;
 First of the first, to vouch your lies,
 Bring all the females of the skies;
 The Graces, and their mistress, Venus,
 Must venture down to entertain us:

With bended knees when they adore her,
 What dowdies they appear before her !
 Nor shall we think you talk at random,
 For Venus might be her great grandam :
 Six thousand years has liv'd the Goddess,
 Your heroine hardly fifty odd is.
 Besides, your songsters oft have shown
 That she has Graces of her own :
 Three Graces by Lucina brought her,
 Just three, and every Grace a daughter ;
 Here many a king his heart and crown
 Shall at their snowy feet lay down ;
 In royal robes, they come by dozens
 To court their English German cousins :
 Beside a pair of princely babies,
 That, five years hence, will both be Hebes.

Now see her seated in her throne
 With genuine lustre, all her own :
 Poor Cynthia never shone so bright,
 Her splendour is but borrow'd light ;
 And only with her brother linkt
 Can shine, without him is extinct.
 But Carolina shines the clearer
 With neither spouse nor brother near her ;
 And darts her beams o'er both our isles,
 Though George is gone a thousand miles.
 Thus Berecynthia takes her place,
 Attended by her heavenly race ;
 And sees a son in every God,
 Unaw'd by Jove's all-shaking nod.

Now sing his little highness Freddy,
 Who struts like any king already :
 With so much beauty, show me any maid
 That could resist this charming Ganymede !
 Where majesty with sweetness vies,
 And, like his father, early wise.

Then cut him out a world of work,
 To conquer Spain, and quell the Turk :
 Foretel his empire crown'd with bays,
 And golden times, and halcyon days ;
 And swear his line shall rule the nation
 For ever—till the conflagration.
 But, now it comes into my mind,
 We left a little duke behind ;
 A Cupid in his face and size,
 And only wants, to want his eyes.
 Make some provision for the younker,
 Find him a kingdom out to conquer :
 Prepare a fleet to waft him o'er,
 Make Gulliver his commodore ;
 Into whose pocket valiant Willy put,
 Will soon subdue the realm of Lillyput.

A skilful critic justly blames
 Hard, tough, crank, guttural, harsh, stiff names.
 The sense can ne'er be too jejune,
 But smooth your words to fit the tune.
 Hanover may do well enough,
 But George and Brunswick are too rough ;
 Hesse-Darmstadt makes a rugged sound,
 And Guelp the strongest ear will wound.
 In vain are all attempts from Germany
 To find out proper words for harmony :
 And yet I must except the Rhine,
 Because it clinks to Caroline.
 Hail queen of Britain, queen of rhymes !
 Be sung ten hundred thousand times !
 Too happy were the poets' crew
 If their own happiness they knew :
 Three syllables did never meet
 So soft, so sliding, and so sweet :
 Nine other tuneful words like that
 Would prove ev'n Homer's numbers flat.

Behold three beauteous vowels stand,
 With bridegroom liquids, hand in hand ;
 In concord here for ever fix'd,
 No jarring consonant betwixt.
 May Caroline continue long,
 For ever fair and young!—in song.
 What though the royal carcase must,
 Squeez'd in a coffin, turn to dust ?
 Those elements her name compose,
 Like atoms, are exempt from blows.

Though Caroline may fill your gaps,
 Yet still you must consult your maps ;
 Find rivers with harmonious names,
 Sabrina, Medway, and the Thames.
 Britannia long will wear like steel,
 But Albion's cliffs are out at heel ;
 And Patience can endure no more
 To hear the Belgic lion roar.
 Give up the phrase of haughty Gaul,
 But proud Iberia soundly maul :
 Restore the ships by Philip taken,
 And make him crouch to save his bacon.
 Nassau, who got the name of Glorious,
 Because he never was victorious,
 A hanger-on has always been ;
 For old acquaintance bring him in.

To Walpole you might lend a line,
 But much I fear he's in decline ;
 And, if you chance to come too late,
 When he goes out, you share his fate,
 And bear the new successor's frown ;
 Or, whom you once sang up, sing down.

Reject with scorn that stupid notion,
 To praise your hero for devotion ;
 Nor entertain a thought so odd,
 That princes should believe in God ;

But follow the securest rule,
 And turn it all to ridicule :
 'Tis grown the choicest wit at court,
 And gives the maids of honour sport ;
 For, since they talk'd with Doctor Clarke,
 They now can venture in the dark :
 That sound divine the truth has spoke all,
 And pawn'd his word, Hell is not local.
 This will not give them half the trouble
 Of bargains sold, or meanings double.

Supposing now your song is done,
 To mynheer Handel next you run,
 Who artfully will pare and prune
 Your words to some Italian tune :
 Then print it in the largest letter,
 With capitals, the more the better.
 Present it boldly on your knee,
 And take a guinea for your fee.

THE PHEASANT AND THE LARK.

A FABLE. BY DR DELANY. 1790.

“ —Quis iniquæ
 “ Tam patiens urbis, tam ferreus, ut teneat se?” Juv.

IN ancient times, as bards indite,
 (If clerks have conn'd the records right)
 A Peacock reign'd, whose glorious sway
 His subjects with delight obey :
 His tail was beauteous to behold,
 Replete with goodly eyes and gold ;

Fair emblem of that monarch's guise,
 Whose train at once is rich and wise;
 And princely rul'd he many regions,
 And statesmen wise, and valiant legions.

A pheasant lord, * above the rest,
 With every grace and talent blest,
 Was sent to sway, with all his skill,
 The sceptre of a neighbouring hill. †
 No science was to him unknown,
 For all the arts were all his own:
 In all the living learned read,
 Though more delighted with the dead:
 For birds, if ancient tales say true,
 Had then their Popes and Homers too,
 Could read and write in prose and verse,
 And speak like , and build like Pearce. ‡
 He knew their voices, and their wings,
 Who smoothest soars, who sweetest sings;
 Who toils with ill-fledg'd pens to climb,
 And who attain'd the true sublime.
 Their merits he could well descry,
 He had so exquisite an eye;
 And when that fail'd to show them clear,
 He had as exquisite an ear.
 It chanc'd as on a day he stray'd
 Beneath an academic shade,
 He lik'd, amidst a thousand throats,
 The wildness of a Woodlark's § notes,
 And search'd, and spy'd, and seiz'd his game,
 And took him home, and made him tame;

* Lord Carteret, lord-lieutenant of Ireland.—F.

† Ireland.—F.

‡ A famous modern architect, who built the Parliament-house in Dublin.—F.

§ Dr Delany.—F.

Found him on trial true and able,
So cheer'd and fed him at his table.

Here some shrewd critic finds I'm caught,
And cries out, "Better fed than taught"—
Then jests on game and tame, and reads,
And jests, and so my tale proceeds.

Long had he study'd in the wood,
Conversing with the wise and good :
His soul with harmony inspir'd,
With love of truth and virtue fir'd :
His brethren's good and Maker's praise
Were all the study of his lays ;
Were all his study in retreat,
And now employ'd him with the great.
His friendship was the sure resort
Of all the wretched at the court ;
But chiefly merit in distress
His greatest blessing was to bless.—

This fix'd him in his patron's breast,
But fir'd with envy all the rest ;
I mean that noisy craving crew,
Who round the court incessant flew,
And prey'd like rooks, by pairs and dozens,
To fill the maws of sons and cousins :
"Unmov'd their heart, and chill'd their blood,
To every thought of common good,
Confining every hope and care
To their own low contracted sphere."
These ran him down with ceaseless cry,
But found it hard to tell you why,
Till his own worth and wit supply'd
Sufficient matter to deride :
" 'Tis envy's safest, surest rule,
To hide her rage in ridicule :
The vulgar eye she best beguiles,
When all her snakes are deck'd with smiles :

Sardonic smiles, by rancour rais'd !
 Tormented most when seeming pleas'd !"
 Their spite had more than half expir'd,
 Had he not wrote what all admir'd ;
 What morsels had their malice wanted,
 But that he built, and plann'd, and planted !
 How had his sense and learning griev'd them,
 But that his charity reliev'd them !

“ At highest worth dull Malice reaches,
 As slugs pollute the fairest peaches :
 Envy defames, as harpies vile
 Devour the food they first defile.”

Now ask the fruit of all his favour—
 “ He was not hitherto a saver.”—
 What then could make their rage run mad ?
 “ Why what he hop'd, not what he had.

“ What tyrant e'er invented ropes,
 Or racks, or rods, to punish hopes ?
 Th' inheritance of Hope and Fame
 Is seldom Earthly Wisdom's aim ;
 Or, if it were, is not so small,
 But there is room enough for all.”

If he but chance to breathe a song,
 (He seldom sang, and never long)
 The noisy, rude, malignant crowd,
 Where it was high, pronounc'd it loud :
 Plain Truth was Pride ; and what was sillier,
 Easy and Friendly was Familiar.

Or, if he tun'd his lofty lays,
 With solemn air to Virtue's praise,
 Alike abusive and erroneous,
 They call'd it hoarse and inharmonious.
 Yet so it was to souls like theirs,
 Tuneless as Abel to the bears !

A Rook * with harsh malignant caw
 Began, was follow'd by a Daw ; †
 (Though some, who would be thought to know,
 Are positive it was a Crow) :
 Jack Daw was seconded by Tit.
 Tom Tit ‡ could write, and so he writ ;
 A tribe of tuneless praters follow,
 The Jay, the Magpie, and the Swallow ;
 And twenty more their throats let loose,
 Down to the witless waddling Goose.

Some peck'd at him, some flew, some flutter'd,
 Some hiss'd, some scream'd, and others mutter'd :
 The Crow, on carrion wont to feast,
 The Carrion Crow, condemn'd his taste :
 The Rook, in earnest too, not joking,
 Swore all his singing was but croaking.

Some thought they meant to show their wit,
 Might think so still—" but that they writ"—
 Could it be spite or envy?—" No—
 " Who did no ill, could have no foe."—
 So Wise Simplicity esteem'd,
 Quite otherwise True Wisdom deem'd :
 This question rightly understood,
 " What more provokes than doing good ?
 A soul ennobled and refin'd
 Reproaches every baser mind :
 As strains exalted and melodious
 Make every meaner music odious."—

At length the Nightingale § was heard,
 For voice and wisdom long rever'd,
 Esteem'd of all the wise and good,
 The Guardian Genius of the wood :

* Dr T——r.—F.

‡ Dr Sheridan.—F.

† Right Hon. Rich. Tighe.—F.

§ Dean Swift.—F.

He long in discontent retir'd,
 Yet not obscur'd, but more admir'd :
 His brethren's servile souls disdaining,
 He liv'd indignant and complaining :
 They now afresh provoke his choler,
 (It seems the Lark had been his scholar,
 A favourite scholar always near him,
 And oft had wak'd whole nights to hear him),
 Enrag'd he canvasses the matter,
 Exposes all their senseless chatter,
 Shows him and them in such a light,
 As more inflames, yet quells their spite.
 They hear his voice, and frighted fly,
 For rage had rais'd it very high :
 Sham'd by the wisdom of his notes,
 They hide their heads, and hush their throats.

ANSWER TO DR DELANY'S FABLE

OF THE PHEASANT AND THE LARK.

1730.

IN ancient times, the wise were able
 In proper terms to write a fable :
 Their tales would always justly suit
 The characters of every brute.
 The ass was dull, the lion brave,
 The stag was swift, the fox a knave ;
 The daw a thief, the ape a droll,
 The hound would scent, the wolf would prowl :
 A pigeon would, if shown by Æsop,
 Fly from the hawk, or pick his pease up.

Far otherwise a great divine
Has learnt his fables to refine ;
He jumbles men and birds together,
As if they all were of a feather :
You see him first the peacock bring,
Against all rules, to be a king ;
That in his tail he wore his eyes,
By which he grew both rich and wise.
Now, pray, observe the Doctor's choice,
A peacock chose for flight and voice ;
Did ever mortal see a peacock
Attempt a flight above a haycock ?
And for his singing, Doctor, you know,
Himself complain'd of it to Juno.
He squalls in such a hellish noise,
He frightens all the village boys.
This peacock kept a standing force,
In regiments of foot and horse :
Had statesmen too of every kind,
Who waited on his eyes behind ;
And this was thought the highest post ;
For, rule the rump, you rule the roast.
The Doctor names but one at present,
And he of all birds was a pheasant.
This pheasant was a man of wit,
Could read all books were ever writ ;
And, when among companions privy,
Could quote you Cicero and Livy.
Birds, as he says, and I allow,
Were scholars then, as we are now ;
Could read all volumes up to folios,
And feed on fricassees and olios :
This Pheasant, by the Peacock's will,
Was viceroy of a neighbouring hill ;
And, as he wander'd in his park,
He chanc'd to spy a clergy Lark ;

Was taken with his person outward,
 So prettily he pick'd a cow-t—d :
 Then in a net the Pheasant caught him,
 And in his palace fed and taught him.
 The moral of the tale is pleasant,
 Himself the lark, my lord the pheasant :
 A lark he is, and such a lark
 As never came from Noah's ark :
 And though he had no other notion,
 But building, planning, and devotion ;
 Though 'tis a maxim you must know,
 " Who does no ill can have no foe ;"
 Yet how can I express in words
 The strange stupidity of birds ?
 This lark was hated in the wood,
 Because he did his brethren good.
 At last the Nightingale comes in,
 To hold the Doctor by the chin :
 We all can find out what he means,
 The worst of disaffected deans :
 Whose wit at best was next to none,
 And now that little next is gone,
 Against the court is always blabbing,
 And calls the senate-house a cabin ;
 So dull, that but for spleen and spite,
 We ne'er should know that he could write ;
 Who thinks the nation always err'd,
 Because himself is not preferr'd ;
 His heart is through his libel seen,
 Nor could his malice spare the queen ;
 Who, had she known his vile behaviour,
 Would ne'er have shown him so much favour.
 A noble lord * has told his pranks,
 And well deserves the nation's thanks.

* Lord Allen, the same who is meant by Traulus.—F.

O! would the senate deign to show
 Resentment on this public foe;
 Our Nightingale might fit a cage,
 There let him starve, and vent his rage:
 Or would they but in fetters bind,
 This enemy of human kind!
 Harmonious Coffee,* show thy zeal,
 Thou champion for the commonweal:
 Nor on a theme like this repine,
 For once to wet thy pen divine:
 Bestow that libeller a lash,
 Who daily vends seditious trash:
 Who dares revile the nation's wisdom,
 But in the praise of virtue is dumb:
 That scribbler lash, who neither knows
 The turn of verse, nor style of prose;
 Whose malice, for the worst of ends,
 Would have us love our English friends; †
 Who never had one public thought,
 Nor ever gave the poor a groat.
 One clincher more, and I have done,
 I end my labours with a pun.
 Jove send this Nightingale may fall,
 Who spends his day and night in gall!
 So Nightingale and Lark adieu;
 I see the greatest owls in you
 That ever screech'd, or ever flew.

DEAN SMEDLEY'S PETITION

TO THE DUKE OF GRAFTON.

“ Non domus aut fundus——.” Hor.

[This piece is repeatedly and always satirically alluded to in the preceding poems.]

It was, my lord, the dexterous shift
Of t'other Jonathan, viz. Swift,
But now St Patrick's saucy dean,
With silver verge, and surplice clean,
Of Oxford, or of Ormond's grace,
In looser rhyme to beg a place.
A place he got, yclept a stall,
And eke a thousand pound withal ;
And were he less a witty writer,
He might as well have got a mitre.

Thus I, the Jonathan of Clogher,
In humble grace my thanks to offer,
Approach your grace with grateful heart,
My thanks and verse both void of art,
Content with what your bounty gave,
No larger income do I crave :
Rejoicing that, in better times,
Grafton requires my loyal lines.
Proud ! while my patron is polite,
I likewise to the patron write !

Proud! that at once I can commend
King George's and the Muses' friend!
Endear'd to Britain; and to thee
(Disjoin'd, Hibernia, by the sea)
Endear'd by twice three anxious years,
Employ'd in guardian toils and cares;
By love, by wisdom, and by skill;
For he has sav'd thee 'gainst thy will.

But where shall Smedley make his nest,
And lay his wandering head to rest?
Where shall he find a decent house,
To treat his friends, and cheer his spouse?
O! tack, my lord, some pretty cure;
In wholesome soil, and ether pure;
The garden stor'd with artless flowers,
In either angle shady bowers.
No gay parterre, with costly green,
Within the ambient hedge be seen:
Let Nature freely take her course,
Nor fear from me ungrateful force;
No shears shall check her sprouting vigour,
Nor shape the yews to antic figure:
A limpid brook shall trout supply,
In May, to take the mimic fly;
Round a small orchard may it run,
Whose apples redden to the sun.
Let all be snug, and warm, and neat;
For fifty turn'd a safe retreat,
A little Euston* may it be,
Euston I'll carve on every tree.
But then, to keep it in repair,
My lord—twice fifty pounds a-year

* The name of the duke's seat in Suffolk.—N.

Will barely do ; but if your grace
 Could make them hundreds—charming place !
 Thou then wouldst show another face.

Clogher ! far north, my lord, it lies,
 'Midst snowy hills, inclement skies :
 One shivers with the arctic wind,
 One hears the polar axis grind.
 Good John * indeed, with beef and claret,
 Makes the place warm, that one may bear it.
 He has a purse to keep a table,
 And eke a soul as hospitable.

My heart is good ; but assets fail,
 To fight with storms of snow and hail.
 Besides, the country's thin of people,
 Who seldom meet but at the steeple :
 The strapping dean, that's gone to Down,
 Ne'er nam'd the thing without a frown,
 When, much fatigu'd with sermon study,
 He felt his brain grow dull and muddy ;
 No fit companion could be found,
 To push the lazy bottle round :
 Sure then, for want of better folks
 To pledge, his clerk was orthodox.

Ah ! how unlike to Gerard Street,
 Where beaux and belles in parties meet ;
 Where gilded chairs and coaches throng,
 And jostle as they troll along ;
 Where tea and coffee hourly flow,
 And gapeseed does in plenty grow ;
 And Griz (no clock more certain) cries,
 Exact at seven, " Hot mutton-pies !"
 There lady Luna in her sphere
 Once shone, when Paunceforth was not near ;

* Bishop Sterne.—H.

But now she wanes, and, as 'tis said,
Keeps sober hours, and goes to bed.
There—but 'tis endless to write down
All the amusements of the town;
And spouse will think herself quite undone,
To trudge to Connor * from sweet London;
And care we must our wives to please,
Or else—we shall be ill at ease.

You see, my lord, what 'tis I lack,
'Tis only some convenient tack,
Some parsonage-house, with garden sweet,
To be my late, my last retreat;
A decent church, close by its side,
There, preaching, praying, to reside;
And as my time securely rolls,
To save my own and other souls.

* The bishoprick of Connor is united to that of Down; but there are two Deans.

In further illustration of Dean Smedley's poetical genius, and the purposes for which he found it convenient to use it, we subjoin a Christmas Invitation to Lord Carteret. The Dean, like many other great men, did not easily forgive those who, with inferior talents, and different political principles, affected the same stile of addressing the great, by which he had originally distinguished himself, and still continued to use for the benefit of his friends.

A CHRISTMAS INVITATION.

TO THE RIGHT HON. THE LORD CARTERET, LORD-LIEUTENANT
OF IRELAND, 1725.

—Animæ quales, neque candidiores
Terra tulit—

THE Muse, though late, to thee the Muse's friend,
Apollo warns these easy lines to send:
Laurell'd and gay the god appear'd at night,
In sleepy vision, and he bid me write:

THE DUKE'S ANSWER.

BY DR SWIFT.

DEAR Smed, I read thy brilliant lines,
 Where wit in all its glory shines ;
 Where compliments, with all their pride,
 Are by their numbers dignified :

The theme, methought, I heard his lyre rehearse,
 And muses joining pointed out the verse.
 He bid me rouse and quit inglorious ease,
 Address the great, and follow after praise :
 Nor longer live an hermit, but bring down
 Choice spirits to my villa from the town :
 —You know my favourites : Carteret ! first be he :
 He Phœbus loves, and he's belov'd by me.
 Court Boulter, much, to grace thy plain abode ;
 That learned pious head o' th' sons of God.
 Tell my lov'd West, he must, awhile, withdraw,
 Unbend his mind and cease to dictate law ;
 Tell him its my desire, its my command,
 He at your villa join that learned band,
 Join (though a few), yet join the chiefest part
 Of those, who, skill'd in each politer art,
 Skill'd in the art of numbers and of rhyme,
 At Button's, * erst, deceiv'd their leisure time ;
 There where immortal Addison repair'd ;
 Where Argyll, Stanhope, Steele, were often heard,
 In Cato's praisie their rhetoric to repeat,
 When Cato's principles were out of date.
 Philips and Tickell will obey my call :
 Let no less hallowed names approach thy wall.
 Only adopt my Hort : a friend so true !
 To Hort I gave a genius ; Hort has gônt.
 Chaste be your hours ; to wit and mirth consign'd :
 Your body healthful, and tranquil your mind.
 By day be country games your main delight ;
 By rules more quiet wear away the night.

* All the persons mentioned met at Button's coffeehouse, being Whigs, the two last years of Queen Anne's reign.

I hope to make you yet as clean
 As that same Viz, St Patrick's dean.
 I'll give thee surplice, verge, and stall,
 And may be something else withal ;

Taper and tea succeed the setting sun :
 Be ombre next, or be piquet begun ;
 Or if my spirit interrupts your rest,
 And all Apollo moves in every breast ;
 To wit and learning be each moment due ;
 Old lore revive, or strike out somewhat new.
 Be it your vacant chasms of time, to fill,
 With Homer's, or with Maro's lines, your skill ;
 Enjoy, my lov'd laconic Nepos : Let,
 If you're inclin'd, the long spun thread be set
 Of Tully's learned reasonings before ye ;
 Or Livy's strong (oft superstitious) story,
 Horace and Balzac read, and read Montaigne ;
 Read those who wrote the Crisis and Campaign,
 Or if you turn your thoughts on church and state,
 Read Hoadley—But when Belle serves up the meat,
 Club your own wit in open easy strain,
 In uncook'd dress, like diet of the Dean ;
 In manner'd chat be the refreshment past ;
 Simplicity to me's an high repast.
 With butter new, cheese old, be crown'd the meal :
 The cloth remov'd, the table clean'd, ne'er fail
 To lose an hour or two in frank discourse,
 While lib'ral thought flows unrestrain'd by force.
 At human frailty or indulge a smile,
 Or talk of morals in a graver style.
 Tell how the works of nature to improve :
 Tell nature's Author how to praise and love.
 Your country's love through various tracks pursue :
 Discuss to justice what to honour's due ;
 Rally on love ; on arts severe debate,
 Talk any thing but of the modern state
 And of church jargon : These things leave to know
 To the wise orators round Skinner's Row,
 Where slavish notions dully are infus'd,
 And church and coffeehouse alike abus'd.
 Toast to the sons of freedom ; toast the fair ;
 Toast Nassau, and his long-concerted heir.
 Then to the church allot a solemn glass :
 Let the next round to prince and issue pass ;
 And when you've toasted Townshend and his friends,
 —No more—your beverage then politely ends.
 And now, my belov'd votary, beware,
 Nor swell with awkward pomp your bill of fare.
 Your guests with delicacy eat at home,
 To soil on unbought food to you they come.

And, were you not so good a writer,
 I should present you with a mitre.
 Write worse, then, if you can—be wise—
 Believe me, 'tis the way to rise.

Let Bella drudge, at plainest boil'd and roast ;
 No inconnu's must Smedley's table boast.
 No cheap-bought eatable, by art made dear :
 None bought at cent. per cent. for being rare.
 Gulio consumes a wealthy hind's estate,
 In the vile service of one little plate.
 Your garden teems with every wholesome plant,
 Fowl fatten'd to the full you never want.
 The wilder kind in flocks around you fly ;
 They court your skill, and seek by art to die.
 The full grown oxen, or the steery kind,
 We nowhere better palated can find ;
 And for the humbler grazier of the fields,
 No Bansted Downs a sweeter morsel yields.
 More I forbid—But if more can be due yet,
 It must a stout plumb-pudding be with suet.
 This only with your humble cottage suits ;
 Be of a piece, aim not at costly fruits ;
 At Gallic birds, or fish at Hamburgh bought,
 On wines from Pharian shores thro' tempests brought.
 Let not the Rhine's, or Danube's vintage flow,
 Where scarce as yet e'en Irish apples grow :
 Excel in nut-brown ale : nor want the aid
 Of liquids subtile, by the limbeck made.
 When appetite, enkeen'd by rural air,
 Of sturdy joints has left the bones as bare,
 As little Noll Long's Oliverian coat,
 Or Pratt the treasury : not one single groat.
 The cool refreshing fluid, I allow,
 Which graceful trees, from every loaded bough,
 Aided, Pomona, by thy skill and care,
 Along the Wye, afford each fruitful year.
 Nor ever wanting be a cheerful store
 Of wines, sent hither from the Gallic shore :
 Store! of each colour, which are seen to grace,
 The blushing beauties of Miss Lambert's face.
 The white full-tasted be and dry : the red,
 Silky and full : the grape of either, bred,
 The former, where the silver Loire flows ;
 The latter round the Châlean, near Bourdeaux :
 And if the tendre of your guests you'd touch,
 Conclude with Burgundy, pour faire bonne bouche.
 Roomy and neat's your house, your linen good,
 Then cheery be your heart and clean your food,
 Be Grafton carv'd on every door and tree ;
 Grafton's my care, for he took care of me.

Talk not of making of thy nest :
Ah ! never lay thy head to rest !
That head so well with wisdom fraught,
That writes without the toil of thought !
While others rack their busy brains,
You are not in the least at pains.
Down to your dean'ry new repair,
And build a castle in the air.
I'm sure a man of your fine sense
Can do it with a small expence.
There your dear spouse and you together
May breathe your bellies full of ether,
When lady Luna is your neighbour,
She'll help your wife when she's in labour ;
Well skill'd in midwife artifices,
For she herself oft falls in pieces.
There you shall see a raree show
Will make you scorn this world below,
When you behold the milky-way,
As white as snow, as bright as day ;
The glittering constellations roll
About the grinding arctic pole ;
The lovely tingling in your ears,
Wrought by the music of the spheres—
Your spouse shall then no longer hector,
You need not fear a curtain-lecture ;
Nor shall she think that she is undone
For quitting her beloved London.
When she's exalted in the skies,
She'll never think of mutton-pies ;
When you're advanced above Dean Viz,
You'll never think of Goody Griz ;
But ever, ever live at ease,
And strive, and strive your wife to please ;
In her you'll centre all your joys,
And get ten thousand girls and boys :

Ten thousand girls and boys you'll get,
 And they like stars shall rise and set.
 While you and spouse, transform'd, shall soon
 Be a new sun and a new moon :
 Nor shall you strive your horns to hide,
 For then your horns shall be your pride.

PARODY

ON A CHARACTER OF DEAN SMEDLEY,

WRITTEN IN LATIN BY HIMSELF. *

THE very reverend Dean Smedley,
 Of dulness, pride, conceit, a medley,
 Was equally allow'd to shine
 As poet, scholar, and divine ;

* INSCRIPTION,

BY DEAN SMEDLEY, 1729.

Reverendus Decanus, JONATHAN SMEDLEY,
 Theologia instructus, in Poesi exercitatus,
 Politioribus excultus literis ;
 Parce pius, impius minime ;
 Veritatis Indagator, Libertatis Assertor ;
 Subsannatus multis, fastiditus quibusdam,
 Exoptatus plurimis, omnibus amicus,
 Auctor hujus sententiæ, PATRES SUNT VETULÆ.
 Per laudem et vituperium, per famam atque infamiam ;
 Utramque fortunam, variosque expertus casus,

With godliness could well dispense,
 Would be a rake, but wanted sense ;
 Would strictly after Truth inquire,
 Because he dreaded to come nigh her.
 For Liberty no champion bolder,
 He hated bailiffs at his shoulder.
 To half the world a standing jest,
 A perfect nuisance to the rest ;
 From many (and we may believe him)
 Had the best wishes they could give him.
 To all mankind a constant friend,
 Provided they had cash to lend.
 One thing he did before he went hence,
 He left us a laconic sentence,
 By cutting of his phrase, and trimming;
 To prove that bishops were old women.
 Poor Envy durst not show her phiz,
 She was so terrified at his.
 He waded, without any shame,
 Through thick and thin to get a name,
 Tried every sharpening trick for bread,
 And after all he seldom sped.
 When Fortune favour'd, he was nice ;
 He never once would cog the dice :
 But, if she turn'd against his play,
 He knew to stop à quatre trois.

Mente sana, sano corpore, volens, lætusque,
 Lustris plus quam xi numeratis,
 Ad rem familiarem restaurandam augendamque,
 Et ad Evangelium Indos inter Orientales prædicandum,
Grevæ, idibus Februarii, navem ascendens,
 Arcemque Sancti petens Georgii, vernale per æquinoxium,
 Anno Æræ Christianæ MDCCXXVIII,
 Transfretavit,
 Fata vocant—revocentque precamur.

Now sound in mind, and sound in corpus,
(Says he) though swell'd like any porpoise,
He hies from hence at forty-four
(But by his leave he sinks a score)
To the East Indies, there to cheat,
Till he can purchase an estate ;
Where, after he has fill'd his chest,
He'll mount his tub, and preach his best,
And plainly prove, by dint of text,
This world is his, and theirs the next.
Lest that the reader should not know
The bank where last he set his toe,
'Twas Greenwich. There he took a ship,
And gave his creditors the slip.
But lest chronology should vary,
Upon the ides of February,
In seventeen hundred eight-and-twenty,
To Fort St George a pedlar went he.
Ye Fates, when all he gets is spent,
RETURN HIM BEGGAR AS HE WENT !

POEMS,

ADDRESSED TO

VANESSA AND STELLA.

CADENUS AND VANESSA.*

WRITTEN AT WINDSOR, 1713.

THE shepherds and the nymphs were seen
 Pleading before the Cyprian queen:
 The counsel for the fair began,
 Accusing the false creature Man.
 The brief with weighty crimes was charg'd,
 On which the pleader much enlarg'd ;
 That Cupid now has lost his art,
 Or blunts the point of every dart ;—
 His altar now no longer smokes,
 His mother's aid no youth invokes :
 This tempts freethinkers to refine,
 And bring in doubt their powers divine ;
 Now love is dwindled to intrigue,
 And marriage grown a money league ;
 Which crimes aforesaid (with her leave)
 Were (as he humbly did conceive)
 Against our sovereign lady's peace,
 Against the statute in that case,
 Against her dignity and crown ;
 Then pray'd an answer, and sat down.

* This is thought to be one of Dr Swift's correctest pieces. Its chief merit, indeed, is the elegant ease with which a story, but ill-conceived in itself, is told.—GOLDSMITH.

Miss Vanhomrigh, daughter to Mr Bartholomew Vanhomrigh, a Dutch merchant in Dublin. Her mother was daughter and sole heiress of Commissioner Stone.—F.

The nymphs with scorn beheld their foes :
When the defendant's counsel rose,
And, what no lawyer ever lack'd,
With impudence own'd all the fact ;
But, what the gentlest heart would vex,
Laid all the fault on t'other sex.
That modern love is no such thing
As what those ancient poets sing ;
A fire celestial, chaste, refin'd,
Conceiv'd and kindled in the mind ;
Which, having found an equal flame,
Unites, and both become the same,
In different breasts together burn,
Together both to ashes turn.
But women now feel no such fire,
And only know the gross desire.
Their passions move in lower spheres,
Where'er caprice or folly steers,
A dog, a parrot, or an ape,
Or some worse brute in human shape,
Engross the fancies of the fair,
The few soft moments they can spare,
From visits to receive and pay ;
From scandal, politics, and play ;
From fans, and flounces, and brocades,
From equipage and park parades,
From all the thousand female toys,
From every trifle that employs
The out or inside of their heads,
Between their toilets and their beds.

In a dull stream, which moving slow,
You hardly see the current flow ;
If a small breeze obstruct the course,
It whirls about, for want of force,
And in its narrow circle gathers
Nothing but chaff, and straws, and feathers.

The current of a female mind
Stops thus, and turns with every wind ;
Thus whirling round together draws
Fools, fops, and rakes, for chaff and straws.
Hence we conclude, no women's hearts
Are won by virtue, wit, and parts :
Nor are the men of sense to blame,
For breasts incapable of flame ;
The fault must on the nymphs be plac'd,
Grown so corrupted in their taste.

The pleader having spoke his best,
Had witness ready to attest,
Who fairly could on oath depose,
When questions on the fact arose,
That every article was true ;
Nor further those deponents knew :
Therefore he humbly would insist,
The bill might be with costs dismiss'd.
The cause appear'd with so much weight,
That Venus, from her judgment seat,
Desir'd them not to talk so loud,
Else she must interpose a cloud :
For if the heavenly folks should know
These pleadings in the courts below,
That mortals here disdain to love,
She ne'er could show her face above ;
For gods, their betters, are too wise
To value that which men despise.
And then, said she, my son and I
Must stroll in air, 'twixt land and sky ;
Or else, shut out from heaven and earth,
Fly to the sea, my place of birth :
There live with daggled mermaids pent,
And keep on fish perpetual Lent.

But, since the case appear'd so nice,
She thought it best to take advice.

The Muses, by the king's permission,
Though foes to love, attend the session,
And on the right hand took their places
In order; on the left, the Graces:
To whom she might her doubts propose
On all emergencies that rose.

The Muses oft were seen to frown;
The Graces half asham'd look down;
And 'twas observ'd, there were but few
Of either sex among the crew,
Whom she or her assessors knew.

The goddess soon began to see,
Things were not ripe for a decree;
And said, she must consult her books,
The lovers' Fletas, Bractons, Cokes.
First to a dapper clerk she beckon'd
To turn to Ovid, book the second;
She then referr'd them to a place
In Virgil, vide Dido's case:

As for Tibullus's reports,
They never pass'd for law in courts:
For Cowley's briefs, and pleas of Waller,
Still their authority was smaller.

There was on both sides much to say:
She'd hear the cause another day,
And so she did; and then a third
She heard it—there she kept her word:
But, with rejoinders or replies,
Long bills, and answers stuff'd with lies,
Demur, imparlance, and essoign,
The parties ne'er could issue join:
For sixteen years the cause was spun,
And then stood where it first begun.

Now, gentle Clio, sing, or say
What Venus meant by this delay?

The goddess much perplex'd in mind
To see her empire thus declin'd;
When first this grand debate arose,
Above her wisdom to compose,
Conceiv'd a project in her head
To work her ends; which, if it sped,
Would show the merits of the cause
Far better than consulting laws.

In a glad hour Lucina's aid
Produc'd on earth a wond'rous maid,
On whom the Queen of Love was bent,
To try a new experiment.
She threw her law books on the shelf,
And thus debated with herself.

Since men allege, they ne'er can find
Those beauties in a female mind,
Which raise a flame that will endure
For ever uncorrupt and pure:
If 'tis with reason they complain,
This infant shall restore my reign.
I'll search where every virtue dwells,
From courts inclusive down to cells:
What preachers talk, or sages write;
These will I gather and unite,
And represent them to mankind
Collected in that infant's mind.

This said, she plucks in Heaven's high bowers
A sprig of amaranthine flowers.
In nectar thrice infuses bays,
Three times refin'd in Titan's rays;
Then calls the Graces to her aid,
And sprinkles thrice the newborn maid:
From whence the tender skin assumes
A sweetness above all perfumes:
From whence a cleanliness remains,
Incapable of outward stains:

From whence that decency of mind,
 So lovely in the female kind,
 Where not one careless thought intrudes ;
 Less modest than the speech of prudes ;
 Where never blush was call'd in aid,
 That spurious virtue in a maid,
 A virtue but at second-hand ;
 They blush because they understand.

The Graces next would act their part,
 And show'd but little of their art ;
 Their work was half already done,
 The child with native beauty shone ;
 The outward form no help requir'd :
 Each, breathing on her thrice, inspir'd,
 That gentle, soft, engaging air,
 Which in old times adorn'd the fair :
 And said, " Vanessa be the name
 " By which thou shalt be known to fame :
 " Vanessa, by the gods enroll'd :
 " Her name on earth shall not be told."

But still the work was not complete ;
 When Venus thought on a deceit.
 Drawn by her doves, away she flies,
 And finds out Pallas in the skies.
 Dear Pallas, I have been this morn
 To see a lovely infant born ;
 A boy in yonder isle below,
 So like my own without his bow,
 By beauty could your heart be won,
 You'd swear it is Apollo's son :
 But it shall ne'er be said, a child
 So hopeful has by me been spoil'd :
 I have enough besides to spare,
 And give him wholly to your care.

Wisdom's above suspecting wiles :
 The Queen of Learning gravely smiles.

Down from Olympus comes with joy,
Mistakes Vanessa for a boy ;
Then sows within her tender mind
Seeds long unknown to womankind ;
For manly bosoms chiefly fit,
The seeds of knowledge, judgment, wit.
Her soul was suddenly endued
With justice, truth, and fortitude ;
With honour, which no breath can stain,
Which malice must attack in vain ;
With open heart and bounteous hand,
But Pallas here was at a stand ;
She knew, in our degenerate days,
Bare virtue could not live on praise ;
That meat must be with money bought :
She therefore, upon second thought,
Infus'd, yet as it were by stealth,
Some small regard for state and wealth ;
Of which, as she grew up, there staid
A tincture in the prudent maid :
She manag'd her estate with care,
Yet lik'd three footmen to her chair.
But, lest he should neglect his studies
Like a young heir, the thrifty goddess
(For fear young master should be spoil'd)
Would use him like a younger child ;
And, after long computing, found
'T would come to just five thousand pound,
The Queen of Love was pleas'd, and proud,
To see Vanessa thus endow'd :
She doubted not but such a dame
Through every breast would dart a flame ;
That every rich and lordly swain
With pride would drag about her chain ;
That scholars would forsake their books,
To study bright Vanessa's looks ;

As she advanc'd, that womankind
 Would by her model form their mind,
 And all their conduct would be tried
 By her, as an unerring guide ;
 Offending daughters oft would hear
 Vanessa's praise rung in their ear :
 Miss Betty, when she does a fault,
 Lets fall her knife, or spills the salt,
 Will thus be by her mother chid,
 " 'Tis what Vanessa never did !"
 Thus by the nymphs and swains ador'd,
 My power shall be again restor'd,
 And happy lovers bless my reign—
 So Venus hop'd, but hop'd in vain.

For when in time the Martial Maid
 Found out the trick that Venus play'd,
 She shakes her helm, she knits her brows,
 And, fir'd with indignation, vows,
 To-morrow, ere the setting sun,
 She'd all undo that she had done.

But in the poets we may find
 A wholesome law, time out of mind,
 Had been confirm'd by Fate's decree,
 That gods, of whatso'er degree,
 Resume not what themselves have given,
 Or any brother god in Heaven :
 Which keeps the peace among the gods,
 Or they must always be at odds :
 And Pallas, if she broke the laws,
 Must yield her foe the stronger cause ;
 A shame to one so much ador'd
 For wisdom at Jove's council board.
 Besides, she fear'd the Queen of Love
 Would meet with better friends above.
 And though she must with grief reflect,
 To see a mortal virgin deck'd

With graces hitherto unknown
 To female breasts, except her own :
 Yet she would act as best became
 A goddess of unspotted fame.
 She knew, by augury divine,
 Venus would fail in her design :
 She studied well the point, and found
 Her foe's conclusions were not sound,
 From premises erroneous brought,
 And therefore the deduction's naught,
 And must have contrary effects,
 To what her treacherous foe expects.

In proper season Pallas meets
 The Queen of Love, whom thus she greets,
 (For gods, we are by Homer told,
 Can in celestial language scold)
 Perfidious goddess ! but in vain
 You form'd this project in your brain ;
 A project for your talents fit,
 With much deceit and little wit.
 Thou hast, as thou shalt quickly see,
 Deceiv'd thyself, instead of me ;
 For how can heavenly wisdom prove
 An instrument to earthly love ?
 Know'st thou not yet, that men commence
 Thy votaries for want of sense ?
 Nor shall Vanessa be the theme
 To manage thy abortive scheme :
 She'll prove the greatest of thy foes ;
 And yet I scorn to interpose,
 But, using neither skill nor force,
 Leave all things to their natural course.

The goddess thus pronounc'd her doom :
 When, lo ! Vanessa in her bloom
 Advanc'd, like Atalanta's star,
 But rarely seen, and seen from far :

In a new world with caution stept,
 Watch'd all the company she kept,
 Well knowing, from the books she read,
 What dangerous paths young virgins tread :
 Would seldom at the Park appear,
 Nor saw the playhouse twice a-year ;
 Yet, not incurious, was inclin'd
 To know the converse of mankind.

First issued from perfumer's shops,
 A crowd of fashionable fops :
 They ask'd her how she lik'd the play ;
 Then told the tattle of the day ;
 A duel fought last night at two,
 About a lady—you know who ;
 Mention'd a new Italian, come
 Either from Muscovy or Rome ;
 Gave hints of who and who's together ;
 Then fell to talking of the weather ;
 Last night was so extremely fine,
 The ladies walk'd till after nine ;
 Then, in soft voice and speech absurd,
 With nonsense every second word,
 With fustian from exploded plays,
 They celebrate her beauty's praise ;
 Run o'er their cant of stupid lies,
 And tell the murders of her eyes.

With silent scorn Vanessa sat,
 Scarce listening to their idle chat ;
 Further than sometimes by a frown,
 When they grew pert, to pull them down.
 At last she spitefully was bent
 To try their wisdom's full extent ;
 And said, she valu'd nothing less
 Than titles, figure, shape, and dress ;
 That merit should be chiefly plac'd
 In judgment, knowledge, wit, and taste ;

And these, she offer'd to dispute,
Alone distinguish'd man from brute :
That present times have no pretence
To virtue, in the noble sense
By Greeks and Romans understood,
To perish for our country's good.
She nam'd the ancient heroes round,
Explain'd for what they were renown'd ;
Then spoke with censure or applause
Of foreign customs, rites, and laws ;
Through nature and through art she rang'd,
And gracefully her subject chang'd ;
In vain ! her hearers had no share
In all she spoke, except to stare.
Their judgment was, upon the whole,
—That lady is the dullest soul !—
Then tapt their forehead in a jeer,
As who should say—She wants it here !
She may be handsome, young, and rich,
But none will burn her for a witch !

A party next of glittering dames.
From round the purlieus of St James,
Came early, out of pure good will,
To see the girl in dishabille.
Their clamour, 'lighting from their chairs,
Grew louder all the way up stairs ;
At entrance loudest, where they found
The room with volumes litter'd round.
Vanessa held Montaigne, and read,
While Mrs Susan comb'd her head.
They call'd for tea and chocolate,
And fell into their usual chat,
Discoursing with important face,
On ribands, fans, and gloves, and lace ;
Show'd patterns just from India brought,
And gravely ask'd her what she thought,

Whether the red or green were best,
 And what they cost? Vanessa guess'd,
 As came into her fancy first;
 Nam'd half the rates, and lik'd the worst.
 To scandal next—What awkward thing
 Was that last Sunday in the ring?
 I'm sorry Mopsa breaks so fast:
 I said her face would never last.
 Corinna, with that youthful air,
 Is thirty, and a bit to spare:
 Her fondness for a certain earl
 Began when I was but a girl!
 Phillis, who but a month ago
 Was married to the Tunbridge beau,
 I saw coquetting t'other night
 In public with that odious knight!
 They rally'd next Vanessa's dress:
 That gown was made for old Queen Bess.
 Dear madam, let me see your head:
 Don't you intend to put on red?
 A petticoat without a hoop!
 Sure, you are not asham'd to stoop!
 With handsome garters at your knees,
 No matter what a fellow sees.
 Fill'd with disdain, with rage inflam'd,
 Both of herself and sex asham'd,
 The nymph stood silent out of spite,
 Nor would vouchsafe to set them right.
 Away the fair detractors went,
 And gave by turns their censures vent.
 She's not so handsome in my eyes:
 For wit, I wonder where it lies!
 She's fair and clean, and that's the most:
 But why proclaim her for a toast?
 A baby face; no life, no airs,
 But what she learn'd at country fairs;

Scarce knows what difference is between Rich Flanders lace and Colberteem.
I'll undertake, my little Nancy
In flounces has a better fancy ;
With all her wit, I would not ask
Her judgment how to buy a mask.
We begg'd her but to patch her face,
She never hit one proper place ;
Which every girl at five years old
Can do as soon as she is told.

I own, that out-of-fashion stuff
Becomes the creature well enough.
The girl might pass, if we could get her
To know the world a little better.
(To know the world! a modern phrase
For visits, ombre, balls, and plays.)

Thus, to the world's perpetual shame,
The Queen of Beauty lost her aim ;
Too late with grief she understood,
Pallas had done more harm than good ;
For great examples are but vain,
Where ignorance begets disdain.
Both sexes, arm'd with guilt and spite,
Against Vanessa's power unite :
To copy her few nymphs aspir'd ;
Her virtues fewer swains admir'd.
So stars, beyond a certain height,
Give mortals neither heat nor light.

Yet some of either sex, endow'd
With gifts superior to the crowd,
With virtue, knowledge, taste, and wit,
She condescended to admit :
With pleasing arts she could reduce Men's talents to their proper use ;
And with address each genius held
To that wherein it most excell'd ;

Thus, making others' wisdom known,
Could please them, and improve her own.
A modest youth said something new ;
She plac'd it in the strongest view.
All humble worth she strove to raise,
Would not be prais'd, yet lov'd to praise.
The learned met with free approach,
Although they came not in a coach :
Some clergy too she would allow,
Nor quarrell'd at their awkward bow ;
But this was for Cadenus' sake,
A gownman of a different make ;
Whom Pallas once, Vanessa's tutor,
Had fix'd on for her coadjutor.

But Cupid, full of mischief, longs
To vindicate his mother's wrongs.
On Pallas all attempts are vain :
One way he knows to give her pain ;
Vows on Vanessa's heart to take
Due vengeance, for her patron's sake ;
Those early seeds by Venus sown,
In spite of Pallas now were grown ;
And Cupid hop'd they would improve
By time, and ripen into love.
The boy made use of all his craft,
In vain discharging many a shaft,
Pointed at colonels, lords, and beaux :
Cadenus warded off the blows ;
For, placing still some book betwixt,
The darts were in the cover fix'd,
Or, often blunted and recoil'd,
On Plutarch's Morals struck, were spoil'd.

The Queen of Wisdom could foresee,
But not prevent, the Fates' decree :
And human caution tries in vain
To break that adamant chain.

Vanessa, though by Pallas taught,
By Love invulnerable thought,
Searching in books for wisdom's aid,
Was, in the very search, betray'd.

Cupid, though all his darts were lost,
Yet still resolv'd to spare no cost :
He could not answer to his fame
The triumphs of that stubborn dame,
A nymph so hard to be subdued,
Who neither was coquette nor prude.
I find, said he, she wants a doctor,
Both to adore her, and instruct her :
I'll give her what she most admires,
Among these venerable sires,
Cadenus is a subject fit,
Grown old in politics and wit,
Caress'd by ministers of state,
Of half mankind the dread and hate.
Whate'er vexations love attend,
She need no rivals apprehend.
He sex, with universal voice,
Must laugh at her capricious choice.

Cadenus many things had writ :
Vanessa much esteem'd his wit,
And call'd for his poetic works :
Meantime the boy in secret lurks ;
And, while the book was in her hand,
The urchin from his private stand
Took aim, and shot with all his strength
A dart of such prodigious length,
It pierc'd the feeble volume through,
And deep transfix'd her bosom too.
Some lines, more moving than the rest,
Stuck to the point that pierc'd her breast,
And, borne directly to the heart,
With pains unknown increas'd her smart.

Vanessa, not in years a score,
Dreams of a gown of forty-four;
Imaginary charms can find
In eyes with reading almost blind:
Cadenus now no more appears
Declin'd in health, advanc'd in years.
She fancies music in his tongue;
Nor further looks, but thinks him young,
What mariner is not afraid
To venture in a ship decay'd?
What planter will attempt to yoke
A sapling with a falling oak?
As years increase, she brighter shines;
Cadenus with each day declines:
And he must fall a prey to time,
While she continues in her prime.
Cadenus, common forms apart,
In every scene had kept his heart;
Had sigh'd and languish'd, vow'd and writ,
For pastime, or to show his wit,
But books, and time, and state affairs,
Had spoil'd his fashionable airs:
He now could praise, esteem, approve,
But understood not what was love.
His conduct might have made him styl'd
A father, and the nymph his child.
That innocent delight he took
To see the virgin mind her book,
Was but the master's secret joy
In school to hear the finest boy.
Her knowledge with her fancy grew;
She hourly press'd for something new;
Ideas came into her mind
So fast, his lessons lagg'd behind;
She reason'd, without plodding long,
Nor ever gave her judgment wrong.

But now a sudden change was wrought :
She minds no longer what he taught.
Cadenus was amaz'd, to find
Such marks of a distracted mind :
For, though she seem'd to listen more
To all he spoke, than e'er before,
He found her thoughts would absent range,
Yet guess'd not whence could spring the change.
And first he modestly conjectures
His pupil might be tir'd with lectures ;
Which help'd to mortify his pride,
Yet gave him not the heart to chide :
But, in a mild dejected strain,
At last he ventur'd to complain :
Said, she should be no longer teaz'd,
Might have her freedom when she pleas'd :
Was now convinc'd he acted wrong
To hide her from the world so long,
And in dull studies to engage
One of her tender sex and age :
That every nymph with envy own'd,
How she might shine in the grande monde ;
And every shepherd was undone
To see her cloister'd like a nun.
This was a visionary scheme :
He wak'd, and found it but a dream ;
A project far above his skill ;
For nature must be nature still.
If he were bolder than became
A scholar to a courtly dame,
She might excuse a man of letters :
Thus tutors often treat their betters :
And, since his talk offensive grew,
He came to take his last adieu.
Vanessa, fill'd with just disdain,
Would still her dignity maintain,

Instructed from her early years
To scorn the art of female tears.

Had he employ'd his time so long
To teach her what was right and wrong ;
Yet could such notions entertain
That all his lectures were in vain ?
She own'd the wandering of her thoughts ;
But he must answer for her faults.
She well remember'd, to her cost,
That all his lessons were not lost.
Two maxims she could still produce,
And sad experience taught their use ;
That virtue, pleas'd by being shown,
Knows nothing which it dares not own ;
Can make us without fear disclose
Our inmost secrets to our foes :
That common forms were not design'd
Directors to a noble mind.

Now, said the nymph, to let you see
My actions with your rules agree ;
That I can vulgar forms despise,
And have no secrets to disguise ;
I knew, by what you said and writ,
How dangerous things were men of wit ;
You caution'd me against their charms,
But never gave me equal arms ;
Your lessons found the weakest part,
Aim'd at the head, but reach'd the heart.

Cadenus felt within him rise
Shame, disappointment, guilt, surprise.
He knew not how to reconcile
Such language with her usual style :
And yet her words were so exprest,
He could not hope she spoke in jest.
His thought had wholly been confin'd
To form and cultivate her mind.

He hardly knew, till he was told,
Whether the nymph were young or old ;
Had met her in a public place,
Without distinguishing her face :
Much less could his declining age
Vanessa's earliest thoughts engage ;
And, if her youth indifference met,
His person must contempt beget :
Or grant her passion be sincere,
How shall his innocence be clear ?
Appearances were all so strong,
The world must think him in the wrong :
Would say, he made a treacherous use
Of wit, to flatter and seduce :
The town would swear, he had betray'd
By magic spells, the harmless maid :
And every beau would have his jokes,
That scholars were like other folks ;
And, when Platonic flights were over,
The tutor turn'd a mortal lover !
So tender of the young and fair !
It show'd a true paternal care—
Five thousand guineas in her purse !
The doctor might have fancy'd worse.—

Hardly at length he silence broke,
And falter'd every word he spoke ;
Interpreting her complaisance,
Just as a man sans consequence.
She rallied well, he always knew :
Her manner now was something new ;
And what she spoke was in an air
As serious as a tragic player.
But those who aim at ridicule
Should fix upon some certain rule,
Which fairly hints they are in jest,
Else he must enter his protest :

For, let a man be ne'er so wise,
He may be caught with sober lies ;
A science which he never taught,
And, to be free, was dearly bought ;
For, take it in its proper light,
'Tis just what coxcombs call a bite.

But, not to dwell on things minute,
Vanessa finish'd the dispute ;
Brought weighty arguments to prove
That reason was her guide in love.
She thought he had himself describ'd,
His doctrines when she first imbib'd ;
What he had planted, now was grown ;
His virtues she might call her own ;
As he approves, as he dislikes,
Love or contempt her fancy strikes.
Self-love, in nature rooted fast,
Attends us first, and leaves us last :
Why she likes him, admire not at her ;
She loves herself, and that's the matter.
How was her tutor wont to praise
The geniuses of ancient days !
(Those authors he so oft had nam'd,
For learning, wit, and wisdom, fam'd)
Was struck with love, esteem, and awe,
For persons whom he never saw.
Suppose Cadenus flourish'd then,
He must adore such godlike men.
If one short volume could comprise
All that was witty, learn'd, and wise,
How would it be esteem'd and read,
Although the writer long were dead !
If such an author were alive,
How all would for his friendship strive,
And come in crowds to see his face !
And this she takes to be her case.

Cadenus answers every end,
 The book, the author, and the friend;
 The utmost her desires will reach,
 Is but to learn what he can teach:
 His converse is a system fit
 Alone to fill up all her wit:
 While every passion of her mind
 In him is cent'ring and confin'd.

Love can with speech inspire a mute,
 And taught Vanessa to dispute.
 This topic, never touch'd before,
 Display'd her eloquence the more:
 Her knowledge, with such pains acquir'd,
 By this new passion grew inspir'd;
 Through this she made all objects pass,
 Which gave a tincture o'er the mass;
 As rivers, though they bend and twine,
 Still to the sea their course incline;
 Or, as philosophers, who find
 Some favourite system to their mind;
 In every point to make it fit,
 Will force all nature to submit.

Cadenus, who could ne'er suspect
 His lessons would have such effect,
 Or be so artfully apply'd,
 Insensibly came on her side.
 It was an unforeseen event;
 Things took a turn he never meant.
 Whoe'er excels in what we prize,
 Appears a hero in our eyes:
 Each girl, when pleas'd with what is taught,
 Will have the teacher in her thought.
 When miss delights in her spinnet,
 A fiddler may a fortune get;
 A blockhead, with melodious voice,
 In boarding-schools may have his choice;

And oft the dancing-master's art
Climbs from the toe to touch the heart.
In learning let a nymph delight,
The pedant gets a mistress by't.
Cadenus, to his grief and shame,
Could scarce oppose Vanessa's flame;
And, though her arguments were strong,
At least could hardly wish them wrong.
Howe'er it came, he could not tell,
But sure she never talk'd so well.
His pride began to interpose;
Preferr'd before a crowd of beaux!
So bright a nymph to come unsought!
Such wonder by his merit wrought!
'Tis merit must with her prevail!
He never knew her judgment fail!
She noted all she ever read!
And had a most discerning head!
'Tis an old maxim in the schools,
That flattery's the food of fools;
Yet now and then your men of wit
Will condescend to take a bit.
So, when Cadenus could not hide,
He chose to justify his pride;
Construing the passion he had shown,
Much to her praise, more to his own.
Nature in him had merit plac'd,
In her a most judicious taste.
Love, hitherto a transient guest,
Ne'er held possession of his breast;
So long attending at the gate,
Disdain'd to enter in so late.
Love why do we one passion call,
When 'tis a compound of them all?
Where hot and cold, where sharp and sweet,
In all their equipages meet;

Where pleasures mix'd with pains appear,
Sorrow with joy, and hope with fear ;
Wherein his dignity and age
Forbid Cadenus to engage.

But friendship, in its greatest height,
A constant, rational delight,
On virtue's basis fix'd to last,
When love allurements long are past,
Which gently warms, but cannot burn,
He gladly offers in return ;
His want of passion will redeem
With gratitude, respect, esteem :
With that devotion we bestow,
When goddesses appear below.

While thus Cadenus entertains
Vanessa in exalted strains,
The nymph in sober words entreats
A truce with all sublime conceits :
For why such raptures, flights, and fancies,
To her who durst not read romances ?
In lofty style to make replies.
Which he had taught her to despise ?
But when her tutor will affect
Devotion, duty, and respect,
He fairly abdicates the throne :
The government is now her own ;
He has a forfeiture incurr'd ;
She vows to take him at his word,
And hopes he will not think it strange,
If both should now their stations change ;
The nymph will have her turn to be
The tutor ; and the pupil, he :
Though she already can discern
Her scholar is not apt to learn ;
Or wants capacity to reach
The science she designs to teach ;

Wherein his genius was below
 The skill of every common beau,
 Who, though he cannot spell, is wise
 Enough to read a lady's eyes,
 And will each accidental glance
 Interpret for a kind advance.

But what success Vanessa met
 Is to the world a secret yet,
 Whether the nymph, to please her swain,
 Talks in a high romantic strain ;
 Or whether he at last descends
 To act with less seraphic ends ;
 Or, to compound the business, whether
 They temper love and books together ;
 Must never to mankind be told,
 Nor shall the conscious Muse unfold.

Meantime the mournful Queen of Love
 Led but a weary life above.
 She ventures now to leave the skies,
 Grown by Vanessa's conduct wise :
 For, though by one perverse event
 Pallas had cross'd her first intent ;
 Though her design was not obtain'd ;
 Yet had she much experience gain'd,
 And, by the project vainly tried,
 Could better now the cause decide.
 She gave due notice, that both parties,
Coram Regina, prox' die Martis,
 Should at their peril, without fail,
 Come and appear, and save their bail,
 All met ; and, silence thrice proclaim'd,
 One lawyer to each side was nam'd.
 The judge discover'd in her face
 Resentments for her late disgrace :
 And, full of anger, shame, and grief ;
 Directed them to mind their brief ;

Nor spend their time to show their reading :
She'd have a summary proceeding.
She gather'd under every head
The sum of what each lawyer said,
Gave her own reasons last, and then
Decreed the cause against the men.

But in a weighty case like this,
To show she did not judge amiss,
Which evil tongues might else report,
She made a speech in open court ;
Wherein she grievously complains,
“ How she was cheated by the swains ;
On whose petition (humbly shewing,
That women were not worth the wooing,
And that, unless the sex would mend,
The race of lovers soon must end)—
She was at Lord knows what expence
To form a nymph of wit and sense,
A model for her sex design'd,
Who never could one lover find.
She saw her favour was misplac'd ;
The fellows had a wretched taste ;
She needs must tell them to their face,
They were a stupid, senseless race ;
And, were she to begin again,
She'd study to reform the men ;
Or add some grains of folly more
To women, than they had before,
To put them on an equal foot ;
And this, or nothing else, would do't.
This might their mutual fancy strike ;
Since every being loves its like.

“ But now, repenting what was done,
She left all business to her son ;
She put the world in his possession,
And let him use it at discretion.”

The crier was order'd to dismiss
 The court, so made his last " O yes !"
 The goddess would no longer wait ;
 But, rising from her chair of state,
 Left all below at six and seven,
 Harness'd her doves, and flew to Heaven.

TO LOVE.*

IN all I wish, how happy should I be,
 Thou grand Deluder, were it not for thee !
 So weak thou art, that fools thy power despise ;
 And yet so strong, thou triumph'st o'er the wise.
 Thy traps are laid with such peculiar art,
 They catch the cautious, let the rash depart.
 Most nets are fill'd by want of thought and care :
 But too much thinking brings us to thy snare ;
 Where, held by thee, in slavery we stay,
 And throw the pleasing part of life away.
 But, what does most my indignation move,
 Discretion ! thou wert ne'er a friend to Love :
 Thy chief delight is to defeat those arts,
 By which he kindles mutual flames in hearts ;
 While the blind loitering God is at his play,
 Thou steal'st his golden pointed darts away :
 Those darts which never fail ; and in their stead
 Convey'st malignant arrows tipt with lead :

* Found in Miss Vanhomrigh's desk, after her death, in the handwriting of Dr Swift.—H.

The heedless God, suspecting no deceits,
 Shoots on, and thinks he has done wond'rous feats ;
 But the poor nymph, who feels her vitals burn,
 And from her shepherd can find no return,
 Laments, and rages at the power divine,
 When, curst Discretion ! all the fault was thine :
 Cupid and Hymen thou hast set at odds,
 And bred such feuds between those kindred gods,
 That Venus cannot reconcile her sons ;
 When one appears, away the other runs.
 The former scales, wherein he us'd to poise
 Love against love, and equal joys with joys,
 Are now fill'd up with avarice and pride,
 Where titles, power, and riches, still subside.
 Then, gentle Venus, to thy father run,
 And tell him, how thy children are undone ;
 Prepare his bolts to give one fatal blow,
 And strike Discretion to the shades below.

A REBUS.

BY VANESSA.

CUT the name of the man* who his mistress denied,
 And let the first of it be only applied
 To join with the prophet † who David did chide ;
 Then say what a horse is that runs very fast ; ‡
 And that which deserves to be first put the last ;

* Jo-seph.

† Nathan.

‡ Swift.

Spell all then, and put them together, to find
 The name and the virtues of him I design'd.
 Like the patriarch in Egypt, he's vers'd in the state;
 Like the prophet in Jewry, he's free with the great;
 Like a racer he flies, to succour with speed,
 When his friends want his aid, or desert is in need.

THE DEAN'S ANSWER.

THE nymph who wrote this in an amorous fit,
 I cannot but envy the pride of her wit,
 Which thus she will venture profusely to throw
 On so mean a design, and a subject so low.
 For mean's her design, and her subject as mean,
 The first but a rebus, the last but a dean.
 A dean's but a parson: and what is a rebus?
 A thing never known to the Muses or Phœbus.
 The corruption of verse; for, when all is done,
 It is but a paraphrase made on a pun.
 But a genius like her's no subject can stifle,
 It shows and discovers itself through a trifle.
 By reading this trifle, I quickly began
 To find her a great wit, but the dean a small man.
 Rich ladies will furnish their garrets with stuff,
 Which others for mantuas would think fine enough:
 So the wit that is lavishly thrown away here,
 Might furnish a second-rate poet a-year.
 Thus much for the verse, we proceed to the next,
 Where the nymph has entirely forsaken her text:
 Her fine panegyrics are quite out of season:
 And what she describes to be merit, is treason:
 The changes which faction has made in the state,
 Have put the dean's politics quite out of date:

Now no one regards what he utters with freedom,
And, should he write pamphlets, no great man would read 'em ;
And, should want or desert stand in need of his aid,
This racer would prove but a dull founder'd jade.

STELLA'S BIRTH-DAY.

MARCH 13, 1718-19.

STELLA this day is thirty-four,
(We sha'n't dispute a year or more)
However, Stella, be not troubled,
Although thy size and years are doubled
Since first I saw thee at sixteen,
The brightest virgin on the green :
So little is thy form declin'd ;
Made up so largely in thy mind.

O, would it please the gods to split
Thy beauty, size, and years, and wit !
No age could furnish out a pair
Of nymphs so graceful, wise, and fair ;
With half the lustre of your eyes,
With half your wit, your years, and size.
And then, before it grew too late,
How should I beg of gentle fate,
(That every nymph might have her swain)
To split my worship too in twain.

STELLA'S BIRTH-DAY. 1719-20.

ALL travellers at first incline
 Where'er they see the fairest sign :
 And if they find the chambers neat,
 And like the liquor and the meat,
 Will call again, and recommend,
 The Angel Inn to every friend.
 What though the painting grows decay'd,
 The house will never lose its trade :
 Nay, though the treacherous tapster, Thomas,
 Hangs a new Angel two doors from us,
 As fine as dauber's hands can make it,
 In hopes that strangers may mistake it,
 We think it both a shame and sin
 To quit the true old Angel Inn.

Now this is Stella's case in fact,
 An angel's face a little crack'd,
 Could poets or could painters fix
 How angels look at thirty-six :
 This drew us in at first to find
 In such a form an angel's mind ;
 And every virtue now supplies
 The fainting rays of Stella's eyes.
 See at her levee crowding swains,
 Whom Stella freely entertains
 With breeding, humour, wit, and sense,
 And puts them but to small expence ;
 Their mind so plentifully fills,
 And makes such reasonable bills,
 So little gets for what she gives,
 We really wonder how she lives !
 And had her stock been less, no doubt
 She must have long ago run out.

Then who can think we'll quit the place,
When Doll hangs out a newer face ?
Or stop and light at Chloe's head,
With scraps and leavings to be fed ?

Then, Chloe, still go on to prate
Of thirty-six and thirty-eight ;
Pursue your trade of scandal-picking,
Your hints, that Stella is no chicken ;
Your innuendoes, when you tell us,
That Stella loves to talk with fellows :
And let me warn you to believe
A truth, for which your soul should grieve ;
That should you live to see the day,
When Stella's locks must all be gray,
When age must print a furrow'd trace
On every feature of her face ;
Though you, and all your senseless tribe,
Could art, or time, or nature bribe,
To make you look like Beauty's Queen,
And hold for ever at fifteen ;
No bloom of youth can ever blind
The cracks and wrinkles of your mind :
All men of sense will pass your door,
And crowd to Stella's at fourscore.

TO STELLA ;

WHO COLLECTED AND TRANSCRIBED HIS POEMS.

1720.

As, when a lofty pile is rais'd,
We never hear the workmen prais'd,

Who bring the lime, or place the stones,
 But all admire Inigo Jones :
 So, if this pile of scatter'd rhymes
 Should be approv'd in aftertimes ;
 If it both pleases and endures,
 The merit and the praise are yours.

Thou, Stella, wert no longer young,
 When first for thee my harp was strung,
 Without one word of Cupid's darts,
 Of killing eyes, or bleeding hearts ;
 With friendship and esteem possest,
 I ne'er admitted Love a guest.

In all the habitudes of life,
 The friend, the mistress, and the wife,
 Variety we still pursue,
 In pleasure seek for something new ;
 Or else, comparing with the rest,
 Take comfort that our own is best ;
 The best we value by the worst,
 As tradesmen show their trash at first ;
 But his pursuits are at an end,
 Whom Stella chooses for a friend.

A poet starving in a garret,
 Conning all topics like a parrot,
 Invokes his Mistress and his Muse,
 And stays at home for want of shoes :
 Should but his Muse descending drop
 A slice of bread and mutton-chop ;
 Or kindly, when his credit's out,
 Surprise him with a pint of stout ;
 Or patch his broken stocking soles ;
 Or send him in a peck of coals ;
 Exalted in his mighty mind,
 He flies and leaves the stars behind ;
 Counts all his labours amply paid,
 Adores her for the timely aid.

Or, should a porter make inquiries
 For Chloe, Sylvia, Phillis, Iris ;
 Be told the lodging, lane, and sign,
 The bowers that hold those nymphs divine ;
 Fair Chloe, would perhaps be found
 With footmen tippling under ground ;
 The charming Sylvia beating flax,
 Her shoulders mark'd with bloody tracks ;
 Bright Phillis mending ragged smocks ;
 And radiant Iris in the pox.
 These are the goddesses enroll'd
 In Curll's collection, new and old,
 Whose scoundrel fathers would not know 'em,
 If they should meet them in a poem.

True poets can depress and raise,
 Are lords of infamy and praise ;
 They are not scurrilous in satire,
 Nor will in panegyric flatter.
 Unjustly poets we asperse ;
 Truth shines the brighter clad in verse,
 And all the fictions they pursue
 Do but insinuate what is true.

Now, should my praises owe their truth,
 To beauty, dress, or paint, or youth,
 What stoics call without our power,
 They could not be ensur'd an hour ;
 'Twere grafting on an annual stock,
 That must our expectation mock,
 And making one luxuriant shoot,
 Die the next year for want of root :
 Before I could my verses bring,
 Perhaps you're quite another thing.

So Mævius, when he drain'd his skull
 To celebrate some suburb trull,
 His similes in order set,
 And every crambo he could get,

Had gone through all the common places
 Worn out by wits, who rhyme on faces ;
 Before he could his poem close,
 The lovely nymph had lost her nose.

Your virtues safely I commend ;
 They on no accidents depend :
 Let malice look with all her eyes,
 She dares not say the poet lies.

Stella, when you these lines transcribe,
 Lest you should take them for a bribe,
 Resolv'd to mortify your pride,
 I'll here expose your weaker side.

Your spirits kindle to a flame,
 Mov'd by the lightest touch of blame ;
 And when a friend in kindness tries
 To show you where your error lies,
 Conviction does but more incense ;
 Perverseness is your whole defence ;
 Truth, judgment, wit, give place to spite,
 Regardless both of wrong and right ;
 Your virtues all suspended wait
 Till time has open'd reason's gate ;
 And, what is worse, your passion bends
 Its force against your nearest friends,
 Which manners, decency, and pride,
 Have taught you from the world to hide ;
 In vain ; for see, your friend has brought
 To public light your only fault ;
 And yet a fault we often find
 Mix'd in a noble generous mind :
 And may compare to Ætna's fire,
 Which, though with trembling, all admire ;
 The heat, that makes the summit glow,
 Enriching all the vales below.
 Those who in warmer climes complain
 From Phœbus' rays they suffer pain,

Must own that pain is largely paid
By generous wines beneath a shade.

Yet, when I find your passions rise,
And anger sparkling in your eyes,
I grieve those spirits should be spent,
For nobler ends by nature meant.
One passion, with a different turn,
Makes wit inflame, or anger burn :
So the sun's heat, with different powers,
Ripens the grape, the liquor sours :
Thus Ajax, when with rage possest
By Pallas breath'd into his breast,
His valour would no more employ,
Which might alone have conquer'd Troy ;
But, blinded by resentment, seeks
For vengeance on his friends the Greeks.

You think this turbulence of blood
From stagnating preserves the flood,
Which, thus fermenting by degrees,
Exalts the spirits, sinks the lees.

Stella, for once you reason wrong ;
For, should this ferment last too long,
By time subsiding, you may find
Nothing but acid left behind ;
From passion you may then be freed,
When peevishness and spleen succeed.
Say, Stella, when you copy next,
Will you keep strictly to the text ?
Dare you let these reproaches stand,
And to your failing set your hand ?
Or, if these lines your anger fire,
Shall they in baser flames expire ?
Whene'er they burn, if burn they must,
They'll prove my accusation just.

TO STELLA.

VISITING ME IN MY SICKNESS. 1720.

PALLAS, observing Stella's wit
Was more than for her sex was fit,
And that her beauty, soon or late,
Might breed confusion in the state,
In high concern for human kind,
Fix'd honour in her infant mind.

But (not in wranglings to engage With such a stupid vicious age)
If honour I would here define.
It answers faith in things divine.
As natural life the body warms,
And, scholars teach, the soul informs ;
So honour animates the whole,
And is the spirit of the soul.

Those numerous virtues, which the tribe
Of tedious moralists describe,
And by such various titles call,
True honour comprehends them all.
Let melancholy rule supreme,
Choler preside, or blood, or phlegm,
It makes no difference in the case,
Nor is complexion honour's place.

But, lest we should for honour take
The drunken quarrels of a rake :
Or think it seated in a scar,
Or on a proud triumphal car ;
Or in the payment of a debt
We lose with sharpers at piquet ;

Or when a whore, in her vocation,
Keeps punctual to an assignation ;
Or that on which his lordship swears,
When vulgar knaves would lose their ears ;
Let Stella's fair example preach
A lesson she alone can teach.

In points of honour to be tried,
All passions must be laid aside :
Ask no advice, but think alone ;
Suppose the question not your own.
How shall I act is not the case ;
But how would Brutus in my place ?
In such a case would Cato bleed ?
And how would Socrates proceed ?

Drive all objections from your mind,
Else you relapse to human kind :
Ambition, avarice, and lust,
A factious rage, and breach of trust,
And flattery tipt with nauseous flier,
And guilty shame, and servile fear,
Envy, and cruelty, and pride,
Will in your tainted heart preside.

Heroes and heroines of old,
By honour only were enroll'd
Among their brethren in the skies,
To which (though late) shall Stella rise.
Ten thousand oaths upon record
Are not so sacred as her word :
The world shall in its atoms end,
Ere Stella can deceive a friend.
By honour seated in her breast
She still determines what is best :
What indignation in her mind
Against enslavers of mankind !
Base kings, and ministers of state,
Eternal objects of her hate !

She thinks that nature ne'er design'd
Courage to man alone confin'd.
Can cowardice her sex adorn,
Which most exposes ours to scorn?
She wonders where the charm appears
In Florimel's affected fears;
For Stella never learn'd the art
At proper times to scream and start;
Nor calls up all the house at night,
And swears she saw a thing in white.
Doll never flies to cut her lace,
Or throw cold water in her face,
Because she heard a sudden drum,
Or found an earwig in a plum.

Her hearers are amaz'd from whence
Proceeds that fund of wit and sense;
Which, though her modesty would shroud,
Breaks like the sun behind a cloud;
While gracefulness its art conceals
And yet through every motion steals.

Say, Stella, was Prometheus blind,
And, forming you, mistook your kind?
No; 'twas for you alone he stole
The fire that forms a manly soul;
Then, to complete it every way,
He moulded it with female clay:
To that you owe the nobler flame,
To this the beauty of your frame.

How would ingratitude delight,
And how would censure glut her spite,
If I should Stella's kindness hide
In silence, or forget with pride!
When on my sickly couch I lay,
Impatient both of night and day,
Lamenting in unmanly strains,
Call'd every power to ease my pains;

Then Stella ran to my relief,
 With cheerful face and inward grief ;
 And, though by Heaven's severe decree
 She suffers hourly more than me,
 No cruel master could require,
 From slaves employ'd for daily hire,
 What Stella, by her friendship warm'd,
 With vigour and delight perform'd :
 My sinking spirits now supplies
 With cordials in her hands and eyes :
 Now with a soft and silent tread
 Unheard she moves about my bed.
 I see her taste each nauseous draught,
 And so obligingly am caught ;
 I bless the hand from whence they came,
 Nor dare distort my face for shame.

Best pattern of true friends ! beware ;
 You pay too dear by far your care,
 If, while your tenderness secures
 My life, it must endanger yours ;
 For such a fool was never found,
 Who pull'd a palace to the ground,
 Only to have the ruins made
 Materials for a house decay'd.

STELLA TO DR SWIFT.

ON HIS BIRTH-DAY, NOV. 30, 1721.

St Patrick's Dean, your country's pride,
 My early and my only guide,

Let me among the rest attend,
 Your pupil and your humble friend,
 To celebrate in female strains
 The day that paid your mother's pains ;
 Descend to take that tribute due
 In gratitude alone to you.

When men began to call me fair,
 You interpos'd your timely care ;
 You early taught me to despise
 The ogling of a coxcomb's eyes ;
 Show'd where my judgment was misplac'd ;
 Refin'd my fancy and my taste.

Behold that beauty just decay'd,
 Invoking art to nature's aid :
 Forsook by her admiring train,
 She spreads her tatter'd nets in vain ;
 Short was her part upon the stage :
 Went smoothly on for half a page ;
 Her bloom was gone, she wanted art,
 As the scene chang'd, to change her part ;
 She, whom no lover could resist,
 Before the second act was hiss'd.
 Such is the fate of female race
 With no endowments but a face ;
 Before the thirtieth year of life,
 A maid forlorn, or hated wife.
 Stella to you, her tutor, owes
 That she has ne'er resembled those :
 Nor was a burden to mankind
 With half her course of years behind.
 You taught how I might youth prolong,
 By knowing what was right and wrong ;
 How from my heart to bring supplies
 Of lustre to my fading eyes ;
 How soon a beauteous maid repairs
 The loss of chang'd or falling hairs ;

How wit and virtue from within
 Send out a smoothness o'er the skin :
 Your lectures could my fancy fix,
 And I can please at thirty-six.
 The sight of Chloe at fifteen
 Coquetting, gives not me the spleen ;
 The idol now of every fool
 Till time shall make their passions cool ;
 Then tumbling down Time's steepy hill,
 While Stella holds her station still.
 O ! turn your precepts into laws,
 Redeem the women's ruin'd cause.
 Retrieve lost empire to our sex,
 That men may bow their rebel necks.

Long be the day that gave you birth
 Sacred to friendship, wit, and mirth ;
 Late dying may you cast a shred
 Of your rich mantle o'er my head ;
 To bear with dignity my sorrow,
 One day alone, then die to-morrow.

TO STELLA,

ON HER BIRTH-DAY, 1721-2.

WHILE, Stella, to your lasting praise
 The Muse her annual tribute pays,
 While I assign myself a task
 Which you expect, but scorn to ask ;
 If I perform this task with pain,
 Let me of partial fate complain ;

You every year the debt enlarge,
 I grow less equal to the charge :
 In you each virtue brighter shines,
 But my poetic vein declines ;
 My harp will soon in vain be strung,
 And all your virtues left unsung.
 For none among the upstart race
 Of poets dare assume my place ;
 Your worth will be to them unknown,
 They must have Stellas of their own ;
 And thus, my stock of wit decay'd,
 I dying leave the debt unpaid,
 Unless Delany, as my heir,
 Will answer for the whole arrear.

ON THE GREAT BURIED BOTTLE.

BY DR DELANY.

AMPHORA, quæ mæstum linquis, lætumque revises
 Arentem dominum, sit tibi terra levis.
 Tu quoque depositum serves, neve opprime, marmor ;
 Amphora non meruit tam pretiosa mori.

EPITAPH,

BY THE SAME.

Hoc tumulata jacet proles Lenæa sepulchro,
 Immortale genus, nec peritura jacet ;
 Quin oritura iterum, matris concreditur alvo ;
 Bis natum referunt te quoque, Bacche Pater.

STELLA'S BIRTH-DAY :

A GREAT BOTTLE OF WINE, LONG BURIED, BEING
THAT DAY DUG UP. 1722-3.

RESOLV'D my annual verse to pay,
By duty bound, on Stella's day,
Furnish'd with paper, pens, and ink,
I gravely sat me down to think :
I bit my nails, and scratch'd my head,
But found my wit and fancy fled :
Or, if with more than usual pain,
A thought came slowly from my brain ;
It cost me Lord knows how much time
To shape it into sense and rhyme :
And, what was yet a greater curse,
Long thinking made my fancy worse.
Forsaken by th' inspiring Nine,
I waited at Apollo's shrine :
I told him what the world would say,
If Stella were unsung to-day :
How I should hide my head for shame,
When both the Jacks and Robin came ;
How Ford would frown, how Jim would leer,
How Sheridan the rogue would sneer,
And swear it does not always follow,
That semel in anno ridet Apollo.
I have assur'd them twenty times,
That Phœbus help'd me in my rhymes ;
Phœbus inspir'd me from above,
And he and I were hand and glove.
But, finding me so dull and dry since,
They'll call it all poetic license ;

And when I brag of aid divine,
Think Eusden's right as good as mine.

Nor do I ask for Stella's sake ;
'Tis my own credit lies at stake :
And Stella will be sung, while I
Can only be a stander by.

Apollo, having thought a little,
Return'd this answer to a tittle.

Though you should live like old Methusalem,
I furnish hints and you shall use all 'em,
You yearly sing as she grows old,
You'd leave her virtues half untold.
But, to say truth, such dulness reigns,
Through the whole set of Irish deans,
I'm daily stunn'd with such a medley
Dean W—d, Dean D—l, and Dean Smedley.

That, let what dean soever come,
My orders are, I'm not at home ;
And if your voice had not been loud,
You must have pass'd among the crowd.

But now, your danger to prevent,
You must apply to Mrs Brent ; *
For she, as priestess, knows the rites
Wherein the god of earth delights.
First, nine ways looking, let her stand
With an old poker in her hand ;
Let her describe a circle round
In Saunders' † cellar on the ground :
A spade let prudent Archy ‡ hold,
And with discretion dig the mould.
Let Stella look with watchful eye,
Rebecca, § Ford, and Grattans by.

* The housekeeper.—F.

‡ The footman.—F.

† The butler.—F.

§ Mrs Dingley.

Behold the bottle, where it lies
 With neck elated toward the skies !
 The god of winds and god of fire
 Did to its wond'rous birth conspire ;
 And Bacchus for the poet's use
 Pour'd in a strong inspiring juice.
 See ! as you raise it from its tomb,
 It drags behind a spacious womb,
 And in the spacious womb contains
 A sovereign medicine for the brains.

You'll find it soon, if fate consents ;
 If not, a thousand Mrs Brents.
 Ten thousand Archys, arm'd with spades,
 May dig in vain to Pluto's shades.

From thence a plenteous draught infuse,
 And boldly then invoke the Muse ;
 But first let Robert * on his knees
 With caution drain it from the lees ;
 The Muse will at your call appear,
 With Stella's praise to crown the year.

STELLA AT WOOD PARK,

A HOUSE OF CHARLES FORD, ESQ. NEAR DUBLIN.

1723.

—“ *Cuicumque nocere volebat,
 Vestimenta debat pretiosa.*”

DON CARLOS, in a merry spite,
 Did Stella to his house invite :

* The valet—F.

He entertain'd her half a year
With generous wines and costly cheer.
Don Carlos made her chief director,
That she might o'er the servants hector.
In half a week the dame grew nice,
Got all things at the highest price :
Now at the table head she sits,
Presented with the nicest bits :
She look'd on partridges with scorn,
Except they tasted of the corn :
A haunch of venison made her sweat,
Unless it had the right fumette.
Don Carlos earnestly would beg,
" Dear Madam, try this pigeon's leg ;"
Was happy, when he could prevail
To make her only touch a quail.
Through candle-light she view'd the wine,
To see that every glass was fine.
At last, grown prouder than the devil
With feeding high and treatment civil,
Don Carlos now began to find
His malice work as he design'd.
The winter sky began to frown :
Poor Stella must pack off to town :
From purling streams and fountains bubbling,
To Liffy's stinking tide in Dublin :
From wholesome exercise and air,
To sossing in an easy chair :
From stomach sharp, and hearty feeding,
To piddle like a lady breeding :
From ruling there the household singly,
To be directed here by Dingley : *

* The constant companion of Stella.—F.

From every day a lordly banquet,
To half a joint, and God be thanked :
From every meal Pontac in plenty,
To half a pint one day in twenty :
From Ford attending at her call,
To visits of — — —
From Ford, who thinks of nothing mean,
To the poor doings of the Dean :
From growing richer with good cheer,
To running out by starving here.

But now arrives the dismal day ;
She must return to Ormond Quay.*
The coachman stopt ; she look'd, and swore
The rascal had mistook the door :
At coming in, you saw her stoop ;
The entry brush'd against her hoop :
Each moment rising in her airs,
She curst the narrow winding stairs :
Began a thousand faults to spy ;
The ceiling hardly six feet high ;
The smutty wainscoat full of cracks :
And half the chairs with broken backs :
Her quarter's out at Lady-day ;
She vows she will no longer stay
In lodgings like a poor Grisette,
While there are houses to be let.

Howe'er, to keep her spirits up,
She sent for company to sup :
When all the while you might remark,
She strove in vain to ape Wood Park.
Two bottles call'd for (half her store,
The cupboard could contain but four)

* Where the two ladies lodged.—F.

A supper worthy of hērselſ,
 Five nothings in five plates of delf.

Thus for a week the farce went on ;
 When, all her country sayings gone,
 She fell into her former scene,
 Small beer, a herring, and the Dean.

Thus far in jest : though now, I fear,
 You think my jesting too severe ;
 But poets, when a hint is new,
 Regard not whether false or true :
 Yet raillery gives no offence,
 Where truth has not the least pretence ;
 Nor can be more securely plac'd
 Than on a nymph of Stella's taste.
 I must confess your wine and vittle
 I was too hard upon a little :
 Your table neat, your linen fine ;
 And though in miniature, you shine :
 Yet, when you sigh to leave Wood Park,
 The scene, the welcome, and the spark,
 To languish in this odious town,
 And pull your haughty stomach down,
 We think you quite mistake the case,
 The virtue lies not in the place :
 For though my raillery were true,
 A cottage is Wood Park with you.

A RECEIPT

TO RESTORE STELLA'S YOUTH. 1724-5.

THE Scottish hinds, too poor to house
 In frosty nights their starving cows,

While not a blade of grass or hay
 Appears from Michaelmas to May,
 Must let their cattle range in vain
 For food along the barren plain :
 Meagre and lank with fasting grown,
 And nothing left but skin and bone ;
 Expos'd to want, and wind and weather,
 They just keep life and soul together,
 Till summer showers and evening's dew
 Again the verdant glebe renew ;
 And, as the vegetables rise,
 The famish'd cow her want supplies :
 Without an ounce of last year's flesh ;
 Whate'er she gains is young and fresh ;
 Grows plump and round, and full of mettle,
 As rising from Medea's kettle,
 With youth and beauty to enchant
 Europa's counterfeit gallant.

Why, Stella, should you knit your brow,
 If I compare you to a cow ?
 'Tis just the case ; for you have fasted
 So long, till all your flesh is wasted ;
 And must against the warmer days
 Be sent to Quilca down to graze ;
 Where mirth, and exercise, and air,
 Will soon your appetite repair :
 The nutriment will from within,
 Round all your body, plump your skin ;
 Will agitate the lazy flood,
 And fill your veins with sprightly blood ;
 Nor flesh nor blood will be the same,
 Nor aught of Stella but the name :
 For what was ever understood,
 By humankind, but flesh and blood ?
 And if your flesh and blood be new,
 You'll be no more the former you ;

But for a blooming nymph will pass,
 Just fifteen, coming summer's grass,
 Your jetty locks with garlands crown'd :
 While all the 'squires for nine miles round,
 Attended by a brace of curs,
 With jockey boots and silver spurs,
 No less than justices o' quorum,
 Their cow-boys bearing cloaks before 'em,
 Shall leave deciding broken pates,
 To kiss your steps at Quilca gates.
 But, lest you should my skill disgrace,
 Come back before you're out of case ;
 For if to Michaelmas you stay,
 The new-born flesh will melt away ;
 The 'squire in scorn will fly the house
 For better game, and look for grouse ;
 But here, before the frost can mar it,
 We'll make it firm with beef and claret.

STELLA'S BIRTH-DAY. 1724-5.

As, when a beauteous nymph decays,
 We say, she's past her dancing days ;
 So poets lose their feet by time,
 And can no longer dance in rhyme.
 Your annual bard had rather chose
 To celebrate your birth in prose :
 Yet merry folks, who want by chance
 A pair to make a country dance,
 Call the old housekeeper, and get her
 To fill a place, for want of better :

While Sheridan is off the hooks,
 And friend Delany at his books,
 That Stella may avoid disgrace,
 Once more the Dean supplies their place.

Beauty and wit, too sad a truth !
 Have always been confin'd to youth ;
 The god of wit and beauty's queen,
 He twenty-one and she fifteen.

No poet ever sweetly sung,
 Unless he were, like Phœbus, young ;
 Nor ever nymph inspir'd to rhyme,
 Unless, like Venus, in her prime.

At fifty-six, if this be true,

Am I a poet fit for you ?

Or, at the age of forty-three,

Are you a subject fit for me ;

Adieu ! bright wit, and radiant eyes !

You must be grave, and I be wise.

Our fate in vain we would oppose :

But I'll be still your friend in prose :

Esteem and friendship to express,

Will not require poetic dress ;

And if the Muse deny her aid

To have them sung, they may be said.

But, Stella, say, what evil tongue

Reports you are no longer young ;

That Time sits, with his scythe to mow

Where erst sat Cupid with his bow ;

That half your locks are turn'd to gray ?

I'll ne'er believe a word they say.

'Tis true, but let it not be known,

My eyes are somewhat dimmish grown ;

For nature, always in the right,

To your decays adapts my sight ;

And wrinkles undistinguish'd pass,

For I'm asham'd to use a glass ;

And till I see them with these eyes,
 Whoever says you have them, lies.
 No length of time can make you quit
 Honour and virtue, sense and wit :
 Thus you may still be young to me,
 While I can better hear than see.
 O' ne'er may Fortune show her spite,
 To make me deaf, and mend my sight !

TO STELLA.

WRITTEN ON THE DAY OF HER BIRTH, MARCH 13, 1723-4,

BUT NOT ON THE SUBJECT, WHEN I WAS SICK IN BED.

TORMENTED with incessant pains,
 Can I devise poetic strains ?
 Time was, when I could yearly pay
 My verse on Stella's native day :
 But now, unable grown to write,
 I grieve she ever saw the light.
 Ungrateful ! since to her I owe
 That I these pains can undergo.
 She tends me like a humble slave ;
 And, when indecently I rave,
 When out my brutish passions break,
 With gall in every word I speak,
 She with soft speech my anguish cheers,
 Or melts my passions down with tears :
 Although 'tis easy to descry
 She wants assistance more than I ;

Yet seems to feel my pains alone,
And is a stoic in her own.
When, among scholars, can we find
So soft and yet so firm a mind ?
All accidents of life conspire
To raise up Stella's virtue higher ;
Or else to introduce the rest
Which had been latent in her breast.
Her firmness who could e'er have known
Had she not evils of her own ?
Her kindness who could ever guess,
Had not her friends been in distress ?
Whatever base returns you find
From me, dear Stella, still be kind.
In your own heart you'll reap the fruit
Though I continue still a brute,
But, when I once am out of pain,
I promise to be good again :
Meantime, your other juster friends
Shall for my follies make amends :
So may we long continue thus,
Admiring you, you pitying us.

VERSES,

BY STELLA.

If it be true, celestial powers,
That you have formed me fair,
And yet, in all my vainest hours,
My mind has been my care :

Then, in return, I beg this grace,
 As you were ever kind,
 What envious Time takes from my face
 Bestow upon my mind !

DEATH AND DAPHNE.

TO AN AGREEABLE YOUNG LADY, BUT EXTREMELY
 LEAN. 1730.

[Lord Orrery gives us the following curious anecdote respecting this poem.

“ I have just now cast my eye over a poem called Death and Daphne, which makes me recollect an odd incident, relating to that nymph. Swift, soon after our acquaintance, introduced me to her as to one of his female favourites. I had scarce been half an hour in her company, before she asked me, if I had seen the Dean's poem upon Death and Daphne. As I told her I had not, she immediately unlocked a cabinet, and, bringing out the manuscript, read it to me with a seeming satisfaction, of which, at that time, I doubted the sincerity. While she was reading, the Dean was perpetually correcting her for bad pronunciation, and for placing a wrong emphasis upon particular words. As soon as she had gone through the composition, she assured me smilingly, that the portrait of Daphne was drawn for herself. I begged to be excused from believing it; and protested that I could not see one feature that had the least resemblance; but the Dean immediately burst into a fit of laughter. ‘ You fancy,’ says he, ‘ that you are very polite, but you are much mistaken. That Lady had rather be a Daphne drawn by me, than a Sacharissa by any other pencil.’ She confirmed what he had said with great earnestness, so that I had no other method of retrieving my error, than by whispering in her ear, as I was conducting her down stairs to dinner, that indeed I found ‘ Her hand as dry and cold as lead !’ ”

—Lord Orrery’s Remarks on the Life of Swift, Lond. 1752, p. 81.]

DEATH went upon a solemn day
 At Pluto’s hall his court to pay ;
 The phantom having humbly kist
 His grisly monarch’s sooty fist,
 Presented him the weekly bills
 Of doctors, fevers, plagues, and pills.
 Pluto, observing since the peace
 The burial article decrease,
 And, vex’d to see affairs miscarry,
 Declar’d in council death must marry ;
 Vow’d he no longer could support
 Old bachelors about his court ;
 The interest of his realm had need
 That death should get a numerous breed ;
 Young Deathlings, who, by practice made
 Proficient in their father’s trade,
 With colonies might stock around
 His large dominions under ground.

A consult of coquettes below
 Was call’d, to rig him out a beau :
 From her own head Megara takes
 A periwig of twisted snakes ;
 Which in the nicest fashion curl’d,
 (Like toupees* of this upper world)

* Periwigs with long tails.—F.

With flowers of sulphur powder'd well,
 That graceful on his shoulders fell ;
 An adder of the sable kind
 In line direct hung down behind ;
 The owl, the raven, and the bat,
 Clubb'd for a feather to his hat ;
 His coat, a usurer's velvet pall,
 Bequeath'd to Pluto, corpse and all.
 But, loth his person to expose
 Bare, like a carcass pick'd by crows,
 A lawyer o'er his hands and face
 Stuck artfully a parchment case.
 No new flux'd rake show'd fairer skin ;
 Nor Phyllis after lying in.
 With snuff was fill'd his ebon box,
 Of shin-bones rotted by the pox,
 Nine spirits of blaspheming fops,
 With aconite anoint his chops ;
 And give him words of dreadful sounds,
 G—d d—n his blood ! and b—d and w—ds !

Thus furnish'd out, he sent his train
 To take a house in Warwick-lane : *
 The faculty, his humble friends,
 A complimentary message sends :
 Their president in scarlet gown
 Harangued, and welcom'd him to town.

But Death had business to dispatch ;
 His mind was running on his match.
 And, hearing much of Daphne's fame,
 His majesty of terrors came,
 Fine as a colonel of the guards,
 To visit where she sat at cards :

* The College of Physicians.—F.

She, as he came into the room,
 Thought him Adonis in his bloom.
 And now her heart with pleasure jumps ;
 She scarce remembers what is trumps ;
 For such a shape of skin and bone
 Was never seen except her own ?
 Charm'd with his eyes, and chin, and snout,
 Her pocket-glass drew sily out ;
 And grew enamour'd with her phiz,
 As just the counterpart of his.
 She darted many a private glance,
 And freely made the first advance ;
 Was of her beauty grown so vain,
 She doubted not to win the swain.
 Nothing she thought could sooner gain him,
 Than with her wit to entertain him.
 She ask'd about her friends below ;
 This meagre fop, that batter'd beau :
 Whether some late departed toasts
 Had got gallants among the ghosts ?
 If Chloe were a sharper still
 As great as ever at quadrille !
 (The ladies there must needs be rooks,
 For cards, we know, are Pluto's books)
 If Florimel had found her love,
 For whom she hang'd herself above ?
 How oft a-week was kept a ball
 By Proserpine at Pluto's hall ?
 She fancied these Elysian shades
 The sweetest place for masquerades :
 How pleasant on the banks of Styx,
 To troll it in a coach and six !
 What pride a female heart inflames !
 How endless are ambition's aims :
 Cease, haughty nymph ; the Fates decree
 Death must not be a spouse for thee :

For, when by chance the meagre shade
Upon thy hand his finger laid,
Thy hand as dry and cold as lead,
His matrimonial spirit fled ;
He felt about his heart a damp,
That quite extinguish'd Cupid's lamp :
Away the frightened spectre scuds,
And leaves my lady in the suds.

DAPHNE.

DAPHNE knows, with equal ease,
How to vex and how to please ;
But the folly of her sex
Makes her sole delight to vex.
Never woman more devis'd
Surer ways to be despis'd :
Paradoxes weakly wielding,
Always conquer'd, never yielding.
To dispute, her chief delight,
With not one opinion right :
Thick her arguments she lays on,
And with cavils combats reason ;
Answers in decisive way,
Never hears what you can say :
Still her odd perverseness shows
Chiefly where she nothing knows ;
And, where she is most familiar,
Always peevisher and sillier :
All her spirits in a flame
When she knows she's most to blame.

Send me hence ten thousand miles,
From a face that always smiles :
None could ever act that part,
But a fury in her heart.

Ye who hate such inconsistence,
To be easy, keep your distance :
Or in folly still befriend her,
But have no concern to mend her ;
Lose not time to contradict her,
Nor endeavour to convict her.
Never take it in your thought,
That she'll own, or cure a fault.
Into contradiction warm her,
Then, perhaps, you may reform her :
Only take this rule along,
Always to advise her wrong ;
And reprove her when she's right ;
She may then grow wise for spite.

No—that scheme will ne'er succeed,
She has better learnt her creed :
She's too cunning and too skilful,
When to yield, and when be wilful.
Nature holds her forth two mirrors,
One for truth, and one for errors :
That looks hideous, fierce, and frightful ;
This is flattering and delightful :
That she throws away as foul ;
Sits by this to dress her soul.

Thus you have the case in view,
Daphne 'twixt the Dean and you :
Heaven forbid he should despise thee,
But he'll never more advise thee.

STELLA'S BIRTH-DAY.

MARCH 13, 1726-7.

THIS day, whate'er the Fates decree,
 Shall still be kept with joy by me :
 This day then let us not be told,
 That you are sick, and I grown old ;
 Nor think on our approaching ills,
 And talk of spectacles and pills ;
 To-morrow will be time enough
 To hear such mortifying stuff.
 Yet, since from reason may be brought
 A better and more pleasing thought,
 Which can in spite of all decays,
 Support a few remaining days ;
 From not the gravest of divines
 Accept for once some serious lines.

Although we now can form no more
 Long schemes of life, as heretofore ;
 Yet you, while time is running fast,
 Can look with joy on what is past.

Were future happiness and pain
 A mere contrivance of the brain ;
 As atheists argue, to entice
 And fit their proselytes for vice ;
 (The only comfort they propose,
 To have companions in their woes)
 Grant this the case ; yet sure 'tis hard
 That virtue, styl'd its own reward,
 And by all sages understood
 To be the chief of human good ;

Should acting die ; nor leave behind
Some lasting pleasure in the mind,
Which, by remembrance, will assuage
Grief, sickness, poverty, and age ;
And strongly shoot a radiant dart
To shine through life's declining part.

Say, Stella, feel you no content,
Reflecting on a life well spent ?
Your skilful hand employ'd to save
Despairing wretches from the grave ;
And then supporting with your store
Those whom you dragg'd from death before ?
So Providence on mortals waits,
Preserving what it first creates.
Your generous boldness to defend
An innocent and absent friend ;
That courage which can make you just
To merit humbled in the dust ;
The detestation you express
For vice in all its glittering dress ;
That patience under torturing pain,
Where stubborn stoics would complain :
Must these like empty shadows pass,
Or forms reflected from a glass ?
Or mere chimeras in the mind,
That fly, and leave no marks behind ?
Does not the body thrive and grow
By food of twenty years ago ?
And, had it not been still supplied,
It must a thousand times have died.
Then who with reason can maintain
That no effects of food remain ?
And is not virtue in mankind |
The nutriment that feeds the mind ;
Upheld by each good action past,
And still continued by the last ?

Then, who with reason can pretend
That all effects of virtue end?

Believe me, Stella, when you show
That true contempt for things below,
Nor prize your life for other ends,
Than merely to oblige your friends ;
Your former actions claim their part
And join to fortify your heart.
For Virtue, in her daily race,
Like Janus, bears a double face ;
Looks back with joy where she has gone,
And therefore goes with courage on :
She at your sickly couch will wait,
And guide you to a better state.

O then, whatever Heaven intends ?
Take pity on your pitying friends !
Nor let your ills affect your mind,
To fancy they can be unkind.
Me, surely me, you ought to spare,
Who gladly would your suffering share ;
Or give my scrap of life to you,
And think it far beneath your due ;
You, to whose care so oft I owe
That I'am alive to tell you so.

A NEW-YEAR'S-GIFT FOR BEC.*

1723-4.

RETURNING Janus now prepares,
For Bec, a new supply of cares,

* Mrs Rebecca Dingley, Stella's friend and companion.—F.

Sent in a bag to Dr Swift,
Who thus displays the new-year's gift.
First, this large parcel brings you tidings
Of our good Dean's eternal chidings ;
Of Nelly's pertness, Robin's leasings,
And Sheridan's perpetual teasings.
This box is cramm'd on every side
With Stella's magisterial pride.
Behold a cage with sparrows fill'd,
First to be fondled, then be kill'd.
Now to this hamper I invite you,
With six imagin'd cares to fright you.
Here in this bundle Janus sends
Concerns by thousands for your friends :
And here's a pair of leathern pokes,
To hold your cares for other folks.
Here from this barrel you may broach
A peck of troubles for a coach.
This ball of wax your ears will darken,
Still to be curious, never hearken.
Lest you the town may have less trouble in,
Bring all your Quilca's * cares to Dublin,
For which he sends this empty sack ;
And so take all upon your back.

DINGLEY AND BRENT.*

A SONG.

To the tune of "Ye Commons and Peers."

DINGLEY and Brent,
Wherever they went,
Ne'er minded a word that was spoken;
Whatever was said,
They ne'er troubled their head,
But laugh'd at their own silly joking.

Should Solomon wise
In majesty rise,
And show them his wit and his learning;
They never would hear,
But turn the deaf ear,
As a matter they had no concern in.

You tell a good jest,
And please all the rest;
Comes Dingley, and asks you, what was it?
And, curious to know,
Away she will go
To seek an old rag in the closet.

* Dr Swift's housekeeper.—F.

BEC'S* BIRTH-DAY.

Nov. 8, 1726.

THIS day, dear Bec, is thy nativity;
 Had Fate a luckier one, she'd give it ye.
 She chose a thread of greatest length,
 And doubly twisted it for strength:
 Nor will be able with her shears
 To cut it off these forty years.
 Then who says care will kill a cat?
 Rebecca shows they're out in that.
 For she, though overrun with care,
 Continues healthy, fat, and fair.

As, if the gout should seize the head,
 Doctors pronounce the patient dead;
 But, if they can, by all their arts,
 Eject it to the extremest parts,
 They give the sick man joy, and praise
 The gout that will prolong his days.
 Rebecca thus I gladly greet:
 Who drives her cares to hands and feet
 For, though philosophers maintain
 The limbs are guided by the brain,
 Quite contrary Rebecca's led,
 Her hands and feet conduct her head,
 By arbitrary power convey her,
 She ne'er considers why, or where:
 Her hands may meddle, feet may wander,
 Her head is but a mere by-stander:

* Mrs Dingley.

And all her bustling but supplies
 The part of wholesome exercise.
 Thus nature has resolv'd to pay her
 The cat's nine lives, and eke the care.

Long may she live, and help her friends
 Whene'er it suits her private ends ;
 Domestic business never mind
 Till coffee has her stomach lin'd ;
 But, when her breakfast gives her courage,
 Then think on Stella's chicken porridge :
 I mean when Tiger* has been serv'd,
 Or else poor Stella may be starv'd.

May Bec have many an evening nap,
 With Tiger slabbering in her lap ;
 But always take a special care
 She does not overset the chair ;
 Still be she curious, never hearken
 To any speech but Tiger's barking !

And when she's in another scene,
 Stella long dead, but first the Dean,
 May fortune and her coffee get her
 Companions that will please her better !
 Whole afternoons will sit beside her,
 Nor for neglects or blunders chide her.
 A goodly set as can be found
 Of hearty gossips prating round ;
 Fresh from a wedding or a christening,
 To teach her ears the art of listening,
 And please her more to hear them tattle,
 Than the Dean storm, or Stella rattle.

Late be her death, one gentle nod,
 When Hermes, waiting with his rod,
 Shall to Elysian fields invite her,
 Where there shall be no cares to fright her !

* Mrs Dingley's favourite lap-dog.

MRS DINGLEY'S LAP-DOG.

PRAY steal me not ; I'm Mrs Dingley's, Whose heart in this four-footed thing lies.
